FOREWORD

What is Satsang? The word is made of two syllables. The first syllable 'sat' means something which always remains true and unchanging. God is one entity which can never be negated. The religion established and espoused by Him eternally remains true to its core. The scriptures which record and retell His divine attributes and Leelas remain true at all times. History changes with the time and interpretation but the 'true - sat' scriptures remain unaltered. A devotee who abides by the religious edicts reflected in the scriptures is called the Satpurush (true person). The second syllable 'sang' means associate. The association (sang) with 'sat'; God, Scriptures and devotee is called 'Satsang.' The person who associates and keeps the company of these three; God, His scriptures and His saints is called 'Satsangi.' This scriptures shows how a Satsangi should live his life (jeevan), therefore it is aptly called the 'Satsangi Jeevan.'

Upon hearing the ascendency of the evil over the pious and malpractices and misinterpretation of religious edicts for selfish motives, Lord Narayan decided to come on the Earth to protect the pious and re-establish true Sanatan Dharma. He took birth independently as Lord Swaminarayan and established a pure Sampraday. To make sure that the Sampraday He established not only survives but thrives forever, Lord Swaminarayan established four institutions. He built grand temples and installed His own various Murtis, He gave Diksha to His faithful devotees and created an army of celibate saints, He Himself wrote Shikshapatri and asked His saints to write Scriptures and He established the lineage of Acharyas within His own family.

It is not possible to meditate upon God for years or conduct thousands of Yagnas in present times. To sing and listen to the divine Leelas of Almighty God is the sure, straight and shortest path for salvation (Moksha) in this Kali Yug. Moreover, Swaminarayan Bhagwan says (Vachnamrut 58, Gadhada middle chapter) that a scripture describing the purpose of the manifestation of one's Ishtadev and His Leelas is the most vital means to keep a Sampraday everlasting. To this end He asked Shatanand Swami to compile a scripture describing His Leelas. Lord Swaminarayan blessed Shatanand Swami with divine vision and intelligence to help him compile 'Satsangi Jeevan'. This scripture, besides narrating the divine Leelas of Lord Swaminarayan, is full of sermons depicting religion, knowledge and detachment which help nourish and strengthen devotion in Him. Just like the detachment, the knowledge about Him, His glory and His supremacy is vital for the devotion to fructify. The devotion in God grows manifold by acquiring this knowledge about Him and listening to His divine Leelas repeatedly. The Satsangi Jeevan describes Lord Swaminarayan's generosity, equanimity, egalitarianism, non blasphemous, detachment etc. besides other virtues in great detail.

No one is able to describe Bhagwan's Leelas in full, but Shatanand Swami has come very close to achieving this goal. He has described His Leelas and His message in great detail. Along with the 'Shikshapatri' and the 'Vachnamrut', the 'Satsangi Jeevan' is a very important scripture to understand the message of Lord Shree Hari. Every Satsangi must learn this scripture to strengthen their faith and devotion in Lord Shree Hari.

Lord Swaminarayan says in Vachnamrut (3rd) that one must remember Leelas of one's Ishtadev. If we forget God at the time of death, these Leelas remind us of Him and soul achieves great heights with His memory. Shatanand swami says (v. 43, Ch. 70, Fifth Prakaran) that this scripture is like a life support machine for devotees. Just as water is the life force for fishes, the Satsangi Jeevan is the life force for devotees. Singing the paeans for this scripture, he says that whoever studies this scripture is saved by the poison of this world. He adds that the Punya of reading even a small portion of this scripture is greater than many Yagnas and great donations put together. But one must develop interest in listening to Lord's Katha. Swami writes (V8, Ch. 2 1st Prakaran) that one develops keen interest in listening to His Katha only at the ascent of Punyas accumulated over hundreds of births. Almighty Lord Swaminarayan recommends all His future devotees - us - to read the Satsangi Jeevan for Moksha (V16, Ch. 68, 5th Prakaran).

As the scripture itself is in a narrative form, each chapter is translated and prepared as whole to convey the total meaning rather than a literal translation. This was decided after the consultation with and the concurrence of H. H. AcharyaMahajshree and Mota MaharajShree. I hope this will make a better reading.

I am very grateful to my guru, Shastri Swami AksharPrakashDasji of Bhuj temple for his teaching. He has been a great inspiration to me. I am also grateful to Sadguru Shastri Swami Nirgundasji of Amdavad temple for giving his valuable time to check and correct any mistakes in the Sanskrit script. Atulbhai Patel of Amdavad temple has given a great deal of his time to set Sanskrit and English scripts so that they move simultaneously for the ease of reading. I am also very grateful to Mr. Nanjibhai Meghji Hirani of Naranpur for his continuous support and guidance besides correcting the grammatical omission in the English script. I am especially grateful to Mrs. Rasmitaben Kapil Rabadiya of Mandvi and Mr. Dipakbhai Kanji Rabadia of Baladia who have given up their valuable time in proofreading the text, carrying out necessary grammatical additions and alterations before the final phase of publication.

I shall forever remain indebted to H. H. Acharya Maharajshree for giving me this opportunity to serve our Sampraday and repose faith in me despite the fact that there are many other more knowleadgeable Satsangis in our Sampraday.

PREFACE

To fulfil wishes of Sadguru Shatanand swami, Bhagwan Shree Hari asked swami to compose a scripture outlining His Leelas. Shatanand swami compiled Bhagwan's Leelas and His philosophical message in an epic scripture called the 'Satsangi Jeevan'. The original scripture, in five volumes, was composed in Sanskrit. The publication of original scriptures has been an integral and continuous process by Shree NarNarayan Dev diocese over the years. As a part of this process, H. H. Mota Maharajshree undertook the publication of the Satsangi Jeevan in a form Katha - Parayan recited by Sadguru swami Harikeshavdasji. Later on, he published the bilingual version of Satsangi Jeevan, in five volumes and comprising the original text and its Gujarati translation by Dr. Indulal Yagnik, which was warmly welcomed by devotees at large. Many people argue that we do not get or have enough time to read such voluminous scriptures. This is not so. A large number of our devotees undertake reading and understanding our scriptures, as it is essential to understand our Sampraday. Sampraday is nourished by its scriptures. Therefore, one must endeavour to read such scriptures.

Our Sampraday has flourished in all four corners of the world. Second and third generations of devotees settled in the U.K., U.S.A., Africa and Australasia have a genuine difficulty in understanding Gujarati and therefore always requested H. H. Acharya Maharajshree to make English versions of important scriptures available for them. Keeping this need in mind, our Acharya Maharajshree directed our devotee Shree Jethalalbhai Dhanji Savani (of Kera -Kutch and presently London), who has previously translated the 'Shikshapatri ArthDeepika', to translate the Satsangi Jeevan from Sanskrit text without any deviation, omission or addition. Acharya Maharajshree directed Shastri swami Nirgundasji, one of our eminent scholars, to ensure that the Sanskrit text in this volume is faithful to the original text by Shatanand swami. To make this scripture available at a concessionary rate, our devotees Shree Devshibhai Velji Halai and Shree Prafulbhai Velji Halai (of Surajpur, Kutch) have rendered a great financial service in memories of their AksharNivasi family members; namely Veljibhai Samji Halai, Amarbai Velji Halai, Taraben Devshi Halai and Harishbhai Velji Halai. They have earned great pleasure of Bhagwan Swaminarayan, H.H. Acharya Maharajshree and H.H. Mota Maharajshree. Brahamchari Pujari swami Rajeshwaranandji and Shastri swami Narayanmunidasji have also rendered valuable services in preparation of this Granth. May Bhagwan Shree Hari shower His blessings pleasure on all others who have contributed in any way in publication of this voluminous scripture. I sincerely hope and request our young Satsangis to read and study Satsangi Jeevan, which is an important tool to understand basic philosophy of our Sampraday their emancipation from this world.

AGNA PATRA

'Shree Satsangi Jivan' by Shatanand Muni, which is replete with divine Leela Charitra of Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan, was prepared from the original manuscript and after translating into Gujarati, it was published by our temple in Sanskrit-Gujarati. On the basis of the same, Prakaran-1 to 5 of 'Shrimad Satsnagi Jivan' has prepared in English with Sanskrit by taking due care and caution and hard work by our devotee Shri Jethalal Savani of Kera (Kachchh) (at present London). This book is wonderful and beautiful and it would be useful especially to the devotees and Haribhaktas residing abroad and having inclination towards English language.

Shri Mahant Swami and the Scheme Committee deserve all praise for publication of such a great book by our Ahmedabad temple. Our blessings are there with Satsangi devotee family who has rendered the services for this book.

With Blessings

"Satsangi Jivan" is one of the most prominent and authentic scriptures of our original Swami-narayan Sampradaya.

Shatanand Muni has squeezed in the nectar of our religion in this epic.

Shikshapatri, Satsangijivan, Desh vibhag lekh and Vachanamrut (273) These four are the pillars and they have been exhibited even in law courts when and where required to support our cause in the past history.

An English version of Satsangi Jivan was badly needed to quench the thirst of knowledge of our English speaking youth abroad.

Jethalal Savani has done a great job of translating and he deserves our heartfelt blessings.

May this English version be a boon to our youngsters and help to kindle the flame of full dedication and devotion towards Almighty Supreme Bhagwan Shree Swaminarya.

Shatanand Swami performs auspicious Manglacharan at the beginning of the scripture.

Your face is round and radiant like a moon in full beam on the night of Purnima (full moon night) and adorned with the divine smile, Your eyes are like the pink petals of a lotus, You are an ocean of eternal bliss and mercy, You give happiness to Your devotees in this life and Moksha (salvation) at the end of it. Be victorious. You are able to help Your devotees to control and concentrate their minds in You, the mind which is not controlled even by deities like Brahma and Shiv even after trying hard by various means. The ignorant, seeing You in the human form, consider You as a mortal like them. O NarayanMuni! Bless me with a lucid intelligence so that I can describe Your divine Leelas. You hide Your immense powers and behave like an ordinary human to please Your devotees, Your fame encompass the entire universe. O Shree Hari, I meditate upon You in my heart and bow to You.

Now Shatanand Swami prays to Ganapati.

You fulfil desires and remove all hindrances of your devotees. You are considered an incarnation of Lord Krishna Himself. O Ganesh! Bless me so that I can complete this scripture without any hindrance.

With the following six verses Shatanand Swami describes the glory of this scripture.

Shatanand Swami, who by the grace and mercy of God, has written this scripture which contains the wisdom of the Vedas. The observance of Dharma (ethical duties) described clearly in Satsangi Jeevan frees one immediately from the clutches of death and rebirth. Shree Hari, the guru of all gurus, freed thousands of His devoteess from shackles of death and rebirth. After His return to His Akshardham, this scripture will serve as a boat to cross this mortal world and attain Moksha. This scripture is full of Leelas of Shree Hari, Who independently took birth as a son of Dharmadev. All His devotees should happily drink this nectar (read this scripture) to attain Moksha. This scripture is very holy and purifying to narrator and listener alike. It removes the sins of the past and many births of men. It is superior to other scriptures because, besides describing the normal Dharma, it extols the Ekantik Dharma specifically. One gets to hear such a scripture only after the cumulative Punyas of many lifetimes. The Satsangi Jeevan removes all doubts and ambiguities regarding the accuracy of the Dharma of all Varnas and Ashrams as they are not only attested by the Vedas and the Upanishads but by God Himself. Learning it is like a feather in a cap of the scholars

Shatanand Swami now describes the narrator of this scripture.

There is a place called Kurukshetra, which is very holy and frequently visited by holy saints. An Ekantik devotee of Shree Hari called Suvrat Muni, who was blessed with virtues like Dharma, Gnaan (true knowledge), Vairagya (detachment), serenity etc. was born in Kurukshetra. He had pleased Shree Hari so much that He accepted everything he offered to Him in Puja. He was able to see past, present and future by the grace of Shree Hari. After omnipotent, Shree Hari returned to His Akshardham and by His express command, Suvrat Muni went from one shrine to another retelling His Leelas. Leaving Gadhpur, Muni visited Junagadh, Dwarka, Bhuj, Muli, Dholera, Amdavad, Jetalpur, Vadtaal, Ujjain, Prayag, Vrandavan and Kashi before arriving at Jagannath Puri. Jagannath Puri has become a famous holy shrine as Lord Shree Krishna gives divine Darshan to His devotees while residing here. The ritualistic five Aartis and worship are carried out of the idol of Lord Jagannath here. Suvrat Muni stayed at the place called Chakrateerth in Jagannath Puri. He engaged himself in the devotion of Lord Jagannath and performed worship and Darshan of Lord Jagannath five times a day. He gave discourse on the virtues of observing religion and recited the Leelas of Shree Hari to espouse devotion in Him.

Pratapsinh, a king from Gujarat, after giving up his kingdom due to his detachment from worldly affairs arrived at Jagannath Puri. In his heart he had only one desire, to see God in person and he knew that this was only possible through a true and virtuous saint. He saw Suvrat Muni giving a religious discourse to devotees in Chakrateerth. He realised that Muni had overcome his inner enemies like anger, lust, greed, envy and attachment. He was firm in belief and observance of his ethical religious duties, ascetic, soft spoken, celibate, able to endure hardship, detached from worldly affairs, steadfast in his belief in God, and able to explain the scriptures correctly.

He approached Muni respectfully and requested him humbly, “I have come under your shelter. Show me the path to untangle myself from the shackles of death and rebirth.” Suvrat Muni replied, “O king! You have asked a profound question. The sole purpose of the human life is to become free from the clutches of death and rebirth. Engage in the Bhakti of Lord Jagannath and you will have your desire fulfilled.” The King’s intellect became clear with the devotion of Lord Jagannath but he still wished to see God in person. He approached Muni, “I know that you worship Lord Krishna with the utmost humility and also know that Lord Krishna accepts your Naivedhya personally and He speaks to you. You are able to see God in person and able to show God in person to others. I humbly request you to do me a favour. Please help me fulfil my desire to see God in person.”

Suvrat Muni replied, “O king! It is most difficult for men to see God in person. Many kings in the past abandoned their kingdoms and wealth and performed severe austerities to meet God. The Darshan of God is considered the ultimate reward for one’s knowledge, devotion and detachment. Though His Darshan is difficult, He can be seen in His human form when He incarnates Himself to protect the religion and His devotees from evil. Even when He walks on earth in His human form, only a few pious persons actually recognise Him as God. Most others see Him as an ordinary mortal being. Just recently He had taken birth as a son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata and was famously known as Shree Hari. I have met Him personally, served Him and worshipped Him repeatedly. He was so pleased by my Bhakti that He had granted me a boon so that I can see Him in person as and when I remember Him in my heart. He has now returned to His supreme abode after re-establishing Sanatan Dharma on this earth. I am moving from one shrine to another to recite His life, Leelas and message on the command of my guru Shatanand Swami.”

King Pratapsinh became very happy to hear Muni. With his bowed head and folded hands, he said respectfully, “My fortune has shone that I met you. My birth has become worthwhile. Though you have attained Moksha, you are travelling in this world for the Moksha of others. Please recite the entire life of Shree Hari as you have known it. Please tell me how He was born, and what Leelas He performed. I would like to hear these in a great detail.”

Realising the king's devotion and eagerness, Suvrat Muni started to recite the life of Shree Hari.

Thus ends the first chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

Suvrat Muni performs Mangalacharan before starting to recite the Satsangi Jeevan.

"I bow to Lord Shree Hari, Who gives His divine Darshan by appearing in the midst of the brilliant white light in the minds of His devotees that remember Him all the time. The shackles of Maya and deeds are impossible to break; yet, You take Your devotees to Your Akshardham by showering mercy. O Lord! I bow to You. The eyes of Your devotees are satisfied only after Your divine Darshan just as the Chakor (a bird) is pleased with the sight of the moon. You appear as wearing white robes and giving the blessing in front of Your devotees. Though You are the master and the Lord of the entire universe, You independently take the form of man just to please Your devotees. You are unique and unparallel, Your lotus feet are not only served by the kings of this world, but by Brahma and Shiva too. You are beyond everything created. O Bhagwan! I bow down to You and beg to grant me the clarity of speech (so that I can recite Your Leelas)."

Now Suvrat Muni prays to his guru, Shatanand Swami.

"You have controlled all your senses by total detachment; you have mastered Yoga by the grace of Bhagwan, you have attained the true AatmaNishtha (the knowledge of distinction between soul and body) by the strength of your total faith in Lord Shree Krishna. O son of Vishnudatt! I bow to you, my Guru. Being blessed with the insight of past, present and future by the grace of Shree Hari, you have written this Satsangi Jeevan. You are like Shukdevji, the son of sage Vyas. Bless me. I am about to recite the Satsangi Jeevan as you have taught me."

Suvrat Muni now addresses King Pratapsinh, "O king! You have asked a very good question. Bhagwan's Katha redeems one from the bonds of death and rebirth.

One becomes eager to hear His Katha only after the accumulation of Punyas from hundreds of births. I am about to recite the Satsangi Jeevan, the scripture full of Shree Hari's Leelas as composed by and taught to me by my Guru, Shatanand Swami."

Pratapsinh asked:, "Who was Shatanand Swami? Whose son was he? How did he please Bhagwan? Where did he compose the Satsangi Jeevan? Please answer my questions. I have become free from the desire of hearing mundane tales and I have the desire only to listen to the Satsangi Jeevan."

Suvrat Muni replied, "There lived a pious Brahmin named Vishnudatt in a holy town of Mithila. His son, Shatanand, was a scholar of the scriptures like the Vedas, the Purans and the Panchratra. He was totally detached from this mundane world and was very steadfast in the observance of his ethical duties. He was kind, soft spoken, serene, generous, analytical, intelligent and he always interacted with holy saints. He not only read the Shreemad Bhagwat, but actually analysed its true meaning by imbibing in the solitude. His only desire was to see God in person. He, by analysing the fifth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat, realised that Lord NarNarayan is the supreme Lord Who, served by Udhhavji and Naradji, eternally resides in Badrikaashram. He joined the group of pilgrims on their way to Badrikaashram to fulfil his desire to meet Lord NarNarayan. He saw the image of Lord NarNarayan upon reaching Badrikaashram on Akha Trij (Vaishakh Sud Trij). He visited other holy shrines like NaradKund, TakhtaKund, PanchShila and holy Ganga within Badrikaashram. After the departure of other pilgrims, he started the worship of Lord NarNarayan by meditating in front of His image. He ate whatever fruits and nuts were available and read the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat regularly. After six months, pleased by his dedication, Lord NarNarayan appeared in front of Shatanand Swami on Kartik Sud Ekadashi (Prabodhani). Shatanand Swami was surprised and elated to see Lord NarNarayan in the midst of the halo, as brilliant as that of the thousands of suns illuminated at the same time. Bhagwan NarNarayan appeared as the young ascetic. Getting up immediately, Shatanand swami prostrated at the feet of Lord NarNarayan."

Thus ends the second chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-3

Shatanand swami continued, “O Lord Vaasudev! O Narayan! I bow to You. You perform the austerity for the benevolence of Your devotees. Narad and other sages serve at Your lotus feet. You have conquered Kaamdev (the Eros) who had earlier defeated Indra, the king of Devtas. The best of the ascetics are not able to overcome the mighty anger, yet it (anger) is not able to come near You. The other vices like greed, ego, envy etc. are so afraid of You that they do not appear in Your vicinity. Though You are almighty and do not need to please anybody, You perform worship and observe rituals just to teach their importance to mankind. You are the original source of all scriptures which show the path of happiness to mankind. All men come to Your shelter after becoming detached from the worldly affairs and they do not desire any mundane happiness as You are the source of the divine and eternal Bliss. My lifelong desire is fulfilled today by Your Darshan. Bless me with Your devotion.

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! Hearing such soothing prayer from Shatanand Swami, Lord Narayan said to him, ‘I am very pleased with You. Seek a boon from Me.’ Shatanand Muni replied, ‘O Lord! If You are indeed pleased with me, then grant me the opportunity to stay with You and allow me to serve You forever. I like to sing Your virtues and Leelas. I do not seek any miraculous powers as I have become detached from this world.’ Lord Narayan said, ‘O wise Brahmin! You have asked for the best boon from Me. Presently, I have taken birth as Hari, the son of Dharma and Bhakti. Currently, I am residing in Saurashtra, come and seek Me there. I will fulfil your desire to sing My virtues and Leelas by empowering you to compose a scripture full of My Leelas.’ Saying this, Lord NarNarayan disappeared from the scene. Shatanand Swami left Badrikaashram the next day to seek Shree Hari. He reached Amdavad after two months, where he heard some pilgrims talking about Sahajanand Swami performing a grand Vishnu Yagna at Dabhan. Shatanand Swami joined the group of pilgrims and arrived at Dabhan the next day. Muni saw thousands of devotees proceeding to worship Shree Hari sitting on a high dais. He saw Shree Hari attired in white robes, adorned with golden ornaments, wearing garlands on His neck and being worshipped by His devotees. He accepted the garlands, gold and silver coins, expensive robes and other gifts from thousands of His devotees. Shatanand Swami prostrated on the floor and exclaimed, 'O Lord Narayan! O Hari! Be victorious!' Lord recognised His devotee and greeted Shatanand Swami. Shree Hari made arrangements for Swami's residence. There, Shatanand Swami served Shree Hari with the utmost reverence and devotion."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! In a very short span of time, with the grace of Shree Hari, Shatanand swami was able to attain Samadhi without mastering the eight folded Yog. Whilst meditating upon Shree Hari, Swami had a fleeting glimpse of Lord Narayan of Badrikaashram and also saw Shree Hari as Lord Krishna in His full glory surrounded by many Parshads and devotees. Shree Hari showed Golok, Vaikunth, Shwetdweep and other abodes to Swami in Samadhi. Shree Hari also showed Swami the reason and manner in which He and other saints had taken birth. Shree Hari granted Swami the ability to see the past, present and future. With this profound knowledge, Shatanand Swami saw himself as Maitrey Rishi and how he came upon earth as a consequence of the curse by Sage Durvasha. Humbled by this knowledge, Shatanand swami politely requested Sahajanand Swami, 'O Lord! Please grant me the permission to compose Your Leelas so that I can utilise the knowledge You have granted me.' Shree Hari replied, 'Your desire will be fulfilled. Come along with me to Gadhada, where I intend to build a grand temple dedicated to Lord Radha-Krishna. You can write the scripture according to your knowledge and experience in that holy place (Gadhada).' Shatanand swami accompanied Shree Hari to Gadhada, where he composed the Satsangi Jeevan, within the precinct of the temple of Lord Gopinathji. He taught the same to me and his other disciples after Shree Hari returned to His Akshardham. O King Pratapsinh, I told you the life of my Guru briefly. Now I will recite the Satsangi Jeevan, the scripture full of Bhagwan's Leelas, which is very pleasing to devotees. Listen to it carefully as it has the power to wash away the vices and sins of men."

Thus ends the third chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

Suvrat Muni performs Manglacharan at the beginning of Katha of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said. "I bow to Shree Hari Who has taken birth as the son of Dharma and Bhakti to destroy the evil and to re-establish the Dharma in this world. You please Your devotees by Your child Leelas. Due to Your Vairagya from a very young age, You left Your relatives and home soon after receiving Yagnopavit (sacred thread). The mundane sensual objects, which entangle even the best of Rishis, are not able to distract You. You became known as Sahajanand Swami after getting Diksha from Your Guru, Ramanand Swami. You destroyed the unreligious practices just as the Sun dissipates the darkness. You helped Your devotees to overcome their inner enemies like greed, envy, lust, anger, ego, anger etc. so that they could attain Moksha and Akshardham at the time of their death. Your valour had become victorious at all times. Let my mind be focused on Shree Hari at all times. Sometimes I see You greeting Your saints arriving from far flung places and You often leave behind Your shawl in a hurry to greet incoming saints. When sitting in Sabha surrounded by many of Your saints, You appear just as the moon among thousands of twinkling stars. You often hold the Mala in Your right hand while meditating upon Your Ishtadev in Sabha. Let my mind be focused on You wearing white robes, flower garlands around Your neck, Your forehead adorned with a Tilak and Chandlo. You accepted many valuable jewellery and robes from many of Your householder devotees when they came for Your Darshan. You often went to feed saints even when knowing that they have been served by other saints. Your lotus feet are marked by the divine insignias like lotus, triangle, flag, swastika etc. Many places of this world have become holier than Heaven with Your divine footprints. The ignorant have discarded their ignorance and evil have shed their immorality and they have become pious as the direct result of the company and sermons from Your holy saints. Be pleased with me and shower Your blessings upon me. You have re-established the practice of performing non violent Yagnas and feeding Brahmins at the conclusion of such Yagnas. You have shown the path of social services by digging and repairing wells and lakes and building grand temples. You answered the inquisitive questions from Your saints very clearly and legibly. You adopted two of Your nephews as Your sons and appointed them as the Acharyas of the bifurcated Sampraday with the sole aim to protect Dharma and benevolence of Your devotees. Many men underwent Samadhi by the mere sight of Yours, and that too without the knowledge of Yog. O Lord Shree Hari! Be pleased with me and bless me."

Suvrat Muni said to King Pratapsinh, "The vast range of mountains called Himalayas is situated at the Northern boundary of India. It is so vast that some of its caves are bigger than some palaces. Some of its peaks are silver, some are golden and some are covered with white snow. Thousands of water streams flow from its peaks. One of them is holy Ganga, which is made of seven tributaries, namely Vasvauksara, Nalini, Pawani, Sarasvati, Jambu, Sita and Sindhu. The mountains are covered by the thick forest of various types of trees and populated by wild beasts like lions, tigers and elephants and birds of prey. The sound of flowing streams, chirping of birds, roars of wild animals, chanting of the Vedic hymns by hermits and singing by celestial singers create a unique atmosphere. Brahma had established Himalayas as the king of all mountains, Lord Shiva has made it his home and it is the source of many precious jewels. Within the range of the Himalayas, there is a hidden Ashram of Lord Narayan which redeems men just by its Darshan. There is a giant thornless berry tree (from which it takes its name – Badrikaashram) under which Lord performs severe austerity for the benevolence of His devotees. This berry tree is so holy that one's sins are redeemed with its single Darshan. Anyone living under this berry tree does not suffer from hunger, thirst, heat and cold. Resident Rishis listen to the divine Kathas from Lord Narayan and meditate upon Him. Vices like lust, greed, anger, envy etc. do not afflict anybody within the precinct of Badrikaashram. The lions and elephants, cats and mice, tigers and deer, mongooses and snakes, and owls and crows mingle with each other setting aside their natural enmity. The wind becomes serene upon entering the vicinity of the Ashram. Sinners cannot gain entry into Badrikaashram. The knowledgeable, sagacious and pious persons who have overcome their inner enemies take up residence here. Some of these sages consume only one meal, some fruits and nuts and some only leaves. Some of these sages consume only water, some only wind, some only the moonlight while some only the holy smoke emanating from the sacred fire of Yagna. They sleep under the sky in all seasons. All of them, nonetheless, meditate upon Lord Narayan by observing celibacy. The ground of Badrikaashram is covered with discarded flowers used in the worship of Lord Narayan. The resident sages, animals and birds line up in the morning expecting to see Lord Narayan going ffor a bath in the holy River Ganga. The group of Muktatmas (the souls that have attained Moksha) of Badrikaashram go to Shwetdweep for the Darshan of Lord Vaasudev, while Swetmuktas come to Badrikaashram for the Darshan of Lord NarNarayan daily. They chant the name of Bhagwan and greet each other on their journey through the sky. There is a beautiful huge berry tree bearing sweet and juicy berry fruits on the flat clean surface of the Ashram, where numerous birds have built their nests. The sages meditating under the shade of this tree have named it 'Vishala'. There is a pond called 'Vaiyahas' nearby. Udhhavji, learned and foremost among Lord Krishna's devotees had taken up residence in Badrikaashram on His instruction. Other sages like Vaatapi, Marut and Ashvashira regularly recite eternal Vedas. Indra, the king of Devtas, performed penance in this Badrikaashram for ten thousand years to redeem himself from the sin of killing Vratsur. This is the same Badrikaashram where Sage Savarni, the son of the Sun (and the eighth Manu of future era) is performing austerity and Bhakti of Lord Narayan as advised by Sage Narad. Forever served by Sage Narad with the sole aim of pleasing Bhagwan, Lord NarNarayan performs austerity here for the benefit of His devotees. According to the wise and academic seers, the divine and eternal bliss of Badrikaashram is not comparable. It is far superior to the minute happiness of Heavens. Indeed, Badrikaashram is the jewel upon this earth."

Thus ends the fourth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

"They saw holy Ganga with her clear water reflecting the morning sun. The Ganga is so holy that she redeemed sixty thousand sons of King Sagar. This is because God Himself takes a dip in her waters every morning. This regular touch of God's feet has made Ganga so holy that her remembrance, touch or Darshan is enough to redeem the sins of many past lives. The regions through which the holy Ganga flows become holy by her association. Conversely, just as the rivers without water are immaterial, even the prosperous regions without the association of Ganga become inconsequential. The reward for bathing in the River Ganga is greater than observing many Vratts like Chaandrayan and DharnaParna or performing Yagnas and penance. No other river on this earth can wash away the sins better than Ganga. Originating from the lotus feet of God and adorning Lord Shiva's locks of hair, River Ganga cannot be compared with other rivers on earth. If a dead person's bone falls accidently in the river, he surely goes to Heaven. What indeed can be said of the living person taking a bath in her water? Nobody on this earth is capable to describe her glory fully. All the sages took a holy dip in River Ganga and proceeded towards Vishala, the huge berry tree."

Suvrat Muni said, "The arriving sages saw Lord Nar under Vishala awaiting their arrival. He was attired in the white clothes of an ascetic, wearing flower garlands and a Kanthi of Tulsi around His neck, His forehead adorned with Urdhvapundra Tilak and Chandlo and surrounded by nine great Yogis – Kavi, Hari, Antariksha, Prabudhdh, Piplayan, Aavirhotra, Drumil, Chamas and Harbhaajan. His body looked frail due to the great penance. Lord Nar got up and welcomed the sages by embracing them with a smile. The sages were very surprised with the greeting they received but were happy to see Him. Lord Nar offered them water and asked them to sit and await the imminent arrival of Lord Narayan."

Lord Nar said, 'O sages! I am really pleased to see you here because your Darshan and company is very rare. You are the best among seers as your intellect is steadfast in Lord Narayan. You remember Lord Narayan in your mind all the time. Not only are you Muktas (the one who has attained Moksha), but you can redeem anyone by your association. Your association and mercy are the sole causes of arousing Bhakti in a person's heart. You are very benevolent. You visit various shrines only for the benefit of ordinary men. You have indeed come at a very opportune time as Lord Narayan will arrive here shortly after concluding His morning routine.'

The sages replied, 'We know You as the supreme Lord of the universe. We do not see any difference between Your two identical forms of Lord Nar and Lord Narayan. You merely appear to serve Lord Narayan but You are not distinct from Him. The dust

Suvrat Muni continued, "Lord Nar was very pleased with the humility of the great sages. Just at that time, Lord Narayan extolled by the celestial Muktas, arrived there after concluding His daily routine. Because of the impossibly severe penance He performed, His body emitted a brilliant radiance of thousand suns. His long arms reaching His knees, His eyes like a petal of newly bloomed lotus, His full moon like face adorned with the smile, His yellowish long hair tied in a bun on His head, His teeth lined up properly, His chest wide, His navel deep set in His muscular stomach, His wide forehead adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Chandlo and all of His veins visible. He was wearing a fine white Dhoti, His torso was covered by another white cloth; He was wearing a Kanthi and Yagnopavit and holding a wooden staff and water pot in His hands. As always, He appeared young. The sages present were so enamoured with His divine smile that they even forgot to greet Lord Narayan. When they came to their senses, all sages fell on the ground and prostrated at His feet. Their thirst of His Darshan was quenched and all their sorrows waned by just His Darshan. Lord Narayan greeted each of the sages appropriate to their status. He sat, facing north, on the dais under the berry tree. Lord Nar sat beside Him on His left. All sages sat facing Lord Nar and Narayan. Lord Narayan greeted all sages collectively once again with folded hands. One by one, all sages performed worship of Lord NarNarayan with Kumkum, saffron, musk, flowers, garlands, incense, fruits and sandalwood paste etc. They performed Aarti accompanied by the Vedic hymns. Lord NarNarayan were very pleased with the humility of sages. Only by His grace, the sages were able to see Lord NarNarayan in their heart while meditating upon Him. When they opened their eyes, they saw the same form of Bhagwan which they saw in their hearts. The sages became very happy at this accomplishment and prayed to Lord NarNarayan."

CHAPTER-7

The sages prayed, "O eternal Lord! Be victorious. You are the original Guru of the whole world. Your sermons wash away the sins of many past births. You lead Your devotees to Your supreme abode by helping them redeem their sins through penance. You re-establish the Vedas and other scriptures that vanish at the time of total annihilation. The people who do not recognise You as the supreme Lord even after listening to the scriptures or the sermons by learned sages remain shackled to Maya. One can be liberated from the cycle of death and rebirth only after knowing You and coming under Your shelter, whether now or hundred years later. O supreme Lord! We have been very fortunate to know You as the supreme Lord. Learning scripture without recognising You as Bhagwan is just futile. The cardinal message of all scriptures like the Vedas, the Puranas, the Sankhya, the Smrutis etc. is that You are the one and only God of the whole universe. The person who does not know You, knows nothing, however much he has learned. The ignorant, who seeing You in this form (as an ascetic) and thinks of You as an ordinary mortal being, are consigned to Hell forever. The fools, forsaking You, offer their oblations to other deities such as Brahma, are

O Lord Vaasudev! You have taken birth as a son of Dharma and Murti. You perform severe austerity to enhance religion, detachment, knowledge and devotion of Your devotees. When even Shesh, with his thousand tongues, is unable to sing Your glory in full, how can we, mere mortals, sing Your majesty in full. We have only tried to justify Your glory with our limited abilities."

Suvrat Muni said, "Concluding the prayers, the sages concentrated all their senses on Lord NarNarayan by looking at His smiling face."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Being pleased with the sages, Lord Narayan addressed them."

Lord Narayan said, “I am very pleased with your arrival in Badrikaashram. Your arrival here has become possible with My consent. O sages! You are dearer to Me than even My supreme abode and Brahma because you keep My memory alive in your heart at all times. You remove the ignorance of people by making them recognise Me with your religious sermons. You enhance in their hearts My devotion, which is greater than any austerity, Vrat or Yagna. Your visits to various places are for the benevolence of others. I know all this and therefore I always think of you. O sages! Please tell Me where have you come from recently.”

The sages replied, "O Lord! We have arrived here at the conclusion of our pilgrimage of India. We have visited many shrines in India." Bhagwan asked, "Blessed are the people born in India. O sages! Do the people in India follow the path of religion as prescribed by Me?"

The sages replied, "The situation in India is very bleak at the moment. The protectors of religion themselves such as kings and Gurus are failing to tread the path of religion. Hypocrisy is rife among populace. People do not fear from committing the sins for the minor materialistic pleasures and the path to Hell has become very crowded. Even Gurus, as they do not practice religion, are not able to guard their disciples. O Bhagwan! You undergo such a severe austerity for the benevolence of Your devotees. Therefore, only You can stop the people from transgressing the path of religion."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Hearing of such a bad situation, Bhagwan decided to manifest Himself on earth to protect His devotees from the path of irreligiousness. Upon hearing the arrival of the sages, Dharmadev came there with his wife Murtidevi. He, with his hairs on his head tied in a bun, fair complexioned, wearing white clothes and face adorned with a smile, approached the dais on which Lord Nar and Lord Narayan were seated. Both of them got up and proceeded to greet their parents. They bowed to their father, Dharmadev and mother, Murtidevi. Dharmadev and Murtidevi blessed their twin sons in return. All the sages stood up to greet Dharmadev and Murtidevi with due respect. They in turn greeted all the sages with folded hands and took their seat in the assembly. After asking about their wellbeing, Lord Narayan told Dharmadev and Murtidevi about the sorry state of irreligiousness in India. O king! All the sages were listening to Lord Narayan very intently."

CHAPTER-9

Suvrat Muni continued, "As the sages were listening to Lord Narayan very intently, they had no inkling of the surrounding environment. Lord Narayan was narrating the state of India to His parents. Exactly at that time, Sage Durvasha, prodded by the desire of Bhagwan Himself, came there. Sage Durvasha saw Lord NarNarayan, Dharmadev and Murtidevi, Udhhavji and others seated in the assembly. As everyone had their eyes and mind fixed on Lord Narayan, nobody noticed the arrival of Sage Durvasha at the rear of the assembly. He stood his ground for a while and felt insulted as nobody cared to greet him. He became angry at this perceived insult and raised his hand to curse all those present. Durvasha roared, 'Indeed! How times have changed! The learned sages do not follow the ethical etiquette of greeting the arriving guest. What is even more surprising is that Dharmadev, the beholder of the religion, has insulted me by deviating from his religious duty of greeting the guest. You all have become very arrogant with the enhanced pride of knowledge. I shall punish you harshly so that you do not commit the same mistake ever again. I curse all of you to take birth on earth and suffer indignity, insult and sorrow from irreligious and evil persons."

Suvrat Muni said, "Everybody present in the assembly was aghast upon hearing such calamitous curse from Sage Durvasha. They turned to see Sage Durvasha, his eyes red with anger and trembling with rage. All the sages got up immediately and went up to greet him with folded hands and tried to pacify him, however, this enraged Durvasha even more. O king! Dharmadev approached Sage Durvasha and said, 'You are absolutely right in punishing us for insulting you. However, we did not do this with any intent or envy. We did not realise your arrival as we were busy listening to Lord Narayan. How could you think that we would ever think of insulting you? All this has happened unintentionally. Your heart is soft like butter; your birth is for the benevolence of others. O great sage! Forgive us and free us from your curse.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Sage Durvasha's anger subsided a little with the gentle persuasion by Dharmadev. Durvasha Muni said to Dharmadev, 'O Dharma! My anger is not momentary and I am known never to withdraw my curse. However, considering the circumstance and with a silent nudge from Bhagwan, I can bestow a favour to reduce the severity of my curse. Listen O Dharma! Murtidevi will become your wife and Lord Narayan your son when you take birth as a man on earth. Lord Narayan will protect you and the other sages from the worst of the punishment. Both of you will become free from my curse and attain the same status shortly after the birth of Bhagwan. Lord Narayan will call and keep all the other sages with Him. You will attain the same divine status as of present at the end of your human life on earth."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! These Sages were potent enough to curse Durvasha Muni in return. They realised that whatever happened was with the express desire of Bhagwan Himself. Therefore, Lord Narayan neither scolded Sage Durvasha for cursing the innocent Rishis nor nullified the curse. Lord Narayan said, 'O father! Do not despair at all. Sage Durvasha arrived here and cursed you on My latent desire. At present the irreligiousness has become rampant in India. I want to take birth again to protect the chaste and punish the evil. I will take birth as your son again. Together, we will eradicate irreligiousness from the face of the earth and re-establish the rule of true religion. Do not worry about the curse and prepare to take birth in proper clans.' Dharmadev and all the other sages went to their respective abodes pondering what Lord Narayan had told them and started the search for appropriate parents. Dharmadev and Murtidevi thought of taking birth in Koshal (around Ayodhya) region. Udhhavji had a similar plan. O king! As the time passed, all sages took birth in different areas of India at an appropriate time."

Suvrat Muni continued, "During the first Satya Yug, Devtas led by their king, Indra, with the help of Bhagwan, defeated demons in the war. Therefore, the defeated demons considered Bhagwan as their primary foe. Since then, realising that Dharma is very dear to Bhagwan, they have tried to eradicate Dharma from the face of the earth. At the time between the end of Dwapar Yug and beginning of the present Kali Yug, the demons took birth amongst humans, birds and animals to punish religious people. To protect the chaste and punish the evil, Badripati Lord Narayan took birth as Lord Krishna in Yadav clan. He, along with Baldev and Arjun killed many demons. While the demons killed by Lord Krishna Himself attained salvation as they had the direct contact with God Himself, the demons killed by Baldev and Arjun were still looking for an opportunity to kill Bhagwan and prevail over Dharma. Just as Rishis took birth to assist Bhagwan re-establish religion, thousands of demons, considering God loving chaste sages as their enemies, took birth to punish them. They took birth amongst Kshatriyas and Brahmins and concealed their evil intentions and nature. They became rulers and Gurus to harm religion from within. While overtly they accepted Vaishnavi Diksha from chaste Gurus, covertly they propagated anti religious tenets. They vilified the ethical duties of Varna and Ashram and promoted promiscuity and the consumption of alcohol and meat. By performing animal sacrificial Yagnas, they amassed great wealth. They deviated many chaste devotees with the help of wealth and fear of black magic. Many ordinary people became their disciples considering them learned and religious. This in turn multiplied the number of people with the false sense of religion. The demons interpreted the hymns of Shrutis and Smrutis to suit their purpose. They instigated people to commit adultery, consume alcohol and meat to please Goddesses. They encouraged the consumption of meat at the oblation ceremony of dead ancestors. Many people were attracted by their loose morals. Many such irreligious people took over important shrines and wrote scriptures to suit their objectives, sometimes with coercion and sometimes with force. The true religion, chaste devotees and Devtas suffered at the hands of such irreligious kings and Gurus. The earth became unable to bear their burden upon her. The famines, floods, earthquakes and tornados became frequent. O king! Dharmadev, Murtidevi, Udhhavji and other sages took birth during such troubled times."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! There is a village called Itar situated on the northern bank of the River Saryu. It is inhabitated by people of all four Varnas including many Brahmins of the Savarni clan. Kauthumi branch of Sam Veda was their specialised expertise. A religious and truthful scholar named Balsharma was one amongst them. His father, Kanhiram was once a chief Brahmin scholar of King Surneta of Mahedav. Balsharma's grandfather, Vedman and his ancestors Banshidhar and Laxmansharma had lived in Itar for five generations. Balsharma's wife, Bagyavati was very chaste and religious as well. Dharmadev chose such a pious couple as his parents and took birth in their household by his own wish. This was on Wednesday, the bright (Sud) Ekadashi of the month of Kartik in Samvat 1796. Devtas, eagerly awaiting his birth, showered flowers from the Heaven at the time of his birth. The cries of their joy, the sound of anklets of dancing Apsaras and the singing of celestial Gandharvas were heard in the whole universe. The water of lakes and rivers became calm, the wind became soothing and aromatic, and the sky became cloudless at the time of birth of Dharmadev. The pious people had the inklings and omens of some good event happening. Balsharma held a very joyous celebration on birth of his son. He underwent a ritual bath following the birth of his son as attested by the scriptures. He followed other rites regarding the birth of a son as directed by the learned Brahmins. As a baby, Dharmadev was slightly dark complexioned, his arms were long enough to reach his knees and was very calm. His parents felt very fortunate to beget such a son. Balsharma, after consulting Brahmins, named his son Devsharma on the twelfth day after his birth. As Devsharma grew up, his father Balsharma made him undergo appropriate Sanskars at the suitable time. After the Yagnopavit (sacred thread) ceremony, Devsharma went to Gurukul for formal education. After twelve years at Gurukul, Devsharma graduated with the expertise of the scriptures including the Vedas. Father Balsharma started looking for a suitable bride for his son, Devsharma."

"There is a holy shrine called Makhoda on the north bank of River Manorama. There is a village called Chhapaiya in the north and not very far from Makhoda. A pious and religious Brahmin couple, Krushnasharma and Bhavani, lived in Chhapaiya. Murtidevi took birth independently as a daughter of this devout couple. This was during late evening of Wednesday, the Purnima of Kartik month of Samvat 1798. While devotees of Lord Krishna had good omens of something good happening, the evils had the omens pointing to calamity."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king, Krushnasharma performed prescribed rituals relating to the birth of a daughter and named her Bala. She was very religious and devout from childhood. As she spent a majority of her time in the devotion of Lord Shree Krishna at a very young age, villagers started calling her Bhakti (devotion). With the arrival of Bhakti, the home of Krushnasharma and Bhavani became very prosperous. At an opportune time, the marriage of Devsharma and Bhakti was concluded. The couple (Dharmadev and Murti) were as mutually compatible and radiant as Shankar and Parvati. Krushnasharma requested Balsharma to permit Devsharma to remain in Chhapaiya. Devsharma obliged on the concurrence of his father and wife. As Balsharma decided to return to Itar after staying a few days with his son and daughter-in-law, he realised that the separation from his son is permanent. He offered this advice to his daughter-in-law."

Balsharma said, ‘Listen to me o daughter. Be always scared of committing any sins. Be always devoted to your husband. The wife totally devoted to her husband enjoys thousands of years of pleasures of the Heaven. Blessed are the father, mother and husband of a wife devoted to her husband. A man gets a wife devoted to her husband only after the accrued Punyas of thousands of lives. The chaste wife can redeem the previous three and the next three generations of her father, mother and husband. The sun, the moon and wind touch her body with reverence, only to wash away their own sins. All the shrines of the earth and all Devtas reside within such a pious wife. Even the earth feels proud at the touch of her feet. The sins of a sinner are washed away at the mere sight of such a devoted wife. The scriptures took note of Arundhati, Saavitri, Ansuya, Ahalya, Shandili, Draupadi, Sati, Satrupa, Mena, Suniti, Sangna, Svaha, Lopamudra of the bygone eras as truly devoted wives. Be a similarly famous chaste and devoted wife."

Suvrat Muni said, "After suitably advising his daughter-in-law, Balsharma proceeded to proffer advice to his son. Balsharma said, 'Though you are intelligent, learned and wise, I am elder to you in age. Therefore, listen to me o son! Always observe these nine cardinal principles of a householder (Grahastha): Snan (morning bath), Sandhya (worship of God), Japa (Chanting God's name), Homa (Yagna), Svadhyay (study of scriptures), PitriTarpan (oblation to deceased ancestors), Devaarchan (the homage to God and saints), Vaishvadev (feeding others) and Atithya (honouring guests). Always look after your wife and assist her in observance of her Dharma. Never ignore her presence and contribution. Never touch a woman who is not closely related to you, especially a widow. Just like a dead body, a widow is considered inauspicious. You must bath on an accidental touch and fast for a day upon a deliberate touch of a widow. Never stay with a woman (other than your wife) in seclusion, even if she happens to be your mother, sister or daughter. Always refrain from the consumption of meat and alcohol, adultery, stealing and violence. One commits many sins to satisfy the desires of their stomach (hunger) and phallus (lust), therefore, never associate with irreligious and promiscuous men. The pious person helps one distinguish between right and wrong, therefore, seek their company at all times. Both of you must observe the Vrat of Ekadashi reverently. This and other Vrats observed reverently pleases God immensely. Perform special worship of Ganapati on the bright (Sud) fourth day of Bhadarvo and Hanumaji on the dark (Vad) fourteenth day of Aso. Consider Hanumanji as a ruling deity of our clan. He should be offered Sindur and oil in worship and Ladoos in Naivedhya. He will protect you from all difficulties and remove all your sorrows. Remember him at the time of adversity."

Suvrat Muni said, "The couple (Devsharma and Bhakti) listened to this advice intently and vowed to follow it at all times. They bowed to Balsharma with folded hands. Balsharma, pleased with their humility, blessed them and returned to Itar. After some time, he returned to the supreme abode at the time of his death."

Suvrat Muni continued, "After the departure of his parents, Devsharma treated his in-laws as his own parents and observed his ethical duties of a householder with utmost sincerity. Premvati always behaved as her husband would approve of. The couple reverently observed a fast on every Ekadashi. O king, they became even more devotional as time passed. Devsharma sought the company of pious persons to enhance his devotion in God. Seeing his staunch religious behaviour, people started calling him Dharma (religion). As indeed he was Dharma himself, he was always attended by his sons and twelve wives in divine forms. He staunchly observed the nine cardinal principles of the householder devotee, Snan, Sandhya and Japa thrice a day, Homa in morning and evening, regular Svadhyay, PitriTarpan and worship of Bhagwan Vishnu and Vaishvadev and Atithya Satkaar at opportune times as advised by his late father. He regularly studied scriptures to enhance and strengthen his devotion towards God and they spent all their free time in the devotion of God. Encouraged by their example, many neighbouring people started to live their life religiously as well. After the passage of some time, they had a son, the manifestation of Sankarshan, whom they named as Rampratap."

"The demons who have taken birth on earth started harassing the religious and devout. Considering him as their main enemy, they continuously harassed Dharmadev and they tried to tarnish his character by making false allegations. They insulted and persecuted him repeatedly. Dharmadev migrated to Ayodhya with his family to escape from such evil persons however the demons did not spare him in Ayodhya either. They would even harass him while doing his routine chores on the banks of River Saryu. They did not spare his wife either. He suffered great pains and indignity just as he has suffered with his brothers in the bygone era (of Mahabharat). Bhaktidevi suffered similar indignities as suffered by Draupadi. Dharmadev migrated to Kashi to alleviate his problems but evil persons did not stop hounding him there either. They travelled to Prayag where they met Ramanand swami who had travelled there on a pilgrimage. Surrounded by his disciples, celibate Ramanand swami was an expert at giving sermons. Forehead adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Chandlo, wearing a Tulsi Kanthi around his neck, wearing white robes, Ramanand swami had all the traits of a holy saint. Knowing him as great Sage Udhhavji, Dharmadev approached Ramanand swami. Ramanand swami also saw the traits of a very religious person in Dharmadev. The attraction and affection was mutual.

King Pratapsinh asked, "Who was Ramanand swami? Whose disciple was he? Where did he come from? How did he become a great Guru? O Suvrat Muni! Tell me all these in detail please."

Suvrat Muni replied, "O king! Let me tell you in great detail the life of Ramanand swami, the manifestation of Udhhavji. There lived a scholar, intelligent, devout and pious Brahmin from the Kashyap clan named Ajay Sharma in Ayodhya. As a result of the curse from Sage Durvasha, Udhhavji chose Ajay and his wife Sumati as parents. He was born on Shravan Vad Ashtami of Vikram Samvat 1975. His father performed birth related rites and gave generous donations to Brahmins on the auspicious occasion of the birth of a son and named him Ram on the twelfth day. Ram underwent all Sanskars according to the scriptures as he grew up including Yagnopavit at the age of eight. By the age of ten, Ram started listening and learning the Shreemad Bhagwat from his father. He associated with elders and scholars from a very young age. With a strong desire to see Lord Krishna in person, young Ram Sharma worshipped His idol fervently. He left home on the pretext of learning the Vedas to find a Guru who could help him meet Lord Krishna in person. After spending years in the search of the right Guru, Ram Sharma met Atmanand swami in a temple of Gopnath Mahadev in one of the caves of Girnar."

"Atmanand swami was one of disciples of Gopalalnand swami. He had mastered the art of Yoga by which he had attained the longevity and ability to choose the time of his death independently. His detachment from the materialistic was so perfect that his soul has attained the status of Brahm - liberated soul. He could undergo Samadhi independently. Atmanand swami himself had many disciples. Ramsharma bowed at his feet and with his permission stayed there for one month. Thinking that Atmanand Swami can see God in person whilst in Samadhi, Ramsharma requested him to help him see God in person. Atmanand advised him to practice and master Yoga. Ramsharma became a disciple of Atmanand swami and started learning Yoga under his tutelage. Atmanand Swami took Ramsharma under his wings and named him Ramanand swami. Under the expert guidance of his Guru, Ramanand swami mastered Yoga in a short time and became able to undergo Samadhi independently. His soul attained the status of Brahm as well. Ramanand swami could see a brilliant radiance while in Samadhi, but not Lord Narayan Himself. Not being satisfied with the achievement so far, he requested his Guru, 'I have accomplished Yoga by your grace and am able to see a radiant halo in Samadhi. O Swami! I want to see God in His glorious human form in Samadhi with whom I can communicate. My desire to see Lord Narayan in person has not been fulfilled. I am disturbed. Have mercy on me and fulfil my lone desire.' Guru Atmanand replied, ' O fool! Don't you know that anything with the shape and form is perishable? Only the shapeless is eternal.' Ramanand swami fainted upon hearing such harsh words. He decided to forsake a Guru who espoused Bhagwan as Nirakar (without shape). Atmanand swami tried to stop Ramanand leaving with sweet talk, but he had made up his mind to keep looking for a Guru who could help him see Bhagwan in the glorious human form. He started his journey in search of a suitable guru as before. Thinking that such a guru may be at the hermitage of Ramanujacharya, he arrived in Shreerangpur."

Suvrat Muni said, "Ramanand Swami would reverently and regularly do the Darshan of Lord Rangnath following a daily routine including a holy bath in River Kaveri. O king, with the sole desire to see God in His full glorious human form, Ramanand Swami started reading scriptures espousing God's human form and looking for a suitable Guru who could help him achieve his goal. He read many such scriptures written by Ramanujacharya including the Shree Bhashya and the Ramanuj Stotra. He accepted Ramanujacharya as his Guru in his mind in the absence of any other suitable guru and started meditating upon Ramanujacharya. After three months, in the early morning of the bright (Sud) fifth day of month of Chaitra, Ramanand swami had a dream. He saw radiant Ramanujacharya, adorned with twelve Urdhvapundra Tilaks and holding a wooden staff to denote his celibate status. Ramanand Swami immediately fell on the ground and did Sastang Pranam. Ramanujacharya blessed swami and asked for a boon."

"With his head bowed and hands folded together, Ramanand swami said, 'My long standing desire has been fulfilled with your Darshan. I want to see Lord Narayan in person. Please show me the way to fulfil my cherished desire.' Pleased with swami, Ramanujacharya gave Vaishnavi Diksha and two sacred hymns and said, 'Arise o Varni! Study the scriptures written by me and worship Lord Narayan with utmost reverence and love. Always observe your Dharma (ethical duties), perform worship of God, associate with pious persons and keep your senses under your control. You will be blessed with God's Darshan shortly with the help of these four. I empower you to give Vaishnavi Diksha to any devotee coming to you and such a devotee will be blessed with God's Darshan.' Ramanujacharya vanished after blessing Ramanand swami. Upon finding the Urdhvapundra Tilaks and imprints of conch, mace, discuss etc. on his body when he woke from the dream, Ramanand swami realised that it was a reality and not a mere dream. Following the advice of his guru Ramanujacharya, Ramanand swami was able to attain the Darshan of Lord Narayan in his heart. He started the pilgrimage of various shrines and would give Vaishnavi Diksha to any devotee approaching him with a chaste heart and dedication. The persons given Diksha by Ramanand swami were able to see God in person in a short period of time. As a result, his fame spread widely quickly."

Thus ends the fourteenth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-15

Suvrat Muni continued, "The evil and jealous persons were annoyed with Swami's fame. They started a smearing campaign against him and started physically assaulting him when they failed to defeat him in the debates. Some of them even went as far as erasing his Urdhvapundra Tilak and snatching his Kanthi and Mala. Some even broke his Sinhasan and snatched his worshipped Murti. Ramanand Swami suffered all these indignities without loosing his composure. To avoid detection and attract any attention towards him, he forsook all outwardly signs like his Urdhvapundra Tilak etc. and left Shreerangpur for Vrandavan. He would visit all the temples of Vrandavan for the Darshan of Lord Krishna and listen to the discourses of His Katha. He would spend most of his time in meditation of Lord Krishna and his devotion multiplied by many folds. Once he saw a brilliantly radiant halo in his heart while in Samadhi. He saw Lord Krishna playing His flute, accompanied by Radhikaji and Laxmiji. Lord Krishna was adorned by many ornaments including the fish shaped earrings, a crown with a peacock feather on His head and non wilting flower garland on His neck. Swami was very pleased with Lord Krishna's Darshan just as he was leased with Lord Narayan's Darshan. Ramanand Swami was able to see Bhagwan daily in his morning worship.

Indeed Lord Krishna accepted artefacts and Naivedhya offered by swami in person. His devotion in Lord Krishna became totally resolute. Not only did he understand the full glory of Lord Krishna, he knew himself as Sage Udhhavji, born presently as the result of the curse of Durvasha. O king, Ramanand swami established a new Sampraday called 'Udhhav Sampraday' based on the teaching of the Vedas and other holy scriptures. To serve Lord Krishna lovingly by remaining within the boundary of one's ethical duties is the cardinal principle of this Sampraday. He espoused the traits of the soul, Maya and God exactly as described in the ShreeBhashya of Ramanujacharya. His sermons attracted many devout persons within the fold of his Sampraday. Visiting many shrines, Ramanand swami arrived in Prayag."

Thus ends the fifteenth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-16

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! I told you everything you asked me regarding Ramanand Swami. Dharmadev stayed in Prayag for some time serving his guru, Ramanand Swami. Once, while massaging his guru's feet, Dharmadev slipped into a deep Samadhi. He saw Lord Krishna in the middle of a brilliant halo in Samadhi. He was pleasantly surprised with His Darshan and realised that this Darshan had become only possible with the grace of his guru. He expressed the wish to be given the Vaishnavi Diksha when he came out of the Samadhi. Ramanand Swami gave the double stringed Tulsi Kanthi and two hymns to Dharmadev and Bhaktimata. The first hymn, 'Shree Krishna Tvam GatirMama' leads one to become a better Vaishnav (His devotee) and the second; 'BrahmaAham KrishnaDaasoAsmi' is the fulfiller of all desires. The first hymn is common to all devotees who seek his shelter and the second one is for the devotee who wishes to accept the higher Vaishnavi Diksha. Ramanand swami explained the Dharma of all devotees by which one attains fame in this world while alive and Moksha at the time of death."

"Ramanand swami said, 'O Dharma! None of my disciples must ever kill any living being, even for a Yagna or oblation to the Pitris (dead ancestors). One must not kill any man even to acquire a kingdom or a woman. One must not commit suicide, even at a shrine with the aim of attaining Heaven. O Brahmin! One must never consume alcohol or meat in any form, even as a medicine or Prasad. One must not commit adultery nor give away his wife. Similarly, a woman must not closely associate with any man other than her husband. A Brahamchari (celibate) must avoid women by sight, contact and thought. The male householder must avoid touching a widow and vice versa. A woman must not touch celibate saints. One must not steal even for religious deeds. Our Satsangis (followers of the Udhhav Sampraday) must not listen to the discourses or Katha from a non Satsangi. One must not even accept Prasad from a person by whose touch one may digress from the ethics of his Varna. One must not accuse anybody with false allegations. Never associate with sinners, cheaters or addicts. Additionally, never associate with these six types of persons; an angry ascetic, a greedy saint, a lusty devotee, a devotee from another religion, a guru who does not make sure that his disciple acts according to the scriptures and a scholar who espouses God as Nirakar (without form). The association with any of these persons nullifies one's intelligence and devotion. Do not criticise any Deities, shrines, the Vedas, cows, Brahmins, saints and religious persons. One must never read a scripture in which Bhagwan is described Nirakar. Never donate an armament, poison, a net to catch birds or fishes as it is equivalent of committing violence. A Brahamchari must never bear arms or keep anything lethal with him.'

'All male devotees must bear an Urdhvapundra Tilak of Gopichandan and a Chandlo of Kumkum in its centre on their forehead. A married woman must bear a Gopichandan Chandlo on her heart and Kumkum Chandlo on her forehead. A widow should bear a small Chandlo on her throat. Gopichandan or Kumkum used for Tilak and Chandlo must be remnant of the veneration of Lord Krishna. All devotees must perform worship of Lord Radha-Krishna as appropriate to their Varna and Ashram.

One must read or recite five chapters of the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat describing Raas Leela at the conclusion of the morning worship. A devotee must always remember and chant the name of God - 'Shree Krishna'- during the whole day and especially at bedtime. A devotee must wear a double stringed Kanthi of Tulsi at all times. A Kanthi of sandalwood may be worn if Tulsi Kanthi is not available. In any case, the Kanthi first must be offered to God's lotus feet. One must understand the characteristics of soul, Maya and God intelligently. The cornerstone of our Sampraday is to worship Lord Krishna whilst observing Dharma, the ethical duties.'

Ramanand Swami continued, 'You are very fortunate that you have started on the path of salvation. You have virtues that are rare in ordinary men. You will become the main and reverent amongst my disciples as ascendancy is subject only to the virtues and devotion in God. O Dharmadev! Return home with your wife and spend the rest of your life in God's devotion, chanting the hymns I gave. I give you an authority to initiate devotees in our Sampraday by giving them the first hymn and the advice of the guiding principles of our Sampraday to all devotees that approach you. You may grant the second hymn only to the appropriately suitable male devotees. You must recite the second ('BrahmaAham KrishnaDaasoAsmi') hymn at the time of adversity. Lord Krishna is the ruling deity of this hymn and therefore it fulfils all of one's desires. Ramanujacharya is the best guru to explain the characteristics of Jeev (soul), Ishwar (God) and Maya (illusion), therefore you must learn the scriptures like the Shree Bhashya written by him.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king, Ramanand swami went towards Dwarka. Dharmadev and Bhaktimata returned to their home. Dharmadev considered him to be a liberated soul distinct from the three bodies; gross, subtle and causal. He realised that the soul, Maya and Time are subordinate to God and everything visible is perishable except Lord Krishna, Who is eternal and the master of the entire universe. He studied and taught others the scriptures written by Ramanujacharya as advised by Ramanand swami. The pious among people considered Devsharma as the actual manifestation of Dharmadev and came under his shelter, leaving evil gurus. Due to the long association with previous gurus and the vices like the consumption of alcohol and meat ingrained in their intelligence, many of the new disciples were unable to forget their old evil gurus totally."

Thus ends the sixteenth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-17

Suvrat Muni continued, "Whomever Dharmadev gave Vaishnavi Diksha to, gave up all their vices and evil gurus totally and they gave immense wealth to Dharmadev as gratitude. Dharmadev, in return donated so much wealth during the Yagnopavit Sanskar of his son Rampratap which surprised the people. The evil gurus and their disciples became jealous of this newly acquired wealth. They started harassing Dharmadev and his disciples. They would turn up at his house seeking alms and steal his wealth, cattle and utensils stealthily. As a result, Dharmadev became poor again and his clansmen became abusive towards him. Dharmadev continued to serve the guests to the best of his ability; sometimes himself remaining hungry because of lack of food. When Bhaktimata could no longer endure these indignities, she once said to Dhramadev, 'O Lord! Bad times have befallen on us! We have to endure so much hardship due to no fault of ours. All our wealth and income has disappeared. As it is, we get food only on some days. We may be prepared to go hungry but how could I see the guest going empty handed from our home? You are able to bear all this as you have great patience. I don't have so much patience. My Dharma of feeding my husband is put to test repeatedly by our poverty. You are very wise and learned. You must know some way to alleviate our misery. I am very surprised to see you not disturbed by our problems. Please, do something!' Upon hearing such lament words, Dharmadev told his wife Bhaktima, 'Listen to me. It is said in the scriptures that the patience is the ship with which one crosses the ocean of misery. This body and its pain are the direct result of our past deeds. All these problems are our destiny. Nothing and nobody can change one's destiny. Many powerful people had suffered pains due to their destiny. Indra, the king of Devtas and his wife had suffered a lot at the hands of demon Vratasur. King Nala and his wife, Damyanti suffered many pains at the hands of his enemies. Even the best of sages like Vashistha and his wife, Arundhati had to endure great hardships at his enemies' hands. They endured everything with patience and we have to endure this with patience as well."

Suvrat Muni said, "Bhaktimata was not consoled even after the wise and soothing words and she started crying. Dharmadev spoke to Bhaktimata again, 'Do not worry. The bad times do not last forever. Though destiny can not be altered, the wise do not sit idle. They endeavour to lessen the sufferings repeatedly. Even I will try to remove our sufferings.' As Dharmadev thought of ways to lessen their miseries, he suddenly remembered the words of his late father. He thought of praying to Hanumanji in such detrimental times. He started the worship of Hanumanji with this prayer, 'I bow to you O son of Anjani and wind Devta, friend and able minister of Sugreev and an ardent, servile devotee of Lord Ram! Even Ravan, the most fearsome of the demons was scared of you. I repeatedly bow to you who had spread the terror among the army of demons led by Indrajit, the brave son of Ravan. O Hanumanji, you removed the sorrow of captive Sitaji by giving her the message of Lord Ram. O accomplished Yogi, O chaste minded, I bow to you whom Lord Ram and Sita are very endearing. You are the destroyer of evil spirits and remover of all ailments. You have the ability of expanding and contracting your body at will. O fearless one, you remove fears of others. O wise one! You had saved the life of Laxman. You are the saviour of your devotees and rreverent to all. O best among celibates, you have always helped God's devotees including Pandavas. O remover of all sins! I bow to you. O bestower of boons! You are always engrossed in Lord Ram's Katha. Please listen to my prayers and appear in front of me to make me fearless. I bow to you."

Suvrat Muni said, "Not fully satisfied with the above prayer, Dharmadev would stand on one foot at the end of the worship and prayed further, 'Body smeared by Sindoor, you are a scholar of the Vedas and other scriptures, an expert practitioner of the politics, the best among Lord Ram's ministers, the best among Naisthik Brahamcharis. O messenger of Lord Ram, please remove my miseries. You were the only one who removed the sorrow of Lord Ram caused by the abduction of Sita, you killed many demons and burnt Lanka. You were the only one who saved Laxman's life threatened by Ravan's potent arrow by bringing the mountain, Dronachal with its medicinal plants. You had consoled Bharat with the news of the imminent arrival of Lord Ram in Ayodhya. Just as the bee is ever attracted towards a flower, your mind is always focussed at the feet of Lord Ram. Your eyes are so potent that no one can see you in the eyes. A mere name of yours is capable to repel all evil spirits. You can fulfil all desires of devotees. Please fulfil my desires as well. O messenger of Lord Ram, please remove my miseries."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Dharmadev for some time continued with his prayers and worship. He had to go hungry several times. Pleased with his prayers, Hanumanji appeared in person in front of Dharmadev after two months. Hanumanji said, 'O Dharmadev! I am pleased with your dedication. Go to Vrandavan immediately and you will meet your friends from your past life. Perform a Yagna there with other sages afflicted with similar sufferings.' Pleased at the turn of events, Dharmadev concluded the next day. Leaving his son home, he proceeded on the way to Vrandavan with his wife without saying anything to any outsiders. They would walk alone for the fear of being recognised by evil persons. Their only strength was the name of Lord Krishna in their heart. They reached Vrandavan after a month's arduous journey on the day of Fuldolotsav (Dhuleti). Dharmadev performed veneration of Lord Krishna seated in the adorned swing along with thousands of visiting devotees. He did Pradakshina of Govardhan Mountain reverently at the conclusion of worship. "

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Thousands of devotees had turned up in Vrandavan to celebrate the festival of Fuldolotsav. The sages afflicted by the curse of Durvasha in Badrikaashram came to Vrandavan from far flung places at the behest of the latent desire of God. Thus, all the sages gathered at one place once again. Whilst performing Pradakshina, they remembered the assembly of Badrikaashram and realised their true identity. The sages and Dharmadev exchanged the tales of their sufferings at the hands of the evil persons as cursed by Durvasha. The sages asked Dharmadev, 'O Dharma! We have suffered a lot at the hands of evil people. When will this end as foretold by Durvasha?' Dharmadev replied, 'The prophecy by Durvasha will not fail. Have patience. We will be blessed with God's Darshan soon. We have to endure whatever is destined until then. Hanumanji has told me to perform a Jap Yagna by which Lord Krishna will become pleased and give His Darshan. O sages, I will undertake the recital of His Mantra and you undertake the recital of scriptures and Stotras."

Suvrat Muni said, "All sages became happy by the soothing words of Dharmadev and decided to follow his advice. Under the guidance of Dharmadev, some sages started the recital of the scriptures like the Shreemad Bhagwat and the Bhagvad Gita the next day i.e. second day of the dark fortnight of month of Falgun. At the same time some sages undertook the recital of Strotas like the Vishnu SahastraNam, Vishnu Gayatri, Narayan Kavach etc. Bhaktimata started the recital of Lord Krishna's Raas Leela. They would sing the Geet Govind accompanied by musical instruments at night."

Suvrat Muni said, "This continued until Vaishakh Sud Ekadashi – Mohini Ekadashi. After the recital and singing, all the sages and Dharmadev decided to spend the rest of the night singing Kirtans to celebrate Ekadashi. Lord Krishna, pleased with the sages, appeared in their midst very early in the morning before sunrise. He was surrounded by the brilliant radiant halo. (The following eight verses describe what He looked like at that time). The complexion of His body was slightly dark just like newly formed clouds, yet radiant, so handsome as to pale the beauty of the Eros (the deity of love, Kamdev), His face as beautiful and serene as the moon on the full moon night, His large eyes shaped like a petal of lotus and His hairs black and very fine. He was wearing bright golden robes, a crown studded with innumerable diamonds and other jewels, the strings of flowers dangling from the crown, the fish shaped earrings in both His ears, a necklace of large white pearls, a garland of non wilting flowers and golden ornaments like bracelets, rings, waistband and anklets. His bright red lips were blowing wind to draw divine music from a flute held at his lips by both His hands. Indeed, everything about Him was divine and beyond description. He was accompanied by His wives – Rukmini, Radha, Laxmana, Satyabhama, Satya, Bhadra, Jambvanti, Kalindi etc. family – Nandraj, Yashoda, Balram, Vaasudev and Devki, cows – Nanda, Surbhi, Sunanda etc. and thousands of Gopis holding the artefacts of veneration like Kumkum, saffron and garlands."

Suvrat Muni said, "Dharmadev and all the sages were elated at Lord Krishna's smiling face. They immediately fell on the ground to prostrate at His feet. They stood up and looked intently at His face again, totally mesmerised by it. Their senses became so focused in Lord Krishna that they forgot all their pains. Elated with the pleasure of His Darshan, Dharmadev prayed on behalf of all the sages."

Dharmadev said, 'O Bhagwan! You are able to remove all sins and sufferings of Your devotees. We are very fortunate to have Your Darshan. O Lord! You are the master of all universes, eternal and beyond soul, Maya and Akshar. You reside in Your supreme abode – Akshardham – with full potency and glory. You are the reason of all reasons. You take the form of Pradhyumna, Anirudhha, Sankarshan and Vaasudev at Your will and independently. You take the form of Brahma, Vishnu and Shiv to create, sustain and destroy the universe. All scriptures describe Your name and Your glory. All mankind worship only You. You incarnate Yourself from time to time to protect the pious and re-establish the Sanatan religion maligned by evil demons. O Bhagwan! You appeared as Matsya (a fish) to reclaim the Vedas from demon Hayagreev. As Kurma (a turtle), You held the mountain Mandrachal on Your back to assist the churning of the ocean. O Lord! It was You as Varaha (a boar) Who brought the Earth back from the deep water. You took the form Narsinha (half man half lion) to kill Hiranyakshipu, the king of demons. As Vaaman, You cheated demon, King Bali on the pretext of seeking land equivalent of just three steps. You killed the haughty Kshatriyas as Parshuram, the son of Sage Jaamdagni. You killed a very powerful demon Raavan, the king of Lanka by coming to this world as Lord Ram. Though born in Mathura as a son of Devki and Vaasudev, You publicised Your birth in Vraj to remove their sufferings and please them. Besides killing many demons sent by Your maternal uncle King Kans to kill You, You killed Kans himself by returning to Your birthplace Mathura once again. Then You went to Dwarka and married Rukmini, and others and killed and helped kill innumerable demons. O Lord! You repeatedly protected Nar incarnate Arjun and his brothers and his wife Draupadi by constantly being at their side. You took birth as Budhha to waylay demons and You will take birth as Kalki to massacre the demons once again. You have come on this earth repeatedly to relieve the pains and sufferings of Your devotees. Therefore, please relieve us from our sufferings. Have mercy on us!'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh, Devsharma, his eyes filled with tears of joy, became quiet after this prayer. Bhaktidevi, who was also elated and surprised by the sudden Darshan of Lord Krishna, prayed with moist eyes and quivering voice."

Bhaktimata prayed, "O son of Nand! O giver of all pleasures! O deliverer of Your devotees! I bow to You. Though the master of the universe, You still asked for a spoonful of butter from Your mother Yashoda just to please her. You lowered Your eyes in fear and shame when Your mother tied You to a pole when caught stealing butter from others' home. You sang and danced repeatedly in front of Gopis expecting a little butter from them. You played with the children of Vraj and tended their cows just for their pleasure. You attracted the minds of Gopis and cows alike by playing divine tunes on Your flute. I bow to You remembering Your childhood Leelas. You lifted mountain Govardhan to protect the residents of Gokul. I bow to You, Who played with Radha and became known as RadhaRaman. You redeemed not only Your devotees but the demons as well who came to kill You. When You played Raas with Gopis of Vraj, You took innumerable forms so that each Gopi had the chance to play Raas individually with You. O demolisher of Eros! I have come under Your shelter.'

Suvrat Muni said, "At the conclusion of the prayer by Bhaktimata, Lord Shree Krishna, pleased with all of them, addressed them, 'I am pleased with You. Ask for a boon from Me.' Dharmadev replied on behalf of all, 'O Lord! The demons in human form have inflicted severe pain on us. We have come under Your shelter for protection. Only You can protect us from them.' Lord Krishna said, 'Do not fear these demons. They have an old enmity with Me. They harass you because they consider you as Mine. They hassle Devtas as well by offering meat and wine in the Yagnas. They want to defeat Me through you. Nobody except Me can defeat them. Even I was subjected to the curse of Durvasha in Badrikaashram. Therefore, O Dharma! I will take birth as your son. I will become known as Hari and protect you and free you from the curse. Just as I appear in your midst now, I will gather you around Me then as well. Your sufferings and poverty will end as of today. I will not only redeem you from the curse of Durvasha, but I will also re-establish the religious way of life on earth. I will also redeem all who would chant My name just as reverently as you have recently done. They will indeed attain My supreme abode at the end of their human life.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The merciful Lord Krishna disappeared from the sight of the sages. They concluded the Jap Yagna."

Thus ends the nineteenth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! They finished the fast of Ekadashi with the successful conclusion of the Jap Yagna. They decided amongst themselves to keep Lord Krishna's Darshan and His prophecy of His birth secret. The news of His birth will spread itself later on. They dispersed and went on their way to their respective homes. The memory of their true identity became intermittent with God's will. Dharmadev and Bhaktimata, afraid of coming face to face with any demons, went by the side roads on the way to Chhapaiya. They lost their way in a dense forest. They did not find any village until sunset on this sparse road and they did not find any water or food. As the darkness descended in the dense forest, they stayed under a large tree to take rest. Suddenly, they saw a dark complexioned, bearded, bald man approaching. His eyes were large and reddened. As he was wearing only a loin cloth, Dharmadev mistook him as an ascetic and bowed at him with folded hands. The man asked Dharmadev what they were doing in this dense forest at that time. Dharmadev replied, 'I am Devsharma from Chhapaiya. Harassed by the demons, I had gone to Vrandavan for solace at the feet of Lord Krishna. He was pleased with us and granted me the boon. We have lost our way in this forest. I am very glad to see you in this secluded place.' The man got very angry at the mention of Lord Krishna and asked, 'What boon did Lord Krishna grant you? Dharmadev forgot the decision to keep the matter of Vrandavan a secret and blurted out, 'Lord Krishna said to me that He, Arjun, Bhim and Baldev killed many demons in the distant past. The demons killed by Lord Krishna Himself attained salvation never to be born again. The demons killed by others did not give up enmity with God and were born again on this earth. Still considering Lord Krishna as their enemy and with the desire to defeat Him, they harass His devotees. Lord Krishna has granted me the boon that He will take birth as my son to vanquish these demons. Now I am on my way to my home."

Suvrat Muni said, "The ascetic became very angry at hearing the prophecy of another incarnation of God. He said to Dharmadev with trembling lips, 'O Brahmin! I know all virtues and vices of Lord Krishna Who is to become your son. I am Ashvatthama. He had caused a lot of distress to my friend, Duryodhan. That charioteer of Arjun has pained me a lot as well. To protect the army of demons, I curse you and Him that your son will never bear armaments. He will not be able to kill anyone without bearing armament. No matter how clever or brave one is, He cannot kill anybody without arms and if He were to bear arms despite this, He will be defeated by His enemy immediately."

Suvrat Muni said, O king! Ashvatthama suddenly disappeared. Dharmadev and Bhaktimata became very disconsolate at this new development. Bhaktimata said to Dharmadev, 'Whatever we achieved (the promise by Lord Krishna to vanquish demons) at Vrandavan has been nullified by this curse.' Dharmadev said to Bhaktimata to console her, 'We should now observe the Vrat of Ganapati. He is capable or removing any obstacles in our path. The scriptures consider him to be an incarnation of Lord Krishna and he will definitely help to remove our sorrows. From now onwards we will observe his Vrat on the bright fourth day of Bhadrapad every year. Do not ever think that we are the only two persons afflicted by the problems. The whole world is an ocean of problems and sorrows. Even Lord Ram along with His wife and brother had to endure hardship during the exile in the forest.' Suvrat Muni said, "Dharmadev recited the tales from the Ramayan, and how Hanumanji had repeatedly helped Lord Ram in His hours of need. Bhaktidevi was comforted to know that the same Hanumanji is their clan's deity. She prayed to Hanumanji in her mind and sought his help in the hour of their need. Hanumanji, who was already present there to hear the Ramayan from Dharmadev, suddenly appeared in front of them in the garb of a Brahmin. Hanumanji said, "O Dharma and Bhakti! I am here to protect and guide you. Do not worry about Ashvatthama's curse. Your future son is the master of the universe. He does not need to bear weapons to kill anybody. Do not despair. I will always be at His side to protect Him from any danger."

Suvrat Muni said, "Hanumanji disappeared after showing Dharmadev the proper path to Chhapaiya. They were happy now at the expectance of good times to come. Bhaktimata asked Dharmadev, 'I am very impressed by the fact that Hanumanji helps us time and time again, but I am very curious about his longevity. How did he become to live so long? What does he do on this earth? Please tell me all in detail.' Dharmadev replied, 'Hanumanji's longevity is granted by Lord SitaRam. Lord Ram had returned to Ayodhya after killing demon Ravan. His devout army of monkeys, bears and humans had accompanied Him and stayed in Ayodhya for one year. They served Lord Ram reverently for a whole year. Lord Ram gave them expensive gifts and persuaded them to return to their homes. Sugreev remorsefully agreed to return to Kishkindha with his army of monkeys. Everybody thought that Hanumanji will also return to Kishkindha with Sugreev. Instead he prayed to Lord Ram, 'O Lord Ram! I am unable to live away from You. Therefore, I ask that my devotion towards You should never diminish an iota. Grant me that my servitude shall always remain in You. I am interested in hearing

Hanumanji is alive today and will remain so till Lord Ram's Katha is being sung on this earth. Hanumanji is invariably present wherever and whenever Lord Ram's Katha is being recited. He came here last night while I was narrating the Ramayan. He has returned after giving us his Darshan. Now all our wishes will come true.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King! Bhaktidevi was pleased hearing this from her husband. They arrived in Chhapaiya after one and a half months. Their relatives and neighbours welcomed them warmly and their enemies disappeared altogether. Lord NarNarayan was now ready to take birth. Twin Swarup Lord Nar and Narayan became one and entered the heart of Dharmadev. His prosperity increased so much with the grace of God that he became known as Hariprasad. Hariprasad understood very clearly that all the affluence was due to the mercy of God. Lord NarNarayan entered Bhaktimata's womb and as result the pregnant Bhaktimata appeared as radiant as Devhuti (mother of Kapildev) celebrated a great festival on the bright ninth day on the months of Aso in which they offered hundreds of goats, sheep etc. animals and thousands of pots of alcohol in Naivedhya to their goddess. They consumed meat and alcohol and engaged in copulation with women within the precinct of the temple. Goddess Vindhyavasini was very angry, especially at their leader Kalidutt, as such irreligious behaviour was being conducted in front of her and in her temple. The angry goddess, holding a sword and a trident appeared in his dream at night and said, 'O Brahmin! You have become corrupt by the consumption of meat and alcohol. You maligned me for your selfish ends. I curse such that you and your wealth will perish soon. Anyone who worships me with alcohol and meat will also perish like you. Bhagwan will take birth in Koshal region and will destroy you with His mental powers. He will find all the demons, no matter where they hide. The kings who support you will meet the same end. The foreign ruler will win over all the demonic kings to rule singlehandedly."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Goddess disappeared after cursing Kalidutt. He was very agitated and told all other demons gathered around about the curse. Disconcerted demons, realising that the curse cannot be neutralised, prostrated at her feet seeking pardon from her. The assembled demons concluded that whatever is to happen, they must kill God as a child as they knew He will become stronger than the demons as He grows up. They went to their respective homes awaiting the news of the birth of Bhagwan. Their days became long in anticipation of the news of their obliteration. On other hand, Dharmadev observed the Vrats of Ganapati on the bright fourth day of months of Bhadrapad and of Hanumanji on the dark fourteenth day of the month of Aso very reverently.

Suvrat Muni continued, "As Premvati was beholding the Lord and the master of the universe was in her womb, she was so radiant that all the villagers were surprised to see her glowing beauty. Nobody had ever seen such a radiant pregnant lady before. Even Dharmadev was surprised at her state. She became the centre of attention in the village. The entire village held her as reverential as Devhuti. Bhaktimata was so shy at the attention showered on her that she rarely ventured out of the house. Brahma and Shankar along with other Devtas and sages like Narad came in their divine form to pray to Bhagwan in Bhaktidevi's womb."

Devtas said, 'O Lord Krishna! Just as the boat is the only support to people drowning in the ocean, You are the only support for the people trying to swim across this materialistic world. We bow to Your divine feet marked with divine imprints like the triangle and octagon. O Lord! You create, sustain and destroy innumerable universes yet You do not get entangled in them as You are beyond Maya. You have come here (in Bhaktidevi's womb) from Akshardham just to fulfill the promise You made (of reincarnation) as the son of Devki and Vasudev. O Lord Narayan! Indeed, You take birth whenever the true religion and its true adherers are threatened by evil people. However, O Purushottam! None of us are capable of recounting Your innumerable births, Leelas, virtues, forms and glory. This grief-stricken world is impossible to cross on one's own steam, but whoever comes under Your shelter is able to cross it easily. Though the Vedas attest Your Saakar Swarup, the ignorant consider You as Nirakar (formless). As a result they are consigned to Hell and suffer its pain for thousands of years. Your visible human form cannot be comprehended with knowledge of the Vedas or any other scriptures only. The association of true saints and Your express desire are vital to know You as You are. Whenever we faced insurmountable problems, You came to our assistance by taking the form of a fish, turtle and men to save the world.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The Devtas returned to their respective abodes after concluding their prayers. Almighty Lord, the soul of the whole universe, Purushottam Narayan took birth by His own wish on Monday the ninth bright day of month of Chaitra in Samvat 1837, when the sun, the moon and the planets like the Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus etc. were in the most auspicious positions. When Bhaktimata looked lovingly at her baby, He appeared as Lord Krishna of Vrandavan and Lord Narayan of Badrikaashram simultaneously. As Lord Krishna, He appeared wearing a golden coronet, earrings in His ears, golden robes and various golden ornaments on His hands, feet, neck and waist, holding a flute between His lips with His hands. He appeared very radiant. As Lord Narayan, He appeared in the attire of a young and handsome ascetic with white clothes, his hair tied in a bun on His head. Wearing a Yagnopavit across His torso, He appeared very serene, smiling and radiant. Bhagwan said to Bhaktimata, 'Have no fear from the demons. I will vanquish all the demons. I have appeared in two distinct forms to remind you of the promise I made in Badrikaashram and Vrandavan. Do not ever differentiate and discriminate between these two forms.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Bhagwan turned into an ordinary baby right in front of Bhaktimata's eyes. The pious persons on earth and Devtas in Heaven felt very elated from within and celebrated His birth. The Devtas showered flowers from the Heaven, Apsaras danced and Gandharvas sang with great elan. The subdued fires of the Yagnas ignited and the minds of pious persons became serene and free from inner vices like anger and greed. Rishis showered their blessing on the birth of God. The evil persons' minds were disturbed with bad omens. The wind turned serene while the sky became clear of clouds. O king! The courtyard of Dharmadev's home brimmed with joyous and singing villagers. The ladies of Chhapaiya turned up at his doorstep to bless his newly born son."

Suvrat Muni prayed, "O Lord! Your speech, face, smile, eyes are all benevolent. The movements of Your hands and feet are benevolent. Indeed everything of Yours is benevolent. O son of Dharmadev! Shower Your benevolent blessing on the whole world."

Suvrat Muni said, "Hariprasad was very pleased when told of the birth of a son. He followed the Vedic rites of the birth. He had the bath first and then offered oblation to his Pitris. He gave donations to Brahmins who in return showered their blessing on his newly born son. Other members of his clan gathered at his home to share Dharmadev's joy. Dharmadev and Bhaktimata were unable to realise the true identity of their son (Lord Krishna) by His own express desire as He wanted to grant the joy of rearing a child to Dharmadev and Bhaktimata. The parents could not have had the pleasure of Leelas if they had an inkling of His true identity. They forgot the promise Lord Krishna made to them in Vrandavan by His wish. Yet, the couple accepted that the birth of their son was indeed the gift of God. They immediately developed great affection towards their son. They prayed to God for the protection and longevity of their son."

Thus ends the twenty second chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-23

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The demons created the army of Krutyas when they realised that Bhagwan had taken birth. Kalidutt sent this army of Krutyas, armed with swords and tridents, led by Kotra to Chhapaiya. The Krutyas reached Chhapaiya on the sixth day after the birth of Bhagwan. Taking advantage of the darkness they entered Dharmadev's house at midnight and headed straight where Bhaktimata was resting. While the other ladies had gone to sleep, Bhaktimata was still awake following the veneration of Goddess MahaShashthi, Ganapati and Lord Vishnu. She was lovingly looking at the smiling face of her baby. Dark complexioned and totally nude Kotra, with her horrendous face, red eyes and holding raised trident in one hand and bloodied skull in another, rushed towards Bhaktimata to snatch the baby and said, 'O fool! I have come to kill your son. Invoke your Ishtadev and see if He can protect your son from me! I will kill Him as well!' Accompanied by the cries of 'kill' 'kill' by accompanied Krutyas, Kotra snatched baby God by the throat and ran outside. Bhaktimata could not bear the pain of being separated from her baby and she fainted crying aloud for her child. Dharmadev rushed to her bedroom upon hearing the commotion. Realising what had happened, he fainted as well. Other ladies were crying due to the abduction of baby God. Hanumanji arrived there immediately to alleviate the couple's sorrows. He woke both of them from their trance to give them solace. Dharmadev and Bhaktimata saw Hanumanji in front of them; his divine body was smeared with oil and Sindur. Upon being asked for the reason for their sorry state by Hanumanji, Bhaktimata said, 'Your mere presence is calming. Who are you? The Krutyas have abducted my six days old son.' Hanumanji replied, 'I am Hanuman, the devotee of Lord Ram. I have come to your aid as both of you are my staunch devotees."

Suvrat Muni said, "Consoling Dharmadev and Bhaktimata, Hanumanji left immediately to bring back the almighty Lord, Who had taken the human form at His own wish. Kotra and the other Krutyas were blinded by the brilliant radiance of God as they were flying in the sky holding Him. Unable to face the heat and light emanating from His body, Kotara let go of Him and baby Bhagwan fell on earth. The Krutyas surrounded Him with their arms raised with the intention of killing Him. Hanumanji suddenly appeared there. He expanded his body and roared in anger. The Krutyas became frightened of the terrible giant. Their tridents fell from their hands and they ran away to save their lives. Hanumanji was very angry at the pain which was caused to His Lord. He chased the Krutyas and tied them together as one would tie the bale of twigs. He then tied them to his tail and started beating them mercilessly. Hanumanji tossed the half dead Krutyas far away. He returned to where baby Bhagwan was laying on the ground, picked Him up gently and returned Him to Bhaktimata. Very pleased at seeing his son safe and sound, Bhaktimata said to Hanumanji, 'My son is still unconscious. Make Him conscious just as you had made Laxman conscious. Nothing is impossible for you!' Hanumanji replied, 'O pious lady! Your son is not an ordinary mortal human. He is the Lord and master of the universe. Know this as the ultimate truth. He has taken birth in your home to protect you, your family and others who come to His refuge. Love this baby more than anything in this world.' Just as Bhaktimata glanced at Him, Bhagwan smiled at her and Hanumanji disappeared. Dharmadev and Bhaktimata were pleasantly surprised at Hanumanji's capability and averred that he had saved their son from the dreadful Krutyas. They sang Hanumanji's paeans to their relatives and became even more fervent devotees. They took extra vows of his Darshan and worship every Saturday. Dharmadev arranged a special Vedic veneration for peace and fed the Brahmins at the conclusion of it. He undertook the Japa of the 'Narayan Kavach' to keep all evils at bay. They duly forgot Hanumanji's words regarding their son being God Himself. By His own will, they started treating Him as an ordinary human child.

CHAPTER-24

Suvrat Muni continued, "Followed by the ritual worship of Lord Narayan and Laxmiji, Bhaktimata put her son in the cradle, with His head towards the East, for the first time on Friday, the Vaishakh Sud Ekadashi. At the start of the second month of the birth, Bhaktimata offered her son the cow's milk through the opening of a conch. Dharmadev, accompanied by many learned Brahmins, took his son outside to see the Sun for the first time when He was three months old. After the ritual worship of the moon, Dharmadev took his son out again at night to show Him the moon. Accompanied by his disciples, Sage Markandeya arrived at the doorstep of Dharmadev's home. Dharmadev along with his wife welcomed the sage with honour and offered him a sumptuous lunch. Dharmadev said to Sage Markandeya, 'O learned sage! You have done me a great honour by coming to my home. Please tell me where are you coming from? You appear very learned. Please tell me which scriptures you have mastered?' Markandeya Muni replied, 'I have come to your home en route to various shrines. I am born into the clan of Sage Bhrigu. My name is Markandeya. I have studied the Vedas, the Vedang and the Puranas. I am an expert in Astrology and I teach these scriptures to others as well.' The sages were scholarly and knowledgeable in the scriptures. It was for this reason Dharmadev wished to have his son named by Markandeya Muni. He said with folded hands, 'O Muni! I am fortunate to have such a scholar as my guest. Please be my guest for a few days. I wish for you to look and tell me what is in store for my son in the future. I would like you to name my son at the most auspicious time.' Sage Markandeya looked into his almanac to find the most auspicious time for the naming ceremony. He said, 'Normally the naming ceremony should be concluded by the eleventh or twelfth day after the birth or it can be carried out after the hundredth day in the absence of a suitable auspicious time. However, in your case tomorrow is a very auspicious day. Therefore, I will conduct the naming ceremony tomorrow and will disclose to you what is in store for His future. Dharmadev gathered all the necessary items required for the ceremony and he performed the ritualistic worship the next morning as guided by Markandeya Muni. The Muni spoke after introspection and meditation, 'O Dharmadev! As your son will protect you and others coming into His refuge, I name Him Hari. Your son will attract the senses of His disciple towards Him and as He is dark complexioned and born under the ruling constellation of Cancer, therefore, I name Him Krishna. Combining these two names together, He will commonly be known as HariKrishna. Your son will become known as Nilkanth as He will become equal to Shiva in austerity, detachment, knowledge and observation of Dharma. Furthermore, Your son will have many more names according to His virtues and deeds. Your son will surpass King Pruthu in listening to God's Katha, King Ambarish in forgiveness, Hanumanji in the servility, Vidur in the discrimination of right from wrong, Shukdevji in detachment, Prahalad in Bhakti, King Janak and Kapildev in theological knowledge, King Yudhishthir in fear from the sins, Sage Narad in firmness of trust in God, Arjun in controlling the senses, Akrur in understanding the greatness of God, Udhhavji in understanding the importance of God's devotees, Jadbharat in the saintliness, King Bali in patience and Brahaspati in answering complex theological questions. Thousands of people will tread the path shown by Him. As His hands have the imprints of a lotus and Vajra and feet have the imprints of an Urdhvarekha and lotus, He will become the leader of millions. He will protect both of you just as Vishnu has protected Devtas from all troubles. Your son will have many virtues. Indeed, I cannot fathom all His virtues.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Listening to such wonderful virtues of his son, Dharmadev gifted many ornaments, clothes and much wealth to Markandeya Muni on his departure the next day. They were elated at listening to so many virtues of their son. Indeed, they were so engrossed in the pleasure that they forget their normal duties."

Thus ends the twenty fourth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

Suvrat Muni continued, "Dharmadev made his five months old son sit on the floor for the first time on Shravan Sud Ekadashi. He worshipped Varah Bhagwan along with mother Earth accompanied by the sound of musical instruments. O King! Dharmadev fed his son solid food for the first time on the tenth day of the bright fortnight of the month Bhadarvo. He fed HariKrishna a mixture of honey, milk and yoghurt with a golden spoon. He ritually worshipped AgniDev (the fire deity) on this occasion. Dharmadev called an expert in piercing ears on the tenth bright day of the month of Aso to pierce the ears of his son. The barber pierced the ears of HariKrishna using a silver needle. Dharmadev performed the worship of Hanumanji on this day. Dharmadev once placed a sword, a golden ornament, few coins and a book in front of his son to gauge his interest and future inclination. Dharmadev was very pleased when HariKrishna crawled towards and chose the book over all the other items. Dharmadev and Bhaktimata were enjoying the childhood Leelas of HariKrishna as He grew up. Other villagers of Chhapaiya were so engrossed in His childhood Leelas that their time passed by so quickly. Even older persons were so enamoured towards HariKrishna that they, forgetting their age behaved childishly with Him. The ladies of Chhapaiya treated HariKrishna as their own son and often forgot their household chores while playing with Him. On some occasions even Bhaktimata did not get chance to play with her own son. Gradually, HariKrishna, Who has independently taken birth as Bhaktidevi's son, started speaking falteringly. He was able to speak clearly and walk unaided by the end of his first year. During this year Dharmadev also concluded his elder son, Rampratapbhai's wedding ceremony with full pomp.

His wife, Suvasini, a daughter of Baldevji, was very cultured and religious. Dharmadev held a birthday celebration to mark the beginning of the second year of HariKrishna's birth. He venerated the eight Chiranjeevis (long living); Hanumanji, King Bali, Sage Vyas, Krupacharya, Asvatthama, Vibhishan, Sage Markandeya and Parshuram. On this grand occasion Dharmadev fed thousands of invited guests. Dharmadev held a head tonsure ceremony when HariKrishna turned three. On Thursday, the fifth day of the dark fortnight of the month of Jeth, he invited learned Brahmins to conduct the tonsure ceremony according to the Vedic rites. He prepared the ground by smearing it with cow dung for his son to sit upon. A barber shaved HariKrishna's head with the sharp blade. Dharmadev fed all villagers and invited Brahmins with a sumptuous meal and donated many cows to Brahmins as guided by scholars at the conclusion of this ceremony. O king! Bhaktimata was so busy at attending to the invitees that she handed her son to be looked after to the children. The young children took HariKrishna to play with them in the woods at the eastern outskirt of Chhapaiya. They didn't realise the passage of time while eating ripe mangoes from the trees.

The children were so engrossed in playing with HariKrishna that they didn't realise the time until it became dark after the sunset. Kalidutt, whose Krutyas had failed to harm young Bhagwan, saw the opportunity to kill Him in the woods in the absence of any adult. He took the form of a child and mingled with the other children, waiting for an opportunity for Bhagwan to be alone . Kalidutt tried in vain to catch young Krishna with his hands. He was vanquished by the very bright and hot aura emanating from Bhagwan. He spread black magic to frighten the children and kill young Hari. The wind picked up to a hurricane force, the black clouds filled the sky, the lightening and thunder filled the environs and heavy rain pounded the woods. This resulted in many of the trees to be uprooted from the ground. The children could not see each other in the ensuing darkness. They were so frightened that they forgot where they had left young Bhagwan. They took shelter under another tree hoping that the bad weather would soon pass. Their loud voice calling out for HariKrishna was lost amid the noise of the wind, rain and thunder. They started crying realising their folly of losing Shree Hari and how would they face the wrath of Bhaktimata and other villagers. Bhagwan, realising the futility of Kalidutt's folly, remained impervious under a tree where the children had left Him. A fallen tree had sheltered Him from the rain and wind. Kalidutt started looking for Shree

Hari amid the fallen trees. He spread his hands long to catch Shree Hari from under the tree without success. He was mesmerised at his own creation. He looked for Shree Hari here and there running from one tree to another. He got entangled in his own black magic and died of bleeding from numerous wounds sustained by colliding with the trees. The black magic waned with his death and the environment became calm just as it was prior to his arrival. The children regained their senses and started looking for young Shree Hari among the debris of fallen trees."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The villagers of Chhapaiya were worried as their children had not returned even after the sunset. They were wondering about the condition of their children in this atrocious weather and they all feared the worst for their children. Some parents even fainted with the mental pain of separation and worry of their children. They, lantern in their hands, headed towards the woods to look for the children when Kalidutt's black magic waned with his death. Some of them armed with wooden staffs, swords, arrows and spears. They called out the names of their children loudly as they approached the woods. Bhaktimata was so distressed by the separation from HariKrishna that she needed to be held by her arms to keep her steady on her feet. She repeatedly called out loudly for HariKrishna. Rampratap also accompanied the villagers to look for his younger brother. The twelve wives of Dharmadev like Shradhha, Daya etc. saw this as a chance to breastfeed Dharmadev's son. They appeared in divine form (invisible to all) where Shree Hari was lying under the tree. Reciprocating the love of His mothers, Shree Hari took twelve forms so that each of them could take Him in their laps to breastfeed Him. Each of them saw that Lord Hari was only in her lap. Completely satisfied by this divine opportunity, went back to their divine abode as he cries of villagers became audible. The villagers saw their children crying, distressed by the harrowing experience, nonetheless, they were very happy to see the children alive and unhurt. Upon enquiring the whereabouts of Shree Hari, children pointed to a tree under which they had left Him before Kalidutt's arrival. The villagers were aghast when they did not see Him there. They decided to spread themselves into groups and started looking for Shree Krishna in the woods. Suddenly aunt Sundari saw Shree Hari lying happily and unhurt under a tree. She, excitedly shouted repeatedly, 'I found Him' and returned Him to Bhaktimata. Bhaktimata was so happy to see her child unhurt that she gifted a very valuable necklace to Sundaribai. The villagers saw the giant corpse of Kalidutt nearby. The children explained that he had come to kill Shree Hari. Mesmerised by the mere glance of Shree Hari, he met his death colliding with trees. Dharmadev and others concluded that Kalidutt met his death as a result of his own sins."

Suvrat Muni continued, "The villagers returned to Chhapaiya following the moonrise. They were all surprised but still happy at the turn of the events. By the grace of Lord Krishna, Dharmadev and Bhaktimata knew the true identity of Kalidutt and realised that he had inflicted a lot of pain to them. They also realised the true identity of their son as Narayan Rishi of Badrikaashram and Lord Krishna, Who had promised them in Vrandavan that He would take birth as their son. They recalled Ashvatthama's curse while returning from Vrandavan and Hanumanji's prophecy that He will kill the demons without bearing arms. They saw the divinity in their son. They were very happy that the prophecy of Badrikaashram has become reality and God had killed Kalidutt, the root cause of all evil without any weapons. They were now reassured that Lord will protect them and other pious persons from all harm. They were wallowing in their new found joy, but it lasted only for a short period as God took Blinded by Maya again, they saw Lord Krishna as their mortal son. They saw Lord Krishna's mercy and Hanumanji's blessing as the only reasons for Shree Hari's survival from this horrible incident. Dharmadev organised the ritualistic worship by scholar Brahmins for protection from all evil the next morning. He recited the 'Narayan Kavach' and veneration of Hanumanji to ward off evils. He satiated Brahmins with many gifts and a sumptuous feast. Blessed by Brahmins, young Shree Hari appeared very radiant at the conclusion of the head tonsure ceremony.

CHAPTER-27

Suvrat Muni continued, "Dharmadev, worried about the frequent harassment by various demons, decided to migrate from Chhapaiya and live in the holy city of Ayodhya. O king! Dharmadev loaded all his household items into a couple of carts and left his home. He sat with his elder son, Rampratap in one cart, while Bhaktimata sat in other cart with her young son, Shree Hari. In a short while, the whole caravan arrived on the banks of holy River Saryu. She is so pure that her mere sight is enough to wash away sinner's sins. Even the recital of her name keeps one's fear of sins at bay. Lord Rama has bathed in this river numerous times. With the presence of a large number of boats on the vast body of water, she looks like a floating village from far. The residue of veneration like earthen lamps, flowers and fruits float on her water. Thousands of trees growing on her banks cast beautiful shadows in the water glowing by the reflecting sunshine during the day and twinkling lamps from the settlements reflect like stars in her water during the night.

Flowing from the heights of the Manas Sarovar and traversing thousands of miles, her water has become calm by the time she flows through Ayodhya. Dharmadev was very happy to arrive in Ayodhya on the other bank of the River Saryu at the dusk. Thousands of Brahmins, facing West, were performing evening Sandhya in the water. Dharmadev also took a holy dip in the River Saryu. O king! The city of Ayodhya, established by Sage Manu, is spread for about 24 miles along the river bank. It has been the capital of kings of Ikshvaku clan in which Lord Vaasudev Himself has taken birth as Lord Rama. The city of Ayodhya is well laid out with clean wide roads flanked by trees, many small gardens, large mansions, many bazaars and shops and populated by people of all four Varna. It has many temples, hermitages, seminaries, hostels and Dharmashalas. Many wealthy residents keep horses and elephants as a mode of transport in their courtyards. The din of chanting with musical instruments and ringing of bells emanate from its numerous temples. Imbibing the beauty of the city of Ayodhya, Dharmadev arrived and settled into his old house in the suburb of Barhatta near Ramghat. He regularly took three baths in River Saryu following the ritualistic veneration of Lord Krishna. Young Shree Hari, imitating His father, also performed veneration of Lord Krishna with utmost faith. He regularly accompanied His mother for the morning bath in River Saryu. Often Shree Hari became so engrossed in the worship of Lord Krishna that He forgot the passage of time. He, forsaking the company of His peers, would sit for hours listening to the Katha of Ramayan at various temples. By the age of five, Shree Hari visited numerous temples on His own following His morning bath in River Saryu. He spent most of the time in the company of other devotees at various temples listening to the Shreemad Bhagwat, Ramayan etc. He developed a profound detachment from materialistic pleasures from a very young age. He would listen to the Dharma (ethical duties) of men from His father and of women from His mother. Learning from His father, Shree Hari became a scholar of various scriptures by the age of five years."

CHAPTER-28

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King! Bhaktimata gave birth to her third son on Sunday, the second bright day of the month of Vaishakh, in the same year (i.e. Samvat 1842). He was named Ichharam."

"Dharmadev started teaching Shree Hari how to write on the Wednesday, the twelfth bright day of the same month and performed the reverential veneration of Ganapati, LaxmiNarayan, goddess Saraswati and the Sam Veda and fed and gifted cows and gold to many scholar Brahmins. Shree Hari mastered the alphabet and numerals immediately and learned reading in a very short time. Dharmadev taught Him the Vedas along with its six branches. His father was surprised and happy at the grasping ability of his son. Shree Hari was a very attentive student. He would wake up very early in the morning for a holy bath in the River Saryu. He would perform circumambulation of Ramkot holding the mala in His right hand to the surprise of onlookers. He offered sandalwood paste, rice, flowers, incense and lamp to Lord Rama in worship. He did not eat anything that was not first offered to Lord Rama. He visited many temples daily for the Darshan of Lord Rama. Shree Hari would spend many hours praying reverently to Lord Rama.

He prayed, 'Ahilya, the wife of Sage Gautam, had turned into a stone as a result of her transgression. Surrounded by wild animals, she was unable to do anything to redeem herself. Yet, You took pity on her and did her a great favour by returning her to her former self. I worship Thee! O redeemer! O Lord Rama! Your benevolence is not dependant on anything else. Your benevolence is not dependant on anything else. Sugreev, the monkey, afraid of his brother was roaming from one place to other as a homeless nomad. You treated him as Your friend when he came to Your refuge. Forgiving his past misdeeds, you enthroned him as the king of Kishkindha after killing his brother Vali. I worship Thee! O redeemer! O Lord Rama! Your benevolence is not dependant on anything else. Disregarding the advices of your ministers, You embraced Vibhishan, the brother of Raavan when he came under Your shelter. Though born in the clan of demons, You treated him as Your brother. I worship Thee! O redeemer! O Lord Rama! Your benevolence is not dependant on anything else. Though never known to worship You with any reverence, You redeemed even the monkeys and bears with the equal grace. I worship Thee! O redeemer! O Lord Rama! Your benevolence is not dependant on anything else.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari would pray thus to Lord Rama with folded hands. He would study the scriptures from His father on returning from the round of temples. He exhibited all the virtues that were described by Sage Markandeya at the naming ceremony. He observed all Vrats properly and regularly. Shree HariKrishna became widely known as a greater scholar than His father over a period of time. Shree Hari started worshipping Hanumanji very reverently when told of the incident when Hanumanji saved Him from Krutyas when He was only six days old. The parents of His young friends were pleasantly surprised when their children, influenced by His example, started to behave like Him. Though Shree Hari wanted to Suvrat Muni continued, "Dharmadev observed religious rituals stoutly. His knowledge and virtues became known widely. Many people became his disciples who gifted him grains, money, clothes and jewellery. Dharmadev in return gave them sermons on religious and ethical duties and advised them to stay away from all sorts of vices. Many people gave up consuming meat and alcohol, even under the guise of performing Yagnas. They started performing Yagnas with grains, milk, Ghee and sugar. Many became free from many other vices to become staunch devotees of Lord Krishna. O king! Many women wanted to hear sermons from Dharmadev. He thought of the advice of Ramanand Swami, that ordinary people followed the example set by leading persons of the society. Therefore, he must act very wisely with due consideration. A male guru is surely bound to be attracted to his female disciple that results in sexual transgression. A man must always fear the company of other woman just as one fears the serpent. The religious guru must set an example to others by not accepting any female disciples. If women need to be advised, that advice must come from other women only. He must ask his wife to sermonise women and must remain totally detached from the company of women who are not his close blood relatives in all contexts. Ramanand Swami has alerted him from such pitfall. Therefore, Dharmadev asked his wife to give sermons to female devotees. The women who came into contact of Bhaktimata became chaste in their behaviour and staunch in their devotion."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Dharmadev observed all festivals, fasts and rituals properly. He celebrated festivals like Janmashtami and RamNavmi with much Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Dharmadev started collecting many artefacts necessary in the Yagnopavit Sanskar (sacred thread ceremony) of his son. He asked an astrologer to inform him of the best day to conduct the ceremony. The astrologer advised Dharmadev that the tenth bright day of the current month of Falgun is a very auspicious day. As his son was in the eighth year of his birth, this day was most auspicious to perform the Sanskar. Agreeing with the astrologer, Dharmadev sent invitations to their relatives and friends to attend the ceremony. As the day of Yagnopavit Sanskar drew nearer, the invited guests started arriving at Dharmadev's home. Dharmadev welcomed them warmly by gifting them with new cloths and ornaments and making suitable arrangements for their stay. He invited many scholar Brahmins from various places to participate in the ceremony. Dharmadev's home became a beehive of joyous activities. People, accompanied by many musical instruments, sang and danced until very late. To prove his antecedent and authority to perform the ceremony of sacred thread, Dharmadev donated three cows to each present Brahmin as a token in lieu of three Kruchh Vrats. This also symbolised the atonement for the three ways young Shree Hari might have committed sins unknowingly viz, by eating, behaving and speaking. Dharmadev also performed other rituals like feeding Brahmins, venerating the Sun, the mother, the Vedas and the sacred fire as appropriate and as advised by scholars. He established the pit for sacred fire on an evened earth in his courtyard to prepare the veneration of the Fire deity. Though he knew all the rituals, he asked the scholar Brahmins to show him the procedures of the rituals and followed them obediently. Bhaktimata bathed young Shree Hari again following the tonsure of the head. Dharmadev, after seating Shree Krishna on his right, started the rituals. Dharmadev tied a Katisutra (a thick cotton thread) around His waist, gave Him a Kopin (loin cloth) and Dhoti to wear and nine threaded Yagnopavit of newly spun cotton. Leading Him to offer Ghee to the sacred fire, Dharmadev, as an Acharya and not a father told Shree Hari that from now onwards He is Brahamchari (a celibate) and must follow the ethics of a Brahamchari.

CHAPTER-30

Advising on the main Dharmas of a young Brahamchari, Dharmadev said, 'O son! You must offer Samidh (grains etc.) to the sacred fire regularly at dawn and dusk. You must offer Samidh to Agni at dusk if You find it difficult to do so twice a day. You must offer two sips of water before and after eating. You must refrain from sleeping during the daytime. You must serve Your Acharya or Guru reverently.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Young Shree Hari said loudly 'I will' after every command of His father. Dharmadev, Bhaktimata, Suhasini Bhabhi and other relatives became very happy to see the humility of young Shree HariKrishna. One of the Brahmins tied a triple stringed thin rope with three knots (to denote the ancestral branch of the Vedas) around Shree Hari's waist. He also gave a long wooden shaft and deer skin to Shree Hari. Dharmadev explained the meaning of the Gayatri hymn to young Shree Hari and asked Him to recite it regularly. The atmosphere became very religious with the loud chanting of Vedic hymns by the Brahmins. Female relatives kept singing throughout the ceremony. Dharmadev once again started explaining the Dharmas of a Brahamchari to Shree Hari."

Dharmadev said, 'O son! Obey all instructions, except which leads to the transgression from Your Dharma, of Your Guru. Refrain from the eight types of sexual indulgences as shown in the scriptures. Never get angry. Never accuse anybody

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Lord Shree Hari, Who has taken the human form at His own will, listened intently to what His father said and agreed to abide by all decrees. After going around the sacred fire, Shree Hari approached His mother to seek alms. Bhaktimata, Suhasini Bhabhi and other women gave alms to young Brahamchari - Shree Hari, who in return gave the alms to the Acharya who conducted the ceremony. Shree Hari, in the garb of a Brahamchari, shone like the sun among the gathering. Dharmadev, generously and appropriately, gifted cows, coins, clothes, ornaments, grains etc. to invited Brahmins, his relatives, neighbours and others. He fed sumptuous meals to all guests at the conclusion of the Yagnopavit ceremony. People were surprised by the fact that Dharmadev could afford to organise the ceremony on such a grand scale. Dharmadev started teaching Shree Hari the Sam Veda in its entirety."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Following the Yagnopavit Sanskar, young Shree Hari observed all the edicts of a Brahamchari and engaged in the services of His parents. He thought of the purpose of His incarnation and wanted to leave home to re-establish chaste Sanatan Dharma on this earth and remove the evil. He detested from putting His thought of leaving home for the fear of the pain that would cause to His parents. He thought of freeing His parents from the curse of Sage Durvasha before leaving home. Just to create an example to follow, He accepted His father as a guru and started learning the Holy Scriptures from him. Shree Hari learned the four Vedas, Shreemad Bhagwat, Skand Puran, Mahabharat and the eighteen Smrutis from His father. He learned everything Dharmadev had to teach in a very short time. With the passage of time, Dharmadev had developed a deep detachment from worldly affairs. Besides scriptures, he taught Shree Hari in great detail about his guru, Ramanand Swami, his travels and the principles of the Udhhav Sampraday. The news of His intelligence spread far and wide in a very short time and He became famous as a great scholar. Indeed, His fame even surpassed that of His father."

"Shree Hari imbibed thoughtfully everything His father taught Him. He separated bits and pieces from all the scriptures and prepared a small booklet comprising the concise knowledge of all the scriptures. He chose the Fifth and Tenth cantos from the Shreemad Bhagwat, the Vaasudev Mahatmya from the Skand Puran, the Shreemad Bhagvad Gita, the VidurNiti and the VishnuSahasraNam from the Mahabharat and the Yagnavalkya Smruti from the collection of eighteen Smrutis (collective known as DharmaShastra). He showed these four collections to His father. Dharmadev was pleasantly surprised at his son's great understanding. He advised Him to study this collection after the morning worship of Lord Krishna and to explain it to other devotees whenever He had the opportunity. Shree Hari duly abided by His father's advice. Shree Hari kept this hand written notes of collection with Him at all times. Finding Him to be most suitable, Dharmadev gave Shree Hari the formal Diksha of the Udhhav Sampraday and explained the tenets of the Sampraday. Shree Hari became engaged in the holy worship of Lord Krishna whilst observing all tenets of the Udhhav Sampraday. He had turned eleven by now."

"Many jealous and evil persons could not bear the fame of Shree Hari and repeatedly descended to Ayodhya to harass Him. Just as many warriors had killed each other mesmerised by Arjun, these evil persons, seeing Shree Hari in their colleagues, killed each other. Shree Hari wanted to destroy such evil persons living in other places as well. He brought His decision to leave home nearer. Once He asked His frail mother, 'O devout mother! You look disturbed. I have always seen you very happy in the past. Attachment towards the body and its relatives is the main cause of the anxiety and the entanglement in the cycle of death and rebirth. This is Maya, the ignorance and darkness, and the whole world is under its influence. The scholars say so as well."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Upon hearing such wisdom from her son, Bhaktimata was enlightened by Shree Hari's desire. She remembered that her son was none other than Lord Narayan Himself. Wishing to become detached from the worldly affairs, Bhaktimata, with her head bowed and hands folded asked Shree Hari for the divine knowledge to attain Moksha."

CHAPTER-32

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Bhaktimata asked her son, Lord Narayan Himself." 'I know You are Lord Narayan. You have taken birth as my son for the benevolence of Your devotees. You relieve all sorrows of Your devotees. I have come under Your shelter. Please advise me how I can surmount Your Maya and attain Moksha in this life. I have become detached from the worldly affairs and come to You for salvation.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O Pratapsinh! Shree Hari, Who is the true origin of all knowledge, became pleased at the humility of His mother. He explained the process by which one can surmount Maya and attain salvation."

Shree Hari replied, 'O mother! Listen to Me. I will explain to you how a true seeker can attain Moksha. The answer I give is the same as given in the Vedas and other scriptures. All seekers and devotees must serve and worship Lord Krishna. He is the supreme Bhagwan and is also known as Lord Vishnu (because He is present in everything), Lord Narayan (the shelter of all Muktas) and Purushottam (beyond temporary - visible and eternal - invisible entities). The whole universe is influenced and entangled in His Maya. Only those who seek His refuge can overcome Maya. One must serve Bhagwan with Bhakti (devotion) which must be accompanied by the observance of one's Dharma (ethical duties), Gnaan (knowledge of His glory) and Vairagya (detachment from the mundane affairs of this world). The association and mercy of the true saints are the only means by which one can understand Dharma, Gnaan and Vairagya. Bhakti in Bhagwan remains unwavered only if accompanied by Dharma, Gnaan and Vairagya. Devotion surely wavers in the absence of any of these three. Bhakti (accompanied by these three elements) is the only means by which one can surmount the mighty Maya. The staunch devotee, with the help of Bhakti, attains the ultimate abode of Bhagwan. The scholars call it Braham as well, which is beyond the effects of Maya and Time. Upon reaching this supreme abode, the devotee enjoys the ultimate bliss and any other pleasures he desires.'

Bhaktimata, though pleased with the answer, was not fully satisfied with such a short answer. She asked Shree Hari again, "O Bhagwan! You just said that one can surmount Maya only with the three pronged Bhakti in You, which can only be acquired by the close association with true saints. How does one recognise such saints? Please explain their characteristics. O Lord Krishna! You know everything there is to know. Also explain the traits of Bhakti and its three prongs i.e. Dharma, Gnaan and Vairagya. I have not studied the scriptures. You are the only one Who can remove my ignorance.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Lord Shree Hari was very pleased with His mother for asking such profound questions."

Shree Hari replied, 'O mother! You have asked very important questions. Indeed, this is what everybody, including scholars, needs to know for one's salvation. I will explain the characteristics of true saints first from whom one learns about Bhakti in Bhagwan. A true saint should be kind towards all living creatures, honest, pious (fearful of sins), calm (physically and mentally), lenient (able to forgive other's insults), soft spoken, patient (not influenced by unfavourable circumstances), expert at sermonising, generous (forgiving others' faults), a scholar (of scriptures), wise (able to discriminate between right and wrong and truth and false), a believer (in the separate existence of God and soul), faithful (in the gospel of the scriptures), satisfied (with whatever God has given), devout, non critical of others, honourable (afraid of committing sins), non attached (towards the body and its relatives) and chaste. He should be free from jealousy, greed, envy, anger, cant, enmity, ego, lust and desires. He should also be free from vices like gambling, stealing, consuming meat or alcohol, exposing someone's secret publicly and indulgence in gossip. He should observe his Dharma (sincerely and willingly), practice non violence (in thought, speech and deeds) and Brahamcharya strictly without letting his senses wander about. He should have won over hunger, sleep, lethargy and the tendency to amass wealth. He should have equanimity (able to remain unaffected by cold and heat, insult and praise and pleasure and pain). He should always be engaged in reading or listening to God's Katha, Kirtan or meditation. Indeed all of his deeds should be just to please God and not a moment should pass without the remembrance of God. O mother! Know such person as a true saint. Three pronged Bhakti can only be acquired from such a saint. One should listen to God's Katha only from such a saint. Indeed, the greatness and glory of God, His shrines and His supreme abode can only be understood from such a saint. One's Bhakti ascends only through the association of such saints. A single Darshan of such a saint redeems one of his accumulated sins of their past lives. Lord Krishna has described such saints as His heart and all shrines rest at their feet. Indeed, nothing is impossible to get from the Darshan of such saints!'

Thus ends the thirty second chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-33

Shree Hari continued, "O mother! I shall now explain the characteristics of the three elements of Bhakti starting with Dharma. Dharma must be followed by everybody from the mighty Brahma to the smallest of living entity. Inversely, Dharma sustains every living entity including Devtas. A person, even if born to the lowest clan, becomes reverential to everyone including Lord Brahma, if he observes Dharma. Every one must follow Dharma as a person who deviates or transgresses from Dharma becomes disrespectable in the eyes of all. The Shrutis, the Smrutis and the moral conduct of the pious have defined Dharma for humans and classified it in two categories; Samanya (common) and Vishishtha (specific). Dharma to be observed by persons of all four Varnas (Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra) and of four Ashrams (Brahamcharya, Grahastha, Vanprastha and Sanyaas) is called common Dharma.

O My wise mother! I will explain both categories of Dharma in short. Non violence, truth, not stealing, forsaking meat, alcohol, addiction and adultery, not giving in to anger, greed and lust, fear of committing sins, serving saints and engaging in the Bhakti of Bhagwan are defined as common Dharma, i.e. to be observed by persons of four Varnas and four Ashrams. A total control of the senses and sensual organs, austerity, knowledge, compassion, leniency and belief in the supremacy of God etc. are the natural specific Dharma of Brahmins. They should engage in teaching, sermonising and overseeing Yagnas to earn their livelihood. Bravery, patience, strength, generosity, defence of cows, Brahmins and saints, judiciousness etc. are specific Dharma of Kshatriyas. To earn a living, they should bear arms to protect the community. Vaishyas should engage in agriculture, animal husbandry, trade, lending etc to earn their living and their specific Dharmas include having a staunch belief in religion and making financial contributions to sustain the community they live in. The Shudras' specific Dharma is to serve the other three Varnas according to their abilities. They should earn their living by engaging in servitude of others. They must forsake violence and stealing in pursuit of their livelihood. The Brahmins and Kshtriyas may earn a living as Vaishyas and Vaishyas may engage in servitude for their livelihood in detrimental times, but must return to their originally intended livelihoods at the end of such detrimental times

O Mother! A Brahamchari (a person of three Varna who has undergone sacred thread ceremony) must reside at the residence of his guru in pursuit of education. He must retain a wooden stick, water jug, Mala, waist band, Dhoti etc. with him. He must refrain from using mascara, scents, jewellery, garlands etc. It is said in the scriptures that the association with pious persons is the gateway of Heaven and the company of a lusty persons is the gateway of Hell. Therefore, a Brahamchari must only associate with the pious. He must renounce woman in thought, sight and contact. He must not even touch the feet of his guru's wife. He must never see any animals engaged in copulation. Indeed, he should never even touch a statue or picture of a woman except the Murti of a Goddess. He must perform Sandhya thrice a day, Homa and Japa at dusk and dawn and remain speechless for some time in the morning and evening. He must go to the village to seek alms for himself. He must study at least one (if not all four) of the Vedas and other scriptures intensively by controlling his senses. He may enter into Grahastha (householder) Ashram after giving appropriate Dakshina to his guru at graduation. He may also enter Vanprastha or Sanyas Ashram if he has

Shree Hari continued, "A Brahamchari wishing to enter Grahastha Ashram should select a bride younger than him, of an unblemished character and of the same Varna but of different clan. He must earn his livelihood by judicious means. He must undertake Snaan (a ritual bath in the morning and before all religious ceremonies), Sandhya (thrice a day), oblation to Pitris (dead ancestors), veneration of Lord Vishnu, Swadhyay (study of scriptures) and Vaishvadev (sharing and distributing food) daily as appropriate. He may perform morning Sandhya at noon or noon Sandhya at morning if lack of time is the prime factor. However, the evening Sandhya must never be brought forward. Even a Brahmin scholar of all the four Vedas is deemed as Shudra if he does not perform Sandhya, Homa or veneration. After the ritualistic bath, he must neither touch unwashed cotton robes nor the robes of any material which may have been washed by an unchaste person. Solemnisation of the marriage, the acceptance of inheritance or the division of property amongst siblings must be done in the presence of a holy fire. He must take due care of his dependants (mother, father, wife, children, servants etc.) with food and clothes. He must always try to satisfy any guest or alms seeker arriving at his door step. He must always associate with saints and perform any of the nine types of Bhakti. He must neither associate with evil nor get madly entangled in his property. O mother! Let me explain the hierarchy among the immovable life form in ascending order; mountains, ordinary plants, grain and medicinal plants, flowering vines, fruit bearing trees like mango and the plants used in religious ceremony. The same for the movable life form is; crawling insects like ants, flying insects like butterflies, small birds like sparrows, birds of prey like kites, small mammals like rabbits, goats, cow and humans. The order among humans is; a Brahmin, a pious Brahmin and a scholar among Brahmins, but a devotee is the best among all living beings because God resides in his heart. No one is even equal to him. Therefore, a Grahastha must treat a God's devotee with respect and reverence and bow in front of him. Evil is the householder who treats a devotee on par with others without understanding the greatness of a devotee of God.

A householder Vaishnav, (devotee of Lord Vishnu) must not accept anything for personal use, be it food, clothes, jewellery, flowers etc. without offering them first to Lord Shree Hari. As Pitris are Vaishnav too, he must never offer meat as oblation to Pitris. They should be venerated only with grains. Indeed! He must not even believe in the deities where live animals are sacrificed. Non violence is the cornerstone and the cardinal principle of Sanatan Dharma. A householder must observe reverently all Vrats and undertake the pilgrimage of shrines as to his personal capabilities. Even a small donation, gifts or alms given in a holy place, at a holy time or to holy recipients becomes inexhaustible. A wealthy person should construct temples, help install God's Murtis inside and arrange for the future income for the upkeep of such temple. He should perform non violent Yagnas and build wells and lakes for the benefit of the community at large. He should generously feed Brahmins and saints and behave in a transparent manner with saints. One must never insult saints or Brahmins. He must show due compassion towards all living beings. He must not allow himself to be overtly influenced by greed, ego, anger, envy and lust. A householder must not deliberately touch a widow who is not a close blood relative. He must not remain alone with his mother, sister or daughter except in absolute emergency. He must not commit suicide or murder at any shrine in hope of getting deliverance from his deeds. He must always behave in a religious manner. A Sadhava (a woman whose husband is alive) must treat and serve her husband as a Devta by subordinating everything else. A Vidhava (a woman whose husband has died) must serve God as her husband without indulging in worldly pleasures. She should not touch, speak nor look at any other male who is not her close blood relative. She must not stay alone even with her father, brother or son unless totally unavoidable.

A Grahastha should prepare to become detached from household duties at the third stage of his life (at the age of fifty). He should migrate to the forest to become Vaanprasthi with (if willing) or without (if unwilling) his wife. He should build a hut to protect the holy fire and grains. He must live out in the open and perform austerity to please God by bearing the blazing sun in the summer, falling rain in the monsoon and spending time in water in the winter. He must sustain himself with fallen fruits and uncultivated grains from the forest. The same must be offered to God during His veneration. He should accept the Sanyaas Ashram after spending a long time as a Vaanprasthi.

A Sanyaasi should keep two loin cloths and Dhoti apiece, one piece of cloth to cover the torso, an alms bowl, a water bowl and a wooden staff. He should endeavour to spend all his time in chanting God's name. Without a good reason, he must not stay at one location except during the four months of monsoon. He should seek alms from a pious Brahmin's home and that too, only once a day. He should observe total Brahamcharya and all Vrats reverently. He should control his senses and be inward looking at all times. The scriptures forbid Vaanprastha and Sanyaas Ashram in this age of Kali Yug.

Therefore, one may become Varni (celibate saint) by accepting proper Vaishnavi Diksha either before or after Grahastha Ashram. He should stay with other like minded saints rather than on his own. As the company of a woman is like a web of delusion from which even the best of Yogis cannot escape, Varni must forsake women by speech, sight and direct contact. The knowledge, Bhakti, austerity, Vairagya etc. of a Yogi becomes futile as a result of an association with a woman. Varni must fear a woman just as one fears the poisonous snake. He must forsake these six gateways of the Hell; lust, anger, greed, ego, palate and company of the sinners. He should remain engaged in any one type of Bhakti at all times. Such a saint's only wish is to serve God with pleasure. He does not wish for the pleasures of the Heaven or even desire the four types of Mukti without Gods' service. As God resides in the heart of such a pious saint, the vices such as lust and anger are unable to enter his heart to disturb his inner equilibrium. He immediately must forsake bad place, time, Japa, deeds, scripture and company. O judicious mother! I explained the Dharmas of four Varnas and four Ashrams. The virtuous devotee must atone immediately for any lapses in his Dharma. Let me explain the traits of knowledge next.

Thus ends the thirty third chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-34

Shree Hari continued, "O Mother! To understand the things as they actually are is called the knowledge. The knowledge is of two types; one pertains to the soul and the other pertains to God. A soul, as a life force of the body, though dwells in the heart, pervades the whole body. It is the force behind the sensual organs like eyes, ears, mind, intelligence, hands and feet. Though it permeates the body, it is a separate entity. Just as fire permeating the steel rod is distinct from the rod, the soul is distinct from the body it permeates. A soul is not effected by any changes in the structure of the body neither does it perish when the body dies. Thus a soul is eternal, indestructible, indivisible, impregnable, miniscule and radiant. God, the supreme entity of this universe, is known by many names such as Lord Krishna, Lord Narayan, Lord Vishnu, Purushottam etc. He is full of divine virtues and Nirgun (not affected or influenced by and beyond the traits of Maya); everything that comes into His contact also becomes Nirgun. He is independent, cause of all causes, self illuminated, more radiant than thousands of suns and supreme. Everybody should worship Him. His supreme abode, AksharBrahm, is surrounded by millions of universes like ours. Though said to be soul of AksharBrahm, He is distinct and beyond Akshar. He is omnipresent, invariable and eternal. Maya, Time and Purush (creative force) are His extensive powers and answerable to Him. He, independently, takes birth in this world from time to time for the benevolence of the mankind. Lord Krishna glances at Prakruti (Maya in dormant form) with the aim of creating the innumerable universes. O Mother! I will explain the chain of creation of one universe among them. This happens with the express desire of Lord Krishna Himself. Purush (as a male token) and Pradhan (a female) emerge from within Prakruti. Pradhan and Purush merge to create Mahatatva, the seed of all creation. Three types of Ahankaar (Ego) Satvik, Rajas and Tamas, emerge from Mahatatva. Shabda (sound) emerges from Tamas Ahankaar. Aakash (the space), as a beholder of Shabda emerges from Shabda itself. Sparsha (touch), Vaayu (wind), Roop (sight), Tej (light), Ras (taste), Water, Gandha (smell) and the Earth emerge progressively from Aakash. The Aakash, Vaayu, Tej, Water and Earth are called five base elements and sound, touch, sight, taste and smell are called five senses. Five sensual organs (ears, skin, eyes, tongue and nose) and five dynamic organs (able to perform), mouth, hands, feet, anus and urinary organ, Pran (life force) and Budhhi (intelligence) emerge from the Rajas Ahankaar. The Man (mind) and Devtas (the grasping and controlling fforces behind them) of senses and sensual organs emerge from the Satvik Ahankaar. Dik, Vaayu, Surya, Varun, Ashwinikumar, Agni, Indra, Vishnu, Mitra, Prajapati, Chandrama, Brahma, Vaasudev and Rudra are fourteen controlling Devtaas. Though not fully capable to do so, they created a huge body called Virat from their own parts as per God's wish. (As Virat was unable to do anything without God) Lord Krishna, as Purush, entered the body of Virat as its soul. Therefore, this soul is known as Virat(or Vairaj)Purush. He is also called ViratNarayan, as he was lying on the water, which later became ocean, secreted from its own body. Brahma arose from the navel of ViratNarayan. God creates everything that is visible through Brahma. Brahma created Prajapatis, Devtas, Rishis, Gandharvas, Demons, ghosts, mountains, rivers, animals, birds, snakes, humans etc. as per God's wish. The souls lying dormant within Maya were given different bodies. All these souls are engaged in various activities according to their Prakruti (inherent nature) some of them pious, some sinful while some the mixture of two. The Nirgun (free from the traits of Maya) are engaged only in the Bhakti of Lord Krishna. O mother! Thus God creates through Brahma, sustains through Vishnu and destroys through Shiv. He is present in every soul and witnesses the deeds of the soul. He alone, gives pains and pleasure as the result of one's deeds impartiality. Just as the emperor appoints a smaller king to undertake various duties, the Supreme God has appointed various Devtas to undertake His commands. He is the true force behind everything; temporary (visible) and eternal (invisible forces like Time and Maya). All Devtas are His subordinates and dependant. Only Lord Krishna is supreme and independent and only He is to be venerated and worshipped. He is omnipresent in the whole universe. O mother! Whoever knows this ultimate knowledge about soul and almighty God from true saints described earlier does not need to know anything else. Whoever, realising the full greatness of God, engages in His Bhakti is considered liberated from the cycle of life and death.

CHAPTER-35

Shree Hari continued, "O Mother! Let Me now tell you about Vairagya. The apathy in mundane things of this world and interest exclusively in God is called Vairagya. One should be indifferent towards one's body and its relatives (like wife and offspring), home and hearth, wealth and it's by product like land and ornaments and the pleasures of physical and sensual gratification. Indeed, one should not even have the desire of Heaven or various abodes of other Devtas. Great sages define Vairagya as total disinterest in everything except God."

Premvati said, "O Shree HariKrishna! Please tell me how one develops such Vairagya."

Shree Hari replied, "Everything, including all living beings, all visible pleasures, Brahma, Virat and indeed anything that is created from Prakruti is annihilated at some point of time. There are four types of annihilations; Nitya (regular and continuous), Naimittik (causal), Prakrut (near total) and Atyantik (total). One becomes detached from mundane things when he realises the temporary nature of everything that is visible. Similarly, one becomes detached from this world on seeing or experiencing the sorrows arising from their sins. People, in the company of evil persons, are engaged in sinful activities for food and sensual gratification. The association with such evil persons destroys one's intellect, knowledge, distinction between right and wrong and other virtues. Consequently, one becomes egoist of the self and possessive towards the acquisitions and relatives. As a result of this greater attachment, one tends to commit sins and take up immoral means to acquire wealth to satiate the financial greed of his family. He not only covets the things that does not belong to him, but is not afraid to commit adultery and treachery even with his friends. He does not see anything wrong in accumulating wealth by foul means. He forsakes truth, honesty and even religion in pursuit of his goals. He criticises the pious for trading the religious path. Under the influence of immoral wealth, he turns against the Vedas, Brahmins, Devtas and shrines. He twists the meanings of scriptures to suit his selfish ends and tries to establish wrong as right with the power of his ill gotten wealth. He indulges in the consumption of alcohol and meat to satisfy his palate and sexual relationship with other women and widows for sensual gratification. Overcome by false pride, he becomes shameless and charlatan. O Mother! Such evil persons suffer extreme pain at death and afterwards as well. Terrible looking Yamdoots (messengers of Death) come to take him to Hell at a time of his death. He shivers by the fear at the sight of cruel and vicious Yamdoots. Panic and helplessness grips him. His soul is painfully separated from his physical body. Yamdoots drag his soul, now enveloped in his causal body, to Hell. The path to the Hell is covered with hot sand and many thorns. Unable to walk steadily on this awful path, merciless Yamdoots repeatedly beat him with iron rods and chains to force him to walk. They do not heed his loud cries of mercy from relentless pain. Yamdoots force him to walk fast on the inhospitable path to Hell without a moment of respite. He is brought as a prisoner in front of Yamraj (Devta of Death) and Chitragupt (his record keeper) who are aware of each and every sin he has committed during his life on the earth. Yamraj pronounces the sentence according to his sins and throws him into one of the various Hells to undergo severe punishment. O Mother! Let me name just few among thousands of Hells. Tamisra, ArdhTamisra, Raurav, MahaRaurav, Kumbhipak, AndhKup, Asipatravan etc. are the main Hells. The sinner is sent to one or many Hells according to the sins he has committed. He is bitten by the animals and insects he has killed on the earth. He is forced to embrace the red hot iron statue of woman repeatedly. He is fried in boiling oil and bitten by snakes, dogs, vultures etc. His eyes are pierced by the hot rods and molten metal poured into his ears and mouth. On completion of his punishment, he enters the cycle of life again at the end of his sentence befitting his sins. He is born into one of the four types of life; born in the air like viruses, emerge from the earth as plants, born from eggs like birds or born from the womb like mammals according to his past deeds. He suffers the pain of birth, ageing and death repeatedly.

He suffers various types of sorrows during his lifetime. He remains entangled in the vicious cycle of life and death until he is born as a human by the mercy of God. O Mother! One can attain the freedom from this cycle of death and birth with the help of Bhakti which one learns from pious saints. The fools, without God's Bhakti remain subject to repeated births and its associated pains. He goes to Hell after death to suffer the punishment of his past sins to re-enter the cycle of birth and death. One refrains from sins when he realises the pain one has to suffer from his misdemeanours. He keeps away from evil persons and associates with the pious. As a result, his Vairagya ascends and he does not indulge in temporary and miniscule pleasures of this world. One does not get pleasures without sorrows or God's favours and mercy without Vairagya. O Mother! One attains salvation with deep devotion of God. The devotion can ascend only after the development of detachment. One attains Moksha and God's abode through Bhakti. I have explained the characteristics of Vairagya and the reasons of its ascent. Now I will describe the characteristics of Bhakti by which one may become free from the cycle of death and birth and attain salvation.

Thus ends the thirty fifth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-36

Shree Hari continued, "The scholars define Bhakti as serving God with profound love. Just as a married woman serves her husband with total honesty and single minded love, a devotee should serve Lord with full fervour. Listening and singing His Kirtans or Leelas, remembering, physical serving, veneration, bowing, servility, friendship and total surrender to Shree Hari, are the nine types of Bhakti. A devotee engaged in any of these nine types of Bhakti attains bliss in this life and Moksha in the next. O Mother! One should listen to the Katha retelling Lord Krishna's Leelas, His various incarnations such as Varah etc., His true devotees like Prahlad, Dhruv, Ambarish etc. and His saints from a religious and staunch devotee. One should recite regularly the scriptures ddetailing His and His saints' Leelas for the purification of one's soul. A devotee should sing aloud lovingly lyrics or hymns praising Lord Krishna with or without musical instruments and should extol loudly the virtues of Lord Shree Hari. A devotee should meditate on each and every part of God's body from feet to face. One should always remember His glory, Leelas and virtues, His abodes, His saints and His devotees. One should massage Lord's feet with humility. One can do this mentally or simply touching the feet of his Murti in the absence of God in person. Brahma, Vishnu and Shiv have acquired the ability to create, sustain and destroy the universe and holy Ganga has become able to wash away the sins of sinners by prostrating at his feet. Sage Vyas has extolled the virtues of Gopis of Vraj higher than Devtas only because of their servitude at God's feet. Radha and Laxmiji massage His feet at all times. Touching His feet removes the fear of Maya. Indeed, there is no other assured way to attain Moksha than serving or touching His feet. O Mother! The scholar saints have divided the veneration in two categories; external (or direct) and internal (or mental). To worship God with the actual artefacts like flowers, sandalwood paste etc. while chanting hymns is called external veneration. To worship Lord Krishna with imagined substances in the absence of actual artefacts is called the mental veneration. Mental veneration should be performed prior to external veneration at all times. God must be invited to be present during veneration of movable Murti before worship. Artefacts offered in worship must be free from alcohol and meat and must not have been offered to any other deity previously. Offer Lord Krishna fresh water for bathing, then offer robes appropriate for the season. Sandalwood paste should be smeared on His body in summer and only on His forehead in winter. Offer ornaments, flowers, garlands, Naivedhya etc. to one's capabilities. Light an incense stick and lamp in front of His Murti. Perform Dandvat (prostration) - Sastang or Panchang, Pradakshina (circumambulation), prayer, Japa etc. This process must be conducted five times a day. Five venerations a day is the best, thrice a day is medium and though the worst, one must offer veneration at least once a day (in the morning). The special worship accompanied by musical instruments, must be conducted on Janmashtami, RamNavmi and Ekadashis. One must fast on these days and offer food to saints and Brahmins the next day. The wealthy devotees should build temples and organise festivals to facilitate other devotees. They should also arrange for the future and continuous source of income for such temples by donating farmland, money etc. The wealthy devotee should built lakes, wells etc. for the benevolence of all living beings and arrange grand Kathas, Yagnas etc. The Devtas, Pitris, Brahmins should be worshipped with the leftover artefacts. One must serve God by forsaking one's ego as if he is His servant. He should collect flowers, fruits etc. artefacts of worship himself. He should clean the temple complex and honour all devotees and saints humbly. He could treat God as his personal friend by considering Him of greater importance than relatives or wealth just as Arjun and Draupadi had treated Him as their best friend. One must not cast any doubt or scepticism in any of His actions in any of His incarnations. O Mother! The last type of Bhakti is total surrender of self to Him by forgetting one's self. The body, soul, wealth, indeed everything must be surrendered to Lord Krishna. Nothing must become more important than Him. Anything that becomes a hindrance in the service of God, be it one's nature, relatives, wealth, home or friends, must be given up. The eye must be used solely for His Darshan, ears for listening to His Katha, tongue for singing His glory and paeans, feet for His Pradakshina and walking towards temple, head for bowing at Him, mouth for eating only His Prasad, nose for smelling His leftover flowers, hands for serving Him and His saints and devotees and touching His feet, mind and intellect for thinking and remembering Him at all times. Indeed the whole self must only be utilised for His and His devotees' service. This must be done by forsaking ego and without any unjustified pride as well. He should not accept, use or consume anything without first offering it to God. Whatever he does is only for His pleasure. Devotees are of two types; Sakam and Nishkam. Sakam (desirous) devotees expect wealth, happiness or Moksha as a result of His Bhakti while Nishkam (nondesirous) devotees do not even expect anything in return for their Bhakti, not even Moksha or any special powers. Any special powers attained by Bhakti are actually a hindrance in God's service, therefore Nishkam devotees do not even think about them. Such a Nishkam devotee is the best and is considered as God's heart. A staunch devotee's love for God ascends all the time. Factors like Time, place and actions do not cause hindrance. Just as the flow of great rivers like Ganga makes way through the hindrances like mountains to reach its final destination - ocean, a devotee's love for God never diminishes despite many hindrances and surely reaches its final destination - God. His senses are always engaged in Lord Krishna and not in worldly pleasures. His profound love in God does not allow his senses to deviate from or focus in anything mundane. Pleasing substances of the world that entices the normal man cause distress to such an Atmanivedi devotee. Smearing sandalwood paste is like a poisonous massage, garlands are like snakes, bed of flowers is like a bed of ambers, a grand mansion is like an isolated deep forest, sweet smelling air is like a whiff of scorching air of desert, tasteful fare is like a poison, finer clothes are like a gunny sack, amorous music is like sharp arrows, a beautiful maid is like a witch to him. Indeed even moonlight burns his skin. Anything that gives pleasure to ordinary man distresses such a devotee. His heart beats with the name of God, and God remains constantly in his mind. One should recognise such Atmanivedi devotee by such traits. He suddenly smiles at the remembrance of God's mental Darshan and abruptly cries at the feeling of distance from God. He often dances, sings aloud, speaks with Him, becomes stunned, begs, prays lovingly, prostrates etc. without any obvious reasons. The dust becomes holy by his footsteps. O Mother! His soul and mind becomes united with God. He or she becomes free from all effects of Maya and becomes as Nirgun as God Himself. By the grace of God, such a devotee, at the time of his death, attains a divine body and goes to Golok, Vaikunth or Akshardham as per his wish. He enjoys all the trappings of His abodes. I have told you the secret of the Vedas, Panchratra, Puranas etc. in short. This knowledge is enough to redeem a man from the cycle of death and rebirth. Anyone who recites or listens to this knowledge (Hari Gita) will attain whatever he desires. His love for God will become everlasting."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King! Bhaktimata's doubt vanished totally after listening to the Hari Gita. She became very pleased and said, 'I am very pleased to hear the nectar of knowledge from You. I do realise that You are Lord Krishna Himself. You have taken birth as my son for the benevolence of mankind. Becoming free from all doubts and sorrows, I am going to Your supreme abode.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Saying This, Bhaktimata slipped into Samadhi and her soul attained unison with God. O King! Whoever recites or listens to this Hari Gita, in full or partly, will have his desires fulfilled and his Bhakti in Shree Hari will become more profound. This nectar of knowledge is given by Lord Shree Hari Himself.

King Pratapsinh asked, "O wise Suvrat Muni! What happened to Bhaktimata thereafter? Please continue further with Shree Hari's Leela."

Suvrat Muni replied, "O King! Lord Shree Hari proceeded to conclude His daily routine at the dawn. Bhaktimata, still in Samadhi, saw Lord Shree Hari in the garb of Brahamchari, in her soul. His radiant face was smiling, His two lotus like eyes were twinkling, His forehead, throat, heart and both arms were adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and a Kumkum Chandlo. He was wearing white robes of a celibate, a Yagnopavit across His torso and a Tulsi Kanthi around His neck. He had a Mala in His right hand and His black hairs were tied with a handkerchief. Mind totally subconscious in Shree Hari, Bhaktimata saw her Aatma as distinct from her senses and their controlling Devtas. A little while later, her soul attained unison with AksharBrahm and she saw Shree Hari in her soul. To make Bhaktimata realise His uniqueness, she saw the same Shree Hari as Lord Krishna in her soul. She saw Lord Krishna as a young man more handsome than even Eros, His dark complexioned body more radiant than hundreds of moon together and was smeared with sandalwood paste. He was wearing golden robes made of gold threads, a peacock feather in His crown, golden fish shaped earrings on His ears, many jewelled necklaces and flower garlands around His neck and gold bracelets, armlets, rings and anklets. He was playing the flute. Elated Premvati bowed repeatedly at Lord Krishna. To her surprise, suddenly Lord Krishna turned into her son, Lord Shree Hari.

Bhaktimata prayed, 'O Shree Hari! You have taken innumerable incarnations for the benevolence of mankind. You remove our age old ignorance just as the sun removes the darkness. O Lord! I have now realised that You have taken birth as my son to protect Dharma, the pious saints, Brahmins, cows and Devtas. I bow to You. You have tremendous love and respect for saints in Your heart. You are the true teacher to impart the knowledge about the soul. You have all the virtues of the earth, water, light, wind, sky, the sun, moon, Lord Shiva and rain (as pure as water etc.) put together. Let my intellect be unwavering in only You. O Lord! You sustain and protect Dharma at all times. You render Your devotees fearless by showering Your blessings on them. You are the source of all scriptures and can only be known by such scriptures. Your senses never waver from Your control. O Madhav! You are the truth and all Your thoughts become a reality. You urged the British rulers to rein in and subjugate the evil kings and gurus leading ordinary people astray from the true religious path. You are full of virtues like strength, humility, innocence, knowledge, austerity, righteousness, truthfulness, generosity, chastity etc. O one with the smiling face! Let my intellect be unyielding in You. Your face is more beautiful than even the full moon; Your smile removes all sorrows of Your disciples. Indeed, You look wonderful with golden robes and various ornaments. Let my intellect be firm in You.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Bhaktimata, with all her doubts subsided and her mind focused on Shree Hari, paused after this prayer. Her soul departed from her body, which fell on the ground. Her soul, in the divine body, returned to the supreme abode to be with Dharmadev's other wives. She became free from the curse of Sage Durvasha on the tenth day of the bright fortnight of the month of Kartik in Samvat 1848. Her two sons and other relatives cried at her death. Dharmadev comforted distraught relatives with soothing words. He guided his elder son, Rampratap to perform the last rites according to the scriptures. O King! Shree Hari reposed her maternal love, respect and instincts in His Bhabhi and obeyed all her directives."

Thus ends the thirty seventh chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-38

Suvrat Muni continued, "Dharmadev became detached from the mundane tasks of the household. He began to focus all his attention in the Bhakti of Lord Krishna by undergoing many Vrats. As a result, his body weakened and his mind became very alert. He undertook a recital of the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat. He observed the monthly, quarterly and biennial Shraddh of Bhaktimata according to the scriptures and fed hundreds of Brahmins at each of such rites. On the day of the seventh monthly Shraddh, Dharmadev became ill with a fever and He realised that his end was very near. He arranged for the Ekadashi veneration by Brahmins. During that night, Shree Hari went to Dharmadev's room to massage His father's feet. Dharmadev slipped into Samadhi and saw Lord Krishna playing a flute in the midst of bright radiance. This reminded him of Lord Krishna's Darshan at Vrandavan prior to the birth of his son. As he got up to prostrate at His feet, he saw in front of him, Shree Hari. His face was exactly the same as Lord Krishna which he saw in his Samadhi. This brought all the latent memory back and he realised that his son was none other than the supreme Lord Himself. As Dharmadev tried to embrace Lord Krishna, he woke up from the Samadhi and saw his son serving him. He had now become fully aware of the true identity of his son. He clasped his son tightly and then stood in front of him with bowed head and folded hands.

Dharmadev said, 'I have now realised that You are the supreme Lord of the universe Who had promised me to take birth in my household to protect me and others (from the curse of Sage Durvasha). O Lord! You are eternal and beyond Maya. I know that my body will perish in the next few days. I am not afraid of death as I have come under Your shelter. My only worry is the separation from You. O Hari! Be kind and promise me that I do not get separated from you even after death.'

Lord Hari replied, 'O father! You have become aware of My true identity. There is nothing further to know beyond this. Indeed! You will remain in My proximity after the end of this life. Therefore, discard all worries and confine your mind and intellect in Me.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Dharmadev's mind became totally lucid with Lord Shree Hari's soothing words. All his desires waned. He became totally detached from everything. Very pleased, he spoke with folded hands, 'O redeemer! Nobody can repay Your innumerable favours except by folding their hands in front of You. That is exactly what I am doing.' Saying this, Dharmadev bowed at Shree Hari's feet. As Dharmadev wanted to impart this knowledge (the true identity of Shree Hari) to his other two sons, he summoned Rampratap and Ichharam.

Thus ends the thirty eighth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-39

Suvrat Muni continued, "Both of Dharmadev's sons came and sat besides their father. He addressed them, 'Listen to me very carefully. It is very vital and beneficial. Your brother, Shree Hari is none other than Lord Krishna Himself Whom we worship daily. The idol of Lord Krishna we have established in our shrine temple is of none other than His. Therefore, as from today, worship Shree Hari with utmost faith. Always obey Him without any reservations. This will fulfil all your desires in this and the next life. He has taken birth on earth to relieve this earth of all evil people, which He will accomplish without bearing any arms. He will re-establish the true Sanatan Dharma and propound His Bhakti. He will establish the seats of Acharya in your clan before returning to His abode. The future generation will attain salvation by obeying His edicts and regular veneration of His idols.' After listening to their father, both brothers turned towards Shree Hari and said, 'O Hari Krishna! We are Yours. Protect us from all evils.' Lord Hari said, 'I will be pleased with you as long as you continue to worship Lord Shree Krishna with affection.' Though they understood the true identity of their brother, this knowledge did not remain with them forever. Lord Shree Hari allowed them to have this knowledge only fleetingly and infrequently. Dharmadev imparted the knowledge of religion and Bhakti to his two sons until sunrise. When Shree Hari asked His father for any unfulfilled desires, Dharmadev replied, 'O Hare! O Krishna! I am totally happy. My heart is full of Your Bhakti and I wish to have this Bhakti until my last breath. I am physically unable to worship You. I wish to hear the Shreemad Bhagwat at this current time. Fulfil my wish.' Praising Dharmadev for such a splendid last desire, Shree Hari along with His elder brother invited many scholar Brahmins to conduct the Katha. A dais was prepared for the narrator. Venerations of Ganapati followed by Hanumanji were conducted to keep away any hindrance during Katha. A gold idol of Lord Krishna was established and the ritual worship was conducted to set a correct example and precedent, although Lord Krishna was present (in form of Shree Hari). One learned Brahmin was selected as a narrator and was seated at a high seat on the dais. Five other scholars were selected as the subordinate priests to conduct Japa. All invited Brahmins were welcomed with honour and gifted with suitable gifts. Dharmadev worshipped the scripture (Shreemad Bhagwat), the narrator and other Brahmins in that order. Dharmadev's fever subsided gradually as he listened to the Katha attentively for six days. He gifted one thousand gold coins, a cow, robes, jewellery etc. to the narrator at the conclusion of Katha on the seventh and last day. Rampratap accompanied that Brahmin to his home. Other invited Brahmins were suitably rewarded. Dharmadev's illness took a turn for worse after lunch and all the relatives gathered around his bed."

CHAPTER-40

Suvrat Muni continued, "Dharmadev's sons realised that their father had very little time left to live. Shree Hari called an expert Brahmin to conduct the last rites. The Brahmins asked Dharmadev to gift gold coins, cows, sesame seeds, land, grains, Ghee etc. to the pious Brahmins to symbolise atonement for the past sins. Brahmins tonsured Dharmadev's head and symbolically bathed him in ten types of herbal water. Dharmadev performed veneration of Lord Krishna along with His eight wives with the help of Brahmins. By now his pulse had become steadily weaker. Realising that the end was near, his sons bathed him with the water sourced from various shrines and rivers. He was made to lie, with his head facing North, on the floor smeared with cow dung, holy grass and black sesame seeds. Relatives started chanting Lord KrishnaNarayan's name loudly, while Dharmadev concentrated his mind on Lord Shree Hari standing in front of him. As his soul left the body, he was freed from the curse of Sage Durvasha and returned to his original divine status to serve Lord Shree Hari.

Realising the death of their father, Rampratap, as an eldest son, prepared to conduct the funeral rites with great patience and restrain. As his father had led a very pious life, he did not undergo atonement on behalf of his father. He made a mental note to gift gold at the conclusion of the funeral ceremony. To conform to good religious practice, he shaved his head prior to performing other rites. He smeared his father's body with Ghee and wrapped it with a new white cloth, flower garlands, sandalwood, Kumkum etc. He covered the seven holes of his body with golden plugs. He reversed the Yagnopavit (put it on the right shoulder) and bowed his head down to the dead body for the last time. He tied the body on the bamboo stick to carry it to the crematorium. Dharmadev's blood relatives took turns to carry the body on the way to cemetery. Rampratap's son, Nadram, led the funeral procession by carrying the ambers required to ignite the pyre in an earthen pot. As advised by the Brahmins, Rampratap offered four oblations to holy spirits, two indoors, third in the courtyard and the fourth at the last resting place at the gates of the cemetery. The female relatives left the funeral procession midway and went towards the river for a ritual bath. A funeral pyre was prepared by stacking Tulsi, sandalwood and wood from other holy trees. Rampratap placed his father's body on the pyre and offered the fifth oblation to the spirits before lighting the pyre. He periodically added Ghee and sesame seeds to make sure that the flames thoroughly consumed the body. All the relatives were distraught and crying with grief. When the flames subsided, relatives got up and proceeded forward without looking back at the pyre. They headed towards the River Saryu for their ritualistic bath. They offered three handfuls of water to the spirits while bathing. They returned to Dharmadev's house. Upon arrival they touched the bullock and fire (for ritualistic chastity) prior to entering the house. All relatives comforted each other, Dharmadev's sons and Suhasini before going back to their respective homes. The sons, including Shree Hari slept on the floor and ate saltless food for ten days. They listened to the Bhagvad Gita every evening to alleviate their grief. The blood relatives observed Sutak of ten or three days appropriately to their closeness to Dharmadev. They worshipped Lord Krishna without touching or feeding His idol. They did not offer food to any guest throughout the duration of their Sutak. As a Brahamchari, Shree Hari followed His daily normal routine as previously but cooked His own food and did not touch His brothers during the period of Sutak of ten days.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The next day Rampratap collected his father's ashes from the funeral pyre. He placed some milk and water into two pots as an offering to the spirits for the next nine days. He and his other blood relatives shaved their heads, beards and moustaches on the banks of River Saryu. This was carried out on the tenth day after the demise of Dharmadev. Rampratap performed the special veneration of Lord Krishna as a part of the eleventh day Shraddh. He also performed a special veneration of Lord Vishnu and fed all his relatives and villagers on the twelfth Shraddh. Thousands of Dharmadev's disciples converged at his home to partake in the thirteenth day Shraddh in which Rampratap held a special veneration of Ganapati. He gave suitable gifts like clothes, utensils, grains, money etc. to eminent Brahmins on the conclusion of each of the sixteen Shraddhs. He also performed the twelve monthly Shraddhs after the death of his father as guided by the learned Brahmins and as described in the scriptures. All these rites were concluded satisfactorily due to the proximity and the presence of Shree Hari. Lord Shree Hari showed the world the need to follow important rites as described in the Vedic scriptures by setting an example by assisting Rampratap to follow such rites properly. At a tender age, He started re-establishing the true Vedic religion. Rampratap and Ichharam continued chanting the hymns given by their late father. Though, by Shree Hari's wish, they forgot the knowledge their father had given them regarding His true identity and started treating Him as their sibling.

Thus ends the forty first chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! After concluding the funeral rites, Shree Hari decided to leave home. He knew that the love of His relatives, friends and villagers will be a great hindrance in leaving home. (Though He is the Lord and master of all) Shree Hari decided to pray to Ganapati to remove all obstacles in His path (to set an example to others).

CHAPTER-42

He stood in front of Ganapati's idol with folded hands and prayed, 'O Vighnesh (remover of Vighna - obstacle)! Just reciting your name is enough to remove all obstacles! O son of Shankar! You were born as a result of a great austerity by your mother Parvati. Even Devtas like Indra worship your feet. You are benevolent. O SiddhiVinayak! Remove My obstacles! Your complexion is pinkish like Padmaraag diamond, your wives Shree, Buddhi, Siddhi etc. have smeared your body with Kumkum; your chest looks beautiful encircled by your resting trunk. O SiddhiVinayak! Remove My encumbrances! O Parvati's son! You hold Ankush (small spear used to control an elephant), rope, lotus and Parshu (a type of axe) in your four hands and wear red garlands around your neck. Your forehead is smeared with Sindur and the moon adorns your head. O SiddhiVinayak! Remove My hindrances! Devtas like Brahma, fearful of likely problems, worship you with Ladoos before anybody else at the start of every activity. O SiddhiVinayak! Remove My impediments! You entertain Devtas by falling off and remounting your grunting mount, a rat. O one with the elephantine ears and mountainous belly! You use asp as a Yagnopavit; you make the first sight of the new moon benevolent; you shelter your devotees from all impediments. O merciful! O SiddhiVinayak! Remove My obstacles! The bejewelled crown adorns your head and ochre robes adorn your body. You protected Devtas from the demon Devantak and you removed King Varenya's ignorance by your sermon. O Kartik Swami's brother! You removed sorrows of Lord Brahma. O SiddhiVinayak! Remove My obstacles!'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! On the conclusion of the prayer, Shree Hari left home on the early morning of the Friday, the tenth bright day of Ashadh in Samvat 1849. He left home without informing His brothers, friends and relatives on the pretext of the morning bath in the river. He stood for a while at a secluded spot on the bank of River Saryu. He was wearing only two pieces of clothes on His body, a Yagnopavit and double stringed Kanthi around His neck. His forehead was adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo. He had with Him only a Mala, alms bowl, a water bowl, a piece of cloth to sieve water, Shaalgram and a small booklet of collected wisdom which He had prepared. He waited on the bank of Saryu for a boat to carry Him across. Suddenly a demon arrived where Shree Hari was waiting. Seeing Shree Hari alone and seeking vengeance, he pushed Shree Hari harshly into the flowing water of River Saryu. The demon thought that he had successfully killed Shree Hari and to keep his delusion intact, Shree Hari floated on the river like a corpse. The demon was very happy with his heroics and went around boasting about his feat. Some of the demons believed him, while others casted doubts on its veracity.

Shree Hari floated on the river for a few hours and emerged on the opposite (North) bank of the river about 12 miles away from Chhapaiya. He continued travelling in the direction of the Himalayas. After a few days' of journey, Shree Hari entered the dense forest in the foothills of the Himalayas. The forest was the home to wild animals like lions, tigers, boars, elephants and deer and it had many streams and lakes. It was filled by the roars of the wild animals and the twitter of the birds. Shree Hari travelled bare foot through the forest without any fear. He ate whatever fruits and roots He could find in the forest. Though the journey was horrendous for any ordinary mortal, Shree Hari was happy passing through this forest. He had only one aim, to reach PulahAshram and perform austerity there.

Once on this unbeaten path, Shree Hari did not get to eat anything for three days. His body became so weak due to not having any nourishment that He fell to the ground and remained unconscious for a few minutes. He saw a stream. He gathered Himself and walked slowly towards the stream. He felt better after drinking some water and rested under a nearby tree. Upon sunset, He prepared for the evening Sandhya. Just as He invoked Hanumanji in His heart to protect Him from wild animals, Hanumanji appeared in front of Him in person. Hanumanji climbed the tree under which Shree Hari was resting. O King! The dark night of Janmashtami appeared even darker as the moon and the stars were covered by the clouds. The lightening, thunder and roars of wild animals made the night very scary. The presence of ghosts in the surrounding trees made this dark night intolerable. Shree Hari sat under the tree for meditation. He forgot His surroundings as He slipped into Samadhi."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Bhairav, the king of ghosts and spirits arrived there in the middle of the night. He had a trident in his hand and was surrounded by an army of torch bearing ghosts. He was very tall and darker than Kohl, his eyes shining like embers and his mouth dripping of blood and flesh of animals. Grunting like a donkey and bearing the corpses of dead animals on his shoulder, he returned from his nocturnal activities. Even wild animals, like lions and tigers fled from his vicinity. He lived in the same tree under which Shree Hari was meditating and was surprised to see a mere mortal still sitting bravely in his place. He ordered his army of ghosts, 'Kill Him', 'Eat Him', 'Drink His warm blood' etc. Hanumanji made a peculiar sound as they approached Shree Hari. Hanumanji's roar filled the environment and Bhairav's army stopped in its track by the latent fear. Even Shree Hari woke from Samadhi at this sound. He looked at the surroundings briefly and nonchalantly went back into Samadhi. Hanumanji increased his size to resemble a mountain. He gathered many of Bhairav's army by his tails and began to beat them with his kicks until they became unconscious. They did not die as their punishment was not in proportion to their sins. Hanumanji hit Bhairav so hard on his head that he vomited blood from his mouth. Huge Bhairav fell to the ground crushing many of his own men. He and his army retreated at a distance fearing Hanumanji. They sat behind the cover of distant trees the whole night awaiting Hanumanji's departure. Shree Hari remained in Samadhi until sunrise. Hanumanji was aware that Shree Hari had not eaten for four days, so he went off and brought some fruits, while Shree Hari attended to His morning routine. Shree Hari was so pleased with Hanumanji's services that He embraced him and said, 'You are our clan's ruling deity. Just as you have helped Me in a difficult period today, Please help Me whenever

I need assistance in the future.' Hanumanji replied, ' O Lord! Just remember me whenever You need me. I will arrive immediately.' As Shree Hari prepared to continue His journey, Hanumanji disappeared. He continued travelling towards the North, resting at nightfall and eating whatever food became available. After a few days' journey through the barren and rocky range of the Himalayas, He arrived at the foothills of the higher and silver coloured (covered in ice) Himalayas. He was surprised at the majesty and the beauty of the Himalayas. At some places it appeared golden with reflected rays of the rising sun. Still travelling further, He once lost His way and faced a rapid flowing river. He saw two mountains, one to the East and another to the West. There was a vast cave between them as He crossed the river. No path appeared between the two mountains. He saw a person on the eastern mountain as the sun was on the verge of setting. Himalaya himself had come in person to show the direction to waylaid Shree Hari and advised Shree Hari to proceed through the cave. Shree Hari walked through the dark cave for some time as advised and arrived on the banks of a vast lake where He rested during the night. He found the trodden path after travelling for three additional days. O king! Shree Hari faced many hurdles and dangers on His journey through the Himalayas. After a few days of further travelling, Shree Hari arrived at the famous PulahAshram. "

Thus ends the forty third chapter of the first canto of The Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-44

Suvrat Muni continued, "The mere sight of PulahAshram is enough to redeem a person of his sins. The fruits of an austerity performed here becomes many fold compared to austerity performed elsewhere. Lord Shree Krishna is eternally present here in His divine form to bless the devotees. King Bharat, the son of Bhagwan Rhishabhdev, performed austerity here many eons ago. The Ashram is encircled by the flowing River Gandki. Shree Hari bathed in this holy river as a part of His morning rituals. He did Darshan of and offered the special veneration to Bhagwan Muktanath, the resident deity of the Ashram. He made the same place as His resident, where King Bharat had performed the austerity. Constantly aware of the fact that King Bharat had faced an obstacle in his austerity in the form of a baby deer, Shree Hari remained totally detached from His surroundings. Aware by the fact that King Puranjan was mislaid from his austerity, Shree Hari even gave up being led by His mind. Indeed, He forgot the existence of His body and considered the chaste, indivisible, radiant and eternal soul as His self. He stood on His left foot with both arms raised above His head, chanting the Gayatri hymn to perform sever austerity. He meditated upon Bhagwan in His heart. He would bath in the River Gandki and venerate Muktanath thrice a day and would consume only fruits and leaves. For the rest of the time, He would stand on one leg performing austerity. The other devotees were astonished to see such a sever austerity. Looking at Shree Hari's radiant and smiling face despite such hardship, they started thinking whether this young Brahamchari was Dhruv, Prahalad, Sanatkumar, Kartik swami, Dattatreya, Sage Rhibhu or indeed Lord Nar or Lord Narayan Himself. No man could undergo such an arduous austerity. Devtas, knowing the true identity of God were pained to see Shree Hari undergo so much hardship. Even Dharmadev and Bhaktimata arrived there in their divine form to support Shree Hari's fragile body from falling over. Dharmadev stood on the left and Bhaktimata on the right side of Shree Hari acting as a guard preventing Him from falling. Shree Hari performed such a severe austerity throughout the duration of Chaturmaas (four months of monsoon) to please the sun deity. To the surprise of everybody, the sun deity appeared in the divine form of a man in front of Shree Hari on the bright Ekadashi of Kartik. Shree Hari prostrated in front of the sun deity and prayed with the folded hands, 'You are the soul of the universe. You are Bhaskar (the illuminator of the world) and Ahaskar (the divider of the day and the night). The Vedas attest and extol your worship by learned Brahmins. Your rays are radiant. Who indeed except you is able to remove the darkness of this world? You create, sustain and destroy this world through your light. Be victorious! The moon may shine very bright, but its radiance is your gift. O benevolent Suryadev! The persons coming to your shelter becomes free from the cycle of death and rebirth. When your single ray is so potent that no one can withstand its power, what can be said of the combined power of all your rays? I had the desire to see you for quite some time. I am very pleased with your Darshan, which redeems all the sins. My pleasure today knows no bounds just as the ocean's waves' pleasure is limitless on seeing the moonrise.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "SuryaNarayan was very pleased with Shree Hari and said, 'O Hari! I am very pleased with You. Ask for a boon.' Shree Hari asked, 'You remove the darkness all around. Please remove My darkness (ignorance) as well. The ignorance is the root cause of entanglement and rebirth. Greed, lust, anger etc. are real enemies. Please protect Me from these enemies. Please grant Me your divine Darshan whenever I desire it. You are the destroyer of Maya. I ask nothing besides this from you.' Saying 'Amen', SuryaNarayan disappeared from the scene. Shree Hari concluded His austerity. The other sages and devotees present at the Ashram honoured Shree Hari on the successful conclusion of austerity. He extolled the virtues of PulahAshram to the gathered assembly before departing from PulahAshram to continue His journey."

Thus ends the forty fourth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-45

King Pratapsinh asked Suvrat Muni, "O Muni! What happened to the relatives that Shree Hari left behind in Ayodhya? What were their mental conditions? My interest in hearing Shree Hari's Katha is not abetting. I do not get sated by hearing Lord's divine Leelas."

Suvrat Muni replied, "Shree Hari's friends came to His home to meet Him on the morning He left home. They could not find Him at home, so they went to the riverbank. He was not still to be found. They searched for Him at all the places frequented by Him. Dejected and disappointed, they returned home and asked Rampratapbhai, 'Where has Shree Hari gone? We can't find Him anywhere.' He was saddened to hear this news. Along with others, he mounted another search for HariKrishna. They searched every nook and corner of Ayodhya, but arrived home crying over the failure of finding Shree Hari. Rampratapbhai was really worried at the thought of Shree Hari leaving and never coming back home. He cried out aloud in pain, 'O brother! O Hari! O Krishna! O Nilkanth! Where have you gone? Why have you forsaken us? Where can I find You? Why have You not returned now that lunch time is over as well? Will I never hear Your sweet words?' Rampratapbhai recalled Shree Hari's divine Leelas over and over again to find some solace from the pain of the separation. His younger brother Ichharam, his wife Suhasini, other relatives and friends took solace in Hari's Leela to forget the pain of separation. In the absence of Shree Hari their days passed in great pain".

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Now listen to the ongoing Katha of Shree Hari's journey. He departed PulahAshram in the morning after Darshan and veneration of Muktanath. He headed south crossing over many dense forests, rivers, lakes, plains during His journey. The forests were full of wild animals like lions, tigers, rhinos etc. and so dense that the sun's rays could not reach the ground. He took rest under a tree for a night and ate whatever fruits and roots were available. Frequently, He went hungry for a day or two. A year after leaving PulahAshram, He arrived at a town in a mountainous region called Butol. Mahadutt, the king of Butol and his sister Maya were very devout. The king brought Nilkanth Varni in his palace and served Him well. Shree Hari was so pleased with their humble services that He blessed them with the knowledge of His true identity as a result of which, they became free from the cycle of death and rebirth. Shree Hari left Butol after few days to continue His journey. After few days of further travelling through the dense forest, Shree Hari reached a hermitage under a vast Banyan tree. There was a large lake to the East and a river to the North of the Ashram. Shree Hari saw a sage called Gopal Yogi with matted hair and white Yagnopavit, sitting on a deer skin in meditation. He humbly bowed his head to the Yogi with folded hands. In return, Gopal Yogi got up immediately and embraced Him tightly. Both of them felt as if they were close friends meeting after a long time. Shree Hari expressed the wish to learn Yoga from Gopal Yogi, who readily agreed. Nilkanth Varni treated Yogi as His guru and started learning the intricacy of Yog Shastra. Varni would master immediately whatever Yogi would teach Him once. He mastered Yam, Niyam, Asan, Pranayam, Pratyahar, Dharna and Dhyan to attain Samadhi (as a result) in a very short time. He learnt the difficult Yogic exercises such as Net, Basti, Kunjar, Nauli etc. in a short period of time and learnt and remembered all the hymns of Yog Shastra that Gopal Yogi taught Him. Gopal Yogi was surprised and impressed at Varni's grasping abilities. He thought that such ability is not achievable by an ordinary man. Varni was highly considered by Yogi and treated Him with the respect due to a guru. The year passed by in such bonhomie. They endured cold, heat, wind and rain together at the same time of serving each other."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! During this time some cowherds made a temporary home in the vicinity of the Ashram. Frequently, lions would attack during the night and kill some of their cattle. Considering Gopal Yogi as an accomplished sage, they approached and sought his help to ward off the wild animals. With Shree Hari's assent and blessing, Gopal Yogi blew his conch. The wild animals immediately left the area on hearing this sound and never returned. The cowherds' problem was solved by Shree Hari's mercy and they lived happily. Nilkanth Varni read the second chapter of Bhagvad Gita repeatedly. He retracted His senses, mind and intellect from all outward objects to focus inward towards the soul. Varni was able to see His Aatma and feel its presence in everything around Him by the repeated practice of withdrawal of senses inward. His soul attained the unison with AksharBrahm. He enlightened Gopal Yogi so that his soul attainted the same status. By His grace, Yogi realised that Varni was none other than the supreme Lord Narayan. He spent the rest of his life in Varni's devotion. O king! Gopal Yogi departed for Akshardham at his death. Shree Hari left the Ashram immediately after performing Yogi's last rites and began to walk towards the East. After some days He arrived at a shrine called AdiVarah. He stayed there for three days. The devout persons were very happy at Varni's divine Darshan Suvrat Muni continued, "After some time, Nilkanth Varni arrived at a town called Sirpur in Bengal. Sidhhvallabh, the king of Sirpur, was very devout but religiously naive. He was unable to discriminate between true saints and frauds. He had given shelters to a thousand saints of various traits. Some of them were devotees of Bhairav; some of goddess Kalika and some of Yogini. Many of them were experts in black magic. The king supplied them with grains, oil and all other items needed for their day to day upkeep. One hundred amongst them had convinced the King Sidhhvallabh of their total detachment. They did so by wearing only two pieces of cloths and had managed to get special treatment from the king. They called themselves 'Sidhhas'(having special magical powers.) Of course, there were a few true and noble saints among them as well. The king had built a special seminary for them. The devout king invited Nilkanth Varni in his palace and placed a sadhu named Gopaldas at his service. He accepted the invitation and made His resident in the midst of Sidhhas as Shree Hari wanted to expose their hypocrisy. The rain during this monsoon season was heavier than normal. The sky was covered by black clouds, the thunder was deafening, the frequent lightning was blinding and the strong cold winds were unbearable. The so called Sidhhas were troubled by the persistent rain and unrelenting cold. One by one or sometimes in groups of five and ten, the Sidhhas started deserting their seminary. The King's guards regularly updated the king of ongoing activities. After some time, only Nilkanth Varni was left. He was unperturbed by the rain and cold. All the people and the king considered Varni as the only true Sidhha. The others who had taken shelter under a cosy place were exposed and ignored by both the king and the people. Envious at the respect Shree Hari had attained from the king and villagers, they decided to kill Him. Many of them used various tricks of black magic to kill Varni. Just as the sword slashed against the sky is futile, all their weapons of black magic became useless against Shree Hari. Unable to harm Him, they made Gopaldas their target with their black magic. As a result, Gopaldas became unconscious which resulted in froth and blood seeping from his mouth. The crowd gathered around Gopaldas along with the king. Not knowing whose misdeed it was, he pleaded with Sidhhas to cure Gopaldas. They replied very haughtily, 'This is very serious and we are unable to do anything. Go and call your special Sidhha, Nilkanth Varni and see if He can revive Gopaldas.' The king recognised the malice in their words and sought Varni's help. Shree Hari knew the truth, so He came immediately where Gopaldas was lying unconscious. He spoke Lord Krishna's eight syllabled hymn gently in Gopaldas' ear and suddenly he got up as if woken from a deep slumber. The effect of black magic was reversed. The Sidhha who had used the trick against Gopaldas suffered the same fate. His other colleagues tried in vain to revive him. Realising their helplessness, they humbly pleaded with Varni for help. Holding no malice towards anybody, not even tormentors of an innocent, Shree Hari looked benevolently towards the unconscious man, who as a result got up totally cured. All the people present were astonished with this miracle and considered Nilkanth Varni as God in person. The king and townsfolk offered a special veneration to Nilkanth Varni. They offered Lord HariKrishna numerous gold coins, robes etc. which Varni humbly declined to accept. Impressed with such splendid disinterest in wealth, many people including the king and some Sidhhas, became His disciples. Those who could not tolerate the ascent of truth and religiosity departed from Sirpur."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Just then a learned but poor Brahmin arrived in Sirpur from southern India. The king gave him wealth beyond his needs. The greedy Brahmin turned dark on accepting such a large gift. People became aware of his greed by the change in his complexion. The Brahmin was ashamed and repentant at his mistake but could not do anything to rectify the matters. On being told of Varni's prowess, he sought His refuge. Shree Hari chanted Shree Krishna's name in his ears to free him of his sins. O king! The Brahmin immediately became fair complexioned in the presence of everybody and he left Sirpur as a happy man. He was totally nonchalant at the defeat of the fake Sidhhas or by people singing His praise."

CHAPTER-47

Suvrat Muni continued, "Shree Hari decided to continue His journey at the end of Chaturmaas. Many Sidhhas accompanied Him and they arrived at a shrine of Goddess Kamakshi Devi and made a halt in a nearby field. As they were cooking their food at their individual fires, a famous Brahmin name of Pibaik arrived there. At one time, he was a scholar of the Vedas and religious and pious. Once, urged by a devious man, he studied the scripture called 'Kulavarna'. He, being already corrupted by the association of the devious person, was taken in by the power of black magic. He transgressed from his Vedic path and became a disciple of Shakti and he started consuming alcohol and meat and indulged in adultery. In a very short time, he became the leader of a group of people who were similar minded. He became very haughty and egoist. He considered himself greater than others. He was surrounded by his male and female disciples, his eyes were reddened with the intoxication; his forehead was smeared with Sindur mixed with the menses of women; his body was sprinkled by the water that has been used to clean anuses of virgins; his mouth was smelling foul due to eating raw fishes and a red cloth was tied over his head. He was constantly chanting Mahakali's name. He roared scaring the Sidhhas, "O fools! How dare you call yourselves Sidhhas? Don't you know that I am the one and only Sidhha on this earth? Remove your Kanthis and Yagnopavits and become my disciples. Otherwise I will surely have you eaten alive by my army of demons.' The Sidhhas were very scared as they had heard tales about Pibaik's powers. Rather than dying, they were prepared to become his disciple. Just as they were about to surrender by discarding their Kanthis and Yagnopavits, Shree Hari said to them, 'Wait! What are you doing? Have no fear. Pibaik will not be able to harm you. Let him make Me his disciple first.' Sidhhas warned Varni that Pibaik was not an ordinary Sidhha as he has an ability to kill anyone. Pibaik also realised that Varni was an obstacle in his path of conquering others. He asked Shree Hari to come and face him. Varni stopped cooking and sat in front of Pibaik. Other Sidhhas sat behind Varni, still scared for their lives. Pibaik held some grains of Arad pulse in his hand, spoke some hymns and threw them on a large green tree. All the leaves fell and the tree died instantly. Though Sidhhas got scared at this demonstration of the power, Shree Hari was not disturbed by this. Pibaik boasted, 'O Varni! Did You see that! Your life is coming to an end very soon. Say your last prayers!' Shree Hari said nonchalantly, 'Do whatever you want to do. I am not afraid of your prowess.' Pibaik created the demonic army of KaalBhairav with his black magic and urged them to kill Varni. They were unable to even look at Varni let alone go near Him. They returned back to torment Pibaik as they needed some target to beat. Pibaik fell on the ground spewing blood from the mouth. He got up angrier. Next he created a more powerful demonic army of BatukBhairav, but the result was the same. As they were not able to harm Varni, they began to beat up Pibaik even harder. Again, he got up and this time created an even more powerful demonic army of Mahakali. The result was exactly the same as last time with Pibaik falling on the ground spewing blood. Now Pibaik's anger was at its peak. This time he created the most powerful army of Hanuman to kill Varni. They reverently bowed down at Shree Hari knowing Him as the Lord of their master Hanumanji. This time they beat Pibaik so hard that he became unconscious. He fell on the ground lifeless. Realising that his end is near, Pibaik's disciples and relatives pleaded with Varni to revive him and assured Him that Pibaik will not repeat his mistakes. They offered food grains to Varni and other Sidhhas. Pibaik regained consciousness and begged Shree Hari, 'O Hari! Please forgive me. I will not repeat my mistake.' He went home with his relatives. The Sidhhas were amazed at Varni's power and their faith in Him as the supreme God became even firmer. They all cooked and ate late at night."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Pibaik was down, but not out. He wanted to avenge his humiliation in front of others. He organised a special veneration to invoke KalBhairav himself at midnight. Satisfied at the veneration accompanied by blood and alcohol, KalBhairav appeared in person and Pibaik urged him to kill Varni. Mountainous KalBhairav approached Shree Hari to kill but could not come near Him. He tried to scare Varni by brandishing his trident. Varni just sat there smiling without any fear. KalBhairav waited until morning in vain. Shree Hari gave him a stern look in the morning. KalBhairav, scared of Varni, ran back to punish Pibaik to avenge his failure. Merciful Lord Shree Hari said to KalBhairav, 'O KalBhairav! Do not kill Pibaik as I have eaten his food.' He repeated what Shree Hari had said to Pibaik, who was surprised at His leniency. Shree Hari forgave him despite the trouble he had caused Him. This made him subdued and reverential towards Him. He considered Varni as the supreme God. He realised his mistakes and returned to his old Vedic and ethical ways. He gave up all practices which were against the teaching of the Vedas and started reading the Shreemad Bhagwat and Bhagvad Gita instead of the Kulavarna. He spent the rest of his life engaged in Lord Krishna's Bhakti. While Shree Hari asked other Sidhhas to disperse and travel onwards, He proceeded towards a mountain called Navlakha. O king! Shree Hari removed ignorance of the commoners and religious malpractices of the gurus while travelling from place to place. He espoused and re established true Sanatan Dharma, knowledge, detachment and Lord Krishna's Bhakti on this earth at the same time."

Thus ends the forty seventh chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-48

Suvrat Muni continued, "Shree Hari saw a strange sight of 900,000 Sidhhas performing Yagnas as He climbed on top of Navlakha mountain. It was strange because the fires of each Yagna were alight without any wood. He saw numerous small ponds of water; some of them were hot and some cold. Very surprised, Varni glanced at all 900,000 Sidhhas and greeted them with folded hands. The Sidhhas bowed at Varni in return. Shree Hari stayed there three days and arrived at the inaccessible shrine of VadvaKund. Nilkanth Varni stayed there for three days watching the geysers spouting hot air, fire and water. Shree Hari went south-eastwards from here and arrived at a point where holy River Ganga meets the ocean. He stayed there for three days regularly bathing in the ocean. He arrived at KapilAshram after crossing the ocean by boat. This is the shrine where Kapil Bhagwan, the guru of all Acharyas and expounder of the Sankhya Shastra resides in person. He performs austerity for the benevolence of the whole world. He was very pleased with Kapil Muni's Darshan and stayed at the serene place for one month before arriving at Jagannath Puri. Shree Hari bathed in the ocean and holy Lake Indradhyumna everyday. He also visited the temple for Lord Jagannath. He saw thousands of fake Sadhus, full of greed, lust, ego etc. in ochre robes living in this holy shrine. They bore the external insignias of Vaishnav and Shaiv sects to defraud the innocent devotees. They were all busy trying to increase their sphere of influence among populace and amassing the wealth. They misled devout from the path of true religion by enticing them with the cheap tricks of magic. They used fear, greed and black magic to draw people towards them. They secretly indulged in adultery with daughters and wives of their disciples. However they outwardly pretended to be totally detached from the worldly pleasures. They even bore arms like bows, arrows, tridents and swords. Indeed, they were demons in the garb of ascetics. Not only did they indulge in religious malpractices like amassing wealth, consumption of meat and alcohol and indulgence in sex, but they impressed upon their disciples that this was indeed the true and contemporary religion. Shree Hari saw them as enemies of Dharma and a huge burden on the earth. Though He wanted to stay in Jagannath Puri for only five days, He decided to stay behind to vanquish such fake demonic gurus. O king! Varni made His residence on the banks of lake Indradhyumna. His fame spread slowly as a religious and detached saint. He fulfilled the wishes of devotees who thronged

Him. The sated devotees in return brought vast amount of wealth as a gift for Him, which He did not accept. This impressed people more and His status was elevated in the minds of the people. Gradually His fame spread wide which the fake gurus could not digest. They started insulting and abusing Him and levelled false allegations against Him for ulterior motive. Some even went to the extreme of beating Him and forcing Him into labour. Shree Hari endured all this just like water on the back of a swan. He was neither agitated nor did He retaliate. Instead He sermonised them, 'The Vedas, scholar saints and Acharyas of the past attest that a body is perishable and an Aatma is eternal. The insult and praise are same to Me as I see Myself as an Aatma and not a body. Anger is a great enemy which destroys one's body and Punyas. You all are devotees and you must control your anger which is a hindrance in your knowledge and devotion. Therefore, forsake your anger and engage yourself in God's Bhakti.' Many of the newly mislaid took Varni's sermon by heart and realised their mistaken ways. Whilst they became His disciple, the others, more stubborn did not relent. The miscreants, defeated by the vices like greed, ego and anger, started arguing and fighting amongst themselves at the slightest provocations. The verbal struggle later turned into an armed fight. Using any weapons like spears, tridents, swords, staffs, axes and arrows available, they started killing each other with vengeance. Intoxicated by the cocktail of alcohol and ego, they showed no mercy towards their perceived enemies. The battle turned so violent that ten thousand died on the first day itself as a result of which, the earth was soaked in blood. The ground was covered by severed limbs, heads and torsos. The dogs, foxes, vultures, owls, and cravens had a field day feasting on the flesh of the dead. O king! This fighting continued for many days as every group wanted to avenge the killing of their brethren. The war lasted for two months. Some days saw the death of just fifty people, while up to two thousand perished on some days. The burden was lifted from the earth by the death of these demonic ascetics.

Some of them escaped this carnage to tell a tale to other like minded persons at various other places. They saw Nilkanth Varni as their prime foe and prepared themselves to deal with Him if He arrived there. Shree Hari sermoned the devout again at the end of the battles on the sanctity of the Sanatan Dharma and Bhakti of Lord Krishna and brought them within the fold of true religiosity. He emphasised the need to observe Brahamcharya and non violence. O king! Just as the rising sun destroys the darkness, Shree Hari, though unarmed, destroyed Asuras. In the end, Shree Hari stayed in Jagannath Puri for ten months. During this time He cleaned the shrine of all religious malpractices and returned its glory and sanctity. O king! Whoever listens to, or recites Shree Hari's Leela of destruction of evil gurus will indeed become free from his inner enemies and attain Akshardham at death.

Thus ends the forty eighth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan Suvrat Muni continued, "Shree Hari continued His journey southward alone. He visited the shrine of AdiKurm before arriving in the city Manaspur on the way to Rameshwar. The devout king of Manaspur, Satradharma, greeted Varni with due reverence and invited Him to stay in his city for some days. Varni chose a solitary dais under a tree at the edge of the garden to stay. The king placed a few of his servants at Varni's disposal. Some of the fake Sidhhas had taken undue advantage of King Satradharma's hospitality after running away from Jagannath Puri. They recognised Varni and devised a plan to kill Him. They started the bombardment of stones and rocks at Shree Hari at the nightfall. They even used slings to toss larger rocks. They continued this bombardment until morning although none of the stones landed on Shree Hari. They formed a protective wall around the dais on which He was sleeping. When the king and his subjects saw this miracle the next morning, they all thought that just as Lord Nrusinh had protected His devotee Prahalad, God has protected another one of His devotees today. The king was very impressed by this miracle and his devotion towards Varni became even more firm. The Asuras did not mend their ways even after seeing such a miracle. They did not forsake their enmity with Shree Hari as death was calling them. They started to collect sharp lethal weapons as the next line of attack. When the king realised that these Sidhhas were responsible for the attack on Varni and were still planning for more attacks, he sent his soldiers to kill all of them. The king realised that it was his duty as a king to stop sinners in their track. Nilkanth Varni gave the king and many other devout persons the knowledge of His true identity as the supreme God before leaving Manaspur. Shree Hari visited the mountain shrine of Venkatadri for the Darshan of Lord Vishnu. He visited ShivKanchi and VishnuKanchi for the Darshan of Lord Shiva and Lord Vishnu respectively before arriving at ShreeRangam. Shree Hari made His residence in an orchard on the east banks of River Kaveri following the holy dip in the holy river. He stayed there for two months, inviting resident scholars and engaging them in the debates in wide ranging topics to remove many of their misconceptions and ignorance. He resisted the use of black magic by some atheists to show that true devotees neither need the help nor be afraid of black magic on the path of true devotion. Shree Hari arrived at Setubandh (Rameshwar) for the Darshan of Rameshwar Mahadev. Nilkanth Varni stayed there for two months amongst many ascetics. Varni visited the shrine of Lord Vishnu called SundarRaj before proceeding on the way to the shrine called BhutPuri. On his journey, He lost His way in a dense forest and did not get anything to eat or drink for four days. On the fifth day, He saw a lake where He bathed and worshipped the Shaalgram. He managed with just four pods of wild berries which He ate after offering it as a Naivedhya to Shaalgram. The next morning, Varni proceeded forward and reached a well full of water at noon. He drew water from the well for a bath and completed His daily morning routine. A couple in the garb of rag pickers riding a bull were watching Varni's activities from a distance. Shree Hari placed Shaalgram in a dish and poured the water from His Kamandal. The dish remained dry while the Kamandal was empty. Varni lifted the dish to see if it had hole in it, but the dish was intact. Shaalgram drank all the water to satiate His thirst. Varni brought another Kamandal full of water and poured it over Shaalgram and found the same result. Nilkanth Varni brought a further three Kamandals full of water until Shaalgram were satiated with thirst. The couple watching from the distance was surprised at Varni's unrelenting devotion towards Shaalgram. After satiating Shaalgram, Varni continued His worship and thought if Shaalgram were so thirsty, then He must be hungry too. Shree Hari never thought of His own hunger. He was only concerned for Shaalgram Who had endured the fast for six days. The couple approached Shree Hari and the wife offered Him flour and salt to prepare Naivedhya for Shaalgram. Shree Hari prepared food for Shaalgram and concluded the worship. Nilkanth Varni asked the couple, 'Who are you? Though you look very poor, your aura says something else. It is not possible for an ordinary person to roam around in such dense forest. Tell Me the truth and please enlighten Me.' The couple advised Shree Hari, 'Please eat something first. You have become very weak by hunger. We will talk later.' Shree Hari heeded their advice and sat beside them after eating the Prasad. The husband said, 'O Brahmin! I will not lie to You. Not only are You a Brahmin, not only are You a Brahamchari but You are also a great devotee who has overcome the unconquerable anger. Lying to an ascetic erases all Punyas. O Varni! I am Shankar and this is my wife, Parvati. We have come to feed You.' Saying this, Shankar and Parvati transformed into their actual divine form. Shree Hari was surprised by the sudden transformation and looked at them in awe. Shankar appeared fair complexioned like camphor, radiant as if many suns were shining at the same time, handsome with the ash smeared on his entire body, snakes as his Yagnopavit, armlets, bracelets and waistband. His clothes were made of the deer and tiger skins, his forehead radiant with the moonlight emanating from the moon lodged in his shiny golden hair. The third eye sparkled in the middle of Lord Shiva's forehead. He was holding a Rudraksha Mala in his right hand. Varni saw Parvati, Nandi, Kartik swami, Naradji, Sananadan etc. serving him in their divine form. He looked at Shivji's feet at which pious married women of all three worlds bow. Shree Hari, head bowed, both hands folded and eyes glinting with tears of joy, prayed, 'O Shankar! O beholder of all the virtues! You are known as Mahadev (great deity) because you are the best ascetic, expert in Yoga and knowledge of Brahm and because even Brahma worships you. I bow to you because you can keep the fear of Kaal and Maya at bay. O guru of Prachetas (the ten sons of King Prachin Barhish)! You saved the universe by consuming the deadly poison, KaalKut, which arose from the churning of the ocean. O conqueror of death! I bow to you. You vanquished the insurmountable Kaamdev (the Eros, the deity of lust) through the power of your Vairagya. You are easily pleased with your devotees. I bow to you o Shankar. You hold River Ganga within your hair. You obliterated a demon called Andhak in no time. Mere chanting of your name redeems one's sins. O king of Kailash! You have made home in Kashi as well. Your name 'Har' (remover) is apt because you have protected Devtas on many occasions. O Parvati's husband! O merciful! O glorious! I bow to you."

CHAPTER-49

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari prayed to Parvati. Varni said, 'O mother of the universe! O remover of poverty of your devotees! O Shivji's chaste wife! I bow to you. You destroyed the mighty demons Shumbh and Nishumbh. You have taken many forms to destroy numerous demons from time to time, even sprouting many arms to kill the demons in fight against injustice. Suvrat Muni continued, "Shankar and Parvati were very happy with Nilkanth Varni and asked Him to ask for a boon. Varni asked, ' If you are really pleased with me, then grant Me such that My Vairagya in this world becomes even deeper.' Shankar - Parvati spoke, ' Even now You are full of Vairagya. You are none other than Lord Narayan. You have taken a human form and You asking for a boon is nothing but a human charade. Nonetheless, Your Vairagya will deepen so much that You will forget Your own body. O Hari! O Lord Krishna! We bow to You.' Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shankar and Parvati were overwhelmed by the Darshan of Lord Narayan in the garb of an ascetic Brahamchari. They bowed at Shree Hari once again and disappeared from the scene."

Thus ends the forty ninth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-50

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Nilkanth Varni travelled to Bhutpuri after the meeting with Shankar and Parvati in the dense forest. After Darshan of Ramanujacharya at Bhutpuri, Nilkanth Varni visited Kanyakumari. Shree Hari visited Padmanabh on his way to AdiKeshav shrine. Just as the King Satradharma of Manaspur massacred the evil persons in the garb of ascetics, the devout king of Adikeshav killed more than two thousand armed fake ascetics hiding in his state. Varni went to the shrine of Sakshigopal, situated at the top of a mountain called Malayachal and stayed in the woods of sandalwood for five days, not fearing the snakes living in the trees. Thereafter, Varni visited the shrine of VitthalNathji at Pandharpur on the banks of River Chandrabhaga. He stayed there for two months taking holy dips daily in the river. Varni visited Panchvati in the midst of the forest called Dandkaranya on His way to Nashik for the Darshan of Trayambakeshwar Mahadev. He continued His northward travel and crossed the rivers Taapi, Narmada, Mahi and Sabarmati to arrive at the shrine of Bhimnath Mahadev. Shree Hari arrived in the town of Mangrol after visiting the shrine of Gopnath Mahadev."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari removed the ignorance and religious malpractices at each and every shrine, hermitage, town or village He visited either by engaging in the debates with residing ascetics or sermonising the villagers. He revealed His true identity as supreme God to the pious persons. He observed strict Brahamcharya, observed all Vrats and rituals to teach others their importance in life. He travelled alone most of the time and never entered the village without reason. He carried only a pair of clothes, Kamandal and deerskin to sit on for His meditation. He never wore anything on His torso even during the harsh winters. He venerated Lord Shree Krishna three times a day and read the Panchaadhyayi (the five chapters of the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat which describe the divine Raas of Lord Krishna and Gopis) followed by the ritualistic bath. He underwent Praanayaam (breathing exercises) and Aasans (Yogic exercises) thrice daily. He became so thin that only His bones and skin remained which made all His veins clearly visible. He never wore any footwear during His travels and endured thorns and rocks willingly. He walked through dense forests calmly and without the fear of wild animals. None of the animals ever attacked Him. He ate whatever was available to Him, often going without food for two or three days. He observed fasts on all Ekadashis and other Vrats like RamNavmi and Janmashtami. He could not bear the whiff of women let alone their touch. He kept His senses and sensual organs under strict control. Many ascetics sought His company and tried to emulate His way of life but all were unsuccessful. Most of the ascetics managed to stay with Him for only three to four days. His travels were so arduous that an ordinary mortal or indeed a Devta could not have undertaken. O king! Shree Hari spent seven years and one month travelling and visiting various shrines and arrived in a village called Loj near Mangrol on the morning of the sixth dark day of the month of Shravan in Samvat 1856. He sat on the bank of a step well for some time in meditation."

Thus ends the fiftieth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-51

Suvrat Muni continued, "Ramanand Swami's 50 celibate saints lived in a hermitage at Loj. A swami by the name of Sukhanand swami arrived at the step well for his morning bath and saw Nilkanth Varni meditating on its bank. Overawed by His aura, Sukhanand swami bowed at Him and asked, 'O Varni! Where are You coming from and where are You going?' Varni replied, 'I am originally from the North Koshal region and have arrived here after visiting numerous shrines. Who are you and whose disciple are you?' Sukhanand swami replied, 'The renowned guru Ramanand swami has thousands of householders and celibate disciples. I, along with 50 of his celibate disciples live in a hermitage. I had come for my bath and noticed You meditating. Your appearance indicates to me that You have undergone difficult austerity. Muktanand swami, who is the eldest among us, has mastered the intricacies of Yoga. He would be very happy to a devout ascetic like You. Ramanand swami has decreed us to serve holy ascetics like You. I request You to come to the hermitage to give Darshan to Muktanand swami, otherwise he will come here for Your Darshan."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari knew that the Darshan of a pious saint like Muktanand swami is an ideal way to conclude a pilgrimage." He said to Sukhanand swami, 'O Muni! Though I did not stay in the urban area during My pilgrimage, I will accompany you to your hermitage for Muktanand swami's Darshan to conclude My pilgrimage and austerity.' Saying this, Nilkanth Varni accompanied Sukhanand swami to the Ashram where Muktanand swami and other saints welcomed Him by getting up from their seats and greeting Him. They bowed their head with folded hands to each other. The saints were very surprised by His radiant aura. They reflected in their mind that though they have seen many hermits, none had His aura. They had not seen or heard anything like Him and were unable to reconcile His severe austerity with His young age. They equated Him to a Devta, the Sun, the moon, Agni, Kartik Swami (Lord Shiva's son), SanatKumar, NirannMukta and austerity in person in turn, but could not make up their minds as to His real identity. Whoever He was, they concluded that Ramanand swami will be very pleased with them by serving Him. They started serving Varni wholeheartedly knowing that such an intelligent and detached ascetic is impossible to find in this present era. Considering Muktanand swami as the wisest saints, Nilkanth Varni, to test his knowledge, asked him, 'O Muni! You are very knowledgeable. Therefore, please explain the true individual characteristics of Jeev, Ishwar, Maya, Braham and Parabraham to Me.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Muktanand swami replied humbly, 'A Jeev (soul) is eternal, permanent, radiant, indivisible, impregnable and indestructible. Though it lives in the heart, it is omnipresent within all three bodies (gross, sublime and causal) from head to toe. It is knowledgeable and controls the mind, senses and organs. All knowing Ishwar, by being present as Virat creates, sustains and destructs the universe. Maya, one of the potency of God, is eternal. It is the reason for all the activities and hence, the cause of souls' rebirth. Ignorance is its other name and it can only be overcome by going under God's shelter. Braham is existential, eternal and infinite. It is Akshar (unchangeable) and Akhand (indivisible). In its definite form, it remains in God's service and as indefinite (formless) it is His residence. It is the beholder of Maya and souls and indeed is the support of everything. Parabraham, the supreme God, is independent, self radiant, purest, eternal and without beginning. He is called by many names such as Vaasudev, Narayan, Krishna, Vishnu etc. He is the ultimate truth and all His desires always become reality. He is the ultimate and only arbitrator of the fruits of souls' deeds. He is omnipresent in everything of the universe, and yet remains as a separate entity from it in His abode. He is omnipotent, controller of Kaal (time) and Maya and is the reason of all reasons. He is also called Parmatma as He is distinct from the Aatma (the soul). All persons desirous of Moksha (salvation) must worship Him. I have tried to answer Your questions briefly and as to my understanding. My guru, Ramanand swami can give You more detailed answers. He has the ability to see all these - soul, Maya and God - in clear perspective and is able to show them to other devotees as well.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Nilkanth Varni was very pleased with the answer. He surmised that Muktanand swami was indeed a chaste and honest saint. He said, 'I had asked the same question to many people including so called scholars, but no one before you has been able to answer so lucidly. I am very pleased with your Darshan as you have true saintly qualities as described in the scriptures.' Muktanand swami said, 'I have met thousands of ascetics but none like You. O Brahamchari! You are not only an expert in asking questions but knowledgeable as well to recognise the proper answer.' Nilkanth Varni stayed behind in this Ashram on acknowledging them to be true saints. Not a single person was able to win Him in a debate on theology while He remained at the Ashram. All the saints were surprised at His vast knowledge. Though they never considered Varni as a mortal being, they could not make up their mind whether He was a Devta or indeed God. Nonetheless, they served Him reverentially. Shree Hari listened to Lord Krishna's Katha regularly while undergoing meditation and austerity."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The saints were surprised to see Shree Hari occupied in meditation during His free time. Muktanand swami once asked Him, 'O best among Varnis! We see You often meditating with Your eyes closed. Please tell us Who do You meditate upon?' Nilkanth Varni replied, "The husband of Radhikaji, Lord Shree Krishna, is My Ishtadev (personal God). All the scriptures point to the same fact. Brahma, Dharma and Shiva worship Him as well. He incarnates Himself as Varah etc. I always meditate upon Him. He is the only refuge for the souls entangled in Maya and transmigrating from body to body. I have not an iota of interest in anything except the lotus feet of Lord Krishna. I pray to Him and I worship Him.' Pleased with the fact that just like them, Varni was also Lord Krishna's devotee, Muktanand swami said, 'We worship Lord Krishna as well and we are able to see God in our heart as a result of the blessings of our guru, Ramanand swami. He is Udhhavji himself and can see Lord Krishna playing Raas in his heart. He is potent enough to send his disciples in Samadhi and show Lord Krishna in their hearts as well. It is possible for a devotee like You to see Lord Krishna with our guru's blessings. We do not see any difference between Ramanand swami and Lord Krishna. Lord Krishna has taken the form of Ramanand swami for the benevolence of humankind. There is no other guru than Ramanand swami on this earth, as Lord Krishna has himself anointed him as the guru of this world. I quote these two verses from the Shreemad Bhagwat (4th Canto) in support. 'I need to impart the knowledge before I depart from the earth. Therefore, he is the most suitable pupil on the whole earth. I will let him remain on the earth (despite the curse of a sage).'O Nilkanth Varni! Lord Krishna Himself had said this. We are swami's disciples and worship Lord Krishna on his direction."

Suvrat Muni said, "Shree Hari remembered His father's relationship with guru Ramanand swami on hearing Muktanand swami. He wished to get Ramanand swami's blessing to help Him see Lord Krishna in His heart. He said to Muktanand swami, 'I am yours as well. Wish Me well and do something so that I can have guru's Darshan as soon as possible.' Shree Hari narrated His birth and life in brief to Muktanand swami, who said, 'You are great! You have an inner desire to meet Ramanand swami, but he is presently in Bhuj and will return here in two to three months. You must stay here with us until he returns.' O king! Varni stayed in the Ashram waiting for Ramanand swami's return. He served other saints humbly and without any rancour. He brought cow dung and twigs for the fire, made dishes out of leaves. He prepared suitable food, brought medicine and massaged the feet of sick saints. He never disobeyed any instructions given by other saints. He endured the heat of summer, rains of monsoon and the cold of winter nonchalantly. The saints were astonished to see Nilkanth Varni's power of endurance which led to Him being treated with respect equal to that of their guru Ramanand swami.

Thus ends the fifty second chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Eight months passed by since Shree Hari arrived at the Ashram at Loj. Ramanand swami still had not arrived and Varni's patience was running thin. His desire for guru's Darshan had not waned. He was thinking of travelling to Bhuj to fulfil His desire to meet Ramanand swami. He said to Muktanand swami, 'O swami! Why has Ramanand swami not returned despite such a long time? Is it My fault or am I to blame in some way? You made many promises of his return which went by without being fulfilled. I can no longer wait for his Darshan. Please grant Me the permission to go to Bhuj to meet him.' Muktanand swami said, 'Believe me! Ramanand swami will surely come in the first half of Vaishakh. Remain with us until then and You will get the opportunity to have his Darshan. Bhuj is very far from here and on the way You will have to cross a treacherous creek. You have become so frail with Your austerities. Furthermore, it is not appropriate to go for his Darshan without his express permission. O Varni! Do not despair. I will write a letter to Ramanand swami about You and Your desire for his Darshan. Wait until his reply and then decide accordingly. It is better for You to remain here until then.'

CHAPTER-53

Suvrat Muni continued, "Shree Hari agreed and decided to stay in the Ashram for the time being. Muktanand swami started writing letter to Ramanand swami.

He wrote, 'According to the scriptures, all virtues, divine powers and pious saints bow at your feet. O guru! I too, prostrate at your divine feet. You have independently taken birth and move on this earth sermonising and pleasing devotees. We are all fine here and pray that you are well in Bhuj. We are happily engaged in God's Bhakti as directed by you. There is a special reason as to why I am writing this letter. A Brahamchari has arrived at Loj from the North Koshal region. He has become so frail with severe austerities that all His veins are plainly visible. His aura is such that it seems that 'Tap' itself has come in person. His name is Nilkanth. His detachment is as profound as that of Nilkanth Mahadev. He does not possess anything and He doesn't desire for anything. His beauty shames even Kaamdev (the Eros). His senses and limbs are totally serene. He appears as someone Who is beyond a mere mortal. He has arrived in the garb of a Brahamchari with fine golden hairs tied in a bun and is wearing a deerskin. He keeps a Mala in His right hand at all times. He has visited many shrines and prior to arriving here, He has undergone severe austerity for four months at PulahAshram. His Brahamcharya Vrat is so profound that He cannot even bear the smell of a woman. He is very intelligent. He teaches the finer intricacies of various scriptures to our saints and visitors; yet, He remains very humble and serves the saints and Ashram reverentially. He has just turned twenty. He eats a very small amount of bland food. Some days He eats only fruits and leaves and some days He goes without food and water altogether. Some days He eats whatever is given in the alms and some days He eats whatever is served without asking. Thus, His austerities are impossible for a man to undergo. He lives under a tree throughout the year. Living in a house is like a prison to Him. He sits surrounded by fire in summer, immersed in water in winter and endures rain in the monsoon. Many questions arise in my mind looking at His young age and the severity of His austerity. Our austerity pale in comparison to His just as the lamp pales in front of the sun. We cannot fathom the depth of His knowledge. We are often unable to answer His simple questions. He has the ability to answer complex questions with ease. In our opinion, you are the only other person to have such a profound intelligence. We are perplexed whether He is God in person. He can even read our thoughts if, whilst in meditation, our minds wonder at mundane things as if He dwells in our souls. Insults and abuses do not disturb Him yet a little pain of a saint or indeed any living being perturbs His heart. We have not seen such a combination of saintliness and intelligence in one person except in you. We often wonder whether you have come in disguise as Varni to check on us. He is very eager for your Darshan. I have persuaded Him to stay here until your return, but I am not sure how long I will be able to do so. He is even prepared to come to Bhuj for your Darshan. Please let me know by return whether I should grant Him permission to come to you. I have written in short about Varni but you can decipher everything with your intelligence. Bless me.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Muktanand swami asked Nilkanth Varni to write a few words as well. He said that Ramanand swami will heed Varni's request and return soon. Shree Hari concurred with swami. Sitting in a secluded corner, keeping a board and a paper on His right thigh, He picked up a pen in His right hand, His neck tilting slightly, Nilkanth Varni started writing a letter in neat handwriting."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Shree Hari wrote an evocative letter to Ramanand swami.

Shree Hari wrote, 'O Ramanand swami! You reside in Bhuj majestically. Be victorious! The wealth of sovereign kings of this earth roll at your feet. O swami! You are Udhhav. You are the guru of all gurus as Lord Krishna has anointed a guru of this world. You have taken birth as a son of Ajay and Sumati in Ayodhya just to propagate Sanatan Dharma on this world. Your disciples' fear of death wanes just with your Darshan. I, Nilkanth, have come to your refuge and prostrate at your divine feet at which all virtues make a beeline. Forsaking all relatives and even the birthplace, I have arrived in Loj following the pilgrimage at numerous shrines. I have only one desire; to see Lord Shree Krishna in person. I undergo the Vrat of 'Dharna Parna' (fasting every alternate day) during the period of Chaturmaas of every year to this end. I fast the whole Kartik month. I often do other Vrats like Chandrayan, Krutchh, Parak Krutchh in the months of Kartik and Magh. The Vrat of Ekadashi is one of the main Vrats I observe by fasting on a regular basis. Despite this, I do not worry about the effects of these Vrats on My body as I undergo these Vrats seeking Lord Krishna's Darshan. O swami! I have burnt off blood and muscles from My body by forsaking sensual pleasures and observing austerities. Only bones and skin remain. If you are wondering how one can still be alive, let Me tell you that I survive only on the hope of having Lord Krishna's Darshan. The desire of Lord Krishna's Darshan is the only support I have left. Me being alive without blood and muscles does remind one of the bygone Satya Yug. Please be kind to Me and grant Me your Darshan soon.'

'Lord Krishna is My parents, siblings, friends and guru. Due to My profound love for Him, I do not get attached to anybody else. Any affection I have towards anybody is because of his devotion in Lord Krishna. Indeed, I forsake all my relatives if they do not share My love for Lord Krishna even if they happen to be My parents. I cannot share any relationship with anybody if they are not His devotees. You may not approve of forsaking parents and relatives even if they happen to be non devotees, but in the past many devotees had given up their kith and kin for the devotion of God. Vibhishan forsook his brother, Bharat his mother, Vidur his whole Kuru clan, wives of Rishis of Mathura their brothers and husbands and Gopis their husbands. King Ang even forsook his only son and went into the forest to this end. Rather than earning censure for their actions, all of them have been praised in the scriptures. This is the way of devotees since ages. My love for God and His devotees is similarly profound as I consider them the reason for Moksha. Attachment elsewhere is the reason for the shackles of life and birth. That is the reason I have remained in your Ashram at Loj under the guidance of pious saints like Muktanand swami, who are religious, detached and devout. Such pious saints are everything to Me.'

'O swami! The persons who do not have a profound love for Lord Krishna are like donkeys, dogs and bulls. Even their sighting is a sin. I do not differentiate between those who spend their lives indulging in sleep, fear, lethargy and satisfying their sensual needs and animals. The scriptures extol human life. Indeed, even Devtas wish for human life, because only through Bhakti can one attain Moksha. What good is the human life without Bhakti? The fame, the virtues, the handsome body, the knowledge, all is futile without Bhakti. He is just like a poisonous fruit which looks good from the outside. Just as without a little salt, the expensive condiments like Ghee and oil used in cooking, the vegetables are of no use, all the virtues are useless without Bhakti. Conversely, just a little salt makes food delicious; the small amount of Bhakti enhances other virtues. O swami! Without the servility of God, one may attain Heaven, but not the freedom from the fear of Kaal (the death). Even the Vedas attest that those heavenly pleasures are not eternal. Devtas like Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva who have the power of creation, sustenance and annihilation, sages like Suka and Sanak who have attained unison with AksharBrahm, worship God forsaking ego just like an ordinary devotee to attain salvation. Indeed, God's divine virtues like mercy, leniency, generosity, compassion are such that even detached sages like Sanak develop a deep love and attachment for Him. Radha and Rama (Laxmi) serve Him just as the maids serve a king. No matter how great one is, the fear of Kaal does not wane without devotion. Bhakti of Lord Krishna is the sole means to become free from the fear of Kaal.'

'O swami! I have understood God's true greatness and glory from the scriptures and associating with pious saints, therefore, I, forsaking lethargy and laziness, undergo austerity and engage in Bhakti. I have a very profound desire for Shree Krishna's Darshan. I feel restless without the Darshan. Awaiting your arrival, I live here under Muktanand swami's guidance. I like nothing except His Darshan. Hearing anything except His Katha and Kirtan is akin to the spears poking My ears. For me an accidental sighting of a woman is like a sighting of a demon. I consider the flower garland like a garland of burning embers if those flowers have not been offered first to Shree Krishna. The smearing of sandalwood paste or saffron water is akin to be massaged with mud. The majestic palace is like a deserted forest to Me. The fine clothes are like jaws of snakes and fine food is poison for Me. I have a total abhorrence to all fine things of the world. They do not interest Me. I am restive and impatience without Shree Krishna's Darshan. Refuge and servility at a guru's feet is the only way to have God's Darshan in this Kali Yug. No one except you is able to fulfil My desire. O merciful! You have always protected and looked after your disciples. Please return here before My demise and grant Me your Darshan. I conclude. Jay Shree Krishna from Nilkanth Varni'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Nilkanth Varni gave this letter to Muktanand swami. He put both the letters in an envelope and addressed it to Ramanand swami. He sent Mayaram Bhatt to Bhuj to deliver these letters to Ramanand swami. Travelling expediently, Mayaram reached Bhuj after seven days. Mayaram Bhatt saw Ramanand swami in the midst of an assembly at the home of Gangaram Mall. Swami's eyes were long and wide like a petal of newly bloomed lotus, his brows were like a strung bow and his divine feet were shiny like a red lotus. His well built muscular body was adorned with white robes. His face shone like a full moon. Mayaram prostrated at swami's feet and handed him the envelope that Muktanand swami had given him."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! Ramanand swami read both letters that Mayaram gave him. He was very pleased at the arrival of Nilkanth Varni at Loj. His eyes became teary after reading that Varni's physical condition was due to harsh austerities. He read aloud both letters in the presence of disciples like Sunderji Suthar to familiarise with the content and praised Varni profusely. He replied to the letter himself.

Ramanand swami wrote, 'The mortal humans suffer from various mental ailments due to their deeds in their past lives. O Muktanand swami! You reduce their burden of pain by sermonising and showing them the correct religious path. I bless you and all others at Loj and pray to Almighty Lord that your Brahamcharya Vrat, which, Sage Sanatsujat (in the Mahabharat) has equated to Brahm itself, remain intact. I have received both letters that you sent with Mayaram Bhatt and I am aware of the content. Do not consider Nilkanth Varni as an ordinary mortal man, as the austerities He has undertaken is not possible by any man. He could be a Mukta (liberated soul) from Shwetdweep or Badrikaashram. Do not go by His young age. Treat Him as your guru and learn the intricacies of Yoga like Neti, Dhauti, Kunjar, Basti etc. from Him which are pivotal for cleansing the body. Serve Him reverentially and learn Ashtang (eight pronged) Yoga in stages starting with (five) Yam, (five) Niyam, various Asanas, Pranayam, withdrawal of senses from mundane, mental serenity, meditation and ending with Samadhi. It is very important to master the Ashtang Yoga as Brahamcharya Vrat cannot remain intact without it. As Brahamcharya is the ultimate Vrat, one must preserve it at all cost by forsaking lust and avoiding women. Indeed, the scriptures define Lord Krishna's true devotees those who have overcome their senses by observing Brahamcharya Vrat. One must not look at, talk to or hear about a woman; not to speak about or hear the woman's characteristics or qualities. A Brahamchari must not go to places frequented by women and must not wear any clothes previously worn by a woman. He must not look at a picture or a statuette of a woman and neither should he make or draw pictures of a woman other than a goddess. He must not walk along with a woman on a road. He should maintain the distance of four yards if that is unavoidable. He must not stay or sleep in a house in which a woman is present. He should not even sermonise women directly. If needed, he could do that indirectly through another man. A Brahamchari must not go to the same place for a bath which is used by women. He must not think at all about a woman. A celibate must never touch a woman except in dire emergency. A strict celibate Yogi becomes reverential even to Devtas like Brahma. One must protect one's Brahamcharya at any cost. One must not give into the mental whims and desires and associate with a woman. Otherwise, he shackles himself to the cycle of death and rebirth.'

'A Yogi must forsake anger, ego, pride, envy, greed, jealousy, gluttony etc. as they are the obstacles in his Vrat. He must maintain a proper control over food and sleep and must give up the vices like gambling, consumption of meat and alcohol, stealing and enmity towards anybody. He must always observe non violence towards all living being, including self, by thought, speech and deed. One must never behave in a way which is against the Dharma of his Varna. O pious Muktanand! Such devout Yogis are very dear to me. I only like Yogis who venerate Lord Krishna by observing their religious ethics. You and all my other disciples should treat Nilkanth Varni as your guru and learn Yoga from Him. He may be the youngest amongst you, but do not let that be any hindrance in your servility. I will return in the month of Vaishakh and meet you at Piplana. Make sure that Varni does not leave Ashram till then.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Ramanand swami added a few words addressed to Nilkanth Varni as well.

Ramanand swami continued, 'O Nilkanth Varni! I received Your letter. The austerities You described in Your letter cannot be undertaken by any man. You seem to be a Mukta from Shwetdweep or Badrikaashram. Indeed, You may be Lord Narayan Himelf in person! My blessings are with You. Your austerity, detachment, knowledge, Bhakti, belief in observing religious edicts, strict observation of such edicts, serenity etc. are predestined. Therefore, it is not surprising that You have achieved so much at a young age. I know of Your desire to see Lord Krishna in person, but rest assured, Lord Krishna is exactly the same in person as what You actually see in Your heart. I will come to Piplana at the end of Vaishakh to meet You. Remain with Muktanand swami until my return. I know You want to meet me to fulfil Your desire for Lord Krishna's Darshan in person. It is not safe to travel to Bhuj at present due to the menace of dacoits. Do not even think of coming to Bhuj to meet me. I, too, have the same urge for Your Darshan. I would like You to remain in the Ashram and teach intricacies of Yoga to my disciples.'

'I like people who remain within the boundary of religious ethics. I pray to Lord Krishna to grant me the association of devout persons like You. I am never far from persons like You. The water that has been used to wash the feet of pious persons like You is holier than the water of Ganga. Whoever feeds an Ekantik saint like Yourself earns the Punya of feeding the whole universe, including all Devtas. Nothing is dearer to me than the pious saints like You, not even myself. O Varni! True saints like You are in my heart. Do not despair. Our meeting will surely materialise shortly, but You must not come here. Remain with Muktanand swami until my return. You have become very frail with harsh austerities. Henceforth, discontinue such harsh austerities. The body is the means to receive Lord Krishna's pleasure through Bhakti. Human birth is not possible without great mercy. A person who lets his body perish through austerities do not get the Punyas of his knowledge, Bhakti or indeed austerity. Therefore, look after Your physical body. I have thought of many things for You. Jai Shree Krishna from Ramanand swami.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "Ramanand swami gave the letter to Mayaram Bhatt who returned to Loj after seven days and handed the letter to Muktanand swami. Swami read the letter in the presence of Nilkanth Varni. Shree Hari understood Ramanand swami's wish and decided to remain in the Ashram. As advised by Ramanand swami, Varni started teaching intricacies of Ashtang Yog to Muktanand swami and other saints. The saints mastered everything Shree Hari taught them in a very short time."

Thus ends the fifty fifth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The month of Vaishakh passed by whilst Varni was teaching Yoga to saints at Loj. Varni was eagerly waiting for Ramanand swami's return. The first half of Jeth passed by without any message from swami. Varni was very restive and agitated. The unfulfilled expectation of swami's arrival was added to continuing austerities and it took its toll on Varni and he started loosing weight. At Bhuj, Ramanand swami prepared to travel to Piplana. Devotees of Bhuj venerated swami with moist eyes prior to his departure. He consoled his disciples as they stood on either sides of the road as swami passed by in a decorated chariot. They followed his chariot until swami asked them to return. Many of the disciples greeted him as he passed through their respective villages. Swami arrived at Piplana and made his residence at the home of Narsinh Mehta, one of his disciples. Ramanand swami sent a Brahmin named Kunverji to summon the saints from Loj. Kunverji reached Loj on the same day and relayed swami's message. Muktanand swami, Varni and other saints were elated at the prospect of guru's Darshan. Muktanand swami asked a few saints to stay back to look after the Ashram and the remaining others to accompany him to Piplana the same night. Nilkanth Varni, Devanand swami etc. saints and Parvatbhai, Jethabhai etc. devotees accompanied swami. Due to anticipation they walked at a brisk speed. As a result, the frail bodied Varni stumbled on the way and fell. When saints realised the absence of Varni among their midst, they retreated their way to find Varni lying unconscious on the ground. The saints brought Him round and asked Him to seek the help of Yoga to sustain Him through the tiresome journey. Shree Hari also realised that it is only way and summoned all His inner strength through Yoga. Once strengthened, Varni walked so fast, like an arrow from a bow that other saints could not keep up with Him even while running. They came across the River Ojaswati which flows on the south side of Piplana. Due to incessant rains, the river was flowing fast with undercurrents. Varni, in His haste for Darshan, jumped in the river and walked across, while all the others waited for a boat, realising that it was impossible for them to follow suit. While they crossed the river, Varni waited for them on the opposit bank of Ojaswati. They entered Piplana together."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! Muktanand swami, Varni and the others had Ramanand swami's Darshan at midmorning on Vaishakh Vad Baras (12th day) of Samvat 1856 at the home of Narsinh Mehta. Ramanand swami was attired in all white, his fair and muscular long arms showing through his robes. His forehead was adorned with a Tilak and Chandlo and smeared with sandalwood paste. His disciples had put numerous flower garlands around his neck. His large sparkling eyes enhanced the beauty of his round and smiling face. He was seated on a large Sinhasan surrounded by many of his disciples. Muktanand swami, Nilkanth Varni and the others prostrated at his feet immediately on the arrival at the assembly. Ramanand swami got up from his throne, embraced Varni affectionately and made Him sit near him. He greeted Muktanand swami and the others and offered them a seat appropriate to their respective status. Nilkanth Varni was very happy and serene at Ramanand swami's Darshan, especially as He found swami exactly as described by Muktanand swami. He lost the sense of time and place and glared at Ramanand swami without blinking for a long time. Ramanand swami also was glaring awestruck at Shree Hari. Ramanand swami asked of Varni's wellbeing when He regained the sense of surroundings."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Muktanand swami replied on behalf of Nilkanth Varni and told the assembly of his experiences of Varni. Ramanand swami extolled profusely the virtues of Varni. Nilkanth Varni spoke very lovingly to Ramanand swami, 'O swami! I am very happy at your Darshan. So much so that I consider the sole aim of My birth is fulfilled. I had planted the seeds of your Darshan in My mind which have fructified today. You propound Lord Krishna's Bhakti on this earth.' Ramanand swami arranged for fruits and milk for everybody as it was a day attached to Vrat Ekadashi.

O king! The first meeting between Ramanand swami and Nilkanth Varni was divine for one and all. Both of them, having attained the status of Brahm, looking at each other with moist eyes and speaking to each other so reverently was the sight to be behold. It was beyond any descriptions and adjectives. It was just divinely superlative!"

Thus ends the fifty sixth chapter of the first canto of the Satsangi Jeevan

CHAPTER-57

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Ramanand swami organised Lord Shree Krishna's special grand veneration in the evening. Swami asked Varni many questions pertaining to His birth, clan, parents, lineage, guru, the branch of Vedas and Ishtadev. He asked for the reason for Vairagya and leaving home, travels of seven years, austerities undertaken, acquisition of special knowledge and powers etc. Shree Hari replied very calmly to all the questions starting from His birth to the arrival at Piplana. Ramanand swami was very pleased to know about Shree Hari's life in detail and said, 'You too, are mine as Your father Dharmadev was my disciple. He was a great scholar of the scriptures and he, along with Your mother had become my disciple at Prayag by accepting initiation from me. He was preaching and propounding Lord Krishna's Bhakti and initiating other disciples into the fold on my edict. You appear to be better qualified than Your father. Your virtues are greater than Your father's. You plant the seeds of doubt in others' mind as if You are someone as beyond mortality and in the realm of divinity.' Knowing the blessings Ramanand swami had showered on His father, Shree Hari decided to make him His guru. As it approached midnight in small talk, a miracle happened. A brilliant white radiance emitted from Ramanand swami's body so bright that the darkness of the night gave way to the brightness of a day. Nilkanth Varni, Muktanand swami and the others were very surprised at this miracle. The same radiance subsided into Ramanand swami after a while and just as suddenly as it has appeared. Shree Hari understood that Lord Shree Krishna lives eternally within Ramanand swami's heart as Muktanand swami had described to Him earlier at Loj. Ramanand swami also accepted Nilkanth Varni as his disciple and kept Him with him."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Nilkanth Varni's Darshan evoked surprise to anyone who came for Ramanand swami's Darshan. Varni had all the virtues that are desired by Yogis but not attainable. Ramanand swami considered Nilkanth Varni as someone resembling Lord Krishna and sent by Him to propound and to protect Sanatan Dharma. Though Ramanand swami himself was the incarnation of Udhhavji, he did not realise the true identity of Lord Shree Hari. This was because Shree Hari wished so at this moment. Shree Hari's fame as an accomplished Yogi spread far and wide. Thousands upon thousands of people made their way to Piplana for His divine Darshan. Ramanand swami would point at Varni when asked to do so by visitors. Very surprised at His thin yet radiant frame, people repeatedly asked Ramanand swami whence this Brahamchari has come. Looking at His fine golden hairs tied in a bun, His visible veins and His serene nature, visitors asked repeatedly to Ramanand swami about His identity. They wanted to know the true identity of Varni sitting close to Ramanand swami Whose forehead was adorned by an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo, double stringed Kanthi around His neck and Yagnopavit across His torso. He was always meditating with closed eyes and was totally detached from worldly affairs. Ramanand swami would give the same reply to every query, 'This young Varni has arrived from the North Koshal region. I had given Diksha to His pious and religious parents. He was intelligent from a very young age. He studied the Vedas and other scriptures from His parents. He left His home and family to enhance the imbibed virtues like knowledge, Vairagya and Bhakti. He has undergone severe austerities in the middle of a dense forest and visited many shrines during His journey prior to His arrival here. Suryanarayan Dev, pleased with His austerity, has blessed Him. His single minded devotion in Lord Vishnu is comparable to that of Dhruv. His austerities are impossible to be undertaken even for Devtas. Do not be mislaid by His young age.' O king! Upon hearing the tale of young Varni, devotees and visitors would bow to Nilkanth Varni prior to returning to their respective towns and villages."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Looking at the qualities of Nilkanth Varni, Ramanand swami assigned Him the duty to collect artefacts needed for the veneration of Lord Krishna. Varni also made sure that He was at hand at the time of worship. Varni would clean utensils of veneration, whilst guru Ramanand swami bathed and gathered Tulsi leaves, sandalwood paste, incense, flowers, lamp, fruits etc just before the start of worship. Varni would bring anything Ramanand swami may want for veneration even before asking. Ramanand swami was very pleased with Varni due to His servility and faith in Lord Krishna. Lord Krishna personally accepted whatever artefacts Ramanand swami offered Him in Puja. None except swami himself was able to see Lord Krishna in person. Ramanand swami once pleaded with Lord Krishna to grant His divine Darshan to Nilkanth Varni as the virtuous and pious Varni had a profound faith in Lord Krishna. Granting swami's wish, Lord Krishna became visible (accepting Naivedhya from Ramanand swami) to Nilkanth Varni as well. Varni was elated at Lord Krishna's divine Darshan and surmised that this is the result of the services rendered to His guru. Gradually, Nilkanth Varni saw Lord Krishna appearing in swami's veneration regularly. Varni asked Ramanand swami once, 'O swami! How can I have Darshan of Lord Krishna in My Puja as well? When will Lord Krishna accept artefacts from Me just as He accepts them from you?' Ramanand swami replied, 'O Varni! Lord Krishna grants His Darshan only to those who have the utmost faith in Him and those who have accepted Bhagvati Diksha. This faith can be deepened by serving other steadfast devotee saints."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Nilkanth Varni started serving Ramanand swami with greater fervour and asked Ramanand swami to give Him Bhagvati Diksha after a few months. Ramanand swami concurred and Kartik Sud Ekadashi of Samvat 1857 was set aside for this purpose. Varni spent the previous day chanting the hymn of Lord Krishna while observing a fast. O king! Ramanand swami started a grand ceremony in the morning of Prabodhani Ekadashi to give Bhagvati Diksha to his favourite disciple, Nilkanth Varni."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Ramanand swami summoned one of his scholar Brahmin disciples to conduct the initiation ceremony on the morning of Prabodhani Ekadashi who conducted the rites of initiation as described in the scriptures. He seated Varni facing East and Ramanand swami facing North. In lieu of the three Kruchh Chandrayan Vrats as atonement for any unknown sins, he donated some gold on behalf of Shree Hari. He then arranged eight copper jugs, each placed at eight sides of a square decorated with wheat and colours. The eight copper jugs on each side were filled with water and covered with leaves and a coconut wrapped in cloth. He invoked goddess Durga, Vishvaksen, Suryanarayan, Garud, Ganapati, Hanumanji, Shiva and Shridama respectively, starting from the East, to be present in the eight jugs for the duration of the ceremony. He established a gold jug full of water which was covered by leaves and a coconut wrapped with a cloth in the middle of the square. The Brahmin invoked Lord Shree Krishna along with Radhikaji and Laxmiji to reside in that jug. The scholar priest guided Shree Hari in the veneration of Lord Krishna and other Devtas. They were accompanied by Vedic and Puranic hymns addressed appropriately to each Devta. Shree Hari offered Ghee, milk, honey, yoghurt and sugar mixed in saffron water to Lord Krishna and others as a ritualistic bath. Varni offered Naivedhya to all established deities before performing Aarti under expert guidance. The sound of Aarti, accompanied by musical instruments and singing by thronged devotees was echoed in the sky. The priest guided Nilkanth Varni to offer 108 spoonfuls of Ghee accompanied by the hymn 'Shree Krishnay Namah' in the sacred fire ignited specially for this ceremony. Ramanand swami gave Varni a Kaupin (loin cloth), two pieces of cloth for His Dhoti and to cover His torso along with a new double string Kanthi of Tulsi to wear. Swami did an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Chandlo on Varni's forehead with Sandalwood paste and Kumkum which were used in the veneration of Lord Krishna and Radha."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Ramanand swami spoke the hymn of initiation 'BrahmAham Krishna DasoSmi' gently into Nilkanth Varni's right ear. Ramanand swami, explained the true and correct meaning of the initiation hymn according to the Udhhav Sampraday to Nilkanth Varni.

Ramanand swami further explained, 'O Varni! The mortal body and the universe are said to be two 'Kshetra' (field). A soul dwelling in the mortal body has a limited intelligence and knowledge, while a soul encompassing the universe is Ishwar called VairajPurush. Both are 'Kshetragna' (the controller of the field) and are addressed as 'Aham' in this hymn. AksharBrahm, though distinct from both types of 'Kshetragna', is present in them and exist independently and separately from them at the same time. It is mentioned as 'Brahm' in this hymn. AksharBrahm, by the power obtained from and guided by the supreme God, controls all 'Kshetragnas'. This supreme God, beyond and distinct from AksharBrahm, is called 'Purushottam'. He incarnates Himself on this earth for the benevolence of the mankind. He removes the deep rooted ignorance of men by revealing His true form to them. He is addressed as 'Krishna' in this hymn. The divinity arising within a man following a loving and servile service of Lord Krishna is addressed as 'Das' in this hymn. The soul, though living with a corrupt mind, senses and sensual organs, can become free from them with Lord Krishna's profound Bhakti. This liberated soul becomes totally knowledgeable and need not achieve or learn anything else. Such a liberated soul is addressed as 'Asmi' in this hymn. O Varni! Just as the resident Muktas of Vaikunth, Golok, Shwetdweep or Brahampur are complete due to their blissful companionship of God, the men on earth can indeed have the same blissful state by serving God Who has taken the birth as human. This is the true meaning of this hymn. One can see Lord Krishna in the brilliant halo of one's soul by stopping the senses from wondering outwardly towards mundane things and concentrate one's senses within. Lord Krishna's such Darshan in one's heart is the reward of chanting this hymn.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Guru Ramanand swami continued sermonising after explaining the hidden meaning of the hymn."

Ramanand swami continued, ' O Varni! One must continue to obey all religious edicts until one has control over his body. You may have heard the same from Your father and indeed, I am sure that You are doing exactly the same. I still reiterate that You must obey all common religious edicts besides the specific ethics of a Naisthik Brahamchari, which I am just about to tell You. You must venerate Lord Krishna in your mind (Mansi) with imagined artefacts and physically by using the real artefacts. You must read the RaasPanchadhyayi (the five chapters describing divine Raas Leela of Lord Krishna in the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat) and a portion of the Vaasudev Mahatmya daily after your worship. You must not eat or drink anything without first offering it to God. You must always be engaged in chanting Lord Krishna's name or any type of Bhakti. Any time spent without remembering God is time wasted. You must listen to the scriptures which narrate the glory and greatness of Lord Krishna and this will enhance your devotion in God. In the absence of a narrator, You must read such scriptures.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Ramanand swami named Nilkanth Varni as Sahajanand - whose Anand (bliss) does not depend on any artificial or external circumstances but emanating naturally from within Narayanmuni - as His austerity, observance of religious edicts, traits and physical body resembled Lord Narayan of Badrikaashram following His Diksha. Shree Hari performed veneration and Pradakshina of guru Ramanand swami and followed that with veneration of saints including Muktanand swami, Brahmins like Mayaram Bhatt and other devotees at the conclusion of Diksha ceremony. Shree Hari stood in front of guru Ramanand swami with bowed head and folded hands. Ramanand swami was very pleased to see Narayanmuni in the garb of a celibate saint and requested Him to ask for a boon from him."

Sahajanand swami asked, 'O swami! If you are really pleased with Me, grant Me the boon that Lord Krishna appears in person every time I worship and accept all artefacts just like He appears in your worship. I ask that He accept My Naivedhya by emerging from Murti just as He accepts yours. I ask that Lord Krishna talks and laughs with Me.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Ramanand swami granted Him all He asked by saying, 'Amen'. They spent the whole night singing Lord Krishna's Kirtans. Ramanand swami organised a grand feast for Brahmins, saints and Brahamcharis and gave many gifts to the Brahmins the next day. From that day onwards, Lord Krishna appeared in person to accept whatever Shree Hari offered Him in worship. Shree was very pleased at His desire to see Lord Krishna in person being fulfilled. He gave good news to guru Ramanand swami. O king! Narayanmuni saw Lord Krishna in many forms; sometimes playing flute with Radhikaji, sometimes with His brother Balram, sometimes with Rukmini, sometimes with Arjun and sometimes on His own. Though Lord Krishna's true form is two armed, He often gave Darshan as four armed. Varni's love for Lord Krishna grew ever more. O king! Just to set an example to other ascetics, Shree Hari continued serving Ramanand swami with the same fervour as he served Lord Krishna.

Suvrat Muni continued, "Though Sahajanand swami served Ramanand swami as a disciple, guru Ramanand swami always thought of Sahajanand swami as his friend rather than a disciple. He always consulted Sahajanand swami in all matters, even in religious matters. Indeed, Ramanand swami even revealed his thoughts to Shree Hari. They both toured extensively to propound Ekantik Dharma. At some villages they would stay for five days, at some villages for fifteen days and at some other villages for a month. Whilst visiting various places around Junagadh region, they arrived at Jetpur. Unnad Khachar, the king of Jetpur was swami's disciple and very religious. Due to His numerous natural virtues like truthfulness, chastity, mercy, serenity, detachment, honesty, simplicity, satisfaction, compassion, power, equanimity, patience, knowledge, gentleness, strength, radiance, glory, faith, talent, intelligence, generosity, non accumulation, bravery, altruism, servility etc. Sahajanand swami became favourite of not only Ramanand swami but other saints as well. It is impossible to have all these virtues in a single person. Other saints, though senior to Sahajanand swami, treated Him with reverence. Two years passed by. O king! Ramanand swami decided to anoint Sahajanand swami as his heir before returning to God's abode. Though Sahajanand swami was very detached from worldly affairs, Ramanand swami considered Him to be best suited to take over his responsibilities.

Ramanand swami once said to Sahajanand swami in an open assembly, "O wise Narayanmuni! Listen to me reverently and do as I ask You. All my disciples are good devotees of Lord Krishna. I want You to make sure that they remain within the boundary of our Sampraday. You should ensure that they observe their ethics according to their Varna as described in the Vaasudev Mahatmya. You should guide them to serve and worship Lord Krishna as described by Vithhalnathji, the son of Vallabhacharya. All festivals and Vrats should be observed as per the almanac prepared by Vithhalnathji. O Narayanmuni! Other selfish and envious disciples of Ramanujacharya harassed me while I was at Shreerangpur. As a result, I gave up all outwardly insignias of Ramanuj Sampraday and started this new Sampraday as attested by the scriptures. However, in my opinion, the Shree Bhashya written by Ramanujacharya is a vital scripture to understand the true relation between three eternal entities; namely soul, Maya and God. Therefore, You should expound this scripture among devotees. You are my only suitable heir to take over this Sampraday. I had this idea since our first meeting. I understand and applaud Your detachment, I also know that You do not wish for any reward of my services, but You alone are capable of taking this duty. I ask You to accept jewels and wealth offered as gifts to You and to ride a horse, elephant or sit and travel by a chariot and other vehicles. Protect Muktanand swami and other saints from the inner enemies like greed and anger as You alone are capable of doing so. Amongst all my disciples, only You are able to resist the corrupting influence of wealth and woman. I have always thought in my mind that Lord Krishna have arrived taking Your form. You are as patience as Bhishma. I have decided to anoint you as the Acharya of this Sampraday as I am sure You will not allow any corrupting influences to enter this Sampraday.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Narayan Muni pondered for a while and said to Ramanand swami."

Narayanmuni said, 'O Lord! I know a disciple must obey the commands of his guru. It is age old tradition. However, I am very reluctant to obey your command of taking over the reins of the Sampraday. I believe that My Vrat of Naisthik Brahamcharya cannot remain intact and I will be defamed in this world. How could I possibly sermonise the group of female devotees when I could not even stand their smell. Many sages have transgressed from their Brahamcharya by the company of woman. Ekalshringi Rishi, who was not even aware of the distinction between male and female bodies, deviated from his strict Brahamcharya by the company of a woman. Lust arises in the mind of man from the company of woman which results in the anger. Anger makes man loose his discriminatory powers and mental equilibrium. The loss of intelligence surely pushes man towards the sins. Therefore, I fear being in proximity of women. One must never befriend or trust his mind, even when he considers that his mind is under his control. Look at the example of Sage Saubhari. His austerity of hundreds of years was wasted in a moment by a fickle mind. Just as an unfaithful wife plots her husband's downfall with the help of her lover, the mind sure digresses one from the path of righteousness with help of vices like anger, lust and greed. The mind is the source and den of vices like greed, lust, anger, fear and envy. Mind is the reason for the entanglement in the cycle of death and rebirth. Which wise person will trust his mind and why should he?

One must not trust the mind even for compassion towards others. He must remain detached thinking that all living being are under the spell of their Karma (actions). King Bharat lost his way when he allowed his mind to be diverted from God and be engrossed in a baby deer by compassion. It is better to jump in a fire or consume poison than associate with a woman. I do not like wealth either. Due to the greed of wealth, Sage Vashishtha and King Nimish cursed each other as a result of which, the sage had to be reborn as a son of a prostitute.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'The eight; place, time, deeds, company, Diksha, scripture, hymn and Ishtadev influence a person's intelligence. A person's intelligence becomes good when these are good and conversely his intelligence becomes corrupt when they are bad. The man's deeds are dependant on his intelligence and he reaps according to his deeds. Therefore, an intelligent person should endeavour to keep these eight good and forsake the bad; time, place etc. Just as the consumption of alcohol or drugs makes an ordinary or a scholar (or devotee) to sway under its influence, the company of wealth and woman makes a man digress from righteousness. The natural trait of wealth and woman is such that their proximity corrupts anyone. Therefore, I have no interest in either of them. I have spoken My mind. The rest is up to you. O guru! I can neither follow your command nor reject it. I am disturbed at both prospects.

You decide and tell Me what is better. Why do you want me to take over the reins of the Sampraday when you are still fit and able to do so? I will willingly obey your other commands.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Ramanand swami tried to reason with Narayanmuni again.

Ramanand swami said, 'Listen to me O Narayanmuni! I know your views on this, yet I want You to take over the reins of the Sampraday. Whatever I have decided is best for all. I do not decide anything without giving it a considerable thought. I am capable to bear the responsibility while I am alive, but what will happen after my demise? I have decided to return to Badrikaashram and before I do so, I want You to take over the reins of the Sampraday. I do not see any of my disciples competent enough to take over the reins. Please accept what I am asking. It is true that a Brahamchari is bound to transgress from his Vrat due to proximity of a woman. However, this is true for ordinary Brahamcharis. You are not amongst them. You are divine. You are able to remain steadfast even in the middle of a thousand women and a mountain of wealth. SuryaNarayan Dev has granted You the boon to protect Your Brahamcharya Vrat. He resides in Your heart to protect You from the vices like greed, anger, lust etc. I know Your capabilities and hence I would like You, rather than my other senior disciples, to hold the reins of the Sampraday. Other Brahamcharis indeed would be influenced and surely fall from their Vrat by just talking about a woman. Therefore, it is better for them to avoid the company of woman and wealth. You are capable of protecting the disciples' Dharma, please accede to my request.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Narayanmuni, though unwilling, accepted Ramanand swami's command. Swami was very pleased and made Sahajanand swami sit on his throne immediately and venerated with sandalwood paste, Kumkum, flowers etc. The atmosphere became festive with singing accompanied by the musical instruments.

of this Sampraday. He is full of divine virtues and is able to guide you on the path of righteousness and defend you from the influence of evil. Therefore, you must obey His edicts as from today. This is my command.'

Suvrat Muni said, "The whole congregation assented in unison. Ramanand swami was pleased with the positive response from his disciples. He turned to Narayanmuni Who was standing with folded hands and said, 'I am very pleased that You have accepted my command. I ask You to ask for a boon from me. There is nothing in this universe that I cannot grant so ask whatever Your heart desire.' Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Narayanmuni asked for the following boons.

Narayanmuni asked, 'Grant Me that My intelligence remain focused at Lord Krishna's feet all the time. I have read in scriptures that a man suffers the pain equivalent to thousands of scorpion bites. They suffer other various pains during their lifetime. O sustainer of disciples! Grant Me that I suffer the pain instead of your disciples, even if they are fated to suffer such pain. Furthermore, grant Me that none of your disciples will ever go hungry or unclothed even if it is written in their destiny. O swami! Grant Me the fortune to live always amongst Lord Krishna's virtuous devotees and never with the atheist, even if they are scholars. Also grant Me that My tongue is always engaged in singing the glory of Lord Krishna, My ears in hearing His Katha, My hands in His service, My heart in His memory, My eyes in His Darshan and indeed My whole body and all organs be used for His Bhakti in one way or other. Let Me never associate with irreligious or evil persons. Grant Me all these if you are really pleased with Me.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Despite being the supreme Lord, Who has taken birth independently as a man, Narayanmuni asked for boons from guru Ramanand swami to show the correct behaviour between a guru and his disciple. He asked for these boons just for the benevolence of His devotees. Ramanand swami granted Him all He asked. Visiting many villages after leaving Jetpur, Ramanand swami along with Narayanmuni, Muktanand swami and other saints arrived at village called Faneni.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Ramanand swami celebrated a grand festival to mark Mokshada Ekadashi (bright Ekadashi of Magsar month) and fed thousands of Brahmins the next day. He gifted gold, cows etc. to Brahmins the next morning. After having the daily routine bath in Bhadravati River, veneration etc., Ramanand swami sat in meditation in a secluded place of his residence. While meditating upon Lord HariKrishna, his soul left his mortal body to go to Badrikaashram to serve Lord Krishna as before. He was released from Sage Durvasha's curse. He departed this mortal world on Thursday, the thirteenth day of Magsar in Samvat 1858. Narayanmuni, watching guru Ramanand swami from a distance realised that he is no more. He called other disciples including Muktanand swami to inform them about guru's demise. Everybody was overcome with grief. Sahajanand swami showed great restrain and patience in a difficult situation and arranged for all rites of death. He took a ritualistic bath and massaged guru's body with sandalwood paste and offered the last veneration. He put guru's body on a bier decorated with flowers. He carried the bier with three other disciples and brought it on the banks of River Bhadravati. Other saints and devotees accompanying the bier, though sad, sang Vedic hymns and Kirtans with musical instruments. Devotees prepared a funeral pyre of sandalwood and Tulsi under Shree Hari's guidance. Shree Hari washed guru's body with clean water, garlanded, massaged with Ghee and placed it on the pyre and lit it. Shree Hari added some more Ghee to assist the fire to consume the body properly. The ashes were doused in water before being swept in River Bhadravati. Shree Hari and all the other disciples bathed in the river again before returning to Faneni village. Overcome by grief, they did not eat anything. Sahajanand swami sent many messengers to various places to invite disciples living far and wide. Many disciples departed for Faneni, while those who could not come to Faneni took a ritual bath on hearing the news of their guru's demise. They were intelligent enough to understand nobody lives forever, yet they were distraught at the news of guru's departure. Narayanmuni made suitable arrangements for distraught disciples who thronged Faneni. They listened to the discourse of the Bhagvad Gita every afternoon for the next thirteen days. Shree Hari gave up salt for twelve days. As per the scriptures, Shree Hari, as a celibate, continued to perform His daily routine of veneration, Jap, Homa etc. without touching anybody. He also observed ninth, eleventh and twelfth Shraddh rites according to scriptures by feeding and giving large donations to Brahmins and the scholar narrating the Gita. At the conclusion of the Shraddh on the twelfth day, the visiting disciples gifted Narayanmuni a lot of wealth. O king! Narayanmuni observed all rites pertaining to His guru's death properly and reverentially as described in the scriptures and guided by learned Brahmins. He invited all disciples to a special condolence meeting on the fourteenth day of Guru Ramanand swami's demise."

CHAPTER-1

Suvrat Muni said, “O Pratapsinh! Narayanmuni organised a large assembly at Faneni to pay condolences to Ramanand swami on the fourteenth day of his demise where large number of people turned up. Narayanmuni sat on a decorated throne on a raised dais. Mukundanand and other Naisthik Brahamcharis sat in front of Him. Other celibate saints including Muktanand swami took their seats behind the Brahamcharis. The Brahmin disciples such as Mayaram, Kshatriya disciples such as Mulji, Vaishya such as Parvatbhai and Shudras such as Kalubhai etc sat behind each group in hierarchical order. The female disciples like Ladkibai sat behind the men keeping some distance. When everybody was seated, Mukundanand Brahamchari and others bowed their heads and with folded hands said to Shree Hari, ‘O Narayanmuni! We bow down to You. O Sahajanand swami! You are our master now. O virtuous one! You are occupying the throne once graced by guru Ramanand swami. You are our guru and we are Your disciples. Please advise us as to what to do and what to refrain from? You surely know what is good for us. We will always be guided by You and we will obey all Your edicts.”

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! Sahajanand swami was very pleased with their humility and sincerity. He addressed them to strengthen their belief in Dharma and to encourage them to live religiously.

Sahajanand swami said, ‘Listen to Me very carefully O Mukundanand Brahamchari and others! I know without doubt that all of you are My Ekantik devotees. You are behaving as one should behave after being granted a human life. Ramanand swami has taught you the appropiate Dharma according to your Varna and Ashram. One has to follow that precisely and sincerely at all times. One must not do anything, however attracting and rewarding it may appear, which is contrary to the religion. You must forsake all irreligious activities, just as a wise person forsakes dirty water. What is Dharma? The code of conduct which is praised by the pious and honest scholars is called Dharma (ethical behaviour) and whatever is disapproved or criticised by them is Adharma (immoral behaviour). Anything one achieves in life; be it education, wealth, virtues, health and intelligence, can only be achieved by following the religious path. The ability to keep the five senses under control is the result of obeying Dharma either in this or the previous life. When one attains Heaven upon death by just thinking of treading the religious path, what indeed could be said of a person who actually behaves religiously? The wealth acquired by religious means can give lasting pleasures, while the wealth obtained by the foul means invariably causes trouble in the end. One becomes eternally blissful only by following Dharma. Therefore, one must not forsake Dharma even to acquire great wealth.'

'The devout wealthy person, who believes in the scriptures, celebrates various festivals regularly. These celebrations give him the sense of bliss at all times. As a result, their offspring become religious from the birth. One attains wealth, worldly pleasures, good health and true knowledge of Aatma and Parmatma only by following Dharma. Indeed, I truly believe that nothing is out of reach for the person who follows Dharma. Everything is possible for a religious person. Just as toads travel towards a full lake from a drying lake and just as thirsty birds flock to a full lake, the wealth always follow Dharma. In short, all the pleasures of this world like health, wealth and realm can only be acquired by following Dharma. Conversely, everything is destroyed by forsaking Dharma. The society at large prospers when it becomes religious and is destroyed by the prevalent immorality. Therefore, everybody must follow Dharma. The pious person achieves great fame in this world and attains eternal bliss in the next. Indeed, Dharma is man's true friend. Only Dharma goes with the soul when it departs from this body. None of their relatives - wife, children, parents, and friends - accompany him.'

'Dharma protects one who protects Dharma and destroys who forsakes it. Therefore, one must follow Dharma in thought, speech and action. One must never forsake Dharma by fear of life or criticism, not even to acquire wealth. One must not give up Dharma even when one's aspiration of happiness is not fulfilled. Instead, he should look at persons less fortunate than himself to coax his mind to follow Dharma as all misfortunes are direct result of not obeying the edicts of Dharma. The human life is as fleeting as a drop of dew on a tip of a grass blade. One must always bear this in mind and follow Dharma at all the time thinking that the life can be snuffed out at any moment. One should acquire wealth and knowledge as if he is never going to die and he should act religiously as if he is going to die the next moment. A day passed without following Dharma is a day wasted. He may be breathing but it is futile. A pious person considers himself to be wealthy even if he survives by begging, as his Dharma is his true wealth. O devotees! One must follow Dharma even if he desires materialistic wealth. Just as the nectar never forsakes the Heaven, the wealth never forsakes Dharma. This means that to acquire wealth one has to follow Dharma. The ignorance, which is the primary cause of the shackles of life and death, can only be overcome by following Dharma. Therefore, one desirous of Moksha must choose the path of Dharma and progress gradually from darkness (ignorance) to the light (enlightenment). Dharma can be divided into six categories; specific Dharma for one's Varna, Ashram, Varna and Ashram combined, subsidiary, causal and common. I will explain the common Dharma first as it must be followed by everybody. Forgiveness, compassion, non envy, chastity, piety, non violence, generosity and detachment are common Dharma applicable to one and all.

Forgiveness is not getting angry or thinking of punishing someone who causes physical or mental pain.

To protect and help someone - friend or foe - in distress or in their hour of need is called compassion.

Not to envy someone's fortune and to become happy at someone's misfortune, not to level false allegations against anyone and praising their even minor virtues is called Anasuya (non envy.)

To obey all religious edicts and refrain from consumption of foul substances like onion, garlic etc. and association with evil person is called chastity.

Piety is not causing any pain to anybody including self, even to undergo harsh austerity for one's betterment.

Non-violence means not causing any pain to any living being in speech, thought and action. All his actions are in accordance with scriptures.

To donate from whatever one has, however little; to help others is called generosity.

One must remain satisfied with whatever fate has given and not to covet other's wealth and not to get attached to the body, its relatives and its pleasures. This is called detachment.

I have explained in short the characteristics of Dharma which sustains the universe. I will now tell you the means by which one can acquire Dharma"

Thus ends the first Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-2

Narayanmuni continued, "Dharma, which I just extolled highly, can only be acquired with Shradhhaa, the profound trust in it. Even Devtas would not acquire Dharma without Shradhhaa. One cannot attain Dharma without Shradhhaa in it even if he donates all his wealth or undergoes very harsh austerity. All austerities and donations are futile without Shradhhaa in Dharma. Therefore, one must have full faith in Dharma. Even in materialistic affairs, one cannot achieve the desired result without faith in what he is doing. Though devotees are very pleased to hear Katha about Maya, Purush and Purushottam, they cannot be seen or touched. The acceptance of their existence is possible only with faith. Indeed, Shradhhaa is the origin of everything including knowledge and detachment. Dharma, wealth, desires and salvation can only be attained by having total faith in them. Once knowing the true disposition of Dharma and Adharma, one develops faith in the veracity of Dharma as a result of which one willingly follows the correct Dharma appropriate for his Varna and Ashram, which is the sole means of attaining Moksha. By donating his wealth to suitable recipients as directed by Dharma, his mind slowly becomes free from envy and malice as a result of which the knowledge of Aatma and Parmatma enlightens his mind. This knowledge soon frees him from the strong shackles of death and rebirth.

'O devotees! Following Dharma obediently with full faith goes unrewarded if not followed regularly. Religious deeds like the number of Mala and Japa must be predetermined and pledged to be performed regularly (this is called Niyam).

Observance of religious deeds within Niyams (regularly and under oath) is very difficult, especially for someone more interested in worldly pleasures and acquisition of wealth. Devtas have attained divinity by staying within their Niyams. The sun and stars in sky follow their respective Niyams just as the fire and the wind also remain within their Niyams. The ocean does not breach its limit due to its Niyams. The whole world survives because it is based on everybody observing their respective Niyams (designated mandatory behaviour). Wherever there is order, it is due to Niyams and chaos reigns whenever and wherever the Niyams are forsaken or broken. Therefore, a faithful devotee must observe religious edicts daily without fail to enhance his religiosity. According to scholars, there are seven elements to enhance the end result of Dharma. The place - shrines etc. -, time - early hours of a day etc. -, deeds - compliant with the scriptures -, wealth - acquired with right means -, Shradhhaa - faith in veracity of the scriptures -, suitability - by knowledge or austerity - and detachment - not coveting other's wealth. The wise must always remember that the reward of following their Dharma accompanied by the seven elements just mentioned is always pleasant whilst the reward for choosing bad elements is always bad. A person's affinity in Dharma or Adharma is the direct result of the type of person he associates with. Therefore, the person desirous of Moksha must always associate with pious saints. The company of evil persons gives rise to many vices while the company of pious enhances one's virtues.

'O devotees! The pious saint is one whose birth, deeds and education are chaste and one must associate with pious saint only after examining these three characteristics. The sinners become chaste on association with pious saints and even pious saints transgress and become sinners in the company of evil persons. The frequent sight, touch, talk and meeting with sinners are enough to corrupt the senses of any pious person. Indeed, one's human life is wasted in the company of such evil persons. A person's intellect can either be good or bad depending upon the people he associates with. The company of a pious person results in good intellect and the company of evil person results in bad intellect. Therefore, a wise person should keep company of pious, astute, honest and scholars. The right and wrong type of behaviour can only be understood through such pious saints. You must always understand and follow the correct Dharma by associating with pious saints. Guru Ramanand swami told us to know Dharma from the Vaasudev Mahatmya. You must always follow your Dharma whilst engaged in Lord Krishna's Bhakti.

'Dharma and Adharma; pious saint and evil person; truthful and conceited and the true form of Lord Krishna and His Bhakti can only be understood from good scriptures. Therefore, the study of such scriptures is vital even for the chaste devotees. Even the scholar's intelligence becomes blunt and he becomes lethargic towards Lord's Bhakti without the continuous study of scriptures. Blunt intelligence often results in attachment of the wrong things and diminished Shradhhaa; therefore, one must continue studying scriptures until their end. Let Me now explain the traits of good scriptures. The scriptures which conform to the Vedas and attest the human form of Lord Krishna and His innocence can be called good scriptures. Amongst a number of such scriptures I like eight; the Vedas, the Vyas Sutra, the Bhagvad Gita, the Vidur Niti, Vishnu SahasraNaam, the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran, the Vaasudev Mahatmya and the Yagnavalkya Smruti. One must study the treatise on the Bhagvad Gita and the Vyas Sutra (called Saririk) written by Ramanujacharya to understand Lord Krishna's Bhakti and servility correctly. As a result, one's mind becomes steadfast and incorruptible even after listening to contradictory scriptures. You must study treatise on Gita if unable to pursue both treatises. The matters of daily routines of rites and rituals, the secular business affairs and the codes of expiation should be understood only from the treatise on Yagnavalkya Smruti, written by Sage Gnaneshwar. The following three scriptures; the fifth and the tenth Cantos of the Shreemad Bhagwat and the Yagnavalkya Smruti, are dearer to Me among the eight scriptures I mentioned earlier. All My disciples must study and imbibe these three scriptures for their upliftment.

'O My devotees! You must obey all My edicts as explained and discard sorrow of Ramanand swami's demise like ordinary people. You must remember that such exalted person takes birth for the benevolence of mankind and depart from this earth independently. Their birth is not subject to the vagaries of Maya. Their death may mesmerise the ignorant, but the wise knows that this is just an illusion. Therefore, give up all sorrow and return to your respective villages as I am leaving for Dhoraji (a village) immediately. '

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Everybody became free from the sorrow of swami's demise upon hearing such a soothing sermon by Lord Shree Hari and went to their respective villages. His name 'Hari' (reliever) became justified as He relieved Mukundanand and other disciple's deep sorrow"

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Lord Shree Hari, the sole purpose of Whose incarnation on earth is for the benevolence of the mankind, proceeded to Dhoraji with few disciples. Many devotees greeted Him as he passed through their villages on the way. On His way to Mangrol from Dhoraji, He visited Bhader, Manavadar, Piplana and Agatrai. He stayed a day or two at many small villages along the way, where He gave sermons to local devotees on Sanatan Dharma, scriptures and the importance of leading pious life. As Ramanand swami suggested at the time of enthronement, Shree Hari travelled by vehicles like chariots, accepted and wore gold jewellery and expensive clothes gifted to Him by devotees and even spoke to female devotees to advise them. However, due to His profound detachment, He never got interested, attracted or attached to any of these worldly things including women. Shree Hari rested under a shady tree near a beach at the outskirt of Mangrol. Many devotees, among whom Govardhanbhai was the main, like Damodar, Ramchandra, Surchandra, Ratnajeet, Mulchand, Mansaram, Dhanji, Madhu, Anandji, Trikam and others came for His Darshan and to serve Him. They were joined by chaste female devotees like Rajani, Bhanu and others" To alleviate the paucity of drinking water forever, Shree Hari urged His devotees to clean and repair a large step well in Mangrol. He performed a Yagna to please Devtas on the occasion of a grand opening festival in the presence of all villagers and the king of Mangrol. He fed thousands of Brahmins on this occasion."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! A miracle happened there! As Mayaram Bhatt and other Brahmins were venerating Lord Shree Hari following the conclusion of the festival, they saw Him with four arms bearing conch, disc, lotus and mace. He appeared of a dark complexion, with radiant aura and wearing golden robes. They also saw, fair complexioned Dharmadev, with four heads, eight eyes, four legs and

They also saw fair complexioned Bhaktimata on His right holding a veneration tray in one hand and a flower garland in the other. Mayaram Bhatt and other Brahmins had this divine Darshan at Shree Hari's special goodwill. They realised that Shree Hari and Lord Vishnu, Whose Darshan they just had were one and the same. The divine Darshan vanished after a while and they saw Shree Hari alone seated on a throne. The Brahmins chanted the Vedic hymns at the conclusion of the veneration. O king! Mayaram and other Brahmins gave up worship of other deities and considered Lord Shree Hari as the supreme God, and became engaged in His Bhakti. Shree Hari gave this divine Darshan to the Brahmins to make their Shradhhaa in Him firmer and stayed in Mangrol until spring, spreading His gospel."

Thus ends the third Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER -4

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Meghji, one of the senior disciples of Ramanand swami lived in Mangrol, who had acquired many magical powers by swami's grace. He could independently go in Samadhi and come out of it as well. He could make his soul leave his body to go to God's abode and return after Darshan. He considered himself as Ramanand swami's best disciple and worthy heir to swami's throne. He started ignoring other eminent saints like Muktanand swami, Mukundanand swami and other disciples. He could not recognise supreme Lord in garb of Sahajanand swami. Once he came to the assembly and cussed at the saints and devotees to show his superiority. Shree Hari reasoned with Meghji that he should not insult the exalted saints, who were reverential even to Brahma and other Devtas but in vain. Shree Hari even warned him that his special powers would be of no use if he did not heed His advice. Meghji challenged Shree Hari, ' O Brahamchari! You are the new arrival, therefore, You should obey my commands, not the other way. I am one of the oldest disciples and I am the best! Shame on You! How dare You challenge me! I will show You my special powers by leaving my mortal body independently on the morning of the fourth day in the presence of everybody.' He dipped his hands in boiling oil to show his powers. Though the skin of his hands burnt fully, he did not suffer any pain due to his magical powers. Shree Hari could no longer bear the insults hurled at pious saints and accepting his challenge, said, 'O Meghji! If you succeed in your aim, we all will become your disciples, otherwise you will have to become My disciple. I will negate all your powers and will neither allow your soul to depart your body nor allow pervading your body."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Meghji, still smarting from the ruckus, returned home and invited all the Brahmins and saints from the outlying areas. He liberally donated his wealth and fed them stupendous meals for three days. He ignored Ramanand swami's disciples and saints due to malice. On the morning of the fourth day, Meghji sat with crossed legs and prepared to go to God's abode. The whole village tuned up to see the spectacle. He gradually concentrated the life force in his heart by his Yogic powers. As a prelude for the final departure, he concentrated the life force on top of his head. However hard he tried, his soul could not come out from his head. He tried hard to bring it back in his heart but alas, he could not even do that. All his magical powers did not help and his soul became trapped in his skull. As his soul was still in his body, he was in his senses, but as it was not pervading his body all his sensual organs became inert. He could not do anything with his limbs and his faculties and he became vegetative. A few of his relatives advised him to beg forgiveness from Shree Hari and saints as his condition was the direct result of the insults he had heaped on them. However, conceited and egoist Meghji did not heed their advice. He remained in this state for the next five days, until he could bear it no more. His ego vanished and he mumbled the request to call Sahajanand Swami immediately. The kind and merciful Lord Shree Hari came with Muktanand swami and a few other saints. By one divine look, Meghji's soul returned to its original status and he got up and prostrated at His feet and said, 'O Swami! I am Your disciple and servant. Please pardon me. I will remain forever indebted to You and will do as You ask."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Hearing such humble words of Meghji, Shree Hari said to him, 'Meghji! There is no need to end your life. Live happily by spreading God's gospel.' To the surprise of the present villagers, the merciful Sahajanand swami took Meghji with Him to His residence. This miracle was enough to convince the majority of Mangrol's populace that indeed Shree Hari was supreme God in the garb of Sahajanand Swami. Many of the villagers became His disciples while, others wanted further proof of His Godhead.

Thus ends the fourth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-5

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Thousands of Jain people approached Shree Hari with the view of having Darshan of their Tirthankars and added that they will become His disciples if their wish was fulfilled. Shree Hari looked mercifully at them and immediately they slipped into Samadhi losing all control over their bodies and becoming lifeless. They remained in Samadhi for quite a while in which they saw all their Tirthankars starting from Rhishabhdev as described in their scriptures. Looking at their lifeless bodies, the rumour of their death spread in Mangrol. Their relatives came to Shree Hari immediately and started crying on seeing motionless bodies. They pleaded with Lord Shree Hari to grant them life. Waking up from Samadhi just as quickly as they had gone in Samadhi, they were astonished at the Darshan of their Tirthankars. They realised that this miracle is possible only by the supreme Lord of the universe, who is Narayanmuni Himself. They forsook their old beliefs, relatives and became His disciples."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Many disciples of Shree Vallabhachrya, Nimbakacharya, Madhvacharya, Shankarachrya and Ramanujacharya also lived in Mangrol. Many of Mangrol's residents were devotees of Lord Ram, the sun, Ganapati, Shiva and various Goddesses. These people also heard of Shree Hari's miraculous powers of Samadhi and approached Him in groups indicating their interest in having Darshan of their Ishtadev in their hearts. Sahajanand Swami thought that if He fulfilled their desires, they will surely accept Him as the supreme God and will forsake the devotion of minor deities, the clutches of evil gurus and false practices of Adharma. With the sole purpose of spreading Sanatan Dharma and His Bhakti, Shree Hari ceded their request. He looked at them and in no time they slipped into Samadhi. The disciples of Vallabhachrya, Nimbakacharya and Madhvacharya saw young Lord Shree Krishna playing the divine flute in Vrandavan surrounded by cowherds. The followers of Ramanujacharya, saw Lord LaxmiNarayan accompanied by His many Parshads like Visvaksen, Nand, Sunand, Garud etc. while followers of Shankarachrya saw only a brilliant halo. Devotees of Lord Ram, saw Lord Ram sitting on a divine throne in the company of Laxman, Sita and Hanumanji, while Shaiv devotees saw Shiva and Parvati with his army led by Pramath. Similarly devotees of the sun, Ganapati, saw their respective Ishtadev in their heart while the devotees of Shakti (female power) saw images of various Goddesses in their heart. They were very pleased at the Darshan of their respective Ishtadev. When they woke up from Samadhi, they described to each other whatever they saw during Samadhi and understood that this Darshan was made possible only due to the mercy and blessings of Sahajanand swami. They abandoned their sects and gurus to take refuge at the lotus feet of Narayanmuni. They all became His disciples and took initiation in the Sampraday and vowed to obey all edicts of Shree Hari. Ramanand swami's other seniors disciples like Muktanand swami, Mukundanand Brahamchari etc. were so impressed with Narayanmuni that they also came to the conclusion that He indeed is our Ishtadev, Lord Krishna. Their Bhakti in Him became more steadfast after this realisation."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The Muslim ruler of Mangrol, Vajradin and his minister Kaji also heard about Samadhi. Kaji approached Sahajanand swami and said, 'You make the Darshan of everybody's Ishtadev possible in Samadhi. Make me see Mohammad, the messenger in my heart. We too will become Your disciples.' Merciful Sahajanand swami agreed and Kaji slipped into Samadhi. Kaji was very pleased to see Mohammad in his heart as described in his scriptures and became Shree Hari's steadfast disciple. The King Vajradin too became His disciple when he was convinced of the supremacy of Shree Hari."

"O king! Whoever came to Shree Hari upon hearing the news of Samadhi became His disciples by considering Him as supreme God. They gave up the consumption of alcohol and meat and adultery. They realised that adultery, stealing, violence, levelling false allegations and eating from the hands of non religious people were grave sins and refrained from them forever after becoming His disciples. The householder devotees refrained from touching other women, especially widows. The Brahamcharis who became His devotees took greater care in their observance of Brahamcharya Vrat by not thinking, seeing or associating with females. Married women devotees became more faithful to their husband while widow devotees started observing Brahamcharya Vrat like celibate saints by not associating with other males. All devotees started leading pious lives by the divine proximity of Lord Shree Hari. They became different persons. Just as God's abode Shwetdweep, though on earth, is distinct and different from earth, Narayanmuni's devotees, though living among other humans, were distinct and different from other humans. O king! God's divine attributes are difficult to comprehend by Devtas, man and demons. Lord Shree Hari espoused His divinity to such an extent that people coming into His contact abandoned evil gurus and their selfish misinterpretation of religion. Slowly but surely, Shree Hari spread Sanatan Dharma on this earth by negating and destroying Adharma."

Thus ends the fifth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! After bringing many people of Mangrol under His tutelage, Shree Hari thought of visiting other outlying villages. Vajradin and other people pleaded with Him to prolong His stay in Mangrol at which He assented and stayed for a further four months of Monsoon. The fame of His divinity spread far and wide. Many sages who had taken birth as a result of Sage Durvasha's curse also heard this from the travellers. They started arriving in Mangrol from various places with the sole desire for His Darshan. Shree Hari greeted them and arranged suitable hospitality. Many of these, through repeated sermons and Darshan realised that Shree Hari is indeed Lord Shree Krishna Himself however; many others could not make up their minds as yet. Shree Hari invited His other saints and devotees from far to celebrate the festival of Janmashtami in Samvat 1859. Celibate saints, Brahamcharis and householder devotees in large numbers converged on Mangrol at this invitation. Shree Hari greeted them all on their arrival and arranged for their hospitality."

"O king! Shree Hari woke up early on the day of Janmashtami and concluded His daily routine. He organised a grand celebration to mark the birth anniversary of guru Ramanand swami. Devotees prepared a Mandap using banana stems as four pillars and decorated it with fine fabrics and flower garlands under His guidance. At midnight, accompanied by singing and the playing of musical instruments, Shree Hari placed an idol of Lord Krishna in a cradle under the Mandap and performed a special veneration. He swung the cradle as saints sang Kirtans. The festivity lasted for a long time. Shree Hari took a seat on a raised dais towards the end of night. All devotees came and sat in front of Him in an assembly with their eyes glued on His divine face. Almighty Lord Shree Hari decided to grant His devotees the Darshan of His original form."

"O king! Suddenly a brilliant radiance equivalent to a thousand suns shining at the same time emitted from Shree Hari. He took His divine form. He was sixteen years old and dark complexioned, wearing yellowish robes, a large gems studded coronet with a single peacock feather on His head, a non-wilting flower garland in His neck, a brooch of a diamond called Kaustubhmani, a pair of fish shaped earrings on His ears, wearing gold jewellery like anklets, waistbands, bracelets and bangles. He was playing a flute with His hands. The devotees were surprised and pleased at such divine Darshan and offered special veneration. Some of the devotees slipped into Samadhi and saw Shree Hari as Lord Narayan of Badrikaashram in the garb of a calm ascetic in white robes with a Mala in His hand and hair tied in a bun on His head. On seeing Lord Narayan, everybody immediately prostrated at His feet. The Devotees started talking aloud amongst themselves and said that Narayanmuni is indeed Lord Krishna Himself. All devotees of the Udhhav Sampraday, who had travelled from far prayed to Him with folded hands, 'We are Yours! You are our only saviour! We have come unto Your shelter.' As dawn broke, Shree Hari took a bath and worshipped Lord Krishna and fed all the devotees. Many of the sages decided to stay behind to enhance their Bhakti in Shree Hari. Some of them were already observing Brahamcharya Vrat."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Lord Shree Hari arranged a grand assembly in the afternoon, where every devotee took their appropriate seat. Shree Hari sat on a large seat on a raised dais. His appearance in the midst of His devotees, was like a full moon surrounded by umpteen numbers of twinkling stars. The devotees, some individually and some in groups worshipped Shree Hari with flowers, sandalwood paste, Kumkum etc. and offered Him opulent gifts. The devotees were eager to hear soothing sermons from their Ishtadev, Shree Hari."

Thus ends the sixth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Mukundanand Varni and others asked humbly and reverentially, 'O Lord! You are the ultimate object of attainment for all humans, especially Your devotees. You are our guru. You are controllers of Time and Maya. Please guide us and narrate common and specific Dharmas for all Your devotees; Brahamcharis, householders, married and widowed women.' Shree Hari, upon being asked by His disciples, started narrating Dharmas for all as attested by the Vedas and other scriptures."

"Narayan Muni said, 'Listen to Me you all! I will describe your Ekantik Dharma as attested by the scriptures. You must all wake up early in the morning, at least one and half hours before sunrise. You must evoke God's and His devotees' names for some time whilst meditating upon Lord Krishna before attending to the calls of nature. O My devotees! Males of three Varnas (Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya) must perform a bath, Sandhya (veneration at dusk and dawn), chant of Gayatri hymn, Homa (offering to the sacred fire), study of scriptures, oblation to the dead ancestors and worship of God daily and without fail. be performed as described in the scriptures with appropriately available artefacts like flowers, sandalwood paste etc. One should remain satisfied with whatever food is available without indulging in the pleasures of the palate and eat it after first offering to Bhagwan. The elder amongst the saints or household should eat only after ensuring that all others have already been fed. He should show no favouritism towards anyone by serving them special meals. My devotees must observe fast on all Ekadashis and other festivals like RamNavmi, Janmashtami and Shivratri. They must not even touch meat, alcohol, Ganja, tobacco and other intoxicating substances or medicines prepared with them, let alone consume it.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'My devotees should read and study only those scriptures that narrate and substantiate various incarnations of God such as Varah etc. and His Bhakti. One should listen to the scriptures only from a wise and pious devotee but never from someone who is not a devotee or indulgent in vices. My devotees must not study even a theological scripture if it does not back up and substantiate the divine human form of Lord Narayan. Similarly, My devotees must never listen to a Katha from a woman, even if she is pious and chaste. One should chant and narrate the glory of God and His great devotees reverentially. One must habitually associate with the pious and devout, but never with an atheist. One must always behave humbly with saints and other devotees and listen to their advice. Never should they engage in futile debates, gossip, profanities and lies They should aim to associate only with those persons by whom Your Dharma, Bhakti and Vrats like Brahamcharya become firmer. Even a Brahmavetta (one who has acquired divine qualities) degenerates and is overcome by vices such as greed, lust and anger and falls from the path of Moksha if devoid of the company of pious devotees. One must never give up the company of pious devotees by the fear of criticism from ignorant or immoral people. My devotees must never associate with sinners, atheists, those who have deviated from their Vrats, even a theist who negates God's incarnations or His Saakaar (divine human) form. A person bearing all outwardly insignias of our Sampraday like Tilak and Chandlo but is secretly seeking wealth and woman, must be forsaken forever. My disciples must remain calm, not seek mundane pleasures, have faith in God and scriptures and develop

'O devotees! You must not be overcome by pride or indulge in mundane pleasures even after acquiring the true knowledge of the soul or having the Darshan of God in person. One must never replicate any misdemeanour of the past saints but follow only their pious behaviour as an example. Brahamcharya Vrat must never be allowed to be weakened or given up, even if advised to do so by anybody, even by one's guru. Dharma, Gnaan and Vairagya are Bhakti's head, heart and feet respectively therefore, none of them should be given up in the pursuit of Bhakti. The person who gives up his or her religious vows should be treated as an outcaste. My disciples must realise that the inner enemies like lust, anger, greed etc. are the gateway of Hell and should never pander them. A religious, detached, scholar and devout person should be treated on par with one's guru. One must hear repeatedly about the glory and pleasures of God's abodes such as Vaikunth, Golok, and Shwetdweep etc., His Parshads, His consort Radha and other staunch devotees who live with Supreme God there. It's (abodes') or their (devotees') memory at the time of death is redeeming. Even a Brahmavetta should remain engaged in all or any one of the nine types of Bhakti forever just as Sage Shukdevji. O devotees! One must conform to Dharma of appropriate Varna while accepting Prasad. Do not accept anything, even Prasad, if its consumption leads to the digression of Dharma of one's Varna or Ashram. Never give Prasad even to a devotee who does not ask for it or to an atheist. Never cause an affront to a poor devotee as it leads one to the cycle of birth and death.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'Be honest with pious saints by disclosing your faults and never boast about your virtues in front of others. My disciples must sit properly in front of and in an assembly in the presence of guru, king, God and His devotees. They must speak gentle truth and softly to these four and not divulge their secrets to others. Never kill or harm any living being including self. Do not steal, even with the intent to make a donation or a gift for God. Speaking the truth must be so gentle that it does not harm anybody. My devotees must not curse, insult or threaten anybody or level false allegations against anybody. They must go forward to the entrance of their village or town to welcome and greet their Acharya on his arrival and accompany him back in similar fashion on his departure from their village. They must not criticise anybody in front of pious saints or devotees due to envy or any other reason. My devotees shall only extol the virtues and never the shortcomings of any person, good or bad, in an assembly. As Brahmins are very dear to Bhagwan, they should always be respected. Upon seeing a temple from far, My devotees should bow with folded hands in respect to the resident deity of the temple. However, they must neither enter the places of worship of atheist nor read or hear their scriptures or debate with their Acharya. These Dharmas are common to all My disciples. Let Me now narrate specific Dharma applicable to each class.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'My Brahamchari disciples shall study the Vedas and serve their guru, Vaanprasthi shall perform austerities and non sacrificial Yagnas, Sanyasi disciples shall not keep anything of value, chant 'AUM' and venerate Lord Vishnu and My saints shall forsake wealth in all forms. All of them must observe the Brahamcharya Vrat sincerely by staying away from women at all times. They must not touch, look or make statues or images of female forms except that of a goddess. They must always keep the distance of at least four feet from females while walking in public places. However, as it is not possible to keep such distance during the great festivals, they must refrain from touching women at such times. They must not go to the places where ladies bath. Except in unavoidable circumstances, they must not live in a house which is adjacent to the house occupied by women and is separated by just a single wall. They must not go for the Darshan of Murtis of Lord Krishna which is regularly venerated by women. Except for seeking alms or attending a religious assembly, My Brahamchari and celibate disciples must not visit Grahasthas' homes. They must not sleep in a bed except during the illness. Except in detrimental times, they must not leave their residence nor walk during the night. They must never forsake the eighth element (direct and wilful embrace of a woman) of their Brahamcharya Vrat in any circumstance, even if staring death in face. Implying that death is preferable than falling from the Brahamcharya Vratt. They shall forsake ego, pride and attachment towards body just like JadBharat. Indeed, they must not transgress from their Brahamcharya Vrat even on My command.'

Shree Hari continued, 'My widow disciples should undertake additional Vrats during Chaturmaas as described in the scriptures. They must observe Brahamcharya just like My celibate disciples, not touching even the male statue except God's. If they have just enough wealth to sustain themselves for the rest of their life, they must not make any donation or religious contribution from that wealth. Married or widowed, young or old, My female devotees must always act under the advice of their father, brother, husband or son, but never independently. Indeed, they must not even go on a pilgrimage unless accompanied by a close male relative. Married women must treat their husband with respect normally reserved for God, even if they happened to be old, poor or blind. They must control their libido and protect their chastity. They must not act in any way which brings dishonour to their paternal or in-law's families.'

'My Grahastha (married male householder) disciples shall treat all women, except their wives, with respect due to their mother. They must talk with their female relatives only as much which is necessary. They may sermonise their close female relatives but it must be done in formal manner and at an appropriate time only rather than whenever and wherever. Except in emergency, my male devotees must not stay with their mother, sister or daughter in seclusion. They must always observe five Yagnas pertaining to Bhut (base elements), Pitris (dead ancestors), Dev (God), Brahm (other Deities and Brahmins) and Manushya (feeding poor men) daily. They must treat saints and pious persons reverentially. They must donate part of their wealth to suitable recipients. Donations can be defined as giving what is dear to one (except their wife) to a suitable recipient without ego, anger, envy and hypocrisy. My wealthy householder devotees should undertake special religious activities like organising non sacrificial Yagnas, gifting wealth to shrines and Brahmins etc. and social activities like building lakes and digging wells. The kings among My devotees must look after their subjects like their children. They must conduct their polity without killing any living being, except in the time of war.'

'O My devotees! One must undertake atonement for any transgression from any of the Niyams which has been described above. Bhagwan is pleased immediately by obeying your appropriate Dharma with knowledge and Vairagya without ego and hypocrisy, serving Him and His devotees reverentially, showing mercy and compassion towards all living being, forsaking vices like anger, greed and lust etc. and leading someone towards God. Have no doubt about this.'

'The human body is the stepping stone for the Heaven, Moksha or indeed anything that one desires. The soul can swim across this illusionary universe by acquiring the knowledge about God from the pious saints and attain salvation through His Bhakti only through the hard to get human body. The human body is a boat, a guru is a helmsman and God is the favourable wind. Why would any man not desire salvation after such a splendid combination? The mundane pleasures are easily available in each and every life form, but salvation can only be obtained in the human life. Therefore, the wise must observe Dharma whilst engaged in Bhakti. One must not waste a moment without Bhakti or wait a moment longer to do Bhakti because one is not sure when death will strike. Even Devtas wish for a human body which is available only after the exemplary mercy of God. The man, despite getting the human body, who finds excuses of unfavourable time, fate or meanness of God in not observing His Dharma or engaging in God's Bhakti, never attains God and remains perpetually shackled in the cycle of birth and death. Therefore, My disciples shall remain engaged in Bhakti whilst observing Dharma of their respective Varna and Ashram with Shradhhaa. My devotees shall undertake these six; bath, meditation, worship of God, Japa, singing or listening to Kirtans and association with pious saints daily without fail. O My wise devotees! You must always act within your respective Dharma till the body permits and never act contrary.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The devotees were very pleased to hear Shree Hari's soothing sermon and said, 'O Lord! We will always act as You have directed.' Realising that Shree Hari is none other than Lord Krishna, they affirmed their faith in Him and engaged in His Bhakti by acting as directed by Him. This sermon is called 'Narayan Gita' as it has been delivered by Lord Narayan Himself therefore; it has a place of pride amongst other scriptures.

O king! Whoever reads this Narayan Gita with due reverence will have all his desires fulfilled. The life of a man is worthwhile only if he lives according to the Dharma described herein."

Thus ends the seventh Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-8

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari asked His householder devotees to return to their respective towns and villages which they duly obliged after prostrating at His feet. He asked Mukundanand swami, Muktanand swami and a few other saints to remain with Him while asking others to form groups and travel various places to spread His true identity and gospel. After asking King Vajradin and the people of Mangrol once again to observe their respective Dharma, Shree Hari arrived in a village called Kalvani. He made His residence at the home of Jivansharma, one of His Brahmin disciples. The Brahmin disciples like Meghji, Laxman, Bhimji, Raghunath, Ambaram, Yadav, Jayram and other Vaishya devotees like Parvatbhai, Rajabhai, Jivraj, Ghelasha, Jethabhai, Mulji, Rhado, Khodo, Jetho, Jutho, Krushna, Madhav, Ambo, Keshav, Laxman, Vashram and other and female devotees like Tejasvati, Magha, Fulli, Hira, Jivanti and many other unnamed devotees of Kalvani became engaged in reverentially and humbly serving Shree Hari and accompanying saints.

"O king! On an earlier visit to Kalvani, Lord Shree Hari had made many devotees undergo Samadhi and blessed them with the knowledge of intricacies of Yoga. As a result, they were able to hold their breath for a substantially long time and leave and re-enter their body as they will. Even some children had acquired these abilities with His blessings. The devotees were much surprised and pleased when they underwent collective Samadhi for the first time. They slipped into Samadhi immediately looking at Shree Hari. Some were sitting cross legged, some in Padmasan, Virasan, Swastikasan or Vajrasan while some went into Samadhi lying down. Their bodies became inert and lifeless as if they were made of wood or stone and remained in Samadhi for a time ranging from a short while to up to four months. Shree Hari brought some devotees back from Samadhi by calling out their names while some were woken up as and when He thought of it. Some of them were so engrossed while in Samadhi that they declined to return even after Shree Hari asked them to, therefore He used His powers to make sure that such devotees return from Samadhi."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The devotees coming back from the Samadhi described whatever they saw in Samadhi to others. They described God's various abodes like Brahampur, Shwetdweep, Vaikunth, Golok etc. and their opulence which they had visited during the Samadhi. Some of the devotees visited the abodes of various deities like Pradhyumna, Anirudhha, Sankarshan, Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva etc. and they described them exactly as they had experienced. Some described how this and other universes are formed and annihilated and some described the glory of Badrikaashram and other God's abodes. Some managed to see inside their own bodies and were able to describe the arrangements of internal organs as it is. Some described the geography and astronomy of the universe as they saw in Samadhi. The descriptions they gave were not superficial but very detailed."

"O king! Lord Narayanmuni was able to see the maturity and firmness of resolution of various devotees after listening to their experiences of the Samadhi. He helped eradicate immaturity of their abilities in Yoga and to become more resolute. Shree Hari taught some devotees a special intricacy of Yoga by which they could withdraw their life force from the whole body and establish it in a small part of their body like a fingertip or an eye. The rest of their body became immune to any pain from cuts and burns. He taught some devotees Akshiyoga, by which one could see only outward with one eye while with the other eye they only saw within and then reverse the process so that previously outward looking eye now focuses inward and vice versa. He taught some devotees the art of withdrawing the sight from both eyes inward and concentrate on the soul while to other devotees He taught them to concentrate their sight on a single object for a long time without blinking. In this art of Yoga, all their other senses become blunt and inert. He taught some devotees to meditate upon one of the six Chakras (places of life force) and hear the deep sound from within the body while to some He taught to listen to the sound of 'Aum' whilst meditating upon one of the six Chakras. He showed some devotees how to proceed to the abode of the sun and moon."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! He sent some devotees to Hell to show His exemplary powers. They saw the prisoners of Hell vacating their cells upon hearing and chanting 'Swaminarayan', 'Swaminarayan' and becoming free from the penalties of Hell. Just as a newly crowned king frees the prisoners from his prison, Lord Shree Hari freed all prisoners of Hell on being enthroned in place of Ramanand swami. Shree Hari enabled His devotees to master the intricacies of yoga without any effort. The expert devotees now could enter someone's body and read their thoughts and help someone slip into and recall from the Samadhi independently just like Shree Hari. O king! Shree Hari re-established the lost art of Yoga and made it widespread. The news of His ability to teach Yoga and Samadhi spread far and wide. Whilst sitting on a throne in an assembly, Shree Hari often guided some devotees into Samadhi and accompanied him to show him the opulence of whichever abode the devotee wished to see. Hail to Bhagwan Shree Hari, the son of Dharma and Bhakti!"

Thus ends the eighth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-9

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! This time Shree Hari stayed in Kalvani for three months. Narsinh Vipra of Piplana and Narayanji Vipra of Akha village arrived together for Shree Hari's Darshan at Kalvani. Both of them simultaneously invited Shree Hari to visit their respective villages at which He duly obliged. Shree Hari left Kalvani after celebrating the festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi. Mukundanand swami, Muktanand swami and a few other saints accompanied Him. When He arrived at the outskirt of Akha village on the bank of River Ojaswati, Shree Hari independently and willingly transformed himself into two forms so that He could fulfil His promise to visit Akha and Piplana simultaneously. O king! Shree Hari maintained these two forms for six months for His stay in two villages. The Brahmin devotees like Narayanji, Ramji, Govind, Kunverji, Narsinh, Parmanand, Kalyan, Kalo, Raghu etc., other numerous Kshatriya and Vaishya devotees and female devotees like Jeeva, Ladini, Mithhi, Rukma, Laadu etc. from two villages were engaged in His services. They too became independent in the ability to slip into and return from Samadhi with the blessings of benevolent Lord Shree Hari. On the full moon day of Kartik, Shree Hari held the festivities to mark the birthday of Bhaktimata. The devotees offered special veneration to Lord Shree Hari with flowers, sandalwood paste, Kumkum etc on this occasion and gifted Him cloths, money and jewellery. To the surprise of everybody present, Narsinh Vipra gifted Lord Shree Hari with quite a lot of money. Shree Hari organised a grand Vishnu Yagna on the bank of River Ojaswati with this money and invited many scholar Brahmins and devotees to participate in this Yagna. He supervised the erection of a grand Mandap, and a place to offer oblations to the sacred fire. The scholar Brahmins offered a grand veneration to Lord Vishnu under His guidance and supervision.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Thousands of scholar Brahmins expert in rites and the process of veneration had arrived at Piplana on Shree Hari's invitation. Bhagwan Shree Hari asked some of them to chant the Gayatri hymn and other Lord Krishna's hymns while others were asked to recite the Vishnusukta, Laxmisukta, VishnuSahasraNam, NarayanKavach, Bhagvad Gita, Shreemad Bhagwat, Vaasudev Mahatmya, Sam Veda and the Upanishads like Kath and Mundak. He asked some Brahmins to recite only the tenth canto of Shreemad Bhagwat while He recited the eight syllabled hymn of Lord Krishna. All the Brahmins were fed and gifted clothes, ornaments, money etc. at the conclusion of the Yagna. Shree Hari also gave money for their daughters' wedding and sons' sacred thread ceremony. He asked thousands of Brahmins to stay behind in Piplana for six months and fed them daily. O king! This (Vishnu Yagna and feeding Brahmins for six months) was impossible for any ordinary man to accomplish.

"Shree Hari left Piplana and Akha on the bright tenth day of Jeth for Meghpur after merging His two forms into one. He sent back His many devotees who had come to bid Him farewell and travelled with the devotees of Meghpur who had come to invite Him to their village. Jetho, Raghunath, Amarsinh with his three sons - Ranchhod, Nand and Krishna, Ramji, Jeevo, Narayanji and other males and Ladki, Valli and other female devotees of Meghpur were happy to get an opportunity to serve their Ishtadev, Lord Shree Hari. Shree Hari taught Yoga and blessed them with the ability to go into Samadhi independently. He helped a Brahmin named Ravji to become free from his massive debt by giving him money. Shree Hari stayed in Meghpur for two months before arriving at Manavadar to enjoy the hospitality of Mayaram Bhatt."

"Mayaram's younger brother Govindram and Ambo, Jivo, Shamji, Kalyanji, Laxman, Jasho and other devotees took it upon themselves to serve and please Shree Hari. Mithi, Ratnavati and other female devotees joined them in Shree Hari's service. Narayanmuni, just as He had earlier done at Mangrol, organised a grand, festive celebration of Janmashtami in Samvat 1860. Thousands of householders and many celibate saints arrived at Manavadar for Shree Hari's Darshan. Followed by the fast during the day, Shree Hari worshipped young Lord Krishna at midnight. He fed His devotees, saints and many Brahmins the next day and called an assembly in afternoon, where His devotees, including ladies, took their appropriate seats in front of Him. He sat on an ornate throne on a raised dais. The devotees worshipped their Ishtadev, Lord Shree Hari, by smearing sandalwood paste on His forehead and offering flower garlands and gifted Him expensive clothes and ornaments. Mayaram Bhatt approached Shree Hari with bowed head and folded hands and spoke humbly."

Thus ends the ninth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Mayaram said, 'O Bhagwan! Your mercy knows no bounds! Your blessings remove Your devotees' pain and sorrow. Listening to Your Leelas redeem sins of many past births. O Narayan! I, Mayaram Bhatt, bow to You in speech, mind and body. O Bhagwan! You know everything that is to be known. I know that You have taken the birth only as a favour to us. Your Bhakti is totally benevolent to all living beings of this earth. Please advise us how can we preserve and enhance our Bhakti in You so that we could attain Moksha with it."

Suvrat Muni said, "Upon Mayaram asking Shree Hari about the ascent of Bhakti and its fructification, He replied, 'Bhakti that is not driven back by any of the hindrance amplifies and is rewarding to the Bhakta. However, Mayaram! Adharma is the greatest obstacle in Bhakti which can only be overcome with Dharma. The vices like ego, hypocrisy etc. are products of demonic tendency while the virtues like knowledge, detachment etc. are products of divine tendency. Therefore, for Bhakti to grow unhindered, Adharma must be defeated with the help of Dharma, otherwise Bhakti wilts in a very short time."

Suvrat Muni said, "As Mayaram wanted to know more, he asked Shree Hari again, 'O Bhagwan! How do Dharma and Adharma propagate? What are their traits? Please explain to me in detail.' O king! Lord Shree Hari, upon Mayaram Bhatt's request, prepared to answer."

"Narayanmuni replied, 'Brahma arose from the navel of VairajNarayan and as asked by Bhagwan, started the process of creation. He created Devtas, demons, humans, plants, animals, mountains etc. just as they were created in the previous process of creation. Adharma was created from Brahma's back. Adharma grew extensively and spread in the society with its associated vices. As a result, people became shackled in the cycle of birth and death. Adharma's strength lies with untruthfulness, jealousy, non-ending desires, animosity, attachment to the self etc. which are difficult to surmount by an ordinary man. Other prominent vices are hypocrisy, greed, envy, lust, anger, pride, cruelty, stealing, tendency to quarrel, gambling, drinking, non belief, laziness, palate, fear, lack of trust, violence, ignorance, cheating, tale telling and stupor. Each vice is as capable as Adharma as a whole. Demonic people associate with these vices but the devout must stay away from each and every vice. Brahma was very worried about the bad influence of Adharma on people and as he was searching for a remedy, Dharma arose from the radiance of his heart. His face was like a full blown lotus, his eyes like its petal, his feet and arms were soft and pink complexioned. He was wearing white robes and garlands of scented flowers. Lord Narayan always lives in Dharma. Dharma won over Adharma with knowledge. Faith, peace, mercy, satisfaction, equanimity, intelligence, compassion, devotion etc. are Dharma's strengths which help it to ascend. Other virtues like knowledge, detachment, fearlessness, austerity, truth, similitude in thought, speech and deeds, patience, control of senses, reverence, leniency, memory, humility, forgiveness, meditation, effort, study and belief in sanctity of scriptures etc. are associated with Dharma. Each and every virtue is just as strong as Dharma as a whole. The nine types of Bhakti also arise from Dharma. The person desirous of happiness should associate forever with Dharma without forsaking any of the virtues.'

'O virtuous Brahmin! The traits of Dharma and Adharma are distinct and always remain separate. They live within virtues and vices respectively, just as a tree lives within its seed (and germinate with favourable conditions). Anything arising from Dharma is a virtue while anything emanating from Adharma is called vice. One who overpowers the vices with the help of virtues and engages in Bhagwan's Bhakti attains happiness and his goals. Therefore, My devotees must always associate with Dharma without indulging in worldly pleasures. The five; greed, lust, taste, attachment and ego, are greater vices. Other vices can be prevailed upon by overcoming these five. They are the main obstacles which deviate the devout from the path of righteousness and association with any one of these five vices leads other four to come as well. The Shreemad Bhagwat and other scriptures describe the notoriety of each vice as complimentary to each other and insurmountable. Therefore, My devotees must stay away from these five vices and engage in Lord Krishna's Bhakti. Do not be under false impression that they cannot harm one who has control over his mind and senses. Numerous virtues are simply negated by any one of these vices. Many virtuous saints, who thought that they had their senses under their control, have suffered ignominy through these vices.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'A great Sage Vasishtha and religious King Sahasrarjun were defeated by greed. Brahma, Indra, Sage Saubhari and King Nahush, though all being virtuous, have suffered ignominy due to lust. Sage Hrishyshrung and many other Brahmins and kings transgressed from the path of righteousness because of the indulgence in taste. Bhagwan Rhishabhdev's son, King Bharat, fell from the grace by getting attached to a baby deer even after giving up the kingdom of earth. Ego defeated Daksha Prajapati and Sage Durvasha. These are just the examples! Many more Devtas, kings, sages and scholar Brahmins have been overwhelmed by one or other vice. If such eminent persons suffered ignominy due to such vices, what indeed can be said of an ordinary devotee? Therefore, I reiterate that My devotees must overcome these five vices and always remain alert against their influence on their Bhakti. Bhakti of a devotee fructifies and leads to the ultimate goal of salvation only if he associates with Dharma and forsakes Adharma. This is the only way to enhance ones Bhakti in Lord Krishna."

Thus ends the tenth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 11

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Mayaram was not yet satisfied! He wanted to hear more. He asked Shree Hari again, 'O merciful Lord! You think of our benevolence at all time. You mentioned five great vices which managed to overwhelm even great sages like Vasishtha. I would like to hear tales of their travails in greater detail. Bhagwan Shree Hari accented."

"Narayanmuni said, 'The Mahabharat, the Shreemad Bhagwat etc. describe travails of Sage Vasishtha in great detail. I will narrate it in short. Once upon a time, King Nimi, born in the clan of the sun, appointed his guru Sage Vasishtha as the head priest for a Yagna. The sage said to the king after the Yagna had started, 'O king! Indra, the king of Devtas, invited me for his Yagna before the start of your Yagna. Let me attend to that Yagna first. You may continue with your Yagna and wait for me. I will come and conclude your Yagna after completion of Indra's Yagna.' Saying this, Vasishtha went to attend Indra's Yagna. Realising the temporary nature of a human life which may end at any time, King Nimi concluded his Yagna with the help of other sages rather than wait for his guru. When, on his return, Sage Vasishtha saw that the Yagna had been concluded in his absence, he was enraged at the perceived loss of income he would have received as a head priest and cursed King Nimi, 'O king! You consider yourself a scholar. May you die at this moment!' The King was very angry at the injustice meted out to him and cursed his guru in return, 'O Muni! You have transgressed from the path of righteousness due to your greed. May you too die at this moment!' O Mayaram! Both of them died due to each other's curse. The other Brahmins present bought King Nimi back to life with their powers but the king had lost all will to live. Brahmins gave him the divine form which till today can be seen as a blink of our eyes. Sage Vasishtha, on other hand, was feted to take birth as a son of a celestial dancer Urvashi and became known as a son of a prostitute. O Brahmin! I just narrated shortly how Sage Vasishtha was overcome by greed.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'Now I will narrate you how a very powerful king, Sahasrarjun was overwhelmed by greed. He was born in the clan of the moon and was a devotee of Bhagwan Dattatreya. His original name was Arjun and he was very brave. He was granted a hundred arms by the blessings of Dattatreya and become invincible on the battlefield. He became known as Sahasrarjun (one with thousand arms) and ruled the whole world. Once, on a hunting expedition, the king lost his way in the dense forest and arrived at Sage Jamdagni's hemitage. The sage greeted the king and showered great hospitality to him and his army. The king was astounded as to how an ascetic, living in the middle of a forest was able to welcome him with such opulence. On making enquiries, he found out that this opulence was due to a cow called 'Kamdhenu'. He was overcome with greed, when he realised that Kamdhenu could grant whatever one desires. Despite objections from the sage, King Sahasrarjun forcefully brought Kamdhenu to his capital, Mahishmati. When Sage Jamdagni's son Parshuram returned from his education, he was incensed at the injustice of the king. Armed with an axe, Parshuram stormed to Mahishmati, killing the army of eighteen hundred thousand soldiers. He brought Kamdhenu back to the hermitage after beheading King Sahasrarjun. Sage Jamdagni, instead of being pleased, was distressed. He told his son, 'O Ram! What have you done! We are Brahmins. We have become reverential to all only because of our forgiveness. Brahma has become great due to his forgiveness. Even Bhagwan loves clemency. You have committed a grave sin. Killing a coroneted king is graver sin than killing a Brahmin. You must atone this sin by going on pilgrimage for one year.' Parshuram went on a long pilgrimage as ordered by his father, only to return to the hermitage after one year. Once, Parshuram and his brothers had gone into forest leaving the hermitage unattended. The sons of King Sahasrarjun were waiting for such an opportunity. They stormed the hermitage and beheaded Sage Jamdagni, bringing his head back to Mahishmati. Parshuram ran back to the hermitage on hearing his mother Renuka's wails. He stormed to Mahishmati and killed five thousand sons of King Sahasrarjun. The river of blood flowed and five thousand heads rolled through the city. He brought his father's head back to hermitage and established him with other the six great Rishis in 'Saptarshi' (one of the constellation in the sky). Parshuram was enraged by the injustice of the arrogant kings, that he toured earth twenty one times to kill any Kshatriya he encountered. O Mayaram! The greed of King Sahasrarjun became the cause of the death of his five thousand sons and the entire Kshatriya Varna. Many other kings and sages have brought harm upon themselves by their greed. After narrating the tales of the greed of Vasishtha and Sahasrarjun, I will now narrate how Brahma, Sage Saubhari and others have been affected by lust.'

Thus ends the eleventh Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Narayanmuni continued, "Once, Brahma, the creator, was attracted to his own beautiful daughter Saraswati. As he was about to embrace Saraswati, she took the form of a deer and ran away. Brahma, unashamedly and overcome with lust, took the form a deer and ran after his daughter. Marichi and his other sons stopped Brahma on his tracks and scolded him, 'O father! None of previous Brahma had done anything similar and nor will any other Brahma to come. Your daughter is running away from your unsolicited advances and you are running after her! How shameful! Even an ordinary person would not go to such length! It does not befit for a person of your eminence as you yourself have established the codes of religious conduct of each and everyone. Besides, ordinary persons may imitate your actions by considering them to be normal behaviour.' Brahma realised his mistake and ended his life because of shame and dishonour. O Mayaram! Even a person of Brahma's stature behaved worse than an animal due to uncontrolled lust at which even today, people shake their heads in disapproval. Now listen to the tale of how Sage Saubhari was defeated by the lust despite his severe austerity of thousands of years."

Narayanmuni continued, "Wishing not to be perturbed by any external forces, Sage Saubhari entered the waters of River Yamuna and started his austerity. After thousands of years, once he saw a pair of fishes enjoying the act of copulation. He was overcome by lust and his mind now thought only of a woman. He gave up his austerity in the pursuit of marrying a woman. He approached King Mandhata and asked him for one of his fifty daughters in marriage. Looking at the sage's wrinkled old body, but at the same time not wanting to offend him, he said, 'I will concede your request, provided any of my daughters are willing to marry you.' He asked the sage to talk to his daughters. Sage Saubhari realised that the king did not want an old man for his son-in-law. With the help of his divine powers, he took the form of a young handsome man. He turned out to be so handsome that all fifty maidens decided to marry him. The Sage brought all fifty wives to his Ashram where he constructed fifty palaces with his divine powers. He engrossed in sex with his fifty wives losing track of day and night and ended up with five thousand children. O Mayaram! Sage Saubhari fell from the path of austerity due to the indulgence in lust. Now listen to the tale of Indra, the king of Devtas."

Narayanmuni continued, "Once, while flying by the earth, Indra saw Ahalya, the wife of Sage Gautam, bathing in River Ganga. He was smitten by her beauty and his mind lost balance. He followed Ahalya to the hermitage but was afraid of the displeasure of Sage Gautam, so he hid in a bush waiting for an opportune moment to make his move. When sage went to carry out his morning routine, Indra took the form of Sage Gautam and cavorted with Ahalya. The sage saw through the deceit of Indra frolicking with his wife. He cursed Indra, 'O Indra! You have committed such a grave sin in your pursuit of sex. I curse you that thousands of bleeding vaginas sprout on you!' The sage's curse became reality and Indra suffered a lot of pain and notoriety. Ahalya turned into a stone as result of her sin, albeit through other's deceit. O wise Brahmin! After hearing the ignominy of Indra, Listen to how the King Nahush suffered due to uncontrolled lust."

"Once Indra went into hiding after killing Vatrasur, a Brahmin. As there was nobody to rule over the Heaven, earth and hell, sages anointed King Nahush as a king and enthroned him on Indrasan. He ruled three worlds and enjoyed all the trappings of Heaven. He wished for more! He approached Sachi, wife of Indra and proposed to marry her. Sachi reasoned with him, 'O Nahush! You have got so much! Be happy with whatever you have been given. Do not commit the sin of cavorting with a married woman. Indulge in anything except me!' Overcome by his desire for Sachi, Nahush did not relent from his advances. Sachi lied to him in the end to buy some time, 'O king! I am undergoing a Vrat at the moment. Come to me at the end of my Vrat when I will marry you.' Sachi met her husband with the help of the goddess and explained everything to him. Indra gave her an idea. When Nahush approached Sachi after some time, she smiled and said, 'O king! Come in a new palanquin borne by great sages to marry me.' King Nahush, overcome by the lust, did not think of the propriety of forcing great sages like Agastya to carry his palanquin. He even rebuked and beat them as well in his haste of marrying Sachi. All his Punyas waned with these unjust insults. The king turned into a python in a moment as the result of Sage Agastya's curse and suffered much pain. O Mayaram! Many other great persons had suffered similar fate due to uncontrolled lust. Lust is a great vice which defeated many in past. Therefore, My devotees must endeavour to overcome powerful lust.

lived in isolation of the hermitage, Rhushyashrung was so immune from the outside world that he did not even know the difference between man and woman. Controlling his senses totally and observing his Brahamcharya Vrat, he became reverential even to the Devtas. He became famous as a scholar ascetic at very young age. King Lompad, a friend of King Dashrath of Ayodhya, ruled over the nearby kingdom of Ang. Once King Lompad did not keep his promise of a gift to a Brahmin so all the Brahmins left his kingdom. Since then it did not rain in his kingdom. He sought the advice of scholar hermits to thwart this calamity and Rishis advised him, 'Indra, the rain demigod is angry at you because of your treatment of the Brahmins. You must atone for your sins and bring back with due reverence the Brahmins who have left your kingdom. Grace your kingdom with the presence of Sage Rhushyashrung just once. His mere presence is enough to ward off draught and all other calamities. O king! The rains will come and your subjects will prosper.' King Lompad atoned for his sins and invited the Brahmins back to his kingdom but the dilemma of how to bring Rhushyashrung to his kingdom remained unsolved. A prostitute accepted the challenge of bringing the sage in the kingdom. She built an Ashram on the opposite bank of River Kaushiki and kept a close watch on the sage to approach him when he was on his own. Once when Sage Vibhandak had gone away in jungle to collect firewood, she went to his hermitage in a flower bedecked boat. Rhushyashrung thought of her as another ascetic, greeted her warmly and offered her seat, water and fruits before asking her, 'O Brahamchari! Who are you? Who is your father? Where is your ashram?' She replied, 'My ashram is on the opposite bank of the river but you will need a boat to visit it. She tightly embraced the sage. However, instead of eating the fruits offered by the sage, she offered him the sweets and sherbet. He was bowled over with the taste of the sweets and sherbet. She embraced him repeatedly to entice him further. She sang and danced to lure him in her net. Once the sense of taste became liberated, the other senses started to wield their powers. Timidity turned to fluency. His mind became engrossed in her. Afraid of getting caught by his father's return, she made an excuse to leave hermitage. O Mayaram! Sage Vibhandak noticed the change in his son and asked him the reason for it. Rhushyashrung replied, 'O father! A very handsome and radiant ascetic had come to visit our hermitage today. His eyes were like a rose petal, his voice was very sweet and he had two swollen mounds on his chest. His clothes were shiny and he gave me very sweet fruits to eat and scented water to drink. He embraced me repeatedly and even locked his lips on mine. He sang and danced to please me. I can think of nothing but him. Please grant me the permission to go and stay in his ashram. I will continue my austerity there!' His father realised immediately that some woman had come in his absence to lead him astray. He warned his son that some demon may have come to lead him astray and advised him to keep away from such person. Sage Vibhandak searched for her in vain for three days. Once again when Vibhandak Rishi had gone into the forest to replenish the supplies, the prostitute came to pay a visit. Sage Rhushyashrung ran towards her and embraced her lovingly and said, 'O Brahamchari! Please take me to your ashram before my father returns.' She had patiently waited for this opportunity. She brought the sage to the palace and passed it as her ashram. She left him in the company of other women who started teaching him the art of pleasure. He preferred this to his astute living and gave up his Brahamcharya Vrat and indulged in worldly pleasures. O Mayaram Vipra! Sage Rhushyashrung's presence brought rains to King Lompad's kingdom. The king married off one of his daughters to the sage. Sage Rhushyashrung, the once reverential ascetic, digressed from his Brahamcharya Vrat due to the indulgence of palate. Many others have met the similar fate and have earned notoriety. Now I will tell you how a great emperor Bharat fell from the grace due to attachment."

Narayanmuni continued, “Once upon a time, King Bharat, a son of Bhagwan Rhishabhdev, ruled over a vast land mass called ‘AjanabhKhand’ which became known as ‘Bharat Khand’ after his name. King Bharat was very religious and just. His Bhakti in Lord Vaasudev became so strong that after a while, he became despondent towards kingdom, wealth and indeed his family. To enhance his Bhakti even more, he left his family and the opulence of kingdom and went to PulahAshram to perform austerity to please Lord Vaasudev. He made his residence on the banks of River Gandki and lived in isolation so as not to get distracted by any external forces. He worshipped Shree Hari with such fervour that he often lost the track of time and performed veneration again not realising that he had just concluded the same process some time back. His mind became very lucid due to his obdurate austerity, meditation and Bhakti. O Mayaram! Once as he was venerating the sun while standing in the waters of Gandki, a pregnant deer came to riverbank to quench her thirst. Just as she was sipping water, a lion roared nearby. Her foetus slipped through as she tried to jump over the river and died as she landed on the opposite bank. Bharat witnessed the whole incident. Overcome with compassion, he saved and brought the newly born baby deer with him. As there was nobody around, Bharat took upon himself to care for the baby deer. The baby deer took priority of the king’s time. He spent more time with the deer than in meditation. Over a period of time, he became so attached to the deer that veneration, meditation, austerity, etc. were all forgotten. The deer became the fulcrum of his existence. Just as a lusty man cannot bear separation from a woman, King Bharat could not endure separation from the deer. He would wait impatiently for the return of the wandering deer. Compassion had now turned into attachment and the deer had taken over his mind totally. He was thinking of deer even at the time of his death and as a result he was reborn as a deer. O wise Brahmin! The king who willingly forsook his kingdom, wealth and family got attached to a deer due to affection and was reborn

Narayanmuni continued, "O Brahmin! Now I will narrate tales which all devotees must bear in their mind. This relates to how Daksha Prajapati and Sage Durvasha were overwhelmed by ego and pride. I will first narrate the tale of Daksha Prajapati."

"Brahma created Prajapatis at the beginning of the creation and asked them to procreate the future generations. Daksha Prajapati became very proud at being made the leader of these Prajapatis and considered himself as superior to others. Once upon a time, all Prajapatis organised a Yagna on the bank of River Ganga which was graced by sages, Devtas, goddesses besides Brahma and Shiva. All those present got up and warmly greeted Daksha as he arrived in the assembly except Shiva who was, as usual, meditating upon Lord Vaasudev. Daksha took note of this before taking his seat. He felt insulted by the fact that Shiva, though his son-in-law did not get up to welcome him. His ego got bruised and he stood up and proclaimed, 'Listen to me all ye! Whatever I am about to say is not due to malice or ignorance, but is the factual observation. O Devtas! Shankar has insulted me! He is obstinate and does not have a modicum of humility. He has breached all civility today. Even though he is my son-in-law, he did not greet me on my arrival. He sits by idly for the whole day, remains in the company of ghosts, lives in a cemetery, smears ash on his body; indeed he is unholy. Yet people call him Shiva (benevolent)! I made him my son-in-law on my father Brahma's insistence; otherwise, I would never have my daughter Sati marry with such an ignorant and unchaste person. I, chief Prajapati, aver that as of today, he must not be invited in any future Yagnas. O Brahmin! Shivji was still in his meditation and was unconcerned at the surroundings. As Daksha was about to storm out, Nandi, Shiva's chief Parshad, stood up and cursed him, 'O Daksha! I curse you that you will lose all knowledge of Aatma and Parmatma; your senses will consider your body (and not soul) as your true self and you will end up with the head of Goat so that you will not be able to verbally insult anybody in the future!' Nandi turned towards the scholar Brahmins, who supported Daksha in his tirade against Shiva by not speaking up against the unjust Daksha and cursed them, 'O Brahmins! Henceforth, you will only understand the literal and not the intended meaning of the Vedas and therefore, be concerned with its perishable reward of Heaven (and not Moksha). You will not be able to differentiate between what to eat and what not to eat therefore you will eat anything! Your knowledge and Vrats will become only the means to sustain you and you will remain forever begging for alms for sustenance.' Scholar Brahmins like Sage Bhrigu in turn became angry at Nandi and cursed him in return, 'O devotees of Shiva! You will become critical of the Vedas and Vedic scriptures which attest the chaste devotion in God! You will become distinct from other devotees by keeping long hairs, wearing skull garlands, smearing ash on your body and offering meat and alcohol in your venerations.' Lord Shiva took the stock of the situation as he woke from his meditation. He returned to Kailash with His Parshads without saying anything."

Narayanmuni continued, "O Mayaram! Since that day, no one dared to perform a Yagna without the presence of Shiva. Daksha decide to set the precedent and organised a Yagna. He invited his father Brahma, Lord Vishnu, other Prajapatis and Devtas, though Brahma and Vishnu did not attend. He invited his fifteen other daughters but deliberately ignored Sati. As she saw her sisters and others going, she wished to go as well. Shankar tried to dissuade her from going but Sati did not heed her husband's reasoning and went to her father's home to attend the Yagna. Shiva sent some Parshads to accompany her. Daksha, due to his enmity with Shiva, totally ignored Sati. Furthermore, there was no seat earmarked for Shiva either. Sati felt very humiliated and she called upon the fire demigod by her powers and immolated herself. As Shiva's Parshads went after Daksha, Sage Bhrigu created an army of Devtas from the sacred fire of the Yagna to battle against them. Shiva's Parshads retreated towards Kailash. Before they could reach Kailash, Shiva heard the news of his wife's death from Sage Narad and ordered his commander, Virbhadra, to go and obliterate Daksha and his Yagna. Virbhadra destroyed everything standing, beheaded Daksha and threw his head in the sacred fire. All the Brahmins and Devtas were chased away. Shiva's army returned to Kailash after flattening everything. Devtas prayed humbly to Shiva for many days. Shiva relented and planted a goat's head on the body of Daksha and enlivened him. O Mayaram Vipra! Daksha suffered great calamity, humiliation and notoriety because of his ego and pride which led him to insult Shiva."

Lord Narayanmuni continued, "Now I will narrate the tale of how a great ascetic Sage Durvasha was humiliated due to his false ego and pride. There was a king called Ambarish in the bygone era. He was very devout and ruled the earth justly treating his subjects as his kith and kin. He performed numerous Yagnas, observed many Vrats and gifted his wealth to Brahmins and sages generously to please Bhagwan. Though the opulence of his kingdom rivalled that of the Heaven, King Ambarish, with his steadfast Vairagya, treated it as a temporary phase. Bhakti of Lord Shree Hari was everything to him. Lord Hari in return was so pleased with his devotion that He had assigned His Sudarshan Chakra to protect Ambarish from all evils."

"Ambarish and his wife undertook a Vrat for twelve months. He offered grand veneration to Lord Krishna, observed a fast for three days of the month of Kartik (ending on Prabodhani Ekadashi) and donated generously to the Brahmins at the conclusion of the Vrat. The next day he fed sumptuous meals to the Brahmins. Sage Durvasha arrived at his palace, around mid-morning as he was just about to terminate his fast of three days. Ambarish greeted the sage very warmly and invited him to the lunch. Sage Durvasha went to the bank of River Yamuna to complete his daily routine but did not return till the noon. The King was in a dilemma as the time to terminate his fast was due at noon. He sought advice from scholar Brahmins, 'O Brahmins! I cannot insult Sage Durvasha by eating before his return as I have already invited him for lunch. It is grave sin to eat before the guest. My Vrat will not be complete if I do not eat before noon. It is sin too not to conclude the Vrat properly. Advise me what I should do. Guide me correctly.' The scholars advised him to take a sip of water leftover from the veneration, which would be enough to break the fast and still not constitute eating before Durvasha. King Ambarish concluded his fast with a sip of water and waited for Durvasha' s return. Sage Durvasha was very angry when he found out that king has broken his fast in his absence. He felt slighted and said to the king haughtily, 'O king! You have become arrogant due to your wealth. You call yourself a devotee of Lord Vishnu and yet you behave like this! You invited me for lunch and did not wait for me before eating. I will show you the result of your sin!' Saying this, Sage Durvasha created terrifying Krutya from his hair and ordered her to kill King Ambarish. Krutya rushed towards the king with drawn sword. King Ambarish, knowing that the body is perishable and is subject to death at any given moment, was not perturbed at all. But Sudarshan Chakra came to king's rescue. It burnt Krutya to ashes and rushed towards Sage Durvasha. Durvasha Muni ran from the scene to escape the fire of Sudarshan Chakra. He ran hither tether. Wherever he went - the Heaven, the Hell or the sky - Sudarshan Chakra followed him like a shadow of death. Nobody was able to defend him against the power of Sudarshan Chakra. He approached Brahma and Shiva for protection. However, both of them expressed their inability to protect him. Pleading and begging for mercy, he approached Lord Vishnu for protection, 'O Lord! Save me! I have slighted your devotee. Forgive me and protect me from Your Sudarshan Chakra.' Lord Vishnu said, 'I am helpless! I am unable to protect anyone who has slighted my devotee. Go and seek pardon from King Ambarish, only he can protect you from Sudarshan Chakra.' Sage Durvasha realised his folly and his conceit waned. He went back to King Ambarish, and shouted from far to protect him and prostrated at his feet to seek his pardon. The king calmed Sudarshan Chakra and greeted the sage warmly. The king fed the sage with honour."

Narayanmuni continued, "O Mayaram! Durvasha Muni had to endure great humiliation due to his pride. Many others have suffered similarly due to conceit. I have narrated the tales of sages and kings overwhelmed by the five great virtues like greed, lust, palate, attachment and ego. These five vices are hindrance in your Bhakti which must be forsaken by My devotees. Bhakti can grow, ascend and fructify successfully only in the absence of these five vices."

Suvrat Muni said, "Mayaram Bhatt and other devotees were satiated with such soothing sermons from Shree Hari. They prostrated at His feet to express their servility."

Thus ends the fifteenth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-16

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! Three princes, Vaghji, Mulji and Desdhalji of Bhader had also come to Manavadar to attend the festivities of Janmashtami. They invited Shree Hari to their village. Accepting their invitation, Shree Hari arrived in Bhader on the dark sixth day of the month of Bhadarvo. All three princes were joined by several other devotees in serving Lord Shree Hari with devotion. Shree Hari fed thousands of Brahmins on Amavasya to mark the Shraadhh of His father Dharmadev. He called a large assembly in the evening the same day. He arrived in the assembly and took a seat on an adorned throne.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! Young Lord Shree Hari looked very handsome wearing white robes. His beautiful and proportionate eyes were like the petals of a red lotus. His long arms, emerging from two muscular shoulders, reached his knees. His smiling face resembled the full moon. His throat with three lines looked like a conch. His pointed nose was like a sesame flower. His stomach had three lines with a round and deep navel in the middle. His wide forehead was adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo. His neck had a Kanthi of Tulsi beads around it with many flower garlands gifted to Him by devotees. Devotees had adorned His hands with many bracelets and armlets of flowers. He was holding a Mala in His right hand and looking benevolently at devotees sitting in front of Him. Celibate saints took the seats at the head of the assembly followed by householder devotees in descending order of their Varnas. Female devotees sat keeping a distance from men. They were eagerly expecting a sermon from their Ishtadev, Lord Shree Hari.”

“Lord Narayanmuni said, ‘O my Brahamchari, Tyagi and householder devotees! Listen to Me intently. According to the Vedas, non violence is the primary Dharma. Therefore, you, as My disciples, must forsake violence in all forms. Anyone desirous of Moksha must refrain from violence by thought, speech and deeds. You must neither kill any living being even as an offering in any Yagna nor drink alcohol even at the conclusion of Sautramani Yagna. Indeed, you must not worship or observe Vrat of any deity who is venerated with meat or alcohol. Neither should you read or study their scriptures nor chant their hymns. Indeed, there is no need to bow to them unless totally unavoidable. The Shakti Sects as attested by scriptures like the 'Kaulavarna' are outside the ambit of the Vedas. O devotees! Mark My words! None of My devotees should associate with anyone disobeying this stricture. Not only will they end up in the Hell, but their clan, wealth and fame will disintegrate forever. The observation of any of their Vrats or rituals is futile and no reward should be expected from it.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The prince Vaghji's devotion in Lord Hari became firmer after listening to Him. He humbly asked Shree Hari with folded hands, 'The Vrat of Navratri in honour of goddess Parvati is starting from tomorrow. We have celebrated this Vrat for many generations. The sacrifice of animals and consumption of alcohol do take place sometimes at some places. O Lord! Please advise us whether we should observe this Vrat. You are promoter of Sanatan Vedic Dharma and we are your disciples. We will follow your guidance faithfully."

"Lord Shree Narayanmuni said, 'O prince! Only Rajasi and Tamasi deities may consume meat and alcohol. The Satvic deities never consume alcohol or meat. Goddesses Parvati, Laxmi and Savitri are Satvik and virtuous with Dharma, knowledge, austerity, Yoga and Vairagya. Parvati, the wife of Shiva, is reverential to all of us and this Vrat is hers. You may venerate Parvati and other Satvik deities without any hesitation but never any of the Rajasi or Tamasi deities. Goddess Parvati does not condone animal sacrifice and whoever still does it misguidedly are demons. The practice of animal sacrifice or offering alcohol in Naivedhya during veneration of goddess Parvati during the Vrat of Navratri, however ingrained by the age old practice, is wholly unethical.

If any sect permits or condones this practice, rest assured prince, it is against the religion and such practice must be shunned. Indeed, to leave such sect is supported by the pious scriptures. You are My disciples. You understand the true meaning of Dharma. You must never venerate any deity where alcohol or meat is offered in Naivedhya. Violence is liked by demonic persons, while religious people always like non violence. We, devotees of Lord Krishna, must never be afraid of such inconsequential deities as He is the regulator of Kaal and Maya while such inconsequential deities are subordinate to Kaal and Maya. My devotees must neither debate with nor criticise any such inconsequential deities or their followers."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Prince Vaghji's doubts waned and pledged to follow His guidance faithfully. Some Brahmin devotees present in the assembly asked Shree Hari, 'We would like to ask You something regarding the Vrat of Navratri. O Lord! We are Your devotees. We do not overtly venerate inconsequential deities, but some of us have inherited such deities as our clan deities. After listening to Your sermon today, we will not venerate such deities even covertly. However, our livelihood is connected with such venerations during the Vrat of Navratri. Please advise us whether we should continue such venerations."

"Bhagwan said, 'O Brahmins! You may venerate such deities superficially if you do not have any other means of livelihood. However, you must atone for it afterwards by observing Chandrayan Vrat without the knowledge of the host and on another pretext. Otherwise, you may lose your livelihood if the host becomes aware of your atonement."

Suvrat Muni said, "The Brahmins were pleased as they found the proper way around their livelihood. They asked Shree Hari again, 'O Lord! Please tell us which hymn or Stotra (the collection of hymns) should one chant if afflicted by some serious illness or evil spirits or ghosts. Which hymn or Stotra should be chanted at the time of death by which even a sinner finds solace in? Which Stotra helps one fulfil all his desires?"

"Shree Hari replied, 'Listen to Me! The 'VishnuSahasraNam', which was revealed by Bhishma to King Yudhishthir in the Mahabharat (in the Dan Dharma chapter), is the king amongst Stotras. It cures all ailments and fulfils all desires. The 'NarayanKavach' from the Shreemad Bhagwat is another similar Stotra. Chanting these two Stotras is the sure-fire cure for all ailments. The correct method of ritualistic chanting of these Stotras should be understood properly which fulfils all desires. All My devotees of the three Varna must chant these two Stotras regularly. O Brahmins! My devotees must not chant any hymns or Stotras of inconsequential deities even if they promise instant rewards. Hymns of meat and alcohol loving deities destroy devotees' Bhakti totally. Chanting of such hymns leads one straight to Hell and its punishments. If needed, one may chant the hymns or Stotra of Hanumnaji which is instantly rewarding, but one must observe Brahamcharya while chanting them."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! All devotees pledged to follow Shree Hari's benevolent decree faithfully. He stayed in Bhader till Annakut festival to please His devotees. He left Bhader for Moda with entourage of hundreds of His disciples. Shree Hari stayed a day or two at many villages of His devotees' en route to Moda where He was welcomed warmly by His devotees. He stayed for five days in Moda before arriving in a village called Alaiya.

Thus ends the sixteenth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni continued, "After comforting Narayan of Alaiya, Shree Hari arrived at Shekhpat where Lalji Suthar, his son Ramji and his mother Laduba served Him well. He stayed at Shekhpat for few days to please Lalji Suthar. He left Shekhpat on Maha Sud Panchmi (festival of spring) and arrived in Bhadra the same day. Two Brahmin brothers, Mulji and Sunderji Sharma were His hosts in Bhadra. Other devotees including Ratanji, Ladhaji, Devji, Vashram, Mavji, Ramji, Ranchhod, Nathabhai and others joined in His service. Many devotees from far flung places had arrived at Bhadra to celebrate Vasant Panchmi. O king! Shree Hari organised a large assembly in the afternoon and the devotees came and took their seats facing Shree Hari. They were eager to hear His sermon to which he did not disappoint."

"Shree Hari said, 'Lord Shree Krishna's Bhakti is the only means of Moksha. Bhakti ascends in the company of pious persons while it is destroyed in the company of evil persons. Therefore, My devotees should recognise evil persons and keep away from them. They must be recognised by their traits as they do not appear different from other men."

Suvrat Muni said, "Mulji Sharma prostrated at Shree Hari's feet and humbly asked, 'O Lord! You just asked us to stay away from the evil persons but how does one recognise them? Please tell us their traits."

Shree Hari replied, 'To negate the existence of Lord Krishna and His numerous incarnations and to criticise, insult or otherwise cause pain to His devotees is the primary trait of an evil person. Though atheists, they often portray themselves outwardly as religious scholars. They always find fault and criticise divine Leelas of Bhagwan and His devotees. They believe in and venerate meat and alcohol loving deities to satisfy their taste, study and hear their scriptures, chant their hymns and observe their Vrats. They indulge in the consumption of meat and alcohol, adultery and other vices. Influenced by their greed, anger, ego, lust etc. they disregard the boundaries of ethics of Varna and Ashram. These are their normal traits. God's devotees must never associate with them and whoever disregards this surely falls from the path of religion and righteousness. '

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Mulji Sharma and other devotees took heed of Shree Hari's sermon and pledged to act accordingly. Shree Hari delivered similar sermons daily during His stay of six days in Bhadra. He travelled towards Bhuj from Bhadra. He crossed the strait and arrived at Anjar where He stayed for a few days to

They prostrated on the ground at His feet without worrying about their clothes. They had brought chariots, palanquins, horses, elephants and musical instruments with them. After asking Brahamcharis and other devotees to sit on appropriate vehicles and animals He mounted a tall Sindhi horse. The whole procession entered the lanes of Bhuj with regal pomp. He stayed at the residence of Sundarjibhai Suthar, one of the ministers of the king of Bhuj and made suitable arrangement for the accompanying devotees."

Thus ends the seventeenth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-18

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The devotees of Bhuj were waiting for Shree Hari's Darshan for a very long time. They had heard a lot about Him and His Leelas but this was the first time they had an opportunity for Darshan. They served their Ishtadev with great fervour. Let me recall some their names. Sundarji Suthar and his two brothers Hirji and Bhagvanji, Jivraj, Pragji, Devram, Narayanji, Raghavji, Ramji, Dhanji were from the Suthar (carpenter) caste. Pragji Purani, Ganapatram, Shivram, Harji and Uko were the main Brahmin devotees. Amongst the Mall (wrestlers) devotees were Gangaram, Sanghji and Khimji. Punji, Amari, Ladhi, Surajba and Lahri were prominent female devotees. They all served Shree Hari with love and reverence. O king! Thousands of devotees had gathered in Bhuj to celebrate the festival of RamNavmi in Samvat 1860. Expert carpenters erected a grand Mandap and an ornate Sinhasan under the guidance of Shree Hari. Most of the devotees along with Shree Hari and saints had observed the fast for a day. He put an idol of Lord Ram on that Sinhasan at midday and worshipped Him ceremoniously and venerated all the Brahmins and saints. He did this only to set an example and emphasise the importance of rituals to His devotees. Shree Hari was seated on the ornate Sinhasan in the afternoon for the sermon, as per His normal practice. The devotees had come to realise that it was Lord Shree Hari's birthday so they eagerly started His ritualistic worship. Pragji Purani was the first to come forward and he prostrated at His feet and worshipped Him with sandalwood paste, flower garlands and new clothes. Just as he was looking at Him, Pragji Purani slipped into Samadhi. He saw Bhagwan Shree Hari Krishna in Akshardham in the garb of celibate Varni. He saw Varni as Lord Krishna, accompanied by Radha, in the middle of Golok. His faith in Shree Hari became firmer when he woke from the Samadhi and started singing His paeans."

"Pragji Purani said, 'O merciful Bhagwan! You reside in Your abode Golok with Radha, Rama and other Gopis and You play the flute to please them. You are forever pure and radiant. You give Your devotees intelligence to understand Your true form and protect them from evil. You are Vaasudev; You are Shree Krishna; and You have taken birth as a son of Dharmadev and Bhakti to propound Ekantik Dharma and destroy Adharma. I bow repeatedly at Your feet. You redeem Your devotees' sorrows and remove their vices like greed, ego and anger. Indra, the king of Devtas, Brahma the creator, Vishnu the protector and Shiva the destroyer bow to You and worship You. You are the real creator and protector of this and numerous other universes. You are superior to and beyond Kshar (visible and changeable) and Akshar (invisible and eternal). I bow repeatedly at Your feet. O Hari! You independently have taken incarnations as Matsya, Kurma, Varah, Nrusinh, Parshuram, Ram, Krishna etc. and will incarnate as Kalki in future to protect Your devotees. Indeed, You repeatedly take births as and when required to destroy Adharma and protect Dharma. I bow repeatedly at Your feet. You are independent, yet are helpless against Your devotees. Bhuj, he was an expert sculptor. He brought sandalwood paste, many flower garlands, expensive clothes and thousand gold coins in Shree Hari's worship. He performed Aarti and prostrated at His feet and stood in His front with folded hands. Just as he was marvelling at His smiling face, Sunderji Suthar slipped into Samadhi. He saw Lord Shree Hari in the middle of a brilliant radiance in BrahamDham. He saw Shree Hari as Lord Krishna playing a flute in Golok, as eight armed Bhuma Purush resting on the bed made up of the body of Shesha, as MahaPurush served by numerous Niranna Muktas in Shwetdweep, as Lord Vishnu accompanied by Laxmiji in Vainkuth, as Yogeswar resting under the thousand hoods of Shesha on the shore of Kshisagar, as Yagna Narayan holding the Ghee pot and spoon in the middle of the sacred fire, as a Golden Purush in the flames of the sun and as Shree NarNarayan under a berry tree in Badrikaashram in his heart. He saw the same Shree Hari sitting in front of him as he came out of the Samadhi. He realised that Shree Hari sitting in front of him is indeed the reason of all reasons and the origin of all incarnations. He prostrated at His feet again and prayed."

"Sunderji Suthar spoke, 'O Lord of Golok! O Lord Krishna! You are controller of Kaal and Maya. Your Akshardham is beyond everything, yet You are even beyond that. You always reside there in a divine form. You are the supreme Lord of everything. You fulfil Your devotees' desires. I repeatedly bow to You. O Hari! You are Bhuma Purush in Avyakrut Dham; MahaPurush in Shwetdweep; Lord Vishnu in Vaikunth; Yogeswar in Kshisagar; Yagna Narayan in the flames of the sacred fire; Golden Purush in the middle of the sun and as Shree NarNarayan Dev in Badrikaashram. You are the one and the same everywhere. You have taken a birth as a son of Dharma and Bhakti along with Your divine powers and Parshads. You appear as a mortal man to ordinary people yet, reveal Your true glory to Your devotees during the Samadhi. Your refuge removes the fear of Kaal, Maya and the messengers of the death. I, Sunderji Suthar, repeatedly bow to You."

Suvrat Muni said, "Sunderji Suthar prostrated at His feet again and guided his brother Hirjibhai, son Raghavji and other family members to worship Shree Hari. They too prayed Shree Hari."

Dharma, knowledge etc. to Your devotees and remove their vices like greed, ego etc. You punish the people who associate with evil persons. You are the cause of all causes. You protect Your devotees from the five senses and six emotions. We bow to You. Be victorious! You remove all sorrows of Your devotees. These saints and Brahamcharis have come unto Your shelter forsaking home and hearth and kith and kin and serve You humbly. You are the ocean of happiness and are very good at sermonising and guiding Your devotees on the path of righteousness. We bow to You. Be victorious! Your feet have sixteen insignias; Your eyes are like petals of a lotus; You walk majestically like an elephant. You free Your devotees from the bondage of life and death by destroying their sins. A mere Japa of Your name is enough to enlighten their intelligence. O ornament of saints and pious! We bow to You. Be victorious! You are eternal, self luminous, redeemer of sinners, merciful and pleasing. You calm Your devotees by Your benevolent sermons, honour Your devotees and saints and explain the true meaning of scriptures. You even fulfil Your devotees' mundane desires. Indra, Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva etc. bow at Your feet. You remove Your devotees' ignorance by Your sermons. We bow to You. Be victorious! You are the only one Who can grant Moksha. You are doing a great favour to Sunderjibhai by accepting his hospitality. O Lord! The radiance of Your finger nails which resemble moonlight, removes the darkness (ignorance) of Your devotees' hearts. We bow to You. Be victorious! I meditate upon Your lotus feet."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Sunderji Suthar and his family took their seats in the assembly after concluding their prayer. Shree Hari, Who grants His devotees all pleasures even without undergoing austerity, was pleased with the whole family. Other devotees came forward one by one to worship Shree Hari. They brought various gifts for Him. They, without any effort on their part, went into collective Samadhi. O king! They were pleasantly surprised to see same Shree Hari in various forms in His various abodes. They understood that He is the supreme Lord of the universe. With their faith in Shree Hari totally firm, they prayed."

"The devotees of Bhuj said, 'O Lord! This world is an unending cesspool of desires which has shackled all humans. Women, off springs, and friends, aided and abetted by five senses, pull all men in this ocean. They never allow men to go to the safety of shore. You are the only support for these men. You pull Your devotees from this cesspool and grant them Moksha. O Hari! The messengers of death retreat upon hearing any of Your names - Hari, Krishna, HariKrishna, Swaminarayan. Eminent saints like Muktanand swami describe You as the supreme Bhagwan. You redeem even the sinners. We humbly bow to You."

Suvrat Muni said, "They returned to their seats after waking from the Samadhi. O king! Shree Hari gifted all expensive clothes and money to the Brahmins. Even His opponents were surprised at His generosity and believed that Narayanmuni could not be an ordinary man. His divinity spread far and wide. O king! Lord Shree Hari fed thousands of Brahmins the next day and gifted them more money. The devotees of Bhuj, extolling His generosity and benevolence, regularly worshipped Shree Hari during His stay and made their life worth living."

Thus ends the eighteenth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-19

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Three bothers - Kuberji, Jagjivan and Ramchandra were prominent among worshippers of Shakti (goddess). Being the ministers of the king, they had accumulated a vast fortune. The combination of power and wealth made them arrogant, cruel and self centred. They were inclined towards animal sacrificial Yagna. The eldest brother Kuberji once organised Sautramani Yagna with his wealth. He invited expert Brahmins from far away places to assist in this Yagna. He also invited Shree Hari. Shree Hari thought, 'The scriptures say that one does not need an invitation to attend or participate in a Yagna. How could I not go in a Yagna, especially here as I have been invited?' He came at the site of the Yagna accompanied by many devotees. Kuberji welcomed Shree Hari warmly and offered an appropriate seat. He sat besides Him. The scholar Brahmins too sat near Shree Hari. Kuberji got up and humbly said to Shree Hari, ' O Swami! You are a scholar of the Vedas and a Brahamchari too. I wish You could remain in Bhuj for the duration of my Yagna and accept my hospitality. I will serve You and Your saints with food and clothes. A scholar like You is an ornament of this Yagna. These Brahmins too are scholars of the Vedas. They have come from various places like Kashi, Madras, Gujarat, Maharashtra etc. Please fulfil my desire and enjoy my hospitality and give me the chance to serve You."

Suvrat Muni said, "Shree Hari heard the wails of animals that were brought for the sacrifice in Yagna. The kind hearted Shree Hari was distressed at the unexpected and imminent cruelty."

"Shree Hari said to Kuberji, 'Listen to Me very carefully! It is for your benefit. Pious persons do not attend meetings and if they do attend by chance, they always speak the truth. It is a grave sin if one does not knowingly point out the truth due to fear or embarrassment. Therefore, I shall only speak what is true. O Brahmins! Satvik persons of all three Varnas, especially Brahmins should perform only non violent and non sacrificial Yagna. To kill innocent animals as sacrifice for Yagna or to consume their meat as Prasad is never acceptable and is forbidden. How can pious Brahmins like you witness and tolerate such cruelty? O Kuberji! You just said that these Brahmins are pious and scholars, yet why are they behaving like demons? How can they be called Brahmins if they tolerate or condone such wanton violence? One does not become pious or can be called a Brahmin just by studying many scriptures. One has to practice good ethics as well. An eminent scholar named Hemadri has collected much wisdom from various scriptures to define a pious person. I will quote some from his collection. 'O king! One cannot be said a pious by taking birth in a Brahmin clan or studying many scriptures. Morality is the only qualification to be called pious. Nothing is gained by being born in a higher clan without the morality of truth, non violence etc. Many pathetic insects are born in the scented flowers. Do they become great due to the circumstances of their birth? Piousness comes only through the ethical behaviour, not by birth or education. Many demons were highly educated, yet they are not accepted as pious. They are still called demons. What is the point of dressing like a Brahmin if you do not possess compassion and pity? The knowledge of the Vedas and other scripture must always be accompanied by morality in a pious Brahmin. Just as the pure water in a human skull or milk in a bag made of dog leather is always considered unholy, a Brahmin's knowledge without due morality is always considered demonic. O king! Therefore consider piousness as the only yardstick for being considered Brahmin. A true Brahmin always has virtues like truth, non violence, austerity, control of senses, generosity etc. A highly scholar Brahmin is worse than a Shudra without these virtues.' (From the Agni Puran). 'One can only be considered a Brahmin if he believes in non violence as a primary Dharma, keeps holy fire lit, has only one wife and donates his wealth to pious persons. The Devtas define a Brahmin who has chastity, pity, humanity, compassion, truth, charity, study of scriptures, humility, belief in the sanctity of God and scriptures, equanimity of thought, speech and actions, abhorrence towards immorality etc.' (The Yama Smruti). 'Austerity, generosity, compassion, mercy, charity, chastity, knowledge, abhorrence towards malicious or anti religious behaviour and belief in God are some of the traits of a Brahmin. A Brahmin who is compassionate, controls his senses, listens to holy scriptures, never even think of killing any living being and is hesitant to accept charity is able to assist many souls to surmount Maya.' (The Vasishtha Smruti). 'The eight -pardon, control of senses, mercy, truth, charity, chastity, austerity and study of the Vedas, are traits of piousness. (The Bhavishya Puran). 'One does not become pious with just the study of scriptures or by undergoing austerities. A Brahmin is considered pious only if both these are accompanied by ethical behaviour as well. (The Yagnavalkya Smruti).

"Shree Hari continued, 'O Kuberji! There are many more instances from other scriptures attesting that piousness, compassion and morality go hand in hand. Therefore, refrain from violence and perform non sacrificial Yagna which is good for you. How could there be a killing of innocent animals where Brahmins, as pious as described earlier, are conducting the Yagna? It is not possible that they are even contemplating killing animals. I am very distressed by the wails of animals facing death. O Brahmin, conduct the Yagna using grains like rice, wheat, sesame and barley and fluids like milk, yoghurt, honey, Ghee etc. Devtas will be pleased by such Satvik Yagna. The Satvik Devtas live in the Heaven above, the Tamasi demons live in the bottom and the Rajasi humans live in the middle of the earth. The scriptures attest that Devtas love grains like wheat, rice etc. and fluids like milk, Ghee etc. because they are Satvik while demons prefer meat and alcohol as they are Tamasi. It may be acceptable to use meat in Yagna if the grains are not available. But it is not the case here. You have ample supply of grains and milk. Therefore, it is not appropriate at all to venerate Devtas with meat during the Yagna. I will remain here only if you release these animals and continue your Yagna with grains and milk. Otherwise I will go from here."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Kuberji was in a quandary. Many of wise Brahmins accepted Shree Hari's sermon and agreed with Him. Some of the vile Brahmins were unrepentant. They egged on egoistic Jagjivan to speak for them. Jagjivan said, 'O Shree Hari! It is said in the Vedas that animal were created for the Yagna. Killing of animals except for the purpose of a Yagna is violence and prohibited. Whatever is attested by the Vedas cannot be called violence. Even eminent scholars accept this point of view. Furthermore, many kings in bygone eras have performed sacrificial Yagnas. Who can deny or condemn this ancient practice? Therefore, we will only partake in sacrificial Yagna.' O king! Shree Hari realised that Jagjivan was saying this only because of his love for meat and he had not understood the true meaning of the Vedas. He tried to reason with Jagjivan."

Narayanmuni said, 'O Brahmin! The Vedas do not support or condone the violence. Even the mention of sacrificial Yagna is to lessen the violence to stop people killing animal wantonly to satiate their palate. Rajasi and Tamasi persons have a natural affinity towards eating meat. They do not need support from the Vedas for this. To reduce and eventually stop the consumption of meat and killing of animals, the Vedas decreed that killing of animals is permissible only for a Yagna. This exceptional permission is meant only to reduce the overall violence and not to be taken as a general practice. Shreemad Bhagwat makes this absolutely clear, 'Humans and other animals have an inbuilt interest in copulation, meat and alcohol. They do not need any encouragement from scriptures for indulging in them. The copulation only within the marriage, meat only during a Yagna and alcohol only on the conclusion of Sautramani Yagna were recommended to limit the unrestrained indulgence. The ultimate aim of the Vedas is to restrain and ultimately cease the violence.' O Brahmin! Some ignorant persons do not understand such indirect decrees. Just as a father bribes his sick child with sweets for taking bitter medicine is not meant to indulge him with sweets, the violence permitted in the Vedas is not meant to encourage the violence. Whoever considered that the Vedas support violence had come to great harm. King Vasu had suffered greatly by just saying that the Vedas support violence. His tale is mentioned in the Vayu Puran, the Matsya Puran, the Vaasudev Mahatmya and Mahabharat. Indra once proposed to perform the sacrificial Yagna which was opposed by wise sages. Both parties appointed King Vasu as the mediator. Due to his friendship with Indra, King Vasu, knowingly told a lie and said that the Vedas do support violence. He immediately fell from sky by this blatant misinterpretation and suffered great ignominy. O Brahmin! Just think! Why did King Vasu fall on the earth by this misinterpretation if the Vedas indeed support violence? You need to understand the true meanings of the Vedas.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Jagjivan arrogantly replied, 'It is said in the Vedas that the animals killed in a Yagna proceed to the heaven. It does not befit a scholar like You to oppose any deeds which are attested as Dharma in the Vedas. It is said in Bhagvad Gita that a person is redeemed from all his sins if he consumes the Prasad of a Yagna. Which goes to prove that eating meat leftover from the sacrificial Yagna is not a sin.' O king! Shree Hari tried again to reason with Jagjivan, who was hell bent on proving his misconceived point of view."

Narayanmuni said, 'O Jagjivan! To call violence a Dharma is your personal opinion. It is not supported by saints. Dharma gives happiness while Adharma gives sorrow. Listen to what Sage Narad had said against sacrificial Yagnas in the Shreemad Bhagwat, 'Sage Narad said to King Prachin Baharshi, O king! Look at the sky! All the animals you have killed in Yagna are eagerly awaiting you. They will mutilate you on your journey from earth to the upper abodes on your death. Earlier King Puranjan was meted out the same punishment by numerous animals on his death.' O Jagjivan! King Prachin Baharshi gave up the practice of sacrificial Yagnas immediately and conducted non violent Yagnas. It is time you realised the truth and stop this sacrificial Yagna. You have earned fame and wealth on this earth."

Suvrat Muni said, "Jagjivan did not heed Shree Hari's advice. He did not give up his false interpretation of ethics. Shree Hari returned home from the Yagna and left Bhuj the next day. He solaced His many devotees who had come to bid Him farewell. He arrived at Dhamadka after few days. O king! After Shree Hari's departure, Jagjivan continued his sacrificial Yagna despite advised not to. The king of Bhuj suddenly developed some enmity with Jagjivan and as a result he sent his army to destroy Jagjivan's Yagna. Just as Virbhadra had destroyed Daksha's Yagna, the army destroyed Jagjivan's Yagna. The king withdrew Jagjivan's all privileges and took away his wealth, home and vehicles. Three brothers put up a fight with the army. The Brahmins were chased away by the king's army. All three brothers were beheaded in the fight. No one was left behind to cremate them and their dead bodies were eaten by crow, vultures and dogs. As the news of three brothers death spread afar, people concluded that this was the direct consequence of not heeding Lord Shree Hari. The practice of sacrificial Yagna died with their deaths. Nobody has dared to perform such Yagna since then. Dharma ascended on the earth with the defeat of Adharma. The fame of Lord Swaminarayan spread far and wide.

Thus ends the nineteenth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-20

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The devout King Ladhaji invited Shree Hari to reside at his palace during His stay in Dhamadka and served Him humbly. His four sons - Kalyanji, Induji, Ramji and Raighanji joined their father in His services and so did other female devotees like Jijiba, Maniba, Vayu, Jiva, Motini, Karniba etc. O king! After two days' sojourn in Dhamadka, Shree Hari went to Bhachau, where male devotees like Jayram and Karman and female devotees like Devika collectively served Him. Shree Hari arrived at Kanthkot after two days' stay in Bhachau. During His one night's stay in Kanthkot male devotees Mulji and Kachra and female devotees Vayavi and Haribala attended Him. Shree Hari continued His benevolence journey to grant His Darshan to His devotees living in far flung villages. He crossed the strait again to arrive in Pipli.

Male devotees Devji and Ganesh and female devotees Maani and Rama served Him for two days. Shree Hari arrived in Rajkot city and became the guest of princess Laxmibai for His one day's stay. O king! Shree Hari removed anger, greed, ego, lust from His devotees' hearts wherever He went. He destroyed the vices which had kept the society in darkness and spread the light of Dharma. He removed ignorance from His devotees' hearts and gave them true knowledge of Ekantik Dharma. Many persons' life was transformed by His divine Darshan. His fame as reformer spread far and wide. Thousands became His disciples by forsaking their old beliefs, gurus and sects. He exhibited and let His divine powers speak for Him."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Shree Hari helped thousands of His devotees to go into Samadhi. They were able to see their soul, distinct from their causal body, while in Samadhi. They visited His various abodes like Akshardham, Vaikunth, Golok, Shwetdweep, Badrikaashram, Avykrut, Kshirsagar, Agnilok, Suryalok etc. and saw their opulence and glory. They saw Lord Shree Hari in various Swarup (forms) in each Dham (abode) surrounded and served by the Parshads of that Dham. Some of them saw the brilliant radiance equivalent to thousands suns emanating from His body while others heard the original sound 'Aum' that is associated with the creation. Some were able to see Him as an original creator, beyond VairajNarayan, Prakruti and Purush as described in the Purush Sukta. Some of them were able to grasp the knowledge of astronomy and geography of the universe and the process of its creation while some of them were able to see the inside of their body including six Chakras (points of life force). Some of His devotees, though living far way, were able to see Him in person in His absentia. Some devotees saw Lord Shree Hari accepting the food (offered to Him in Naivedhya) and garlands etc. in person when offered to His Murti. Some people including non devotees saw Shree Hari coming to take His devotee to His abode on their death. These divine miracles pleased His devotees and perplexed non devotees. His devotees had their faith in Him strengthened while non devotees were still awed at His prowess. Many scholars came to defeat Him in debates and went away humiliated by abject defeat."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Whenever the devotees of other Swarup of God underwent Samadhi by His close contact, they saw their Ishtadev in Samadhi. Lord Ram's devotees saw Lord Ram, Lord Krishna's devotees saw Lord Krishna and Lord Vishnu's devotees saw Lord Vishnu. In each case they saw Shree Hari as their Ishtadev. This made them realise that their Ishtadev and Shree Hari sitting in front of them were one and the same. Even people of other faiths, like Jain and Muslim, saw Narayanmuni as their Tirthankars and Payagambar (Mohammed, the messenger) respectively. Realising that Shree Hari is the only supreme God in the whole universe, they gave up their perceived faith and became His staunch disciples and abided by the principles of Udhhav Sampraday. Persons previously overwhelmed by various vices gave up the vices and became chaste once coming into the fold of the Sampraday. Their life changed for the better immediately on becoming His disciples. Though unlettered, they became knowledgeable in the matter of soul, Maya and God after coming unto Shree Hari's shelter. O king! Dharma ascended on this earth as thousands and thousands of people started living chaste life after becoming His disciples. Adharma, which ruled the roost previously, lay vanquished. Shree Hari opened many 'Sadavratt' (eateries) at various places. Whoever ate Prasad at one of these Sadavratt never went at any other place. He performed many non violent Yagnas with the help of His wealthy devotees where He fed thousands of Brahmins, devotees and saints for days. He gifted whatever wealth He received from His devotees to poor Brahmins. His non sacrificial and chaste Yagnas became so prevalent and acceptable that Yagnas involving meat, alcohol and copulation became extinct. The practice of venerating pious saints, Brahmins and Devtas became so widespread that fake gurus and their religious malpractices disappeared from the community. Ekantik Dharma as espoused by the Vedas became established once again by His effort. Wherever Shree Hari went, whenever He addressed assemblies, He always emphasised chaste living by forsaking vices and violence. He taught people the true meaning of Dharma, Bhakti and Vairagya. The Dharma of each Ashram and Varna became supreme once again. He and His celibate saints became the centre of attraction over a vast stretch of land."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! As Dharma, fed by Bhakti, became re-established once again, Dharma and Bhakti came to live with Shree Hari in their divine form. Though they made themselves visible to some pious persons sometimes, they remained with Shree Hari in their invisible divine forever. Travelling from village to village to propound and propagate Sanatan Dharma, Shree Hari arrived at Sardhar in the month of Ashadh (of Samvat 1861).

CHAPTER-21

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! The hosts, two princes of Sardhar, Tungji and Vairji, were Shree Hari’s staunch devotees. Tungji smeared the dust gathered from Shree Hari’s feet on his forehead daily just like Akrurji.Tungji’s brother, Vairji was wise and discerning like Vidurji. Verabhai, Bhimabhai and Hakabhai were joined by Muslim devotees Karim, Muk, Hasan, Rayo and Harjit in the service of Shree Hari. Shree Hari extended His stay in Sardhar at the request of Tungji and other devotees of Sardhar and celebrated the festival of Janmashtami (of Samvat 1861) as grandly as He had done at Manavadar the previous year. Thousands of devotees and saints had come to Sardhar for His Darshan. He observed a fast on the day and venerated Lord Krishna at the night. Shree Hari fed all devotees the next day before He broke His fast. He held a grand assembly in afternoon just as previously where everybody took their appropriate seats facing Him. Tungji asked Shree Hari, ‘O Bhagwan! The whole world seems to be suffering under the influence of lust, anger and greed. Which of these three is the most powerful that must be overcome at all cost? Please explain to us properly.’ O king! Shree Hari was very pleased that such an important question was raised.

Shree Narayanmuni replied, ‘O prince! All three of them are very powerful but in My opinion, greed is the worst. All My devotees, especially saints must endeavour to overcome it. People at large have a great desire to accumulate wealth and act as if their intelligence has taken leave to fulfil their greed. All other vices are connected to greed. People commit most of the sins due to their greed. Greed is the sanctuary of all other vices. Anger, lust, envy, attachment etc. arise from greed. O prince! Many learned and astute kings, sages and devotees have succumbed to greed. Many Devtas, including their king Indra, demons including Hiranyakshipu and kings like Duryodhan have been overwhelmed by greed and have suffered ignominy. Therefore, My devotees must forsake greed at all cost. The wealth is the root of all evils. The fifteen; stealing, violence, hypocrisy, lust, anger, ego, pride, discrimination, enmity, mistrust, competition, woman, gambling, consumption of meat and alcohol are caused by wealth. Many other vices co exists within wealth. Besides being the main hindrance in My Bhakti, wealth causes many other evils. It is very important for My devotees not to become victims of greed.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Understanding that greed is the root cause of all evils, all devotees promised Shree Hari that they will not succumb to greed. Shree Hari asked all devotees to return to their respective villages the next day. Khatvang, the king of Kariyani, came to Shree Hari. Khatvang was very religious and had vowed to observe the Vrattof Brahamcharya from a very young age. He had become Shree Hari's devotee since attending the Janmashtami festival at Mangrol. He was very generous besides being brave. He had attended the Janmashtami festival in Manavadar too. Attending the third festival and with the view of inviting Shree Hari to Kariyani, he approached Shree Hari with folded hands and requested, 'I am Your servant and You are My Lord. Please do me a favour and come to Kariyani. Give me an opportunity to serve You and Your Parshads.' Shree Hari replied, 'I have promised the devotees of Sardhar to remain here during Chaturmaas. I will indeed come to Kariyani after celebrating Prabodhani Ekadashi.'

Suvrat Muni said, "King Khatvang was very pleased that Shree Hari accepted his invitation. He took Shree Hari's leave the next day and arrived at Gadhpur on his way to Kariyani."

Thus ends the twenty first Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-22

King Pratapsinh asked Suvrat Muni, “O Muni! Where is Gadhpur and whose home did Khatvang visit Gadhpur?”

Suvrat Muni replied, “Gadhpur is situated on the banks of the River Unmattganga, in which Shree Hari and saints had bathed innumerable times. With this association, the river has become holy enough to wash away the gravest of sins. At one time it had a close relationship with Dwarka. Lord Krishna used to come here often to play. People of all four Varna lived here. Abhay the king of Gadhpur was very devout, brave and very keen of listening to Bhagwan’s Katha.”

Pratapsinh asked Muni, “Please tell me more about King Abhay. What were his wife’s and children’s names? At what time did Khatvang reach Gadhpur?”

Suvrat Muni replied, “King Abhay had two wives. Surprabha, the elder one was the daughter of Nagesh and Purnadevi of Kariyani and Somadevi the younger was the daughter of King Rangami of Botad. Both wives led very chaste lives. Surprabha had four daughters; Jayaba, Lalitaba, Panchali and Nanuba. Somadevi had one son, Uttam, who was serene, pious, soft spoken and wise like Prahalad. The two elder daughters, Jaya and Lalita, were widowed at a young age and lived with their parents. Both of them led very religious lives whilst observing Brahamcharya and undergoing austerities and Vrats like Chaandrayan. His one sister, Somaba and brother-in-law Galav were other family members. The whole family lived chaste and religious lives venerating Lord Krishna regularly. King Abhay had heard the Katha of Shreemad Bhagwat seven times from a wise and scholar Brahmin. The whole family would gather at night to discuss and imbibe what they had heard in Katha during the day. Whenever he heard the ninth Canto of the Bhagwat, he pondered to think about the promise Lord Krishna had made that He would take birth whenever Dharma is subjugated by Adharma. He was sure in his mind that Bhagwan had taken birth at present too, as Adharma had become prevalent. He thought of this often. He once mentioned this to his family as well. Following the veneration of Lord Krishna on the occasion of Ekadashi after Janmashtami, he said to his family, 'I am about to reveal my mind to you. One can attain Moksha only through Lord Krishna's Bhakti. The Bhakti fructifies immediately if Lord Krishna is present in person whereas it takes much longer when Bhakti of His idol is undertaken in His personal absence. Whoever had Darshan of Lord Krishna in person and worshipped Him as per his abilities indeed attained His supreme abode and Moksha. This direct Bhakti is achievable only when Bhagwan is present in person. This is not possible at this time although there are many reasons for Bhagwan to take birth. Lord Krishna says (in Gita), 'O Arjun! Whenever Dharma is subjugated by Adharma, whenever evil persecutes pious, I will take birth to vanquish Adharma and re establish Dharma and to protect My devotees from demonic persons.' Lord Krishna re-established Vedic Dharma at the start of Kali Yug by killing many evil kings and demons after taking birth as a son of Devki and Vasudev. Kings like Parikshit, Sahadev, Ripunjay, Brahadran, Sumitra etc. protected Dharma propounded by Lord Krishna as best as they could. Kings like Vikramditya and Shalivahan too stopped Dharma to degenerate. Shankaracharya saved Dharma from the atheists' clutches. Other Acharyas like Vishnuswami, Ramanujacharya, Madhvacharya, Nimabakacharya, Vallabahacharya and Vitthalnathji propagated Dharma with their wisdom and protected it from evil. The times have changed for the worse. Today most people are under the influence of Adharma. The kings, gurus and saints are not conforming to religion any longer. Brahmins do not observe ethics of their Varna. Ascetics have become more like householders by keeping wealth and women. Women have discarded their chastity and indulge in adultery. Even seemingly religious persons are indulging in the consumption of meat and alcohol. People observe rituals and Vrats only to satisfy their mundane desires of wealth, women and pleasures. Even widows have left all modicum of religiosity by decking themselves up with fine and transparent clothes and ornaments. Adharma has indeed become prevalent. I am sure that Bhagwan must have surely taken birth to destroy this prevalence of Adharma. He has promised this in scriptures! Would it not be nice if God, considering us as His devotees, grants us His personal Darshan and protects us from the influence of Adharma?'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Just as King Abhay was venting his thoughts, king Khatvang entered his palace. King Abhay got up immediately to greet his elder friend and welcomed him warmly."

Thus ends the twenty second Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! King Abhay offered a seat, fruits and water to his friend and sat beside him. His wives, children and other family members took their seats behind them. After a while, Abhay asked Khatvang, 'O friend! Where are you coming from? You must have gone on a very important task as to leave your home at this time. I am sure that your arrival at my place must be beneficial to me.' Khatvang replied, 'I had gone for my guru's Darshan at Sardhar. Thousands of His other disciples had come there as well to partake in the festival of Janmashtami. I came to see you on my way home.' King Abhay asked Khatvang again, 'Your guru must be an extraordinary man. Otherwise a wise man like you would not travel so far during Monsoon. Please tell me more about your guru Sahajanand Swami. Narrate his virtues to me.' King Khatvang replied, 'I doubt if you would actually believe me when I describe His virtues and glory. He is so great!' King Abhay said, 'O friend! You are religious and always speak the truth. I trust you completely. I know that you will speak the truth just like the eldest Pandav, King Yudhishthir. Narrate your guru's virtues without any hesitation. We too like to be free from the clutches of this illusionary world.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Encouraged by King Abhay's trust in him, King Khatvang described not only what he has known and felt about Shree Hari but also what he has heard from other saints. He described in great detail how Shree Hari had helped many devotees undergo Samadhi at Mangrol. He painted the picture of Shree Hari as the ocean of all virtues and described many instances where people's life had changed for the better after His Darshan and hearing His sermons. King Khatvang emphasised that He was none other than the supreme God Who has independently taken birth to eradicate Adharma from the face of the earth. King Abhay and his family were astonished to hear the divinity of Lord Shree Hari. King Abhay thought that Shree Hari is indeed God.

King Abhay said, 'My friend! You have spoken the truth. Though outwardly calling Lord Krishna as His Ishtadev, I have no doubt that Shree Sahajanand Swami indeed is Lord Krishna Himself! I am curious to know more. Whose son is He? Where was He born and in which clan? When did He arrive in Saurashtra? Where does He intend to go from Sardhar? Describe His birth and His Leelas. I am very lucky that you did arrive here. I have always thought that Bhagwan must have taken birth as promised in the scriptures. After listening to you, I am sure that He has arrived! Please narrate His life in full detail to me. My fortune has shone today that you arrived with such splendid news. I would like to hear everything from you.'

Suvrat Muni said, "King Khatvang took a deep breath and meditated on Lord Shree Hari before starting. His heart felt an unexpected bliss in the memory of Shree Hari. He lost track of his surroundings, his eyes welled up and his speech turned fluent as he started to describe the life and Leelas of Shree Hari."

King Khatvang said, "Listen King Abhay! There is a small village called Chhapaiya, near Ayodhya in Koshal region. A pious and scholar Brahmin of Savarni clan named Devsharma and his equally pious wife Bhaktidevi lived there. They once performed a grand veneration to Lord Krishna at Vrandavan. Lord Krishna decided to take birth as their son when He decided to descend on earth to protect and propound Ekantik Dharma. His childhood Leelas attracted everyone's mind in Him. When He was only six days old, He destroyed Krutyas who had come to kill Him. As a three year old infant, He mesmerised Kalidutt, the leader of demons, and caused his death by crushing him against a fallen tree. Shree Hari's father migrated to Ayodhya due to repeated attempts by demons to harm his son. Shree Hari enticed the residents of Ayodhya too with His Leelas. He observed Brahamcharya Vrat following the sacred thread ceremony at the age of eight. To the surprise of His father, Shree Hari mastered the Vedas and other scriptures in a very short time. He relieved His parents and sent them to Akshardham and left home for the forest. He underwent severe austerity at PulahAshram to demonstrate the method of austerity to other ascetics. He observed the strictest Brahamcharya Vrat to set an example to other Brahamcharis. Similarly to revive the art of Ashtang Yoga and to set an example to other Yogis, He learned and mastered the process of Ashtang Yoga. He destroyed the pride of thousands of fake Yogis and redeemed a Brahmin from the curse of accepting unwarranted donation at Sirpur. He defeated many pretentious persons who had acquired the power of black magic by worshipping Shakti (the female power) and other deities and brought them back into the fold of Vedic religion. He created the enmity and instigated fighting to kill each other among thousands of fake ascetics gathered at Jagannath Puri. Similarly, Shree Hari urged King Satradharma of Manaspur to kill thousands of fake ascetics gathered there. He visited many shrines and caves to grant His benevolent Darshan to true seekers and free them from the clutches of Maya. He spread the gospel of Ekantik Dharma wherever He went. He arrived at Loj where He met Ramanand swami's disciples and true saints like Muktanand swami. Seeing their true devotion mixed with astute knowledge, Vairagya and austerity, Shree Hari concluded His seven years' pilgrimage of the country. O Abhay! Shree Hari met Ramanand swami at Piplana for the first time. Though being the guru of all gurus, Shree Hari became the disciple of Ramanand swami and accepted Diksha from him to set a noble example of accepting Diksha from an authentic guru before treading on the path of religiosity. Ramanand swami named Him as Sahajanand swami and Narayanmuni following the Diksha. Ramanand swami anointed Sahajanand swami as his successor prior to departing from this world.'

King Khatvang continued, 'The disciples of Ramanand swami accepted Sahajanand swami as their guru and obeyed all His commands without any doubts or rancour. Visiting village after village to spread the gospel of true Vedic religion, Narayanmuni arrived at Mangrol on a full moon day of month of Posh in Samvat 1858. He stayed in Mangrol for eight months during which He preached on Vedic Sanatan Dharma. He revived the step well in Mangrol to alleviate the scarcity of drinking water. He organised a grand festival to mark the reopening of the step well where He granted His Darshan as the four armed Lord Vishnu to the gathered Brahmins. As a result, the Brahmins professed Him as the supreme God and became His disciples. He held a grand ceremony to celebrate the festival of Janmashtami and granted His Darshan as Lord Shree Krishna to thousands of people gathered there for the festival. Muktanand swami and other saints' faith in Him became firmer as they realised that their Sahajanand swami is indeed Lord Krishna. I was present on this occasion and had His Darshan and along with thousands of others, I too became His disciple. Since then, I worship only Him. He helped hundreds of people slip into Samadhi and showed His many forms and abodes during the Samadhi. Some of them were worthy of this favour while others were undeserving. Just as the rain does not discriminate between pious and evil while drenching, Lord Shree Hari did not consider the sins of persons while granting them the bliss of Samadhi. Each person who went into Samadhi saw Shree Hari as their respective Ishtadev. They gave up their sects and gurus to become His disciples and devotees. He repeated the miracle of Samadhi in Kalvani as well to dispel all doubts. O King Abhay! He organised a grand Vishnu Yagna lasting for six months on the banks of River Ojaswati and gave gifts to each and every Brahmin who came in Yagna.

King Khatvang continued, 'Visiting and holding grand festivals at various villages, Lord Shree Hari is in Sardhar at present. I had gone for His darshan and have requsted Him to grace my village. He has promised me that He will come to Kariyani on the Purnima of the forthcoming month of Kartik. His many names such as Narayanmuni, Sahajanand Swami, Swaminarayan, Swami, Hari, Krishna, HariKrishna and Nilkanth have found fame in all nooks and corner of the land.

King Khatvang continued, 'Thousands of devotees have come unto Lord Shree Hari's refuge and have given up their old sects. They lead very chaste lives forsaking all vices. I have heard that some pious persons can see the divine presence of Dharma and Bhakti in person around Him. Lord Swaminarayan grants some of His devotees His Darshan as Lord Krishna with Radha and surrounded by His Parshads such as Nand, Sunand and Shridama in His Golok Dham while some see Him as Lord Vishnu accompanied by Laxmiji and Garud in His Vaikunth Dham. To some of His devotees He appears as Mahapurush surrounded by Niranna Muktas in Shwetdweep, while to others He appears as BhumaPurush accompanied by Laxmi in His Avyakrut Dham. Many see Him as ascetic Lord NarNarayan in the company of other ascetics while others see Him as Yogeswar resting on the body of Shesh on the shore of Kshirsagar and served by Laxmiji. Some devotees had His Darshan as YagnaNarayan or HirayanyaPurush in AgniLok and SuryaLok respectively. All this goes to prove that Lord Swaminarayan is the ultimate and supreme God. There is nothing beyond Him. As you know, one cannot attain Samadhi so easily. The people under the spell of Samadhi see His various abodes in their full glory and opulence. Only the blessings of God can make this possible. The persons desirous of Moksha now worship only Him. Even the people, of all creeds, age and gender, who had not yet come into His direct contact consider Him as the supreme God and worship Him by trusting His devotees' word. Lord Shree Hari comes in a plane to take such devotees to His supreme abode at the time of their death. The additional surprise is that not only the devotee on his death bed sees Him in person but other people present, devotees and non devotees alike, too see Him in person. Leaving all doubts aside, people accept Him as the supreme Bhagwan following such Darshan as such miracle is not possible otherwise. O Abhay! You may as well accept Him as the supreme Bhagwan and meditate upon Him. He will surely grant you His Darshan soon. Have no doubt about it.'

Suvrat Muni said, "After listening to Khatvang's account of Shree Hari's life, King Abhay and his family were certain that He indeed is the supreme Bhagwan Lord Krishna. Abhay asked Khatvang again, 'I have no doubt that Narayanmuni is the manifestation of Lord Krishna. You are blessed that you have gained His Darshan! We will meditate upon Him as from today. But how do we meditate? Please explain the method of meditation to us.' King Khatvang closed his eyes and thought of Lord Shree Hari before explaining the method of meditation to King Abhay and his family."

Thus ends the twenty fourth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-25

King Khatvang said, 'One must observe inner and external chastity and sit crossed legs in a serene place prior to meditation. Maintaining silence with their eyes fixed on the tip of their nose, hands clasped together and placed in the lap; they should bring forth the memory of Shree Hari in their mind. Imagine Shree Narayanmuni as handsome young man sitting on a divine Sinhasan or standing in front of you. His limbs and other body parts are proportionate; so as to enhance His dark complexioned divine beauty. His eyes are slightly reddish like the petals of a newly bloomed lotus, the palms and soles of His feet are soft and pink like the petals of the lotus, His fingernails and toenails are radiant and shaped as a series of half moons, His lips are like curved red sea

King Khatvang continued, 'When the mind has become steady after meditating on the entire body, o King Abhay, try to meditate upon each and every organ of Bhagwan. The mind is very fickle, but you must try to control and concentrate on His meditation. This washes away the sins that have been accumulated over many past lives. Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! King Abhay and his family heeded Khatvang's advice on meditation in their heart. The night of Ekadashi passed by quickly in the conversation about Shree Hari."

Thus ends the twenty fifth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-26

Suvrat Muni said, "The night passed and the morning dawned in narration and listening to Shree Hari's Leelas. Everybody concluded their morning routines. Just as King Khatvang was leaving for Kariyani, King Abhay said to him with moist eyes, 'O celibate King Khatvang! Please send a messenger to inform me when Shree Hari arrives in Kariyani. It is not possible for me to leave Gadhpur at present to proceed to Sardhar for His Darshan. I am troubled by my enemies who are waiting for an opportune moment to strike against me. For this reason, I am not in a position to leave Gadhpur even for a short while. You are a scholar and have studied many scriptures. You must know a suggestion to alleviate my problem. My desire for an earliest Darshan of Lord Swaminarayan can be fulfilled if my problem is solved quickly.' Khatvang replied, 'I will narrate to you a Stotra describing ten incarnations of Bhagwan Shree Hari. The chanting of this Stotra after the morning worship of Lord Krishna will solve all your problems and protect you from fear of evil. Listen to this intently and remember it by heart.'

At the end of Kalp (Brahma's day) when the earth was submerged in the water, You manifested as a divine fish. You saved King Satyavrat and seven great sages by

'To protect the cows, Brahmins, saints, earth, Devtas and Dharma, You took the birth as Lord Krishna in the clan of Yadu. You killed many demon kings such as Kans to relieve earth from the burden of the sinners. You did many Leelas to expand Your glory and for the benevolence of Your devotees. Just as You protected many of Your devotees in that incarnation, O Lord Shree Hari! Protect me from all evil.'

'You came on the earth as Budhha when, once again, the violence and religious malpractice became very prevalent. You re-established the practice of non-sacrificial Yagnas, Brahamcharya and moral code of conduct. O Lord! You redeemed thousands of devotees that came unto Your shelter. O Lord Shree Hari! Protect me from all evil.'

'You will manifest Yourself once again at the end of Kali Yug. You will mount the divine horse gifted by the Devtas and will once again destroy atheist and demonic kings by beheading them with the sword. The Vedic religion and religiosity will become re-established in the world once again with Your efforts. O Lord Shree Hari! Protect me from all evil.'

'O King Abhay! The repetitive chanting of or listening to this Stotra outlining the glory of Bhagwan's ten manifestations relieves one of all problems. It protects the devotee from all troubles arising from men, animals, spirits, enemies, ignorance, vices etc. The devotee attains Bhagwan's supreme abode at the end of his life due to His extreme mercy.'

Suvrat Muni said, "King Khatvang returned to Kariyani after advising King Abhay on the invincibility of the Dasaavtar Stotra.

King Abhay and his family regularly chanted the Dasaavtar Stotra at the end of their routine morning worship of Lord Krishna. They decided to give up all food items made from milk, Ghee and sugar and observe the Vrat of Dharna Parna (eating only on alternate days) till Shree Hari's Darshan. King Abhay was sure that almighty and merciful Lord Shree Hari will indeed grant him His Darshan. They became engrossed in His veneration with greater fervour. More and more of their time was now spent in the memory and Bhakti of Lord Swaminarayan. Their bodies became frail due to harsh Vrats. They no longer indulged in the regal pleasures. King Abhay delegated the affairs of the state to his ministers. They meditated upon Shree Hari daily as directed by King Khatvang. They were able to see Shree Hari's Murti in their hearts. As a result, their expectation and eagerness for His personal Darshan became even stronger. O king! They never allowed their Bhakti to wane even a little. Two and a half months passed by in such unrelenting devotion and the troubles from their enemies died down too."

Thus ends the twenty sixth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-27

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Lord Shree Hari arrived in Kariyani after celebrating the festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi at Sardhar. King Khatvang rushed immediately to greet Him on hearing the news of His arrival. He took his cavalry and marching band with him to welcome his Ishtadev. He saw Shree Hari astride a tall horse at a distance. He was wearing a number of flower garlands offered to Him by devotees of villages en route. He was surrounded by Brahamcharis, celibate saints and many devotees on foot. The king warmly greeted Shree Hari and the accompanied saints and devotees with folded hands and brought them to his home. He made arrangements for Shree Hari's stay in his palace and made suitable arrangements for the accompanied devotees' stay at different homes. He and other devotees of Kariyani such as Raghav, Vaikunth, Vasto, Ramji, Velji, Vikram, Virdas, Kamji, Karna, Devji, Govar, Panchan, Hirji joined hands to serve Shree Hari reverentially. They fulfilled the significance of their birth and life by serving Him to the best of their abilities including the wealth. All devotees of Kariyani venerated Shree Hari by offering Him flower garlands, expensive robes, gold and silver coins and jewellery. They prostrated at His divine feet and stood in front of Him satiating their eyes with His Darshan. Suddenly, Shree Hari in the garb of a Brahamchari, transformed into Lord Krishna, wearing golden robes and playing a flute. They prostrated at His feet again. Just as they were enjoying His new form and just as suddenly, they saw Shree Hari as a Brahamchari wearing white robes as previously. They were astonished by this miracle and understood that Shree Hari seated in front of them is indeed none other than supreme Lord Krishna Himself who manifests in different Avatars.

King Khatvang, with his head bowed and hands folded, said humbly to Shree Hari, 'O Nilkanth! Be victorious! You relieve devotees from the clutches of Maya by granting them the knowledge of Your Swarup. You are the only redeemer of Your disciples. You have taken birth as a son of Dharma and Bhakti to captivate the minds of evil persons. O Hari! I repeatedly bow to You! You are the supreme Bhagwan and reside perennially in Your supreme abode, Akshardham. You are the one Whom the Shrutis extol as 'beyond everything including Akshar'. I am very happy that You, Lord Narayan is present in front of me in my home. Even the liberated souls who have attained Brahm by forsaking three traits of Maya worship You. You are independent and beyond Maya, yet accept three traits of Maya willingly. By accepting Rajas trait, You create the universe as Brahma and Daksha Prajapatis; by accepting Satva trait, You sustain the universe as Vishnu and Dharma and by accepting Tamas trait, You annihilate the universe as Shiva and Shesha. However You are distinct to, and beyond the three traits of Maya. You do not get influenced by Maya as you are its controller. The Vedas attest this truth. You independently manifest Yourself again and again to re-establish the Vedic religion and protect the pious from the evil.'

King Khatvang continued, 'O Hari! You, as Varah manifestation, killed the mighty demon Hiranyaksha and brought back the earth from his clutches. Pleased with the prayers by Ruchik Prajapati, You appeared as YagnaNarayan with Laxmiji, who was born as Dakshina Devi to protect Swayambhu Manu from the group of demons. You had killed those demons as a favour to mankind. You appeared as Lord NarNarayan to enhance Dharma, knowledge, Vairagya and Your Bhakti in the hearts of Your devotees born in India. You took the birth as Kapil, a son of Sage Kardam and Devhuti to re-establish the lost knowledge of Sankhya. You performed austerity on an island of Eastern Ocean. O Hari! You took birth as Dattatreya, the son of sage Atri and re-established the Dharma for all Ashram and Varna. The kings Sahasrarjun and Yadu acquired great kingdoms and opulence while alive and attained Moksha at their deaths as a result of your blessings. Satisfied with the severe austerity of young prince Dhruv, You appeared in person in front of Him holding a conch, Chakra, mace and lotus in Your hands and blessed him the eternity by establishing him as a polar star. You took birth as Prithu, the son of King Ven and milked medicines from various plants to propagate fauna on earth and gave Moksha to Your sinner father. You were the first emperor to rule the whole earth. At the end of Kalp, You, as Hayagreev, brought back four Vedas that were accidently slipped from four mouths of Brahma. You, as Matsya, gave King Satyavratt the sermon on Dharma ofAshram and four Varna. You, as Kurma (turtle) held Mandrachal on Your back to assist Devtas in the churning of the ocean to regain their lost glory and wealth. The demons hijacked the pot of nectar from the Devtas that arose as a result of the churning of the ocean. You took the form of Mohini (beautiful maiden) to mesmerise the demons with Your beauty and brought back the pot of nectar to feed it the to Devtas. To protect Your devotee Prahalad and to kill the mighty demon Hiranyakshipu, o Lord! You manifested as half man and half lion. Your Narsinh form was so terrible as to scare even a lion and Your roar so loud as to tremble the whole universe. You killed the demon with Your long and sharp nails and enthroned his reluctant son Prahalad as the king. As a Vaman son of Kashyap Prajapati, You asked for a piece of land measured by just three steps. You measured all three Loks with Your three steps and banished the demon King Bali to Paataal. To make sure that Manus, seven great sages, Devtas and their king Indra remain faithful to their duties and manage the affairs of the universe properly, O Shree Hari! You manifest Yourself as 'RajRaj' in the lifespan of each Manu. As Dhanvantari, You gave the world the Ayurved (the scripture of medicine) to cure all ailments. You regained Your rightful portion of offering at the conclusion of every Yagna which Devtas had previously stopped. You, as Parshuram, the son of Sage Jamdagni, killed the conceited King Sahasraarjun with an axe and repeatedly (21 times), roamed the earth to make sure that not a single Kshatriya survives Your axe.'

King Khatvang continued, 'You independently took the birth as Lord Ram, the son of King Dasharath. You killed the demons such as Tadka, Subahu, Marich that were hindering Sage Viswamitra's Yagna. You redeemed Sage Gautam's wife, Ahalya and married Sita, the princess of Mithila after breaking Shiva's mighty bow. You along with Your wife Sita and brother Laxman went to forest to protect the honour of Your father. You asked Laxman to cut the nose and ears of Suparnakha, the demon King Ravan's sister who had come to marry You. You killed many other demons during Your stay in the forest. While searching for Your abducted wife, You granted Moksha to Jatayu and Kabandh who had tried to save Sita from the clutches of Ravan. You also redeemed Your Bhil devotee Sabari. You removed Sugreev's fear by killing his brother Vali. One of Vali's ministers, Hanuman managed to find abducted Sita in Lanka. After building the bridge across the sea, You killed Ravan in a battle with the help of an army of monkeys and bears. Thereafter, You returned to Ayodhya with Sita to rule over the vast kingdom. O Lord! You knew that the people's intelligence will wane in the times to come. For this reason, You took birth as Sage Vyas, the son of Sage Parashar, and divided the Vedas into four divisions. You also wrote many Puranas and an epic, the Mahabharat to make it easier to understand the complex meanings of the Vedas.'

King Khatvang continued, 'To alleviate the burden of sinners from the earth, You took the birth as Lord Krishna. You killed many demons such as Putna, Bakasur, Aghasur, Vatsasur, Shakatasur, Trunavarta, Shankhchud, Arishtasur, Vyomasur, Keshi etc. while still a child in Gokul. You played many pranks as a child, such as breaking yoghurt pots of Gopis. You revealed Your divinity by Leelas, such as uprooting two giant Yamalarjun trees; showing the whole universe in Your tiny mouth to mother

You praised the fortune of mountains, trees and birds of Gokul to have Your divine Darshan. You granted a desired boon to Gopis and You accepted dinner from the wives of Brahmins of Mathura. You pleased all the Gopis by playing Raas with them and more so to please Radha by granting her desire of secluded and private Darshan away from the Raas. You then went to Mathura with Akrur at Nand's insistence. You redeemed a tailor, gardener and Kubja; killed the arrogant washerman, killed a mighty tusker Kulyapeed, broke the bow and killed wrestlers Charun and Mustik before killing the demonic maternal uncle Kans. You will once again take the birth as Kalki, the son of Vishnuyash at the end of the present Kali Yug to punish the evil persons. vanquished by demons. Sometimes You take birth from parents, while at other times You just appear unexpectedly from nowhere. Safeguarding Vedic religion is the primary purpose of all Your incarnations. Even at this time, You have arrived to obliterate powerful but demonic gurus and kings who have subjugated true Dharma. Your divine Leelas alleviates devotees' pains and sufferings. O Bhagwan! Your births and Leelas are divine and are so numerous that even the best of the scholars cannot comprehend and narrate all of them.'

Suvrat Muni said, "At the end of Stuti (prayer extolling His greatness), King Khatvang pleaded with Shree Hari, 'O Lord! My mind is concentrated on You only. I am Your disciple! I wish to serve You for some more time. Do me a favour and stay in my palace for a few more months.' The merciful Shree Hari accepted King Khatvang's request and replied, 'O king! I know you are pious. I will remain here till Vasant Panchmi.' O Pratapsinh! The devotees of Kariyani were happy to get the chance to serve Shree Hari. Khatvang sent an emissary to Gadhpur to inform King Abhay of Shree Hari's arrival at Kariyani and invite him for His Darshan. The messenger reached Gadhpur the same day and delivered Khatvang's message."

Thus ends the twenty seventh Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-28

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Abhay passed on the good news of Shree Hari's arrival in Kariyani to his family. Desirous of His Darshan, they departed immediately for Kariyani. King Abhay was very happy because the fear from his enemies had totally subsided due to the repeated chanting of the Dasaavtar Stotra. He reached Kariyani the same day. He was accompanied by his family of two wives, four daughters and a son, his brother-in-law, Galav and few foot soldiers. Khatvang was very pleased to see his friend, greeted him warmly and made suitable arrangements for their stay. King Khatvang led the whole family for Shree Hari's Darshan. King Abhay found Shree Hari exactly as his friend Khatvang had described to him. He prostrated at His feet.

Khatvang introduced Abhay to Shree Hari and although he knew that Shree Hari knows everything, still extolled Abhay's love for Shree Hari and the severe Vratt he had observed in anticipation of His Darshan. Shree Hari greeted Abhay warmly in return. After offering many expensive gifts such as jewellery and fine clothes, King Abhay prayed to Shree Hari with this Stuti."

King Abahy said, 'O protector of Dharma! O master of saints! O slayers of demons! You have taken human form to protect Your devotees from the path of pretentious Dharma. O serene Murti Nilkanth! Be forever victorious! O handsome Shree Hari! You have taken birth as a human only so that Your devotees can venerate You in person for their benevolence. You are an ocean of clemency and forgiveness. O serene Murti Nilkanth! Be forever victorious! You are omnipresent in all souls; You espouse the benevolence Sankhya and Yoga philosophy to nurture Your devotees and take them to Golok; You sustain Dharma at all times. Any one of the nine types of Your Bhakti protects Your devotees from Adharma, Maya and the influence of Kali Yug. You are ever eager to undertake religious activity. O serene Murti Nilkanth! Be forever victorious! O Prabhu in the garb of a celibate Brahamchari! You have made the activity of Ashtang Yoga prevalent. O Yogeshwar! You are the final destination of all Yogis. Your left hand is always raised to shower Your blessings and fearlessness for Your devotees because You are very kind and benevolent. You are just divine! O serene Murti Nilkanth! Be forever victorious! The lust and accumulated sins burn to ashes just by reminiscing Your name and the power of Your sermon destroys all ignorance. You are indeed the controller of everything. O son of Hariprasad and Bhakti! O Narayan! O Krishna! O HariKrishna! O Hari! O serene Murti Nilkanth! Be forever victorious! You are Acharya of all Acharyas and guru of all gurus. You expand Your Leelas just so that sages and Your devotees can recollect them for their pleasure. Great sages and kings prostrate at Your divine feet. You have independently taken birth to rescue innumerable souls drowning in the sorrows of the world only because You were overcome by the sight of their pain due to Your compassion. O serene Murti Nilkanth! Be forever victorious! You are the supreme Bhagwan. You are the only entity in this universe which is totally complete. You are the ocean of mercy. You fulfil Your devotees' desires. O Lord Vishnu! You are the real creator, sustainer and destroyer of this and many other universes. You are indeed the fulcrum and support of all things - moveable and immobile. You reside in Your abode, AksharBrahm, beyond the darkness of Maya. Who indeed can narrate Your glory and greatness in full? You douse the flames of never ending cycle of engulfing desires. Your Akshardham is indeed the abode of bliss. You have done us a great favour by appearing in front of us in person. We pray to You that our minds always retain the memory of Your ever smiling face. The face that is surrounded by ears adorned by fish shaped earrings and partly covered by the strings of pearls and flowers dangling from Your diadem. Let our mind be engrossed in Your face, just as a bee is engrossed in a flower. O Prabhu! The Kumkum Chandlo in the middle of an Urdhvapundra Tilak on Your forehead looks even more attractive due to the few grains of rice stuck on it. Your wide eyes and curved eyebrows lend splendour to Your face. Let our minds be engrossed in such a handsome face.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Lord Shree Hari was very pleased with such heartfelt Stuti by King Abhay. He pleaded with Shree Hari, 'O Swami! I am Your servile disciple, who has come unto Your shelter. Please fulfil my desire. I have come with my family to take You, Your saints and devotees to Gadhpur. Please accept my invitation and come to Gadhpur with me.' O king! Shree Hari replied, 'I realise your innocent love for Me. I will indeed come to Gadhpur, but not now. I have promised King Khatvang to remain in Kariyani for some time. I will come to Gadhpur after the festival of Vasant Panchmi and celebrate the festival of Pushpadol (Dhuleti) there.' King Abhay said, 'I shall remain in Kariyani until You come to Gadhpur with me.' Deciding to stay behind in Kariyani until such a time as to accompany Shree Hari to Gadhpur, King Abhay and his family terminated their Vrats they had undertaken to fulfil their desire of Shree Hari's Darshan. King Abhay sent his brother-in-law, Galav, to Gadhpur to look after the affairs of the state and he started serving Shree Hari reverentially. "

Suvrat Muni continued, "Just as in Mangrol previously, Shree Hari, during His stay in Kariyani deepened and cleaned a lake to alleviate the shortage of drinking water. King Khatvang donated his wealth willingly to cover all expenses for this purpose, and just as in Piplana, Shree Hari organised a grand Vishnu Yagna in Kariyani to the surprise of everybody. O king! Many of His devotees from far afield came to Kariyani for His Darshan. They brought many gifts and much wealth to give to Shree Hari. He appointed Somla Khachar, Sura Khachar, Matara Dhadhal, Alaiya Khachar and Jeeva Khachar as principal guards for the protection of the Yagna and visiting devotees. Shree Hari fed and gave large donations to innumerable Brahmins during this Yagna. Shree Hari held Rudra Yagna in Kariyani too which He concluded on Vasant Panchmi. Shree Hari restarted the lost practice of non-sacrificial Yagnas of our ancient tradition. Thousands of well satisfied Brahmins spread the news of the well orchestrated Yagnas far and wide. The fame of His generosity became the topic of conversation amongst people. Even the kings of surrounding kingdoms were astonished by the amount of wealth Shree Hari generously gifted to Brahmins."

Thus ends the twenty eighth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-29

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari donated generously to Brahmins as he concluded Rudra Yagna as per the scriptures. He held a large assembly on Vasant Panchmi, where the devotees of Kariyani and surrounding villages venerated Shree Hari reverentially with gifts of money, clothes, flower garlands, sandalwood paste etc. Shree Hari sat on a large Sinhasan while devotees including saints and females took their appropriate seats in front of Him. Their eyes and minds were focused on the face of Lord Swaminarayan and were eagerly waiting for His sermon."

Lord Narayanmuni spoke, 'Listen to Me! O devotees! There is no Punya greater than benevolence. The insects and animals only care for themselves. Great are the philanthropist, who look after others! They provide for others even if it means that they go without luxuries. The person who does not do anything to alleviate other people's sufferings is called cruel by the scholars. Blessed is the King Rantidev whose philanthropy is extolled till today.'

Suvrat Muni said, 'O king! The devotees collectively asked Shree Hari to tell them the tale of King Rantidev's generosity in detail."

Narayanmuni said, 'Many eons ago, there was a king named Sankruti. His son, Rantidev was kind, wise and religious. He lived a very chaste life and ruled his kingdom justly. He performed innumerable non sacrificial Yagnas and donated his wealth liberally to the Brahmins to such an extent, that he became a pauper as a result. Yet he was happy to donate whatever he received from others. He became dependent on the largesse of others. Sometimes he got tasty food, while at other times he got only bland food without Ghee or oil. However, he was always satisfied with whatever food he got without asking anybody for it. The drought struck his kingdom once. He did not get anything to eat for forty eight days. Yet he did not lose his patience. A Brahmin offered him some food on the forty ninth day. He divided the food in three equal portions, one each for himself, his wife and son. A hungry Brahmin begged for the food from Rantidev as he was just about to start eating. He gave his portion of food to the Brahmin without any hesitation or rancour. A Shudra beggar approached the king just as the Brahmin departed. Overcome with compassion, Rantidev gifted his wife's portion of food to the beggar. A third person, with his dogs begged for food from Rantidev. He was pleased that he got a chance to feed the starving guest and his animals, so Rantidev gave him the third portion of food willingly, which would have fed his son. O devotees! The king now had water just enough to quench the thirst of one person. A downtrodden person approached Rantidev and asked for some water to quench his thirst. Though he was thirsty himself, Rantidev, considering the guest as a form of God, gave water to that person. He thought aloud, 'I have not asked for anything from God for myself, including the Moksha, but today, I wish that I can alleviate the suffering of my subjects. My thirst and hunger has subsided just as I was thinking of giving water to the thirsty beggar. My lethargy, fatigue and worry too have disappeared.' Pleased by his generosity and propensity to help others, Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva appeared in person in front of him. He prostrated at their feet but did not ask for anything, not even food and water for himself or his family. Such philanthropist king's ignorance disappeared and he became free from Maya with God's mercy. This incident aroused much religiosity in his subjects as well and they became more ardent devotees. O devotees! King Rantidev's benevolence became famous. You must bear all difficulties and be prepared to help others in their hour of need.'

Thus ends the twenty ninth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O Pratapsinh! A few days passed by in Kariyani. King Abhay once approached Shree Hari and said, 'O Bhagwan! I have come to remind You that the time You had given me to come to Gadhpur has elapsed. Please come to Gadhpur soon.' Shree Sahajanand Swami replied, 'Make preparations to travel to Gadhpur and we shall leave today.' Lord Shree Hari, King Abhay and his family, King Khatvang and saints left Kariyani the same night. The devotees of Kariyani went to the outskirt of the village to bid them farewell. O king! They reached Gadhpur the next morning, the bright Ekadashi of month of Magh in Samvat 1861. Galav came to receive Shree Hari with soldiers and musical instruments. Shree Hari entered Gadhpur with honour and regal pomp. King Abhay made arrangements for Shree Hari to stay in the newly built annexe while accompanying saints and devotees were accommodated elsewhere."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Abhay said to Shree Hari, 'O Bhagwan! I, my kingdom, my treasury, my palace and indeed everything that belongs to me is now Yours. I surrender everything to You.' Saying this, King Abhay joined in the service of Lord Shree Hari as if His personal servant. He served Bhagwan so fervently that Shree Hari Himself thought that He is no longer a guest but the master of the palace. Abhay's service overshadowed all previous devotees' services. He served saints too with the same fervour. O king! The Brahmin devotees such as Gopi Bhatt, Bechar, Lalji, Bhagwanji, Ramchandra, Krushnaji, Kshatriya devotees such as Nanja Jogia, Rathod, NaagMalo, Vaishya devotees such as Malji, Krushnaji, Ambo, Uko, Harji, Ramji, Yodho and female devotees such as Rama, Amari, Amula, Kshema, Devi, Swarna, Rati, Fully and Divya joined hands to serve Shree Hari with love and reverence."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Abhay sent messengers to invite saints and devotees from far and wide to Gadhpur for the Pushpadol Utsav with Shree Hari's permission. He gathered large quantity of coloured powder and built large open tanks to store coloured water. Shree Hari guided devotees to erect a swing and have it decorated with flowers on the day of Dhuleti. He placed a Murti of young Lord Krishna in the swing and performed ritualistic worship. He asked saints and devotees to sing Kirtans appropriate for the occasion, while He pulled the string to swing Lord Krishna. Muktanand swami and other saints, accompanied by musical instruments like Veena and Mrudang, sang the Kirtans depicting Lord Krishna playing Holi for a long time. Shree Hari started throwing powdered colour on saints and devotees. Taking cue from Shree Hari, devotees threw coloured powder and coloured water on each other. Married female devotees played colour among themselves while Vidhava female devotees looked on from a distance without joining in. The air became thick with the coloured powder while ground became muddy with the coloured water. Everybody played with the colour till midday, when Lord Shree Hari accompanied all devotees to River Unmattganga for a bath. Shree Hari offered Naivedhya to young Lord Krishna and performed a grand Aarti of young Lord Krishna before taking Him down from the swing and placing Him to rest. Shree Hari fed all the saints and devotees with a sumptuous meal before eating Himself. He called a large assembly in the afternoon, just as on the occasions of the past festivals. He sat on an ornate Sinhasan while saints, devotees - male and female- took their appropriate seats around Him. Everyone eagerly expected a divine sermon and He did not disappoint them."

Shree Sahajanand Swami said, 'Listen to Me, all you devotees! I will show you the best means to attain Moksha. You must associate with true saints by thought, speech and physically regularly. All earlier devotees who have attained Moksha have done so only through association with saints. One becomes free from the clutches of Maya only through the ascent of Bhakti in Bhagwan which is possible only after knowing the full glory and greatness of Bhagwan Shree Krishna. And only saints can explain the true glory and greatness of Lord Krishna. The souls have been blinded by the continuous onslaught of Maya from the time immemorial. Only saints can remove that ignorance and open the eyes to differentiate between right and wrong, Dharma and Adharma. Even the best of the scholars cannot comprehend the intended meaning of the scriptures on their own. Only saints are able to explain the true essence of the scriptures. O devotees! Only saints can free the souls from the clutches of vices such as greed, anger and lust. The soul is poisoned by the evil gurus which can only be neutralised by the sermons of true saints. The true knowledge of Aatma and Parmatma is possible only through the saints; therefore, you must always associate with saints.'

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, 'However, it is very important to recognise true saints as explained in the scriptures. Let Me explain the traits of true saints in short. True saints are those who have overcome vices such as lust, anger, palate, ego, envy, jealousy and hypocrisy. They observe Brahamcharya and non violence by thought, speech and actions. They are kind, compassionate, truthful, free from the mundane desires of five senses and have a profound and unstinted love and devotion in Lord Krishna. Realising the temporary nature of their physical bodies and permanent nature of their souls, they worship Him reverentially. The saints should be tested against such exalted qualities before associating with them. Once knowing those true devout saints hold them close to your hearts and obey their edicts. Only such true saints are capable of redeeming the soul and only such true saints are worthy of your trust. You should revere, feed and clothe such saints as they are the heart of Shree Krishna. There is nothing that cannot be attained with the mercy and blessings of such pious saints.'

Suvrat Muni said, "All devotees present in the assembly bowed at His feet and promised to abide by His dictates. Bhagwan asked all visiting devotees to return to their villages. King Abhay stood up and spoke with folded hands and bowed head."

Thus ends the thirtieth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-31

King Abhay said, 'O Bhagwan! Please request all the saints and Brahamcharis to remain in Gadhpur until the end of Chaturmaas and I would serve them to the best of my ability. I like to see You surrounded by saints and Brahamcharis, so please remain in Gadhpur until then. You are kind and benevolent. Please accept my request.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Bhagwan was very pleased at Abhay's humility and said lovingly, 'O pious King Abhay! I understand your innocent love and Bhakti. I will fulfil your desire and remain here till Prabodhani Ekadashi.' Shree Hari asked the saints to remain in Gadhpur and asked other devotees to return to their respective villages the next morning. He praised King Abhay's qualities such as his humbleness, faith, knowledge, servitude, detachment etc, while also praising Abhay's wives', sisters' and son's similar qualities besides their religiosity and chastity. Shree Hari and His saints lived in King Abhay's palace happily. The saints derived great bliss by Shree Hari's proximity, regular Darshan and discourses. Abhay and his family served Shree Hari and His saints reverentially. Jaya's and Lalita's Bhakti became even stronger and deeper than their brother's."

Suvrat Muni continued, "King Abhay performed Shree Hari's special veneration with sandalwood paste, flower garlands, gold coins etc. on Chaitra Sud Navmi of Samvat 1861, knowing it as Shree Hari's birthday. He and his son prostrated at His feet and the whole family stood there looking at His face. They collectively slipped into Samadhi. The bright radiance emanated from Shree Hari seated surrounded by the saints and spread in all directions. King Abhay saw Lord Krishna playing Raas with numerous Gopis within this radiance. Lord Krishna appeared as sixteen years young and slightly dark complexioned. He was wearing golden robes with a coronet decorated with the single peacock feather. He was playing the flute and His eyes were fixed on Radha while other Gopis were gazing at Him lovingly. He appeared more handsome than thousands of Eros together. O king! Just as Abhay and his family were engrossed in Lord Krishna's Darshan, the whole scene got transformed and they saw Shree Hari surrounded by the saints. King Abhay was elated with the divine Darshan of two distinct forms of Bhagwan. He bowed at Shree Hari and prayed with folded hands.

'O son of Dharmadev, Shree HariKrishna! I bow to You for giving me Your Darshan as Lord Krishna in Samadhi. You appear as a Naisthik Brahamchari wearing white robes in one form sitting in front of me while I saw You wearing golden robes in Your other form. Both of Your slightly dark complexioned Murtis look very handsome. O Shree Hari! You appear very serene surrounded by celibate saints in one form. You are then surrounded by beautifully adorned Gopi's in Your other form. Your wide and long twinkling eyes, which are comparable to the petal of a newly bloomed lotus, of both Swarup mesmerise Your devotees. 'O Shree HariKrishna, the son of Dharmadev! I bow to You for giving me Your Darshan as Lord Krishna in Samadhi. O Shree Hari! You are holding a Tulsi Mala in Your hand in one form, while playing soothing flute in Vrandavan in Your other form. You are wearing numerous beautiful flower garlands in both of Your forms. O Shree Hari! You surprise the general populace by letting Your devotees experience Samadhi with a mere glance in one form while You surprise Devtas by playing Raas with each Gopi in Your other form. You are capable of wiping out the ego of Kaamdev totally in both Your forms. 'O son of Dharmadev, Shree HariKrishna! I bow to You for giving me Your Darshan as Lord Krishna in Samadhi. O Shree Hari! You reside in Your devotees' homes in one form while You play and dance in Vrandavan in Your other form. You attract the minds of Your devotees in You by Your compassionate eyes in both of Your forms. O Shree Hari! You entice Your devotees by the strings of scented flowers hanging from Your diadem in one form while attracting their minds in You by the coronet adorned with the line of peacock feathers. Your feet in both forms have the divine insignias such as a lotus, triangle, hoof etc. 'O son of Dharmadev, Shree HariKrishna! I bow to You for giving me Your Darshan as Lord Krishna in Samadhi. O Shree Hari! You immediately gift all valuable jewellery to Brahmins that Your devotees offer You in veneration as Sahajanand Swami while You wear jewelled rings, anklets, bracelets and other ornaments as Lord Krishna. Maya. O Shree Hari! You protect Your devotees from the fear of inner enemies such as lust, anger, greed etc in one form while You protect residents of Gokul by killing demons like Aghasur, Vratasur etc. in another form. You are Your devotees' guide and friend in both of Your Swarups. 'O son of Dharmadev, Shree HariKrishna! I bow to You for giving me Your Darshan as Lord Krishna in Samadhi.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Abhay went and sat near His feet after concluding the Stuti. Shree Hari blessed him and as a result, King Abhay became totally free from the influence of Maya. His life seemed fulfilled with Shree Hari's pleasure. He started serving Shree Hari and the saints with an increased enthusiasm. His son Uttam and daughters Jaya and Lalita also joined him. Shree Hari and the saints lived in Gadhpur happily. The festival of Janmashtami was celebrated in Gadhpur (Samvat 1861), just as grandly as was celebrated at Mangrol, Manavadar and Sardhar in previous years. Shree Hari celebrated each intermediate Ekadashis with much pomp as well. The days passed by merrily as Sharad Purnima (Aso Sud Poonam) arrived.

Thus ends the thirty first Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-32

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The sky was clear of the clouds and the moon was at its very best on the night of Sharad Purnima. Following the bath in the River Unmattganga, Shree Hari placed the idol of young Lord Krishna on an ornate Sinhasan. He venerated Lord Krishna and offered Him the Naivedhya of milk pudding. Muktanand swami, Premanand swami and other saints sang Kirtans depicting Lord Krishna's Raas Leela until very late. Thousands of devotees had gathered for Shree Hari's Darshan. Only saints remained behind with Shree Hari as all devotees, including King Abhay and his family retired for the night. Shree Hari decided to grant special favour to His saints who had eyes only for Him. They desired nothing except Him and His pleasure."

He looked at saints very affectionately and said, 'O saints! You have taken birth as a direct result of Sage Durvasha's curse. You are as capable as Brahma. I grant you the divine powers to realise and know your past.' The saints were able to see their true identity and their latent powers as a result of Shree Hari's express wish. They became aware of the true identity of other saints as well. They saw themselves sitting in an assembly in front of Lord Narayan in Badrikaashram and realised that Shree Hari in front of their eyes is none other than Lord Narayan of Badrikaashram. Blessed and pleased with this realisation, they requested Shree Hari to let them have this knowledge of their true identity for ever."

Shree Hari replied, 'Your wish to retain the memory of your true identity is not in your interest. O saints! The world today is populated with many demonic sinners who would not be able to understand or realise your powers. Knowing your abilities and power to punish, you may not be able to endure their insults and control your anger. Your anger may bring devastation. The whole world suffered great calamity as a result of Sage Durvasha's curse, though it was aimed only at Indra's misdemeanour. There is a great likelihood that many innocent people may suffer because of your anger directed towards a single person for his crime. All your austerities will be washed away if any innocent person suffers as a result of your anger, therefore, it is better for you not to retain the memory of your true identity. However, you may recall your past identity sometimes by My express desire, but not always.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The saints forgot their past identity as it has materialised due to Shree Hari's wish. Lord Swaminarayan returned to His residence and the saints went to the bank of River Unmattganga to conclude their daily morning routine just before dawn. Shree Hari always thought about what was in the best interest of His saints and devotees. He wished to send some saints to far off places to spread His message and to bring waylaid people back into the Vedic religion. Devotees from various places came to Gadhpur to request Shree Hari to visit their respective villages. As he wanted to spread the gospel of true Sanatan Dharma far and wide, He promised devotees that He would visit their villages. O king! All this could be accomplished only after the Prabodhani Ekadashi, as Shree Hari had promised King Abhay to remain in Gadhpur till then. Shree Hari held a large assembly after the conclusion of the celebration of Prabodhani Ekadashi."

Seated on a large ornate Sinhasan, Bhagwan said to King Abhay, 'You had an opportunity to serve these pious saints, even though not many get such a splendid opportunity in their life time. We have stayed here for a long time, but now I want them to go to other places to emancipate more people from the clutches of Adharma. O King Abhay! Many of my devotees expect Me to visit their villages, therefore, we will take your leave. You and your family must continue observing Vrats, Dharma, Niyam and Bhakti.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Abhay started crying at the thought of Shree Hari's separation. He repeatedly bowed at Him and pleaded, 'O merciful! I will die due to Your separation. You are my life and soul. Where will You go abandoning me! If You must go then take me with You, or better still, remain in Gadhpur with us. I cannot bear Your separation. Grant me the permission to accompany You wherever You go. Do not think about what would happen to me or my state. As You sustain and feed the whole universe, I know that I will not starve in Your company. As the state of Gadhpur has already been turned over to You since Your arrival, I am not worried about it either. O king! Shree Hari was overwhelmed at such servility."

He said, 'Do not worry o King Abhay! Your innocent and sincere Bhakti has won Me over. I shall remain in Gadhpur forever, however, I shall go to other places to placate My devotees, but shall return to Gadhpur after such visits. Look after the affairs of the state. Even saints will keep coming to Gadhpur frequently for My Darshan after visiting other places, so you will continuously have the opportunity to serve them.'

Suvrat Muni said, "King Abhay was elated at such a pledge. One room at the palace was designated as a temple, where Shree Hari installed the idols of Vaasudev Narayan and Radha with rites conforming to the scriptures. He appointed a Brahmin named Bechar as Pujari to serve Shree VaasudevNarayan. Bechar venerated Lord Narayan five times a day as per the scriptures."

Thus ends the thirty second Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-33

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari had decided to send saints to various places to spread His gospel. With the view of warning them against the imminent and impeding dangers, He called them to advise them."

Shree Bhagwan said, 'O saints! You go to various places in groups and espouse Lord Krishna's Bhakti. Advise whoever comes to you that Bhakti is the only means by which one can attain Moksha. Make sure that you advise them to observe their Dharma according to their respective Varna and Ashram. Make them aware of the power of regular chanting of Lord Krishna's name. However, do not advise or address female devotees directly. They should be advised only through their husbands or other male relatives. O saints! Guard your Brahamcharya Vrat at all costs and never let that be diluted. Fear the females, just as a child fears a witch. Do not ever touch or speak to them. Engage in Lord Krishna's Bhakti by maintaining celibacy. Observe Niyams such as non violence and sermon others to observe the same. There are many kings and gurus of demonic tendencies and many of them pretend to be pious by adorning themselves with external insignias of a Bhakta. Identify them by their characteristics such as indulgence in mundane pleasures, lethargy in observations of ethics and not afraid to commit various sins. Your faith in Dharma and your standard of behaviour are exactly opposite to theirs, therefore, they will harass and malign you. They would not be able to bear your chaste life style. They indeed would have heard of My fame and they would despise you knowing you as My disciples. O saints! You must show restraint and patience in the face of such insults and harassment by these evil persons without getting angry at them. Patience is a pivotal virtue of a saint. Restraint in the face of severe provocation or affront sets a saint apart from an ordinary man. Moreover, anger destroys one's austerity.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O saints! Though most people appear patient until they have to face insults, true patience is only with those who bear insults even when they are capable of punishing their tormentors. They are the great who are not agitated by the insults hurled at them! You, My disciples, are benevolent, compassionate and lenient. You must forsake ego altogether and behave as humbly as King Bharat behaved in the bygone era. Whoever is able to endure the insults by such evil persons indeed becomes capable of controlling the whole world. Forsake anger, just as a snake discards its old skin and diminish your anger with pardon. O saints! A person who pardons his tormentor without getting angry is greater than another person who conducts Yagna every month for hundred years. What good is the knowledge of a knowledgeable person, if he gets angry just like an ordinary person? All pious deeds such as donation, Vrats, Niyam, austerity etc. are destroyed by the flames of anger. Equanimity, control of senses, austerity, donation, sincerity, afraid of committing sins and compassion are the seven gateways of the Heaven while anger is the gateway of the Hell. Therefore, the saints who wish to fructify their austerity must discard anger at all times. Anger is the root cause of the destruction in this world. An angry person speaks harshly to all, insults his elders and superiors or even commits murders of his father, brother or guru. He loses the sense of distinction between right and wrong. How can the pious saints ever get angry knowing all this? An angry person crosses all boundaries of behaviour set by scriptures and pious persons. Indeed, he even leads his own soul towards Hell. Therefore, you, My disciples must never succumb to anger. If a weak person picks a fight due to anger with a stronger man, there is a good chance that either he commits suicide due to his incapability or gets killed by the stronger person.'

Bhagwan continued, 'O saints! Committing suicide is a grave sin which leads one straight to Hell. It is better to control one's anger than commit suicide because of it. One earns fame in this world and Heaven in next by not succumbing to the anger. The stronger person should forsake anger by pardoning the other just as weak forsakes anger due to his helplessness. The learned persons do not extol the victory of an angry person. They always extol the victory of the tolerant. The wise person does not seek victory over an angry person as an angry person is considered akin to the corpse. O saints! Do not get angry towards anyone even if they are about to kill you. According to the scriptures, true saints are those who can control their anger in the face of great provocation. Only fools consider anger as strength. Anger is the by product of Rajas and Tamas traits. Just as a weak person controls his anger on being tormented by a stronger person, a strong person must learn to control his anger in the face of grave provocation. Forgiveness is true Dharma, Yagna, learning and knowledge of the pious saints. Punya and anger cannot co-exist which means ones Punya is destroyed by his anger. Forgiveness is the might of the mighty; austerity of an ascetic, truth of the truthful, piety of the pious and tranquillity of an inner self. Considering whatever sorrows, pain or insults one gets as God's gift, the patient and forgiving person is inching nearer to Him. A forgiving person is rewarded with opulence and a birth in a good clan in this world and Heaven in the next. He earns fame, praise and respect while alive and is honoured by the Devtas in Heaven. Even Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva praise the magnanimous. Indeed, I too, like the magnanimous. Therefore, you must always be prepared to forgive your tormentors when visiting various places to spread My Bhakti.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Heeding His edict and knowing the true teaching of their Ishtadev, all the saints bowed to Shree Hari and said, 'O Lord Narayan! O Bhagwan! We will behave exactly as You prescribed and will not succumb to any of the demonic vices such as anger etc. We are truly Yours. Attaining and pleasing You is our only goal in life. We request You to grant us Your divine Darshan soon.' Bowing once again to Lord Shree Hari, the saints departed on their tour of far off places. They spreaded the glory of Lord Narayan's present human incarnation wherever they went. Many mislaid people realised their misplaced faith and returned to the Vedic Udhhav Sampraday and even so called scholars were unable to defeat Shree Hari's saints in the debate on religiosity. O king! Truly religious persons were pleasantly surprised to hear the manifestation of Bhagwan as Lord Swaminarayan and became His disciples, even without having His personal Darshan. Impressed with the life style of such pious saints, they gave up their pretentious gurus and joined the fold of the Sampraday. The saints would talk of nothing but the glory of Shree Hari in every meeting in every nook of every village they visited. Many new devotees were able to slip into Samadhi with His blessings. They would visit various abodes of Bhagwan and see Him in His various manifestations in His opulent abodes. Shree Hari would come with His Parshads to take such devotees to His supreme abode at the time of their death. Even non devotees often witnessed such miraculous sight of Shree Hari. O king! The omnipotent and omnipresent Lord Swaminarayan gave His divine Darshan to many devotees who had not even come face to face with Him but had become devotees by having total faith in Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The fame of potency and glory of Shree Hari spread far and wide in all directions. The persons of divine traits were happy to hear such tales, whilst the people of demonic traits were worried at His ascent. The evil gurus felt dejected as their disciples left them to join the fold of the Sampraday and were unable to bear such rejection. In collusion with evil kings, they decided to take revenge on Shree Hari. Some of them used the power of black magic on Shree Hari, but in vain. Instead, they themselves suffered the consequences of failed black magic. One of them even tried directly to use the primed grains on Shree Hari. Some of them offered poisoned Paan (beetle leaves) to Shree Hari. While black magic and poison could not harm Shree Hari in any way, their practitioner suffered greatly. Some of them died terrible deaths whilst some lost their families and wealth and wandered around like beggars. Some of them decided to take direct violent actions by planning to kill Shree Hari by attacking Him with swords on the route of His journey. Blinded by the mesmerising power of Shree Hari, they were unable to move or do anything while He passed by in front of them and all their attempts to kill or harm Shree Hari failed. When they realised that they would not succeed against Shree Hari, they decided to punish and torture His saints instead."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The evil gurus and kings tormented saints wherever they went. Some of them would forcibly remove Kanthis from the saints' necks, whilst others forcibly erased Urdhvapundra Tilak and Chandlo from their foreheads. Some of them would steal their clothes and books while others even stole their Murtis after smashing Sinhasans. Some of them would deliberately throw sand or inedible things such as fish and meat in their bowls. Others enticed immoral women to come in front of saints and forcibly touch them. Not satisfied with verbal insults, some of them even went to the extent of beating them. Many times saints went hungry and without sleep due to incessant harassment from these evil persons. Some evil persons destroyed the communal eateries run by saints and chased them away. Though saints were capable of meting out punishment to their tormentors, they showed leniency and clemency towards them just as Shree Hari had advised. They endured all insults and tortures just as Shukdevji, Rhishabhdev and JadBharat had endured in the past. Slowly but surely, they were chased away from the large tract of the land. Unable to live anywhere in peace, the saints returned to Lord Narayanmuni. O king! Bhagwan warmly greeted arriving saints. Though aware of their sufferings, He asked them their wellbeing so that the devotees may become aware of their travails. Upon hearing their various problems, Shree Hari solaced them with soothing words."

Bhagwan said, 'O saints! Your tormentors' end has come and they will be destroyed no matter how powerful they may be. Whoever torments innocent and pious saints like you would have their health, wealth, fame, Punyas, blessings, indeed their whole clan destroyed. Just as demons such as Kans, Keshi, Bakasur etc. were destroyed, these modern demons will indeed be destroyed shortly due to their sins. The new ruler will arrive from the North West. He is the descendent of Angad, the son of Vali, whom Lord Rama had established as a king of that continent. He is a follower of ethics and is expert in vanquishing smaller kings. He is fair complexioned, clean shaven, armed and well attired. He is an expert in six arts of polity, four means of warfare and eighteen types of business. He is expert in many types of military formations to defeat an even seemingly stronger enemy. He can deploy his army at far off places with ease. Though being a wealthy ruler, he does not wear golden jewellery. He is religious and obeys the following Ten Commandments of his guru, Jesus. (1) Jesus is the only supreme God, (2) Love only Jesus, (3) Never falsely swear by the name of Jesus, (4) Forsake all worldly affairs and spend Sunday in worship of Jesus, (5) Respect parents, (6) Do not kill anybody, (7) Do not commit adultery, (8) Do not steal, (9) Do not bear false testimony and (10) Do not covet others' wealth. ten edicts, this king will protect you completely. Give up your outwardly insignias and remain incognito until his arrival. To live according to the prevalent times is in accordance with the scriptures. Previously in the bygone era, Pandavas spent a year secretly disguised though they had full support from Lord Krishna. Truth and religiosity always prevail in the end. Adharma never wins. Do not worry and remain disguised so no one can recognise you as My saints.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The saints did exactly as Lord Shree Hari said and for some time lived in such a way that people at large could not distinguish them from other people. They gave up all outwardly insignias of Udhhav Sampraday to hide their true identity from evil kings and gurus and spent their time in meditation of Lord Swaminarayan."

Thus ends the thirty fourth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-35

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Just as the saints were passing their days in incognito, the British empire started spreading quickly. The arrogant kings were vanquished and their property was annexed. Slowly but surely, the harassment of saints waned. The British governors and their political agents were able to distinguish between Shree Hari's true saints and the fakes. The fake saints were rounded up and punished severely including the death penalty in some cases. The evil gurus were frightened and went into hiding for the fear of reprisals by the British. Once, the representative of the British Empire, the governor of Saurashtra (Sir Malcolm) arrived in Rajkot. He had realised that annexation of kingdoms and increased morality in the society was as a result of Lord Swaminarayan's blessings and His saints' untiring effort. Therefore, he wished to meet Shree Hari in person. The governor sent an emissary to Gadhpur with his message. The emissary bowed at Shree Hari and said, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! The governor of Saurashtra is visiting Rajkot at present. I am his messenger. Hundreds of kings have gathered to seek an audience with him. He wishes to have Your Darshan before leaving Rajkot and has invited You to Rajkot to grant him Your Darshan. He has said that he is willing to travel to Gadhpur but has left the final decision to You as You are independent. He will abide by Your decision. He has added that Your saints and devotees are safe under his tutelage. No one will dare to harass them any more. O Lord! Let me know Your decision so that I can relay it to the governor."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Shree Hari was very pleased with the governor's modesty. Lord Narayanmuni said to the messenger, 'I bless the governor for he has protected My saints from unjust harassment. It is proper that I travel to Rajkot to meet him. Please proceed to Rajkot and relay my message to him. I will follow you shortly.' O king! The messenger went to Rajkot and gave this good news to the governor. The governor ordered his attendants that he be informed of Shree Hari's arrival immediately regardless of the time and place, even if he is in the meeting. He gathered various artefacts needed for Shree Hari's welcome and veneration before attending to the affairs of the state. Shree Hari, accompanied by a few Parshads and saints, left for Rajkot the next day. The crowd of villagers lined the route for His Darshan with many of them joining the procession on way to Rajkot. They were curious to see how the British governor would greet Shree Hari. Lord Narayanmuni reached Rajkot the next afternoon of leaving Gadhpur. The city of Rajkot was teeming with horses, elephants, camels, chariots, palanquins and soldiers of the kings who had come to meet the governor. The cries of 'Jay' 'Jay' echoed around as Shree Hari passed through the street of Rajkot. More and more people thronged the streets for His Darshan. Hearing the commotion, the attendants informed the governor of Shree Hari's arrival."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The governor, leaving aside all business affairs, rushed to greet Shree Hari. He went on foot to meet Shree Hari as He was making a slow progress through the streets of Rajkot. The governor's attendants also followed him on foot. On seeing the panting governor, Shree Hari dismounted from the palanquin to greet him. The governor, with tears of joy swelling his eyes, bowed and touched Shree Hari's feet. Holding his shoulders, Shree Hari raised the governor and embraced him warmly. The governor stood in front of Shree Hari with folded hands and eyes fixed on His smiling face. The awe and pleasure on governor's face wiped out ego and haughtiness from many of the on looking jealous kings. The governor and Shree Hari exchanged pleasantries as if they were long lost friends. The governor made suitable hospitality arrangements for accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees before leading Shree Hari to his personal tent. The warm welcome accorded to Shree Hari made the on looking evil kings to forsake their ego and bow to Shree Hari humbly in the presence of the governor. He offered an ornate settee to Shree Hari and other chairs to Muktanand swami and other prominent saints and Parshads to sit and asking the other kings and their attendants to leave the tent. He and only few of his advisors took their seats in front of Shree Hari. Guards were posted outside to stop any unauthorised entry in the tent. The other kings were overwhelmed at such a splendid welcome and honour bestowed upon Shree Hari.

Thus ends the thirty fifth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-36

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The governor was morally very upright and an expert in the art of polity. Very humbly and with folded hands, he said to Narayanmuni, 'I am very happy with Your Darshan. I consider You as God in the human form because You have achieved what only God can possibly achieve. The lust, greed, anger, ego etc. are such strong enemies of men that no one can overcome on their own. One needs God's blessings to overcome these vices. Your saints and devotees have overcome them with Your blessings. Your saints live a chaste life as described in the scriptures. They are the only true saints in present times. However, some evil people did harass Your saints. I have vanquished, imprisoned and even killed most of them. Though some of them may be hiding somewhere, none would dare to torment Your saints anymore. I know that this has become possible only with Your blessings. Let Your saints come out in open and wear holy insignias of the Udhhav Sampraday. My government will offer full protection to them.'

Shree Hari replied, 'You are wise. I am sure that your actions would be moral and just. To differentiate between the pious and evil, protect the religion and pious, eradicate Adharma and punish the evil persons and care for the subjects as their children are the main duties of the kings. Your power and influence are increasing only because you defend Dharma whilst the kings who supported Adharma are thrown aside. Your arrival and ascendency in India is God's will. He wants you to defend Dharma. Your power will last till you tread the path of Dharma. Whichever kings acquired the great power in the past, they did so only as the direct result of them defending Dharma and true saints.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "The governor, desirous of Moksha asked Shree Hari, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! I have obtained all materialistic pleasures of this world by God's grace but I desire the eternal bliss at death. You have freed Your devotees from the cycle of death and rebirth and now I have come unto Your refuge. Advise me how I can also become free from the shackles of this unending cycle of death and rebirth.'

Shree Hari replied, 'You have asked a profound and benevolent question. The answer to your question lies in the scripture which I attest. The mundane sensual pleasures are easily obtainable in all life forms. The means to achieve Moksha is only possible in the human life, however, the human birth is a rare opportunity. The human life, obtained as result of Punyas of many past lives, is very fickle. It could end at any moment; therefore, the wise must endeavour to attain Moksha till the human life remains. Bhakti is the primary means of achieving Moksha. However, Bhakti must be accompanied by the observation of Dharma, acquisition of knowledge and the development of Vairagya. Bhakti on its own in the absence of Dharma, knowledge and Vairagya is futile in the attainment of Moksha. This is the true meaning of all scriptures. Therefore, O governor, you must engage in God's Bhakti accompanied by Dharma, Gnaan (knowledge) and Vairagya.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The governor was elated at listening to Shree Hari. He asked Narayanmuni to explain to him in detail the traits of Dharma, Gnaan and Vairagya, which Shree Hari duly obliged. The governor said to Lord Hari, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! You are the supreme God! You have taken human form to fulfil Your devotees' desires and to re-establish Dharma on earth. I and my family will worship You as God as from today.' Saying this, the governor prostrated at Shree Hari's feet. Shree Hari raised him and asked him to seek a boon from Him. The Governor asked, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! Let all my past sins be washed away! Redeem me from my past mistakes; deliberate and otherwise. Grant me Moksha!' Shree Hari granted his desire and advised him on the importance of non violence once again. Shree Hari got up to leave. The governor venerated Shree Hari and Muktanand swami in turn with expensive artefacts. He gifted Shree Hari with many valuable items of clothing and jewellery. As Shree Hari left the tent the governor accompanied Him for some distance to bid Him farewell. Shree Hari turned him back after travelling some distance and returned to His resting place."

Suvrat Muni continued, "The kings who had come to meet the governor were surprised at the honour bestowed upon Shree Hari. Many envious kings who had come to criticise and complain about Shree Hari felt dejected. They along with other kings lined the route Shree Hari was travelling and stood with bowed heads. O Pratapsinh! The governor called a meeting of all the kings and warned them, 'You must always respect and honour Lord Swaminarayan and His saints. The false allegations and harassment must stop. Anyone disregarding this order shall be subject to the severe punishment including death penalty.' The attendant kings had no option but to obey the governor's instructions. O king! The word spread far and wide that Lord Shree Hari and His saints have the political protection and they must not be harassed or insulted. Shree Hari stayed in Rajkot for one night to give the governor the opportunity to serve Him before returning to Gadhpur. He recalled all the saints to Gadhpur and made them aware of what had transpired at Rajkot."

Lord Narayanmuni addressed the saints, 'O saints! Your tormentors have been subjugated by the British governor. Lord Krishna has inspired the British to protect and defend you therefore, behave as previously wearing the visible insignias of our Sampraday such as Kanthi, Tilak, Chandlo and ochre robes.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "The saints were happy at a regained opportunity to spread Shree Hari's message and eradicate Adharma from society. They stayed in Gadhpur for five days before getting ready to depart for various villages. Abhay Khachar requested Shree Hari to ask the saints to remain in Gadhpur for some time so that he can serve them. The saints stayed back in Gadhpur for one month at Shree Hari's insistence. O king! This meeting between Shree Hari and British governor took place in the month of Magh in Samvat 1864. The saints became free from harassment from the demonic kings and gurus with help of the British and stayed back in Gadhpur for some time. Whoever listens to or narrates this incidence will indeed be blessed by

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari held Lord Krishna's grand veneration ceremony on Falgun Sud Ekadashi of Samvat 1864 in Gadhpur. He held a grand assembly in King Abhay's royal courtyard at the end of the veneration. He sat on a high ornate Sinhasan and devotees including saints, male householder and females took their appropriate seats in front of Shree Hari. Shree Hari, surrounded by devotees, looked as if the moon was surrounded by twinkling stars. Brahamchari saints and male householders venerated Shree Hari separately. A Brahmin of Shiyani village named Shivram Vipra came in this assembly as devotees were singing Kirtans as a part of late night special prayers for Ekadashi. He was religious and a learned poet. King Harisinh had sent him to Gadhpur to inquire about Lord Swaminarayan. Shivram bowed to the saints and Shree Hari in the assembly. Narayanmuni greeted him warmly, offered him the seat at the front of the assembly and asked him the reason for his arrival."

Shivram replied, 'O Swaminarayan! You have established the new Sampraday. Some people extol its principles whilst others criticise it. Our king is confused and doubtful about its veracity so he has sent me here to find out the truth about it. I have come here on a fact finding mission. Your and Your saints' Darshan has removed my doubts about the genuineness of Your Sampraday, however, our king has raised some questions about You and Your Sampraday. Please reply to these questions to remove our King Harisinh's lingering doubts.'

Shivram Vipra asked, 'Which region have You come from? Where were You born? What is Your caste and clan? Who is Your father? Who are Your ancestral Rishis? Which is Your Veda and the branch? Who is Your Guru? Which is Your Sampraday? Which scriptures do You attest? What path of Bhakti do You tread? Your followers believe in many deities but who is Your Ishtadev? Why do You worship other Devs besides Your Ishtadev? Which Goddess is Your Kuldevi (ancestral Goddess)? Which type of Kanthi and Tilak do You attest? Your saints are different from other saints and why are they addressed as Paramhans? Our king has a desire to know the answers to these questions. Please enlighten me with Your answers.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Narayanmuni answered to these questions not only to satisfy the curiosity of King Harisinh, but to remove any lingering doubts in the minds of any of the devotees present in the assembly."

Lord Narayanmuni replied, 'O Brahmin! There is a city of Ayodhya in the northern Koshal region. My birthplace, Chhapaiya is situated approximately 8 miles to the north of Ayodhya. A very chaste and religious Brahmin named Hariprasad Pande lived in Chhapaiya. His religiosity was so profound that people called him Dharmadev. He was my father. He was the regal priest to kings of the Surnetra clan. Savarni is our clan and Bhargav, Vaithavya and Saavetas are our three ancestral Rishis. The Samveda with Kauthumi branch is our ancestral Veda. My father and other relatives called Me Nilkanth as a child. I was never interested in childhood pranks and always associated with elders and pious even as a child. I received Yagnopavit (sacred thread) from My father when I was eight years old and since then I have observed the strict Brahamcharya Vrat. I have a natural affinity towards Lord Krishna's Bhakti because of elders' and ancestors' blessings. As a result of studying the scriptures such as Shreemad Bhagwat, I wished to have the Darshan of Lord Krishna in My heart.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'Due to the ascendency of Vairagya in My heart I left home and relatives to seek the personal Darshan of Lord Krishna. I wandered in the deep forests to seek a guru who could help Me fulfil My desire. I visited many shrines such as Muktanath, Jagannathpuri and other holy places. I went to many places wherever I heard of an accomplished guru or a great scholar. I requested them to fulfil My desire of Lord Krishna's Darshan and asked the same questions to all of them. Some of them went speechless at My request whilst others insulted Me for having such a desire. I never got any satisfactory answers to My questions and whatever answers I got were misleading and confusing. I bore their insults and continued My quest. I really believed that I should bear their insults just as Jadbharat, the son of Rhishabhadev had endured many insults from the ignorant. Travelling the length and breadth of the country, I arrived at Piplana where I met Ramanand swami on Jeth Vad Baras of Samvat 1856. I requested Ramanand swami to fulfil My desire of Lord Shree Krishna's Darshan in person. Instead of rebuffing My request, he was very pleased and said to Me, 'Nilkanth Varni! Sit in meditation whilst chanting Lord Krishna's hymn. You will soon have His Darshan in Samadhi.' O Shivram! I did exactly as Ramanand swami told Me. I slipped into Samadhi after a short meditation and saw a bright radiant halo in My heart. I saw Lord Krishna playing divine flute in Vrandavan accompanied with Radha and Rama.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O Brahmin! I prostrated at His feet. I was elated at His divine Darshan. Lord Krishna said, 'O Varni! My friend and disciple Udhhav, has taken human birth. He is currently known as Ramanand swami and is the guru of all gurus. I have granted You My Darshan at his behest as I am ever under the control of My devotees. He has taken this incarnation at My command for the benevolence of My devotees. You will have My Darshan regularly as long as You serve him, in fact anyone serving him will have My Darshan and will become free from the clutches of the cycle of birth and death. Any of his disciples who will have firm faith in Me shall have My Darshan too. O Varni! Everybody may not be able to understand his true identity and glory, but whoever comes unto his refuge and joins his Sampraday will have his sins washed away. I will grant swami's disciple My Darshan and take him to My supreme abode at the time of his death. Therefore, O Varni! , Become his disciple if you want to be happy.' O Shivram! I was elated at Shree Krishna's such soothing words and became Ramanand swami's disciple. Swami gave Me Diksha and named Me Sahajanand swami and gave Me this advice.'

Ramanand swami said to Me, 'O Varni! You must study the treatise on Bhagwad Gita written by Ramanujacharya to understand the true and proper traits of Jeev (soul), Parmatma (God) and Maya (visible yet illusionary world). The timing and ways of celebrating Vrats and festivals should be followed as shown by Shree Vithhalnathji Goswami, the son of Shree Vallabhacharya. No other Acharya has shown Bhakti as benevolent and loving as he has, therefore, follow the path of Bhakti as described by him. O Varni! Never blindly follow what appears to be a bad example set by a pious person. Always follow their good examples. One should only see the virtues in other people, be they great or ordinary, just as Dattatreya. Similarly, only Lord Krishna's

Bhakti should be grasped from any of the scriptures, whether minor or major.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O Shivram Vipra! Ramanand swami did Me a great favour by offering this advice. Ramanand swami was born in Sarvaria Brahmin clan in Ayodhya. The son of Ajay and Sumati, he was known as Ramsharma as a child. His Bhakti and Vairagya had ascended from the young age due to the Punyas of his past life. After Yagnopavit Sanskar, Ramsharma left home on the pretext of higher studies. He visited many shrines prior to arriving at Junagadh. He met Atmanand swami, a disciple of Gopalanand swami at Gopnath temple at the foothill of mount Girnar. Atmanand swami was an accomplished Yogi and Naisthik Brahamchari. Ramsharma became swami's disciple and was named Ramanand swami following the Diksha. There he learnt the intricacies of Yoga from his guru and was able to slip independently into Samadhi. He saw only a brilliant halo in Samadhi but He was not fully satisfied. He asked his guru to help him see Lord Krishna in His divine human form. Atmanand swami told him that all things with shapes arise from Maya and therefore are illusionary and perishable. Ramanand swami was very sad to hear his guru say that the radiant halo he saw in Samadhi was the true form of Lord Krishna. He could not bear Lord Krishna being described as Nirakar and left his guru immediately.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'Ramanand swami knew that Lord Krishna is indeed Saakaar in the perfect human form. He searched for a guru who could help him see Lord Krishna's divine form in his heart. He went to Shreerangpur, the shrine of Ramanujacharya, the prime proponent of God's Saakaar Swarup. There He venerated and meditated upon Ramanujacharya. Ramanujacharya granted swami his Darshan, Vaishnavi Diksha with five elements (hot insignia, Tilak, name, revealing the hymn to chant and Yagna) and sermon on Dharma in Samadhi. Observing the Dharma as advised by his guru and with his blessings, Ramanand swami was able to see Lord Krishna in person during worship and Samadhi. His life seemed fulfilled with Lord Krishna's Saakaar Darshan. At his guru's request, Ramanand swami travelled extensively to spread Lord Krishna's Bhakti. His fame as an accomplished guru spread far and wide because of his unflinching Bhakti, profound Vairagya and stringency in observing Dharma. Many people became his disciple and gave up vices such as consumption of alcohol and meat, adultery etc. Many of disciples were able to see

Lord Krishna in their hearts during meditation. He received many expensive gifts from his disciples which he used to build communal eateries refusing to keep any wealth for his personal use. O Vipra! The evil gurus interested in wine, women and wealth were jealous of swami's fame and started harassing him. As they were unable to win him in any meaningful debate, they levelled false allegation against him. Not satisfied with verbal abuse, some of them went to the extent of physical abuse. They vandalised his communal eateries and looted the grains and vegetables. Some of them stole his personal clothes and Murti. He arrived in Vrandavan and stayed in seclusion for some solace.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O Brahmin! Lord Krishna advised Ramanand swami in Samadhi to establish a new and separate Sampraday. He replaced old externally visible insignias of Vaishnavs with the new insignias. He continued teaching the same scriptures as previously and travelled to spread this new Sampraday which prophesise the Bhakti while observing Dharma. Bhakti, without observing Dharma is considered totally futile in this newly established Sampraday. After travelling many places including Dwarika, Ramanand swami returned to Saurashtra. Considering Girnar as Lord Krishna's divine playground, Ramanand swami established his permanent Ashram in its foothills. O Shivram Vipra! Udhhav incarnate Ramanand swami who has painstakingly spread Lord Krishna's Bhakti is My guru. After receiving Diksha from Ramanand swami, I suggested to the congregation that as this Sampraday has been established by Udhhav incarnate Ramanand swami, this Sampraday should be called 'Udhhav Sampraday'. Ramanand swami and all his disciples welcomed my suggestion and since then this Sampraday is called Udhhav Sampraday. Ramanand swami anointed Me as the head of Sampraday before departing from this mortal world. I happily bear the responsibility of the Sampraday with the concurrence and cooperation of swami's disciples. Some evil gurus and kings started harassing our saints. I asked My saints to discard outwardly visible insignias of the Sampraday and live incognito in the society during such detrimental times. The harassment has now stopped with the blessings of guru Ramanand swami and Lord Shree Krishna. The saints now wear all visible insignias as previously to make them discernible as the saints of Udhhav Sampraday.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'I will now tell you about our Ishtadev after making you aware about our Sampraday. Lord Krishna, the cause of all causes, supreme Bhagwan of the entire universe, beyond and distinct from everything visible and invisible is our Ishtadev. He is called 'RadhaKrishna' when accompanied by Radhikaji and 'LaxmiNarayan' when accompanied by Rukmini or Laxmiji. Similarly He is called 'NarNarayan' when accompanied by Lord Nar incarnate Arjun. He is known by many other names depending upon who He is accompanied by. We venerate four Swarups (Pradhyumna, Anirudhha, Sankarshan and Vaasudev), twenty four manifestations (such as Keshav etc.) and various incarnations (such as Varah, Kurma etc.) because all of them are our Ishtadev Lord Krishna's various forms. We venerate Shankar (and hence Parvati) because he is the first and the best Vaishnav. He has worked tirelessly to spread profound knowledge about Bhagwan and His Bhakti. We venerate Ganapati because he is considered one of the manifestations of Lord Krishna as attested in the BrahamVaivart Puran. Hanumanji is our Kuldevta (ancestral clan Deity). As the revealer of the Gayatri hymn, SuryaNarayan Dev should be venerated by all people of three Varnas. Hence we venerate him too. O Brahmin! I attest the following eight scriptures; the four Vedas including all the Upanishads, the Braham sutra (called Saririk) composed by Sage Vyas, the Shreemad Bhagwat, the Bhagvad Gita, the VishnuSahasraNam and the Vidur Niti from Mahabharat, Shree Vaasudev Mahatmya from the Skand Puran and Yagnavalkya Smruti. The two; Saririk Braham Sutra and Bhagvad Gita are acceptable to us only with the treatise and commentary written by Ramanujacharya (the treatise written by anybody else is not acceptable to us). The Yagnavalkya Smruti with the Mitakshara commentary should be taken as an authority on decisions regarding daily rites and rituals, business affairs and code of expiation. The fifth and the tenth cantos of the Shreemad Bhagwat are very important to understand the full glory and greatness of Lord Shree Krishna. I recognise and believe in any other scripture provide it is based on and conforming to the Vedas. Laxmiji, the consort and constant companion of Lord Krishna is our Kuldevi. '

Narayanmuni continued, 'O Vipra! The Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya disciples of our Sampraday must wear a double stringed Kanthi made of the wood of Tulsi on their neck whilst the Shudra disciples should wear the Kanthi of sandalwood. The male devotees of our Sampraday wear Urdhvapundra Tilak with the saffron mixed sandalwood paste left over from Lord Krishna's veneration with the Kumkum Chandlo in its middle. Chandlo of Prasadi Kumkum has an important significance in our Sampraday. We engage in two types of Bhakti. The first type, signified by Jadbharat, is where our celibate saints engage in forsaking all relationship with their family and world. They observe non violence by speech, thought and action while remaining free from ego, affection and not indulging in the mundane pleasures of five senses. The above mentioned five, are basic traits of our saints and Parshads without which we do not consider them as ours. The second type of Bhakti is denoted by King Ambarish, whereby devotees while remaining householders, constantly relate to and remember Lord Krishna. Our saints are totally non egoist and are so detached from the world and just like Jadbharat, that our devotees call them 'Paramhans'. O Shivram! I have answered all the questioned you posed.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shivram Vipra, after listening to the answers which were conforming to the Vedic scriptures realised that Sahajanand Swami indeed is the true Lord. Just as his mind focused into Shree Hari, he slipped into the Samadhi. He saw Narayanmuni as Lord Krishna accompanied by Radhikaji. His mind and heart became lucid and he became Shree Hari's disciple and devotee. Shivram returned to his host, King Harisinh, and explained exactly what he had heard and seen. King Harisinh's doubt about the veracity of Lord Swaminarayan and His Sampraday waned totally. He along with his ministers became Lord Shree Hari's disciples. O king! The other devotees and saints present in the assembly at Gadhpur were happy to hear Lord Swaminarayan reiterating His supremacy. Saints remained in Gadhpur until the festival of Fuldolotsav (the birth anniversary of Lord NarNarayan) before dispersing to outlying villages at Shree Hari's behest. They had no fear of persecution from any quarters and moved freely."

Thus ends the thirty seventh Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-38

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! While the groups of saints dispersed in outlying villages, Lord Shree Hari and few a saints remained in the royal chambers of Abhay Khachar. Shree Hari celebrated all festivals such as Janmashtami and Ekadashis with grand pomp. He listened to the Katha of Shreemad Bhagwat Puran and other scriptures from the scholar Brahmin daily on regular basis. He would ask King Abhay to generously gift Brahmins at the end of each Katha as espoused in the Shreemad Bhagwat. He would ask His many Brahmin disciples to undertake reading the Bhagwat. He chanted the Shree VishnuSahasraNam Stotra hundreds of times and encouraged others to undertake the same. Many of His devotees from various villages would come to Gadhpur to invite Shree Hari to grace their respective villages. Shree Hari would visit these villages and return to Gadhpur. Abhay Khachar and his family would accompany Shree Hari on some of these trips, while on some occasions he would remain behind at Shree Hari’s behest. Lord Shree Hari celebrated many festivals on such visits to various villages before returning to Gadhpur. Many groups of saints and thousands upon thousands of devotees thronged Gadhpur to participate in the celebration of festivals. Hundreds of devotees would turn up in Gadhpur for Shree Hari’s Darshan on a daily basis even between festivals. The whole of Gadhpur; the streets, the banks of River Unmattganga, Laxmi Vaadi, the royal courtyard, teemed with devotees from various villages from various regions. With so many visiting devotees, the residents of Gadhpur felt like the festival daily.”

King Pratapsinh said, “O Suvrat Muni! King Abhay Khachar was indeed blessed! Impressed with his staunch Bhakti and total surrender, the master of the universe, Lord Swaminarayan made Gadhpur His home. You just mentioned that Lord Shree Hari visited numerous villages to celebrate various festivals. O Muni! Please tell me the villages Shree Hari visited and which festivals He celebrated in those villages. You are not unaware of any of His Leelas as you have lived with Him. Please narrate me all His Leelas.”

Suvrat Muni meditated upon Shree Hari in his heart and said, "O Pratapsinh! Lord Shree had taken birth to re establish Sanatan Dharma and performed so many Leelas just to please His devotees. O king! Listen to these Leelas intently. Shree Hari accepted many invitations from His devotees to visit their numerous villages. To propagate true Bhakti and to spread Vedic Dharma, Lord Sahajanand Swami celebrated many festivals where thousands upon thousands of devotees congregated for His Darshan and sermons. It is not possible for me or indeed anybody to narrate all the villages He visited, however, I shall narrate some of these Leelas in short."

Suvrat Muni continued, "There is a town called Muli in the Zalavad region of Saurashtra, which was originally built at the behest of Lord Krishna. Ramabhai, the king of Muli and his two wives were chaste devotees of Lord Swaminarayan. Ramabhai sent Raghubha, one of his ministers to Gadhpur to invite Shree Hari to grace the town of Muli. Raghubha was elated that he got an opportunity for Shree Hari's Darshan even before his king. He arrived at Gadhpur where Shree Hari was seated in the assembly of saints and devotees. Shree Hari was attired in white robes with flower garlands around His neck and His forehead was adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and a Chandlo. Raghubha prostrated at Shree Hari's feet Who in turn greeted the minister warmly and asked about his wellbeing. Expert in the art of glib, Raghubha said to Shree Hari, 'O Lord! My king has sent his humble greetings to You and wishes that You grace Muli. He has sent me to convey that request. You are benevolent and are the fulfiller of Your devotees' desires therefore, please come to Muli with Your saints and devotees.' Shree Hari was already aware of Ramabhai's humble Bhakti. He assented to visit Muli and said to Raghubha, 'O minister! I am aware of Ramabhai's, his two wives' and villagers' staunch Bhakti. I will surely visit Muli. You go ahead to Muli tomorrow and inform Ramabhai that I will reach there after four days.'

Suvrat Muni said, "Raghubha stayed overnight in Gadhpur before proceeding to Muli to convey Shree Hari's imminent visit to Ramabhai. Shree Hari discussed the trip to Muli with senior saints."

Thus ends the thirty eighth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-39

Suvrat Muni said, "O Pratapsinh! Shree Hari sought and got Abhay Khachar's consent to travel to Muli before departing Gadhpur. Shree Hari and some Parshads such as Somla Khachar and Bhaguji mounted their respective horses and saints sat in chariots, carts and other vehicles. After travelling some distance, Shree Hari asked some villagers walking behind to bid farewell to return to Gadhpur. Villagers lined the route for Shree Hari's Darshan and veneration as the convoy passed through their villages. Shree Hari reached Muli on the fourth day as pledged. King Ramabhai, his ministers and villagers went ahead to welcome Shree Hari in Muli. Ramabhai dismounted immediately on seeing Shree Hari at a distance and prostrated at His feet. He led the convoy to his palace where the arrangement for Shree Hari's stay was arranged. Ramabhai made suitable boarding arrangements for accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees in local devotees' homes. The king, his ministers Raghubha, Maljibhai, Dajibhai, Abubha and other devotees joined in the services of Shree Hari, saints and devotees. Shree Hari and saints were very pleased with Ramabhai's humble servility. The devotees from nearby villages started flocking to Muli on hearing Shree Hari's arrival. Ramabhai performed Shree Hari's grand veneration the next day and gifted Him with expensive clothes and jewellery."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The ministers of the state and other devotees venerated Lord Shree Hari as and when the opportunity arose. A large assembly would be held in the courtyard of the royal palace every evening. Sahajanand Swami would sit on a large ornate Sinhasan at the head of the assembly and Brahamcharis, saints, Parshads and male householder devotees would sit in front of Him appropriately to their status. The female devotees would sit apart from the main congregation making sure that there was no direct contact with male devotees. Narayanmuni would address the assembly covering various topics to remove prevalent Adharma from society. He would willingly answer the questions posed by devotees to enlighten them. His sermons covered a wide range of topics such as Sankhya, Yoga, Dharma, Vairagya, Bhakti etc. There was a step well in the North of Muli, in which Shree Hari would daily take saints for a morning bath. Shree Hari and saints would take turns to dine at different devotees' homes daily to satiate their desires of serving Him. On the day of Makar Sankranti (14th January) Shree Hari took saints and devotees for a holy bath in River Bhagavo. He liberally gifted money to many Brahmins to mark this auspicious day. O king! Shree Hari stayed in Muli for one month to fulfil His devotees' desires. The month passed by very quickly for devotees engrossed in serving and pleasing Shree Hari."

Thus ends the thirty ninth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-40

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! As saints concluded Shree Hari's Kirtan Bhakti late at night on one of the Ekadashis, while residing in Muli, He addressed the congregation, 'You have often heard the glory of Lord Krishna. Lord Krishna stayed in Muli for some time after leaving Mathura and establishing Dwarka. He loved Muli as much as He loved Dwarka. As this town is considered the 'Mul' (the root or origin) of Dwarka, it became known as Muli and has become a holy shrine due to its association with Lord Krishna.' Ramabhai and other devotees were very pleased to hear Shree Hari describe such a holy significance of their town. The devotees of nearby villages were repeatedly inviting Shree Hari to grace their respective villages. With the consent of Ramabhai, Shree Hari decided to visit those villages."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Granting His divine Darshan to many devotees on the way, Narayanmuni arrived in Sayla. King Bapubhai of Sayla made his home available for Shree Hari and saints. Shree Hari stayed in Sayla for three days where Somchandbhai, Ganeshbhai and other devotees served Him. Murari, Ambaram, Pitambar, Atmaram, Shukdev and other Brahmin devotees took Shree Hari to Chuda where He stayed at Murari's home. Skandhjit, Sursinh, Panchanan, Bhava and other Kshatriya devotees joined in serving Shree Hari during His stay of two days in Chuda. He proceeded to Ladiyad and enjoyed the hospitality of Ratnasinh for two days. Kayabhai, Ramjibhai, Meghjibhai, Udhhavjibhai and other devotees of Ladiyad took the golden opportunity to serve Shree Hari before His departure from their village. Shree Hari graced the home of Haribhai of Kanthariya village where Kanji and Mavji joined Haribhai in serving Him. O king! Many named and unnamed devotees fulfilled their lives by serving Shree Hari and saints when they visited their respective villages. While travelling from Kanthariya to Khandpur, Shree Hari rested for some time on the banks of a river flowing nearby. Rupsinh, the minister of King Harisinh of Limbdi, with his wife came to invite Shree Hari to grace the town of Limbdi as they were just about to sit for their lunch. Rupsinh accompanied Lord Shree Hari to Limbdi where a sumptuous lunch was served to Shree Hari, saints and devotees. Harisinh arranged for Shree Hari and accompanied saints and devotees to reside in his royal residence."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Harisinh offered many valuable pieces of jewellery and clothes in veneration. During His five days' stay in Limbdi, Lavjibhai, Ranchhodbhai, Zinabhai, Narayanbhai, Bhagabhai, Narbheram, Shivram, Meghji, Jeevram, Virji and other devotees reverentially served Shree Hari. O king! Shree Hari graced Baldaana village where Juthabhai, Premjibhai and other devotees served him. Shree Hari went to Vastadi village where Brahmin devotee, Gopalji brought Him to his home and venerated Him. Sanghjeet, Devram, Keshav, Uttam and other Brahmin devotees of Vastadi served Shree Hari during his two days' stay at Gopalji's home. Shree Hari

Narayanmuni stayed at Rampura for two days before returning to Muli. Shree Hari stayed for ten days at the Royal palace of Ramabhai to please the devotees of Muli.

Thus ends the fortieth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-41

Suvrat Muni said, "O king Pratapsinh! Many more devotees came to invite Shree Hari to grace their villages while He was at Muli. Shivlalbhai Soni took Shree Hari to Vankaner and his home. During His two days' stay in Vankaner, Nagarbhai, Pitambarbhai, Mukundray, Harjivan, Jivram, Purushottam and other devotees served and venerated Him. Hathibhai brought Shree Hari to Devalia for one day before Mukundbhai took Him to Halvad. Brahmin devotees such as Shivram, Kashiram, Keshavlal, Govindram, Harikrisna, Murari etc. and other devotees such as Amarsinh, Ranchhod, Nagar and others of Halvad served Shree Hari and saints reverentially by offering sumptuous meals and looking after their small needs. Sahajanand swami stayed in Halvad for six days before travelling to Dhrangadhra to reside at a Brahmin devotee, Mulji's home. Keshav, Pitambar, Jetho, Raghav and other devotees joined hands with Mulji in serving Shree Hari for three days. Shree Hari became Punjaji's guest for four days at Methan village. The devotees of Methan such as Punjaji, Kakubhai, Jivaji, Devram, Govindram, Ajubhai etc. and many other female devotees helped the host in serving Shree Hari. He graced the village of Bhadreshvari for two days before returning to Muli. Staying at Surchandra's home in Bhadreshvari, other devotees such as Premchand, Amichand, Sundarji and others served Him and accompanying saints reverentially. "

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! Shree Hari remained at Muli for a fortnight before more devotees came with the requests for Him to grace their respective villages. The devotees of Vadhwan came to invite Shree Hari to their town. At Vadhwan, He stayed at Laxmichand’s home for five days before travelling to Memka. Devesh, Ladhabhai, Mohan and other devotees of Vadhwan served Shree Hari and saints with pleasure. While staying at Samjibhai’s home in Memka, Shree Hari was served by Mavji, Vallabh, Hansraj, Mulji, Jadavji, Karsan and other devotees in addition to the host. Shree Hari travelled to Shiyani and stayed at Meghji’s home for three days. Other devotees of Shiyani such as Shivram, Vithhal, Virjaram, Ramchandra, Meghji, Rupsinh, Murari and others took the opportunity to serve Shree Hari and saints to fulfil their lives. Shree Hari graced Tavi village and Jethiji’s home for three days, where Bharji and Akshay took the responsibility to look after the needs of Shree Hari and saints. Damodar of Tavi, who had observed the lifelong Naisthik Brahamcharya Vrat, gifted his entire wealth, including the house at Narayanmuni’s feet. Adabhai, Jivabhai and Raghunath also joined in Shree Hari’s services. On the way to Muli, Shree Hari stayed for a day at Keshinibai’s home in Devalia village, where He was served by Prayagji and Jethiji.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! The devotees gave up their normal activities to partake in Darshan, veneration, listening to sermons and other services of Shree Hari wherever He went. Narayanmuni would deliver sermons to remove ignorance, ambiguity and religious malpractices at every opportunity to establish Dharma and remove Adharma from the society. He shielded His devotees from the bad influence of rogue and fake gurus.”

Thus ends the 41st Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, “O Pratapsinh! After celebrating the festival of Vasant Panchmi (Maha Sud Panchmi) of Samvat 1865 in Muli, Shree Hari returned to Gadhpur with His saints, Parshads and devotees. Sursinh, the ruler of Machhiyav, was waiting for Shree Hari's arrival with the intention of inviting Him to grace his town. The merciful Lord assented to visit Machhiyav shortly. After consulting Abhay Khachar, Shree Hari departed for Machhiyav with saints, Parshads and devotees and arrived at Sarangpur in the evening, where He rested for a night. Leaving Sarangpur the next morning, He arrived at Aniyar where He spent the second night. Travelling further, He rested for a while and had lunch at Adval, where Damodar, Harjivan, Trikam, Tuljaram and other devotees of Adval venerated and served Shree Hari during His short stay at their village. Shree Hari stayed the next night in Balol at Verabhai's home where Vashram, Devji, Kushal and other devotees joined in His service. Narayanmuni halted the next night at a village called Shiva at Ladhabhai's house. Madhav, Jethabhai, Varjang, Ramdas etc. devotees of Shiva venerated Shree Hari with sandalwood paste, flowers and coins. Leaving Shiva the next morning, Shree Hari arrived at Kanottar, where He spent the night at Kishor's house. Devout Kishor and his wife Devabai venerated Shree Hari grandly and gifted Him expensive clothes and ornaments. Other devotees of Kanottar such as Sagram, Vejo, Nathabhai, Shardul and others took turns to venerate Shree Hari. He spent the next night in the village of Daduka, where He and His entourage were hosted for the night by a devotee named Alabhya. Godji, Vallabh, Skandhkjit and other devotees of Daduka fulfilled their lives by serving Shree Hari and saints."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! Shree Hari reached Machhiyav early the next morning. King Sursinh went ahead to the outskirt of the town to welcome Him with the full Royal honour. Sursinh opened up his royal residence to accommodate Shree Hari and accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees. Sursinh, his wife Devika and daughter Tejovati venerated Shree Hari grandly with sandalwood paste, flowers etc. and offered Him many valuable clothes, ornaments, gold coins etc. The King's sister-in-law, Keshini and numerous other female and male devotees took turns to venerate Shree Hari reverentially. To please Sursinh and other devotees of Machhiyav and to eradicate Adharma, Shree Hari stayed in Machhiyav for one month. He sent invitations to devotees of far off places to come to Machhiyav for the festival of Fuldolotsav. The visiting devotees were very surprised at the grand venerations performed and the great gifts given to Shree Hari by King Sursinh and his family members. Sursinh arranged the preparation of sumptuous meals for Shree Hari, saints, Parshads and devotees daily under his direct supervision. Seated on a high ornate Sinhasan and surrounded by saints and devotees, Shree Hari appeared as a majestic emperor at the evening assemblies held daily at Machhiyav. The saints, accompanied by musical instruments, sang a variety of Kirtans during the assembly. On the day of Dhuleti, Shree Hari soaked saints and devotees with coloured water using the hand held pump. He smeared the coloured powder on saints' faces which were already dripping wet with coloured water and perspiration. He attracted the hearts of everyone present by His Leela of smearing coloured powder on the devotees' faces."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari established the Murti of Bhagwan Damodar (Lord Krishna) according to the Vedic rites within the precinct of the royal courtyard. After the grand veneration performed by King Sursinh, Lord Narayanmuni held the assembly and He blessed devotees with His divine sermon."

Narayanmuni said, 'O Sursinh! My devotees must revere scholar Brahmins as their blessings fulfil all desires. All householders must hold Brahmins sacred, especially the kings who want to see their kingdom prosper. Indeed, there is nothing that cannot be attained by pleasing them. Even Devtas revere the Brahmins. Many kings in the bygone eras have attained great heights by pleasing and satisfying Brahmins. Narad and other sages have extolled the glory of such kings.'

Suvrat Muni said, "King Sursinh asked Shree Hari politely, ' O Lord! Please narrate to me the tales of kings who have satisfied the Brahmins. Please also tell me how they satisfied those Brahmins.' Shree Hari started to narrate the tales of various kings to King Sursinh."

Thus ends the 42nd Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-43

Lord Narayanmuni said, 'O king! You have asked a profound question. I know you hold Brahmins reverential. Thousands of kings before you have attained great heights by revering and donating wealth to Brahmins. It will take Me more than hundred years to narrate all such tales, so, I will narrate the tales of some of the kings who held Brahmins reverential.

'Once upon a time, there was a famous king named Marut. The Rishis and, Devtas including their king Indra came in person to receive their share of Naivedhya whenever he conducted a Yagna. Brahaspati, the guru of Indra once asked King Marut to stop his ongoing Yagna to stop himself from getting ahead of his disciple. Brahaspati's younger brother, Samvart Muni helped King Marut to complete his unfinished Yagna. O king! Devtas helped serve food at his Yagna. He gave such a large donation to the Brahmins at the conclusion of the Yagna, that they were actually unable to carry their wealth with them. The soil sprouted crop without it being tilled. Indra, the king of Devtas rained gold for one year during the rein of a devout king named Suhotra. The waters of rivers, the aquatic animals such as fishes and turtles living in it appeared to be made of gold. When King Suhotra realised that all this gold was given to him by Indra, he gifted all the gold to Brahmins of his kingdom. Nobody on this earth has since been able to match the gifts King Ang gave to the Brahmins at the conclusion of his Yagna. He gave each Brahmin one hundred thousand horses, maidens, cows and bullocks all laden and adorned with gold. He performed hundreds of Yagnas to satisfy Brahmins and Devtas and even satisfied the moon Devta by performing a special Yagna addressed to him. Yet, he reverentially and faithfully obeyed all edicts of Brahmins.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O king! Many eons ago, the great emperor Shibi of Ushinar vanquished each and every king to rule the entire earth. He travelled very widely on his divine chariot for his conquests, so much so that the entire earth was marked by the wheels of his chariot. Even Brahma accepted and extolled him as the sole ruler of the earth. He donated every cow, every horse and every elephant to Brahmins at the conclusion of his various Yagnas. King Bharat, the son of King Dushyant conducted one thousand Rajsuya and one thousand Ashvamedh Yagnas during his lifetime. Even Devtas were surprised at the wealth he donated to the Brahmins at the conclusion of each of his Yagnas. He gifted his guru Sage Kanva one thousand jewels and one thousand elephants. Each of the ten million Brahmins received thirteen thousand and eighty four cows as a gift from King Bharat. Just as one cannot fathom the vastness of the sky, one cannot comprehend the generosity of King Bharat. O king! Indra, the king of Devtas became potent enough to vanquish the army of demons in a war following the acceptance of his share of offerings of a Yagna conducted by King Bhagirath. King Bhagirath gave the Brahmin one hundred thousand maidens adorned with the gold ornaments. He also gifted a golden chariot with four horses, hundred elephants and a thousand horses decorated with gold ornaments and thousand cows to each Brahmin. To redeem his forefathers, King Bhagirath brought River Ganga to flow on earth with the power of his austerity, thus since then River Ganga is also called Bhagirathi.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'King Dilip gifted one thousand replicas of elephants made of gold to each of the Brahmins who presided over his Yagna. Six thousand Gandharvas (celestial singer and dancers) sang at his Yagna in such a way that each person on the earth felt that they were singing in his vicinity. The sound of the chanting of Vedas, the quiver of the strings of the bows of the student archers and the shouts of 'give' 'give more' never subsided in his palace. He gave acres of land covered with the gold film as donation to Brahmins. Indeed, the opulence of his kingdom matched that of the Heaven during his reign. The great emperor, Yuvanasva performed a Yagna with a desire to have a son. As a result of inadvertently drinking a potent mixture of Ghee and yoghurt prepared by sages, he gave birth to a son. Indra took it upon himself to suckle feed (through his finger) the young prince in the absence of his mother and he became known as King Mandhata and performed one thousand Ashvamedh and one hundred Rajsuya Yagnas during his lifetime. He gifted a fish made of gold, measuring one hundred miles long and one mile high to Brahmins at the conclusion of his Yagnas. He vanquished all kings and established his empire to cover the entire world. His name sent the shiver down the spine of defeated kings, including the mighty demon King Ravan. O king Sursinh! King Yayati of the bygone era performed one thousand one hundred 'Vajpeyi' Yagnas and conquered the whole world. He had devised a novel method of finding a suitable place to conduct the next Yagna. He would ask a strong man to throw a stick. The next Yagna would be conducted at the place where this stick would land. This process was carried on until the entire land mass was utilised to conduct the Yagnas. He gifted so much gold to Brahmins that if piled together, would create three high mountains. King Yayati gave up everything in his old age and performed austerity in the forest.'

'King Ambarish had appointed ten thousand subordinate kings to welcome the visiting Brahmins during his many Yagnas. He gifted Brahmins with whatever they asked for. King Ambarish was so devout that many kings attained salvation through his association. Many eons ago, King Shashbindu had about one hundred thousand wives and one million sons. Each of his sons had hundred daughters. At each of his granddaughters' weddings, King Shashbindu gifted one hundred elephants to the Brahmins and each elephant was accompanied by one hundred chariots and each chariot in turn was accompanied by a hundred horses. A hundred cows accompanied each of those horses. At the conclusion of his Ashvamedh Yagna, he donated his entire wealth to the Brahmins. King Gaya was a devout and truthful person. He had a boon of never-ending wealth from Agni Devta (fire demi god). For hundred years, he ate Prasad only after satiating Devtas with Naivedhya in Yagna. He performed innumerable Ashvamedh Yagnas on Amavasya, Purnimas and during Chaturmaas for a thousand years to please Devtas. He gifted one hundred thousand cows daily to Brahmins. He satisfied Devtas and Pitris by offering Naivedhya in Yagnas and Brahmins by donating wealth. He donated hundred square yards of land covered with gold leaf and countless cows at the conclusion of each Ashvamedh Yagna. Similarly, a king named Sagar performed one hundred Ashvamedh Yagna to please Indra and other Devtas. He ruled the earth with the help of his sixty thousand sons. He dug the earth to create oceans and gifted his opulent golden palace to the Brahmins. O king! Many other kings such as Rantidev etc. earned great fame and wealth by revering and pleasing Brahmins. On the contrary, many kings such as King Nahush, despite attaining the kingdom of the Heaven, had come to a great calamity as the direct result of insulting Brahmins. Thousands of other kings, Devtas and demos had suffered greatly as a result of insulting Brahmins. The tales of many such kings are narrated in the Mahabharat. The implication of such tales in short is that kings must revere Brahmins. Otherwise, one is bound to lose his wealth and court notoriety. Similarly, the householder devotees must hold Brahmins reverential.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king Pratapsinh! Shree Hari emphasised the services to Brahmins. King Sursinh and other householder devotees present heeded His sermon and promised to obey His edict. To set an example of the importance of pilgrimage on the Purnima of the month of Chaitra, Shree Hari left Machhiyav for the famous shrine of Sidhhpur. The saints and many devotees from various villages including Machhiyav accompanied Shree Hari on foot for the pilgrimage of Sidhhpur. Shree Hari and His entourage arrived at Kundal on their way to Sidhhpur.

Thus ends the 43rd Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-44

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari and accompanied saints and devotees stayed at Kala Patel's home for two days in Kundal. Nandram, Motiram, Ambaidas, Avidas, Ramji and other male devotees along with Radha, Barhini, Jahu, Vara and other female devotees fulfilled the purpose of their lives by serving Shree Hari reverentially during His stay in their village. Travelling further, Shree Hari arrived at Mathashul where He stayed at Murari's home. The devotees of Mathashul such as Ravji, Jagabhai, Jivibai etc. served and venerated Shree Hari during His one day's stay in their village. Shree Hari enjoyed the hospitality of a Brahmin widow devotee named Kushalbai of Mehsana for one day. Male devotees such as Narsinh and female devotees such as Devabai served Shree Hari and accompanied saints and devotees. En route to Sidhhpur, Shree Hari stayed at villages called Aithor and Hund for one and three days respectively. Nathuram, Mulchand, Rupa, Manek, etc. devotees took an opportunity to serve Narayanmuni reverentially. Devotees made arrangements for Shree Hari to stay on the banks of River Saraswati at Sidhhpur. O king! Lord Shree Hari and accompanied devotees took a ritualistic holy bath in BinduSarovar (a lake by that name). He asked His householder devotees to give gold and silver coins, copper utensils, clothes, money and sumptuous meal to the resident Brahmins of Sidhhpur. He fed other pilgrims as well. Thousands of pilgrims had congregated at Sidhhpur to participate in the vast fair being held in Sidhhpur between RamNavmi and Purnima. Shree Hari held a large assembly on the banks of Saraswati on the Purnima night. Saints, Brahamcharis, Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra male devotees took their appropriate seats in front and the sides of Shree Hari. Female devotees took their seats keeping a distance from the male devotees and everybody eagerly waited for a divine sermon. Shree Hari wanted to extol the importance of Sidhhpur as a shrine and warn His devotees against the prevailing malpractices at many holy shrines."

Narayanmuni said, 'O celibate and householder devotees! Listen to Me carefully. I have an important message for all the pilgrims gathered here. Sidhhpur is considered an important shrine. Sage Kardamb, a son of Brahma, performed a severe austerity here on the banks of BinduSarovar. Lord Narayan appeared here in person to grant His divine Darshan and boon to the sage. He was so overcome by the frailty of Kardamb Rishi that His eyes welled up. His tear drops (Bindu) fell on the ground and a lake was formed. As a result, this lake has been known as BinduSarovar. God manifested Himself as KapilDev, the son of Sage Kardamb and his wife Devhuti. KapilDev imparted the knowledge of the Sankhya Shastra to His mother. Devhuti attained salvation at this place as a result of this knowledge. Sage Vyas and other eminent sages as a result named this town Sidhhpur. O devotees! The pilgrimage to various shrines is said to be concluded successfully only if the pilgrimage was carried out as per the scriptures. These five types of pilgrims never earn Punya of pilgrimage; an atheist, one who does not have a faith in the shrine, one who commits sins at the shrine, one who is doubtful of the outcome of the pilgrimage and one who questions the need and purpose of the pilgrimage. Nothing is difficult to attain for a pilgrim who visits the shrine forsaking anger, lust and greed. One must keep their hands, feet, tongue (taste and speech), phallus and mind in control while at the shrine. The pilgrim must undertake austerity placidly and without any hypocrisy to get the Punya of the pilgrimage. Whilst visiting a shrine, a pilgrim must endeavour not to hurt the sentiments of other pilgrims. He must undertake pilgrimage by keeping his mind and anger duly under control. He must observe Brahamcharya, truthfulness, non violence (by thought, speech and deeds) to earn the full Punya of the pilgrimage. One must observe fast, tonsure the head, offer oblation to Pitris (dead ancestors), feed resident Brahmins and saints and donate his wealth. However, the one who is observing the Vrat of keeping their body hairs during the Chaturmaas, a Brahamchari, one whose parents are alive, the saint who tonsures his head on a particular fixed day and a married woman whose husband is alive must not tonsure their heads. One does not need to tonsure the head if revisiting the shrine within ten months of the last visit. The pilgrim must feed resident Brahmins of the shrine without raising the question of their character or suitability. O devotees! The pilgrim must liberally gift his wealth to the residing deity of the shrine. The poor person must sweep, clean, wash, sprinkle water, serve saints physically at the shrine in lieu of monetary donation. He undeniably earns the same Punya of pilgrimage, Shraddh, etc. as a wealthy pilgrim earns with his donation. Indeed, any sacred deed performed at the shrine multiplies many folds compared to the same deed performed at an ordinary place.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! One must bear in mind that just as the sacred deeds are multiplied at the shrine; the sins committed at the shrine too multiply thousand folds. The sin committed at other places can be washed away at the shrine, but the sin committed at the shrine becomes indelible. It cannot be washed away by any means whatsoever, even by the atonement and repentance described in the scriptures. Therefore, one must guard against committing a sin at the place of pilgrimage. The ancient sages described two types of Vrats; one that can be observed by the body such as a fast and others that are observed mentally such as controlling the senses. A pilgrim must observe both types of Vrats. However I consider the mental Vrats superior among them. A pilgrim who does not forsake anger, greed, cruelty, hypocrisy, gossip and indulgence of senses does not get his sins washed away even after taking the holy bath at all shrines. His body may become clean as a result of the bath but his mind still remains polluted. The mind is cleaned only after renouncing the inner vices. The latent desire of indulgence in mundane pleasures of senses is the filth of the mind. Freedom from such desires is the true chastity of the mind. The person who commits sins at the shrines becomes a ghost and roams around the shrine. It keeps looking for a miniscule fault in visiting pilgrims. The spirit enters the mind of such a person and as a result the pilgrim becomes prone to other vices such as lust, greed and violence. O devotees! You must guard against such dangers while on a pilgrimage. One must remain alert against inadvertently committing any sins at the shrines.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'Even a scholar's Punya is destroyed immediately if he looks lustfully, touches or gossips with a woman at the shrines. A similar antics by a female destroys her Punya. Therefore, all My disciples; male and female, must keep their eyes and other sensual organs under strict control while on a pilgrimage. My disciples must control their anger at all times but more so at the shrines. The anger destroys all Punyas of the pilgrims. Brahmins should refrain from accepting gifts normally but more so at the shrines. The acceptance of donations at the shrines destroys Punyas of the Brahmins. However, this is permitted in detrimental circumstances. Moreover, the pilgrims must not speak lies, avoid offending others, hurting any living being or indeed commit any sins while on a pilgrimage. The pilgrims must take a daily baths, worship God regularly, feed saints and Brahmins while on a pilgrimage. They must spend all their time listening to or reciting Shree Hari's Katha and Kirtan rather than sitting idle. The pilgrimage must be undertaken bearing in mind everything I just said. Only then is their pilgrimage worthwhile.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The devotees were pleased to hear His sermon on the pilgrimage. They agreed politely with Him and promised to behave as He has advised them and not otherwise. Lord Shree performed all the rituals related to the pilgrimage to set an example to His disciple before leaving Sidhhpur. Venturing further, Shree Hari arrived at Visnagar to please the devotees of Visnagar.

Thus ends the 44th Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Earlier, while Shree Hari was at Sidhhpur, the devotees of Visnagar had come for His Darshan and pleaded with Him to grace their village. The devotees came forward to greet and welcome Shree Hari when they heard the news of His arrival. The devotees of Vadnagar, a nearby village, joined them in the procession. They rushed forward when they saw Shree Hari astride a tall horse from far. As they came face to face, the devotees prostrated at His feet while Brahmins chanted Vedic hymns of greetings. Some devotees sang Kirtans while others played musical instruments in tune with them. Shree Hari entered Visnagar with pomp and gaiety. The devotees made appropriate arrangements for Shree Hari, saints, Parshads and devotees to stay in their homes. They felt their lives fulfilled at the opportunity to serve their Ishtadev and His saints and devotees. O king! Suryasharma, Motiram, Vanmali, Udhyam, Amulya, Abhiram, Pitambar, Ganesh, Punjo, Chalaiyo and other male devotees were assisted by Durlabha, Ujjvala, Jethi, Suvarna, Udaykumarika, Yati, Gnani, Punji, Dhanvanti, Shrunkhla and other female devotees in looking after the needs of their special guests. Thousands of devotees venerated Shree Hari with flower garlands and sandalwood paste and offered Him money, ornaments and new expensive cloths. Shree Hari fed sumptuous meals consisting of many sweets such as Laadu, Jalebi etc. and various vegetables to Brahmins daily for the next two and half months. He celebrated the festival of RathYatra on the second bright day of the month of Ashadh. Nathuram Bhatt and other devotees of Amdavad came to invite Shree Hari to grace their city. Shree Hari asked them to return to their city and promised them to come to Amdavad in time to celebrate Janmashtami. He held assemblies daily in afternoon and at night to deliver enlightening sermons to propagate true Sanatan Dharma and remove religious malpractices. On the night prior to Ekadashi He delivered a special sermon."

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, 'O devotees! Tomorrow is the Ekadashi which onsets the holy period of Chaturmaas. My disciple must undertake additional austerity as per personal capacity during Chaturmaas to please God.'

The devotees asked, 'O Lord! You have arrived to establish Dharma in this world. We are Your disciples. Please guide us and explain what austerity we should observe to please You.'

Lord Narayanmuni replied, 'O devotees! Let Me explain the various austerities you should undertake during the Chaturmaas. To control the five senses such as sight and mind from wandering around and concentrate them in God is the best austerity. One cannot concentrate his senses and mind in God until his senses are withdrawn from mundane pleasures and brought under his control. Therefore, one must learn to control his senses and mind. The sense of taste is most potent among the five. A devotee must overcome the sense of taste by fasting. The sages of the bygone eras used to fast for the whole period of Chaturmaas, however, it is not possible to do so in the present Kali Yug. Therefore, My earnest disciple should consume only fruits or milk for the period of Chaturmaas. Unable to follow such a strict regime, the devotees should still take some form of vow to control their palate such as eating only vegetable as meals, giving up vegetables altogether, eat only yoghurt, giving up Ghee etc. O devotees! One may follow an alternative regime in which one does not consume vegetables in month of Shravan, milk in the month of Aso and pulses and nuts in the month of Kartik. Aubergines and Radish must not be consumed for the whole period. All devotees must take some vows to suppress their sense of taste. My wealthy devotees should donate wealth, food or cows as per their capabilities during Chaturmaas. The Vratt of DharnaParna (fasting on alternate days and eating only one meal the next day) is considered the best Vrat. All My disciples; celibates, householders, male and female, must undertake this Vrat if possible.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! The Vrat of Brahamcharya is the most important component of all austerity. Therefore, one must observe Brahamcharya along with any Vrat undertaken. The austerity without Brahamcharya Vrat is futile and nothing is gained by any austerity performed. Many other Vrats to be undertaken during the Chaturmaas are described in other scriptures such as the BrahamVaivart Puran, which may be considered according to one's physical abilities. The Vrats observed with the latent desires fulfil those desires while Vrats undertaken without expecting anything in return pleases Lord Vaasudev. The special veneration of Lord Krishna must be performed and Brahmins must be fed at the successful conclusion of Vrats at the end of Chaturmaas. This ensures the fructification of the Vrats. O devotees! I will now explain you the method of taking the Vrats at the start of the Chaturmaas as described by Brahma to his son, Sage Narad in the BrahamVaivart Puran."

Narayanmuni said, 'The sages and Devtas observe a fast for four months, while doing the Darshan of Lord LaxmiNarayan resting on the banks of Kshirsagar. Therefore, humans must also undertake some type of Vrat to please Bhagwan Narayan. I just narrated the common Vrats that you should undertake; now I will narrate some specific Vrats that you should observe. You should stand in front of Lord Krishna's Murti on the morning of Sud Ekadashi of the month of Ashadh and take specific vows of the Vrats.

Alternatively, one may take vows from a chaste devotee. The Vrats should be taken just to please Lord Krishna. You should chant these two hymns while taking vows. 'O Lord! O Keshav! I am taking these vows just to please You. Please help me complete these vows without any hindrance. O Bhagwan! Consider my Vrat complete if I die before the end of Chaturmaas.' O devotees! One must start the Vrat after this prayer to Lord Krishna while maintaining the internal and external chastity and Brahamcharya. Married women must seek the concurrence of their husbands before the start of any Vrat, while widows should seek the same from their male relatives such as father, son or brother. Celibates and householder devotees must take appropriate Vrats and maintain them lovingly until Sud Ekadashi of the month of Kartik. In very detrimental circumstances one should behave accordingly. Lord Krishna indeed takes note of our efforts and problems.'

'O devotees! One may undertake reading, reciting or listening to the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran. The narrator of Katha should be rewarded appropriately. One must organise a grand veneration of Lord Narayan if one himself had taken vow of reading or reciting the same. Brahmins and saints should be satisfied with food at the end of the Katha in both instances. The Vrat of reading, reciting or listening to the scriptures is very rewarding. One may undertake reading, reciting or listening to just the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat if one so inclined. One may undertake to venerate Lord Shree Krishna three times a day with flowers, sandalwood paste etc. The conclusion of any Vrat of Chaturmaas must be done with grand veneration of Lord Krishna and feeding the Brahmins and saints. O devotees! One may undertake any one of the following four Vrats; the reciting of the VishnuSahasraNam Stotra, Sashtang Dandvat and Pradakshina of Lord Krishna or doing one hundred Mala while chanting His name. These four are also considered good Vrats. The Homa should be performed offering a tenth of the number of recital of Stotra or hymns in the sacred fire at the conclusion of these Vrats. One may undertake venerating and or feeding saints and Varnis as per personal capacity during the period of Chaturmaas. Cloths and utensils should be gifted to them at the conclusion of these Vrats. One may undertake any one or more of the following nine to please Lord Krishna; giving up sex, anger, speaking a lie, intentional killing of any living being, Ghee and oil, ego, salt, products derived from the cane such as sugar and jaggery and maintaining total Brahamcharya. The suitable gifts like food, clothes and utensils and veneration with sandalwood paste and flowers should be offered to the chaste saints and devotees of Lord Krishna at the conclusion of these nine Vrats.'

Narayanmuni continued, ' O devotees! I have just narrated the different types of Vratts that should be undertaken during Chaturmaas. They are My favourites as they are all directly associated with Lord Krishna. Many scriptures describe other types of Vratts for the materialistic gain such as desire of health, wealth, offspring and woman. I do not like them as the rewards they offer are miniscule and temporary. One may question as to why such Vrats are then extolled in scriptures. They are intended to slowly steer away devotees from such mundane desires. These Vrats motivate most people to observe any type of Vrat as most people are interested in such mundane desires. Just like, when a father bribes his child with sweets prior to giving bitter medicine, his intention is to cure the child with medicine rather than indulge his child with sweets. Similarly, such Vrats are used to entice a person towards observing the vows in his daily life. A devotee becomes subject to the cycle of death and birth as a result of observing Vrats for materialistic rewards. Wealth, property, women, children, possessions etc. are easily available in all forms of life and one does not need to observe any Vrat for these. They are available as per the deeds of their past lives. The pleasure of God can be attained only in the human life. The wise ones do not waste their effort for such mundane rewards. Devotees should undertake Vrats only for their salvation and to please God. The one who does not undertake any Vrat for Chaturmaas suffers the indignity of the pains of Hell at their death and is reborn in the species of insects. Therefore, all My devotees surely must undertake one or more special Vrats during Chaturmaas.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! On Sud Baras of the month of Kartik, one should offer grand veneration to Lord Krishna at the successful conclusion of his Vrat. Just as the Vrat was started with prayer to Lord Krishna, the completion of the Vrat must end with this prayer. 'O Lord! I have undertaken this Vrat just to please You. Please be happy with me and forgive me for any shortcoming in observing this Vratt.' After feeding the Brahmins, saints and the hungry, he should take food in the company of his family. By observing and undertaking any of these Vrats for the duration of Chaturmaas, one will indeed attain great rewards such as fame, a chaste life during his lifetime, salvation and the bliss of My supreme abode after his death.'

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! The devotees of Vadnagar humbly asked Shree Hari, ‘O Lord Swaminarayan! What should devotees do if they are unable to observe Vrats for the duration of Chaturmaas? Please advise us.’

Lord Narayanmuni said, ‘O devotees! The person unable to undergo austerity by observing Vrats must perform the ‘Kartaki Vrat’. This Vrat lasts for one month beginning on the Purnima of the month of Aso and ending on the Purnima of the month of Kartik. One must wake up early in the morning, when stars are still visible and take a bath in the river or lake for the duration of the month. A devotee must fast for the period of whole month or observe one of the various types of ‘Kruchh’ Vrats.’

‘One must stand in the water of a river or lake and fast for a day on the day prior to the Kartik Purnima. This is called ‘Jal Kruchh’ Vrat. One must take his physical ability into consideration to decide the length of time spent standing in the water. Starting from the morning, this could last until noon or evening’

‘To consume the mixture of cow’s urine, dung, milk, yoghurt and Ghee on the Sud Dasam (the tenth bright day) of Kartik and observe fast on Prabodhani Ekadashi is called ‘Hari Kruchh’ Vrat.’

‘Starting on the bright seventh day of the month of Kartik, one should consume only water, milk, yoghurt and Ghee on consecutive days and observe a total fast on the Ekadashi. This Vrat of five days is called ‘Pitamah Kruchh’ Vrat.’

‘The six days long Vrat in which one should consume only milk for three days starting from the bright sixth day and then undergo a fast for the next three days until Prabodhani Ekadashi is called ‘Mahendra Kruchh’ Vrat.’

‘The nine day Vrat culminating on Prabodhani Ekadashi in which one should eat Ekadashi grains like Samo or Nivar for the first three days and Sathvo (unseasoned wet oat flour) for the next three days followed by three days’ of fasting is called ‘Vishnu Kruchh’ Vrat.’

‘One should consume only milk for the first five days starting from the first day of Kartik, only yoghurt for the next five days and conclude the ten day Vrat by observing a fast on Prabodhani Ekadashi. This Vrat is called ‘Bhaskar Kruchh’ Vrat.’

‘Starting from the fifth bright day of Aso, one should consume only boiled liquefied oat flour, Sathvo, vegetables, yoghurt, milk, Ghee and water progressively on each of following seven days. This Vratt of seven days is called 'Saptarshi Kruchh' Vrat.'

'Starting from the first day of Kartik until the fifth day, one should consume only water or milk boiled with the leaves of Khakhro, Bili, Darbha (a type of grass), lotus and Udambaro respectively and fast on the sixth day. This Vrat of six days is called 'Agni Kruchh' Vrat.'

'Starting from the seventh bright day of Kartik one should consume only milk, the leaves of Bili, lotus fruit and the stalk of a lotus for four respective and consecutive days and fast on Prabodhani Ekadashi. This Vrat is called 'Laxmi Kruchh' Vrat.'

'O devotees! These Kruchh Vrats wash away one's sins accumulated over their past lives. As they give superior rewards in the month of Kartik, My disciple must observe these Vrats sincerely in the month of Kartik. The devotee undergoing any of these Vrats must maintain inner chastity by controlling their five senses and mind and external chastity by taking regular baths in the morning. He must venerate Bhagwan every morning. He must observe non violence by thought, speech and deeds, endeavouring that not a single living being is hurt or feel threatened by him. He must donate his wealth liberally to the suitable recipients, chant God's name, imbibe the virtues like compassion, mercy, truthfulness etc. and maintain Brahamcharya. He should accept milk etc. only from a chaste Brahmin rather than consume the same indiscriminately. If the devotee undergoing any of these Vrat suffer inadvertently or faints due to hunger, a Brahmin should feed him the cow's milk. The Vrat is not considered broken or void if a devotee consumes sherbet, roots, fruits, milk, Ghee, something with the permission of his guru or an assembly of eminent Brahmins and medicine during the period of Vrat. Brahma advises Sage Narad in the BrahamVaivart Puran that one must observe Kruchh Vrats as described above and while imbibing compassion, mercy and truthfulness in the month of Kartik.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! There are other suitable Vrats available to a devotee unable to undertake any of Kruchh Vrats during the month of Kartik. The month of Kartik must not be allowed to lapse without undertaking any Vrat. One may

'O devotees! An early morning bath in the months of Kartik, Magh and Vaishakh are the other important Vrats to undertake. The Vrats of these early morning baths, eating light grains such as Samo and Nimar and maintaining Brahamcharya are the three most prominent Vrats which wash away one's sins. A bath in the flowing waters of a river is the best followed by the bath in the lake and freshly drawn water from the well. In the absence of all the above, a devotee must take a bath with cold water stored in the earthen pot. The bath must be taken early in the morning before the sunrise to alleviate the fear of Yama (the deity of death), the Sun's brother. He must recite this hymn silently. "O Lord of Lords! O Bhagwan! I take this morning bath to please You and Goddess Laxmi. Be happy with me." Lord Shree Krishna should be venerated with lotus, jasmine, Ketki or wild flowers during the Kartaki Vrat. A devotee who does not worship Bhagwan with lotus flowers in the month of Kartik is deprived of wealth for generations. Conversely, the devotee who worships Bhagwan with Tulsi leaves earns the Punya of performing Ashvamedh Yagna for each leaf offered. O devotees! The bath by the juice of Amla (a type of sour/bitter fruit) and eating Amla fruit relieves one from the clutches of life and death. A devotee, undergoing the Kartaki Vrat, who worships Lord Krishna sitting under the Amla tree, earns the Punya of Rajsuya Yagna for each flower he offers in the worship. By worshipping Lord Krishna or feeding Brahmins in the woods of Amla tree, a devotee attains His abode. Such is the virtue of the Amla tree!'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! A devotee observing the Kartaki Vrat must not consume mustard seeds, guava, honey, oil, pulses, stale food or food from a bronze plate. He may take the vow of not eating salt or any food that arouses stimulation in the mind. He must not sleep during the daytime nor speak a lie. He should chant VishnuSahasraNam Stotra in the morning and the evening and offer lamp or Ghee for it at temple in the evening. The consumption of grains such as Samo and Nimar are considered the best food during the month of Kartik. One must never lapse the month of Kartik without observing special Vrats or austerity; otherwise, he is born in the species of birds in his next life. The person who accepts Diksha in Kartik month is indeed freed from the clutches of birth and death. A devotee who wakes up early to pray to Bhagwan attains Shwetdweep along with his Pitris while those who sleep till daybreak indeed goes to Hell. A devotee must make sure that he is wearing a Kanthi of Tulsi around his neck during the Kartaki Vrat and pray to it regularly, "O Tulsi Kanthi! You are His favourite. I have worn you around my neck. Please make me His favourite as well." O devotees! There are many Vratts one can undertake as a part of his Kartaki Vrat. You must undertake to observe any one of the Vrats, bearing one's physical ability in mind, to please Lord Vaasudev. He earns the same Punya for undertaking the Vratt for four months of Chaturmaas.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The devotees of Visnagar and Vadnagar were very happy to hear the process of Kartaki Vrat in great detail. They pledged to Shree Hari that they indeed will take up a Vrat for Chaturmaas. Shree Hari in turn was happy to see His devotees heeding His edict."

Thus ends the 47th Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! With the concurrence of devotees of Visnagar and Vadnagar, Shree Hari left Visnagar on the fifth bright day of the month of Shravan. He sent back many devotees who had accompanied Him to bid farewell. Granting the pleasure of His divine Darshan to the thousands of devotees of many villages en route to Amdavad, Shree Hari reached Gerita, where He stayed at a Brahmin devotee's home, named Vijayraj. Male devotees such as Haribhai, Tarachand , Ambaram, Ganesh, Motiram and female devotees such Suraj, Ullas, Sankdi and others of Gerita served Shree Hari to the best of their abilities. After three days' stay in Gerita, Shree

Hari and entourage arrived at Vihar where they resided at a Brahmin devotee named Pitambar's residence. Shree Hari arrived at Vijapur after staying a day at Vihar. Pragji, Reva, Ganesh and other male devotees and Vajiba, Nanda, Radiyat, Vikheda and other female devotees served Shree Hari reverentially during His three days' stay in Vijapur. Shree Hari visited a small village called Baman to grant His devotees such as Gangji, Naru, Ratuji and others a chance to fulfil their lives with an opportunity to serve Him before arriving at Prantij. Manchharam, Mayaram, Kashiram and other devotees of Prantij warmly welcomed and venerated Shree Hari. Other male devotees of Prantij such as Tuljaram, Nathu, Bhagwan, Madhav, Gilji, Hargovind, Sakalchand, Pitambar, Nanasha, Fataji, and female devotees such as Muli, Ichha, Yamuna, Rupali, Mani, Sona and others joined in the service of Shree Hari, saints, Parshads and devotees during their five days' stay in their village. Shree Hari vanquished a few pretentious saints with debate and removed some well entrenched religious malpractices in Prantij before arriving at Mansa village. Pitambar, Daljit, Bechar, Vijay, Sakalchand and others venerated Shree Hari and laid their wealth at His feet. Shree Hari stayed in Mansa for three days before arriving at Punjapur for a days' stay. He travelled to Paliyad from Punjapur where Jumkharam, Jethabhai, Gangaba and Gnanbai venerated and served Him during His one day there. Shree Hari arrived at Karjisan after staying a day each at Khoraj and Nardipur. He stayed at a devotee, Nanabhai's home during His five days' stay at Karjisan, where He celebrated the festival of Janmashtami on a grand scale. Govindji, Khushal, Pitambar and other devotees served Shree Hari with love and reverence. He visited Vadu for a day where Manji, Zaver, Purushottam and other devotees served Him humbly before reaching the outskirts of Amdavad.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king Pratapsinh! Upon hearing the news of Shree Hari approaching their city, the devotees of Amdavad went ahead to welcome Him, taking several chariots, a palanquin and musical instruments with them. Brahmin devotees such as Nathuram, Hemantram, Girdhar, Laxman, Jeevan, Ganapati, Vaishya devotees such as Hirachand, Bahechar, Manek, Damodar and female devotees such as Gangaba, Revaji, Gangaji, Diwali, Shiva, Shyama led the procession of hundreds of devotees to greet and welcome Shree Hari in Amdavad. When they saw Him astride a tall horse at a distance, they prostrated on the ground at His feet. The singers sang the Kirtans with the accompaniment of musical instruments. Their eyes welled up at His Darshan. Shree Hari dismounted the horse and greeted the devotees prostrating at His feet. He sat in a decorated palanquin and saints and Varnis on chariots at the request of devotees of Amdavad. The procession accompanied by the sounds of musical instruments snaked its way into the city and arrived at an area called 'Nava Vas,' where more devotees had gathered to greet Shree Hari. Suitable arrangements were made for Shree Hari and saints to stay comfortably during their sojourn in Amdavad. The devotees of Amdavad invited Shree Hari to grace their homes which He duly agreed. They offered sumpyuous meals cooked by a chaste Brahmin to Shree Hari and saints when they graced their homes. They also gifted many valuable ornaments and money to Shree Hari at the conclusion of veneration conducted with flower garlands, sandalwood paste etc."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari organised a grand celebration to mark the festival of Janmashtami of Samvat 1866 in Amdavad which was attended by His devotees from far off places. With the help of local devotees, He fed thousands of Brahmins the next day and satisfied them with liberal monetary gifts. Shree Hari held a large assembly on the day of Ekadashi. He sat on a high and ornate Sinhasan so that He was visible even to the person seating in the last row. The saints, householder devotees of all four Varnas and female devotees took their seats according to their hierarchy and Dharma. Thousands of non devotees turned up out of curiosity and stood at the edge of the assembly. There were many Brahmins among the onlookers who were scholars of various scriptures such as the Vedas, the Shreemad Bhagwat, the Mimansa, the Yog Shastra, the Sankya Shastra, the Panchratra etc. Devotees had turned for Shree Hari's Darshan and sermon while non devotees had turned up to see what He was up to. Many devotees, though they had not mastered any intricacies of Yoga or undergone specialised training, slipped into Samadhi due to their profound devotion and Lord Narayanmuni's blessings and wish. Their bodies became idle as if made of wood or stone and immune from worldly senses. Their hearts stopped pulsating and lungs stopped breathing. Indeed, they were as if dead. Their souls had departed from the body to visit various abodes of God such as Vaikunth, Golok, Akshardham etc. and their bodies glowed with the bliss of Samadhi. The devotees saw this as Shree Hari's divine power, while the onlookers were mighty curious. Many scholar Brahmins saw some conspiracy behind this as a means to exhibit His and His Sampraday's ascent. Declaring Samadhi as a total fallacy, they went on to check the bodies of the devotees under the spell of Samadhi. They were surprised to see the absence of pulse and breathing. Not satisfied with such miracle, some of them went to the extent of making cuts in the devotees' bodies with sharp blades and pokes. To their utter amazement, the devotees did not respond at all. Their amazement and curiosity now turned into panic and they became afraid of their mistakes. They felt guilty at doubting Shree Hari's latent power and for causing pain to devotees. They realised that such power of putting a large number of people under the spell of Samadhi is not possible in anybody except Bhagwan. They thought that Narayanmuni must be God in human body, however, they wanted to put their doubts to rest, so they approached Nathu Bhatt seated in the front row and asked him to speak to Narayanmuni. "

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Realising the dilemma of scholar Brahmins, Nathu Bhatt very humbly said to Shree Hari, 'O Lord! These Brahmins are perplexed at our devotees under the spell Samadhi. They wish to ask You some questions through me. I do not have any doubt or misunderstanding regarding Your power to put a large number of devotees under the collective spell of Samadhi. Whatever I am about to say is on their behalf only. O Shree Hari! We have studied the Vedas and other scriptures in great detail. We have never seen or heard of anyone attaining Samadhi without mastering intricacies of Ashtang Yog. There are many scholars and experts of Yoga in Amdavad but not a single person is able to undergo Samadhi even after many years of practice, but what do we see here! People who had not learned the Vedas, who had not learnt Yoga, women, children and even persons born in the lower Varna have slipped into Samadhi as a result of Your glance. We are confused! What do they see while in Samadhi? What do they experience? Please enlighten us. O Bhagwan! Only You can free us from our doubt and scepticism. O king! Narayanmuni smiled benevolently upon hearing the sceptic Brahmins' queries through Nathuram Bhatt. He said to the Brahmins, 'O scholars! Wake these people up and ask them yourself what they have seen whilst in Samadhi. They will tell you their experiences.' The Brahmins replied, 'O God! How can we wake them up? We tried our best by scalding and wounding them due to our ignorance. We have come to You because we were unable to break their spell of Samadhi. Please wake them up and then we will ask them these questions.' Shree Hari swept the glance on the devotees. They stood up just as suddenly as they had fallen on the ground earlier. One at a time, they came to Shree Hari to touch His feet and returned to their respective seats."

Suvrat Muni continued, "The scholar Brahmins asked these people to explain what they had just seen in their Samadhi. O king! They sought Shree Hari's permission before starting to describe their experiences one by one. One said he saw Lord Narayanmuni with Laxmiji and Radhikaji in His radiant abode called Brahampur, which is beyond the darkness of Maya. One said he visited Shwetdweep which appeared so bright as if lit by thousands of suns shining at the same time, yet cool. He saw Narayanmuni as Lord Vaasudev surrounded by Swetmuktas. One saw Narayanmuni as Lord Krishna accompanied by Radha and playing His divine flute, while numerous Gopis played Raas around Him. Someone said he saw Narayanmuni as Bhumapurush accompanied by Goddess Laxmiji and Visvaksen and other Parshads in His abode called MahaVaikunth. One described seeing Narayanmuni as Lord Vishnu accompanied by Laxmiji and Nand, Sunand and other many Parshads in Vaikunth. Another saw Narayanmuni as Yogeshwar resting on the bed made up of the coiled body of Shesh on the banks of the Kshirsagar. He saw Laxmiji massaging His feet. Someone visited Badrikaashram where he saw Narayanmuni as Lord NarNarayan in the garb of the celibate sage undergoing austerity. Still, some saw Narayanmuni as radiant Hiranyamay (glowing like gold) Purush in the middle of the solar system. One saw Narayanmuni in Agnilok (abode of Agni Devta) as Lord YagnaNarayan. O king! Every person not only described seeing Narayanmuni in various forms in His various abodes but also described the opulence of each abode in graphic detail. The scholar Brahmins were very surprised. They thought, 'How could these illiterate people including women and children be able to describe the opulence of various abodes in such a graphic detail? They had not studied any scriptures and yet they were describing various abodes as they are described in various scriptures. They had never even heard any scripture let alone read them, yet their perception of various abodes matched exactly as it is mentioned in the scriptures! Therefore their Samadhi must be real. These people had slipped into Samadhi by Narayanmuni's mere glance, therefore, Narayanmuni is indeed the Supreme Bhagwan in the garb of an ordinary man. If He can control the pulses and breathing of so many people, surely He can control the pulse of the whole universe. There is not an iota of doubt that He is indeed omnipotent Bhagwan. Only He can redeem us from the cycle of life and death."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The Brahmins were repentant at their folly. Their eyes welled up on thinking about their past misdeeds; how they, in pursuit of money, cheated gullible devotees and led them astray; how they indulged in adultery with female devotees just to satiate their carnal desires; how they ignored and insulted anyone who pointed out their shortcoming; how they, overcome by envy, greed and anger, indulged in and encouraged many religious malpractices. They wanted to rectify their past mistakes and decided to go unto Shree Hari's shelter. Their true repentance was able to wash away their past sins. Though their hearts had become lucid following Shree Hari's divine Darshan, they were yet unable to see Him in their hearts even after trying hard. They went to Narayanmuni and prostrated at His feet and pleaded with folded hands, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! We have come unto Your shelter. We are Yours as from now. Please protect us from the bondage of the cycle of death and birth.' O king! The Brahmins venerated Narayanmuni with reverence. They performed His Aarti using camphor wicks while praying aloud."

The Brahmins sang, 'O benevolent! Be victorious. O Lord Narayan! May Your glory spread in all directions. O Purushottam! May You always be victorious. O Bhagwan! Your Brahampur abode is beyond the darkness of Maya, beyond the change affected by the three traits of Maya and beyond the influence of Time. You always reside there with Radha and Rama. Your Shwetdweep abode is so brilliantly radiant as if ten thousand suns are shining at the same time. You always reside there surrounded by Swetmuktas who venerate You reverentially. O Bhagwan! May You always be victorious. Your Vaikunth abode, which You created to please Laxmiji, is beyond the transient influence of Time and Maya. You always reside there with Laxmiji. For the duration of Chaturmaas, You rest on the body of Shesh Naag on the surface of Kshirsagar. Laxmiji serves You, Lord Yogeshwar, by massaging Your feet. O Bhagwan!

May You always be victorious. O Lord! You reside in the middle of the solar system as Hiranyamay Purush. You, as Yagna Narayan, accept the Naivedhya offered in the flames of a Yagna. You, as Lord NarNarayan, undergo severe austerity in Badrikaashram to redeem the sins and for benevolence of Your devotees resident in Bharat (India). O Bhagwan! May You always be victorious. O Lord! You remove the inner vices such as lust, anger, greed etc. from the heart and minds of Your Ekantik devotees. You play Your divine flute and You play with Radha. Indeed, You are Lord Krishna of Golok. You sustain and protect the entire universe. You, as BhumaPurush, always reside with Goddess MahaLaxmi in Your MahaVaikunth abode which is beyond any description. O Bhagwan! May You always be victorious. O Lord! You imperceptibly pervade each and every soul of the living beings. You are the one Who protects His devotees from the fear of influence of Time and Maya. You are the only one to give Moksha to the devout. O Shree Hari! We have come unto Your shelter. Please remove our ignorance and free us from the clutches of Maya. O Bhagwan! May You always be victorious."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The Brahmins prostrated at Shree Hari's feet again after singing the Aarti and said to Shree Hari, 'O Lord! Please free us from the shackles of the cycle of death and rebirth.' Shree Hari smiled benignly and solaced the Brahmins. They took their seats in the assembly then Shree Hari addressed them, 'O Brahmins! You have come unto My refuge, therefore, have no fear of the bondage of the cycle of life and death. However, you must regularly and reverentially worship Lord Krishna. Additionally, you should perform veneration of Devtas and offer oblation to the Pitris. You will go to Golok after death.' O king! By this time, the Brahmins had realised that Narayanmuni seated in front of them was indeed Lord Krishna Himself. They prayed to Him, 'O Lord! Our doubts have vanished. Our lives are fulfilled by Your Darshan. O Lord Narayan! You are the one and only destination of devotees. You have all the attributes of the supreme Lord as described in the scriptures such as the Vedas. We have not an iota of doubt that You, sitting in front of us, are none other than Lord Krishna. You have freed us from the cycle of life and death. We considered Your forms in Your various abodes such as Golok, Vaikunth, Brahampur, Shwetdweep, Badrikaashram etc. as separate and distinct entities. We considered some of those forms as real, while some of them illusory. That was before we heard the experiences of people who had undergone Samadhi. Now we know that there is only one God and that is You. You are the cause of all causes and the reason of all reasons. We now know that all the forms in various abodes are Yours. O Lord Swaminarayan! You advised us to worship Lord Krishna, but we will worship only You as You are Lord Krishna Himself. However, O Lord! We still have some doubts. You just asked us to venerate Devtas and offer oblation to the Pitris. We wish to give up all the unnecessary rituals as we do not desire temporary happiness of Heaven. We have You! What is then the need to perform such mundane rituals? Will it not be right for us to forsake all such rituals and concentrate our energy in Your worship? Please guide us correctly.' O king, Lord Swaminarayan was very happy that the scholar Brahmins raised such a profound subject."

Lord Swaminarayan replied, 'O Brahmins! You have proved today that your education was a worthwhile exercise. The education without devotion in God is futile. Knowledge of the scriptures is nothing but a burden to a scholar without devotion in God. You have understood whatever needs to be understood by learning the scriptures. Now coming to your question; the abdication of religious rituals is not My principle. It is very vital that one continues undertaking all the rituals pertaining to one's Varna and Ashram till the mind and body permit. My disciples must never intentionally give up the routine rituals such as bath, Sandhya, Homa etc. and Vedic ritual such as veneration of Devtas and oblation to the Pitris. It is another matter when the body becomes frail and bodily functions become impossible to be carried out independently. Even the person who can slip into Samadhi independently must not forsake these rituals. How can an ordinary devotee even think of forsaking the religious rituals? A devotee who forsakes rituals under the pretext of the knowledge or Bhakti is a fool. His Bhakti and knowledge are corrupted and futile and He surely goes to Hell after his death. O Brahmins! You must learn Your Dharma from the Vaasudev Mahatmya.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The Brahmins accepted Shree Hari's views on the rituals and pledged with folded hands to observe them in totality. Shree Hari expanded His glory greatly by demonstrating His unbridled power of putting people into Samadhi. He delivered similar sermons at regular assemblies as a result of which thousands of people became His disciples and joined in the fold of the Sampraday. Shree Hari celebrated the festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi in Amdavad before departing for other villages. He redrew the boundaries of the Vedic religion and re-established true religion. The devotees of Amdavad were very happy that Lord Shree Hari gave them His divine Darshan over a prolonged period of time."

Thus ends the 48th Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari graced at Dangarva for a day to enjoy the hospitality of Venidas. Agrabhai and female devotees such as Manbai, Jatanbai, Vajibai and others served Him with love. Shree Hari visited Vasai for a day where Narsinh, Punja, Narhari and other devotees venerated Him before He travelled to Meu. Bhushan, Mansaram, Tuljaram and other devotees of Meu served Shree Hari to the best of their abilities. Shree Hari stayed at Ramchandra's house in Langhnaj for a day where Ganesh, Nagar, Jumakhram, Sonabai, Minabai and other devotees joined Ramchandra in Shree Hari's hospitality. Shree Hari arrived at Nardipur from Langhnaj where Gulabchandra, Sukhchandra and other Brahmin devotees served Him reverentially. There, He fed hundreds of Brahmins during His five days' stay in Nardipur before departing for Unava. Raghuvir and Nanibai led other devotees of Unava for two days in serving Shree Hari. Narayanmuni graced the village called Aadraj for three days where Badarji, Ratuji, Khant, Sujanbai, Havanbai and other devotees served Him to the best of their abilities before departing for Shalki. Out of His ten days' stay in Shalki, Shree Hari fed the Brahmins for eight days with the help of devotees such as Dayalji, Raghav, Jalam, Govind and others. Shree Hari arrived at Dahegam, where He and accompanying saints became the guest of Ganesh for two days. He travelled to Vasan from Dahegam. Manchharam, Gangaba and other devotees of Dahegam served Shree Hari well for three days before He departed for Vhelal. Raghunath, Jaysinh, Ajuji, Jayram, Vakhatba and other devotees were in attendance for His three days in Vhelal. Shree Hari graced Kanabha village for a day to give His devotees Nathabhai, Umabhai and others an opportunity to fulfil their lives by serving Him."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Narayanmuni arrived at Motera from Kanabha, where Bhudhar and Purushottam venerated Him lovingly. After staying for a day at Motera, Shree Hari visited Manipur for three days and Gamdi for five days. He stayed at Shambhudas's home at Gamdi where Raghunath, Bapubhai, Kakubhai, Jivabhai, Harilal, Vrajlal, Mohan and other devotees served Him reverentially. Revashankar of Dholka took Shree Hari with him to his town and made Him his guest for ten days. Mukund, Mulji, Vishnu, Mahashankar, Sevakram and other Brahmin devotees, Tribhuvan, Nandlal, Murari, Asharam and other Vaishya devotees and Gangabai, Putlibai and other female devotees served Shree Hari lovingly during His stay in Dholera. The devotees of Dholera requested Shree Hari to construct a temple in their town. Acceding to their request, Lord Swaminarayan asked devotees to start the construction of the temple. Shree Hari became the guest of Dadubhai of Vasai for a day where other devotees such as Jethiji, Bhaguji, Deshak, Zaver and others joined in His service. Shree Hari graced Navagam and Mallari before arriving at Ashlali. Devotees such as Raghunath, Bapubhai, Desai and others of Navagam and Rayji, Bhushan and others of Mallari served Shree Hari during His one day's stay in their respective villages. He stayed at Haribhai's home at Ashlali. Venibhai, Gopalji, Karsan, Kahanji and other devotees assisted Haribhai to serve Shree Hari and accompanying saints and Parshads for their five days stay in Ashlali. O Pratapsinh! Shree Hari espoused and explained the virtues and attributes of the Vedic Sanatan Dharma wherever He went to banish the entrenched religious malpractices. This exposed the fake saints and gurus living in communities. Realising their follies, many devout persons became His disciples and joined the Udhhav Sampraday forsaking their previous gurus and their false beliefs. The truth, compassion, chastity, non violence etc. virtues increased in the society and true Dharma got a impetus by His influence."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! After five days in Ashlali, Shree Hari arrived at Jetalpur. Shree Hari, saints and Parshads made their residence on the banks of a lake called DevSarovar, a holy lake on the outskirts of Jetalpur. The banks of the lake and Jetalpur village itself had many mature trees. O king! Listen to the names of many devotees of Jetalpur, who served Shree Narayanmuni reverentially, venerated Him humbly and gifted their wealth generously to Him. Devram, Dayaram, Asharam, Mayaram, Ugarchand were prominent among Brahmin devotees, Ashji, Kakuji, Gangdas, Jeevan, Shankar, Manohar, Rajaji were main Vaishya devotees and Radiyat, Raksha, Rama were leading female devotees. Shree Hari started two Yagnas, RudraYag and VishnuYag simultaneously with generous offerings of Naivedhya. He appointed Nanabhai and Ashjibhai of Nardipur and Venibhai of Ashlali as the main caretakers of the Yagnas. They pleased Shree Hari with their expertise and relentless services. Shree Hari invited innumerable Brahmins to partake in these Yagnas and greeted them warmly and gifted them generously so that the Brahmins could arrange for the wedding of their daughters and Yagnopavit Sanskar for their sons. Sumptuous meals were served daily to Brahmins and other guests. Many people started arriving in Jetalpur on hearing of the charity being disbursed in the ongoing Yagnas. Most uninvited persons were very hungry, malnourished and too poor to afford decent clothes. They looked upon Shree Hari with awe.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Overcome by pity, Shree Hari told them compassionately, 'You have been tormented by your poverty and have arrived here seeking decent food and clothes. You will not be disappointed. Reside happily in Jetalpur with your families and Bhagwan will take care of your needs. Jetalpur, DevSarovar and the step well are holy shrines. Bath in DevSarovar or the step well and it washes away one's sins. In the bygone era, Baldevji, Lord Krishna's elder brother and his wife, Revtiji rested for a few days on the banks of DevSarovar in Jetalpur while on their way to Gokul from Dwarka. Baldevji amused himself in the water of DevSarovar. The Devtas and Gandharvas came from Heaven to watch Baldevji playing in DevSarovar. Since then, Baldevji had visited DevSarovar and Jetalpur repeatedly. As a result, this town has become a holy shrine. I too, like to come to Jetalpur repeatedly. O folks! You also go and rest on the banks of DevSarovar.' O king! Shree Hari arranged the food and other necessary items for these people. He appointed Anandanad swami to look after these poor people telling him, 'O Muni! Feeding the poor is one of the highest Dharma. Bhagwan is pleased greatly by satiating the poor with food. Indeed, feeding the poor is equivalent to performing hundreds of such Yagnas.' Anandanad swami took up his responsibility of feeding the poor seriously and he directly supervised the whole process daily. The newly arrived people found happiness in Jetalpur and decided to remain here until the situation in their villages improved. The fame of Lord Narayanmuni's generosity spread far and wide. Even the kings were surprised at His ability to spend so much wealth, so much so that they considered Narayanmuni as some divine manifestation."

Thus ends the 50th Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king Pratapsinh! The saints had built a rope swing from the branches of a large banyan tree on the banks of DevSarovar in Jetalpur and made Shree Hari sit on the swing where they started gently swinging Him. The devotees of Jetalpur venerated Shree Hari with Kumkum, sandalwood paste, rice and many flower garlands. Some of the devotees offered Him new fine cloths, diadem, gold rings, pearl necklaces and other ornaments. They all sat around Him, in a form of an assembly after veneration. The saints performed Aarti, decorated His diadem with flower strings and put more flower garlands around His neck. They sat in front of Him at the head of the assembly. Shree Hari was shining like a moon surrounded by the twinkling stars in Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Just as the devotees were waiting for the divine sermon from Shree Hari, a Brahmin named Kichak, a worshipper of goddess Shakti arrived in the assembly. He was attired in the garb of a celibate, surrounded by his disciples with four of them walking ahead of him. Their eyes were red and iridescent with intoxication and they smelt strongly of alcohol. Kichak was wearing steel bangles in his hands, he had a piece of a red chequered Sari tied around his head and a dagger was stuck inside it. He had decorated his forehead with the three lined, horizontal Tripund Tilak of Sindur and a square Chandlo of the menstrual blood of the prostitutes mixed with Kumkum. He had done an additional Chandlo of Sindur shaped like a horned triangle in the middle of brows. Though he was chewing cumin seeds to mask the stink of the alcohol, his foul breath was polluting the chaste environs of the assembly. He had stuffed his ears with cotton wool plugs. A bag containing the foul mixture of ground bones of cats, the ash from a crematorium, the dust from the road at the crossroads, a steel nail, the grains of Urad, faeces and the pieces of the broken earthen pot was dangling from his neck. His black oiled hairs were entwined with the ribbons of the wool. He had placed two dots of blackened ash on either sides if his eyes to mesmerise the people. He was holding some grains of Urad for the use of black magic. He had tied a steel Parshu (an axe like weapon) smeared with the blackened Sindur around his waist. He was holding a metal frame dipped in alcohol and which was covered by a piece of cloth to invoke his powers of black magic. Indeed, his stinking clothes, his ugly garb and appearance were beyond description and tolerance! Full of envy and arrogance, Kichak considered himself as an accomplished Yogi, able to win over any other Yogis. He, overcome by anger, had come to vanquish Narayanmuni, whom he considered an obstacle in his chosen path of the worship of Shakti. Without bowing or greeting anybody, he sat at the head of the assembly. He kept throwing furtive glances at Lord Narayanmuni and Muktanand swami and other saints seated in the assembly."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Not wanting to get involved with such an odious person, the holy saints did not greet or speak with Kichak. When nobody greeted their guru, Kichak's disciples started ranting, 'How the time has corrupted even the pious! These saints, famous for their humility are not greeting our eminent guru who is an accomplished Yogi. It appears to us that due to the unavailability of proper guidance from a great guru like Kichak, you have not been enlightened. How can you have developed the saintliness without his guidance? We are fortunate that we have met such an eminent guru! We have attained both; the mundane pleasures of this world and salvation under his tutelage.' O king! Lord Shree Hari, Whose manifestation was solely to vanquish such demonic gurus, smiled benignly at such an impudent person and asked them, 'Who are you? Where do you come from? Why have you come here? What is your Varna? Which deity you worship? Which scripture do you believe in?"

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Kichak was aghast! He thought, 'People consider Lord Swaminarayan as the supreme God therefore He should know everything there is to know. Then how come He does not know me! My fame has spread so wide that even children recognise me, yet He does not know me! He cannot be God! Now I will have no problem winning Him with the blessings of Chamunda Devi and the help of my magical powers. I was being cautious for no reason.' O king! Kichak nodded towards his disciples and asked them just by the glance of his eyes to reply to Shree Hari's questions. His disciples were overjoyed at getting an opportunity to eulogise their guru."

Kichak's disciples said, 'O Swaminarayan! We have accepted Maha Diksha of Kaulavarna Sampraday according to the tenets of our scripture, the Kaulagam. We have learned and mastered the Kaulagam from our guru and we have attained the status of Mukta Atma (liberated soul) with the blessings of our great guru, Kichak. Our fame as accomplished Sidhha has spread far and wide. Our guru observes silence during the day, though he speaks personally to MahaKali Devi at night. He is the main protagonist of the Kaulavarna Sampraday and has obtained this power by sleeping with more than a thousand women. He drinks alcohol four times in a day. Many kings have become his disciple and revere him and have become enlightened and liberated from this world. Our guru knows the profound meaning of the Kaulagam and the head of the Kaulavarna Sampraday. He is the leader of true Sidhhas. His fame shines like a bright sun in the whole world and there is no one like him. It is surprising that You, Who have become known as God, do not know him! O Swaminarayan! We worship Chamunda Devi. Our scripture, the Kaulagam is the king amongst the scriptures and our Sampraday, Kaulavarna, is the best Sampraday. All other Sampradays profess that a Yogi must renounce all mundane pleasures and the person indulging in the sensual pleasures cannot become a Yogi. Our Sampraday is the best because one can become Yogi by following our Sampraday despite indulging in sensual pleasures.

The followers of other Sampradays such as Shaiv, Vaishnav, Baudhh, Sankhya etc. undergo many hardships for a very long time in pursuit of salvation, all without the guarantee of success! Our Sampraday helps one attain salvation in no time. The persons suffering from the sins of past many lives follow Shaiv or Vaishnav Sampraday. However, they can never attain salvation till they follow Kaulavarna Sampraday."

Suvrat Muni said, O king! Shree Narayanmuni feigned surprise and ignorance at the same time. On the pretext of wanting to know more, Shree Hari asked, 'I have never heard anything like this before! Is it indeed true what you have just mentioned? Please explain your ethics in detail but you must quote other scriptures in support of your arguments. What are the rewards of following your Sampraday?' Kichak's disciples were entangled in Shree Hari's Maya. O king! They never realised that Shree Hari was intent on exposing their tenets and Sampraday. They thought that Shree Hari was impressed by their talk and is interested in their Sampraday. Encouraged by feigned interest in their Sampraday, Kichak's disciples started espousing the misguided and irreligious tenets of their Sampraday."

Kichak's disciples said, 'O Swaminarayan! We had heard that You were against the worship of Shakti, however You appear to be curious at the moment. The answers to the questions You have raised are very profound. We are aware that the secret knowledge regarding our Sampraday and scriptures should not be revealed in this assembly. However, Your devotees may consider us fools and think of our guru as having limited intelligence if we do not answer your questions. Therefore, it is imperative that we reveal the full knowledge of our tenets. You, or some of Your disciples may get interested in our principles. As You are a scholar of the scriptures, we are sure, that You will not accept anything which is not mentioned in the scriptures. Therefore, we quote few verses from the Kaulagam, some of which are in the form of dialogue between Shiva and Parvati. Man cannot attain salvation without knowledge. Our scripture, the 'Urdhva Amnay' is the treasure trove of the knowledge. The three; an acquiescence of the Urdhva Amnay, desire of Para Prasad (sensual pleasures) and the higher knowledge (way to enjoy these pleasures) are not easily attainable. The last two are exclusive to our Sampraday. To drink alcohol and eat meat while looking at beautiful maidens is an exceptional exercise. It is Para Prasad, it is bliss, it is salvation and it is achievable. The bliss is another form of Braham (the liberated soul). It lies within the body and alcohol is the means to draw it out, therefore, a Yogi drinks alcohol to attain the blissfulness. A Brahmin should drink alcohol at will, a Kshatriya should drink on the way to a battlefield, a Vaishya should drink before any profitable activity and Shudra should drink while attending the funeral of a close relative. According to the Devi Puran, it is not a sin to consume meat or alcohol left over after the veneration of the Devtas, oblation to the Pitris while remembering one's guru. Even the Shrutis support this by saying, 'The consumption of the milk or alcohol left over from the veneration of the Devtas and Pitris is not a sin.' The consumption of alcohol and meat is permissible and proper under these circumstances. Alcohol is derived from leaf, flower, buds, bark, fruit, root, grain, sugar or honey, tree or plants. Alcohol brewed from the jackfruit or grapes, coconut or dates, jaggery, from the bark of a Seer tree or from the leaves of a particular grass and plants offer pleasure and salvation at the same time.'

They continued, 'The meat, alcohol, fish, wealth and sex are the five principal means to please Devtas. The Devtas are pleased much more and quickly with and prefer the meat of cow, bull, human, elephant, horse, pig, goat and deer which is considered superior to the meat of other animals. With the intention of copulation, a menstruating woman from lower strata of the society should be invited, be bathed and seated. A prostitute or a woman from a tribal, cobbler, one running abattoir or engaged in associated activities, bootlegger families is preferred to a woman engaged in arms trade or from painter, sculptor, washer man or rag picker families. A respectable woman from any of the four Varna may be invited, if a woman from such lower strata is not available. Both of them should start drinking alcohol whilst kissing and licking each other. The man's soul is liberated after drinking alcohol to the limit and should continue drinking till he falls on the ground by intoxication. He should continue after getting up. The man becomes free from the cycle of death and rebirth if he continues drinking after repeatedly hitting ground for four times. Mahadevi is pleased with such unlimited consumption of alcohol. Indeed, her pleasure is directly proportionate to the intake of alcohol. Bhairav is pleased if one becomes unconscious as a result of the intoxication and all the Devtas are pleased if one vomits as a result of unlimited drinking. One desiring the salvation must undergo all three (hitting floor, unconsciousness and vomiting). A man must eat the residual food left over by the woman, but must not feed her anything leftover by him. A man and woman, by mutual consent must enjoy sex without any restriction or propriety. Nothing should be considered taboo in the pursuit of enjoyment."

They continued, 'Shivji has said to Parvati, 'I am pleased more by the offering of the mixtures of ejaculation and menstruating blood than thousands of drums of alcohol or vast amount of meat. Indeed, the Punya of a person becomes limitless if he offers his sister, daughter or wife to his intoxicated guru. One should gift his young, intoxicated with alcohol and nude except for the golden ornaments; mother or brother's wife, daughter or daughter in law to his guru without any reservation. Not only that, he must fan his guru to relieve his fatigue arising from the copulation. He should collect the mixture of ejaculation and menstruating blood in a skull and offer it to Devtas, Devi and other disciples before consuming himself. O Devi! This must be done without the fear of criticism from society and with total faith in his guru. He becomes free from all shackles and attains all materialistic opulence while alive and my eternal abode at his death. None can stop him achieving these!'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The devotees sitting in the assembly, not wishing to hear such utter nonsense from Kichak's disciples had covered their ears. Shree Hari smiled wryly at such despicable exposition."

Thus ends the fifty first Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-52

Lord Narayanmuni said to them, 'O vile drunkards! You cheat and mislay innocent people with such unholy and anti religious notion. You are the worst of the sinners. You may believe in your scriptures but they do not conform to the Vedas or any Vedic scriptures. The dialogue between Shiva and Parvati is the imagination of some vile alcohol drinking pundit. By considering such imaginary scriptures as real scriptures, you have fallen from the eternal Vedic traditions. O Fools! Why do you think that the sages of bygone eras underwent severe austerity if the salvation was attainable just by drinking alcohol? Thousands of people drink alcohol regularly but not a single one amongst them had attained salvation. Which fool mislaid you to believe such spurious premise? It looks like Brahma created you to eradicate the Varna system. O meat eaters! You have modified the verses by sages such as Yagnavalkya and Manu to suit your means and you have extracted the wrong meaning of verses of the Shruti to justify your false notions. Manu says in favour of absenteeism, 'Alcohol made from jaggery, sap of trees or flours of rice etc. is similarly intoxicating which must be shunned by persons of all three Varna.' Similarly, sage Yagnavalkya has said, 'A pious person from the three Varna falls from his Varna on accidental consumption of alcohol, faeces or urine. Such a person needs to undergo all Sanskars such as Yagnopavit etc. again. Alcohol, derived from whatever source such as jackfruit, grapes, jaggery, dates, honey, coconuts etc. is equally intoxicating and its consumption is a grave sin.' Furthermore, you have replaced the word 'Adham' (The worst) with 'Uttam' (the highest) in the verse by sage Pulatsya (in his Smruti) to imply that he is extolling the consumption of alcohol, whereas he meant to condemn it. You may accept the ' Urdhva Amnay' as an authoritative scripture, but you have intentionally derived the wrong meaning from the verses of the Shruti which you quoted. You have deliberately misinterpreted the word 'Madh' (honey) with the word 'Madhya' (alcohol) to suit your convenience. How can we accept such deliberate replacements of words of verses of the Shruti and Smruti as authentic? You have done this to mislay innocent people. It goes to prove that your scripture, the Kaulagam, is fake and non Vedic and your Sampraday is non Vedic too.'

Lord Narayanmuni continued, 'O fools! The drinking of alcohol is prohibited for all persons of all four Varna. Yet, how could you, the Brahmins indulge in it and that too from the mouth of the lowest of a woman like a prostitute! Shame on you! You have sunk to the nadir of inhumanity. You are disgrace to the whole Brahmin Varna and yet, you dare to wear Yagnopavit! I challenge you to quote a single verse from any Vedic scripture in support of drinking alcohol. On other hand, I can quote numerous verses which forbid such malpractice. Listen to this verse from the Manu Smruti o fools! 'The Brahmins should consume cereals, milk, Ghee, honey, etc. which is staple food for the Devtas and never consume meat or alcohol which is meant only for devils and demons.' The Smrutis consider the drinking of alcohol as one of the five gravest sins. Do you know the atonement of drinking alcohol inadvertently? According to the Manu Smruti, only death resulting from drinking boiling hot alcohol, milk, water, Ghee or cow urine wash away the sin of accidental consumption of alcohol. Furthermore the Manu Smruti says, 'A Brahmin or any person of three Varna must undergo Sanskars such as Yagnopavit again following the accidental consumption of faeces, urine or alcohol.' If atonement of an inadvertent consumption of alcohol is so severe, can you think of atonement for deliberate drinking alcohol? Other Smrutis also say that a Brahmin must be made to drink boiling hot alcohol as atonement for unintentional drinking of alcohol. What punishment awaits people like you who deliberately and repeatedly drink alcohol? The Hell awaits you! All the scriptures forbid adultery with other woman. Let Me quote the verse from the fifth Canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat which describes the punishment for the adulterer. 'The messengers of Death make a man repeatedly embrace the red hot statuette of a woman in Hell as a punishment for the sin of committing adultery with other women and a woman is forced to embrace repeatedly the red hot statue of men as a punishment for the same sin.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Kichak's disciples were stunned and unable to answer back to Shree Hari. Doubts arose in their mind as to what is the real truth and began to think that whatever Shree Hari said may be right. They remained silent. Kichak was agitated at the silence of his disciples and was not ready to accept Shree Hari's reasoned opinion. He broke his vow of day time silence to refute Shree Hari's gospel."

Kichak said, 'O Swaminarayan! Our Sampraday too forbids drinking alcohol just for the sake of it, but tell me which scripture forbids consuming alcohol which is left over after it has been offered to the Devtas as a Naivedhya? Even the Vedas permit the priest Brahmins to consume the meat and alcohol that has been offered to Devtas as a Naivedhya at the conclusion of the Soma Yagna. How can you consider the consumption of meat and alcohol as Prasad of Vedic Devtas? Sage Manu and other eminent sages do not consider killing of animals if carried out for the Vedic rituals. You do not understand the proper meaning of the Smrutis, otherwise, You would not brand us sinners in front of everybody. Many instances of Brahmins consuming alcohol and meat and taking a woman of their choice (from lower Varna) as a wife are recorded in the Mahabharat and many Purans. Do You not know that the ShaptaShati chapter of the Markandeya Puran extols the consumption of alcohol and meat?'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Kichak, instead of accepting the words of Lord Shree Hari as the gospel truth, put forward the biased arguments favourable to his view misquoting or quoting out of context the verses from the Vedas and Smrutis. This was nothing but the charade on his part."

Lord Narayanmuni replied, "O Kichak! According to the Vedas and the Purans, the Devtas are of Satvik (pious), humans and demons as Rajas (mixed) and spirits, devils, ghosts etc. are of Tamas (vile) traits. Nectar, like milk and Ghee is staple food of the Devtas while meat and alcohol is the food of spirits and devils. On being inspired and urged by king Prithu, the Devtas, humans and devils drew their favourite food from the earth which has taken the form of a cow. The Devtas made their king Indra a calf to collect the milk in the form of nectar and physical and mental powers in their gold dish from the earth's udders. Prahalad, on behalf of demons chose to collect their milk in the form of purified alcohol in the steel dish, while Rudra chose the meat and sub standard alcohol on behalf of devils and ghosts in the skull. This tale is mentioned in the Shreemad Bhagwat and clearly implies that it is not proper to offer the Naivedhya of meat and alcohol to the Devtas. People of the Tamas (vile) trait have a natural affinity towards meat and alcohol. They do not need any encouragement from the scriptures. The Vedas permit killing of animals only for the Yagna to discourage and stop wanton killing of animals for indulgence of the palate. O Kichak! Try to understand. The Mahabharat and other scriptures describe various Yagnas to obtain mundane things such as wealth or children to stimulate an interest in performing the Yagnas. In the end, all of them profess non violence as the ultimate goal and Dharma. Where does it say in the Markandeya Puran that Brahmins should offer Naivedhya of meat and alcohol to the Devtas? It is just the fig of your imagination. Instead, it says that the Brahmins should never offer meat and alcohol to Devtas and goddesses. It is the gravest sin for Brahmins to consume alcohol or meat.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O Kichak! People like you, who do not understand the proper meanings of the scriptures and engage in the vile practice of drinking alcohol and eating meat end up in the Hell, along with their disciples. Shukracharya had equated drinking of alcohol with the killing a Brahmin, one of the five gravest sins. Listen to Me carefully. I quote Shukracharya, 'As from today, any Brahmin who drinks alcohol, deliberately or inadvertently, shall be considered fallen from his Dharma and be considered as a murderer of a Brahmin.' Now tell Me, are you beyond the ethics established by great Shukracharya that you will escape punishment for your vile acts? Indulgence in copulation with any partner other than their respective spouses is common only in animals. I quote just two verses from Swetketu, 'Any woman who commits adultery is considered to have committed the sin of abortion of her unborn child, which will lead her to be punished in the darkest of the Hells. Similarly, a man who indulges in adultery, even by the thought, will face the same punishment.' Therefore, Kichak! One must not eat meat of any animal. This is the central theme of all scriptures. Eating meat, even on the pretext of it being the Prasad is a grave sin which, a Brahmin must resist at all cost. Meat is never innocent; it can only be obtained after killing an animal. Listen to this quote from the Mahabharat. 'The religious man must never consume meat, even if it is left over from the Yagna conducted by a priest who happens to be a scholar of Vedas. One must neither eat meat or fish nor the meat left over after oblation to the Pitris. The meat of sacrificial animals and meat of fish are equally vile. Therefore, a Brahmin must never eat meat in any circumstances.' O Kichak! The principle I have just put forward is the only one conforming to the Vedas. Your belief on meat eating is totally wrong. Meat cannot be obtained without killing innocent animals and the killing of innocent animals is a grave sin. Therefore your long held opinion is wrong.'

Thus ends the fifty second Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Kichak was agitated at the arguments put forward against the tenets of his Sampraday by Lord Shree Hari. He said to Shree Hari, 'O Swaminarayan! If the Vedas do not condone sacrificing animals, why do You think the kings and seers of bygone eras performed numerous sacrificial Yagnas? Can You honestly say that they did not understand the Vedas? Are You the only one who understands the true meanings of the Vedas? How and why would one believe You when You appear to be in a minority of one? The practice of sacrificial Yagnas is ancient. The thesis propounded by the likes of Shukracharya and Shwetketu are of the modern origin. The wise ones always attest the ancient practices and do not accept modern tradition which is at variance with the ancient traditions.' O king! Kichak was not prepared to move away from his long held views. He was prepared to go to any length to prove his point. Lord Swaminarayan put forth His views again."

Narayanmuni said, 'O Kichak! I do not belittle the past sages and kings who performed sacrificial Yagnas. Neither do I criticise them. However, the true and central theme of the Vedas is non violence. I still say that the permission to perform sacrificial Yagnas (to achieve limited goals) was just to stop indiscriminate killing of animals for their meat. Non violence is the true and ultimate ethic propounded by the Vedas. Let Me quote to you what Bhishma had said to his grandson, the great king Yudhishthir in the MokshaDharma chapter of the Mahabharat. 'O Yudhishthir! The persons interested in satisfying their liking of meat have misinterpreted the hymns of the Vedas to create the impression that the Vedas condone the violence in the name of sacrificial Yagnas. They are atheist and therefore do not believe that they shall reap the fruits of such Yagnas. Disregarding the morality of such actions, they continue to perform such sacrificial Yagnas in the pursuit of fame. Therefore, sage Manu had clearly stated that all Yagnas, including the 'Jyotishtom' Yagna must be performed without actual sacrifice of live animals. The edicts of the Vedas hold no meaning for the persons killing animals to procure their meat. The sacrificial Yagnas are for the people (of limited intelligence) desiring mundane rewards. The actual and profound theme of the Vedas is indeed non violence! Therefore, the wise must always observe non violence towards all living being by thought, speech and deeds because non violence is the primary and the highest Dharma of all humans. The sacrifice of animals during any Yagna is nothing but a sin and killing of animals can never be praised or condoned. Eating meat of animals or fish and drinking alcohol and other intoxicating substances during or after any Yagna is nothing but the scheme devised by immoral persons to satisfy their palate. It is nothing but the imagination of their minds. They have devised this scheme just to gratify their pride and ego, acquire wealth and indulge their taste. It is not mentioned anywhere in the Vedas. The Vedas propound to invoke only Lord Vishnu during any and all Yagnas. Ancient sages had followed this dictum of offering milk, curd, honey and cereal as His Naivedhya in the flames of the Yagna. Even cooked food offered as Naivedhya must have been prepared with these items without any adulteration. The fruits such as mango, coconut etc. may also be offered to Lord Vishnu.'

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, 'O Kichak I have just quoted you eight verses from the Mahabharat as evidence that sacrificial Yagnas are not true Vedic tradition. Similar verses are found in the Shreemad Bhagwat. The vile people who hold that the Vedas condone violence do not know the true meaning of the Vedas. They, in pursuit of mundane rewards like the opulence of the Heaven, have transgressed from the true religion and remain shackled in the cycle of birth and death with repeated visits to Hell. The animals that they have killed for their greed, lust and pleasure wait to punish them after their death. Their desires for which they have conducted such sacrificial Yagnas are never fulfilled. The truly religious person must neither offer meat as oblation to the Pitris nor eat meat during the ceremony of Shraddh as Pitris are truly satisfied by cereals rather than meat. When Shreemad Bhagwat forbids sacrificing animals even during Shraddh, the question of condoning violence at any other time does not arise. Ancient sages had always forbidden sacrificial Yagnas. I shall mention a few quotes from wise sages of the bygone era. Sage Narad had said, 'A person who builds his body by eating meat of others will surely suffer great pain.' Sage Manu had said, 'The person who does not eat meat, does not kill any animals or does not ask anybody to kill any animals on his behalf is reverential to all.' To quote sage Brahaspati, 'A person who does not consume alcohol or meat is the greatest donor and most astute, and is considered to have performed all Yagnas.' Grandsire Bhishma had said to king Yudhishthir, 'A person, who never eats meat, earns the same Punya as a person who performs Ashvamedh Yagna every month.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'If a person, realising his mistake, gives up eating meat and vows never to touch it again, becomes free from the sin of its eating. A person who protects the life of all animals is considered the life giver and all living being trust him as a saviour. Nobody can defeat such person. Every living being loves its life just as one holds his own life dear. There is no greater sorrow than death. The great ascetics, who have abandoned everything and consider their soul to be distinct and separate from their bodies, are subdued when faced with death. Therefore, their killing is considered worse than murder of a Brahmin. Even the Devtas, whom all offerings in Yagnas are addressed, desert the battlefield when faced with defeat and death, hide in the caves of the mountains. Just as they protect their lives, they consider all lives sacred. The murderer, who habitually kills fearlessly, is frightened at the prospect of his own death. Such a cruel person pleads for mercy and extols non violence when faced with his own death. Even the scholars who know that the death is an inevitable occurrence are scared at the certainty of their own death. If the humans are scared of death, do you think that animals, tied for sacrifice, are not affected by the prospect of certain death? Of course, they are very scared of death that is staring at them. How can a cruel person who kills other living beings be ever at peace with himself? His yearning for happiness is futile. O Kichak! Meat is neither derived from plants, trees nor rocks, but is obtainable only after killing an animal. The murder shall remain a sin notwithstanding the reason behind it. The pious Devtas accept Ghee, milk etc., the kind Pitris accept water and only wily devils accept meat as an offering or oblation. Therefore, meat should neither be consumed nor fed to others for any rites relating to the Devtas or Pitris.'

'O Kichak! The person who does not torment anybody is not terrified of anybody. Conversely, the person who torments others remains scared forever in this life and the next. There is no need for anyone to kill anybody or trade in meat if the whole world turns vegetarian. Therefore, for the peaceful co existence of all living beings, it is vital for every one to shun eating meat. Do not think that the trader and eater do not share the sin of the actual killer. All three are guilty to the same extent. Sage Markandeya had said, "The trader commits the sin (of killing) by his greed of money, the eater commits the sin by his wish to eat it and actual killer is obviously a sinner therefore all three of them are equally guilty of the sin of killing.' The seven; the actual killer of animals, the seller, the buyer of the meat, the person who brings meat home, the person who cooks meat for others, the person who eats meat and the person who condones any of these activities are equally guilty of the sin of eating meat. What benefit is there in eating meat except to nourish the body which is perishable and the cause of all pains? A person indulging in violence is subject to the pains related to the repeated births, old age and deaths for a very long time. He goes to hell after his death to suffer severe pains and is born in the species of dog, donkey etc. to remain a slave to others for many lives. Many other latent sins raise their heads in the company of violence. O Kichak! Tell Me! Who does not love their life dearly? It is not enough not to kill large animals, but one must not intentionally kill even the small insects. Just like all other living beings, the small insects too love their lives dearly. The Dan Dharma chapter of the Mahabharat narrates an instance to highlight this. 'As sage Vyas was once travelling, he saw a small insect running away from a cart travelling behind it. Sage Vyas asked the insect why was it scared so much and running so fast. The insect replied that it was trying to save its dear life from the cart coming after it.' Only a kind person who protects the lives of all living beings can remain fearless in this world. Even wild animals such as tigers, snakes and even evil spirits do not kill such a kind person. He is saved from all types of fear.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O Kichak! The animals tremble at the prospect of an approaching death. A man should endeavour to save the lives of all animals, just as he tries hard to save his own life. He must always remember that as he is eating meat of animals in this world, the same animals will eat him in the Hell after his death. Even if you profess that animals are born to be sacrificed in the Yagnas, you must never kill animals for any other reason. However, the Vedas do not condone the actual sacrifice of animals in a Yagna because the Vedas are kinder than even a mother. How could a mother condone the murder of her child? The Vedas propound the sacrificial Yagnas only as a stop gap measure to control and eventually eradicate violence altogether but vile people have interpreted this exceptional and narrow edict as the open permission to kill animals and consume their meat. The people lived by the virtues such as pity, compassion, truth, austerity etc. in the first Satya Yug. Later on when the practice of Yagna started, only non germinating - 'Aja' - cereals were offered as Naivedhya. People's minds became corrupt with the passage of the time and people, along with the Devtas, developed the taste for meat. In the first Treta Yug, Indra named Vishvajit initiated the process of sacrificial Yagna. He misinterpreted the word 'Aja' (non germinating) to mean a goat and started the actual sacrifice of animals such as goat and sheep at his Ashvamedh Yagna.'

'O Kichak! Let Me reiterate the historical tale of king Vasu, which is recorded in the Vayu Puran, the Skand Puran, the Matsya Puran and the Mahabharat. There was an Indra (the king of the Devtas) named Vishvajit in the first Treta Yug. He started the Ashvamedh Yagna in the company of other Devtas. The wise sages including Vasishtha arrived at the site of the Yagna and were warmly received and greeted by the Devtas as per the tradition of welcoming guests. They heard the wails of the distressed animals amidst the chant of scared verses by the Brahmins and said to Indra, 'Why have you started this sacrificial Yagna? Killing of innocent animals cannot be Dharma. It is Adharma. Dharma does not condone violence of any type or any form. The Vedas do not permit killing of animals either; therefore, you must perform this Yagna according to the existing non violent traditions as depicted and supported by the Vedas.' O Kichak! Indra, blinded by the arrogance and ego, did not heed benevolent advice of the great sages. He started arguing with them to prove his point. Just then a very religious king Vasu arrived to participate in Indra's Yagna. They decided to make king Vasu a mediator and promised to accept his verdict on this matter. They asked him for his opinion on the propriety of sacrificial Yagna and without much thought of the consequences, king Vasu replied, ' O sages! One can perform the Yagna with cereals and milk products as well as sacrificing animals. The Vedas do permit sacrificial Yagnas.' O Kichak! Just as king Vasu spoke these sentences, he, though able to fly independently, fell straight on the earth. Though he knew the truth very well that the Vedas did not condone sacrificial Yagnas, he sided with Indra because of his friendship with him. As a consequence, he lost his power of flying and fell on the earth. Such an eminent scholar was unable to comprehend the profound meanings of the Vedas and arrived at wrong conclusion. The knowledge of Dharma is difficult to grasp. The Vedas propound Dharma of all persons and an intelligent person must only accept what is his own Dharma.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O Kichak! The sages realised that Indra will not heed their advice and will continue with his sacrificial Yagna to gratify his ego. As they could not condone nor witness such an irreligious activity, they left from there. Indra indeed continued his sacrificial Yagna and as a result and the practice of sacrificial Yagnas became acceptable and prevalent. People change with time and so does the scriptures written by them during such times. One must always follow the traditions laid out by the ancient sages and never indulge in violence of any type or for any reason. Non violence (in thought, speech and deeds), truthfulness, control of senses and mind, compassion towards all, leniency, forgiveness, generosity, serenity and composure in the face of provocation, are the basic tenets of Sanatan Vedic religion. Non violence is an ancient fundamental and pivotal tenet of Sanatan Dharma; therefore, avoiding the consumption of meat is in the best interest of all. O Kichak! Forsake your wrong tenets and come unto the shelter of Lord Krishna.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king Pratapsinh! Kichak was surprised at Shree Hari's soothing sermon. He realised that his views were wrong and Shree Hari's were right. He accepted the supremacy of Lord Swaminarayan in his mind, but was unable to do so publicly for the fear of ridicule. He was sacred of being proven wrong in the eyes of people. Though he had no answers to Shree Hari's valid arguments, he was unrepentant at least in public. He retorted, 'O Swaminarayan! You are right in what You are saying. However, I will bring my scriptures and show you the validity of my arguments. I will return shortly.' Kichak left the assembly with his disciples. He was pleased to escape from the public scrutiny by Shree Hari. Shree Hari said to departing Kichak, 'Do not bring your scriptures here. Do not even bother to come back as I do not want to see your face again.' Shree Hari bathed in the holy DevSarovar with saints and devotees for some time. As a result, the importance of DevSarovar became equal to that of the river Ganga.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari returned after a while to continue the assembly. He addressed the devotees, 'O Devotees! I am not against the veneration and worship of mother goddess, only the method of that veneration. The goddess had killed many demons at the behest of Bhagwan, therefore, you must never ignore or insult the goddess or refute her existence as a deity.' By defeating the powerful guru like Kichak, Shree Hari removed the ignorance and false beliefs and practices from the minds of people. He reiterated the forbidden elements like, consumption of meat and alcohol and indulgence in adultery in the name of worship of the Goddess and re-established the practice of offering chaste items like milk, Ghee, flowers, sandalwood, cereals etc. in the worship of all deities including mother goddess. Shree Hari continued spreading His gospel and removing ignorance and religious malpractices from the society while staying in Jetalpur. He organised the celebration of Mokshada Ekadashi with the grand veneration of Lord Krishna. Thousands of devotees from places far away came to Jetalpur to participate in this festival." Devotees like nathubhai and Gangabhai from Ahmedabad had also arrived to Jetalpur to participate in this festival.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari, saints and devotees stayed up till late singing Kirtans on the occasion of Ekadashi. To the surprise of everybody present, suddenly a brilliant radiance appeared in the sky. It split into three separate balls of radiance and disappeared after a while. The saints asked Shree Hari to explain the miracle they had just witnessed. Shree Hari replied, 'O saints! This is a deep secret. I am about to reveal it to you because you are very dear to Me. Lords Brahma, Shiva and Vishnu had come for My Darshan regularly. However, you saw them in the form of brilliant balls of light today at My express desire.' Saints and devotees bowed down to Shree Hari to show their appreciation for His mercy. They pleaded with Shree Hari, 'O merciful Lord! We are your staunch devotees. O Bhagwan! You fulfil desires of Your devotees. Therefore, O Lord Swaminarayan! Accede to our pleas.' Narayanmuni, pleased with their devotion and servility said, 'O Devotees! Ask what is in your hearts. I am pleased with your devotion.' O king! The devotees of Jetalpur asked, 'O Lord! We are unable to live without Your Darshan even for a day therefore, we request You to stay in Jetalpur permanently. We know You need to visit other villages, but we ask You to return to Jetalpur after such short visits."

I shall remain here either in person or in the form of an idol or even invisibly. I ask you to construct a temple dedicated to Me in Jetalpur. Whoever worships My idol in this temple reverentially shall have all his desires fulfilled. The Darshan of My idol will be as rewarding as My personal Darshan. The devotees of Jetalpur were very pleased at Shree Hari’s pledge and started constructing His temple. Shree Hari appointed Anandanand Swami to supervise the construction of the temple. A Brahmin widowed devotee named Gangaba pleaded with Shree Hari, ‘O Bhagwan! Do me a favour. I would like You to eat food prepared by me daily. I have had this desire for a very long time. Consider me as Your personal maid and please grant me this boon.’ Shree Hari blessed Gangaba and acceded to her wish and said, ‘I shall eat at your house as long as I am in Jetalpur and I will accept your food in the form of the idol while away from Jetalpur.’ Gangaba was pleased at the mercy of Lord Swaminarayan and always prepared the food for Him. His Murti accepted whatever Naivedhya Gangaba offered. O king! Shree Hari fed thousands of Brahmins the next day and generously offered them gifts. Vishnugupt and other devotees of Dabhan repeatedly requested Shree Hari to grace their village. Acceding to their requests, Shree Hari departed for Dabhan riding on the horse after the successful conclusion of the Mokshada Ekadashi festival. Many devotees of Jetalpur accompanied Shree Hari to the outskirt of their village to bid Him farewell. O king! Shree Hari asked the devotees of Jetalpur to return to their village and He travelled towards Dabhan in the company of saints and a few horse mounted Parshads.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Upon hearing the imminent arrival of Lord Shree Hari, the devotees of Dabhan proceeded towards the outskirt of their village to welcome and greet Him. Some of them rushed forward upon seeing Shree Hari astride a tall horse and started prostrating on the ground. Shree Hari dismounted and embraced the devotees. He asked their well being and spoke to them lovingly. The devotees greeted Shree Hari reverentially amidst the singing Kirtans and chanting His name. He accompanied the devotees of Dabhan to their village. Anticipating the problem caused by the innumerable devotees arriving for His Darshan, Shree Hari decided to stay out of the residential and congested area of Dabhan. He made His temporary residence under a large Banyan tree on the western side of the village and asked the saints and devotees accompanying Him to make suitable arrangement in His vicinity. The devotees of Dabhan, individually and in groups, venerated Sahajanand Swami with sandalwood paste, Kumkum, rice, camphor, flower garlands etc. and gifted Him many pieces of valuable clothes and ornaments. They also offered Him many items of food and fruits before conducting His Aarti. They also offered suitable hospitality and services to the accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees too. Mayaram, Govindji, Nirbhay, Bhairam, Harikrishna, Raghunath, Vishnugupt, Rajaji, Prayagdas etc. male and Abla, Sakar, Dutta, Shiva etc. female devotees were at the forefront of the hospitality and service accorded to Shree Hari, the saints and devotees."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The almighty Lord Swaminarayan asked thousands of Brahmins who had come for His Darshan to prepare for the grand Vishnu Yagna. The scholar Brahmins erected numerous small Kunds (raised walled structures) for the sacred fire under a grand marquee. Lord Vishnu and all the other Devtas were very pleased at being offered the best quality of Naivedhya in the Yagna. People were surprised at the amount and quality of Naivedhya being used in the Yagna. The Brahmins were fed sumptuous meals including sweets made of plenty of Ghee for the duration of the Vishnu Yagna. The shouts of 'give', 'give', 'take', 'take', filled the atmosphere at the time of lunch and dinner. Lord Shree Hari gave a large quantity of gifts to Brahmins at the conclusion of the Yagna. O king! Though Shree Hari did not bother to check the suitability of recipient Brahmins in general while gifting them, He did make sure that scholar Brahmins were given extra helpings. He gifted money to poor Brahmins to conduct the weddings of their daughters and sacred thread ceremonies of their sons. Many other poor Brahmins were provided financial help to alleviate their hardship and as a result many of Brahmins were freed from seeking daily alms. Even the kings of the surrounding kingdoms were surprised at the wealth Shree Hari distributed amongst the Brahmins. They averred in unison that such a Yagna was never carried out before. O king! Nobody has been able to conduct a Yagna on such a vast scale since then either. The fame of Shree Hari's generosity spread globally. This Yagna was concluded on the Purnima (full moon day) of the month of Posh in Samvat 1866. O king! My guru, Shatanand swami, too had arrived at Dabhan for Shree Hari's Darshan and recognising his detachment, Bhakti and latent talent, He asked my guru to remain with Him.

Thus ends the fifty fifth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-56

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! After concluding the Vishnu Yagna successfully and distributing vast amounts of wealth amongst Brahmins, Shree Hari held a large assembly in Dabhan. The devotees venerated Shree Hari seated on an ornate Sinhasan on a high dais and took their appropriate seats in the assembly. They eagerly waited for His divine sermon to start. Shree Hari asked the devotees present to ask Him questions of their choice. Sura Khachar, the king of Loya and Nagadka reverentially and humbly asked Shree Hari, 'O almighty Bhagwan! Please tell us the best conduct for kings like us. Please enlighten us by which we may become happy in this life and attain Moksha after death.' Pleased with the question, Shree Hari replied, 'O devout king! King Yudhishthir asked the same question to his grandsire Bhishma upon hearing the tale of generous king Shibi. I am giving you the same answer that Bhishma gave which is recorded in the Dan Dharma chapter of the Mahabharat. Listen to it intently."

Grandsire Bhishma said, 'O Yudhishthir! To serve and revere Brahmins is the main ethical duty of the kings seeking eternal bliss. A king should honour the Brahmins that are scholar, devout, elder and experts in discourses and bear with their shortcomings. He should treat the Brahmins with the same love just as he showers on his sons, friends and relatives as there is no one more reverential than a Brahmin. They are able to change the destiny of a king by the power of their austerity and can make commoner a king and king a commoner by their power. O king! The whole kingdom prospers when you honour Brahmins and it suffers when you insult Brahmins. There is no doubt that the king suffers great calamity by insulting the Brahmins. One must never criticise the Brahmins nor listen to any criticisms about them. One must move away from the group of people criticising Brahmins if he is unable to defend then against such criticism. No one has found nor will find true happiness after insulting or criticising the Brahmins. A person, a king or a commoner, desirous of the Salvation should invite a scholar Brahmin to be his guest. They should be fed on regular basis as the Devtas and the Pitris accept Naivedhya through them. Conversely, the Devtas and Pitris do not accept any offerings from a person who does not revere Brahmins. Therefore, all his rituals and the wealth spent on performing ritual are futile. The strength and valour of Kshatriyas are destroyed at once at the displeasure of the Brahmins. Therefore, O king Yudhishthir, you must always revere and serve Brahmins if you wish to rule over the kingdom of the entire earth.'

Narayanmuni said, 'O Sura Khachar! King Yudhishthir heeded the advice of his grandsire Bhishma to honour and to serve Brahmins for the rest of his life. Furthermore, Lord Krishna proffered the similar advice to His sons after relieving king Nrug from the life of chameleon. (The king had become chameleon as a result of a curse from a Brahmin.)'

Lord Krishna said, 'O sons! Even a tiny amount of wealth stolen or cheated from a Brahmin is like a fire which destroys everything. When even the most powerful person cannot digest such ill gotten wealth, how can an egocentric king be able to do so? I do not consider most potent poison as fatal as there is always an antidote available for the poison, but the wealth stolen from a Brahmin is such a poison for which no antidote exists. O sons! As it is, poison kills only the person who drinks it but the wealth stolen from a Brahmin destroys the whole clan. Just as an ember burns down the large tracts of the forest, the poisonous wealth stolen from a Brahmin is able to destroy the whole generation. The fire can be doused with water, but you cannot subdue the heat emanating from the rage of a Brahmin who has been deprived of his wealth. Three future generations of a person is consigned to hell if a Brahmin's wealth is inadvertently taken away by him while his twenty one generation (past ten and future ten generations besides him) are annihilated if a Brahmin is knowingly deprived of his wealth by cheating or stealing. The wile and fool kings who consider the Brahmins' wealth as their own cannot see their own imminent destruction. The king and his future generations spend as many years in the worst of the hell as the number of dust particles wetted by the Brahmins' tears on the loss of his wealth. A king or his courtiers spend sixty thousand years as an insect in the faeces, if they deprive or take back a Brahmin's source of income. Therefore, O sons! Never ever think of stealing a Brahmin's wealth as it shortens one's life span. Such kings are vanquished by their enemies in this life and are born in the species of snakes in the next lives. O My sons! Do not punish a Brahmin even if he has committed any crime. Always bow at them even if they cause you harm and always be fearful of a Brahmin's curse. Imitate My example and always bow at the Brahmins. I shall punish any of you not obeying My decree. The king Nrug was forced to be reborn as a chameleon as he inadvertently deprived a Brahmin of his cow. That is how the mighty fall!'

Lord Narayanmuni said, 'O Sura Khachar! Lord Krishna's sons lived happily ever after heeding His advice. My Kshatriya disciples, and indeed every disciple, must always honour, revere and serve Brahmins. Never ignore or under estimate a Brahmin even if he has not studied Sanskrit. He is like an ember covered with ash. Just as the fire never loses its power to burn even by the touch of a dead body in the crematorium, the potent power of a Brahmin is never lost. Therefore, you must satisfy Brahmins by offering them sumptuous meals and wealth as gratitude. Lord Vishnu is satisfied when Brahmins are satiated. This is in your best interest and is your ethical duty.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king Pratapsinh! Sura Khachar and other devotees came to Shree Hari, touched His feet and pledged to heed His advice. Shree Hari stayed in Dabhan for a whole month and during that time innumerable devotees from other parts of Gujarat came for His Darshan and veneration. The devotees of every village pleaded with Him to grace their respective village. Sahajanand Swami solaced all devotees by promising to visit their villages in near future. O king! To fulfil this promise to His devotees, Lord Shree Hari departed from Dabhan. He sent hundreds of devotees of Dabhan, who had come to see Him off back to their village. Tears welled up the eyes of devotees of Dabhan as the thought of separation from their Ishtadev. Shree Hari proceeded towards Charotar (central Gujarat).

Thus ends the fifty sixth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari visited each and every village of Charotar where His devotees lived. He stayed for a day or two at some villages and at others He stayed up to fifteen days, independently deciding how long to stay in each village. He nonetheless, held assemblies at every village He graced, to eradicate religious malpractices and re-establish the Sanatan Vedic religion. The fake gurus had trapped many innocent persons in their web of conceit to gratify their lust for power and wealth. Shree Hari freed these people by showing them the correct path and brought them within the fold of Udhhav Sampraday. Shree Hari organised the Katha of Vedic scriptures such as the Shreemad Bhagwat, the Bhagvad Gita, Vaasudev Mahatmya etc. wherever the time permitted. Where the time was the constrain, Shree Hari urged devotees to undertake chanting of the various Stotras such as the Narayan Kavach, Laxmi Sukta, VishnuSahasraNam, Gayatri hymn etc. At some villages He held the Katha of the Vedas or the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat. The sole aim of these activities was to enlighten people and grant them the knowledge of His true form. O king! Shree Hari continued His travel southwards to grace the city of Bharuch. To fulfil the desires of the devotees of Surat, Shree Hari arrived at Surat on Vaishakh Sud Beej of Samvat 1866.

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! The devotees of Surat stopped whatever they were doing and rushed to the outskirt of the city when they heard the news of Shree Hari approaching their city. They took many musical instruments and vehicles such as carts and chariots with them to welcome Shree Hari. King Indrasen sent his infantry, cavalry and soldiers with the army band to greet Lord Swaminarayan and asked his minister Ardeshar, his brother Piluji and other courtiers to welcome Shree Hari on his behalf. Many scholar Brahmins also went ahead to welcome Shree Hari with the chant of Vedic hymns. The devotees immediately fell on the ground to prostrate at Shree Hari’s feet when they faced Him. The musical instruments started playing amid the chant of hymns by the Brahmins. Shree Hari greeted His devotees warmly by asking their well beings. Shree Hari, surrounded by the devotees, courtiers and soldiers, entered the city of Surat. He was accorded the welcome fit for a visiting sovereign. A very large palace, surrounded by many trees was set aside for Shree Hari, His saints, Parshads and accompanying devotees. Ardesharji formally greeted Shree Hari on behalf of the king. The male devotees of Surat such as Ambaram, Girdhar, Govind, Yadav, Bhikhalal, Motilal, Narottam, Bhagvanji etc. and female devotees such as Mahalaxmi, Jivanti, Laadu, Devika etc. were at the forefront serving Shree Hari and saints. The devotees of Surat venerated Shree Hari with sandalwood paste, Kumkum, flower garlands and gifted Him a lot of money and fine clothes. After performing the Aarti collectively, the devotees satisfied Shree Hari, saints and accompanied devotees with sumptuous meal including many types of sweets.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! Shree Hari celebrated the festival to mark the manifestation of Parshuram with His devotees the next day. King Indrasen requested Shree Hari to grace the royal palace and sent his royal chariot to bring Him to the palace. He gave Shree Hari a vast amount of wealth as a gratitude following the grand veneration. Taking the cue from their king, other courtiers including Ardesharji invited to grace their respective residences and gifted Him generously following the veneration.

Some adversaries wanted to create a ruckus at Shree Hari's presence in Surat but were foiled in their attempt by His latent power. Shree Hari propounded Sanatan Vedic religion and removed the ignorance from people's minds with His divine sermon. O king! Shree Hari distributed all the wealth that was put at His disposal by the king, courtiers and the devotees of Surat among the Brahmins. He did not keep anything for personal use. This was His normal practice. Lord Swaminarayan always gave away whatever money, ornaments and clothes he received from His devotees to the Brahmins of those villages to alleviate their poverty. O king! He never kept anything for His personal use."

Thus ends the 57th Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! To give an opportunity to the devotees of Surat to listen to His divine sermon, Bhagwan Shree Hari called a large assembly in the evening. The devotees came in droves for this divine occasion. They venerated their Ishtadev as they came in and gifted Him money, clothes, ornaments etc. before taking their seats behind the rows of saints in the assembly. Lord Shree Hari spoke benignly, 'O devotees! All of you must observe your ethical duties as per your Varna. The devotion towards Lord Krishna must always be accompanied by Dharma. You may ask Me any question to eliminate your doubts.' O king! Bhalchandra Seth asked Him, 'O Bhagwan! According to the Shruti and Smruti, Lord Krishna's - Your Bhakti frees one from the cycle of death and rebirth. Bhakti is the only means of achieving salvation. My question pertains to Bhakti. O Lord! Please explain the types and forms of Bhakti. What are the characteristics of a chaste and true devotee? What sort of bond develops between Bhagwan and His devotee due to this divine love? How does this love manifest?' Lord Shree was very pleased at these questions as it was of interest to all the devotees.' Shree Hari replied, 'O Bhalchandra! You have asked the profound questions that raise the fundamental principles of the religion. The answer to these questions is the nectar of all the scriptures which only the true devotees are able to understand. However, no one can answer them without God's blessing. Listen to the answers very carefully."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'First of all, a man must accept Diksha from a chaste and devout Guru. He should obtain Lord Krishna's Murti from his guru for personal worship, which he must conduct daily without fail and as directed by his guru. The profound, unreserved, exclusive, natural and absolute love in Lord Krishna after understanding His greatness and glory is called Bhakti. It is of nine types; Listening to His Katha and Kirtans, Singing Kirtans extolling His virtues and Leelas, Remembering His Murti and Leelas all the time, Physical services, like massaging His feet, Undertake His veneration at regular intervals with suitable and available artefacts, Bow at Him with Ashtang or Panchang Pranam, serve Him personally with humility and servitude, Maintain an honest and unadulterated (without any motive or desire of gain) friendship with Him and surrender everything - family, wealth, body and soul unto Him. One must choose at least one type of Bhakti and venerate Him with sincerity. A Sakaam (desiring or expecting some rewards) Bhakta is rewarded with the fulfilment of all desires while a Nishkaam (not expecting anything except His pleasure) Bhakta is rewarded with Moksha and His supreme abode. O Bhalchandra! Nishkaam Bhakti is even superior to the achievement of eight Sidhhis (divine magical powers). It can be compared to the digestive juices. Just as the peptic juices destroy the original form of the food by the digestive process, Nishkaam Bhakti destroys the ignorance enveloping the soul by its enlightening power. Indeed, a true Nishkaam Bhakta does not even desire salvation if it comes without the opportunity to serve Bhagwan! He wants nothing but the opportunity to serve Bhagwan and His pleasure and uses all his faculties to serve Lord Krishna. A Nishkaam Bhakta considers His life fulfilled and complete only if engaged in His service. Their bliss is derived from the continuous memory of God in their heart and mind.'

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued. ' Atmanivedi (such Nishkaam devotees are also called 'Atmanivedi' as they have surrendered their Aatma - soul unto Bhagwan) devotees spend all their time in singing Lord Krishna's Kirtans and Leelas with other likeminded devotees. They consider the time spent without Lord's memory as wasted and they do not waste a single moment of their life. They are able to see and talk with God's Murti as if the Murti is actually God in person. Even the thought of opulence of the Heaven is not able to deviate their minds from their single mindedness Bhakti. O

Bhalchandra! How can the thought of the fleeting pleasures of this world deviate them from the path of devotion? What more do I say! They are neither tempted by the opulence and pleasures of Satyalok (the abode of Brahma) nor by the lure of acquisition of eight Sidhhis. They do not even yearn for the greatness imposed on them by Bhagwan Himself. Though they do not desire any greatness or opulence, Bhagwan thrusts upon them such greatness and opulence of His supreme abode when they reach there after their death. For them Shree Hari is everything; father, son, husband, friend, relative, Ishtadev, Kuldev, indeed their soul as well. They are not afraid of the influence of Time (death) and Maya. Indeed, even their associates become free from the fear of Time and Maya. Such Atmanivedi devotees forsake their sons, home, wealth and even their prestige for the love of God. They do not yearn for pleasures and opulence of various abodes of the Devtas such as the Heaven or Satyalok. The love and admiration between God and His devotees are mutual. Just as devotees do not ever lose the reminiscence of Bhagwan even for a moment, God always thinks of benevolence of His devotees. The omnipotent Lord Krishna, on Whose command the sun shines, the fire burns and the wind moves, protects such devotees from all peril.'

Lord Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotee! The constant reminiscence of Bhagwan cools and pleases their minds, just as the moonlight calms one's heart. Just as a person standing in the middle of the water of river Ganga has no fear of being scalded by the fire; such devotee's mind has no fear from the passive threats of the mundane worldly desires. The Devtas, including Brahma and Indra always mediate upon Him. Lord Krishna, though independent and potent enough to control the activities of all living beings, is helpless against the love of His devotees. So much so that He is not able to leave their hearts and mind. He remains tied to them with the thin string of love. God's love for such Atmanivedi devotees is stronger than His love for Radha, Laxmi, Brahma etc. Indeed He loves His devotees more than he loves Himself. Such unflinching devotion is the result of many Punyas, such as Vrat, austerity, donation, detachment etc. done in the previous life. The ascent of such unwavering love for Lord Krishna is the true reward of doing any of the nine forms of Bhakti. Until such profound and exclusive love has been established, one must consider that his Bhakti is still in the germination stage. It has not yet fructified. The attraction towards anything else wanes with such love for Bhagwan. To such a devotee, a moment spent without His service or remembrance feels like eons, whilst a long time spent in service or worship feels like a moment. An Atmanivedi devotee feels the presence of God with Him while meditating. He loses his mental equilibrium if God disappears even for a moment. Just as a lover becomes agitated at the moment's separation from his love, an Atmanivedi devotee loses the rationale of his mind and sees Bhagwan in everything. He talks with trees and pillars as if they are God or imitates His actions as if he himself is God personified; he intermittently cries with pain and laughs with pleasure or he sporadically dances with joy of His company and pleads loudly with Him to grant him a favour under such circumstances. A devotee sometimes loses the perspective of his physical body and tears of joys well up in his eyes and stammer incoherently when he senses God in person, in front of Him. He becomes aware of his surroundings after some time only at God's express wish. O Bhalchandra! It is not that such an elevated status of devotion is attainable only to the scholar male devotees; even the female devotees can attain such profound love and become reverential to the Devtas by remaining within and observing their ethical duties faithfully.

He continued, 'God loves Atmanivedi devotees equally, whether they are scholars of scriptures or illiterate; whether a Brahmin or of any Varna or indeed from the low Varna. It is very important that a devotee's mind is focused exclusively in Lord Krishna whether one has learned about His greatness from scriptures or not. Such a devotee remains in His service forever. However, even an Atmanivedi devotee must continue to enhance his Bhakti by the association with likeminded pious devotees, otherwise he may transgress from his path just as king Bharat, the son of Rhishabhdev. He transgressed from his Bhakti due to his compassion towards a deer. Therefore, one must endeavour constantly to keep his Bhakti well nurtured by keeping the company of chaste and pious people. Any steps taken on the path of Bhakti are never wasted even if one deviates from the path of Bhakti due to the influence of evil person. He retraces and advances on those steps in the next life. One must never trust and let the mind wander. A devotee must endeavour to enhance his Bhakti by forsaking ego and trusting the scriptures and saints. Ego is the main hindrance on the path of devotion, while saints and scriptures direct the devotee on the correct path. An Atmanivedi devotee must always speak the truth, control his senses, be compassionate and lenient towards all and wish well of them. He must treat the devotees with virtues such as knowledge, devotion and detachment with reverence, treat the poor and helpless with respect due to one's parents and be magnanimous towards the devotees of equal status. Love and respect the saints, guru and other pious devotees with the same intensity as one loves and respects Lord Krishna. One must never be conceited about his knowledge, wealth, birth or virtues. He must control his senses and sensual organs and forsake all vices. He should treat the whole world as temporary and perishable. He should reside where many other devotees reside and observe all Vratt such as Ekadashi and visit the temple regularly with them or on his own. A devotee must consider Lord Krishna as beyond the influence of the three traits of Maya. He should learn from and imitate the Bhakti of past devotees such as Shukdevji, Narad, Ambarish, Udhhav etc. and contemporary devotees such as Muktanand and Gopalanand swami. O Bhalchandra! An Atmanivedi devotee must not associate with the following persons; a female, a man engrossed in the female, an irreligious, a pretentious, an egoist, a scholar who misinterprets the meaning of the scriptures, one who observes imaginary Dharma which is not scripted in the scriptures, an immoral, an angry, a greedy, a charlatan, one observing Dharma pertaining to other Varna and Ashram and one who has an enmity with Bhagwan. Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotee! What is the point of having virtues such as austerity or knowledge without the devotion towards Lord Krishna? Bhakti is the pivotal quality to acquire and nothing more remains to be gained after acquiring Bhakti. Whatever Japa, Vrat, austerity etc. one does to please Lord Krishna do enhance the devotion in Him, but only if this is done without any other expectations or anticipations. Otherwise, they become inconsequential. One gets the human life, which even the Devtas yearn for, only after wandering through eight million four hundred thousand life forms. To develop detachment towards the mundane worldly pleasures and develop profound love in Bhagwan is the true reward of the intelligence of a wise man. A devotee's eyes wells up with joy when singing or listening to God's glory and His Leelas, his mind sways in unison with God, his hairs stand up on ends and his voice trembles with emotions. Whoever reposes full faith and devotion in the human form of Lord Krishna and considers His birth, traits, virtues and Leelas divine has all his desires fulfilled with His blessings, while one who doubts or finds faults in Him are engulfed with various vices. The vices such as lust, greed and anger get hold of and vanquish such disparager just as a tiger gets hold of and kills him. Even the Sanyaas, (total detachment) without the accompaniment of sincere and exclusive Bhakti does not please Bhagwan or help a man attain salvation. Being born as a Brahmin, performing many Yagnas and austerities, donating vast amounts of wealth to the needy, observing Vrats and ethics, undertaking many philanthropist activities like digging wells or studying many scriptures on their own are not enough to please Lord Krishna. Only the unflinching devotion towards Bhagwan pleases Him. Low value items such as fruit, flower, water etc. if offered with unwavering devotion please Bhagwan more than offering Him vast amount of wealth and gold without dedication. O Bhalchandra! A man can never attain salvation without Bhakti even after hundreds of births. Blessed is the person who has developed the devotion and faith in Lord Krishna! A person who has not succumbed to the lure of a woman, the dark crevice of anger, the cesspool of the mundane attachment and has a deep devotion towards Lord Krishna is very dear to Bhagwan. Even the best of the scholars get corrupted by and entangled in these eight; son, wife, vanity, relatives, lust, lucre, intoxicating substances and the game of Holi (throwing colour on others). Only a devotee whose mind and heart is united exclusively with Lord Krishna's divine feet remains immune against their corrupting influences. Even the Devtas revere such a staunch devotee. A man desirous of the salvation must seek such an esteemed devotee and establish him as his guru. He should befriend, revere and venerate such a devout guru and abide by his decrees. Any man who establishes such a bond with an irreverent person is like an animal. The only difference is that he has two legs while the real animal has four legs.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Bhalchandra Seth and other devotees present in the assembly were very pleased to hear such a divine sermon. They knew that Narayanmuni seated in front of them was none other than Lord Krishna Himself. Their devotion towards Him grew many folds upon hearing the sermon on Bhakti. The devotees, realising the greatness of the saints, venerated Muktanand and other saints again with rice, Kumkum, flowers, garlands, sandalwood paste etc. They prostrated at their feet in reverence. O king! Shree Hari also was pleased to see the devotion and faith of the devotees of Surat in Him and His saints. He stayed in Surat for seven days and pleased devotees with His soothing sermons and answering their probing questions daily. He re-established Sanatan Dharma with His doctrine."

Thus ends the fifty eighth Chapter of the second Prakaran of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! There is a small town named Dharmapur near Surat where a young widow queen named Kushalkunverbai ruled the state as a regent since her son heir to the throne was very young. She had heard of the manifestation of Bhagwan as Lord Swaminarayan from one of His saints and since then she had become His disciple and was eagerly waiting for His Darshan. Though engaged in the statecraft, she was detached from its influence and meditated regularly upon Shree Hari. She had become frail due to repeatedly observing harsh Vrats such as Chaandrayan. Desirous of Shree Hari's Darshan, she had sent emissaries to invite Him to Dharmapur several times; however on each occasion Shree Hari solaced her with the promise to visit Dharmapur in near future. Whilst in Surat, Shree Hari wished to travel to Dharmapur to fulfil her life long ambition of His Darshan. He took saints and Parshads with Him. When Kushalkunverbai heard of the imminent arrival of Shree Hari, she prepared the royal welcome for Him. An elegant elephant with a royal howdah was adorned with sequined cloth to bring Shree Hari in Dharmapur. She asked her ministers and other courtiers to proceed towards the outskirt of the town to welcome Shree Hari and she, following the royal etiquette, followed them in a palanquin. O king! The whole entourage with military band waited eagerly for Shree Hari to appear on horizon."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! As soon as Shree Hari came near, Kushalkunverbai dismounted the palanquin and did Panchang Pranam from a distance. The minsters, courtiers and other devotees bowed reverentially at His feet. Shree Hari greeted the queen and others befitting their status. The queen requested Shree Hari to sit on the elephant. The air was filled with the joyous chanting of His name and various musical instruments and the whole procession entered the town with full regal pomp. The scented water was sprinkled on the procession as it passed through several gates and decorated arches. O king! Shree Hari glanced benevolently at the villagers lining the streets for His divine Darshan. A part of the royal palace was set aside exclusively for Shree Hari, saints and devotees. The queen engaged herself in the service of Shree Hari as if a lowly servant. On the third day of Shree Hari's arrival in Dharmapur, on Purnima of Vaishakh of Samvat 1866, Queen Kushalkunverbai grandly venerated Shree Hari with scented sandalwood paste, Kumkum, rice, flower garlands etc. and gifted Him many valuable and gold entwined cloths, pearl necklaces, golden ornaments and many gems. The wealth she laid at His feet surprised even her courtiers. Indeed, she wanted to gift her whole kingdom including its treasury and palace to Shree Hari but He declined to accept and insisted that she rule the state as previously with the same detachment. Shree Hari was however very pleased at such a magnanimous gesture. She still gifted Him a lot of wealth in the form of innumerable gold and silver coins. Keeping with His normal practice, Shree Hari did not keep anything for Himself. Instead He distributed the entire wealth amongst the Brahmins, servants, prisoners and poor. A large assembly was held the same day in the royal court. Lord Swaminarayan sat on a high and decorated throne and devotees took their appropriate seats in front of Him. The saints and Parshads sat beside and either side of Him. Everybody was eagerly waiting for Shree Hari to deliver His divine sermon. The queen Kushalkunverbai, both hands folded and head bowed, spoke to Shree Hari in subdued tone."

Kushalkunverbai said, 'O Lord Narayan! You do not grant Your Darshan to the Devtas that as easily, although they yearn for it for long while yet You fulfilled My desire of Your divine Darshan easily and in a very short time. This is due to nothing but Your mercy. You take the divine human form (manifest Yourself on earth) for the benevolence of the mankind. The eyes of a person, no matter how beautiful, who has not had Your Darshan, are futile, just like the eyes formed on a feather of a peacock. Listening to Your Katha washes away sins accumulated over many past lives and enhances Bhakti in a man. The ears of a person who does not listen to Your Katha are like a bill of a snake. They are not only useless but positively harmful as they are engaged in the gossip. O Lord! Narrating Your Katha helps one cross the torturous ocean like world. A person's tongue, used only for idle talk and not to sing Your Katha is useless like a tongue of a frog. Any speech emanating from such a tongue causes nothing but a headache. The service rendered to You or Your saints washes away one's sin. The hands that are not useful in serving You or Your saints are akin to the hands of a corpse, and there is no point in adorning such hands with rings bracelets etc. The feet that do not venture for Your or Your saints Darshan or towards a temple are just as useless as the trees in the cemetery under which nobody rests. A life of a person, who does not render any service to You or Your saints, is not worth living. O Bhagwan! I am lucky that my life, body and wealth became useful in Your service and now my life just became fulfilled with Your blessings. O Shree Hari! You are the master of the universe. You have independently taken the human form to protect Dharma and vanquish Adharma. You behold and promulgate Sanatan Dharma. Therefore, O Bhagwan! I wish to hear the principles of Sanatan Dharma from You. Please narrate in detail the common and specific Dharma as You propound.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari was very pleased with the queen's humility and said to Kushalkunverbai, 'You have asked for what is beneficial to one and all. Sage Narad had narrated the Dharma to the King Yudhishthir in the Shreemad Bhagwat. I will reiterate the same to you.' O king! Saying this, Lord Swaminarayan reiterated the entire narration from the seventh canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat to the queen and every one present in the assembly and said at the conclusion, 'O wise queen! I have just narrated the characteristics of Dharma, Vairagya and Bhakti. Each and every person must sincerely observe Dharma as per one's Varna and Ashram.' O king! Kushalkunverbai and the other devotees pledged to observe Dharma faithfully. Shree Hari sought the queen's permission to leave Dharmapur after five days. She asked Shree Hari to extend His stay in Dharmapur at which He relented and extended His stay in Dharmapur by one month. Shree Hari celebrated a festival of having a ritual bath in which the water from a conch is poured on the idol of Lord Krishna at Dharmapur on Purnima of the month of Jeth of Samvat 1866. Shree Hari pleased all devotees by His sermons during His stay in Dharmapur. Reminiscing the promise He made to Abhay Khachar prior to leaving Gadhpur, Shree Hari decided to return to Gadhpur. The queen and other devotees went with Shree Hari to bid Him farewell with the heavy hearts. He sent them back after travelling some distance. Shree Hari arrived at Devkitirth on His way to Gadhpur. Knowing it as a holy Shrine, Shree Narayanmuni performed all rituals such as bath, Darshan of residing deity etc. that should be performed at a shrine. He asked saints to visit far lying villages to spread His gospel and sent other accompanying devotees to their respective villages. He kept His personal attendant, Mukundanand Brahamchari, a few senior saints such as Muktanand swami and armed Parshads such as Ratanji, Sura Khachar etc. with Him. They travelled northwards crossing the rivers Tapi, Narmada, Mahi and Sabarmati to arrive in the vicinity of Gadhpur. Shree Hari was pleased His innumerable disciples of the villages and towns en route by granting them His divine Darshan."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Abhay Khachar dropped everything and rushed forward with other devotees to the outskirt of Gadhpur as soon as he heard the news the arrival of Shree Hari near Gadhpur. Their eyes welled with the tears of joy at seeing Him after a long time. They prostrated at Shree Hari's feet. He greeted all devotees with sweet talk and accompanied them to the royal courtyard of Gadhpur. Jaya, Lalita, Rama etc. female devotees did Panchang Pranam once He arrived in His personal quarters. O king! Shree Hari demarcated His various services like fetching water, washing His clothes and utensils etc. to various devotees according to their abilities and interests. Thus every devotee of Gadhpur was engaged in Shree Hari's and the saints' services. They considered themselves fortunate to be given an opportunity to serve Shree Hari and to make their lives meaningful. Shree Hari arrived at Gadhpur on the morning of the second bright day of the month of Ashadh of Samvat 1867. That was the day after the start of the New Year and the festival of Rath Yatra was celebrated on that day. Lord Shree Krishna was seated on a chariot and toured the town before He organised a grand veneration and Aarti. O king! Though Shree Hari stayed in Gadhpur, He was not inactive. He regularly sent saints to various villages to find out the covert religious malpractices and its practitioner gurus before venturing Himself in those villages to remove the ascent of Adharma and establish Dharma. He defended and propagated Dharma at all time and everywhere. He also visited many other villages to grant His devotees His Darshan and celebrate various festivals at their request. He returned to Gadhpur after each such short tour of outlying villages as promised to Abhay Khachar."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! I narrated Swaminarayan Bhagwan's various Leelas in answer to your question. These Leelas have the potency to cleanse all sins. Whoever narrates or listens to these Leelas with total faith will attain eternal bliss. All their external (from foes) and internal (greed, lust, anger etc.) problems will subside and their wishes will be fulfilled." In this way while establishing Dharma, Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan was residing in Durgpur. Shree Hari used to grace the villages and cities where the devotees where residing and utsavs were celebrated there. Shree Hari used to visit Gadhpur time and again and reside there.

CHAPTER-1

With reference to Shree Hari's first arrival at Gadhpur on Maha Sud Ekadashi of Samvat 1861, Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Eight years had passed since Shree Hari arrived at Gadhpur. He graced many villages to grant His divine Darshan during this time. King Abhay Khachar's soul, fully satisfied by the services rendered to Shree Hari, left his mortal body to go to His supreme abode. On Kartik Vad Panchami (of Samvat 1870) his son, Uttam fed stupendous meals to Shree Hari, saints and Brahmins on his father's Shraddh. Though Uttam Khachar was the king, he attended the affairs of the state only as a regent of Shree Hari and he humbly served Him as if a lowly servant. He was a step ahead of his father in his humility, willingness to serve saints, Bhakti, intelligence, detachment and other virtues. His fame and wealth increased much more than other kings because of Shree Hari's blessings. O king! Uttam had four sisters; Jaya, Lalita, Nanu and Panchali, two mothers (one a step mother); Suprabha and Somadevi and two wives; Kumuda and Jasudevi. Though the whole family had many servants at their disposal, each of them served Shree Hari and His saints themselves as if they were servants and maids. They would perform menial chores such as bringing water from River Unmattganga, washing utensils and cloths, cleaning the floor etc. themselves.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari was very pleased with the family's faith, servility, Bhakti, honesty, faithfulness, generosity and virtuous lifestyle. So much so that He gave each of them a metallic Murti of RadhaKrishna Dev for personal worship. Though they accepted Murtis willingly and worshipped it everyday with full faith as if the Murti is another form of Lord Shree Hari, their fundamental focus of attention remained Shree Hari. They felt they lacked something. Shree Hari noticed this slight disinterest and realised that the whole family is more interested in the worship of the present rather than the earlier form of their Ishtadev. He handed each member a new Murti of His present Varni form, 'HariKrishna' for their personal worship. Uttam, Jaya, Lalita etc. family members started venerating the Murti of Lord HariKrishna with greater fervour, but without neglecting the Murti of RadhaKrishna Dev. Though the direct service of Shree Hari gave them more pleasure, they worshipped both Murtis at His insistence. The same artefacts and same Naivedhya was offered to both Murtis with the same love and reverence. Though the whole family worshipped Shree Hari with equal reverence, He was pleased more with Lalita. Just as Radha was able to please Lord Krishna more than other Gopis due to her sincerity, Lalita edged ahead of the other family members due to her honesty. She had prepared food and sent it for Shree Hari as usual. As Lord Narayanmuni sat for His lunch, He asked Lalita to ask for a boon. Lalita said, 'O Bhagwan! As You have taken the vow of Brahamcharya, the decorum stopped me from talking to You, therefore, I had kept my wish buried in my heart. I will tell You today as You have asked me personally.' Shree Hari knew everything that was in her heart and stopped her saying anything further and said, 'I am glad that you have observed the limitation of Dharma. I know what is in your heart. I will fulfil your desire through My Murti so as not to transgress from the limitation of Ashram Dharma.' O king! Lalita was extremely pleased with such a boon. To Lalita's pleasure and surprise, Lord Swaminarayan personally would appear from the Murtis and accept all artefacts and Naivedhya she offered during her worship."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Many such blissful days passed. The news that Shree Hari personally accepts artefacts and Naivedhya from Lalita during her venerations spread widely. Jaya and the other female members of the family congregated around Lalita during her worship to witness the miracle. To their surprise, they saw the dish that Lalita offered to the Murtis of RadhaKrishna Dev and HariKrishna being half emptied. However, only Lalita saw Narayanmuni in person actually eating from the dish. They praised Lalita's staunch devotion and returned to their respective quarters. Jaya and others did not feel belittled or envious towards Lalita. Envy is the trait of ignorant. O king! These souls were enlightened due to Bhagwan's Bhakti. They surely were pained as they realised that their Bhakti lacked something when compared to Lalita's. They tried harder to clear their minds of worldly vices and please Shree Hari to achieve what Lalita had accomplished. They were successful in their effort after some time. Shree Hari often appeared in person to accept their Naivedhya during their venerations too. O king! Thus, the devotion of Uttam Khachar, his sisters and mothers attained a divine status due to their unflinching dedication. This strong bond between Shree Hari and His devotees of Gadhpur became so strong that Shree Hari was unable to go anywhere and leave them behind."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Many devotees from various villages pleaded with Shree Hari to grace their respective villages. Just as Lord Krishna remained in Gokul for a long time to please Nand - Yashoda and others, Lord Swaminarayan stayed in Gadhpur for the pleasure of Uttam, Jaya, Lalita and others. Uttam Khachar's love for Sahajanand Swami increased with the passage of time. His servile hospitality was so intense that Shree Hari considered Gadhpur as His home. Just as an honest devotee loves Bhagwan intensely, Shree Hari loves such devotee with the same intensity. O king! Lord Shree Hari considers it priceless when even the smallest thing is offered to Him with faith and devotion. "

King Pratapsinh asked Suvrat Muni, "O Muni! I do not feel content at hearing Shree Hari's pleasantly divine Leelas. I want to hear more and more. You mentioned that Uttam and his family served Shree Hari menially. Please tell me who performed what services to please Shree Hari. Also tell me more Leelas of Shree Hari at Gadhpur."

Suvrat Muni replied, "O king! Mukundanand Brahamchari, who led a very chaste life, was His personal attendant. He looked after most of His personal needs besides three exclusive tasks; bath Him, massage His feet and make His bed. Mukundanand was His constant companion. Jaya brought clean water from Unmattganga every morning and evening. Narayananand Brahamchari looked after the pot of drinking water and gave it to Shree Hari whenever He was thirsty. Gopalanand Brahamchari cleaned the utensils required for veneration and kept them ready before venerations. Vaasudevanand Brahamchari prepared the sandalwood paste daily. Umabhai and Nathji picked fresh flowers and Tulsi leaves needed for the veneration. Akhandanand Brahamchari waited on Shree Hari during the veneration and handed Him each item as needed. Lalita cleaned and prepared all food items such as wheat, rice, flour, oil, Ghee, vegetables etc. and sent it to Shree Hari's kitchen daily. Panchali kept His personal kitchen clean while Nanu cleaned Shree Hari's personal quarters daily. Surprabha and Somadevi also helped maintain sanctity of His personal residence. Dayanand and Govindanand Brahamchari brought woods and holy grass needed in Homa. Uka Khachar and Harji picked fresh vegetables and banana leaves from the farm. Miyanji brought dry firewood for the stove from surrounding areas. Ratanji washed cooking utensils with ash and clay. Hamirji brought fresh clay needed to wash Shree Hari's hands. Gumanji brought a fresh twig of Babul tree for brushing His teeth, while Shivram Vipra of Shiyani guarded His footwear. Jayanand Brahamchari washed and dried Shree Hari's robes while Mayaram Vipra of Manavadar looked after washed cloths and offered them to Shree Hari as and when needed. Uttam Khachar's two devout ministers, Ladha Thakker and Harji Thakker kept accounts of all the gifts received by Him and distributed them amongst the Brahmins and poor according to His instructions."

"O king! Hemantsinh, also known as Zinabhai, of Panchala made sure that all devotees behaved within the boundaries of the Sampraday. Leaving aside his ego as the king of Gadhpur, Uttam Khachar did whatever Shree Hari asked him without delegating it to anyone. One of the senior saint, Ramdas, supervised all persons engaged in His service and made sure everything ran smoothly. Pragji Dave narrated the Katha from Puranas, the Mahabharat and Dharmashastra during the day while Nityanand swami narrated the Katha from the Shreemad Bhagwat or Vaasudev Mahatmya in the evening. scriptures. My guru, the wise Shatanand swami did research on the various scriptures and compiled the Satsangi Jeevan to please Lord Shree Hari. Sagacious Gopalanand swami made sure that the other saints, Brahamcharis and Parshads acted within the limits of their Dharma and advised any wavering person. He propounded Shree Hari's true and glorious form to all devotees besides carrying out specific tasks on His instructions. Brahmanand and Muktanand swami, who were proficient in the art of poetry and music, composed many Kirtans extolling Shree Hari's glory and Leelas which pleased Him greatly. Another expert wordsmith and musician saint, Premanand swami also composed many Kirtans and sang them in the assemblies to please Lord Shree Hari. Dayanand swami also composed Kirtans, Nishkulanand swami, besides composing many Kirtans, wrote many scriptures outlining Shree Hari's virtues and Leelas. Sunderji Suthar occasionally composed couplets for His pleasure."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Scholar Dinanath Bhatt composed many Stotras extolling His greatness and prayers to please Shree Hari. The five saints, Govindanand, Abhedanand, Gunatitanand, Shivanand and Pragnanand, sang the Kirtans composed by Muktanand swami and others to please Lord Swaminarayan. The three saints, Mahanubhavanand, Atmanand and Swayamprakashanand looked after the hospitality of devotees visiting Gadhpur for His Darshan. Niranjanand, Vyapkanand, Sukhanand, Paramchaitanyanand, Govindanand, Krupanand and Chaitanyanand swami held small assemblies for the visiting devotees to enhance their knowledge, Dharma and devotion at Shree Hari's behest. Anandanand swami supervised the construction of various temples. Devram, Narayan and Sunderji, all of Bhuj and expert sculptor and artistes along, with Aadharanand swami crafted many metallic Murtis of Shree Hari's various manifestations and His sketched Murti to be distributed among devotees. Maheshwar Vipra of Vadthal and Damodar of Amdavad looked after the hospitality of female devotees who thronged to Gadhpur while Ramadevi held assemblies for them and provided guidance to enhance their Bhakti. Rajdas and Krishnadas held burning torchlights on either sides of Shree Hari at night. Karim of Sardhar acted as a doorkeeper and took messages from arriving devotees to Shree Hari and relayed His messages back to the devotees. Two hundred Kshatriya devotees, led by Soma Khachar, Sura Khachar, Alaiya Khachar, Bhaguji, Mansinh, Virji, Kesari, Lakho, Jalam, Ravji, Maanji, Kamo, Bhimji etc. formed an armed platoon of His bodyguards and always formed a ring of steel around Him on His tours."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! All these devotees served Shree Hari wholeheartedly with the sole purpose of pleasing Him. They had no other expectation from their life and as a result, they considered their life fulfilled. O king! CHAPTER-3

Suvrat Muni said, O king! The erudite King Uttam Khachar fed thousands of Brahmins on occasions of each monthly Shraddhs. He wished to resurrect his late father's practice of celebrating various festivals a year after his demise. He went to seek his sisters' concurrence on this matter as per the proper modicum. He politely put his point to his sisters, 'O wise sisters! I have come to you for the guidance as you are equally expert in divine Bhakti and worldly affairs. As you are well aware, our affluence is only due to the continuous stay of Lord Shree Hari in Gadhpur. Therefore, we should spend our wealth only in His service and pleasure. The wealth spent for any other purpose seems a waste to me. Our late father spent lavishly for the celebration of many festivals just to please Him and I wish to continue his tradition of celebrating festivals like Janmashtami and others. O sisters! I need your help to accomplish my desire. I have put my entire wealth and servants at your disposal and I am delegating all responsibilities to you. Just let me know whatever is needed and I will make sure that it is delivered to you. I want you to take the responsibility of preparing the food for all the attendee devotees and welcoming and accommodating visiting female devotees."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Jaya and Lalita were extremely happy to hear their brother's proposal. They became excited at getting an extra opportunity to serve and please Lord Swaminarayan. They replied, 'O brother! You have thought well. It is a son's duty to continue his late father's moral traditions. Do not worry about the kitchen. We will handle all responsibilities. You just supply the necessary items such as grains, oil, vegetables etc. You must always bear in mind your financial capabilities while celebrating festivals to please Shree Hari and spend accordingly.' O king! Uttam Khachar was very pleased with the positive response of his sisters. He approached Shree Hari and humbly sought His concurrence. Pleased with Uttam Khachar, Shree Hari replied, 'You have thought well. I am pleased that you have delegated all responsibilities to your two sisters, Jaya and Lalita, as they are astute in such matters. However, any task must not have multiple leaders. Each festival must have a single authority as two heads will surely cause friction due to varying opinions. This friction results in the failure of any given task. Therefore, we must appoint one of them to lead each festival.' O king! He sent for both sisters and addressed them, 'Listen to Me carefully and abide by it. Jaya will take the sole responsibility of all festivals falling in the bright fortnight while Lalita will be sole head for all festival falling in the dark fortnight. Both of you must make all arrangements for each festival coming under your jurisdiction, then you will surely succeed in your undertakings."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Jaya and Lalita accepted Shree Hari's command happily and without any murmur before returning to their quarters. Uttam Khachar celebrated each Ekadashi grandly and served stupendous meals to all saints present in Gadhpur the next day. Under Shree Hari's guidance and Lalita's supervision, Uttam Khachar celebrated the festival of Janmashtami (in Samvat 1872) with so much pomp and grandeur that it became the envy of all other kings. The visiting devotees were very impressed and praised Lalita's impeccable arrangements. Lalita did not get carried away with such praise and understood completely that all this was possible only due to Shree Hari's blessings. Her devotion towards Him and urge to please him became even stronger."

Thus ends the 3rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! I will narrate a festival of Annkoot amongst many other festivals Shree Hari celebrated in Gadhpur. You may imagine how other festivals were celebrated from this one example. However, let me describe the celebration of the festival of Dussera before narrating the Annkoot festival. As the festival falls in the Sud (bright) fortnight, Uttam Khachar’s elder sister took charge of the arrangements of preparing the food for all and looking after visiting female devotees. Many senior saints and Brahamcharis with their disciples and thousands of male and female householder devotees converged in Gadhpur to participate in the festival and for Shree Hari’s Darshan. All devotees venerated Shree Hari with sandalwood paste, rice and flower garlands and householder devotees gifted Him with many valuable robes, money and ornaments. Uttam Khachar fed stupendous meals to all saints and devotees and generally looked after them well. The saints and devotees stayed in Gadhpur for seven days during which Shree Hari satisfied them with His divine sermons and Darshan. He asked them to return to their respective villages. The returning devotees praised Uttam Khachar’s generosity, temperament and devotion towards Shree Hari. As the festival of Annkoot was not very far away, Uttam Khachar asked a few Brahmins to remain behind to help in the cooking. He accommodated them in his royal residence until then. These Brahmin devotees felt their lives were fulfilled by getting an opportunity to serve Shree Hari, saints and devotees. Shree Hari, some senior saints and Parshads remained behind in Gadhpur.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! A few days later, Lalita approached her elder sister Jaya, who greeted her warmly. Lalita said smilingly to Jaya, ‘O sister! You celebrated the festival of Dussera very lavishly. With your permission, I too would like to celebrate the forthcoming festival of Annkoot on a similar scale. Jaya replied, ‘O dear! You also pleased Shree Hari by organising the celebration of Janmashtami. You will get another chance to do the same for the Diwali celebrations. As the Annkoot festival falls in the bright fortnight, I will lead the celebration as decreed by Shree Hari.’ Lalita argued further, ‘Sister! You are right to an extent. Yes, we must abide by His decree, however, you must realise that Diwali and Annkoot are considered a single festival. It is not right to separate them. Sage Narad avers in the Vratt Khand that the three day festival of Dipavali should be celebrated as a single festival. Therefore, it is a grave error to celebrate the Diwali and Annkoot festivals separately. This is my advice. The final decision is yours and I will abide by your decision. If you insist and wish to celebrate the Annkoot festival yourself, you must approach and seek Shree Hari's permission forthwith and start the preparations.' Jaya was taken in by astute Lalita's smooth talk and handed the responsibility of the Annkoot festival to Lalita. They called their brother, Uttam Khachar and asked him to seek the permission from Shree Hari to start the preparations for the Annkoot festival. O king! Uttam Khachar went to the assembly where Shree Hari was presiding. He went closer to Shree Hari while his two sisters stood at a distance to maintain the modicum of the assembly. Realising that Uttam had come for some advice, Shree Hari asked him to speak. Uttam Khachar said, 'O Bhagwan! I have come with a request. We would like to celebrate the forthcoming Annkoot festival. Please grant us the permission to make preparation for it.' Shree Hari wanted to proffer some advice to all devotees on pretext of advising Uttam Khachar."

Shree Hari said within the earshot of both sisters, 'O king! You have just spent a lot of money in celebrating Janmashtami, Dussera and all Dwadashi. Furthermore, the festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi is not very far off. I am aware of how much wealth you have. Celebrating festivals need a lot of money. The theosophical discourse can never be the substitute of money on such occasions. There are some instances where the flow of money is a must. One must not raise money by borrowing from others. One cannot escape from the burden of debt and the pestering from the lender. The devotion or knowledge is not able to relieve one from such troubles. You cannot escape your lender by pointing out that the money is the cause of all evils and the knowledge of Aatma and Parmatma and His devotion is the true wealth. The lender will never write off your debt, not even if you happen to be a scholar or a devotee. One must never borrow as the burden of the debt is most difficult to bear for a householder. You must never borrow even if you are so poor that you can only afford to eat vegetables once in a blue moon. What can be said of an ordinary man when even the kings are not able to carry the burden of debt on their strong shoulders? Do not seek solace in the argument that one needs money to please God. Bhagwan is not hungry for your wealth. He is hungry only for your love. As Lord Krishna says to Arjun in the Bhagvad Gita, 'O Arjun! I am easily satisfied with the fruit, flower, leaf or even water, provided it is offered with utmost love and sincerity.' On the other hand, He is never happy even with a vast amount of wealth offered without love and sincerity. Therefore, instead of amassing great wealth to please Bhagwan, you must endeavour to please Him with resolute devotion. Bhagwan is more pleased with a poor but devout person rather than a wealthy but apathetic person. He is even more pleased with a devotee, whether rich or poor, who has focused his mind in Him by withdrawing his senses from any mundane pleasures.'

Shree Hari continued, 'Indra and other Devtas venerate Lord Shree Hari with the vast wealth and opulence at their disposal. However, as they are always engaged in heavenly pleasures, they are not counted among His chaste devotees. On the other hand Sages Sanak and his brothers venerate Lord Shree Hari with only flowers but with a focused mind. As a result, they are considered His staunch devotees despite the lack of money. Lord Krishna is happier with Sanak than the Devtas. O King Uttam! My devotees must celebrate festivals or serve Me with whatever wealth they have without taking the recourse of borrowing. Therefore, you must celebrate the Annkoot festival within your financial means. Lord Krishna has started the practice of celebrating the Annkoot festival, so we must continue to celebrate, albeit with whatever means we have at our disposal.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Uttam Khachar agreed to abide by Lord Shree Hari's decree and went ahead with the preparation of the festival. Though they heard what Lord Shree Hari had just said, he, nonetheless, reiterated the same to his sisters."

Thus ends the 4th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Though Uttam Khachar relayed Shree Hari's opinion to his sisters Jaya and Lalita, they were already aware of it. Due to the fulfilment of their heartfelt desire to celebrate the Annkoot festival, their eyes welled up with tears of joy. They bowed at Shree Hari from a distance and returned to their quarters to prepare for the festival. They procured rice and wheat from the farmers and distributed it to each household of Gadhpur to remove chaff by pounding and make flour by grinding. The early morning air ranted with Kirtans as each female devotee of the village sang while pounding and grinding. O king! It was celebration time for the whole of Gadhpur as every household was busy preparing for the festival in some way! Many Brahmin female devotees, expert in cooking, were invited to work under the direct supervision of Lalita. They were engaged in making spiced food items such as Vada (small round balls), Papads, vermicelli etc. from Moong and Urad flour. Though outwardly they were preparing the food items, their minds were totally engrossed in Shree Hari, so much so that some of them saw Lord Shree Hari's benignly smiling face in the middle of the Papad. They would just freeze with the rolling pin held high in their hands unable to do anything for a while. Some of the female devotees completed their regular quota of Japa by reciting His name as they arranged the rows of Vada to dry. Some were astonished to see His smiling face while rolling vermicelli. They imagined them massaging Shree Hari with oil while smearing oil on the dough. Indeed they saw Shree Hari everywhere and in everything. While straining the flour, some women would giggle aloud reminiscing some moments of His life. Some would see Shree Hari in the vessel in which they were pounding the cereals. O king! These chaste devotees had Shree Hari's Darshan according to their perception of Him in their mind which was on par with the best of Yogis. Their only aim was to please Narayanmuni in whichever way they could. This was the best means at their disposal to please and serve Him. Uttam Khachar arranged for the uninterrupted supply of sacks of cereals and sugar and pots of Ghee and oil as requested by his sister, Lalita."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Uttam Khachar's servants brought in large pots, pans, spoons, strainers, funnels etc. utensils as required in the kitchen. His two wives also joined in the various chores such as picking and preparing spices such as chillies, ginger, mustard seeds, cinnamon, cloves, cumin, turmeric, pepper etc. and making buttermilk for other people working in the kitchen. Tough many women had become frail due to observing various Vratts and austerities; they brought pots of fresh water of Unmattganga on their heads. They worked tirelessly, day and night, so hard even Brahma was embarrassed at calling them the 'weaker sex'. Uttam Khachar invited expert male Brahmin cooks and set up a separate kitchen for them in his court. Manji, Krushnaji, Ambaram, Ramji, Harji and other expert cooks worked under the supervision of Prabhashankar of Piplana. Hira, Ratnavali, Rama, Ganga, Rajni, Nathi, Vijya, Kallu and other female cooks worked under the expert guidance of Gangaba of Jetalpur in the other kitchen. All of them undertook various tasks willingly as directed by their respective leaders. O king! Lord Swaminarayan sent several messengers to various places to invite saints travelling to and from various places to spread His message. The messengers relayed Shree Hari's message asking saints to come to Gadhpur on DhanTeras (two days prior to Diwali)."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The saints, very eager for Shree Hari's Darshan, left for Gadhpur from wherever they were at that time. They did not even bother to stop to collect their books or blankets in their haste. They just stopped whatever they were doing and started on the way to Gadhpur. They would seek alms during their travels and eat whatever was offered to them. When devotees heard the news of the forthcoming Annkoot festival from the travelling saints, they joined the saints on their way to Gadhpur. Ordinary people were surprised to see the large number of saints and devotees travelling towards Gadhpur. They wondered if all these people had arrived from abroad, as they had probably never seen so many people travelling towards the same direction. All the roads leading to Gadhpur were teeming with saints in ochre robes and devotees. Disregarding their exhaustion, they walked at a faster pace as they got near to Gadhpur. Their fatigue disappeared in expectation of Shree Hari's imminent divine Darshan. The imagination of Shree Hari, astride His mare Manaki, travelling slightly ahead of them made the saints forget their tiredness. Many devotees of far off villages, who could probably travel to Gadhpur only once a year, joined saints on their way. The saints, with the group of their disciples reached the outlying villages on Aso Vad Baras. They made their night halts at these villages. These outlying villages were teeming with newly arrived saints and devotees. Though they were very eager for His Darshan, they did not travel to Gadhpur as He had instructed them to arrive in Gadhpur the next day. They reined their urge for Darshan so as not to displease Shree Hari by disregarding His decree. The accompanying devotees also remained with saints. O king! They could not sleep the whole night in the excitement. They sang Kirtans the whole night with their gaze fixed towards Gadhpur. Their hearts were oscillating with joy of Shree Hari's expectant Darshan the next day.

Thus ends the 5th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Lord Narayan, Who had independently taken the human form of ascetic Narayanmuni, praised the effort of devotees engaged in the cooking. He asked them to prepare more food than was planned. The four; Khatvang Khachar, Umabhai, Nachiket and Mayaram Bhatt, reported the activity and progress of the kitchens to Shree Hari and relayed his messages back to the supervisors of the kitchens. Shree Hari was pleasantly surprised to know the devotees' hard work in the kitchens. Khatvang Khachar's mind and intellect had become lucid and pious and His faith in Shree Hari never wavered due to his constant proximity of Shree Hari. He repeated Shree Hari's instructions loudly to the devotees of both kitchens and made sure that those instructions were fully followed. Umabhai and Nachiket were humble, patient and honest. Their sole aim in life was to please Lord Vaasudev incarnate, Shree Hari. They relayed Shree Hari's instructions to the kitchen staff in His exact words. They continuously moved between the two kitchens and Shree Hari, to pass on the progress of kitchens to Him and His instructions to the kitchens. Mayaram Bhatt, due to his old age, walked with the stoop and uttering blessings at all times. His peculiar gait brought a smile to Shree Hari's face. He too, remained within Shree Hari's shouting distance at all times and relayed His messages to the kitchens as needed."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari, along with some Parshads came to the kitchens on the night of Baras to personally inspect the preparations. His serene face looked radiant with the light from the burning torch, held up by Krishnadas barber. He walked briskly holding a small stick in His right hand and resting His left hand on His waist. The flower garland around His neck and flower strings dangling from His diadem swayed with each of His steps. He was wearing bright white robes as normal. His footwear made a loud noise with each step. The Parshads accompanying Him found it difficult to keep pace with His brisk pace. The radiance, emanating from Shree Hari entered the kitchen before Him. Everyone stood up and paid attention at His unexpected arrival. Prabhashankar, his brother Daji, other Daji, Dayaram, Bechar, Ramchandra, Lalji, Nandu, Nandlal, Gangadutt, Narottam, Laxmidutt, Dayaram, Krupashankar, Ishwar, Kashiram, Tuljaram, Shivram, Devram, Jivram, Pitambar, Ambaram, Anupam, Revashankar, Narayanji, Valadhruv Vaso, Vijayram, Ambaram etc. Brahmin devotees were taken back by Shree Hari's sudden arrival. They stood with folded hands to welcome Him. Upon seeing the large pans empty Shree Hari asked, ' What are you doing? Why are these pans empty?' They replied, 'O Hari! We have sent the prepared Laadus for storage. These pans have just been taken off the stoves.' Shree Hari was surprised at their pace of working and praised them for their abilities. He added, 'O Brahmins! Hundreds of saints will reach Gadhpur tomorrow morning. Start preparing the rice, lentils and vegetables for them."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari proceeded towards the other kitchen for inspection. Shree Hari, asking His Parshads to wait at the entrance, entered the kitchen being run by female devotees alone. One of them offered Shree Hari a golden stool to sit on. All of them came forward and stood in front of Him with bowed heads and folded hands. Prominent among them were; Ganga, Reva, Yamuna, Yatini, Laheri,

We have just finished two types of sweet dishes. We will now prepare food for the saints who will arrive tomorrow. A separate kitchen has been established in our house to cook for many Kshatriya devotees expected tomorrow. Jaya, Rama, Panchali, Nani, Fuljaya, Amari, Amala, Kshema, Yami, Devi, Aju, Aditi, Revati, Shanta, Mena, Mallika, Janhvi and many other female Kshatriya devotees are working in that kitchen.' O king! Shree Hari was pleasantly surprised to note that more women than men were working in the kitchens and praised their efforts. He did not offer any advice or instruction as they were already planning what He had in His mind."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! He returned to His quarters and called Nishkulanand swami, Uttam Khachar, Ladha Thakker and Harji Thakker and said, 'Hundreds of saints and thousands of devotees will arrive in Gadhpur tomorrow morning. You will need to make suitable and separate accommodation available for them. You must start working on that immediately.' All four of them went to the various places and returned to Shree Hari to inform Him that they had made suitable arrangements. O king! Shree Hari retired for the night but the sleep deserted Him."

Thus ends the 6th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-7

Suvrat Muni said, "O Pratapsinh! The saints were restless at the anticipation of the fulfilment of their cherished desire for Shree Hari's Darshan. The Ekadashi night became very long for them. They sang Kirtans depicting His glory and Leelas the whole night. They rushed towards Gadhpur after finishing their morning routine and veneration. The saints and their disciples thronged all roads leading to Gadhpur. In their haste to reach Gadhpur and for Darshan of Shree Hari, the saints disregarded stones and thorns on the roads. Krupanand swami with a group of his disciples was the first to reach Gadhpur followed by Tyaganand swami and Nirlobhanand swami.

CHAPTER-8

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The almighty Lord Shree Hari woke up early as usual the next morning and completed His morning rituals. He arrived in the courtyard and sat on an ornate Sinhasan kept aside for Him to grant the joy of His Darshan to the saints and devotees. Muktanand swami, Mukundanand Brahamchari, Hemantsinh, Bhaguji, Soma Khachar, Jaya, Lalita etc. came and took their seats in the assembly according to their status, keeping in mind the decorum of the Sampraday. Shree Hari was turning the beads of a Mala by His right hand. Mukundanand Brahamchari was fanning Him with the white Chamar. Uttam Khachar arrived in the assembly and performed His veneration with sandalwood paste, Kumkum, rice, flowers etc. and performed His Aarti. He stood on the other side of Shree Hari with a small fan in his hand. Harnath came and offered Shree Hari garlands and strings of the choicest flowers from Laxmivadi (a garden of Gadhpur). A female devotee named Rati, arrived in the assembly with a pair of new clothes for Shree Hari on behalf of Lalita. She had tucked the bag of clothes under her arm and stood at a distance due to her diffidence. Though He knew everything, He asked Rati what she has brought. She could not reply. Soma Khachar came to her rescue and said to Shree Hari, 'O Lord! Today is Dhan Teras. Rati has brought new robes for You. We want You to put on these robes.' Shree Hari replied, 'Let us adorn Lord Krishna with new robes today. I shall wear the new robes on New year's day."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Jodho Bharvad came to Shree Hari and informed Him that the saints are about a mile away from Gadhpur. He added that a chief sentry has given him this news. A while later, Mayaram Bhatt arrived in the assembly and bowed at Shree Hari's feet. He was breathless due to his advanced age and the pace he had travelled from the River Unmattganga. He informed Shree Hari that hundreds of saints and devotees have reached the outskirt of Gadhpur. He was very happy at the thought of Darshan of so many saints. Shree Hari, Whose first priority has always been the benevolence of His saints, also became excited at the imminent arrival of the saints. He immediately got up from the Sinhasan and got ready to greet the saints and devotees. Bhaguji brought His mare from the stables and Shree Hari mounted the mare without anybody's help. He asked the devotees gathered for His Darshan to move aside by the gesture of His hands. Though He was in a great hurry to meet the saints, He slowed down to grant His Darshan to devotees lining the lanes of Gadhpur. Bhaguji and Soma Khachar etc. Parshads also mounted their horses and trotted behind Shree Hari. Many other devotees followed them on foot. Shree Hari galloped His mare as soon as He was out of the town leaving others following Him behind. The devotees following them on foot sprinted after Him."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The horse mounted cavalry of Parshads appeared from far as if they were trying to reach for the sky; their fluttering white robes gave the impression of white swans floating through the air and the galloping horses looked as if eagles were gliding in the air to thousands of saints and devotees approaching Gadhpur. The Parshads following Shree Hari sighted the crowd of devotees singing Kirtans aloud from far. The group of saints, whose minds always thought of Bhagwan Shree Hari, also saw Him astride His favourite mare from a distance. Though they could not see His face from that far, they recognised Him by the swaying stings of flowers from His diadem and the gait of His mare, Manaki. They saw the dust storm created by the hooves of many horses following a single person astride a horse. This confirmed their guess that Shree Hari, accompanied by many Parshads on horseback, is approaching them. Their joy knew no bounds. Their brisk walk turned into the sprint towards their destination. O king! Just as a herd of elephants sprint towards the water, escaping the wildfire; just as swans rush towards Mansarovar, the saints and devotees galloped towards their ultimate destination of their souls, Shree Hari. They lost the consciousness of their bodies as soon as they recognised Shree Hari's face astride His mare. Just as Shukdevji had lost the consciousness of his body in eagerness to meet his father Sage Vyas, the saints and devotees, in their impatience for Shree Hari's Darshan, shot off like arrows from a bow. Lord Swaminarayan halted His mare when He came face to face with saints at the forefront of the mass of people. The saints' eyes welled with the tears of joy and they, along with all male devotees fell on the ground and prostrated at His feet. The female devotees did Panchang Pranam from a distance according to the decorum of the Sampraday. Soma Khachar and other Parshad dismounted and did Sashtang Dandvat Pranam at saints' feet before mounting their horses again, ready to return back to Gadhpur. The saints stood dazed in front of Shree Hari, satiating their thirsty eyes for a long time."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari, with a rein in one hand and a cane in the other was finding it difficult to control the restless Manaki. The strings of flowers dangling from Shree Hari's diadem were moving around due to the constant movement of the head of Manaki. Shree Hari had forgotten His upper garment in His haste to greet the saints and as a result, His bare chest was visible to all. He was wearing several flower garlands around His neck; His forehead was adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo and He was attired in white robes. The saints and devotees were very upbeat about Shree Hari's divine Darshan. Their eyes did not satiate by His Darshan even after staring at His face for a long time. Shree Hari brought them out of their daze by asking their well beings and news from their region and villages. They made their progress towards Gadhpur amid the cacophony of noise created by various musical instruments, singing Kirtans by various groups of devotees and gunshots. The female devotees walking slightly behind were singing Kirtans in a more orderly fashion. O king! Upon arrival in the royal courtyard, Shree Hari instructed to make sure that everyone is suitably accommodated as per the arrangements made by Uttam Khachar's ministers. He checked on the progress of the cooking for the saints and devotees before taking His seat on an ornate Sinhasan as previously. Most of the devotees and saints gathered around Him, still not fully satisfied by His Darshan.

CHAPTER-9

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! After householder devotees went to their allocated homes, the saints gathered around Shree Hari. Shree Hari asked their well being once again. The saints venerated Shree Hari with flowers, Tulsi leaves, fruits, Kumkum etc. one by one and in groups. Uttam Khachar's brother -in -law, Galav brought the news that the food is ready. Shree Hari asked all the saints to go and take the lunch. All saints sat in lines after washing their hands and feet. They were served the stupendous meal of many varieties of sweets, vegetables, yoghurt, milk etc. by Shree Hari. He then asked them to go to the rest house and He too, went to His personal quarters where He rested for a while after the lunch. O king! The arrival of the group of devotees; male, female, widows, young, old, from various regions continued unabated. Each group came singing Kirtans aloud in harmony with the musical instruments or clapping and chanting the hymn of Lord Swaminarayan's name. This did not allow the afternoon siesta to the residents of Gadhpur. Lord Shree Hari also could not sleep due to the constant arrival of new groups of devotees. He returned to the courtyard and sat on an ornate Sinhasan kept for Him under the lime tree."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Innumerable devotees kept coming for His Darshan with the passage of time. Some of them were so engrossed in Him that they stood in front of Him with folded hands without first prostrating at His feet, while some remained on the floor fully stretched unable to get up after Dandvat Pranam. Their eyes remained transfixed on whichever part of His body they saw first. Some were stumped after sighting His toes and stood staring at Him in daze, while others were so attracted towards His knees that they were unable to look at anything else. The minds of others became prisoners to His circular calf, round thighs, raised abdomen, thin waist, long hands, slim fingers, chest, doe like eyes, radiant face or whichever parts of the body they laid their eyes on. With no effort on their part, they slipped into Samadhi. Some even slipped into Samadhi after sighting even lifeless things such as His diadem, strings of flowers and pearls dangling from His diadem, flower garlands around His neck or rings on His fingers. Benevolent Lord Shree Hari granted his devotees the bliss of His divinity and beauty of His Murti and enormity of His stature in Samadhi. Their minds and souls became so engrossed in Him that they became still like a mural drawn on a wall. Some of them remained standing, some sat down while some fell on the ground. O king! A miracle occurred! The Devtas led by Brahma showered divine flowers on Shree Hari. The devotees in Samadhi saw Lord Shree Hari in His full splendour in the midst of a brilliant radiance. Their joy turned into bliss when they were able to embrace Lord Hari in their Samadhi."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Lord Swaminarayan woke the devotees from their Samadhi after a while. They were pleasantly surprised to the same Murti of Lord Shree Hari seated on the Sinhasan under the lime tree which they saw in their Samadhi. All their fatigue of travelling disappeared with the pleasure of His divine Darshan. Some of these devotees had travelled for two, three or up to five months on foot to reach Gadhpur. Shree Hari was impressed with the trouble these devotees had taken to come to Gadhpur for His Darshan. He spoke to all devotees with deference and inquired about their well being. He also ensured of their accommodation by talking to Harji Thakker. Jaya and Rama, under Lalita's guidance and direct supervision, made similar arrangements for the female devotees. Shree Hari remained seated on the Sinhasan for a long time to grant His Darshan to devotees arriving in Gadhpur from various regions. He made sure that the devotees were replenished with food and money through Uttam Khachar. The Brahmin devotees were supplied with cereals, flour, Ghee etc. to last for five days from the kitchen while devotees of other Varnas were served food in the royal courtyard itself. Shree Hari, accompanied by a few Parshads, inspected the various sites of tented accommodation at night to ensure that all arrangement were appropriate. He forewarned the devotees not to allow any strangers within their complex and to maintain proper security."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari returned to His personal quarters only after visiting all accommodation complexes. He praised the devotees' thirst for His Darshan and the trouble they had undergone to quench that thirst in the presence of Soma Khachar and other Parshads. Shree Hari retired for the night very late (well past midnight) after ensuring the well being of His devotees."

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari woke up very early after only a few hours’ sleep. After completing His daily routine early, He spent the rest of the day welcoming the large number of devotees arriving in Gadhpur for the Annkoot festival. He made sure that all devotees were accommodated properly. O king! Shree Hari woke up early again on the day of Diwali. Uttam Khachar, as usual, venerated Shree Hari with sandalwood paste, Kumkum, rice, flowers etc. as soon as He had concluded His daily routine. At the behest of Jaya and Lalita, Mayaram Bhatt brought the bag of new clothes tucked under his arms. Shree Hari asked him smilingly, ‘O Mayaram! What is tucked under your arms? What have you brought?’ Mayaram Bhatt replied that he had brought the new robes for Him and requested Him to wear them to satisfy His devotees. Shree Hari accepted the bagful of clothes. He tied a multi coloured piece of cloth on His head, wore a gold threaded red robe and tied a similar piece of cloth on His waist. Shree Hari called the saints to grant them His Darshan. The saints, eager for His Darshan, rushed and gathered around the lime tree and waited for His arrival. The thousands of male and female householder devotees, musicians, singers, ascetics etc. converged in Uttam Khachar’s royal courtyard for His divine Darshan.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! The faces of all congregated saints, Varnis and devotees beamed with grins at the sight of Shree Hari majestically approaching the lime tree. The tears of joy rolled down their cheeks. They stood mesmerised with folded hands. Lord Swaminarayan took His seat on the ornate Sinhasan under the lime tree. The devotees chanted His name in unison a few times. Soma Khachar held a finely embroidered white umbrella on His head which glowed with the reflected radiant halo emanating from His face. Bhaguji and Alaiya Khachar stood on His either side, waving pompoms to keep flies and small debris away from Him. Sura Khachar and Naja Jogia held a hand held fans and directed the breeze in His direction. Uttam Khachar stood on His right holding and turning gold handled hand fan. Mukund Brahamchari, with a handkerchief in his hand, stood next to Shree Hari ever ready to follow each and every command. Kubersinhji, who always made loud proclamation of His arrival, stood near Him to convey and relay the messages between Shree Hari and the devotees. O king! Many other armed Parshads stood in His vicinity at his beck and call. Narayanmuni glanced at the large congregation of disciples eager to have His divine Darshan. The grounds of the royal courtyard were teeming with thousands of devotees standing shoulder to shoulder. Many devotees, unable to get room in the assembly climbed on the trees, arches, balconies and roofs of outbuildings and stables. Shree Hari appreciated the devotees' hunger for His Darshan. He smiled benignly towards them. He asked all of them to sit down by waving His hands. The devotees sat down immediately, bearing the decorum of assembly in the mind. The celibate saints, Varnis and male and female householders of all Varna sat in total silence. The musicians, after getting His permission, played their various instruments to please Him. The singers sang in the harmony of accompanied instruments. Lord Swaminarayan highly praised the ability of the singers and musicians. To appraise Himself of the activity and growth of the Sampraday, Shree Hari called the leading devotees from their respective regions. The leaders immediately came forward from their seats and stood in front of Shree Hari."

Thus ends the 10th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-11

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari greeted the congregation with a benevolent smile and asked the leading devotees from various regions, 'O devotees! What do the people of your region say about Me? What do they say about the religiosity of My celibate, householders, male, female and widowed disciples? What do non devotees think about their malevolent gurus? How do they compare our and other saints' behaviour and outlook? Please tell Me in detail.' O king! The leading devotees replied, 'O Bhagwan! Even non-religious people sing Your praise, that You protect and propagate Ekantik Dharma, comprising exemplary Dharma, Gnaan, Vairagya and Bhakti. They say that Narayanmuni's saints and householder disciples observe the appropriate Brahamcharya Vratt even in such detrimental times of Kali Yug. They also say that Lord Swaminarayan has eradicated adulterous behaviour from His disciples, whereas presently, under the influence of unbridled lust, even the scholars indulge in extra marital affairs with the women of the same clan. They add that Shree Hari has freed His disciples from the evil of greed for money, which often led one to murder his father, brothers or friends. Sahajanand Swami has made His disciples give up the allure of palate, which has led many sages in past to transgress from their Varna and Ashram Dharma. They say that Your disciples have managed to overcome the attachment to their bodies, relatives and possessions, the failure of which leads one to Hell or to become trapped as ghosts and spirits. Normally, the ego leads even a wise person to ignore or insult his seniors, saints or scholars and to hide his sins from his guru. O Lord! The people say that with Your blessings, Your disciples have forsaken ego which invite other vices such as apathy, violence, anger etc. They add that Your saints, though capable to punish the miscreants, bear all insults, false allegations, cussing and even beating. They accept that You are the only guru worthy to show the correct religious path for His disciples to follow. O Bhagwan! They hail Your efforts at reforming the society at large.'

The leading devotees continued, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! They heap praise on Your saints and disciples as well. They say that Your saints observe the difficult Brahamcharya Vratt willingly and honestly at Your behest. Even householder male disciples treat other women (other than their wives) as mothers, sisters and daughters. The male devotees not only refrain from touching other women, they totally avoid females' company in seclusion. The disciples of the Sampraday do not consume meat, liquor or other intoxicating substances. The non-devotees appreciate the facts that Your disciples earn their livelihood by just and fair means, do not steal and do not kill or maim anybody despite grave provocations. Your opponents praise our devotees for their profound theosophical knowledge because of which, they follow Your principles thoroughly. Besides, they do not try to commit suicide for any reason whatsoever. O Lord! Your adversaries know that despite the prevalence of adultery in society at large, married women of our Sampraday do not even look at or talk without reason with any other male, except their lawfully wedded husbands. The widow disciples observe celibacy just like Brahamchari saints and avoid the conversation with and company of any male except their close blood relatives. Indeed! They do not even listen to Your Katha from any other male devotee except their close relatives such as father or brother. Your adversaries add that all Your devotees lead very chaste lives by observing various Vratts such as Ekadashi, Janmashtami etc. and spending all their free time in any one of the nine types of Bhakti of Lord Krishna.'

The devotees continued, 'O Bhagwan! The non-devotees wish that their gurus would ensure that their disciples also lead a religious life. However, their gurus could not do that because their gurus themselves do not lead religious lives. They take pity on themselves for still clinging to their traditional gurus. Some of the non-devotees are afraid that they may bring dishonour on them by forsaking their customary gurus, while others are of the opinion that it is more honourable to come under Your shelter and accept You as guru. The large number of non-devotees do realise that their unreligious, adulterous and unrepentant gurus will surely bring disgrace on them sooner than later. They want to protect their women, including widows, from the sin of abortion which is the end result of their adulterous behaviour. Until now, the sin of abortions has largely gone unpunished, but with the arrival of the British rule, this sin will come out in the open and those involved will be severely punished. We had murdered many pregnant women in past to save our honour, but the new government will put an end to that practice as it has proclaimed the death sentence for murder. These large numbers of non-devotees are concerned that they will be tarnished as sinners along with their sinner gurus. They have started a movement to enlighten others to leave their customary gurus and come under Your shelter as they realise that only You are the true guru in this difficult time. We should forbid them to enter our homes. We, along with our widows, should join the fold of the Swaminarayan Sampraday to enhance our prestige and quality of life. O Bhagwan! We have heard non-devotees saying this with our own ears and we have retold them exactly as it is.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Lord Shree Hari smiled meaningfully at Dharmadev and Bhaktimata present in divine form. The leading devotees of various regions took Shree Hari's blessings by touching His feet and returned to their respective seats."

Thus ends the 11th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O Pratapsinh! Many devotees from various regions had come prepared to perform special veneration of their Ishtadev, Lord Swaminarayan. With platters in their hands, they were waiting for a cue from Shree Hari to start veneration. Mayaram Bhatt came forward and requested Shree Hari to fulfil these devotees' wish by allowing them to perform His worship. Shree Hari asked Mayaram, 'Bhatt! What day is it today and what should one do today?' Mayaram Bhatt replied, 'O Lord! It is Diwali today and people at large make merriment and enjoy themselves. However, the true devotees do not indulge in worldly pleasures. Your divine Darshan and Your pleasure is the only activity they undertake at any given time. Therefore, they have travelled to Gadhpur from far away places to participate in the Annakut festival. They do not seek nor desire materialistic pleasures. O Bhagwan! Accede to their desires and permit them to perform Your veneration.' Lord Shree Hari said, 'The devotees may come forward for the veneration, but make sure that they do not create a commotion. Let them come in the groups and make sure they return to their seats immediately after completing veneration."

The groups of devotees, male and female separately, took their turns. The devotees of central India led the way. The devotees of various provinces of central India such as Mathur, Sursen, Vatsaghosh, Yaamun, Salva, Neep, Ujjain, Mandavya, North and South Panchal, Bhadra, Kapishtha, Gaurgreeva, Arimed, Hastinapur, Pariyatra, Dharmaranya, Kalkot, Ashwath, Saraswat, Matsya, Kukur, Saket, Gujarat, Audumber etc. took their turns to venerate Him before returning to their seats. They offered Him silver plates full of spices such as nutmeg, cardamom, cloves, cinnamon and dry fruits such as walnut, sultanas and apricot, besides many varieties of sweets as Naivedhya. The devotees of Southern India gifted Narayanmuni gold embroidered scarves, veils and shawls, a silk Dhoti and many gold and bejewelled ornaments including rings and anklets, many white pearl necklaces of different sizes. O king! The devotees from Sindh, Pahalva, Sauvir, Saindhav, Kapil, Khand, Abashta, Kalak, Badar, Karna, Kirat, Barbar, Aabhir, Chanchuk, Saurashtra and other regions of the South East, venerated Shree Hari and gifted Him many white, ochre, saffron coloured robes, red and black tunics entwined with gold threads, soft and expensive shawls and blankets, many bejewelled gold ornaments such as necklaces and coronets, garlands of sandalwood besides the silver platters of betel nuts, coconuts, dates and sugar candy. The devotees of Saurashtra, the region in which Shree Hari lived, were more effervescent in His veneration. Female devotees of the South West region followed male devotees and offered their veneration from the distance, keeping the modicum of the Sampraday in mind. All of them returned to their respective seats after concluding their venerations."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Anandanand swami helped Shree Hari put on new robes and ornaments as they kept coming from each set of devotees. Shree Hari discarded the robes, garlands and ornaments offered to Him by the previous group of devotees. He gave away the newly discarded robes, garlands, food and ornaments offered by the previous group of devotees to the arriving fresh group of devotees as Prasadi. Often He would accept only a small portion of gifts from the devotees and return the remainder to them as Prasadi. Anandanand swami made sure that each and every devotee received some Prasad from the mountain of food items offered to Shree Hari in veneration. O king! More and more devotees from other regions kept coming for Shree Hari's worship. The devotees from Parat, Shak, Panchan, Aparat, Haiheya, Choshkan, Ramath regions from the West approached Shree Hari. Just as other devotees had done before them, the devotees from the West offered Him new robes, flower garlands, gold ornaments, silver coins and variety of food items. Additionally, they also offered Him pillows, quilts, bedspreads, cushions of various sizes before returning to their seats. The devotees of Mandavya, Maru, Falgul, Kutch, Ashmak and Madra provinces of the Western region offered Him several earthen pots full of gold and silver coins, bejewelled silver lined shoes and slippers, beside the ornaments studded with green and pink rubies. As soon as they returned to their seats, the devotees from Paurav, Madra, Kaikya, Malav, Koshal, Trigart, Ashvamukh, Karchhar, Kailavart, Gandhar, Pushkaravart, Bhutpur, Kuru, Mandavya, Kashmir and Himalya provinces of the Northern region came forward to offer their venerations. They offered Him pots full of saffron, musk and rice and the garlands of full blown lotus flowers, exquisitely embroidered hand fans, sparkling diamonds besides new robes and jewelled ornaments. O king! They were followed by the devotees from Kulut, Brahampur, China, Kolind, Gandharva, Paurav and other North Eastern provinces. They offered Him many pearl necklaces besides garlands made from flowers, Tulsi and sandalwood. The female devotees of the North Eastern region offered Shree Hari multicoloured and mirror embroidered robes, small baskets, mats and blankets which they had lovingly woven from grass and bamboo. They made sure that the baskets were filled with rice, cloves and exotic fruits."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! All devotees - young and old, male and female - performed His veneration with the utmost love and reverence and offered Him gifts as per their means. Shree Hari, in return, realising their profound love for Him, was pleased with them. He donated almost everything to poor Brahmins present in the assembly. He gave some of the items as Prasadi mementos to saints, Varnis, Parshads and devotees present in the assembly such as Muktanand swami, Mukundanand Varni, Bhaguji, Ratanji and others. He gave some of the expensive robes to the king devotees. Everybody present was surprised at Narayanmuni's generosity. O king! Many of the items He received as gifts were expensive enough to cause envy among the richest of the kings, yet Shree Hari was so detached from the wealth that He donated everything.

This generosity was beyond the means of many kings present in the assembly. Without feeling any superiority at such a large donation, Shree Hari discarded the expensive robes gifted to Him by his devotees and put on His usual simple white robes. As these venerations took very long, the Sun decided not to move any further, so that the whole process was completed by noon. O king! All devotees attending this assembly were witnesses to this miracle and Lord Swaminarayan's prowess.

CHAPTER-13

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The saints wished to perform Shree Hari's veneration when all householder devotees from various regions concluded their veneration. However, Shree Hari wanted to perform His noon time ritual, so He asked them to postpone their veneration until the next day.

Lord Narayanmuni requested Nan Khachar to bring His horse and asked everybody else to accompany Him for a bath in the River Unmattganga. Procession comprising of Shree Hari astride a tall horse in the middle of saints, Parshads and devotees on foot, proceeded towards River Unmattganga."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The procession was led by devotees playing various musical instruments. The Varnis and saints walked behind them followed by almighty Lord Swaminarayan on His horse. The kings such as Uttam Khachar, Soma Khachar, Sura Khachar, Alaiya Khachar, Muluji and Jiva Khachar followed Shree Hari on foot. Hundreds of Kshatriya Parshads such as Bhaguji, Nanja Jogia, Rathod, Mantrik, Vaghji, Verabhai, Hasti, Mamayo, Ram, Galav, Govardhan, Manjit, Vasto, Velo, Arjun,

They were followed by Brahmin male devotees such as Mayaram Bhatt, Vaishya devotees such as Parvatbhai and Shudra devotees such as Harji. Female devotees walked behind keeping some distance from the preceding male devotees. As the procession moved slowly towards the river, Shree Hari saw smooth flowing waters of River Unmattganga from far."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The River Unmattganga, in which almighty supreme Bhagwan Vaasudev in His human form of Lord Shree Hari had bathed umpteen times with His holy saints such as Muktanand swami, Vyapkanand swami and others. Lord Shree Hari had played many pranks such as throwing water at saints and diving in this river thousands of times. In the bygone era, Lord Krishna had made River Yamuna holy by bathing in her water. However, by the direct contact of Shree Hari's repeated bathing in her waters, River Unmattganga has become the holiest shrine in present times. As a result, the Devtas including Brahma fulfil their lives by repeatedly bowing to her. The mere Darshan of River Unmattganga washes away a person's sins accumulated over many past lives and bathing in her waters fulfils all of one's latent desires. Indeed, the souls attain salvation just by bathing in the holy water of River Unmattganga. Unmattganga's greatness, when compared to other famous rivers of India, is due to her continuous association with Lord Swaminarayan. Though her water is normally pristine and clear, it sometimes turns yellow as a result of saffron and sandalwood paste being washed off from the Urdhvapundra Tilaks of saints and devotees bathing. Often her water turns ochre when saints wash their ochre robes in her water while at other times it turns red when the kings and queen wash off their bodies smeared with saffron and Kumkum left over after Shree Hari's veneration. This mixture of different hues enhances the beauty of her waves."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The saints and devotees take bath in her water three times a day chanting Lord Shree Hari's name. The chant of 'Swaminarayan' 'Swaminarayan' reverberates around the banks of River Unmattganga and as a result Yamdoots roaming around vanish from her vicinity. The sins which are impossible to wash away by harsh atonements are redeemed by bathing in the holy water of River Unmattganga. The sins of such sinners are erased from the register of Chitragupt, the recorder of Yama. Indeed, anyone sipping just a few drops of the water of Unmattganga on his deathbed attains Heaven and becomes eligible to enjoy its pleasures. Even the animals such as fishes, crabs, turtles, snakes etc. living in her water or on her banks attain Heaven upon their deaths and Apsaras of Heaven fight with each other to accept them as their husbands. The resultant Punya of any Vratt, Japa, charity, Yagna performed on her banks is multiplied by many times. The oblation of her water offered to Pitris is very rewarding. Splashing her water on one's eyes gives Punya equivalent to numerous Yagnas. The sinners and downtrodden attain Heaven by bathing in Unmattganga's holy water. Therefore, persons desirous of Moksha or worldly pleasure always endeavour to associate with her. Just as a Unmatt (snooty or insolent) person does not discriminate between right and wrong, this river does not discriminate between worthy and unscrupulous whilst sending them off to Heaven. Therefore, ancient sages have named her Unmattganga. Her greatness has been augmented greatly as Lord Swaminarayan has considered her as His dear. Therefore, Shesh with his thousand tongues or Devtas with their exemplary wisdom are not able to describe her greatness fully. "

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari arrived on the banks of such a great and holy river along with the accompanied kings, saints and other devotees. He gently entered the water along with His male devotees who stood encircled around Him. Shree Hari and the devotees started sprinkling water on each other. Many devotees were unable to get closer to Shree Hari due to the sheer numbers. The female devotees stood downstream afar and sprinkled themselves with the water made holier by the touch of Shree Hari's feet. All the devotees, whilst playing in the water, sang Kirtans extolling His glory. The Devtas led by Brahma flocked in their respective planes and hovered overhead to witness such a divine Darshan and fulfil their lives. Suddenly Shree Hari dived underwater and swam away like an expert diver. Brahmanand swami and other saints dived after Him to catch Him but He had surfaced very far. The whole crowd would swim where he had surfaced and the pranks would continue at the newer place. He led His thousands of devotees for a longer swim using various different techniques. The Devtas took the form of fishes to enjoy the direct touch of Shree Hari. Before getting ready to return to the royal courtyard of Gadhpur, Shree Hari, saints and devotees spent a long time in the water until they were tired of fatigue. "

"O king! As Shree Hari had taken birth to establish Ekantik Dharma, He always carried out all religious rituals as described in the scriptures to set an example to his devotees. Let me describe you the rituals (pertaining to the noon) carried out by Shree Hari. He stood in the middle of the water looking at the sun overhead and imprinted Urdhvapundra Tilak using the water in His palm. He raised both hands and meditated upon SuryaNarayan while chanting aloud the hymns from the SuryaSukta. His wide forehead shone with the sweat. Emulating His example, saints, Parshads and other householder devotees followed suit by meditating upon SuryaNarayan with raised hands. The Devtas lined up overhead to see such a magnificent Darshan of thousands of devotees venerating the sun simultaneously. Shree Hari, with Yagnopavit in its usual position, i.e. on His left shoulder, then offered oblation to Devtas with a single handful of water. He followed up with the oblation to ancient sages such as Sanak with two handfuls of water whilst placing His Yagnopavit around His neck, followed by oblation to Pitris with three handfuls of water with His Yagnopavit on His right shoulder. He placed His Yagnopavit in its usual place before emerging from the water. He and other devotees returned to Gadhpur in the same manner as He had come to the banks of River Unmattganga."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! He asked the saints to sit in rows for lunch and distributed food Himself. He asked other devotees to proceed for lunch in the royal courtyard. He returned to His quarters after feeding saints with a sumptuous meal. O king! He took another bath before cooking food. He ate only after offering Naivedhya to Lord Shree Krishna."

Thus ends the 13th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-14

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! After a short sojourn, Shree Hari sat on the ornate Sinhasan near the dais in the company of several Parshads. By the late afternoon, saints also arrived and sat around Shree Hari. Accompanied by musical instruments such as Veena, Sarangi, Tabla, flute etc. saints started singing Kirtans describing Shree Hari's virtues and Leelas. As the evening set in, Shree Hari called for Pragji Purani to commence the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat as per the usual routine. Pragji Purani, who had attained expertise in the various scriptures such as the Vedas and the Puranas with Lord Shree Hari's blessings, came and bowed at Shree Hari's and saints' feet before taking his seat on a high dais. His pronunciations were clear and he had remarkable ability to explain the profound meanings of the scriptures. O king! Though Shree Hari was the supreme Lord of the universe, to establish the correct rituals and procedures, He venerated the scripture with rice, coconut, sandalwood paste, Kumkum and garland followed by garlanding and smearing sandalwood paste on the forehead of Pragji Purani seated on Vyas Peeth like an ordinary mortal. Before commencing the Katha of the fifth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat, Pragji Purani performed the Manglacharan."

Pragji Purani said, "O Narayanmuni! You are the supreme God of the universe. Be victorious! You appear in front of me wearing a red tunic, embroidered with gold motifs, a white Surval entwined with gold threads, a red and golden scarf around Your waist and a golden coronet on Your head. You are wearing many gold necklaces around Your neck, bracelets on Your wrist, rings on Your fingers, armbands on Your arms and anklets on Your ankles. Your smiling face is akin to the full moon. O Lord Narayanmuni! Always appear like this in front of me. O supreme Lord of the Universe! You have independently taken birth as a mortal being to please Your Ekantik devotees and redeem sinners and waylaid. You are an ocean of mercy Who removes all sorrow and pain afflicted by worldly problems. O omnipresent Bhagwan! Even the Devtas bow at Your feet. O merciful! I bow down to You with mind, speech and body prior to reciting the Katha."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Pragji Purani commenced reciting the Katha of the fifth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat from where it was paused the previous day. Shree Hari repeatedly explained profound theosophical passages in greater detail and simpler language. The Katha of the fifth canto concluded on this day of Diwali by the divine coincidence. Narayanmuni venerated Pragji Purani with Kumkum, sandalwood paste and flower garlands at the conclusion of the Katha and gifted him golden ornaments, robes and much wealth. He also gifted him one of His favourite horses. O king! Pragji Purani descended from the Vyas peeth, bowed at Shree Hari and took his seat amongst the saints. Devram and other carpenters had prepared a carved Mandap with four pillars. The pillars and sides of the Mandap and the floor around the Mandap were decorated with thousands of oil lamps and candles. and Krushnadas placed many lanterns and candles around the ornate Sinhasan and on the branches of the tree under which Shree Hari was sitting. Narayanji and his carpenter colleagues made many mechanically revolving lanterns which they placed around the royal courtyard. Thousands of static and revolving sparkling lamps dispersed the darkness of the moonless night and gave an exemplary look to the whole courtyard. Shree Hari called Harisharma and other scholar Brahmins, expert in the Vedic ritual to establish a golden idol of Laxmiji in the Mandap. Accompanied by the loud chanting of appropriate hymns and musical instruments, Shree Hari performed the ritualistic veneration of Laxmiji. He donated clothes, ornaments and coins to Brahmins at the conclusion of the veneration."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Uttam Khachar venerated Shree Hari and offered Him new clothes on behalf of his sister Jayaba. Uttam Khachar gave Him red Surval and red tunic embroidered with gold motifs which Shree Hari put on immediately on the existing clothes to please Uttam and Jayaba. Uttam Khachar offered Shree Hari a long piece of red cloth entwined with gold threads to tie on His back and a stole to put on His shoulders. King Uttam placed a colourful diadem on Narayanmuni's head. Lalita called Uttam Khachar who was standing with the bowed head in front of Shree Hari and gave him various golden and bejewelled ornaments such as anklets, bracelets, necklaces, waist band, rings and bangles for Shree Hari to wear. Uttam Khachar helped Shree Hari put on all ornaments to the sheer delight of all devotees present. After retaking His seat on the Sinhasan, Shree Hari started singing Dhun aloud while clapping hands. The devotees followed Shree Hari's lead and followed singing Dhun in chorus. The loud sound of chanting 'RadhaKrishna', 'Vaasudev', 'Hari', 'Swaminarayan', 'Govind' and 'NarNarayan', which is capable to wash away all sins, reverberated in all directions. The saints and householder devotees sang various Stotras and Kirtans extolling Lord Hari's greatness at the conclusion of Dhun. Dinanath Bhatt formed a new Stotra of eight verses and recited in front of Shree Hari."

Dinanath Bhatt sang, "O Lord Narayan! I am very fortunate that the purpose of my human life has been fulfilled because You appear personally in front of me. You are the master and controller of Kaal (Time), Maya and Akshar. You are seated on this illuminated Sinhasan to grant Your darshan to Your devotees and the radiance emanating from the nails of Your feet shine on the devotees sitting in this assembly. robes, ornate diadem, ornaments such as anklets, bracelets, pearl necklaces and flower garlands. Your benign smile shower divine bliss on Your devotees. O Lord! Bless me so that I can always have this divine Darshan in my heart. I am convinced that You are the master of the whole universe and therefore, I have come under Your refuge. I am also certain that anyone taking shelter at Your feet is able to go across this world with minimal effort. I cannot fathom the various theosophical principles set out in the scriptures, neither do I understand various Katha described in many Puranas nor the different methods of emancipations attested by ancient sages. All I understand is that the refuge of Your divine feet is enough to protect me from the evil influences of this world. O Bhagwan! I have not undergone any severe, austerity, have not performed any Yagnas, have not observed many Vratts, have not donated much, have not read or listened to Your divine Katha for a long time, yet You appear personally in front of me. This miracle is nothing but Your mercy on me. I am full of many vices such as ego, greed, lust, anger, envy etc. which would normally not let me have the Darshan of Your feet which are able to redeem one from this world. Who except You is merciful enough to grant me the nigh impossible Darshan of Your divine feet? This is nothing but a miracle! I neither have the intelligence to decipher scriptures to glean the knowledge, nor have the strength of Vairagya or other virtues such as chastity or contentment by which I could attain salvation. Please remember your pledge to grant Moksha to anyone coming under Your shelter and help me attain Moksha as I have come under Your refuge. I do not understand the profound meanings of the hymns of the scriptures such as the Panchratra, I do not fully comply with the ritual of Your veneration, indeed, I do not know properly what Your Ekantik devotee should do to please You. O merciful! I, poor Dinanath, plead with You to protect me. I can only prostrate at Your feet. O benevolent Lord! Save me by making me Yours."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Lord Swaminarayan was pleased at Dinanath's humility and servility, and pledged to protect him from all evil. Dinanath did one Pradakshina before returning to his seat. Taking cue from Dinanath, all saints performed Pradakshina around Shree Hari while clapping and singing Kirtans to please Him. Lord Narayanmuni Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The expert chefs started preparation for the next day's feast at Shree Hari's behest. The ladies followed suit in their kitchen as well. Jaya, Lalita and other close family members started their preparation in the royal household kitchen. O king! The female devotees helping in the preparation of food for the Annakut festival the next day were too numerous to name them all, but let me name few devotees among them who took enormous responsibilities. Somadevi and Surprabha made sure that the grains and lentils were cleaned and were fit to be cooked. Jayaba enthused the cooks and made sure that everything they needed was supplied in time. Lalita motivated the expert chefs and taught cooking techniques to inexperienced ladies. Rama stored the prepared items of sweets such as Jalebi and Khaja in such a manner that they do not shatter before being served the next day. Amrri, Amla and Kshema led in cooking various vegetables, lentils and chutneys. Rati, Mena, Sati and Devi took responsibility to make Chapattis and Puris. Revti led and guided other ladies in preparing soups, rice pudding and Shiro (a sweet dish). Fulla, Aditi, Ajwa, Malli and Jahnvi were busy making many different varieties of rice. Yami and Fulljala made few specialised sweets such as Ghughra and Manda with the help of several other devotees. Panchali and Nani brought grains, lentils, flours and spices from the store room as and when they were needed in the kitchen. Two wives of Uttam Khachar, Kumuda and Jashuba, relieved tired cooks for a while under the direction of Lalita. Jita and Manya led a team of devotees to supply firewood, water and utensils as required in the kitchen.

The aroma of spices such as clove, cinnamon, nutmeg, mustard, sesame, chillies, coriander and pepper and cooked rice whiffed in all directions and the sound of frying Puris and other items became audible even outside the kitchen. Though Jaya, Lalita and other devotees have won over their taste (i.e. they ate tasteless or bland food as their Vratt), the items they prepared was very tasty as the food was meant for Bhagwan and other devotees. The ego of expert male chefs melted at the sight of the hard working female cooks."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! In the early morning of the next day, the expert Brahmins adorned the idol of Vaasudev Narayan with new clothes and ornaments as a prelude to His veneration. The entrance of the temple was decorated with wreaths of flowers and leaves. The Pujari of the temple prepared the ground (on which the Annakut was to be set) by smearing it with many powdered colours. A wooden stepped structure was placed on the ground in front of the idol of Lord Vaasudev Narayan on which the numerous plates of various varieties of food were stacked. The Pujari collected various artefacts required for the worship and kept them ready before noon. He waited for Shree Hari's further instructions and His arrival."

Thus ends the 15th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-16

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari woke up earlier than usual the next morning and proceeded towards River Unmattganga with many Parshads for a bath. The saints, whilst meditating, realised that Shree Hari had gone to the banks of the river and rushed to join Him. Shree Hari, not wanting to see the throng of devotees to gather here for His Darshan, concluded His ritual bath quickly and returned to Akshar Bhuvan, His personal quarters. He sat on a woollen mat and imprinted Urdhvapundra Tilak at five places, the forehead, two upper arms, the heart and the throat. He chanted the Gayatri hymn before venerating Lord Krishna with sixteen artefacts just as He did every morning. Whilst turning the beads of a Mala, He chanted the eight syllable hymn of Lord Krishna directed by guru Ramanand swami. Realising that Shree Hari had returned early, King Uttam Khachar performed His veneration with Kumkum, rice, sandalwood paste and flowers and presented Him new clothes and ornaments. He prayed to Shree Hari with the following eight verses."

Uttam Khachar said, 'O Lord! When the saints follow You with their Kamandalu and upper garment when You set out on a walk with a quick pace, they find it difficult to keep up with You. Though You have no reason or need to follow the rituals like a normal mortal person to go to River Unmattganga for a bath, You did this only so that people can have Your divine Darshan and fulfil their lives. The trees give up their natural Tamas trait and become humble at Your Darshan. These trees are indeed blessed as their fruits and flowers are used by Your saints in Your venerations. O Bhagwan! Whenever You pass by on Your way to Unmattganga, the birds stop chirping and moving. They sit still on the branches of trees and meditate upon You and enjoy the bliss of Your Darshan in their hearts. The wild animals such as deer give up their inherent nature and stand their ground with their heads held high for Your Darshan when You approach the banks of Unmattganga for Your bath. They forget their existence and meditate upon Your Murti and enjoy the resultant bliss just as Your saints do. O Hari! The uncultured and forest dwelling women folk, though unaware of religious practices, fall on ground and prostrate at Your feet and do Ashtang Pranam instead of Panchang Pranam. They forsake all tshe mundane chores of their home and wait for Your Darshan on Your way to Unmattganga. Even the River Unmattganga, normally flowing with turbulent waves, becomes humble at Your Darshan and her water becomes calm in anticipation. The swans on the banks of Unmattganga forget their royal gait and meditate upon You on Your divine Darshan. O Shree Hari! Even I am blessed that I can see You in person residing in my palace with saints. My life becomes fulfilled when I meditate upon You wearing white robes following the bath in River Unmattganga with saints. O Narayanmuni, I, devotees, trees, animals and birds are indeed blessed with Your Darshan."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Just as Uttam Khachar was concluding his Stuti, Karim, the guard at the entrance, came with the news that Hemantram and other devotees of Amdavad had arrived to perform Shree Hari's veneration as they did not get an opportunity the previous day. Shree Hari called them inside to fulfil their cherished desire. They gifted Him red embroidered Surval, tunic, waistband, stole, scarf and many ornaments at the conclusion of their elaborate veneration using the artefacts such as Kumkum powder, sandalwood paste, rice and flowers. They offered Shree Hari many fruits and bagfuls of sugar candy. Shree Hari arrived and sat on the Sinhasan that was placed under the tree wearing red robes gifted by the devotees of Amdavad. The saints, Parshads and other devotees arrived and formed an assembly just as they had done the previous day. Soma Khachar, Sura Khachar, Ratanji, Bhaguji etc. Parshads stood around the Sinhasan and took up their routine duties such as holding an umbrella, shooing away flies and insects and providing fresh breeze. The saints sang Kirtans accompanied by music. Narayanmuni called Dinanath Bhatt sitting at the head of the assembly and gifted him the red expensive robes He was wearing. Dinanath Bhatt was overwhelmed by such indulgence which even the accomplish Yogis and Devtas yearn for."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! Gangaram Mall and other wrestlers of Bhuj sought Shree Hari's permission to exhibit their wrestling skills. On getting the nod from Shree Hari, Gangaram Mall and other wrestlers exhibited thirty two different wrestling techniques including Uthapan, Unnayan, Chalan, Sthapan, Akarshan, Shrunkhlan, Plavan, Tadan etc. The whole assembly was very pleased at the display and Shree Hari urged Uttam Khachar to reward the wrestlers generously. Brahmanand swami, always able to gauge Shree Hari's mood, asked Him with a smile, 'O Prabhu! You asked us yesterday to undertake Your veneration today. We, the saints, are the only group still deprived of this opportunity. Shall we proceed with the veneration? We will abide with Your command.' Shree Hari asked all saints and Varnis to come one at a time for the veneration. O king! The Brahamcharis led by Vaasudevanand and Mukundanand swamis and saints led by Muktanand, Gopalanand and Brahmanand swamis approached Shree Hari with trays containing the leaves of Tulsi, Kumkum powder, sandalwood paste, rice and flowers in an orderly manner and performed veneration of their Ishtadev, Lord Swaminarayan, who showered benign blessing on each one of them."

Thus ends the 16th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Your divine Murti, with numerous strings of flowers dangling from Your diadem, forehead adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo, neck adorned with numerous flower garlands and with mischievously sparkling eyes mesmerising Your devotees, redeem the devotees from this quagmire like world. O Bhagwan! Bless me that my mind always remains concentrated in You, standing with Your arms adorned with bracelets and armlets and Your waist encircled with a gold waistband.'

Gopalanand swami prayed, 'O merciful Lord! O Lord Narayan! You always reside in Your supreme abode Brahampur Dham, which is illuminated by the radiance equivalent of thousands of suns. You are unparalleled and unrivalled. O benevolent Lord Swaminarayan! Be victorious. O Vibhu! Bless me that Your divine Murti always remains in front of me.'

Brahmanand swami prayed, 'O Prabhu! Bless me that my mind never digresses, even for a moment, from the memory of Your face enveloped with several strings of flower swaying from the golden diadem. O Lord! I have forsaken this world and ignored criticism from people to attain You. I will never separate from You, even at the cost of my life. I will never accept separation from You.'

ornaments gifted by Your devotees. I have come unto Your shelter.'

Premanand swami and the other saints jointly prayed, 'O Shreeji Maharaj! Be victorious! Brahma, after arising from the navel of Vairat Narayan, created people and this world. As a son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata, You have arrived on this earth to release people from the clutches of the cycle of death and birth. The radiance, equivalent to hundreds of moons, emanating from the nails of Your toes illuminate Your devotees heart, that is, their ignorance is removed by meditating upon Your feet. O reason of all reasons! Be victorious! O Govind! You fulfil all desires of Your devotees prostrating at Your divine feet. O saviour of saints! You are the sole awarder of Moksha. O Lord of Akshardham! You have arrived to banish the fake gurus and kings who have no desire to redeem themselves from the clutches of the cycle of birth and death; who are tangled in vices such as greed, lust and anger; who are not interested in finding the ethical path as described in the scriptures; who do not follow the ethical religious rites as shown by the scriptures; who indulge in mundane pleasures of the senses; who are not able to rise above their base instincts and yet pretend to be the leaders of masses. O husband of Laxmi! You are constantly venerated by Brahma, Shiva, Radha and Laxmi. Your fame is as infinite and unblemished just as the brilliant snowy peaks of Mountain Kailash, the home of Lord Shiva. O illuminator of everything! The mere sight of Your radiant face is enough to remove all vices of Your devotees. O ocean of all bliss! You serenade the swirling intelligence of Your devotees. O Purushottam! You are the controller of Maya, Time and souls, Who explains to us their true identities. You redeem the souls that meditate upon You. You have taken numerous incarnations just for the benevolence of mankind. O Shree Hari! You are the only true friend of the poor or needy. Be pleased with us and protect us.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The male householder devotees came forward to offer their prayers at the conclusion of the prayers by the saints and Varnis."

The devotees prayed, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! We and our entire clans are very fortunate in this world. Our austerity, Vratts, charities, Yagnas, meditations et al have fructified with Your blessings. Brahma, the creator, could not reach the source (You) of the lotus from which he emerged even after walking through its stalk for a hundred Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Just as the householder devotees were concluding their prayers, Rati (a female devotee) informed Shree Hari from a distance that all food items needed for Annakut are cooked and ready. Lord Narayanmuni asked the chief priest of Radha Krishna Dev to make arrangements for the Annakut. The Brahmin Pujari began to arrange various food items in front of Radha Krishna Dev. Vaasudevanand and other Brahamcharis brought food from the kitchen as asked by the head Pujari, who took great care in stacking them in an orderly manner. He invoked Lord Vaasudev to come for lunch when all the food items were placed. Mukundanand Brahamchari came and offered Lord Vaasudev Narayan the beetle leaf as after dinner mint and performed Aarti at Shree Hari's behest. Lord Swaminarayan arrived in the temple on hearing the bells of Aarti and stood reverently with bowed head and folded hands in front of Vaasudev Narayan. He was greatly pleased with the meticulous display and praised the Pujari and Brahamcharis profusely for their effort and came closer for a thorough look."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! Shree Hari first saw various sweet dishes arranged neatly in platters of various sizes. He saw white round Khaja, golden curled Jalebi, mounds of Shiro and Kansar which were laced with plenty of Ghee, square and rectangle pieces of Barfi stacked high in a neat order, numerous varieties of round Laadoos of many hues and sizes made from different flours such as wheat, rice and gram, many wet sweet items made of milk or yoghurt such as Shrikhand and milk pudding. Platters of many varieties of rice were judiciously placed between the plateful of sweets. Plates of Rotli and Puri were interspersed among other varieties of sweets such as Penda, Sukhdi, Kalvo, Sata and Thor. O king! Shree Hari turned His attention towards umpteen varieties of cooked vegetables such as Okra, gourd, bitter gourd, aubergine, green beans, runner beans, potatoes, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, pumpkin, radish, spinach, lettuce etc. All vegetables were seasoned with oil, clove, cinnamon, mustard, sesame, chillies and turmeric and garnished with coriander as appropriate. Bahjiyas made of aubergine, chillies, potatoes; banana, spinach etc. were placed in platters which were stacked orderly. Banana, chillies, radish, pumpkin, cucumber, melon, grapes, dates were mixed separately with yoghurt and powdered mustard seeds to prepare many varieties of Raytas. Many varieties of papadoms and curds were prepared as side dishes. Numerous small gold and silver bowls of different varieties of chutneys seasoned with chillies and corianders and sweet and sour pickles made from mango, lemon, chilli, ginger etc. were placed among large platters. Pujari offered Lord Vaasudev Narayan fresh butter, Ghee, yoghurt and milk in small gold bowls. O king! A round large gold platter with sixty four gold bowls was placed right in front of Radha Krishna dev at the top of the tiered stack. Shree Hari was highly pleased to see the same one hundred and one varieties served in the main platter that were also placed on a tiered stack."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! To conform to the modicum of sanctity of a temple and to show great respect to Lord Vaasudev Narayan, Shree Hari sat on the floor with the other saints and devotees. He asked saints to sing Kirtans depicting the festival of Annakut that Lord Krishna celebrated at the foothills of Mountain Govardhan in the bygone era. The saints sang many Kirtans in accompaniment of musical instruments for some time. Lord Narayanmuni concluded the Annakut festival by performing Ashtang Dandvat Pranam in front of Radha Krishna Dev. The saints and other devotees followed suit. O King Pratapsinh! The joy of devotees at the Darshan of Annakut celebration at Gadhpur was beyond any narrative."

Thus ends the 18th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! With Shree Hari's concurrence, Lalita also arranged an Annkoot in front of the idol of Shree Hari Krishna Maharaj which she used for regular daily worship. She washed an area of the floor and sprinkled it with turmeric, Kumkum and sandalwood powder. The idol of Bhagwan was placed on a low wooden stand covered with a soft woollen mat. She and her other two sisters performed a special veneration using Kumkum, sandalwood paste, flowers, rice etc. and offered new clothes and ornaments to Lord Hari Krishna Maharaj. Jayaba placed a large circular gold plate in front of Him and Rama placed many small silver bowls in the plate. Rati placed a shiny silver pot full of water on the right, while the younger sister Panchali, placed a golden glass for drinking water. Other female devotees such as Kamla, Rati, Fulli, Revti, Amari, Devika, Kshema, Amla. Rama etc. who had helped prepare the food brought a variety of food items from the kitchen and served them in the plate and bowls. O king! One hundred and one varieties of food were laid out in front of Hari Krishna Maharaj just as they were placed in front of Lord Vaasudev Narayan in the main temple."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Just as the food was laid out fully, Lalita invoked Shree Hari to come and dine. Jaya said to Lalita, 'Sister, ask Shree Hari to start eating. All of us want to have Darshan of Shree Hari eating.' Lalita closed her eyes, focussed her mind on Hari Krishna Maharaj's Murti and prayed reverentially to start eating. O king! Shree Hari Krishna Maharaj in person emerged from the Murti and started eating. Radhikaji also emerged from the same Murti and stood on His left, eager to serve Him. Not only Lalita, but every female devotee present in the room saw Hari Krishna Maharaj taking various items of food from the platter and eat. The saints and other male devotees had the same Darshan from a distance where they had gathered to witness this miracle. As Shree Hari tasted each item, He asked the name of the delicious varieties of food and inquired who had made that particular item. On finding out the cook of each item, He profusely praised each and every devotee. As Shree Hari was about to get up after eating a little, Lalita pleaded with Him to eat some more with a prayer.

Lalita prayed, 'O Prabhu! What is the haste? Why have You eaten so little! O ocean of bliss! O Sahajanand Swami! Please eat some more. Please give up playing childish prank of running away after eating only a little. There are so many varieties served in Your plate. Accept whatever You desire. Do not go away without tasting more various dishes. O Bhagwan! The devotees have made scented rice, sweet milk pudding, lentil soup and many varieties of Laadoos dripping with Ghee with great love for You. They have worked hard to prepare various chutneys, pickles and savoury items just to feed You. Have some thought and eat more. They have imported various vegetables from far off places and cooked them for You with thorough seasoning using the best garnishes just for You. Do not disappoint them by not eating. We have diced numerous varieties of fruits such as melons, watermelons, apples, bananas just for Your pleasure. Please do not go without tasting them. Please have some fresh and sweetened milk, butter, yoghurt and spiced buttermilk. We have set aside cool fresh water from Unmattganga to quench Your thirst and wash your hands and gargle. O Lord! You may go and rest on Your Sinhasan and grant us Your divine Darshan but only after accepting some beetle leaves packed with suitable mints and spices such as cinnamon and cloves.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Naming various varieties of food, Lalita handed each item to Shree Hari, who devoured them lovingly. This process lasted for some time at the exhilaration of Lalita and other female devotees present. Radhikaji accepted some Prasad from Shree Hari's plate after Shree Hari washed His hands and accepted the beetle leaf at the conclusion of lunch. Immediately after Aarti, Shree Hari and Radha merged in the Murti just as they had emerged from it. O King! Shree Hari remained visible to everybody in the assembly under a tree during this whole time seated on the ornate Sinhasan. He pretended to be surprised when some devotees informed Him that Bhagwan has emerged from the Murti and ate the food offered to Him by Lalita. He just smiled benignly and nodded. He asked saints, Parshads and all devotees to proceed towards the dining area for lunch which they duly obeyed."

Thus ends the 19th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-20

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! All the saints arrived in their dining area as directed by Shree Hari after washing their face, hands and feet. The saints took their seats in rows as guided by Muktanand swami. The Brahmins filled the saints' pots with fresh clean water from River Unmattganga. Shree Hari asked Mukundanand Brahamchari, Muktanand swami and many other Brahmins to start serving the food to the saints. The saints started serving food under the watchful eyes of Shree Hari after Brahmins had distributed plates and bowls made of leaves to each saints. Muktanand swami, though novice at serving, led other saints in serving. Brahmanand swami displayed his expertise in serving food. Mahanubhavanand moved sleekly between rows by calling the name of items aloud. Shree Hari was pleased at Nityanand and Shukanand swamis' proficiency of serving food. Anandanand swami pleased Shree Hari by displaying his skills of serving food. As Swayamprakashanand swami's mind was always engrossed in Shree Hari, he served food errantly by missing some saints' plates altogether. Anandanad swami, disregarding his advanced age and frail body, moved hastily between rows while serving savoury items. Mukundanand Brahamchari and other Brahmins took it upon themselves to serve various sweets. O king! The saints and Brahmins served food in plates in such a way that though the plates were flat, the various varieties of food such as sweets did not get mixed with vegetables or each other. Shree Hari asked the saints to start eating when the food was served."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! When Muktanand swami and Swayamprakashanand swami went to serve sweet dishes the second time around, many saints declined the second serving. As they returned back after making unsuccessful attempts to serve a second helping, Lord Narayanmuni sent them back and asked them to serve forcefully until they refuse to accept even more forcefully. He explained that their denial was only hollow. The serving saints returned to rows and began serving forcefully until the diners were full to their limits and denied any more food very forcefully with intent. Shree Hari tied His stole at the waist and moved between rows with a Brahmin in tow with the box full of Laadoos. He took two Laadoos in each hand and put them in the plates of each saints. Though they were really full, the saints did not wish to miss an opportunity to have Prasad from Shree Hari's hands. Shree Hari moved in all the rows to serve Laadoos with His own hands to each and every saint. The saints in return gleefully accepted Prasad and devoured both Laadoos. Without showing any fatigue, Shree Hari distributed handfuls of Jalebi to the saints. O king! The bystanders felt themselves very fortunate to have such a divine Darshan of Shree Hari feeding His saints so lovingly."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari asked the saints to take their time in finishing their meal and returned to His seat. Understanding Shree Hari's latent wish, Mukundanand Brahamchari, brought out the pail of Ghee and started serving it to the saints. He raised his hands and relayed Shree Hari's instruction, 'O saints! You must not waste a single morsel of food. None of the saints must leave any food behind in their dishes. I am not saying this but I am only relaying Shree Hari's instructions to you.' Brahmanand swami walked between the rows and repeated the same message over and over again. The saints, not wishing to disobey Narayanmuni, ate everything that was served in their plates. Shree Hari then asked the Brahmins to serve rice and lentils to the saints. The saints had probably never eaten so much in their life before. They were more than satisfied by the holy Prasad at their Lord's hands. Though Shree Hari asked saints to return to their quarters once they had finished lunch and washed their hands, the saints remained behind to continue enjoying Shree Hari's divine

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! After serving the saints and Varnis, Shree Hari asked Uttam Khachar to ask the Kshatriya devotees to come for their lunch. Excited at an opportunity to be served by Bhagwan Himself, all the Kshatriya devotees, after washing their hands and feet, hurried up to the dining area where Shree Hari directed them in rows as appropriate. On getting the approval from Lord Narayanmuni, the Brahmins and saints started serving the devotees quickly. Shree Hari walked between the rows to greet various devotees and made sure that everyone was served the food properly before returning to His seat. O king! Shree Hari was attired in golden silk robes and had several flower garlands around His neck at that time. The devotees were repeatedly shouting 'Swaminarayan Bhagwan ni jay' at which Shree Hari smiled broadly. Shree Hari made sure that devotees were satiated with food before getting up to serve food Himself to fulfil His devotees' inner desires. Some saints immediately brought large pans full of various items. The saints, carrying large pans, walked backwards through the rows as Shree Hari served handfuls of Ladoos, Jalebi and other sweets in the devotees' plates with both hands by walking through the rows many times. Elated at getting Prasad from Shree Hari's hands, the devotees repeatedly asked for more as if they might never get such a divine opportunity ever again. Shree Hari made many trips through the rows calling out names of prominent devotees such as Soma Khachar, Alaiya Khachar, Ratanji, Jeeva Khachar etc. and serving them handfuls of sweets. The devotees in turn were elated at Lord Swaminarayan's repeated Darshan at such a close distance and divine Prasad. They ate to the content of not only their stomachs but their hearts as well."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Sura Khachar was slowly biting a piece of Jalebi, unable to take it any more, when Shree Hari came near him and put two extra pieces of Jalebi in his plate. Sura Khachar pleaded, 'O Lord! Have mercy on me! My stomach may rupture due to overindulgence.' Shree Hari replied, 'O Sura! Do not worry about your stomach. Let it burst. One must not care about such things when eating Prasad.' Shree Hari went to Naja who was already moving his hands violently to decline to any more food. Yet Shree Hari served him three pieces of Jalebi util he cried out loud with mock anger in his eyes to indicate no. Lord Hari went to Soma Khachar and said, 'Soma, think! You must have some. Otherwise, Uttam Khachar sitting next to you will politely decline Khaja out of respect for an elder devotee like you.' Saying this, Shree Hari served two pieces of Khaja in Soma Khachar's plate. Old and toothless Matra Dhadhal declined aloud further servings as Shree Hari approached him. Knowing that this refusal is not final, Shree Hari served him rice pudding. Shree Hari served four Ladoos in Hamirji's plate. Though he kept indicating no by movements of his hands, Shree Hari knew that this was due to his politeness rather than real refusal, so served four more Ladoos in his plate. O king! Shree Hari took turns to serve all His Kshatriya devotees until they were unable to eat any more. The saints remained in His vicinity with large pans full of various types of sweets."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Brahmanand swami, following Lord Narayanmuni closely behind repeatedly said aloud, 'O devotees! Do not worry about your stomachs. Eat much more than you can manage. Do not even be concerned about death due to overindulgence. Such Prasad is not available easily.' This caused a giggle among devotees. Encouraged by Brahmanand swami's sharp comment, Shree Hari went through the rows once again to serve devotees with His own hands to His heart's content before returning to His seat. O king! The sweat beads on Shree Hari's forehead shone as if they were pearls. Shree Hari asked all the male devotees to return to their rest rooms and requested serving saints and female devotees to have their lunch before He retired to Akshar Bhuvan (His personal quarters). After taking the bath for chastity, He cooked food which He offered to Lord Krishna before consuming residual food as Prasad. Saints also retired to their hospice after lunch. Lalita made sure that all visiting female devotees were fed properly. The whole courtyard echoed with the sounds of 'give' and 'take'. O king! There were so many people, that the process of serving food lasted until the evening yet the food did not run out. Lalita considered this as nothing but a miracle of Lord Swaminarayan. Her bewilderment at such a mercy and glory of Lord knew no bounds."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari organised such a grand Annakut festival through the medium of King Uttam Khachar. The fame of Uttam Khachar's ability to spend so much wealth so generously spread far and wide. The entire courtyard was decorated with lamps and lanterns again today as it was done yesterday. Shree Hari held a large congregation on the night of New Year's Day where He sat on a large Sinhasan in front of thousands of His devotees."

Thus ends the 21st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The devotees' mind and sight were fixed upon Shree Hari's radiant face in anticipation of a divine discourse. Nilkanth Varni did not disappoint His devotees."

Shree Narayanmuni said, 'O devotees! You are known as 'Satsangi' of our Udhhav Sampraday. You must behave as a Satsangi. According to our guru Ramanand swami, only 'Satsang' can give one Moksha, therefore, it is most important that you understand the correct definition of Satsang. Let Me elaborate the true meaning of Satsang. The word is made up of two syllables. The first, 'Sat' (eternal truth) is used to describe the set of four; Almighty Bhagwan, His devout saints, Dharma as espoused by Bhagwan and the scriptures that establish the sanctity of the first three. The omnipresent Lord Krishna, also known as Lord Vishnu, in a perfect human form is Bhagwan. His human manifestation, His deeds or indeed His forms are all divine,. His acts as an ordinary mortal man are nothing but His divine pretence. The saints, who worship Him exclusively and tread religious path shown by Him are 'Sat' (true) saints. Let Me reiterate the characteristics of 'Sat Dharma' as espoused by Lord Narayan Himself. Sage Narad has mentioned them (in the Shreemad Bhagwat) to King Yudhishthir at the conclusion of king's Rajsuya Yagna."

Sage Narad said, 'O King Yudhishthir! Bhagwan Narayan, almighty and eternal, is the sole reason people tread a religious path. You may ask who Lord Narayan is. He, along with His alter ego Lord Nar, was born of Murtidevi and Dharmadev and performs harsh austerity in Badrikaashram for the benevolence of His devotees. O king! I am retelling Dharma as I have heard from Lord Narayan Himself. Shree Narayan is the origin of Dharma and the Vedas. All ethics mentioned in the Vedas are Lord Narayan centric. Sages such as Yagnavalkya and Parashar later wrote extensive commentaries on the Vedas which became known as their Smrutis. A person who follows his appropriate (to his Varna and Ashram) Dharma mentioned in these Smrutis becomes chaste and fit to serve Lord Narayan. This is the ultimate goal of following Dharma. Truth, compassion, austerity, chastity, patience, discrimination of right and wrong, control of mind, control of senses, non violence, Brahamcharya, charity, study, honesty, satisfaction, serving pious, serving elders, withdrawal from mundane pleasures, understanding the reasons of sorrows, silence, knowledge of Aatma and body, sharing, realising the presence of God in all living beings, non enmity towards all humans and remaining engaged in nine pronged Bhakti (listen, sing, reminisce, physical service, worship, servility, friendship and total surrender) of almighty Lord Narayan are thirty elements of Dharma. O king! Omnipotent and omnipresent Lord Narayan is very pleased with a person who follows aforementioned Dharma of thirty characteristics in its entirety.'

Lord Shree Hari said, 'O devotees! Sage Narad described 'Sat' Dharma as such to King Yudhishthir. Now let me explain the meaning of each of these thirty qualities of Dharma in short. The truth is stating of the facts by which is beneficial to all. Therefore, do not speak, even if truth, which may cause death or harm to others. Feeling the pain of others and endeavour to negate that pain is called compassion. The compassion which binds (like King Bharat to a deer) or tolerates vices of close relative is unacceptable in our Sampraday. Fasting on the days of Ekadashi or to atone and to observe various Vratts is called austerity. Indeed, following one's Dharma is an austerity as well. Chastity is of two types; external and internal. Taking baths to the keep body clean, not touching sinners, not consuming alcohol or meat and not committing adultery is external chastity, while thinking well of others and subduing lust, anger etc. with the help of reading scriptures or listening to the discourse is inner chastity. Patience is to bear destined sorrows with equanimity. The fall from mountains or waylaid in a forest are said to be sorrows of places, the sorrows caused by elements is said to be the detrimental times and incurable diseases are the sorrows of the destiny. To differentiate between right and wrong Dharma of one's Varna and Ashram and rejecting others is the true understanding. Not to let the mind deviate due to anger, greed, lust etc. is the control of mind while not allowing any of the five senses to indulge in anti religious deeds is called the control of senses. Not to kill any living being, however small, or cause harm by thought, speech or deeds is called non violence. Not committing suicide at any holy shrine, even for the perceived aim of attaining Moksha or due to anger, fear of infamy or sorrows is non violence as well. Brahamcharya for celibates is to forsake women totally (thought, speech, company etc.). The householders must forsake women other than their lawfully wedded wives and not to indulge in sexual activities even with their wives on the days of Ekadashi and Vratts. Widows should observe Brahamcharya just as celibates while the married women must not even think (let alone associate or touch) of males other than their husbands.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'To donate cherished things, except one's wife, to the best of one's ability and willingly to a suitable person is called charity. One must study the Vedas and other scriptures to one's ability and chant the holy name of Bhagwan at all times. A devotee must act without any hypocrisy in front of eminent saints. He must appear as he is without any deceit and conceit. The real satisfaction is to accept willingly whatever God has rewarded him for his honest labour without coveting which is not his. One should control his desires as supplementary desires lead to desiring more and more. A person who has no enmity with anyone or who shows equal compassion towards foe and friend is a really pious person. My devotees must respect and serve such pious persons. A devotee must show respect to his elders, especially those who observe Brahamcharya and other Niyams and are devout. He should be more than willing to serve them in whatever ways. Mundane pleasures are the main reason for entrapping a man in the cycle of death and birth. A devotee should realise the negative influences of the mundane pleasures and slowly endeavour to withdraw from them. He should understand that the real reason for sorrows in this world is nothing but the blind race to indulge in mundane pleasures and unrelenting acquisition of objects of pleasures which cause nothing but pain in the end. The silence in a true sense to speak little after due thought rather than speaking relentlessly and unnecessarily. The true knowledge is to understand that an eternal and knowledgeable soul is distinct from a perishable body and a soul is one's true self rather than a visible body. Whatever wealth or food one has, it should be shared with one's dependants and alms seekers. O devotees! A true devotee must always remain engaged in any one of the following nine types of Bhakti of Lord Krishna; Listening to His Katha, Singing His Kirtans or narrating His Katha and virtues, reminiscing His Murti in one's heart at all times, Undertake His physical services such as massaging His feet and forehead, Bow down to Him or prostrate at His divine feet, Venerate Him with physical artefacts such as sandalwood paste, flowers or imagined artefacts in their physical absence, Undertake menial task just as His personal servant, Think of and love Him as a true benevolent friend and lastly, Total surrendering of wealth, hearth and self with thought, speech and body. O devotees! These are the thirty traits of 'Sat' Dharma'.

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! I explained three things that are prefixed with 'Sat'; Almighty Bhagwan, His saints and Dharma espoused by Him. The scriptures - long or short - in which all these three are attested are called 'Sat' Shastra. I consider these eight scriptures as Sat Shastra; the Vedas, Vyas (Saririk) Sutras, Shreemad Bhagwat, VidurNiti, VishnuSahasraNam, Bhagvad Gita, Yagnavalkya Smruti and Shree Vaasudev Mahatmya. Any other scriptures that have the same or similar central theme may be considered as Sat Shastra. Now the second syllable of the word 'Satsang'. 'Sang' (association) is used in four contexts; To venerate and remain engaged in Lord Krishna's Bhakti with total faith in His greatness and potency; To serve His saints with food and clothes, venerate them with sandalwood paste and flowers, listen to their discourses and follow their guidance with mind, speech and body; Never to deviate or digress from the path of Dharma, even in detrimental times; Listen to and study the aforementioned scriptures to understand Bhagwan's greatness and enhance and strengthen one's Bhakti in Bhagwan and narrate their Katha to others. O devotees! A person who associates heartily with four things prefixed with 'Sat' - Bhagwan, saints, Dharma and scriptures - is called a 'Satsangi' in our Udhhav Sampraday. These 'Satsangi'(devotees) are often called with six other pseudo names - Ekantik, Bhakta, Sadhu, saint, Bhagvat and Satvat. With whatever names they are referred to, they invariably go to Golok at the time of death where Lord Krishna eternally resides with Laxmiji and Radha.'

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, 'O devotees! 'Asat'(false or pretentious) is the contradictory term of 'Sat'. A person who forsakes these four 'Sat' (Bhagwan etc.) invariably gets tangled in 'Asat'. They are known as 'Kusangi', as opposed to 'Satsangi'. They venerate Time, Maya, Karma, nature or Tamas Devtas such as Bhairav, mistakenly thinking them supreme. In fact, Maya etc. are subordinates to Bhagwan and therefore are called 'Asat' Ishwar. The saints who worship Time, Maya etc. or other inconsequential Devtas instead of almighty Lord Vishnu or act contrary to Dharma attested by the Shruti and Smruti are called 'Asat' saints. Greed, lust, anger, hypocrisy, deceit, ego, violence etc. are traits of Adharma. People engulfed in such vices may pretend to be religious, but they are indeed unreligious. Their external behaviour may appear good but it is only a camouflage. The scriptures that do not reflect the true philosophy of Shruti and Smruti and attest 'Asat' Ishwar, 'Asat' saints and Adharma are 'Asat' Shastra. O devotees! A person who keeps 'Sang' with any of these four 'Asat' is variably called Nastik, Asur, Pakhandi or Dambhi. They invariably end up with similar minded gurus and remain forever entangled in wealth and women. Such 'Kusangi' persons do come under the shelter of true saints sometimes. However, they cannot fathom their religious ways and are unable to follow the strict regime, so they return back to their evil gurus. Such gurus along with their disciples indeed end up in Hell.'

Lord Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! I have enlightened you with the true meaning of word 'Satsangi'. Knowing this truth, you must always associate with these four 'Sat'. Whoever listens to this discourse will become free from ignorance and the never ending cycle of death and life.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The whole congregation realised that whom Shree Sahajanand Swami referred to as Lord Krishna, the supreme Bhagwan, is none other than Himself present in the assembly in their midst. Lord Shree Hari retired to His personal quarters after asking devotees to return to their respective hospices."

Thus ends the 22nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-23

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The next day, on Kartik Sud Beej, King Uttam Khachar served sweet rice pudding to all the saints along with many other sweets left over from the Annakut celebration. Another assembly was held in the evening and Lord Swaminarayan arrived to take His seat on an ornate Sinhasan. Shree Hari thought of sending the saints to distant places to spread His gospel for the benevolence of mankind. Uttam Khachar approached Shree Hari at his sister Jaya's behest and said, 'O Maharaj! You fulfilled all of my sister Lalita's desires by celebrating the festival of Annakut very grandly. Now it is Jaya's turn to have her desires fulfilled. The festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi is approaching. I request You to ask the saints and other devotees to remain in Gadhpur until Kartik Purnima and dine at my palace. I know I am only the medium, everything that happens is by Your express wish.' Shree Hari glanced at Lalita standing at a distance with a benign smile and nodded His head to indicate His assent. King Uttam nonetheless relayed Shree Hari's assent to Lalita. Excited Lalita rushed off immediately to gather everything needed for the festival just as Jaya had gathered for the Annakut festival. Shree Hari addressed the congregation, 'O saints! O devotees! Stay back in Gadhpur until Kartik Purnima. Those of you who cook yourselves should collect grains, pulses, etc. from the store and the rest should come and dine in the communal kitchen twice a day for the next thirteen days."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The devotees happily followed Shree Hari's instruction and remained in Gadhpur. Uttam Khachar's courtyard teemed with the movement of saints and devotees. He prepared various varieties of sweets laced with ample Ghee to feed saints and devotees. Shree Hari made inquiries on the preparation of food by visiting the kitchens as often as He did prior to Annakut and proffering advice to Jayaba. Lalitaba, Rama, Ganga etc. female devotees and male devotees including Prabhashankar helped tirelessly in the kitchen just as they did during the Annakut festival. Uttam Khachar arranged the collection of grains, pulses, spices, Ghee, oil etc. needed from various sources at the behest of Jayaba. Shree Hari held evening assemblies daily where He answered devotees' and saints' theological questions. O king! The first such assembly was held on the third bright day of Kartik after evening Aarti and Dhun. Shree Hari asked devotees to ask Him any question as, only a query can cast aside one's doubts and ignorance. King Hemantsinh, to enhance and strengthen Bhagwat Dharma in his heart, came forward to ask the first question."

Thus ends the 23rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-24

King Hemantsinh asked, 'O Bhagwan! How can we, male and female devotees alike, guard our Dharma? How do we augment and strengthen our Dharma? How do we enhance our faith in Lord Krishna? And what causes the regression of Dharma and faith in our lives? These are my four questions.'

Lord Narayanmuni replied, 'O king! Let me first explain how you should guard your Dharma. Satsang is the best means to protect your Dharma. It is also the root cause of augmentation and enhancement of Dharma, devotion and faith. Therefore, you must always associate with divine persons. Association with demonic persons leads to regression of Dharma and faith from one's life. O king! You may wonder how to recognise divine and demonic persons as outwardly, both types of persons extol and espouse Dharma, Gnaan, Vairagya and Bhakti to the same extent. They dress and address similarly. However, while divine persons are genuinely nice, the demonic persons are evil and pretentious. The divine persons tread the religious path honestly and just for their salvation and to please Bhagwan, while demonic persons are hypocrites who secretly covet wealth, women and conceit. Just as a mouse bites slowly and clandestinely, the demonic persons covertly extol Dharma while overtly corrode its roots. O king! It is very important to recognise divine and demonic persons as their association augments or destroys Dharma and faith. I will explain to you their traits and the reward you reap by associating with them. Omnipotent, omnipresent, merciful Lord Vaasudev independently manifests Himself upon this earth for the benevolence of mankind. He has manifested as Lord NarNarayan, Dattatreya, Rhishabhdev, KapilDev, Shree Ram, Shree Krishna etc. and others. They have annihilated demons who tried to destroy Dharma, saints and Devtas. They should be worshipped by mankind as they have re-established Dharma in this world. The Shreemad Bhagwat narrates how previous Avatars destroyed demons, explains the types of demons and how they are born. O king! I shall reiterate it all as answers to your questions.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O King Hemantsinh! At the beginning of creation, Brahma created ignorance from the shadow of his intelligence. Ignorance is of five types; Tam (not able to differentiate between right and wrong), Moha (confusion), Mahamoha (intense desire to indulge in mundane pleasures), Tamisra (anger) and Andh Tamisra (death). This ignorance entered and took over the minds of Asuras, demons and Yakshas created from Brahma's thighs. Adharma and its offsprings such as anger, lust, greed, conceit, jealousy, fear, envy, ego etc. from Brahma's back, entered the corrupted intelligence of Asuras. Influenced by such vices, Asuras started creating havoc in the world by indulging in the consumption of meat and alcohol, stealing, adultery and violence, so much so, that they started harassing their creator, Brahma. Realising his folly, Brahma gave up the body from which Asuras and Adharma was created. The forsaken body took the form of a maiden - Sandhya (evening) which eventually grew into a night. Asuras and the demons roamed this world unhindered and indulged in ant-ireligious activities. Their influence and power increased at night. They considered Adharma as the means to achieve happiness in this and the next world.'

Sahajanand Swami continued, 'O king! Brahma accepted a new body and created Devtas and humans from it while focusing his mind on Bhagwan. Brahma created Dharma (personified) from his right side of his bosom followed by Dharma's thirteen wives; Shradhhaa (faith), Daya (compassion), Shanti (serenity), Tushti (satisfaction), Pushti (encouragement), Kriya (ethical effort), Unnati (ascent), Budhhi (intelligence), Medha (retentive memory), Titiksha (patience) and Hree (modesty or fear from shame). Gnaan, Vairagya, austerity, happiness etc. are Dharma's offspring. Dharma with his family entered in the minds of Devtas, Rishis and humans and as a result, they behaved religiously and considered Dharma as the sole means to achieve happiness in this world and the next. O king! Adharma with its associated vices such as greed, lust etc. is ignorance while Dharma with its associated virtues such as knowledge, detachment etc. is enlightening. Dharma is divine while Adharma is demonic. Lord Krishna has described divine and demonic traits at a greater detail in the Bhagvad Gita. Dharma leads to Moksha whereas Adharma leads to the shackles of the cycle of birth and death. The Devtas, Rishis and humans are naturally divine while Asuras are naturally demonic. However, due to adverse times place, actions or company demonic traits enter in Devtas and humans, they behave like demons. For example, Indra, the king of Devtas, under the influence of his demanding wife Sachi, fought against Lord Krishna - Whom he used to worship, for a possession of a flowering shrub. Similarly, under the influence of auspicious time, place, actions or company, the divinity enters demons and they become famed devotees. Prahalad, a son of a demon became known as one of the greatest devotees of Lord Vishnu as a result of his association with Sage Narad. His grandson, King Bali, made Lord Vishnu helpless with his divine trait of charity, steadfastness and total surrender to Bhagwan after giving up his demonic traits of stubbornness and conceit. Humans, though naturally divine, act like Asuras under the influence of an inauspicious place or time. Drona, Bhishma and Kripacharya are the prime examples. Due to his association with the demonic Duryodhan, Adharma traits such as greed and ego entered them. Under the influence of such demonic vices, they waged a war with Nar incarnate Arjun and Lord Krishna. They became divine again as and when the demonic traits left them. O king! Humans, under the influence of an auspicious time or place, sometimes behave in such an exemplary way that they attain the status of Devtas or become known as Devtas. Kadarya and Pingla (a prostitute) are the prime examples who attained higher divinity after giving up all vices under the influence of Dattatreya Bhagwan.

Shree Hari continued, 'O king! Dharma and Adharma are opposing factors of a life and hence a continuous state of war exists between the two. Adharma, with the help of Asuras is always looking for an opportunity to weaken them by entering into their intelligence through a minute chink created by digression from the path of Dharma. The Devtas on other hand try to gain their strength through strict observances of Dharma. Normally, the Devtas gain an upper hand in this war. However, whenever Devtas transgress from Dharma due to adverse time or place, the Asuras win the battle. People of this world are known as Devtas or Asuras according to their association with and their natural affinity with Dharma or Adharma respectively. O king! Whenever Asuras gain greater advantage, Bhagwan manifest on this world to annihilate them. Their destruction is of two types; to kill them physically or to destroy their vices from within. Often as Lord Ram or Shree Krishna, Bhagwan kills demons with arrows or other weapons. Sometimes, rather than killing them, Bhagwan, in the garb of ascetic, destroys their vices such as greed and anger and frees them from their irreligious way of life. He destroys any Adharma that has entered the Devtas due to inauspicious time, place or company at such times. As an ascetic, Bhagwan never directly kills any Demons as He practices total non violence at such times. Whichever form He takes, people should worship only Him as His incarnations are only for their benevolence. Only sometimes He, independently, becomes personally visible in human form to His devotees, while at most other times He remains invisible. Whenever He is invisible in His human form, the devotees must venerate Him in His Murti form.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O king! Now let me explain the traits of true saints. A person who is not licentious or greedy, whose senses and mind are under his control, who is friendly towards all living beings, compassionate, merciful, patience and who holds Dharma dear to himself is called a true Sadhu. The saints with higher intelligence associate only with other likeminded pious persons. They realise the omnipresence of Bhagwan at all times, even when He chooses not to be visible in His human form. They remain within their ethical boundaries and feel His presence at all times. The saints with a lower level of intelligence become bold in His (perceived) absence and associate with Adharma. They, thinking that almighty Bhagwan will protect them always, associate with evil persons. They are immediately overwhelmed by Adharma and behave just like Asuras. A true devotee must only associate with the first type of saints who observe their Dharma such as Brahamcharya, Ahinsa etc. My devotees should consider only such saints reverential. Even almighty Bhagwan becomes helpless in front of such exemplary saints. O king! My devotees must stay away from the second type of saints who are saints only in name and physical appearance. Adharma has beleaguered them. One can never attain Moksha or Bhagwan's pleasure by serving and revering such fake saints. Dharma and devotion in Bhagwan gain ascendency as a result of associating and serving the first type of true saints while association with the second type of fake saints destroys one's Dharma and devotion. Therefore, My devotees must always associate with the pious and never with the evil. A man is able to distinguish between evil and pious through the study of the scriptures. As women do not have such sharp intelligence, they must avoid direct contact with saints, good or fake. They must focus their energy on a Murti form of Bhagwan when He is personally not present in His human form. They may go and listen to discourses by pious saints only with other close male relatives but never on their own. A father, son or brother must make sure that the saint's assembly they intend to visit is really a pious saint before taking women with them. Many fake saints in the garb of ascetics are better at narration and hide their deficiency in Dharma with extreme pretence. They are difficult to mark out as fake due to their hypocrisy. A wise devotee may be able to recognise such fakes from the description given in the scriptures. Therefore, o king! Let Me reiterate the traits of true saints.'

Sahajanand Swami continued, 'O king! A true and pious saint does not deviate even slightly from his Dharma such as Brahamcharya, non violence or not amassing wealth. He never indulges in praising himself. He performs suitable atonement for an inadvertent transgression. He respects and fears omnipresent Bhagwan as if He is present in front of him in human form even when He is not present in this world in His human form. He suffers great mental agony by an accidental transgression and shows great remorse for it. Indeed, he treats a small transgression just as a huge transgression like killing a Brahmin. A true saint fears the proximity ofa woman just as he fears the proximity of a lion. O king! A male householder must use this yardstick to determine the chastity of a true saint before allowing a female devotee to accompany him to listen to his discourses. A wise devotee must try to recognise a fake saint who is perennially conceited, hypocritical, spiteful, lusty and greedy. A fake saint does not bother to atone or express remorse even for many transgressions from Dharma as described by Bhagwan Himself in the Vaasudev Mahatmya. He is never afraid to commit any sins or deviate from His Dharma. To cover up his transgressions, he extols Bhagwan's mercy and leniency to such a degree to imply that merciful Bhagwan always pardons His devotee's transgressions. A fake Sadhu holds that uttering Bhagwan's name just once is enough to erase all sins and the strength in His name is always greater than a man's capacity to commit sins. A fake saint induces like minded female devotees to embrace him, citing scriptures saying that even touching the feet of a saint redeems one from her accumulated sins. He praises his own accomplishments, knowledge and wisdom. He criticises pious saints' virtue of not touching women saying that they have not attained the elevated status equal to him whereas he is beyond the fear of sin of touching a woman. He depicts his inability to stay away from women as a virtue rather than a vice. The fake saints espouse a heinous theory that as they have attained the status of Brahm - a soul that has attained Moksha and the universe is Brahm -eternal entity, they are not subject to the result of their Karma - bad or good. They claim to be able to see Lord Krishna playing Raas with the Gopis in Golok, His abode. They espouse that anybody who serves and reveres them will indeed attain Golok. The fake Sadhus advocate that the copulation between man and woman is the ultimate bliss described in the Vedas whereas; the Vedas actually define the ultimate bliss as seeing Brahm - supreme Bhagwan, in person. O king! They mislead naive devotees by such smooth talk and deviate them from the true path of religion. Anyone who associates with such fake saints indeed ends up in Hell to suffer its punishments.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O King Hemantsinh! Such fake Sadhus are very difficult to recognise and their true colours are known only after spending some time with them. They become candid among like minded people and confess that their charade of religiosity is to lure people away from the path of Dharma. They admit amongst themselves that their facade of Bhakti, Gnaan and Vairagya is to amass the wealth and indulge in mundane and lascivious pleasures. They put on a mask of respectability in the presence of the pious devotees and start propounding the virtues of knowledge, detachment and ethics. Their real thoughts can be known only after spending considerable time with them and pretending to concur with them. Their habits of consuming alcohol and meat, meeting women clandestinely, stealing and amassing wealth and violent tendencies become known only after spending time with them. Just as Bhagwan endeavours to establish Dharma in this world, fake Sadhus endeavour harder to uproot the same. My male householder devotees must never take women devotees to meet such fake Sadhus nor listen to their discourses. Indeed, male devotees must not associate with such fakes after recognising their true intents. The female devotees must concentrate their minds and worship only the Murti form of Bhagwan for their benevolence. Whoever, no matter how devout, associates with such Asat saints will fall from the path of Dharma, earn infamy in this world and go to Hell after his death. O king! Anyone desirous of Moksha must pay attention to these words of Mine.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! King Hemantsinh and other devotees present in the assembly were pleased to listen to such a profound discourse on how to defend their Dharma. They went to their respective quarters at His behest at the end of the discourse after Shree Hari returned to Akshar Bhuvan (His personal quarters). O king! Shree Hari has espoused these principles of Sanatan Dharma from the heart of many scriptures. Whoever reads or listens to this discourse reverentially will indeed attain Moksha."

gathered devotees. Shree Hari said impromptu, 'O householder and celibate devotees! Listen to Me carefully. I am about to explain the drawbacks of a man touching a woman and vice versa. I shall tell you what is benevolent to you as all of you have come unto My shelter. There are two types of women in this world. The first type of women, widely known as 'Sadhvi', 'Sati' or 'Pativrata', leads a religious life while the second type, widely known as 'Punschali', 'Krutya' or 'Kulta' leads an irreligious and anarchical life. A Sati is afraid of an inadvertent touch of a male other than her close relative, except in dire emergency, just as one fears a deadly snake. An accidental touch of a male is as painful as claws of a monkey or flames of fire to her. A Punschali does not mind if a male touches her or she touches a male. She is not afraid of a situation which may lead to touching any sundry male. O devotees! There are also two types of men. The first type are chaste, pious and lead a religious life who do not ever touch other women while the other type lead irreligious lives and have no such scruples of not touching a woman. Direct touch or contact between a man and woman (other than close relatives), even if accidental, is a sin. Therefore, it is prudent that a man and a woman do not touch each other. Let Me elaborate further on this topic.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! The scriptures consider a widow as most inauspicious. Therefore, male disciples of our Udhhav Sampraday must never touch a widow and similarly, a widow must never touch any male. A man must take an immediate bath, still fully clothed, upon accidental touch of a widow and a widow must do the same for a similar transgression. Both of them must undergo a day of fast following the bath if that touch was intentional. There are two atonements shown for a widow touching a man with a lascivious intention. She should undergo a fast for two days if the touch was in a secluded place and unknown to others, otherwise she should undergo a Chandrayan Vratt if such an intentional lascivious touch becomes public knowledge. She will suffer great pains and ignominy in this world and terrible pains of Hell after death if she refuses to atone for this sin due to lethargy or fear of physical discomfort. O devotees! Similar repentance is espoused for a man touching a widow lasciviously. If such a touch happened in a seclude place without public knowledge, a man should observe a fast for two days and must undergo a Chandrayan Vratt if such incident becomes public knowledge. A man who does not follow this atonement for any reason will indeed court ignominy in this world and dreadful punishments of Hell including consumption of blood, faeces and urine.'

He continued, 'O devotees! For a woman upon death of her husband, a strict Brahamcharya becomes her primary Dharma. The touch of a man is a serious and major breach of her Brahamcharya Vratt, therefore, neither should she touch any male nor should a man be the cause of such grave sin by touching her. A sin of a widow touching another man lasciviously is equivalent of a married woman indulging in a sexual act with a man other than her lawfully wedded husband. Similarly, a man's sin of touching a widow lasciviously is equivalent to indulging in a sexual act with a woman other than his wife. The same sin befalls on celibate saints, Brahamcharis or Sanyasis for touching any woman. Therefore my widow and male devotees must always guard against touching a person of the opposite sex. However, there are some justifiable excuses when a widow is permitted to touch a male in limited circumstances. It is not considered a sin for a widow to touch a Brahmin during the process of some religious rites such as veneration or while giving alms or a donation, provided, it does not happen in seclusion. Both, a Brahmin and widow must undergo a Chandrayan Vratt if they touch each other in seclusion even for the aforementioned purpose. An unintentional and unavoidable touch of a widow and a man during the mass gathering of some religious event is not considered a sin either. A limited physical contact between a male doctor or barber and a widow is not a sin provided that someone is present throughout. Any such contact in seclusion is a sin and both parties must atone it with one day of fasting.

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! An occasion may arise when a widow may need to come into direct physical contact with a man. Such a contact, totally unavoidable, is not considered a sin if that male happens to be the widow's close relative. The scriptures define the following males as close relatives; father, brother, uncle, son, maternal grandfather, maternal uncle, their sons and grandsons, guru, his son, father in law, brothers in law, their sons, her grandsons and great grandsons and under whose tutelage she is living in absence of close relatives or abandoned by them, provided they are moral persons. Similarly there are some circumstances such as peril to a life due to drowning, fire etc., helping to heave a load on one's head, buying and selling, the physical contact between a widow and a man - even a stranger, is not considered a sin. Even the sight of a widow is considered ominous while setting out on a travel or start of an auspicious task. Some calamity may strike if a widow comes face to face at the onset of travel so one must immediately chant Bhagwan's name as a way out. The blessing of a widow is considered as malevolent as the poison of a snake. In short, a man must always guard against the malevolent influence of a widow. O devotees! A man must not remain in seclusion with his own widowed mother, step mother, a sister or a daughter except in emergency. Both of them must undergo a fast for a day for such an unintentional lapse. A deliberate or lascivious contact must be atoned with a Chandrayan Vratt. A man must not walk alone with a widowed close relative. The company of a young man and a young woman in seclusion is prohibited in all circumstances in the scriptures. It is a moral duty for a father, son or brother to protect his widowed relative from the roving eyes and touch of a strange man. Do not assume that all people gathered at social functions such as weddings, religious events, pilgrimages etc. are chaste. Lascivious men and fake saints frequently attend such gathering with the sole aim of trapping women in their webs and they are not there to observe the sanctity of the event. My devout disciples must protect their women relatives at such events by keeping a close eye on them. A female devotee wavering from her Brahamcharya Vratt should be suitably advised, cajoled, offered financial reward, assistance or threatened mildly by my wise male disciples to bring her back on the path of Dharma. However, they must not be beaten up, killed or forced to commit suicide.'

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! The kings and gurus have a more pronounced duty than other members of a society to protect women. They must advise their subjects and disciples accordingly and protect widows from unwanted advances from men. A king or guru suffers terrible punishments of Hell for their failure to impose the laws of Dharma. Not only that, king's or guru's Pitris become their partners in this sin and suffers the agonies of Hell. This ethical boundary had been established by our guru, Ramanand swami during his lifetime. Any person not abiding by this limitation shall be considered excommunicated from our Udhhav Sampraday. They will suffer ignominy and false allegation against their character and Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Nobody had an iota of doubt regarding Shree Hari's doctrine. They collectively concurred with Bhagwan Shree Hari and pledged to behave exactly as He had said. O king! Whoever listens to, reads or narrates this discourse on the sin of touch shall attain great fame in this world and Akshardham upon his death."

Thus ends the 25th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-26

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan held another assembly in the evening of Kartik Sud Panchmi, soon after the evening Aarti and prayers. The saints and other devotees were seated in front of Shree Hari sitting on His ornate Sinhasan. Shukanand swami asked Shree Hari, 'O Lord! There are many hindrances on the path of Dharma. What are the means that help Your Satsangis accomplish his Dharma? "

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, 'The eight - place, time, company, deeds, meditation (on Murti), scriptures, Diksha (initiation) and Mantra (chanting of Bhagwan's name) - are factors that influence ascent or descent of Dharma. Dharma of a person ascends if these eight are positive while Dharma of a person is destroyed when these eight are unfavourable. Therefore, My disciples must associate with only good time, place etc. O Muni! I shall tell you which time, place, etc. are considered auspicious.

Narayanmuni continued, 'The place is considered auspicious where people of four Varnas and four Ashrams are cohabiting amicably; where people are engaged in the acquisition of knowledge and are undergoing regular austerity; where a large number of Bhagwan's devotees reside and where numerous temples exist and Murtis of Bhagwan within are worshipped ritually and regularly. The places situated on banks of holy rivers or lakes and have become known as shrines are always considered auspicious. Kurukshetra, Gaya, Prayag, PulahAshram, Naimisharnya, FalgunKshetra, Rameshwar, Prabhas, Dwarika, Kashi, Mathura, Ayodhya, Chitrkoot, Badrikaashram, KapilAshram, Panchvati, Pampa Sarovar, Bindu Sarovar and seven great Mountains - Mahendrachal, Malay, Sahyadri, Shuktiman, Ruksha, Vindhyachal and Pariyatra - are some of the auspicious places. The Punya of any activity undertaken to enhance one's Dharma such as donation, austerity is multiplied by many folds if done at these auspicious places. My disciples must endeavour to reside in auspicious places. O Muni! There are some places My disciples should not reside at. The places which are barren or desert; where there are no temples; where devotees do not live; where a king or his ministers take theirsubject's wealth and women forcefully and harass the weak and innocent; where drinking water is polluted with disease causing bacteria and where people are irreligious and engage in the consumption of meat and alcohol, prostitution, plunder and theft are considered inauspicious. My disciples should move away from places if they become prone to repeated assaults by foreign armies, if any contagious disease breaks out, if people are forced to sell their wives and sons due to starvation or if it is subject to repeated natural calamities such as floods, droughts, earthquakes etc. even if those places happen to be auspicious.'

Sahajanand Swami continued, 'O Muni! An early morning before sunrise is always considered auspicious to conduct Bhagwan's worship while the afternoon is considered auspicious to offer oblation to Pitris. The times when the Sun is migrating from the Zodiac of Capricorn, Cancer or Aries; the duration of lunar or solar eclipses, death anniversaries of parents and dates and times of birth of one's self and family members, are also considered auspicious. Furthermore, all Ekadashi, Dwadashi (the twelfth day of lunar fortnight) and Purnima (full moon day), Vaishakh Sud Trij (Akshay Tritiya), Kartik Sud Navmi (ninth day), Maha Sud Satam (seventh day), Vaishakh Vad Chaturthi (fourth day), Vad Atham (dark eight day) of months of Magsar, Posh, Maha and Falgun, any Satam falling on Sunday, any Atham falling on Wednesday, any Choth (fourth day) falling on Tuesday, any Amavasya (moonless day) falling on Sunday and Kapila Shashthi are considered auspicious days. The very early mornings when one sees dreams of Bhagwan and His devotees or whenever one hears the divine chanting of Bhagwans name are also auspicious times. The dates of Bhagwan's manifestation such as RamNavmi and Janmashtami are always auspicious days. O Muni! Punya of any pious deeds such as donations, prayers, chants, venerations, oblations or feeding cows, dogs and ants done on these days or times becomes eternal. O Muni! The dusks and midnights and the durations of Sutak of birth or death are normally considered boding evil. The time whenever the sky is engulfed with unseasonal clouds, lightning or an earthquake strikes, one dreams of snakes, spirits or ghosts in early mornings or suffers financial loss and the times of drought are inauspicious.'

Lord Shree Hari continued, 'O Muni! Being engaged in any one type of Bhagwan's Bhakti such as listening to His Katha or singing Kirtans, performing non sacrificial Yagnas, donating wealth to suitable recipients, undergoing any type of austerity, observing religious Niyams, venerating pious Brahmins or saints or visiting holy shrines are all pious deeds. Killing or tormenting any living beings, consuming meat or alcohol, speaking harshly or untruthfully, stealing, gambling, associating or flirting with women, insulting Brahmins or saints or committing any sins are inauspicious deeds. My disciples must refrain from inauspicious deeds. O Muni! Meditating upon the whole Murti or any single part of the body of Lord Shree Vaasudev, omnipresent and omnipotent, Who is the supreme Bhagwan, is pious meditation. One may meditate upon the places or artefacts associated with Bhagwan such as flute, mace etc. while meditating upon Him. Meditating upon meat or alcohol consuming deities such as KalBhairav, Goddess Kalika or spirits to acquire powers of black magic is considered inauspicious meditation.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O Muni! The scriptures that narrate the life, times and Leelas of Bhagwan's incarnations such as Lord Ram and Lord Krishna or tales of devotion of His staunch devotees such as Sage Narad, Udhhavji etc. are considered auspicious scriptures. Furthermore, auspicious scriptures must espouse and attest the divine human form of Bhagwan at all times. Any scripture that contradicts the above requirement is considered inauspicious scriptures. The scriptures that negate or criticise, however subtly, the divine human form of Bhagwan (Saakaar), His numerous incarnations, His true devotees, His doctrine of righteousness and devotion and knowledge imparted by Him extolling the true relationship between soul, body, Maya and Him are inauspicious scriptures. Any other scriptures that espouse the worship of KalBhairav, Goddess Kali or any other minor or inconsequential deities with meat and alcohol are to be considered inauspicious as well. O Muni! into a Sampraday must be serene and attractive to look at for that Diksha to be considered auspicious. A pledge to behave morally and conform to religious ethics must follow a Diksha for it to be called auspicious. A Diksha, following which a man looks horrendous and frightening to look at; in which a man is not forbidden to consume alcohol, meat and other intoxicating substances or is allowed to indulge in adultery, can never help men attain salvation. Therefore, the wise call such a Diksha inauspicious. O Muni! My disciples must chant only auspicious hymns which have various names of Bhagwan such as Ram, Krishna, Narayan, Vaasudev, Hari, Nar, Keshav etc. The hymns which extol KalBhairav or Goddess Kali and are chanted to acquire magical powers of black magic are inauspicious hymns and My disciple must never chant them.

Bhagwan Swaminarayan continued, 'O Muni! Association with true Ekantik devotees and saints is called auspicious association. Such Ekantik devotees are recognised by their characteristics described in the scriptures. I will describe these characteristics in short. An Ekantik devotee observes all his Vratts including Brahamcharya, behaves within the boundary of his Varna and Ashram Dharma and forsakes wealth. He has overcome anger, lust, greed, ego, worldly desires, possessiveness, jealousy, selfishness, violence and all his senses are under his firm control. He venerates Bhagwan and His incarnations with total faith and spends all his time in Bhagwan's Bhakti. Their company is called an auspicious association. Furthermore, reading Sat scriptures (as described earlier), residing in an auspicious place during auspicious times is auspicious association. Keeping company of evil people is called inauspicious association. One must recognise such evil people through their characteristics. Such evil people are against Bhagwan and His devotees; do not have faith in the sanctity of scriptures; indulge in adultery and other vices such as gambling, consumption of meat, alcohol, onions, garlic, tobacco etc. and are overwhelmed by anger, greed, lust, ego, violence etc. They do not appreciate great virtues of devotees such as Brahamcharya, and indulge in nitpicking in devotees' behaviour. They praise themselves while insulting others and level false allegations against others for their selfish ends. They do not appreciate the fact that they have been given the human birth due to Bhagwan's mercy, and instead of working for Moksha, waste their human life running after worldly pleasures. They consider destiny and their effort as the main guiding factors in their life rather than the supremacy of Bhagwan's will. My devotees should recognise such evil people and never associate with them as their company is considered inauspicious. Moreover, reading Asat scriptures (as defined earlier), residing in inauspicious places is also inauspicious association.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O Muni! I described auspicious and inauspicious places, times, company etc. in short. Associating with the auspicious eight enhances one's intelligence while associating with the inauspicious eight regresses one's intelligence. A man behaves under the influence of these eight and is rewarded accordingly. For their own benefit, My disciples must give up any of the eight inauspicious eight and associate with the auspicious eight. Just as drinking nectar unknowingly still results in immortality, associating with the auspicious eight, even unintentionally, still frees one from the cycle of birth and death. Any association with the inauspicious eight deviates a religious person and leads him on the path of sin and eventually to Hell, just as alcohol intoxicates both fool and the learned equally. When a scholar is misled by bad influence of the inauspicious eight, what indeed can be said of an ordinary man? O Muni! You may wonder how that is possible. It is simple! It is the basic characteristic of the inauspicious eight. Just as a man is not able to give up his inherent bad nature, the inauspicious eight are inherently evil. Whoever associates with the auspicious eight regularly attains bliss in this world and Lord Krishna's supreme abode upon death to enjoy its eternal pleasures, while whoever associates with any of the eight inauspicious elements will digress from the path of Dharma and suffer terrible sorrows in this world and punishments of Hell upon his death. Therefore, O Muni! Anybody desirous of happiness, salvation and enhancement and wishes to strengthen His Dharma must never associate with any of the inauspicious eight.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Shukanand swami and others present in the assembly were very pleased with Shree Hari's benevolent sermon and they pledged to follow the path shown by Him. Bhagwan Sahajanand Himself has narrated this path to enhance one's Dharma which is attested by the Vedas. Whoever listens to, reads or narrates this regularly will have his faith strengthened in Dharma and will attain great happiness in this and the next world."

CHAPTER-27

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! Lord Shree Hari held another assembly on the next day, Kartik Sud Chhatth, where as usual, He sat on an ornate Sinhasan and saints and devotees sat in front of Him in proper hierarchical order. The female devotees sat at the rear of the assembly, keeping some distance. Brahmanand swami bowed down to Shree Hari and asked on behalf of all the saints, ‘O Bhagwan! Many Brahamcharis like me have become Your disciples. We observe the Brahamcharya Vratt as prescribed by You, however, an occasion may arise when we might accidently touch a woman. We understand that this is a transgression from our Brahamcharya Vratt. Be gracious, and show us what atonement we must carry out to redeem ourselves from this sin of touching a woman. O king! Always prepared to protect His numerous disciples from any transgression, Lord Shree Hari benevolently addressed all the saints and Brahmanand swami in particular.”

Bhagwan Narayanmuni said, ‘O Muni! A Brahamchari must never knowingly deviate from his Brahamcharya Vratt, however, even an inadvertent deviation must be atoned immediately. Repentance not only chastens Brahamchari from his transgression but it gives him mental strength from future transgressions. A Brahamchari Sadhu must undergo a fast of one day to show remorse and repentance for any of the following transgressions or deviation from his steadfast Brahamcharya Vratt: if he intently listens to any small talk between women; if he talks about the virtues, vices or temperament of women except when an instance arises during a Katha of the scriptures such as the Shreemad Bhagwat; if he narrates or listens to the virtues, vices or traits of various types of women described in any other scriptures not attested by Me such as the Rasmanjri or the Rasikpriya; if he stands for a while watching women playing among themselves; if he makes a direct eye contact with a woman, even for a while; if he touches an apparel worn or recently taken off by a woman (one may touch a woman’s new or washed apparel); if he physically touches a woman; if he addresses an assembly of women, even indirectly through an assembly of men; if he has a lascivious thought or a dream about a woman; if he talks, directly or indirectly, to a woman; if he sends or receives a secret message, written or verbal, even pertaining to religion, to a woman through a man; if he sends or receives any thing (food or clothes), even as Prasad, secretly; if he looks at or touches a picture or sculpture of a woman other than

O Muni! A transsexual or transgender person must be treated as a woman and all contact, verbal and visual, with them must be avoided and the same atonement must be observed for any of the failure mentioned above.'

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, 'O Muni! One day's fast as atonement I just mentioned was for any unintentional transgressions. I will now prescribe a different set of atonements for more serious transgressions. A Brahamchari must undergo a fast of three days if he intently, spends some time with a woman in seclusion, even walking along on an open road. He must undergo a continuous fast for four days if, overcome by lust, he masturbates. A Brahamchari must undergo Vratt of DharnaParna for twelve months in an extreme case of direct sex with a woman. O Muni! During the twelve months of the DharnaParna Vratt, a Brahamchari must fast on an alternate day and eat Sathvo (flour mixed with salt) once on the alternate day. This must be done faithfully for twelve months to repent for his sin. There are other Vratts prescribed as atonement for such a grave sin in the scriptures which must be followed if one is not able to survive the twelve months' DharnaParna Vratt. A Brahamchari undergoing a fast as atonement must not eat anything on the day of a fast. The whole day must be survived only on water. O Muni! The exception granted to a child, the sick and old while observing a fast is not applicable to a fast observed for atonement for the sin of deviating from his Brahamcharya Vratt. That is to say that a child, sick and old must observe the fast as repentance. There is simply no alternative to a fast for any indiscretion of the Brahamcharya Vratt. Whoever discourages someone undergoing a fast as repentance is equally a sinner of the same misdemeanour and will suffer great ignominy. Anyone, overcome by compassion, tries to shield a child, sick or old from undergoing a fast must undergo a fast on their behalf himself. O Muni, a Brahamchari, unwilling to undergo atonements I just prescribed, must be excommunicated from our Udhhav Sampraday.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Brahmanand swami and the other Brahamchari saints ~~were very pleased to hear this divine sermon from Sahajanand Swami, always~~ benevolent and eager to protect His disciples from all types of hindrances on their religious path. They came forward and pledged to obey His decree. O king! The whole world is troubled with lascivious desires, which negates all virtues of virtuous men and is an indelible stain on a Brahamchari. Therefore, all Brahamcharis must read or listen to this divine discourse every morning to strengthen their Brahamcharya Vratt and to protect themselves from unrelenting force of lust.

Thus ends the 27th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-28

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Another similar assembly was held at the same place and same time the next day, Kartik Sud Saptami. This time, Gopalanand swami, head bowed and hands folded, asked Shree Hari reverentially, 'O Bhagwan! I would like to hear from You about a daily routine which I and the other saints of our Udhhav Sampraday must follow.'

Bhagwan Narayanmuni replied, 'O Gopal Muni and all other saints! Listen to this very carefully! I shall describe a celibate saint's daily routine in short, which must be observed fully by all Brahamchari saints. A celibate saint should wake up very early in the morning - between three and one and half hours before sunrise, meditate upon His Ishtadev and reminisce each saint by their name. He must proceed to the outskirts of a village and find a solitary place to defecate. A Varni (indeed anybody) must not defecate or urinate while standing up, in water while bathing, in front of a cow, woman, Brahmin, fire and facing the sun or the moon, in a ploughed or sowed field, banks of rivers and lakes, in the middle of a road, under a tree or any disused temple. He must not spit in any of these places either. A Varni should proceed to a lake, river or well after defecating to wash his hands and feet with top soil or sand. He must not use the top soil teeming with small insects or partly used soil left over by others. He must not use soil from an unholy place such as a cemetery or from an ant hill. He must wash his penis once, anus thrice, left hand ten times, two hands together seven times, feet thrice with top soil and water following defecating.'

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, 'O Muni! A Varni should use a twig of a tree to brush his teeth, however he must not cut the twig off a tree himself. He must not brush his teeth on days of Vratts such as Ekadashi and Janmashtami nor while undergoing any atonement. Instead, he should gargle his mouth with fresh water twelve times on these days. He should bath in a river facing the flow of water, in a lake facing the sun or water freshly drawn from a well. He is permitted to bath with hot water only during illness. One is permitted to have only a Mansi (imaginary) bath in an extreme situation when water is not available. O Muni! He should chant Shree Hari's name while imagining that he is bathing with water from the holy River Ganga. He should wear a fresh Kaupin and Dhoti and perform Bhagwan's veneration. He may wear wet clothes during the veneration in the absence of a fresh set of clothes, but not otherwise. He must perform veneration regardless.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O Muni! A Brahamchari must sit cross legged on a small silk or woollen mat facing the East or North for his routine veneration and tie his pigtail in a knot. He should take three sips of water previously sieved with a piece of cotton from his palm invoking Lord Narayan, Lord Vaasudev and Lord Vishnu, chanting these three verses: Aum Narayanay Namah, Aum Vaasudevay Namah and Aum Vishnave Namah with each sip repeatedly. Then he should imprint his forehead, chest and both arms with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Chandlo with sandalwood paste accompanied by chanting these verses: Aum Shree Vaasudevay Namah (forehead), Aum Sankarshanay Namah (chest), Aum Pradhyumanay Namah (right arm) and Aum Aniruddhay Namah (left arm). He should repeat the process of drinking three sips of water accompanied by the same chants before chanting the Vishnu Gayatri hymn (Aum Narayanay Vidmahe Vaasudevay Dhimahi Tanno Vishnu Prachodayat). Sage Narad is the author, Lord Vishnu the ruling deity, Gayatri the metre, knowledge the source, meditation the strength and command of God the reason of chanting of this verse. This verse is chanted purely to please Lord Vishnu. A Brahamchari should now touch his head, mouth, chest, navel, feet and whole body (with two middle fingers of his right hand) respectively, while reciting the abovementioned six elements of the Vishnu Gayatri hymn starting with Sage Narad. O Muni! Now a Brahamchari must touch his five digits and both sides of his right hand while reciting separate syllables of the hymn in this order: a thumb - 'Narayanay', index finger - 'Vidmahe', middle finger - 'Vaasudevay', ring finger - 'Dhimahi', small finger - 'Tanno Vishnu' and both sides of his hand - 'Prachodayat'. Using the same syllables, a Varni now should touch his heart, head, pigtail, armour, eyes and hands. A Varni must then meditate upon mother Goddess Gayatri standing on the left side and ever ready to serve Lord Vishnu. She should be visualised as her face radiant like thousands of full moons, fair complexioned, serene yet with a grin, wearing appropriate ornaments, holding a lotus in her right hand and a pot of water in her left hand and worshipped by all the Devtas, Devis and other devotees for emancipation.'

Lord Narayanmuni continued, 'A Brahamchari should recite the Gayatri hymn according to his ability and lay them at the feet of Lord LaxmiNarayan for His pleasure. Chanting one thousand times is best, one hundred times median and ten times the lowest. Accompanied by the clapping of hands, a Brahamchari must wake Bhagwan up and invoke His presence in his personal Murti by reciting this hymn; 'O Govind! Wake up! O Lord with an image of Garud on Your emblem! Wake up! O husband of Kamla! Wake up and perk up the lives of all beings of the universe!' O devotees! A Varni should now perform Mansi Puja as taught by his guru by bathing, dressing and feeding, while visualising the Murti as Bhagwan in person with whatever artefacts available to him. The scriptures attest eight types of Murti for worship; a Murti made of rock, wood, metal, sandalwood, sand, semi precious jewels and pictorial and totally imagined. He should preferably sit facing the East or North as mentioned earlier on, or facing the Murti regardless of the direction. Varni must not speak to anybody and concentrate fully in his worship using these sixteen elements of veneration; invocation, offering a seat, prayer, Achman (sipping water from palm), bathing, offering robes, Yagnopavit, sandalwood paste, flowers, incense, lamp, Naivedhya and beetle nuts (after dinner mints), performing Pradakshina and finally let Him leave the Murti at the end of the worship. O Muni! Each of these elements must be accompanied by the appropriate Vedic hymns. Chanting Bhagwan's name should accompany these elements if one does not know the Vedic hymns. A Brahamchari must perform such veneration reverentially and cautiously and without failure and lethargy.'

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, 'O Gopal Muni! A Brahamchari must do a predetermined numbers of Mala while chanting Lord Krishna's hymn or name. A Mala of Tulsi, sandalwood or seeds of lotus are considered best. Mala must be done sitting cross legged on a woollen or silk mat. He must remain aloof from the mundane activities and thoughts while turning Mala and should keep his mind and eyes focussed on Bhagwan's Murti and remain silent. The Mala must be covered while it is being turned. Turning Mala while sitting straight on a floor without a mat or Mala not covered, is futile. A Brahamchari should chant the VishnuSahasraNam Stotra or other hymns as per his ability and time available. Bhagwan's Murti must be returned to its designated place at the conclusion of worship. A Varni must pay obeisance to his guru after the conclusion of the worship and before going into the village to seek alms. On his return to the Ashram, he must wash himself and chant Lord Krishna's hymn or name before noon. O Muni! In detrimental times, the chanting of hymns of morning and noon may be combined at any one time. However, he must chant double the predetermined quantity of hymns. A Brahamchari must prepare food and offer it as Naivedhya to Lord Krishna. He should wash Bhagwan's face, hands and feet before retiring Him for a siesta. He must eat only one meal a day and that too, not without offering it to Lord Hari. Indeed, he must never eat or drink anything without first offering it to Bhagwan. In the absence of Bhagwan's Murti for any reason, he still must offer all food to Him, albeit mentally. He must always be willing to share his food with other alms seeker without any rancour, anger or hesitation.'

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, 'The saints must not eat any food and must undergo a fast on days of Vratts such as Ekadashi and Birth dates of Bhagwan's incarnations and while undergoing atonement. Except in unavoidable circumstances, a Brahamchari must not sleep during the day or on a bed. He must spend all his time in Bhagwan's Bhakti rather than in idle gossip. He must have a bath and wash His Dhoti following defecation and wash his hands, feet, face and penis each time after urinating during the day. He must wake up Bhagwan again in the evening and perform evening worship followed by Aarti, Dhun and chant of His name. After resting Bhagwan in a cradle or a suitable resting place, he should pay obeisance to his guru and chant the Gayatri or other hymns a predetermined number of times while turning Mala as described earlier. He must study the scriptures, sing Kirtans, meditate or perform other activities related to Bhagwan till late evening. He should retire early for night and sleep on the floor. A bed may only be used during the times of illness or physical inability due to age. He should go to sleep reminiscing Bhagwan's name. O Gopalalnand swami! I just described in short the daily routine of a Brahamchari saint which he must follow to please Bhagwan."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Gopalanand swami was pleased at listening to a saint's daily routine. He not only followed this routine, but taught, urged and encouraged other saints to follow suit."

Thus ends the 28th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-29

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Muktanand swami, one of the senior and eminent saints, whom even Lord Swaminarayan held in a very high esteem, stood up from his seat during an assembly held in the evening of Kartik Sud Ashtami. With the bowed head and folded hands, he approached Shree Hari seated on an ornate Sinhasan and asked, 'O Lord! Please remove doubt from my mind. The Vedas and others eminent scriptures describe Bhagwan Shree Krishna as beyond all reasons and cause of all causes. How do I understand almighty Bhagwan as Sagun and Nirgun, Saakaar and Nirakar, and a force behind everything that happens, yet not besmeared with effects and results of His deeds? Is there any difference in the divine Swarup in His supreme abode and His human form walking the Earth or are both Swarups one and the same? I and many other disciples are eager to know the answers to these questions. Please explain His Swarup as it is described in the scriptures and according to Your knowledge and experience. Please elucidate Your philosophy on this matter.' Pleased with such a profound question from Muktanand swami, Shree Hari thought for a while and replied to dispel any doubts from the minds of His congregated devotees."

Shree Narayanmuni said, 'O Mukta Muni! I will reveal the theosophical tenets of the Vaishnav philosophy (of which our Udhhav Sampraday is a part). The devotees desirous of Moksha should hold this dear to their hearts. Listen to this very carefully. The Vedas attest Lord Krishna as the only and supreme Bhagwan. AksharBrahm is beyond everything in this universe and He is beyond AksharBrahm. He is beyond everything, temporary and eternal. He is present in everything through His pervading powers. He pervades all souls and enlightens them, yet He is self enlightened; He grants the ability to Maya, Purush and Time to create and destroy the universes, yet remains aloof from the effects of the creation; He is the fulcrum and basis of all activities, yet He is not dependent on anything; He is known by names such as Vaasudev, yet no single name is enough to describe His greatness fully. The same Lord Krishna is always present, in divine and perfect human form, in His supreme abode. O Muni! This supreme abode is known by many names such as Akshardham, Brahampur etc. and its tiniest area is more radiant than thousands of suns shining at the same time. Therefore, this abode is also called Chidakash. It is eternal, endless, indivisible, indestructible, self illuminated, consistent and not affected by anything. It is Sat (eternal truth), Chit (conscious or intelligent) and Anand (always blissful, where sorrows do not even exist) and totally detached from everything just as the sky. (Just as the sky is present in the other four elements, and yet remains impenetrable or unaltered by any other elements.) Lord Krishna, dark complexioned, yet more radiant than thousands of suns shining simultaneously, is eternally present in this divine abode. Every hair of his divine body is more radiant than Akshardham or anything comparable. He is wearing golden robes and various appropriate bejewelled ornaments; He is served by Radha and Rama, His divine consorts; His numerous Parshads such as Vishvaksen and Sridama look after His comfort using umbrellas, hand held fans etc.; His weapons such as mace and discus, attend to Him in person, the six divinity (Dharma, Gnaan, Vairagya, glory, potency and wealth) and eight potency (Anima, Girima etc.) are ever eager to obey His every command. O Muni! Numerous Muktas venerate His feet with sandalwood paste and flowers. Lord Krishna, the master of universes, though always in human form with two arms, appears with eight, a hundred or a thousand arms to His devotees to grant their latent desires.

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O Muni! As Lord Krishna's human form has not arose from Maya and as His form is not like anything in this universe, He is called Nirakar. Similarly, He is not influenced by any of the three Guna (traits) of Maya, He is described as Nirgun. A knowledgeable and religious person who worships Lord Krishna with profound Bhakti sees and describes Him in His divine human form - Sakaar - in His Akshardham. Conversely, any person, no matter how religiously steadfast, detached from this world and knowledgeable, who does not have profound Bhakti in Lord Krishna cannot comprehend Him in His divine human form. He can only see the radiant halo without seeing Lord Krishna within this radiance. Let me make this clear with an example. Just as an ordinary man sees only the bright radiance and not the Sun deity in human form holding a conch and Chakra within his strong brilliance, a man without profound Bhakti sees only the bright radiance, instead of His divine human form. Lord Krishna does not become Nirakar (shapeless or formless) just because the knowledgeable person without Bhakti, who cannot see His human form with his desiccated knowledge, describes Him Nirakar. He is eternally Saakaar. O Muni! One may wonder how an entity with a definite form - Lord Krishna - can be omnipresent. How can He pervade everything, yet retain His human form? Take it from Me that Lord Krishna, despite being ever present in His human form in His Akshardham pervades the whole universe by His divine power. Just as the Sun, though present at one place at a given time, illuminates every place and nook with its rays, Lord Krishna pervades everything by His power. Brahma says in the Shreemad Bhagwat, 'How can I describe the fortune of the villagers of Gokul! Lord Krishna, Who pervades the whole universe, plays amongst them as their friend!'

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, 'O Mukta Muni! Almighty and Nirgun Bhagwan is described as Sagun when He wishes to create, sustain and destroy thousands of universes with the help of Maya. As Anirudhha, Bhagwan accepts the 'Rajas' trait of Maya and creates the universes as Brahma. Brahma keeps the universes in his stomach during his nights and recreates the same universes once again at his dawn. The same Vaasudev Bhagwan, as Pradhyumna, accepts the 'Satva' trait of Maya and becomes known as Vishnu, who sustains the numerous universes. He grants His devotees Moksha and destroys the demons. O Muni! The same Bhagwan accepts the 'Tamas' trait of Maya and annihilates universes as Shiva. As hooded Asp Shesh, Sankarshan Swarup of Bhagwan holds the world on His hood. The six Murtis of Lord Vaasudev Bhagwan - Anirudhha, Brahma, Pradhyumna, Vishnu, Sankarshan and Shiva - are His Sagun forms. Lord Vaasudev takes many other forms - all considered Sagun - to assist the process of maintaining the state of the universes. His forms are considered Nirgun when He forsakes the traits of Maya independently as and when He desires. The three forms, Anirudhha, Pradhyumna and Sankarshan, the creator, the sustainer and the destroyer of millions of Universes are constant, while each universe has its own Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva. Furthermore, as Lord Vaasudev have divine virtues such as truth, compassion, chastity etc. He should be considered Sagun (with virtues or traits). Thus, Parmatma, though Nirgun, is Sagun as well.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O Muni! Nirgun and Saakaar supreme Bhagwan Purushottam Narayan Lord Vaasudev independently took birth as a son of Devki and Vasudev. There is not an iota of difference between Lord Krishna's divine Murti in Akshardham and His human form on this earth. This is the fundamental principle of Ramanujacharya and our Udhhav Sampraday. Lord Krishna has revealed His divine form at many instances while in human form on this world, which goes to prove that the divine Murti in Akshardham and human form on this world are one and the same. The Shreemad Bhagwat and the Mahabharat narrates many such instances which I shall reiterate in short for you to contemplate.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O Muni! To protect the pious saints and devotees from the harassment by the demons and to re establish Sanatan Dharma, Lord Vaasudev entered Vasudev's heart. To manifest as a human, He entered mother Devki's womb. To remind mother Devki and father Vasudev of His true identity, Bhagwan appeared as Lord Vishnu at birth and took form as an ordinary child at the request of His parents. Fearful of the cruelty of Kans, Vasudev took baby Krishna to Gokul and left Him at the home of Nand and Jashoda. Bhagwan, still a child, showed the whole universe in His mouth to Jashoda, when she insisted that He open His mouth to check whether He had eaten soil. He revealed His infinity when mother Jashoda tried to tie Him to a grinding stone with ropes. Jashoda joined many ropes together, but together they turned out just a little short to tie Him up. When Brahma kidnapped the children and cattle of Gokul in his jest to test Lord Krishna's divinity, He took the form of all the children and cattle and resided at their respective homes for twelve months. He revealed His form as the four armed Lord Vishnu, which merged into the two armed ordinary child in front of perplexed Brahma. The same Lord Krishna as a child vanquished a mighty hooded serpent named Kaliya and banished him from the waters of River Yamuna. Bhagwan Krishna removed the serpent's poison and granted life to dead cows and cowherds. Young Shree Krishna swallowed the raging fire twice to protect the residents of Gokul. He also lifted and held Mount Govardhan on the little finger of His left hand for seven days to protect the residents of Vraj. He demonstrated to father Nand His divine form venerated by Varun and other Devtas. He took Nand and the other villagers to Akshardham, where they saw Lord Krishna being venerated by the Vedas in person. He took multiple forms to play Raas with each Gopi to fulfil their latent desires to play Raas with Him individually. To alleviate Akrur's fears regarding His safety from Kans, He revealed Himself in two forms simultaneously - as Lord Narayan resting under the hoods of Shesh in the water of River Yamuna, while still seated on a chariot on the banks of the river. O Muni! He appeared in numerous different forms to thousands of people gathered in an assembly in Mathura according to their understandings, beliefs and accomplishments. He gave Kalyavan and King Muchkund His divine Darshan as four armed Lord Vishnu after pretending to run away from the battlefield.'

Shree Hari elaborated further, 'O Muni! Shree Krishna brought His guru's dead son from Hell and also brought His six elder siblings (killed by Kans) from the netherworld to solace His mother Devki. When Dushasan tried to disrobe Draupadi in an open assembly, Lord Krishna saved her modesty by divinely supplying her endless numbers of Sarees. Once when Sage Durvasha visited Pandavas unexpectedly in a forest, Draupadi had no food to offer her exalted guest. To save Pandavas from the curse of Durvasha for not feeding him, Shree Krishna miraculously satiated Durvasha's hunger pangs. Though appearing as an ordinary mortal charioteer to millions of soldiers gathered on the battlefield of Kurukshetra, He revealed His humongous and omnipotent form to Arjun. He took sixteen thousand, one hundred and eight forms to appear in the company of each of His wives to surprise Sage Narad when he visited Dwarika for Lord Krishna's Darshan. To fulfil Arjuna's vow, Lord Krishna accompanied Arjun on a wooden chariot and materialistic horses beyond the darkness of Maya all the way to His abode. Once, while doing great austerity in the Himalayan forest to seek a son, a devastating fire emerged from His mouth and charred the whole surrounding forest, Shree Krishna re established the plant and animal life back as it was prior to the fire. Lord Krishna, though in a form of an ordinary mortal human, stayed with King Bahulashcha in his palace and at a Brahmin's house (in Mithila) simultaneously for a whole month. O Muni! Lord Krishna killed many demons such as Putna, Trunavart, Shaktasur, Vatsasur, Bakasur, Aghasur, Vrashabhasur, Keshi, Kans etc. who were too powerful to be vanquished even by the Devtas and were hell-bent on destroying Dharma and harassing the pious saints. He re-established Sanatan Dharma after killing them. The narration of His such divine Leelas have become an enhancing factor of His devotees' Bhakti even today. The scholars deem that these and many other such Leelas of Lord Krishna divine and not mortal.'

Lord Swaminarayan continued, 'O Muni! There is no difference between Lord Krishna's divine form in His abode and human form on this earth. The true scholars do not see any distinction between His two forms but the ignorant and foolish do not realise this fact. Let Me cite a few examples to clarify this point. King Bali saw Bhagwan's Vaman (the pigmy) Swarup transform into Virat (humongous) and back into Vaman in front of his eyes. Bhagwan Vishnu took four separate forms during the churning of the ocean; He helped churn the ocean in the midst of the Devtas and demons as Lord Vishnu, He took the form of the turtle (Kurma incarnation) to balance the Mountain Mandrachal on His back, He emerged from the ocean as Dhanvantri holding the pot of nectar and He distributed nectar to the Devtas as a beautiful maiden (Mohini Swarup). Even Agni (the fire deity) took the form of a Brahmin to seek Lord Krishna's and Arjun's permission to engulf Indra's Khandav forest before transforming himself into leaping flames to burn down the forest. Lord Krishna in human form on earth is the same Lord Krishna in His Akshardham and the same Lord Krishna of Akshardham takes the human form on this earth. His birth and Leelas are indeed divine and one must never consider these two - divine and mortal - forms distinct from one another. They are one and the same. Bhagwan Vaasudev is indeed Lord Krishna. He is the master of the universes and independently creates, sustains and destroys them. He is the controller of Maya, Kaal and Purush. Therefore, He is called the first, supreme and eternal. As He delegates and asks His potencies such as Maya and Kaal to create and destroy numerous universes, He is described in the scriptures as 'Akarta' - inactive (not doing anything). Though He remains unattached and aloof from the process of creation and annihilation, everything happens according to His wish and under His command. He is indeed capable of creating universes without the help of Maya or Kaal. He retains His potency whenever He takes human form. Therefore, there is no distinction between His divine and human form.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, 'O Mukta Muni! Some fools, however, see the difference between Lord Krishna's divine and human form. They see His human birth, deeds and body as that of an ordinary human. They even find fault and criticise His Leelas, therefore, know them as Asur. They are against the devout and criticise them for their devotion. They harass the pious and praise the like minded evil people. To find faults in the virtues of the religious and to exalt the vices of the irreligious is an Asur's natural trait. Many ancient scriptures are replete with instances of Asur's behaviour. Shishupal only saw fault in Lord Krishna's character when grandsire Bhishma was narrating His virtues during King Yudhishthir's Rajsuya Yagna. He saw a murder of a woman in the divine Leela of killing Putna instead of seeing the benevolent act of saving the lives of many more children from the evil intentions of Putna. In killing of demon Shaktasur, Shishupal saw the childish mischief of breaking a wooden cart. Similarly, Shishupal saw the killing of a snake and a bird in Lord Krishna's Leela of killing Demons Aghasur and Bakasur. He only saw a dastardly sin of killing a bull in the killing of Demon Vatsasur. Shishupal could not understand the divine Leela of Lord Krishna lifting and holding Mount Govardhan to protect the lives of the residents and animals of Vrandavan. Instead, he only saw a prank of digging up a mole hill in this divine Leela. He could not see the divinity in vanquishing of serpent Kaliya, revealing His divine form to mother Yashoda or swallowing the raging fire to protect the residents of Vraj. He saw only black magic and hearsay behind such divine Leelas. Shishupal falsely alleged promiscuity on Lord Krishna when Bhagwan took numerous forms while playing Raas with the Gopis to vanquish the pride of Eros. He accused Lord Krishna of a ghastly murder in His killing of evil Kans. Shishupal termed the defeat and death of King Jarasandh at the hands of Bhim, a deceitful murder of an innocent, knowing fully well that Jarasandh attacked Mathura and was defeated by Lord Krishna seventeen times in the battles. Due to his envy and malice, Shishupal could not comprehend divinity in Lord Krishna and alleged criminality in His Leelas.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O Muni! Not only did Shishupal find fault in Lord Krishna, he criticised His staunch devotee, grandsire Bhishma accusing him of being a lackey of Shree Krishna. He did not appreciate Bhishma's vow of Brahamcharya and called him impotent and scheming. Shishupal called King Yudhishthir, who advocated the veneration of Lord Krishna before anybody else, a sinner, incompetent, ignorant and irreligious. He advocated the first veneration of evil and irreligious kings such as Rukmi, Salva and Eklavya, who were overwhelmed by vices such as greed, anger, lust, ego and conceit. Shishupal considered them better than Lord Krishna, the source of all virtues. He could not see any goodness in Bhagwan and His devotees. The other like minded kings such as Rukmi and Salva supported him in his tirade against Lord Krishna and His devotees. O Muni! These types of demonic people exist even today, who level false allegations against Bhagwan and His devotees. They are Asur personified. They, mesmerised and confused by the divinity, criticise Bhagwan and His devotees, while devotees are lucid in their understanding and see divinity in Bhagwan's each and every Leela without any doubt. According to the Braham Puran, Bhagwan pretends to have the traits such as ignorance, subordination, subjugation and dependence or alteration in His physical state such as childhood, youth, old age and death, possessiveness and grief of separation to confuse Asurs, though he is not subject to any of these things. Only Asurs see mortality in His Leelas, not His devotees. Lord Krishna has said in the Bhagvad Gita, "O Arjun! A person, who understands My birth and life as divine and free from the traits of Maya, attains Me and My supreme abode and will never to be subject to the cycle of birth and death ever again. I am the master of everything that exists. I come on this world only for the benevolence of mankind. Asurs do not realise this and they either disregard Me or find fault in anything I do. They make false accusations against Me and scheme to harm Me, but all their plans fail. Their intellect has been overwhelmed by vile intentions and thoughts. O Arjun! I consign them in the nadir of hell and they remain entangled in the cycle of death and rebirth forever, never to be redeemed. They are evil and inauspicious and are unable to come unto My shelter. On the other end, O Arjun! The devout and pious consider Me the controller and source of everything and venerate Me as such." O Muni! There are many more instances when Bhagwan has made it very clear that He is beyond Maya but the Asurs consider Him as an ordinary mortal human being. Therefore, never consider any difference between the human and divine form of Lord Krishna. Just as a wishing stone fulfils all of man's desires, the veneration of Lord Krishna fulfils all his desires, including Moksha. The wealth, Dharma, glory and bliss follow Lord Krishna wherever He goes. O Muni! Lord Krishna resides at Dwarka at this present time. Many fortunate Ekantik devotees sometimes have His divine Darshan there.'

Lord Narayanmuni continued, 'O Muni! The supposed death of Lord Krishna is nothing but the veil of confusion for Asurs. Let Me cite an example to illustrate this. An expert magician came to a king to demonstrate his expertise. He climbed on a rope to the heaven to assist the Devtas in their war against the demons. His dismembered hands, feet, torso and head fell on the stage one after another. The magician's wife gathered all his organs and committed Sati on his funeral pyre right in front of the king. The magician returned by descending on the rope after a while and asked for his wife. The king informed him that his wife has committed Sati with his dismembered body. The magician wiled and cried for his wife, who suddenly emerged from under the king's seat. O Muni! The king and audience were flabbergasted with this display, but the people who understood this magic remained unmoved. This confusion in the minds of the king and many in the audience is caused by ignorance. O Muni! Similarly, Lord Krishna discarding His mortal body and Rukmini and His other wives immolating on His funeral pyre is nothing but His Maya (illusion). The ignorant confuse Lord Krishna departing this earth as death of an ordinary man, but His devotees remain clear in their minds that this is nothing but one of His divine Leelas. Such Ekantik devotees still are able to have His divine Darshan along with Rukmini in Dwarka as before, even today. The devotees desirous of Moksha must worship Lord Krishna with such profound faith. Such strong association with Lord Krishna, due to their faith, knowledge and worship, renders devotees as Nirgun (free from the three traits of Maya) as Himself.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O Muni! Let Me quote Lord Krishna (addressed to Udhhavji) from the Shreemad Bhagwat to understand His Nirgun form. Shree Krishna said, 'O Udhhav! The knowledge about the distinct identity of soul and body is Satvik, the knowledge about the temporary nature of this world and the Devtas' abode and the futility of mundane pleasures thereof is Rajas knowledge and the child-like confused knowledge which makes one run after worldly pleasures is Tamas knowledge, while the knowledge about Me is indeed Nirgun knowledge. Dwelling in a forest is Satvik, living among all types of people in an urban area is Rajas, living in gambling dens or liquor houses is Tamas, while residing within My temple precincts is Nirgun. To act without consideration of rewards is Satvik, to expect something in return for deeds is Rajas, to indulge in mundane pleasures knowing them futile is Tamas, while to remain engaged in My Bhakti solely to please Me is Nirgun. The faith to acquire the knowledge of a soul is Satvik faith, the faith by which one follows the religious edicts appropriate for one's Varna and Ashram is Rajas, the faith knowingly reposed in Adharma yet pretend it to be Dharma is Tamas, while performing My veneration with faith for My pleasure is Nirgun faith. O Udhhav! The food that nourishes the body and received without asking for it is Satvik food, the food that is consumed primarily to satisfy the palate is Rajas, the unholy food that harms the body after consuming is Tamas, while the food that is consumed only after offering it to Me first is Nirgun. The happiness that arises from within is Satvik, the happiness that pleases senses is Rajas, and the happiness derived from attachment with wife, children and home is Tamas, while happiness derived by listening to My Katha, singing My Kirtans and My veneration is Nirgun bliss."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, 'O Muni! My devotees must understand Bhagwan's Sagun and Nirgun Swarup by aforementioned examples and not otherwise. I just explained to you the real knowledge about Bhagwan including the oneness in His divine and human form. The fables of Lord Krishna's divine Leelas have spread very widely in this world. The people doubting these Leelas remain entangled in the vicious circle of life and death. I hope your doubts have vanished. Any doubts formed by reading the scriptures that attest the supremacy and independence of Maya or Kaal will have subsided by this sermon. One must always remember this knowledge which enhances one's knowledge and Bhakti of Lord Krishna. Whoever reads this chapter with full attention will have all his doubts about the real Swarup of Lord Krishna abated. O Muni! Lord Krishna's human form, which He had taken independently, is eternally divine. His abode, pleasures of His abode, His Parshads in His abode, His potencies, His Leelas, indeed everything about Him is divine. The devotees are considered divine due to His direct relationship. O Muktanand swami and all other devotees! Always remain engaged in any type of Bhakti of Lord Krishna, Who is eternally divine. One must never have any doubts in divinity of His Leelas and one must never consider any difference between His divine Murti in Akshardham and His human form in this world. They are indeed one and the same.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Muktanand swami and the other devotees present in the assembly were very pleased to hear Lord Krishna's uniform and non dualist form. Their devotion in Lord Narayanmuni became enhanced knowing that Lord Krishna has independently taken a human birth in the garb of Narayanmuni sitting in front of their eyes. Their divinity in Him became more pronounced and lucid. O king! Whoever narrates or listens to this discourse, which was delivered by Lord Swaminarayan Himself will have their faith and reverence enhanced and will attain Him, His abode and the bliss associated with His abode."

Thus ends the 29th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-30

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! On Kartik Sud Navmi, Shree Hari presided over a large assembly after Lord Vaasudev Narayan's evening Aarti. Vaasudevanand Brahamchari approached Shree Hari seated on an ornate Sinhasan on a raised dais with folded hands and bowed head. Brahamchari - Varni - asked Narayanmuni humbly, 'O Bhagwan! You have asked all of us to chant Lord Krishna's name whilst turning the beads of Mala (rosary), and You have also emphasised that Japa is rewarding only if chanted properly. I and Your other disciples would like to hear the proper procedure for chanting Japa and turning Mala."

Lord Narayanmuni replied, 'O best among Varnis! I will describe in short the correct method of chanting Japa of Lord Krishna and turning Mala. A person becomes qualified to chant Lord Krishna's name or hymn only after receiving Diksha from a pious guru. After a bath, a person must become free from anger and stress before sitting down for Japa with a calm mind. The Varnis should sit in Kurmasan (feet crossed and pushed right back under the buttocks), while all others should sit in Sukhasan (cross legged) on a square wooden seat or a mat. The mat could be of deerskin, tiger skin, cotton, silk, wool or grass. The seat made from steel, stone or bamboo, the wood of a Peepal or Khakhra tree, any wooden seat studded or covered with steel or holy wood like Tulsi or sandalwood must not be used to sit upon for Japa. In exceptional circumstances, when any of the permitted seats is not available, the proscribed wooden seat may be used provided that they have not been smeared with unholy substances like faeces. Japa performed while sitting straight on a floor without laying a seat or mat is totally futile. A Mala made of Tulsi (basil) used for Japa is considered the best. A mala of sandalwood, Amla (hog plum), lotus seeds, Rudraksha, Darbha (a type of holy grass) or pearl may be used instead of a Tulsi Mala. O Varni! Any Mala first must be offered at Lord Krishna's feet before being used for Japa. A Mala whose beads are splintered or make noise while turning, strung in a dirty thread or thick thread so that it becomes difficult to turn and a Mala worn or used by a sinner, irreligious or a hypocrite must never be used for Japa. Turning a Mala that has not been laid at Lord Krishna's feet before being used, must not be used for Japa as it induces bad dreams. O Brahamchari! The Mala of one hundred and eight beads is considered the best, of fifty four beads a median while a Mala of just twenty seven beads (though allowed) is considered of the lowest value. There are two ways to conduct Japa in the absence of a beaded Mala. Write down all the letters of the alphabet (Sanskrit) starting with 'a' and ending with 'Ksh' (54 in total including 14 vowels and 'Aum') and chant Bhagwan's name counting forward and reverse (to denote 108 beads). Another way is to chant His name while touching each division of your fingers (of right hand) starting clockwise from the middle division of the ring finger to the lowest division of the first finger without touching the middle and lower divisions of the middle finger (10 in total).'

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O Varni! Sitting cross legged and upright, mind focussed on Bhagwan, placing a Mala in a bag or covered under a piece of cloth, one must chant Lord Krishna's name whilst touching and forwarding each bead. The number of Malaa to be turned daily must be predetermined. Resting mala on the middle division of the middle finger and using the tip of the thumb to pull forward each bead while chanting God's name. One must make sure that the index finger or the left hand does not touch the Mala. Make sure that the Mala does not drop from the right hand nor does it touch the floor or feet, otherwise, one must turn an extra Mala in lieu of a wasted Mala. One must make sure that his right hand or head does not shake aggressively; Chotli (pigtail) is tied in a knot; Mala is placed in a bag or covered with a piece of cloth, headgear such as cap or hat is not worn and the body is not physically dirty while turning Mala. Though it is prohibited to wear headgear while turning Mala, the head must be covered by the upper garment while turning Mala. One must not chant Japa or turn Mala, while the mind is agitated with worry, anger, hunger or thirst; sitting on a bed or riding on a vehicle; joking and talking; standing up, walking or reclining; wearing footwear; sitting with legs stretched; using sign language to instruct somebody; in a road or a cemetery; in dark and in company of the sinners. The Mala must stop at the Meru (large central) bead when it should be turned over and started again from that point. Drowsiness is the worst danger and one must guard against this whilst chanting Japa. Japa becomes futile if done under the spell of drowsiness; if Mala slips from the middle division to the top division of the middle finger; if Mala is not turned over at the Meru bead; if Mala is turned lesser times than a predetermined number and if the mind is preoccupied with anything other than Bhagwan. O Varni! Serenity of mind, chastity, silence, knowing the meaning of the chant and alertness are the vital ingredients of Japa. Following the mental or physical veneration of one's Ishtadev with sandalwood paste, Kumkum etc. one must chant a predetermined number of Japa regularly thrice a day. One must stop Japa immediately if he gets angry, touches animals such as a mouse or a cat or farts and Mala should be rested on the floor. Japa should be restarted to complete the predetermined figure after Achman, Pranayam and looking at the sun. A bath is necessary before continuation and completion of Japa following an accidental touch of an untouchable substance.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O Varni! The three types of Japa; Vachik, Upanshu and Manas are the lowest, median and best respectively. The chant spoken aloud within earshot of others is called Vachik; the chant with the movements of lips spoken so softly that it is hardly heard by the person very close by is called Upanshu, while Japa chanted clearly but without any sound or movement of lips is called Manas. An ordinary Upanshu Japa is ten times better than Vachik, while Upanshu Japa without any sound is hundred times better than an ordinary Upanshu Japa, while Manas Japa is a thousand times better than Upanshu Japa. The reward for Japa done in a cowshed is ten times higher than Japa done in a house; Japa performed in a garden is hundred times better than Japa done in a home; Japa performed in a forest is thousand times better than Japa done at home, Japa performed on a mountain is ten thousand times better than Japa done at home, Japa conducted on a bank of a flowing river is one hundred thousand time better that one done at home; Japa performed in a temple is a million times better than Japa done at home, while Japa performed in Bhagwan's vicinity is infinitely better than any other Japa. O Varni! All female devotees must also perform Japa without fail. One must never perform Japa and turn Mala without first having a bath. In an emergency, one may take a Mansi (imaginary) bath before starting Japa. A prior bath is not a prerequisite if chanting of Lord Krishna's name or hymn is not accompanied by the turning of a Mala. A Mala must not be touched with dirty hands or thrown on the floor. A male devotee's Mala must never be touched by a female devotee. The Mala must be put away properly on the conclusion of Japa by placing it on a hook or in a drawer. O Varni! Whichever devotee of our Udhhav Sampraday follows these guidelines, while undertaking a predetermined number of Japa attains Lord Krishna's Golok abode.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Almighty Bhagwan Narayanmuni explained the procedure to follow for Japa of Lord Krishna to the devotees present in this assembly at Gadhpur. Vaasudevanand Brahamchari and the other devotees were pleased to hear such a divine sermon from their Ishtadev, Lord Swaminarayan. They bowed at Shree Hari to mark the end of the assembly."

Thus ends the 30th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-31

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! On Kartik Sud Dasmi, Lord Shree Hari held another large assembly in the courtyard of Uttam Khachar's royal palace. He sat on a high ornate Sinhasan and all the devotees sat in front of Him as per the modicum of the Sampraday. He spoke that day without being asked any questions."

Shree Narayanmuni said, 'O male and female devotees! O saints and Varnis!

Listen all of You! As you have accepted Me as your guru, I am duty bound to advise you for your benevolence. O devotees! Tomorrow is Prabodhani Ekadashi which all of you must observe with extra care. This Vrat is very important to please our Ishtadev, Lord Shree Krishna. Whoever does not observe a fast on the day of Ekadashi is consigned to a horrible hell called Raurav. All major and minor sins reside in grains on Ekadashi, therefore, anyone eating grains on the day of Ekadashi is said to be consuming sins. According to the scriptures, whoever eats grains on the day of Ekadashi is considered the killer of a Brahmin, mother, father and guru. Indeed, whoever eats grains on Ekadashi is eating dirt at each bite. The scriptures mention atonements for even major sins such as murder of a Brahmin, but none of them ever mention atonement of eating on Ekadashi. A person drinking alcohol goes to Hell alone, but a person who eats food on the day of Ekadashi drags his ancestors to hell even from heaven. Therefore, all Vaishnav devotees must observe a fast on each Ekadashi. O devotees! Make sure that you observe fasts on both Ekadashis of each month. All persons - male and female, married and widows, Grahastha and Brahamchari, Vanprasthi and Sanyasi - over the age of eight and under the age of eighty must observe the Vrat of Ekadashi faithfully by undergoing a fast. The widows need to be extra careful as all their Punya are nullified by eating on the day of Ekadashi besides receiving the sin of killing of Brahmin.'

He continued, 'O devotees! Ekadashi is Bhagwan's favourite Vrat. A person's accumulated sins are washed away if he venerates Bhagwan Madhusudan while observing a fast, keeping his senses under his control and sings His Kirtans by staying awake until late at night on the day of Ekadashi. There is no other Vrat capable enough to wash away one's sins as an Ekadashi. The Punya generated by observing a Vrat of Ekadashi properly is enough to wash away a person's sin accumulated over one hundred lives. A man is not relieved of his sins until he observes the Vrat of Ekadashi. Observing a fast on a day of Ekadashi washes away his sins immediately. One earns the Punya equivalent of donating a cow at the holy shrine of Kurukshetra on a day of lunar or solar eclipse by undertaking a single fast on an Ekadashi. Punya earned by observing a fast on Ekadashi is equivalent of feeding one hundred thousand devout Brahmins for sixty thousand years. Punya of conducting a thousand Ashvamedh or Rajsuya Yagnas is miniscule compared to undertaking a fast on the day of Ekadashi. O devotees! The sins committed with any of the senses in the previous life are washed away by a fast observed on Ekadashi. Indeed, no other Vrat has the ability to protect one against so many sins. What could be said of a fast on Ekadashi undertaken with faith when even an unintentional fast frees one from a visit by Yamdoots? Observation of an Ekadashi Vrat gives one Heaven, health, wealth, heir and indeed even Moksha. Not only the holy shrines such as Gaya, Kashi, Pushkar, Narmada, Devika, Kurukshetra, Yamuna, Chandrabhaga etc. but Ganga too pale in significance when compared to a Vrat of Ekadashi. Whoever undertakes a Vratt of Ekadashi easily attains salvation and Akshardham.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! A person who stays up late at night to sing Kirtans with other devotees besides undertaking a fast on Ekadashi is freed from his sins and surely attains Vaikunth of Lord Vishnu. A devotee is able to liberate ten generations of his father, mother and wife, besides himself by faithfully observing a Vrat of Ekadashi. Indeed, the Vrat of Ekadashi is like a wishing well, which has the ability to fulfil all desires. Bhagwan sends His mount, Eagle, to carry a devotee who observes the Vrat of Ekadashi properly to His abode, never to return to the cycle of life and death. The Vrat of Ekadashi is a fire which destroys one's sins. I just narrated its incomparable potency to wash away one's sins. Bear this in your minds and make sure that you observe a fast on Ekadashi henceforth without lethargy and fail.

Thus ends the 31st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Ekadashi is the most powerful amongst all Vrats to wash away one's sins. Could You please elaborate the reasons behind it for our benevolence?"

Shree Narayanmuni replied, 'O devotees! Importance of a man or of anything is enhanced greatly by its direct association with Bhagwan. Anything that has a direct relevance to almighty Lord becomes great automatically. As you all are aware that any ordinary deed done for Bhagwan's pleasure becomes exalted and Nirgun. Similarly, Ekadashi arose from Lord Vaasudev Narayan's body and was blessed by Him, therefore, its Vrat has gained great importance. Let Me narrate a tale from the bygone era to enlighten you. There was a demon king called Nadijandh in an earlier Satya Yug. His son, Mur, was very strong and haughty. He performed a very severe austerity to please Brahma who granted him his wish that he could not be defeated or killed by the Devtas in a battle. As a result of this boon, he attacked the Devtas and banished them from heaven. The Devtas, at a loss of heaven and its prosperity, became paupers and wondered on the earth. Mur appointed a friendly demon as an Indra to look after heaven and ruled the whole world as an undisputed emperor. O devotees! Unable to bear this misery and humiliation for long, the Devtas approached Brahma to relieve them of their misfortune. Brahma was unable to help due to his own boon granted to Mur Danav (demon). They all approached Shiva, who was also helpless as he too was unable to defeat Mur Danav. All of them decided to go to the North banks of Kshirsagar to seek Lord Vaasudev's help. Brahma, Shiva and the other Devtas performed severe austerity to please Bhagwan. Keeping their senses under their control, giving up food and both hands raised over their heads, they chanted His name to please Him. Pleased with their efforts, Lord Vaasudev Narayan, encircled with a brilliant halo around Him, appeared in their midst. He was accompanied by His many Parshads such as Nand and Sunand, consorts such as Radha and Rama and was holding a conch, Chakra, mace and lotus in His four hands. His large dark eyes enhanced by His benignly smiling face mesmerised the Devtas. They recounted their existing miserable condition caused by Mur Danav and sought His help to restore them to their previous state.

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! Lord Vaasudev Narayan led the army of Devtas and attacked Chandravati, the capital city of Mur Danav's empire. Many demons ran away from the battlefield upon hearing the terrifying sound of His Panchjanya conch, but Mur Danav took up the challenge and a battle ensued that lasted for ten thousand years. The army of Devtas was unable to resist the might of Mur Danav and fled from the battlefield. The mighty Sudarshan Chakra was unable to harm Mur Danav as he was protected by a Brahma's boon. Tired by the long battle, Lord Vaasudev Narayan retreated to a cave in Badrikaashram for a little rest. Pretending to be afraid of Mur Danav, He lay down covering His face and body by His upper garment. He withdrew His ten senses and mind and went to sleep. Mur Danav, considering Bhagwan Vaasudev his primary adversary, followed Him in the cave. Lord Vaasudev realised that Mur Danav could not be killed due to the boon granted by Brahma, causing anguish and anger in His mind. Suddenly, a beautiful and armed maiden arose from the aura of His ten senses and mind. She was so beautiful that Mur Danav lost his senses and asked her to marry him. The divine maiden replied that if Mur Danav wanted to marry her, he must first win her in a duel. He was so overcome by lust and desire to marry her that he forgot the reason of his presence in this cave and the consequences of winning the maiden in a duel. He agreed for a battle but could not bring himself to defeat the maiden. Meanwhile, the beautiful maiden beheaded Mur Danav with her sword.

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! Lord Vaasudev woke up from His slumber and asked her, 'O damsel! Who are you?' She bowed at His feet and replied, 'O Lord! I am Ekadashi. I am born from Your eleven senses (ten senses and mind). I am an ascetic as I have arisen from the aura of Your austerity. I vanquish the sins and sinners alike.' O devotees! Lord Vaasudev was very pleased with Ekadashi and asked her to ask for a boon from Him. Ekadashi asked, 'If You are really pleased with me then grant me that the whole world observes my Vrat by fasting for a day. One may eat one meal if unable to fast the whole day. O Lord! Grant me that whoever observes my Vrat becomes free from his accumulated sins and attains worldly happiness in this world and salvation in the next. May all his desires be fulfilled at the result of observing my Vrat. Please grant me further that my Vrat to be observed regularly over the year and it becomes perpetual. O Lord! Marry me by taking twenty four forms to please me.' O devotees! Lord Vaasudev said to Ekadashi, 'O divine damsel! The boons you have asked are difficult to be granted, even to the Devtas. However, I will surely grant you them as I am greatly pleased with you. As from today (Magsar Sud Ekadashi), I will fulfil all desires of whoever undertakes your Vrat by observing a day of fast and My grand veneration. He will attain worldly pleasures if he so wishes and attain salvation after his death. Therefore, you will become famous as 'Bhuktida' (giver of worldly pleasure) and 'Muktida' (liberator). I will take twenty four forms such as Keshav to marry your twenty four forms (twenty four Ekadashis of a year).' O devotees! Ekadashi was very pleased to have all her boons granted by Lord Vaasudev. Bhagwan Vaasudev Narayan asked all the Devtas and His ascetic devotees of Badrikaashram to observe the Vrat of Ekadashi. From that day onwards, O devotees! The Vrat of Ekadashi has become prevalent in this world.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! As Bhagwan Vaasudev Narayan prepared to depart from Badrikaashram, Ekadashi desired to find a place within the body of Bhagwan. To this end, she performed a severe austerity for a hundred years in Shwetdweep. Pleased with her austerity, Shree Hari granted his divine Darshan to Ekadashi and asked her to ask for a boon. Ekadashi said, 'O Prabhu! If You are indeed pleased, then grant me that I find a place within Your body just as Laxmiji resides within Your divine body.' Bhagwan replied, 'O dear! My Parshad Garud already occupies My body below the waist; My chest is set aside for Laxmiji; conch, Chakra, mace and lotus have made My four hands their home; Sankhya and Yog dwell in My ears, Goddess Saraswati reside in My mouth while a crown has taken up My head. Only My two eyes are vacant at the moment and I grant them for you to take up residence there. You are as dear to Me as Laxmiji and therefore, eyes are an apt place for you to occupy. I will hold you in My eyes for four months starting from today, Ashadh Sud Ekadashi. You shall remain in My eyes for the duration of this period of Chaturmaas while I rest on the banks of Kshirsagar. This is apt as you were born from My austerity while I was resting. Even My Grahastha devotees will undergo special austerity during this period of Chaturmaas. O Ekadashi! Whoever undergoes special austerity by observing Vrats such as Kruchh Chandrayan, practice the intricacies of Ashtang Yog and perform My grand venerations with appropriate artefacts will have their austerity rewarded immediately and indeed will attain My supreme abode.'

to Ekadashi, Shree Vaasudev Narayan Bhagwan retired on a bed set up by Shesh. He withdrew His senses and mind from all activities and focussed within. Laxmiji, too, gave up food and became engaged in serving Bhagwan by massaging His feet. Bhagwan's Parshads followed suit. They gave up food and became engaged in austerity by concentrating their eyes and mind on Bhagwan. The resident devotees of Shwetdweep followed the example of His Parshads. O devotees! You too must follow this example and undertake special Vrats to please Bhagwan. Laxmiji, Parshads and other devotees become distressed, not due to their own hunger or discomfort, but at the discomfort of their master, Lord Vaasudev. Keeping this in mind, all devotees do not celebrate marriages or other festivities during the period of Chaturmaas and concentrate all their energy and effort to please Bhagwan by taking up special Vratt. Devotees celebrate a grand festival when Bhagwan Vaasudev rises from His slumber on Kartik Sud Ekadashi. The Devtas, led by Brahma and Shiva, organise grand festivities and Lord Narayan's and Laxmiji's special veneration with expensive artefacts to mark this occasion. Indeed, the whole world celebrates this joyous festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi. This Ekadashi is considered more auspicious than other Ekadashis. Furthermore, My Father - Dharmadev, as a consequence of Sage Durvasha's curse, had taken up human birth on this day. Therefore, My disciples should offer veneration to Dharmadev and Bhaktimata besides to Bhagwan Yogeshwar and Laxmiji in the morning of Prabodhani Ekadashi. Vaasudev Bhagwan takes another form - Damodar - while Ekadashi becomes Radha today. All devotees should organise a worship of Lord Damodar and Radha in the evening and sing Kirtans in the company of other devotees by staying awake till late at night to mark Prabodhani Ekadashi. They should venerate scholar Brahmins the next day while my householder devotees should feed such Brahmins before taking up food themselves to conclude their fast.'

Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, 'O devotees! The Devtas along with sages celebrate a grand festival like Diwali (Dev Diwali) on the banks of Kshirsagar lasting for five days to mark the occasion of Bhagwan waking from His slumber. Any auspicious occasion may be celebrated during this time without any consideration as these five days remain auspicious forever. My disciples should also celebrate this festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi grandly every year to mark the end of austerity and Vrats. O devotees! As Lord Vaasudev has accepted the day of Ekadashi as His own, My disciples must observe the Vrat of both Ekadashis of each month by observing a fast for redeeming their sins. Especially ascetic Sanyasis and widows, otherwise they become guilty of sin of killing a Brahmin. A person may eat only fruits or only one meal at night if he is unable to undertake a fast. A weaker person who is unable to undertake a Vrat of all twenty four Ekadashis on fruits should still fast for Ekadashis of Chaturmaas. A person unable to fast for eight Ekadashis of Chaturmaas should observe these Ekadashis by consuming only fruits and roots. A person undertaking the Vrat of Ekadashis of Chaturmaas by consuming fruits must still fast for these three Ekadashis of Chaturmaas - Shayani (Ashadh Sud), Parivartini (Bhadarvo Sud) and Prabodhani (Kartik Sud) as they are more auspicious. As Prabodhani Ekadashi is considered most auspicious and joyous among these three, all devotees must observe a strict fast, regardless of how they observe the Vrats of other Ekadashis. O devotees! A fast observed on Prabodhani Ekadashi is as rewarding as observing a fast on all other Ekadashis.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! My householder disciples, if they have wealth and time at their disposal, must undertake special grand venerations of Lord Krishna on all Ekadashis. As described in the Panchratra, the Murti of Lord Krishna should be established in the middle of a square wooden Patlo. His twenty four forms such as Keshav and others and His potencies and Parshads should be established around Him. A pot filled with water should be placed in front of Lord Krishna to be used to offer Him water for a bath and drinking. Lord Krishna must be offered the bath with Panchamrut (milk, honey, sugar, Ghee and yoghurt), Naivedhya of four types (solid, slurping, licking and liquid) and Maha Aarti. This religious ritual of Mahapuja (grand veneration) must be conducted on every Ekadashi. If unable to conduct Mahapuja on every Ekadashi, a devotee must conduct them on the eight Ekadashis of Chaturmaas. Even failing that, all My disciples must perform Mahapuja on Prabodhani Ekadashi. A wealthy devotee must not be mean with his wealth when conducting Mahapuja. O wise devotees! As Ekadashi is very dear to Lord Vaasudev, all My disciples must observe this Vrat sincerely. Anyone not honouring this Vrat of Ekadashi should not be considered the follower of our Udhhav Sampraday and should be excommunicated.

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Pleased at hearing the importance of the Vrat of Ekadashi, they wished to know the detailed procedure and rituals associated with this Vrat. They asked Him once more."

Thus ends the 32nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-33

The devotees asked, "O Bhagwan! Be kind to us and enlighten us on how we should conduct the Vrat of Ekadashi. Only You can offer us the true guidance."

Shree Narayanmuni replied, 'O wise devotees! I shall reiterate the rituals of Ekadashi as they have been narrated in Smrutis by eminent sages. Listen to it very attentively. The day of Ekadashi for Vrat starts from four Ghadi (96 minutes) before sunrise. The night of Dasami (tenth day of lunar month) must truly be over by this time (about one and half hour before sunrise). If Dasami overlaps Ekadashi, even by a minute, then that Ekadashi is not suitable for Vrat. Such Ekadashi is said to have an undue association with Dasami and is under its influence. Therefore, Ekadashis are of two types; Sudhha (pure, when Dasami has ended before 96 minutes before sunrise) and Vedha (where Dasami overlaps Ekadashi or when Dasami has not ended before 96 minutes before sunrise). This is further divided in three divisions; Nyun (where Dasami has ended before four Ghadi prior to sunrise), Sama (where Dasami ends with the onset of Ekadashi) and Adhik (where Dasami lingers on beyond one and a half hours before sunrise). This makes Ekadashi of six types. The similar calculation is done for Baras to be classified into three types; Nyun, Sama and Adhik, depending on when Ekadashi ends and Baras starts. Combine this with the earlier six types of Ekadashis and we have a total of eighteen types of Ekadashis (depending on its relations with Dasami and Baras). This classification has arrived by ancient sages. The nine types of Ekadashis that come under the section head of Vedha are never considered for Vrat by Vaishnavs. '

'There are some Ekadashis even among the other nine Sudhha Ekadashis which Vaishnavs should not consider for their Vrats. Ekadashi which has started before one and a half hours prior to sunrise is most chaste to observe the Vrat. There are said to be two Ekadashis (or any other Tithi for that matter) if an Ekadashi day (lunar) is longer than sixty Ghadi (twenty four hours), even by one Ghadi. The Vaishnavs, including My disciples must always consider the second Ekadashi (or other Tithi) for their Vratt. Ekadashi is said to be missing if it starts after actual sunrise and it (a lunar day) is shorter than fifty five Ghadi (twenty two hours). The Vrat of a fast should be observed on the next day, Baras. In case if Ekadashi is Vedha type and Baras is missing, My disciple should observe their fast on Baras and not on the actual Ekadashi day. If there are two Baras followed by a Sudhha (chaste) Ekadashi, the fast should be undertaken on the first Baras rather than on Ekadashi and conclude the fast on the second Baras. If Navami lingers on after the actual sunrise of Dasam and Ekadashi is Sudhha (Dasam ends prior to one and a half hours before sunrise), My devotees should observe their fast of Ekadashi on Baras and conclude their fast on Teras. If Sudhha Ekadashi lingers on after the sunrise on Baras even by few moments (that is there are two Baras), My devotees must fast for two consecutive days and conclude their fast on Teras. There is no need to eat to conclude the first day's fast before starting the second day's fast. However, if someone is unable to undertake two consecutive days of fasting, he may eat fruits and milk on Ekadashi, while undertaking the fast and Jagaran (singing Kirtans until late) the next day. Whenever the doubt arises regarding Sudhha or Vedha Ekadashi due to divergent opinions or calculations, My devotees should undertake a fast on Sudhha Baras and conclude it on Teras. Dasami is to be considered always Sudhha if it is shorter than twenty two hours. Dasami should be considered Vedha only if it is longer than twenty two hours. This is the binding opinion of Vithhalnathji. If one fails or forgets to observe a fast on Ekadashi for any reason, he must undertake the fast on the next day but should never allow the Vrat of Ekadashi to lapse.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! A fast may mean giving up food literally, but not metamorphically. A fast in its true sense is to stop one's ten senses and mind feeding on or indulging on its pleasures and divert them to concentrate on Bhagwan for a day. A person undergoing a Vrat of Ekadashi must not indulge in sins or associate with sinners. To associate with Bhagwan and His virtuous devotees should be the main objective for such a person. To chant one's Ishtadev's name or hymn, meditate upon Him, listen to His Katha and venerating Him are the main virtues of a person undergoing a fast on the day of Vrat. He should endeavour to have the following thirteen virtues; leniency, truthfulness, compassion, chastity, generosity, control of senses and mind, veneration, Homa (offering to the sacred fire), satisfaction, avoidance of stealing, Brahamcharya, non violence and giving up the pleasure of taste. One must not think, look at, smell, taste or talk about food on a day of a fast. He (health permitting) should not repeatedly drink water during the whole day; massage body with oil, smear sandalwood paste; eat beetle nuts; consume intoxicants or sleep on a bed. He should neither talk, touch nor associate (in any way) with a sinner, atheist, the violent or one who criticises the Vedas. A Brahamcharya Vrat is nullified by looking at, touching or talking to a woman, however, a householder devotee may speak or touch a woman in adverse circumstances. A fast is nullified by drinking water repeatedly, eating beetle leaf, sleeping during the daytime, cavorting with one's spouse, crying, getting angry or committing any sin. O devotees! Anger nullifies everything; Japa, Yagna, charity, Vrat, rituals, meditation or indeed any religious activity.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! One must chant Lord Krishna's hymn or name for one hundred and eight times as atonement for drinking water repeatedly, falling asleep during the daytime or speaking a lie. As an atonement for looking at, touching or speaking to a sinner, atheist, the violent or one who is critical of the Vedas, one should take a bath and chant Lord Krishna's hymn for three hundred times. However, there are some digressions from a Vrat which cannot be corrected by atonement such as consumption of a beetle leaf, meat, alcohol, onion or garlic, cavorting with one's wife, listening to gossip, swearing or cursing, gambling or hitting somebody. A man intentionally touching a widow or widow intentionally touching a man nullifies their fast. Masturbation or an accidental ejaculation negates a man's Vrat, therefore, a man must always guard against such possibilities and stay away from a woman on days of a Vrat. The eight; drinking water a few times, drinking milk, eating fruits, roots or other specifically permitted food such as Samo, eating with permission from a Brahmin or guru and taking medication do not nullify one's Vrat or fast. Furthermore, digression from a Vrat due to fear, illness or inadvertently is not considered a sin. A person, who, after starting a Vrat, gives up his Vrat halfway due to lethargy, is born as a dog in his next life. A devotee must not stop his Vrat halfway due to greed, anger or lethargy. He should not shave or cut his hair on a day of Vrat. He should undertake a fast for three consecutive days as repentance for breaking his Vrat.

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! Now let Me tell you what to do if any inauspicious events happen during the period of Vrat. If a Sutak of birth or death occurs prior to the start of a Vrat, a person undergoing the Vrat should continue with his fast but ask a Brahmin to complete the rituals of direct veneration on his behalf. If the news of Sutak arrives after the onset of a Vrat, a person should take a bath and continue with other rituals as normal. A female devotee should continue her fast and ask a Brahmin or somebody to continue other rituals of a Vrat if she becomes menstrual before or during a Vrat. If a day of Vrat or fast happens to be a day of Shraddh of his Pitris, he should offer the oblation without eating. A Shraddh falling on an Ekadashi day should be performed on the next day as Pitris also being Vaishnav, observe a fast on Ekadashi. O devotees! A pregnant, ill or someone who has just delivered a child should ask someone to undertake her Vrat rather than give it up. She should ask her husband, son, brother, sister or parents to undertake a Vrat and all its rituals such as fast or veneration on her behalf. Similarly, a man should ask his wife, son, brother, sister, disciple or parents to undertake a Vrat on his behalf. A scholar and pious Brahmin is a good alternative to undertake Vrats on behalf of male and female devotees. O devotees! Anybody undertaking a Vrat on behalf of somebody is rewarded by the Punya equivalent to a hundred times. A physically challenged person unable to undertake fast on a day of Vrat should chant the Vishnu Gayatri hymn for a thousand times or perform twelve Pranayam in lieu of a fast.

Narayanmuni continued, 'Both, a weak person unable to undertake a Vrat and a substitute person must observe all rules pertaining to that Vrat, otherwise the Vrat becomes nothing but just a physical exercise in futility. They should not eat Arad and other pulses, eat in a zinc plate, consume honey and salt, eat a second meal or excessively on Dasami. They must not indulge in gossip, gambling, sleeping during the daytime, cavorting, quarrelling, company of sinners and evil people, falsehood and other sensual pleasures. They must decide on a vow they will observe on Ekadashi before going to sleep on the floor rather than on a bed. Waking up early on Ekadashi, they, instead of brushing their teeth as normal, should only gargle their mouth with water before a bath. They should face Bhagwan's Murti and take a pledge that they will undertake a fast today and eat only the next day and seek His assistance in completing this pledge. O devotees! Now I shall describe what one should do on Ekadashi day. One should wake up very early on the morning of an Ekadashi and meditate upon Bhagwan Shree Hari before attending the calls of nature. Instead of brushing teeth, he should gargle twelve times and clean his tongue. He should perform Mahapuja instead of his normal worship of Bhagwan with available artefacts following his bath. He should venerate twenty four Murtis of Lord Krishna along with His respective consorts such as Rukmini and Laxmiji. A devotee unable to perform Mahapuja with such elaboration should venerate Lord Krishna as the ruling deity of Ekadashi along with His consort Laxmiji.

Magsar Sud Ekadashi is called 'Mokshada Ekadashi'. Keshav Bhagwan with His consort Shree should be worshipped with jasmine flowers on this Ekadashi. A devotee should offer Ladoos fried in Ghee and coconut as Naivedhya and seven types of grains should be donated following the veneration.

Magsar Vad Ekadashi is called 'Safala Ekadashi'. Sankarshan Bhagwan with His consort Sunanda should be worshipped with Agathia flowers on this Ekadashi. A devotee should offer Ladoos and Gauva as Naivedhya and gold should be offered as the main donation.

The next Ekadashi, on Posh Sud is called 'Sananda Ekadashi' when Narayan Bhagwan with His consort Padma should be venerated with flowers of the Google tree. He should be offered Ladoos of Churma and pomegranate as Naivedhya while bell metal pots full of Ghee should be given as a charity

The Ekadashi of Vad fortnight of the month of Posh is called 'Tilda' and Vaasudev Bhagwan should be venerated along with ShreePriya with roses. Naivedhya of Ghebar and grapes should be offered and clothes should be given as charity.

Maha Sud Ekadashi is called 'Jaya' Ekadashi when Bhagwan Madhav along with Nitya should be worshipped with Borasali (a jasmine type) flowers. A copper utensil filled with fifteen kilogram sesame seeds should be donated, while Manda (a type of sweet) and Bijora (a citrus fruit) should be offered in Naivedhya in veneration of Bhagwan.

'Vijya' Ekadashi falls on Maha Vad Ekadashi, when Bhagwan Pradhyumna along with His consort Buddhi should be venerated with Tulsi leaves. Soft Sev and lemons should be offered in Naivedhya while footwear should be donated at the conclusion of His veneration.

The Sud Ekadashi of month of Falgun is called 'Dhatri'. Govind Bhagwan and His consort Chandravati are its ruling deities, who should be venerated with Guldavadi (a type of marigold) flowers and offered Kansar (a type of sweet) and walnuts as Naivedhya. Sesame seeds should be given in charity on this Ekadashi.

The Vad Ekadashi of Falgun is called 'PaapMochini' Ekadashi, whose ruling deity is Bhagwan Anirudhha. He, along with Shishila should be venerated with jasmine flowers while Sev and berries should be offered in Naivedhya. Large quantity of sesame seeds is considered the best donation to be given on this Ekadashi.

Chaitra Sud Ekadashis is called 'Vimla' Ekadashi, and also known as 'Kamda' Ekadashi as it fulfils all desires of the devotees who undertake its Vrat. Vishnu Bhagwan and His consort Rama should be worshipped by mango buds and Ladoos and melons should be offered as Naivedhya. A devotee, wealth permitting, should endeavour to venerate Lord Vishnu with the full sixteen rituals. The sweets should be distributed as a charity on this Ekadashi.

Chaitra Vad Ekadashi is known as 'Varuthini' Ekadashi. Purushottam Bhagwan, along with Nanda should be venerated with Champo flowers and Vada (a slaty dish) and Gauva should be offered as Naivedhya. The donation of land is considered the best charity on this Ekadashi.

Bhagwan Madhusudan and His consort Madhvi should be venerated with large jasmine flowers on 'Mohini' Ekadashi which falls in Sud fortnight of Vaishakh. The rice pudding and jackfruit should be offered as Naivedhya to Him, while bed and bedding should be given as a charity.

'Apara' Ekadashi is the Vad Ekadashi of the month of Vaishakh whose ruling deities are Adhokshaj Bhagwan and Trayi, who should be worshipped with Ketki flowers. Milk mixed with rice and Bahufali fruit should be offered as Naivedhya and a cow with a calf should be given as a charity.

Jeth Sud Ekadashi known as 'Nirjala' Ekadashi whose ruling deity is Trivikram Bhagwan. He should be worshipped along with Padmakshi with trailing jasmine and offered Naivedhya of rice and yoghurt and mango. Umbrellas should be given as gifts in charity.

Jeth Vad Ekadashi is called 'Yogini' Ekadashi. Nrusinh Bhagwan with His consort Kshemankari should be venerated with flowers from a Bhrangraj shrub. A devotee should offer Naivedhya of Penda and Jambu (a type of berry) and make donation of water (arrange permanent arrangement of drinking water).

Bhagwan Vaman and Kamla should be venerated with Angheda flowers on 'Shayani' (or Dev Shayani) Ekadashi which is Sud Ekadashi of the Ashadh month. Naivedhya of Puris and coconut should be offered and a devotee should donate gold at the conclusion of Mahapuja.

The next Ekadashi falling in Vad fortnight of Ashadh is called 'Kamika' Ekadashi whose ruling deity is Achyut Bhagwan. He, along with His consort Vijya, should be venerated with Parijat (a type of Champo) flowers and offered Naivedhya of Khaja (a sweet) and Bili fruit. Donation of apparels is considered the best charity on this Ekadashi.

Shravan Sud Ekadashi is known as 'Putrada Ekadasi'. Bhagwan Shridhar and His consort Kantimati should be worshipped with lotus flowers and offered Malpuva (a type of sweet chapatti) and Sitafal (custard apple) as Naivedhya on this Ekadashi. Gift of footwear should be given as a charity.

The Vad Ekadashi of Shravan is called 'Aja' Ekadashi and Bhagwan Janardan is its ruling deity. He, along with Sundari, should be venerated during Mahapuja on this Ekadashi with Shreni flowers and offered Ladoos made of jaggery and beetle nut as Naivedhya. A devotee should offer the gift of a buffalo to a priest conducting Mahapuja.

Hrishikesh Bhagwan is the ruling deity of 'Padma' Ekadashi which falls in Sud fortnight of month of Bhadarvo. Bhagwan and His consort Aparajit should be worshipped with Kevdo flowers, while offering a sweet made with sesame seeds and bananas in Naivedhya. A devotee should bless or wish that a Brahmin conducting Mahapuja attains His Brahampur abode.

A devotee should venerate Bhagwan Upendra along with Subhaga using holy grass on 'Indira' Ekadashi which falls in Vad fortnight of Bhadarvo. Bhagwan should be offered Jalebi and Bili fruit in Naivedhya on this Ekadashi. The host should donate money to arrange for a priest's or some poor Brahmin's daughters' marriages.

Aso Sud Ekadashi is called 'PanshaKusha' Ekadashi whose ruling deity is Padmanabh Bhagwan. He and His consort Padmavati should be venerated lovingly with the leaves of the Kesudo tree and offered Shiro and Mindhal fruit as Naivedhya. Donation of white Ladoos is considered the best on this Ekadashi.

The ruling deity of 'Rama' Ekadashi, which falls in Vad fortnight of Aso, is Bhagwan Shree Hari. He and Hiranya should be venerated by jasmine flowers and offered banana puree and bananas as Naivedhya. A devotee should gift pots of Ghee at the conclusion of Mahapuja.

Kartik Sud Ekadashi is called 'Prabodhani' Ekadashi. Damodar Bhagwan and Radha should be worshipped using lotus flowers, while offering Magdal (a sweet similar to Laddos) and Lotus fruit in Naivedhya. Cots should be given as a charity on this Ekadashi.

Kartik Vad Ekadashi is known as 'Abhaya' Ekadashi when Bhagwan Shree

Krishna and Sulakshana should be worshipped with sesame flowers. Bhagwan should be offered Biranj (Shiro with much less Ghee) and coconut as Naivedhya in Mahapuja and a bull should be gifted at its conclusion.

Both Ekadashis of Adhik Maas (an extra month added to the lunar calendar to keep up with the solar calendar) are known as 'Kamla' Ekadashi. The worship of the ruling deity and the other rituals should be done according to whichever month is an Adhik Maas.

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! I just narrated the rituals of worship on each Ekadashi with their ruling deity. If all named flowers or other items are not available, a devotee should venerate Bhagwan with whatever artefacts are at his disposal. A beetle nut in lieu of named fruits, a Tulsi leaf instead of flowers, sugar candy for any items of Naivedhya and grains in lieu of any other donations mentioned are good substitutes. This is not a blank permission to scale down His Mahapuja. A wealthy person must not use the substitutes just to save money when it is possible for him to procure all artefacts, flowers, food and other items. O devotees! As faith and love are very important ingredients in veneration, My wealthy disciples must perform Mahapuja with all rituals including the establishment of twenty four Murtis such as Keshav and others and Parshads such as Nand and Sunand of Bhagwan LaxmiNarayan. Lord Krishna and Laxmiji should be addressed and venerated as whichever of His form is the ruling Murti of that particular Ekadashi. A devotee, his means permitting, should place a golden pot full of water and put five types of jewels (such as diamond, rubies etc.) in it. A lotus of twelve petals should be made of rice around the golden pot. Lord Krishna and Laxmiji should be established in the central position and worshipped with the full sixteen rituals accompanied by the Vedic hymns and visualisation of each ritual as follows.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! Meditate upon Lord Krishna before commencing Mahapuja and visualise that Lord Krishna is seated on an ornate Sinhasan in the middle of a brilliant radiation; He is so handsome as to shame Eros; His slightly dark complexion comparable to a newly formed cloud; wearing golden robes; holding a Chakra in His right hand and a conch in His left hand; wearing flower garlands around His neck and other numerous golden ornaments; accompanied by Laxmiji, holding a lotus flower in her hand, standing on His left side and Parshad Garud at His feet, ever eager to serve Him and being venerated and prayed by the Devtas, sages and Gandharvas.

A devotee should now commence His Mahapuja with the following sixteen rituals accompanied with these hymns. (1) Aahvan; 'O protector of devotees! O fulfiller of desires! O Lord of all Devtas! I invite You to come in front of me so that I can offer my veneration.' (2) Aasan; 'O Lord! Please be seated on a jewelled golden divine Sinhasan made by the Devtas.' (3) Paadhya; 'O Devesh! First I bathe You with milk, a chaste and an important item for any Yagna, which I have got from Kamdhenu. I have prepared yoghurt by mixing sour buttermilk with milk. Please have a bath with it. I have prepared Ghee, which is considered a staple food for the Devtas and Yagna Narayan, from fresh butter. Let me bathe You with it. O Dev! Now have a bath with honey, which is a nectar prepared from various flowering plants. Now I offer You ice sugar for a bath which will remove the oiliness of Ghee and yoghurt from Your body. I have brought clean water from shrines such as Pushkar and holy rivers such as Ganga to conclude Your Snaan. (7) Vastra - Abhushan; O Shree Hari! Please accept these two pieces of clothes made from fine cotton and silk and interwoven by gold threads to adorn Your body. O Vibhu! Here are rings, bracelets, armlets, crown, anklets and other ornaments. Please accept them to please me. (8) Yagnopavit; O Narayan! O

I have brought mangoes, oranges, bananas, jackfruit, grapes and other fruits for Your consumption. (14) Aarti; O Bhagwan! I offer You an Aarti of five wicks! O self radiant! Bless me with Your divine blessings.'

Narayanmuni continued, "O devotees! Lord Krishna should be addressed with this prayer while performing His Aarti. 'O Laxmipati! Be victorious. You protect Your devotees from evil. You take a human form for the sole aim of protecting Your devotees from unwarranted influences. O omnipresent Lord Vishnu! You, along with Arjun killed many demons to relieve earth from the burden of sinners. The Devtas including Brahma and Indra and all major kings on earth accepted Your supremacy at the time of Your marriage with Rukmini. Be victorious! O Lord Krishna! You stayed in Hastinapur for a long time at the request of Yudhishthir and his brothers; You became Arjun's charioteer in a battle and despite being unarmed, You vanquished an army strong enough that couldnot be overcome even by Indra. Be victorious all around! Draupadi made You a helpless follower instead of a leader by her profound love, so much so that You left the comforts of the palace and company of Rukmini to rush to Draupadi deep in a forest to alleviate her problem. Be victorious! You successfully demonstrated the entire gamut of sentiment of amour, as espoused by Sage Vatsayan, by playing with the Gopis and

You wear a bejewelled crown on Your head, fish shaped earring on Your ears, radiant golden robes and many flower garlands around Your neck which is marked with three horizontal lines. You mesmerise Your devotees by Your benign smile. O Lord I bow down to You. Be victorious all around!"

Explaining the fifteenth ritual of Namaskar (bowing and prostrating) of veneration following Aarti, Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, 'O Lord! I beg Your pardon for any unintended mistakes committed in or any shortcomings in Your veneration today. Please accept gold coins as a form of atonement for shortcomings. O master of the Universe! I offer You various flowers with love. Please come forward and accept them. O Lord Vishnu! I bow down to You. O Lord Krishna! You are the only rewarder of all Vrats. I bow down to You. Prostrating on the floor with two hands, two knees, two feet, chest and head touching the ground, eyes focussed at Bhagwan's feet, speech chanting His name and mind concentrated on His thoughts is called 'Ashtang Pranam'. Bowing utilising two hands, two knees, bowed head, speech and sight is called 'Panchang Pranam'. Only male devotees should perform Ashtang Pranam (prostrate on ground) while Panchang Pranam is prescribed for male and female devotees alike. O devotees! Dandvat Pranam (prostration) should be done from a little distance and from the right side of Bhagwan whilst imagining that one's left hand is touching Bhagwan's left foot and right hand touching His right foot. Dandvat Pranam should not be done from left, rear or straight from the front. A devotee must not do Dandvat Pranam, Homa or Japa within the sanctum sanctorum. All Punyas of a devotee are destroyed if he bows with just one hand or performs just one Pradakshina. '

Shree Narayanmuni added, 'O devotees! You should now perform the last and the sixteenth ritual of Stuti (prayer) of Bhagwan with following nine verses after bowing down to Him. 'O Govind! O Madhav! O ocean of mercy! O friend of the helpless! O Shreeman! You please the mind and eyes of the devotees by Your Darshan. Your complexion is comparable to a blue diamond. O divine! produce. The slaves or poor may undertake their activities, but at their minimal. Female devotees must not cry, quarrel, spin cotton, gossip or touch or speak with sinners and evil on Ekadashi. My devotees should spend the whole day engaged in Lord Krishna's Bhakti. The devotees should give various donations to pious Brahmins and stay awake until late at night singing Bhagwan's Kirtans to keep Him happy. Jagran done at the temple or in company of saints is the best. Male devotees should do Jagran in company of other male devotees and female devotees should do the same in company of other female devotees. The segregation of sexes must always be maintained. O devotees! Now let Me tell you atonement for not observing a Vrat on an Ekadashi. The sin of eating food on an Ekadashi is washed away by observing one Chandrayan Vrat. Someone who is unable to observe a fast should still observe one of the four; eat a single meal in afternoon, eat a single meal when a size of his shadow becomes double of his size (very late in the evening but before sunset), eat something offered to him without asking for it or gift gold to a Brahmin, but never allow an Ekadashi to be elapsed without undertaking a Vrat. O devotees! Though difficult, there are alternatives to a fast on Ekadashi. The following ten; eating when a size of one's shadow becomes twice of his size, light grains (which are offered in a Yagna such as rice, sesame and oats), light grains except rice, dry fruits such as dates and coconuts, white sesame seeds, only milk, only water and wind. Each of this is better than the preceding one.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! You must wake up early the next day (Baras) and either do the normal Puja or an elaborate Mahapuja just as on Ekadashi and offer stupendous meal to Bhagwan as Naivedhya. You should humbly lay your Vrat at His feet on the conclusion of both types of Puja with this hymn, "O Hari! Be pleased with my Vrat and remove my ignorance and enlighten me." O devotees! All the artefacts, including the Murti of Lord Krishna used in Mahapuja should be given as a gift to a Brahmin who conducted Puja or any other pious Brahmin. Further charity of food grains should also be given to a Brahmin. One should feed Brahmins and saints to the best of his abilities before doing Parna (taking food to conclude the fast of Ekadashi) and as on Ekadashi, he should refrain from sleeping during the daytime, eating a second meal, masturbate and eating oily snacks. The Parna to conclude an Ekadashi fast must be done before the astronomical Baras ends. One should complete all daily rituals such as Snaan, Puja etc. even before BrahamMuhurt (one and a half hours before sunrise) if Baras is short. The timing of this should be checked in Panchang (an astronomical almanac). If the arrival or imminent arrival of a guest makes it mandatory to dine together, a devotee still must do Parna with a sip of water. Dining with a guest later on is not considered a second meal. On the contrary, if Baras is longer (than twenty four hours), the Parna should only be done six hours after sunrise as a time before then is still considered Ekadashi.

In the early part of constellation Anuradha on Ashadh Sud (Shayani) Ekadashi Bhagwan retires for sleep, in the middle part of constellation Shravan on Bhadarvo Sud (Parivartini) Ekadashi Bhagwan turns on His side and near the end of constellation Revati on Kartik Sud (Prabodhani) Ekadashi Bhagwan rises from His slumber. Therefore, on Baras following these Ekadashis, a devotee must not do Parna on Baras as long as the Sun is still lying in these three constellations respectively. O devotees! I have explained the full rituals of the Ekadashi Vrat as narrated in the Smrutis. You must observe this Vrat reverently on each Ekadashi. I shall now explain Udhyapan (the process of ritualistic conclusion) of an Ekadashi Vrat as narrated in the holy scriptures.'

Thus ends the 33rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-34

Narayanmuni said, "O devotees! When a person takes a vow to observe a Vrat, he should hold some religious ceremonies or festivities as a part of that Vrat. This set of ceremonies or festivities and associated charity is called Udhyapan. Any Vrat is not totally successful until its Udhyapan is done, therefore, you must perform Udhyapan of Ekadashi Vrat properly. Udhyapan, however, should not be carried out very soon after the rising of the Planets, Jupiter and Venus, a short time before they set or when they are actually setting; in an Adhik month and when Jupiter is in Zodiac Leo."

Narayanmuni continued, "O devotees! Udhyapan should be carried out very opulently. An elaborate Mahapuja, feeding stupendous feasts to many Brahmins and gifting of cows and gold to pious Brahmins are the common elements of Udhyapan. Any of these should be done according to one's financial means. As a part of Udhyapan, a person undergoing the Vrat of Ekadashi should eat only once on Dasami, observe Brahamcharya and sleep on the floor. He should wake up early and conclude his routine quickly before collecting the artefacts required for Udhyapan. He should invite a Brahmin of the Udhhav Sampraday who is knowledgeable in the process of Mahapuja to conduct the ritual of Mahapuja. A person observing Vrat should prepare an area of ground in his home, temple or shrine on which the Puja is to be conducted. He should erect a Mandap on four pillars of banana trunks and place a large Patlo under it, draw a large lotus with twelve petals using Kumkum and rice and place a gold pot (filled with water) covered by a cloth with five leaves of mango tree covering its mouth in the middle. Drawing another small lotus with twelve petals around the pot, place a golden Murti of Lord Vaasudev and Laxmiji for worship. Starting from the East and in a clockwise direction, place twelve Murtis of Bhagwan and His spouses to represent the ruling deities of the twelve Ekadashis of Sud fortnights on the twelve petals of the outer large lotus in this order: Keshav Bhagwan and Shri, Bhagwan Narayan with Padmai, Madhav Bhagwan with Nitya, Bhagwan Govind and Chandra, Bhagwan Vishnu and Rama, Bhagwan Madhusudan and Madhvi, Bhagwan Trivikram with Padmakshi, Vaaman Bhagwan and Kamala, Bhagwan Sridhar and Kantimati, Rhishikesh Bhagwan and Aparajita, Bhagwan Padmanabh with Padmavati and Bhagwan Damodar with Radha. Place twelve Murtis of Bhagwan with His respective spouses on twelve petals of a smaller inner lotus to represent the ruling deities of the twelve Ekadashis of Vad fortnights in the same fashion starting from the East: Bhagwan Sankarshan with Sunanda, Bhagwan Vaasudev with Harini, Bhagwan Pradhyumna with Dhee, Bhagwan Aniruddha with Shushila, Bhagwan Purushottam with Nanda, Bhagwan Adhokshaj with Trayi, Bhagwan Narsinh with Ksemankari, Bhagwan Achyut with Vijya, Bhagwan Janardan with Sundari, Bhagwan Upendra with Subhaga, Bhagwan Shree Hari with Hiranya and Bhagwan Krishna with Sulakshan on the last petal. A devotee should venerate the golden Murti of Lord Krishna as previously established in the middle as guided by the expert Brahmin."

version of Puja, a devotee should bathe Bhagwan's Murti with 'Panchamrut' (a mixture of milk, yoghurt, Ghee, honey and sugar) with the sprinkling of flowers, bathe Him in clean water and offer Him robes. Bhagwan should be massaged with sandalwood paste (prepared with mixing two parts musk, four parts sandalwood, three parts Kumkum and one part camphor), offered flower garlands and venerated with a thousand Tulsi leaves. A devotee should light an incense stick and lamp before offering Him Naivedhya of sweets and salty varieties of food such as Ladoos, rice pudding, Penda, Jalebi, Sev, Puri etc. He should offer water to wash Bhagwan's mouth and face and offer Him Paan and various fruits. Another Aarti should be offered to Bhagwan at the conclusion of Puja. The Brahmins should be gifted land, cows, gold, horses, bedding and money according to one's financial capability. A devotee should light a holy fire in front of Bhagwan or in a cowshed (if impractical) and offer Ghee, sesame seeds, rice in the sacred fire with chanting of 'Idam Vishnu' and the twenty four names of the established Murtis. O devotees! A white or brown cow is considered most suitable to be given as a gift. A wealthy devotee must be very generous when giving alms and donations. The gold Murti of Bhagwan established in the middle and worshipped as a part of Puja must be gifted to one's Acharya or guru who should also be gifted with robes and food. Twenty four pots of sesame, rice or other cereals should be donated to the Brahmins. A devotee should also venerate saints and Varnis as a part of Udhyapan. He should stay up late for Jagran on Ekadashi nights and wake up early again on Baras and perform his normal routine and Puja before concluding his fast by eating in the company of his family. The full Punya of Ekadashi Vrat is gained only if Udhyapan is done as just described. O devotees! I just narrated the glory of Ekadashi Vrat, the ritual of its Udhyapan and its associated Mahapuja as described in various scriptures, in short. Whoever listens to it or narrates it, will have all his desires fulfilled.

Bhagwan Narayanmuni replied, “O devotees! Though Bhagwan is one, He took twenty four forms to please Ekadashi. The twenty four Murtis are distinct from each other, only in the way He holds a conch, Chakra, mace and lotus in His four hands. His different Murti can be recognised by looking at which hand is holding which article. I will explain the order of holding conch, Chakra etc for each form in this order; lower right hand, upper right hand, upper left hand and lower left hand.”

Lord Shree Hari continued, “Keshav Bhagwan holds a lotus, conch, Chakra and mace respectively in His hands; Narayan Bhagwan has a conch, lotus, mace and Chakra in His hands; Madhav Bhagwan has mace, Chakra, conch and lotus in His hands; Govind Bhagwan holds Chakra, mace, lotus and conch in His hands; Vishnu Bhagwan has a mace, lotus, conch and Chakra in His hands; Madhusudan Bhagwan has a Chakra, conch, lotus and mace in His hands; Trivikram Bhagwan has a lotus, mace, Chakra and conch in His hands; Vaaman Bhagwan has a conch, Chakra, mace and lotus in His hands; Shridhar Bhagwan has a lotus, Chakra, mace and conch in His hands; Rhishikesh Bhagwan has a mace, Chakra, lotus and conch in His hands; Padmanabh Bhagwan has a conch, lotus, Chakra and mace in His hands; Damodar Bhagwan has a lotus, conch, mace and Chakra in His hands; Sankarshan Bhagwan has a mace, conch, lotus and Chakra in His hands; Vaasudev Bhagwan has a mace, conch, Chakra and lotus in His hands; Pradhyumna Bhagwan has a Chakra, conch, mace and lotus in His hands; Aniruddha Bhagwan has a Chakra, mace, conch and lotus in His hands; Purushottam Bhagwan has a Chakra, lotus, conch and mace in His hands; Adhokshaj Bhagwan has a lotus, mace, conch and Chakra in His hands; Narsinh Bhagwan has a Chakra, lotus, mace and conch in His hands; Achyut Bhagwan has a mace, lotus, Chakra and conch in His hands; Janardan Bhagwan has a lotus, Chakra, conch and mace in His hands; Upendra Bhagwan has a conch, mace, Chakra and lotus in His hands; Hari Bhagwan has a conch, Chakra, lotus and mace in His hands and Krishna Bhagwan has a conch, mace, lotus and Chakra in His hands.”

Narayanmuni continued, “O Devotees! I just narrated the finer distinctions between the twenty four Murtis of Bhagwan. Keshav Bhagwan is the ruling deity of Magsar Sud Ekadashi and Sankarshan Bhagwan is the ruling deity of Magsar Vad Ekadashi. As explained earlier, Bhagwan Narayan, Vaasudev and other Murtis along with their respective spouses must be venerated on each Ekadashi in order, while Purushottam Bhagwan must be venerated on both Ekadashis falling in the Adhik month. One must remember that the four Swarups of Bhagwan - Vaasudev, Aniruddha , Pradhyumna and Sankarshan are not the same as mentioned in the above twenty four Murtis. These four, as controller, creator, sustainer and destroyer are eternally different. A wealthy devotee must not try to save money while conducting Mahapuja on Ekadashi, because Bhagwan as husband of Laxmi (wealth) gives much more in return. O devotees! Lord Krishna, the dweller of Akshardham, will fulfil all desires of any devotee, male or female, who remembers His twenty four Murtis every morning."

Thus ends the 35th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-36

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The saints and devotees present in the assembly were very pleased to hear the glory of Ekadashi Vrat and its Udhyapan rituals from Shree Hari. They, knowing that Shree Hari is indeed Lord Krishna mentioned in all rituals, pledged to undertake the Vrat of Ekadashi the next day. Shree Hari retired to His private quarters after asking all the devotees to return to their respective lodgings. He took a bath and stood in front of a Murti of Lord Krishna that He used for His routine veneration and pledged to observe the Vrat of Ekadashi the next day. He asked Brahmins to prepare a Mandap for Mahapuja and gather material for Naivedhya and artefacts for Mahapuja before retiring for the night on a floor."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari woke up very early and after a short meditation upon His own form, went to the banks of River Unmattganga accompanied by many saints and devotees. After answering the calls of nature and gargling His mouth twelve times instead of brushing His teeth, He entered the waters of Unmattganga for His daily bath. He filled the pot of sieved water of Unmattganga to be used in Mahapuja. Despite being the master of the whole universe and despite having many personal attendants, Lord Shree Hari carried the pot of water Himself to propagate the true servility required for the veneration. He picked fresh flowers and Tulsi leaves from the garden. He changed His clothes, sat on a silk mat and marked His forehead, two arms and chest with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo at the commencement of His daily Puja. He called a few scholar Brahmins who were expert in conducting Mahapuja as per the Udhhav Sampraday. The Brahmins guided Him by

They drew two - a larger outer and a smaller inner - lotuses with twelve petals. The Brahmins placed gold idols of Bhagwan Krishna and Laxmiji in the centre of the lotuses and invoked Bhagwan to be present during Mahapuja. They placed twelve Murtis of Bhagwan representing the ruling deities of Sud Ekadashis on twelve outer petals and twelve Murtis to represent the ruling dieties of Vad Ekadashis on the petals of the smaller inner lotus in this order."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! These last twelve Murtis represent the twelve Ekadashis of Vad fortnights. O king! The Brahmins also placed the idols of Nand, Sunand and other Parshads on the petals."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The Brahmins guided Shree Hari to venerate Bhagwan Yogeshwar and Laxmi as per Vedic rituals. Shree Hari mediated upon

He concentrated His mind on Bhagwan holding a conch, Chakra, lotus and mace in His hands. Shree Hari conducted Yogeshwar Bhagwan's Mahapuja with sixteen rituals starting with meditation and including invoking , bathing etc. He bathed the Murti of Yogeshwar Bhagwan with Panchamrut before offering Him Naivedhya of Ladoos, Penda, Jalebi, rice pudding, sev, rice, lentils, yoghurt etc. Shree Hari offered Bhagwan fresh water to wash His mouth and face before offering Him Paan. The air was filled with the sound of clapping and musical instruments when Shree Hari performed a grand Aarti. The Devtas too, sprinkled flowers on Shree Hari from above. Shree Hari concluded the Mahapuja with the offering of flower garlands and Namaskar. O king! Shree Hari had also established and conducted veneration of His father, Dharmadev, and twelve mothers such as Bhakti, Shradhha etc. He gave many gifts to Brahmins at the conclusion of Mahapuja before arriving where the daily assemblies were held to grant His Darshan to His thousands of devotees gathered there. Shree Hari, Who had taken a human form to re-establish the true religious practices, conducted the Udhyapan ritual to please His devotees and set a splendid example to follow."

CHAPTER-37

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Like others, King Uttam's elder sister, Jayaba woke up early to conclude her daily routine, including the morning worship before starting to undertake Bhagwan's Mahapuja. She placed gold Murtis of Bhagwan Yogeshwar and Laxmiji in the middle of two lotuses and bathed them with Panchamrut, offered them new clothes, flower garlands, incense, Aarti and prayers. She decided to donate ten types of (symbolic) cows and Mountain Meru to please Bhagwan Narayanmuni. She smeared a portion of the floor of her quarters with cow dung and sat there. She visualised ten cows facing the East in her mind. Each cow was made of one hundred kilograms of jaggery and was accompanied by a calf made of twenty five kilograms of jaggery. Each cow and calf were adorned with very expensive clothes, their ears were made of semi precious stones, eyes and eyebrows of pearls, posterior of copper, tail of silk, horns of gold, hooves of silver and feet of sugarcane. The bronze milking pot was placed near each cow. Jayaba venerated the cows and calves before giving them away (equivalent amount of jaggery, pots, sugarcane, gold, silver and precious stones) to the Brahmins. O king! In an exact similar fashion, she visualised ten cows and ten calves of Ghee, milk, sugar, sesame seeds, honey, juices, yoghurt, water and gold and donated an equivalent amount of Ghee, milk etc. to the Brahmins. In any case of cows and calves symbolically made of Ghee, she donated one hundred kilograms of Ghee in lieu of each cow and twenty five kilograms of Ghee for each calf. She donated an equivalent amount of milk, sugar and other edibles in lieu of the cows and calves, donated four Pal (app. 100 grams) gold in lieu of each cow and twenty five grams gold in lieu of each calf. Jayaba ritually venerated all ten types of (symbolic) cows before giving them to the Brahmins. O king! The amount of wealth Jayaba gave in donation to the Brahmins was beyond the capability of most kings. She gifted this much wealth in donation just to please Bhagwan Narayanmuni."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! She decided to donate ten types of Mountain Meru as well. She imagined large mountains of grains, salt, jaggery, gold, sesame seeds, cotton wool, Ghee, gems, silver and sugar. Each mountain was decorated with trees, streams and ponds. A Mandap was erected in front of the temple of Vaasudev Narayan in the royal courtyard, where the ground was smeared with cow dung and covered with Darbh (a type of holy grass). All four sides were decorated with multi coloured banners and buntings. A gigantic mound of thirty two thousand kilograms of grains was established under the Mandap. She placed various types of precious and semi precious gems such as pearls, jades, rubies, sapphires etc. in all four sides of this mountain of grains. She placed a high pile of expensive and fine white, yellow, multi coloured and red fabric in the East, South, West and North respectively to denote

She built a swing made of fine fabrics of five colours and decorated it with numerous strings of pearls and flowers."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Jayaba made four small mountains of other grains. She made Mountain Mandrachal of eight thousand kilograms of barley on the East of Mountain Meru. She planted two golden trees - Bhadra and Kadamb and gold idol of Eros on its peak. She made two lakes -Ksharod and Arunod and a forest called Chaitrarath of silver on its slopes. Jaya made Mountain Gandhmadan of thirty two thousand kilograms of wheat on the South of Meru. She planted the shrub of Jambu of gold and a silver statue of Kuber on its peak. She made two lakes - Ghrutod and Manas and a forest named Gandharva of silver on its slopes. She made Mountain Vipul of thirty two thousand kilograms of sesame seeds on the West of the central large mountain and made two lakes - Dadhisar and Shudhhodksar in the middle of Forest Vibraj. The golden swans swam in its water and Peeple trees of gold were planted on its bank. Jayaba made Mountain Suparsva of thirty two thousand kilograms of Urad in the North of Meru, where she planted a gold Banyan tree on top of the mountain, under which a golden cow named Kamdhenu, grazed. The slopes of the mountain had a silver forest called Savitra and a silver lake called Madhubhadra. O king! All four smaller mountains were adorned with various clothes and fruits. Under the expert guidance of her guru, Jayaba venerated Mountain Meru and the Devtas placed on top of all the mountains. She gifted Mountain Meru - thirty two thousand kilograms of grains, large quantity of silver and gold - and twenty four (real) cows to her guru following his veneration. She gifted four smaller mountains to four assistant priests."

with fine fabrics, fruits and gems. The forests, plants and lakes were formed on these mountains as previously. O king! She used one thousand kilograms jaggery, twenty five kilograms gold, three hundred and twenty kilograms sesame seeds, six hundred and forty kilograms cotton wool, eight hundred kilograms sugar and one thousand, two hundred and eighty kilograms Ghee to prepare the mountains. She also used one thousand pearls and numerous diamonds, rubies, sapphire etc. to make five mountains of gems. She used two hundred and fifty kilograms of silver for silver mountains in which gold was used in place of silver to make foothills and peaks. She venerated each type of mountain reverentially before gifting them to pious Brahmins just to please Lord Swaminarayan. O king! Jayaba was just the medium of this extensive charity, while the wealth had actually come from Uttam Khachar's treasury. Uttam Khachar's generosity was incomparable! The present devotees, many kings among them, were surprised at the amount of wealth Uttam Khachar made available to please Bhagwan Shree Hari. Jayaba venerated Bhagwan Damodar and His spouse Radha (the ruling deities of Prabodhani Ekadashi) later that night, while all the other devotees stayed up late for Jagran while still observing the fast, just to please Bhagwan Shree Hari."

Thus ends the 37th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-38

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Lord Shree Hari, who has taken birth only to propagate the true religious practices, observed a fast on Prabodhani Ekadashi. He arrived in the assembly at night, where the saints and devotees had gathered for Jagran and took His seat on His Sinhasan. He first listened to the greatness of Ekadashi as espoused by Sage Vasishtha and then performed special veneration of Radhaji and Damodar Bhagwan. On a cue from Shree Hari, the saints and devotees started singing Kirtans accompanied by clapping and playing musical instruments, which lasted until very early the next morning. Shree Hari went in the kitchens to inspect the preparations of the feast for the ritualistic conclusion of the fast the next day. The female devotees, who had just sat down for a short rest from their cooking duties, rushed to greet Shree Hari and offered Him a seat. O king! Shree Hari saw two large mounds of Jalebi and Khaja (type of sweet). Lalita saw a slight disappointment in Shree Hari's eyes as the prepared sweets were less than half of what were prepared at the Annakut festival. She asked Shree Hari, 'O Lord! Shall we make more sweets or will this much suffice?' Shree Hari replied, 'O princess! This quantity may just be sufficient only for the first batch of My saints if I personally do not serve them.' O king! Lalita replied politely, 'O Hari! Do You think this much Jalebi will not suffice for Parna? We believe that this quantity of Jalebi and Khaja will last five days. This quantity may look insufficient, but we know the magic of Your hands. Once You touch these sweets, these will be enough to feed the whole universe."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari shook His head as if worried. Rama, to alleviate Shree Hari's worry, led Him to the other kitchens. Besides seeing mounds of Ladoos and Puris, He saw Ganga, Rama, Yamuna, Reva and many other female devotees engaged in cooking more food. He was impressed with a large quantity of yellowish Ladoos and white Puris staked high. He saw a large heap of Thor (a sweet dish) and Ladoos drenched in Ghee in another corner. He also saw Rama and Yamuna cooking Shiro in a large vessel on another stove. Bhagwan Shree Hari visited other kitchen as well and was pleased to see a large quantity of Pudla (a type of Chapati) prepared by Nathi, Sutarfeni (a sweet) cooked by Mauna, various cooked vegetable prepared by Amari, Manda (a sweet) and Vada (a savoury) prepared by Gulal and many other savoury dishes prepared by Amrat. He saw Uttam Khachar's two younger sisters, Panchali and Nani, bringing and stacking Penda under Rama's guidance. Uttam Khachar's two wives, Kumuda and Jashu were busy making rice pudding. Shree Hari also saw Yati, Jivi, Ladoo, Uma, Kumari, Kushala, Sukha, Amari, Amala, Kshema, Aditi, Fulli, Ratnamala, Rati, Devika and many other female devotees engaged in various duties in the kitchens. He saw the stores full of various items prepared by other Brahmin and Kshatriya female devotees just to please Him. He was impressed and happy with the preparation and profusely praised Lalita and the other female devotees for their exemplary effort.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari was totally satisfied upon seeing more than double the amount of food that was previously prepared for Annakut festival. He asked female devotees to take a short rest before returning to cook rice and lentils. The cockerel heralded the morning just as Shree Hari made His way to His personal quarters. He took many saints and devotees to the banks of River Unmattganga to undertake His daily morning routine."

Thus ends the 38th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-39

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! After concluding His daily routine on Kartik Sud Baras, Bhagwan Narayanmuni performed special veneration of Laxmiji and Bhagwan Yogeshwar at the end of which He gifted valuable Murtis to a pious Brahmin. He arrived and sat on His Sinhasan under the tree where the saints and devotees had gathered for His divine Darshan after concluding their daily routine. Jayaba followed Shree Hari's example and gifted valuable Murtis of Laxmiji and Bhagwan Yogeshwar to Brahmins at the conclusion of special veneration. O king! Mukundanand Brahamchari approached Shree Hari to inform Him that the food was ready. On being asked by Shree Hari to conclude their fast with Parna, all saints and devotees went to their respective dining areas. The saints washed their hands, feet and face and sat in orderly rows with their water jugs. The Brahmins distributed plates and bowls and served water to all saints before returning to serve food. Shree Hari had asked Muktanand swami, Brahmanand swami and other saints who normally served food with Shree Hari to sit with the other saints as He alone was to serve the food. Narayanmuni walked briskly among rows of saints serving Jalebi, Ladoos etc. from the trays held by serving Brahmins. Shree Hari asked the saints to start when all the items on the menu were served to all of them."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The saints asked Shree Hari to give them whichever item He brought to serve them. Shree Hari walked through all the rows repeatedly to serve saints, who kept asking for more, realising the importance of Prasad from Shree Hari's own hands. The Muktas from Akshardham and other abodes and the Devtas from heaven descended on Gadhpur to get Prasad from Shree Hari's hands. Some of the blessed onlooking devotees had the Darshan of the Muktas and Devtas sitting in the rows eating food. Some of the devotees saw the mounds of food and rivers of Ghee, milk and rice pudding flowing with His divine blessings. These blessed devotees saw Shree Hari in several forms moving between many rows simultaneously and the Muktas and Devtas, being served food individually by Shree Hari, while others only saw Shree Hari in the singular form serving the saints."

Suvrat Muni continued, O king! Shree Hari asked the Brahmins to bring in the rice and lentils when He saw saints had eaten the sweet and savoury items to their hearts' content. Bhagwan Shree Hari walked another round of rows of saints with a few Ladoos in one hand and a jug of rice pudding in another to see if any saints needed them. Just as He was about to retreat from the rows, Brahmanand swami, understanding the importance of Prasad from Shree Hari, called Him, 'O Bhagwan! Come back! Have You forgotten us? Nityanand swami sitting next to me is too shy to ask again and again while his plate is empty.' Shree Hari went to Brahmanand swami and served him rice pudding in his empty bowl. Brahmanand swami said, 'O Shree Hari! Nityanand swami may think I have no teeth if You serve me only rice pudding. Please serve me Ladoos as well to remove his doubts.' This unique style of asking more caused a wave of laughter among the saints. Shree Hari smiled at Braham Muni and served him all the Ladoos in His hand at which Muni made a loud protest. Mukundanand Brahamchari brought a tray full of Ladoos for Shree Hari, who approached Muktanand swami. Swami pointed at few Ladoos still in his plate to indicate that he does not want any more Ladoos but Shree Hari took that as an indication of wanting more Ladoos and served swami one more Ladoo at which he protested very loudly. Shree Hari took this loud protest to mean a real no to any more food and moved away from Muktanand swami. Shree Hari saw Chaitanyanand swami covering his plate with both his hands and shaking his head negatively, yet He served him one more Ladoo in his plate, at which swami made a loud verbal protest. Shree Hari served half a Ladoo to Nityanand swami knowing fully well that swami was really full. He served only rice pudding to Anandanand swami, knowing that he had very few teeth in his mouth and served only a quarter Ladoo to Gopalanand swami knowing full well that swami ate very little. He totally disregarded loud protests against any more food being served by Sachchidanand swami and served him two Ladoos in his empty plate. As Shree Hari was breaking a Ladoo in half to serve him, Krupanand swami said, 'O Bhagwan! Why are You troubling Your delicate fingers by breaking Ladoo in half? Save Your troubles and serve me the whole Ladoo.' O king! Shree Hari, not content to serve just one Ladoo, served swami with a second Ladoo as well at which Krupanand swami made a loud verbal protest. He served Swayamprakashanand swami two Ladoos at which he also made a loud protest. Shree Hari approached Shukanand swami, who was eating Jalebi at a leisurely pace as he was indeed full, yet Shree Hari served him another half a Jalebi. Realising that Atmanand swami was too shy to ask for more Ladoos, Shree Hari went near him and said, 'O swami! Take a cue from Brahmanand swami. See how boldly he asked for more Ladoos! Give up your shyness and take these two Ladoos.' O king! Saying this to Atmanand swami, Shree Hari served him two Ladoos. Mahanubhavanand swami, sitting next to Atmanand swami, had a mouthful of Jalebi and therefore, was incoherent in his speech. Shree Hari, disregarding his stammer, served him another Jalebi at which swami made a loud verbal protest. Shree Hari went to each saint and served them more Prasad than what they could handle, but they did not leave anything on their plate. He asked the Brahmins to make another round of rice and lentil, before washing His hands. The saints, with enlarged bellies and short of breath due to overindulgence, returned to their quarters after washing their hands. Shree Hari asked His Parshads such as Soma Khachar and Sura Khachar, Kshatriya devotees such as King Hemantsinh and all the other devotees to sit down in rows for their lunch. O king! Shree Hari lovingly served Prasad to all the devotees just as He had done at the Annakut feast, a few days previously. He asked Jaya, Lalita and the other female devotees to have their lunch and conclude their fast, before returning to His personal quarters. He took a bath, cooked food and offered it Lord Krishna as Naivedhya before eating it."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! To set an example for His devotees to follow, Shree Hari did not retire for afternoon siesta today. Instead, He called a few of His Parshads for a chat, where He profusely praised Jayaba for her exemplary effort to make the celebrations of Prabodhani Ekadashi a success. O king! Shree Hari loves nothing more than sincerity in His devotees. Shree Hari praised Jayaba openly to let His devotees know how much He appreciates her sincerity.

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! Always generous in granting His divine Darshan to His devotees, Lord Shree Hari returned to His Sinhasan under the tree in the afternoon for a while, before going for the evening Aarti of Lord Vaasudev Narayan. He returned to the assembly after Darshan and Dhun. Smiling benignly at His devotees, Lord Narayanmuni addressed them, ‘O devotees! You are ardent worshippers of Lord Krishna; you observe your ethics sincerely and you observe your Dharma appropriate to your Ashram as well. However, this is the time to ask any questions to remove any lingering doubts you may have about anything. Do not shy away from asking any questions. You must not have any doubts in your minds.’ O king! There were many kings present in that assembly including Vasta Khachar, Soma Khachar, Punjaji and Hemantsinh. They confabulated among themselves and collectively asked Shree Hari, ‘O Bhagwan! O Lord Swaminarayan! We are entangled in the polity and other worldly activities at all times. We have become Your disciples. O guru of all Gurus! Please enlighten us on how to conduct our royal affairs. What positive and negative steps should we take to discharge our royal duties?’O king! Shree Hari was very pleased to hear such an important question from His devotees. The thought of Vidur, one of His Ekantik devotees of the bygone era, sprang to His mind before answering their question.”

Narayanmuni replied, “O kings! The scriptures contain the advices rendered by scholars and wise and evil and foolhardy. You should act according to the advice of scholars and the wise, while disregard the fools’ advice. This is My cardinal principle. However, it is very important to differentiate between the wise and fools. Vidurji has explained this in detail to King Dhritrashtra. He had offered the sane advice alike to the householder devotees engaged in the worldly affairs and the Tyagi devotees who have withdrawn from the worldly affairs. The collection of his advice has become known as the VidurNiti. You should study it carefully and act accordingly. The VidurNiti is the gem among all Niti Shastras (the scriptures outlining ethics). You shall derive all happiness of this world if you act according to the advice rendered therein. O devotees! The VidurNiti will show you the correct path and the means to untangle from any problems that may come your way. You will reap all materialistic happiness in this world and eternal bliss in the next by following the advice of the VidurNiti.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The inquiring kings and other devotees were happy to hear Shree Hari's benevolent sermon and pledged to act accordingly. He asked the devotees to retire for the night and He Himself returned to Akshar Bhuvan, His private quarters for the night. This sermon on the VidurNiti was delivered on the night of Baras. Shree Hari and the devotees listened to the Katha of the fifth Canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat from Pragji Purani for next the three nights. Shree Hari would recap the main points of Katha in the form of sermons at the end of Katha. O king! The main points raised were: All persons must always remain within the boundaries of their ethical duties at all times; one must associate only with the pious and never with the evil as the traits of the associates surely influence that person; one must not act rashly and contrary to religious ethics as one indeed has to suffer the consequences of his actions. Shree Hari explained these main points in a very simple language for the benevolence of His devotees. O king! Thus, the devotees and saints enjoyed their stay of eighteen days in Gadhpur listening to His sermons and having His Darshan."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Jayaba celebrated Bhaktimata's birthday with a great pomp in the evening of Kartik Punima under Shree Hari's guidance. Once again seated on the Sinhasan, Shree Hari addressed His gathered devotees, 'O devotees! You must return to your respective village tomorrow morning. Protect your belongings and women folk on your way home. The saints will also disperse tomorrow and tour different regions to propagate My message. You must always consider your soul as a distinct entity from your gross body, be engaged in Bhakti of Lord Krishna and behave within the boundaries of your Dharma. This is the only way to attain Brahampur, Bhagwan's supreme abode and its eternal pleasures.' O king! The devotees collectively asked Shree Hari, 'O Bhagwan Swaminarayan! You just mentioned that the devotees attain Your supreme abode, Brahampur, by observing one's Dharma as per his Varna and Ashram coupled with knowledge, detachment and Your Bhakti. Please tell us about Your supreme abode. Who can explain this any better than You?"

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! To quench His devotees' desire to know about Brahampur, omnipotent and omnipresent Lord Shree Hari replied."

Thus ends the 40th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Narayanmuni said, 'O Devotees! My supreme abode is attainable only to My Ekantik devotees, therefore, Brahampur is shrouded in mystery and there are very few instances where its detailed description is given. It is often mentioned as Vaikunth and Golok as well. It is described in short in the Chhandogya Upanishad, the Mokshdharma chapter of the Mahabharat and the Vaasudev Mahatmya of the Skand Puran. I am letting you know the detail as your mind and intellect have become lucid due to your Bhakti towards Me. This universe is a sphere made of fourteen different worlds including the earth. The globe is surrounded by seven different environments of five base elements, ego and Mahatatva. The first environ of the earth is spread for (approximately) thirty million kilometres. The next environ of water is ten times larger than the environs of the earth. Each progressive environs of light, wind, ether, ego and Mahatatva are ten times larger than its preceding environs. The cluster of many such universes and their surrounding environments make up a cosmos which is surrounded by the environment of Prakruti (the source of creation). The brilliant radiance, variably called 'Chidakash' or 'Param Vyom', lies beyond the eighth environ of Prakruti, which is more radiant than millions of suns and moons shining simultaneously. Indeed the light emanating from innumerable suns and moons appears as a mere blip when compared to the radiance of Chidakash. A very deep and wide river flows through Chidakash. This river, called 'Virja' or 'SudhaSindhu', is eternal, endless and perennially full of water.'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! There is an island in the middle of the vast River Virja. Many herds of divine cows (Kamdhenu) and bulls roam this island. The large wooded areas are covered by numerous divine trees such as Parijat, Mandar and Kalpvruksha entwined with highly fragrant ivies such as jasmine. Many types of birds rest in numerous flowering shrubs and other fruit bearing trees. There are many mountains, rivers, ponds and gardens on this divine island. A mountain called 'ShatShrung' surrounds this island like a fort. The four gates of the fort like mountain is guarded by Subal, Prabal and others. Bhagwan's weapons such as Sudarshan Chakra and mace and His potencies such as Anima and Girima have taken residence in person within the fort. O devotees! It is not possible to compare this divine land with anything in the whole cosmos. Indeed it is incomparable! Even I cannot describe its beauty fully. I can only attempt to describe its beauty by giving an example. Imagine this earth, including its mountains, rivers etc. is made of crystal clear glass and imagine further that it is being illuminated simultaneously by the sun and all stars internally. The radiance and beauty of the land of this island is even more radiant and beautiful than the shimmering earth.

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! This island is the home to Lord Krishna. It is called Golok. The roads of Golok are paved with rubies and other gems. Millions of Muktas, the souls that have attained Moksha have built their ornate palaces on this land. In the central area of the island - Gokul, there is an area of more brilliant radiance, indeed the fountainhead of radiance, which is 'Sat' (ever true), 'Chit' (conscious) and gives 'Anand' (bliss) to thousands of resident Muktas. According to the Upanishads, this area of radiance is eternal, unlimited, self illuminated and the source of all radiance. O devotees! This indeed is Brahampur of Lord Krishna. It is beyond Time and Maya. There is a temple within this fountainhead of radiance, the glory of which even I can not describe fully. Its pillars and floor are studded with the most expensive gems which reflect the inner radiance to dazzle the eyes. Thousands and thousands of male and female Muktas throng this temple. There is a bejewelled Sinhasan in the middle of the temple on which Bhagwan Shree Krishna, surrounded by Radha, Laxmi and numerous Parshads, sits to grant His Darshan to Muktas visiting this temple. The temple is so beautiful and magnificent that it cannot be compared to anything in this world. The pleasures of Brahampur are eternal and blissful. Just as the humans of this world and their means of pleasures are made of five base elements, the bodies of Muktas, their clothes, ornaments and the means of their pleasures are all divine and not gross. Their happiness springs from within; it is not dependent on external sources as the happiness of this world which depends on external factors. Therefore, all Muktas' beauty, wealth, glory, power, happiness are equal. There is no division among Muktas for any reason whatsoever. The centre, reason and source of their pleasure is indeed Lord Krishna.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! Just as a wealthy person who has everything at his disposal all the time, he chooses different avenues for his enjoyment at different times, the Muktas of Brahampur enjoy their means of pleasure as they desire from time to time. Though the Muktas take the form of male and female as they choose, the element of lust does not exist here. The distinction of sexes exists only as a means to serve Bhagwan. The radiance emanating from the bodies of Muktas is greater than hundreds of suns shining simultaneously, yet much less, a miniscule, when compared with the radiance of Brahampur. The radiance emanating from Lord Krishna's single finger nail is hundred times more brilliant than the radiance of Brahampur. This comparison gives you an idea of how radiant Muktas, Brahampur and Lord Krishna are. Though Bhagwan Shree Krishna is slightly dark complexioned, He appears very fair due to emanating radiance from His body. He is eternally two armed. Shridama, Nand, Sunand and other Parshads, in their divine form, are ever ready to serve Lord Krishna. Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva of all universes venerate and stand with bowed heads in front of Him. The Vedas in person sing His paeans. Dharmadev and Bhaktimata stand on either side of Him ever ready to take His care. The Mukta devotees can see Bhagwan in whatever form they wish, be it four armed, eight armed or a hundred armed. Indeed, Bhagwan takes whatever form His devotees wish to see Him in. This is Lord Krishna's supreme abode. It is beyond any logic and it is beyond anybody's reach unless Bhagwan Purushottam Narayan expressly wishes

so. The Ekantik devotees attain this abode through steadfast and servile Bhakti of Lord Krishna or His other incarnations directly. O devotees! I have described the mystifying Brahampur in short to you and that too only as a reward for your unstinted love for Me. You must not mention about this to atheists, cheaters, hypocrites, non devotees or evil people ever.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Besides the devotees, the saints were also very pleased to hear about Akshardham from Shree Hari Himself. Their belief that Lord Shree Hari is indeed Lord Krishna Himself and Brahampur is the supreme abode of none other than Lord HariKrishna sitting in front of them in divine human form. They were very happy to realise that they, with His blessings, will attain this abode after their death."

Thus ends the 41st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The devotees went to their respective lodgings at the end of the assembly while Shree Hari returned to Akshar Bhuvan to retire for the night. The devotees were not happy to leave Gadhpur and Shree Hari, nonetheless, they started packing to leave the following morning. Early next morning, they collected food to last through their journey from the storeroom and stacked it on their carts. The saints gathered their copies of scriptures, ropes to fetch water from wells, water jugs and other necessary items for a long sojourn. All of them gathered in a royal courtyard for the last Darshan of Shree Hari. Shree Hari left for Radhavav, a step well about one and a half kilometres from the royal residence on a high Sindhi horse to avoid the fear of melee,. All devotees made their way to Radhavav behind Shree Hari. He steered His horse on a side of the road so that all passing devotees could have His Darshan unhindered. The devotees, in large groups, bowed at Shree Hari and pleaded, 'O Bhagwan! When will we have Your Darshan again? We implore You and the saints to visit our villages and towns to grant Your Darshan."

The saints prayed, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! You are the supreme Bhagwan mentioned in the Vedas. You create Brahma and through him, Kashyap, Marichi, other Prajapatis, static and moveable entities with Your unlimited and latent power. You independently manifest Yourself as Kurma, Varah and other incarnations as and when needed to sustain and protect Sanatan Dharma and its adherer saints and pious persons and to vanquish the evil people. Though invisible to a mortal eye, Your Parshads, potencies and weapons always accompany You on earth. O Bhagwan! Your human form, though appears mortal in every other way, is divine and is beyond the three states (gross, sublime and causal) of a mortal body. You take human form to remove ignorance of Your devotees. Your present manifestation as Pramhans is the best of all Your previous incarnations, because meditation upon Your Murti elevates a soul to the state of Brahm. Any form of association with You frees one from the clutches of this illusionary world. O Bhagwan! All virtues such as faith, compassion, expertise, mercy, detachment, knowledge, Dharma, friendship, satisfaction, austerity, retentive memory, etc. reside within You. You have overcome taste, lust, greed, attachment and ego which are impossible to overcome by anybody. The celibate Sages such as Sanak and others, Swetmuktas and Muktas of Akshardham worship You to acquire aforementioned virtues. We exclusively worship You for the same reason. O Bhagwan! The evil gurus, overwhelmed by greed and lust are engaged in sinful activities. Such demonic and hypocrite gurus have written scriptures to suit their needs to trap innocent people in their web. Who except You can free them from the clutches of such evil gurus? O Bhagwan! You protect Your devotees from vices such as hypocrisy, ego, violence, deception, anger, duplicity, envy, ignorance, etc. and re-establish the forgotten ethics of Pramhans such as Brahamcharya, non violence, austerity, ethical living, equanimity and austerity.'

on thirty six different garbs to sabotage King Pruthu's last and one hundredth Ashvamedh Yagna in bygone era. The evil gurus have adopted these thirty six types of robes to cheat and mislay innocent people. They have forsaken all decency and chastity and are engaged in acquiring wealth and indulging in sins just to satiate their taste buds and carnal desires. They misinterpret holy scriptures to suit their ends. Just as the darkness vanishes with the advent of the sun, they are running helter skelter with Your advent on earth. O Prabhu! Due to the influence of Kali Yug, the people are overwhelmed with lust and anger and indulge in adultery with each other's wives. They have become shameless and cannot differentiate between good and bad. The men have developed demonic tendencies, while women have become promiscuous. O merciful Lord! Such immoral and licentious people look for equally impious gurus. They commit adultery with their female disciples. How can such gurus and disciple ever redeem themselves? It is possible only if You shower benign mercy on them and show them the correct path. O Bhagwan! We cannot redeem such sinners and evil people and bring them on the path of Dharma on our own. Only You can free them from the clutches of ignorance and repeated birth and death. We can reform and bring back on the correct path the theists who have been misled, but not the atheist gurus who are deliberately misleading others. Only You can reform them. O Bhagwan! When You deliver Your sermon to advise them to give up their false tenets, they do listen to You and change their course. You fulfil their latent desire to see their Ishtadev in their hearts, after which they accept You as the supreme Bhagwan of the universe. As a result, they become Your devotees and attain Your supreme abode after their deaths. Who else but You can achieve this miracle? O Bhagwan! The power to control and concentrate their minds on You is Your supreme achievement and extra ordinary power. You have killed countless Asuras in Your past incarnations, and You are famous for it. However, instead of killing demons as in the past, this time You have killed demonic tendencies in their hearts. You have killed vices such as anger, ego, lust and greed which turn a man into a demon. Therefore, Your present incarnation is greater than the previous ones. None except You, can bring about this miraculous change in the hearts of the sinners.'

the universe, he could not evacuate greed, anger and other vices from his heart. He was able to take their form to accept the portion of their offerings in Yagnas, yet suffered at the hands of powerful vices. You are able to remove such strong inner enemies from the hearts of sinners, therefore, You reign supreme. O Bhagwan! These vices are so powerful that they do not spare even the mightiest, yet they do not dare trouble You. Indeed, when they become helpless in front of Your Ekantik devotees, what can be said about You? They are afraid of anyone who comes under Your exclusive shelter. O Prabhu! The demons such as Hiranyakshipu that You Killed in Your earlier incarnation as Nrusinh Bhagwan were enemies only of the Devtas, while the inner enemies, the vices are the enemies of everybody including Brahma and Shiva. You reign supreme because You have vanquished such mighty enemies. O Bhagwan! The devotees who, meditate upon You or undertake Your Bhakti to become free from the clutches of Maya are sometimes hindered by these vices due to detrimental time, place, company, etc. We pray and plead You to protect Your devotees from the influences of these vices. Destroying these vices is a far greater achievement than destroying mighty demons. However, only intelligent people are able to understand and appreciate Your achievement. O Bhagwan! Whoever, the sages, Devtas or demons, has transgressed or courted ignominy has done so as a result of being overwhelmed by one or more of these vices. Therefore, we plead You to protect Your devotees from these vices. O Bhagwan! Dharma incarnate Devsharma and Bhakti incarnate his wife Premvati, are really fortunate that You, Purushottam Narayan, supreme Bhagwan, took birth as their son. We and all the other devotees are very fortunate that, though born in this infamous Kali Yug, we have come under Your shelter. The others, the non devotees, are very fortunate as well because they can have Your Darshan, albeit, inadvertently. O Shree Hari! We bow down to You, Who have blessed us with this fortune.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari blessed the saints and asked them to visit various regions to propagate Sanatan Dharma. He solaced all crying and disconsolate devotees and asked them to proceed ahead before turning back His horse on the way to Gadhpur. After pacing His horse variably with canter, trot, sprint and gallop, He turned back to delight His disheartened devotees by granting them His Darshan before making His way to Gadhpur. The devotees had this divine Darshan of Shree Hari riding His horse and it was transfixed in their minds. They could visualise this Darshan as and when they desired on the way to their destinations. Shree Hari returned to Uttam Khachar's royal palace and once again paced His horse around the courtyard for a while to the delight of Jaya and other female devotees before retuning to Akshar Bhuvan. He praised Jaya and Lalita profusely in front of Soma Khachar and a few other Parshads. He said, 'O Soma and other Parshads! I am very pleased because the festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi got celebrated as I had imagined. There were no shortcomings either in its planning or its execution. Even great kings are unable to celebrate such a festival with this pomp and generosity. There is nobody in this world like Jaya and Lalita. They are unique in every way. They have surpassed their father in their devotion and generosity. And Uttam Khachar! He is just incomparable! He is the best Atmanivedi devotee of this age.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Just as Shree Hari was concluding His talk with His Parshads, the female devotees arrived with the view of His veneration."

Thus ends the 42nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-43

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Jayaba, Lalitaba and Ramaba, who had taken the vow of Naisthik Brahamcharya, approached Shree Hari with trays full of artefacts of veneration. They were followed by householder female devotees such as Amri, Amla and others with similar trays. Satisfied with the successful conclusion of the two festivals, they bowed down to Shree Hari. He, in turn, sat on a Sinhasan with a benign smile on His face. They venerated Shree Hari individually with Kumkum powder, sandalwood paste mixed with scented musk and saffron, rice, flowers, incense, etc. and performed Aarti and Pradakshina. They gifted Him many expensive pieces of cloths and bejewelled golden ornaments. They prayed to Him after the conclusion of the veneration."

Jayaba prayed, 'O Shree Hari! O Shree Krishna! I bow down to You. You are the fountainhead of pleasures. You pervade all souls. Indeed, You are the soul of all souls. You create, sustain and annihilate thousands of universes. Benevolent and eternal happiness rest with You. O Purushottam Narayan! I bow down to You. O Adhokshaj! You cannot be grasped by senses of non devotees. You eternally reside in Brahampur, Your supreme abode. You take human form as Lord Rama and Krishna to fulfil latent desires of Your devotees. You have delegated the task of creation and destruction of universes to Pradhan Purush. O master of all souls! I bow down to You. O Shree Hari! You are the supreme Bhagwan Whom the scholars of the Vedas call eternal, Nirgun, constant, Parabrahm, Parmatma, etc. You have taken the human form just to delight Your devotees like us. Exemplary and ultimate knowledge, austerity, Dharma and detachment are Your natural qualities. O Bhagwan! The Devtas always bow down to You. You have independently taken this human form and accepted our artefacts and Naivedhya during veneration. You delight us by encouraging us to celebrate the festival of Annakut and Prabodhani Ekadashi. O Vibhu! Listening to the Katha of Your Leelas, singing Kirtans of Your majesty and glory, meditating upon You, bowing down (Panchang or Ashtang) to You, venerating You with whichever artefacts are available, massaging Your feet, being Your friend, being humble by forsaking ego in front of You and keeping mind and senses focussed upon You give one unlimited bliss. A devotee can overcome this insurmountable cesspool of Maya by being engaged in any of the nine types of Bhakti in You. The human life of such a devotee is worthwhile as You have erased his Paap. Such a devotee attains Moksha while still alive. O Shree Hari! No one is able to quantify Your incarnations and Leelas. You are ever eager and ready to protect Your devotees from trouble from any quarters. O Parameshwar! I bow down to You. O Prabhu! You put our wealth to good use by celebrating various festivals. I plead with You to remain in our palace forever to delight us until we live.'

Ramaba prayed, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! You grant great bliss to whoever comes to Your shelter after suffering great pains from the quagmire like world. O Lord! I bow down with speech, mind and body to whoever bows down to You. Only You can free one from the strong shackles of birth and death because only You are beyond the effects of Maya. Your bliss is not dependent on any external sources). Similarly, Your Ekantik devotees derive their happiness from Your Murti as they consider the materialistic pleasures as the reason for the bondage. O Vibhu! Everyone, from and including Brahma, get whatever You have decided for them. Just as a reined bullock remains under the control of a farmer as long as he wants, every living being remains under Your control as long they remain alive. Only You decide what rewards one reaps as a result of their deeds. O Bhagwan! The mighty Time divides a year into six seasons at Your behest, the wind moves air, the sun rises, sets and moves through the sky, Indra sends rain, death keeps moving constantly and fire burns at Your behest. No one dares or is able to disobey Your commands. The gold, wealth, women and other possessions that have emerged from Maya influence all living being. However, they are unable to influence You. Just as the lightening remains unaffected by water in the clouds, You remain unaffected by materialistic possessions. O redeemer of the devotees! May my love for You amplify over time. I and many of Your Ekantik devotees have forsaken materialistic pleasures, yet we remain scared of them lest they shackle us. Though You remain in the midst of the materialistic world, You remain impervious of Maya just as the sky remains unaffected though pervading everything. Not influenced by Maya at all is indeed Your divinity. May my mind remain concentrated in Your constant memory at all times! O Bhagwan! Always protect me from the vile influences of Maya. This is my only prayer to You.'

Lalitaba prayed, 'O Vaasudev! O Purushottam! The shelter of Your divine feet serve us as a boat to cross the deep ocean that this world is. They are a lifeline to a person drowning in the ocean that this world is. Even the hymns of the Vedas extol Your divine feet. I bow down to Your feet with body, speech and thought. Though You are beyond Maya, You take the forms of Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva to create, sustain and annihilate the universes. You eternally reside in Your supreme abode, Brahampur, which is beyond the final and eighth surrounding of the cosmos. The innumerable virtues such as chastity, mercy, generosity, etc. repose in You and Radha and Rama are engaged in Your constant services. O Bhagwan! You, as Lord NarNarayan, were born from Dharmadev and Murtidevi to redeem Your devotees born in Bharat (India) in the bygone era. You have taken birth as a son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata of Chhapaiya on the pretext of Sage Durvasha's curse and have become famous as Nilkanth. Your human body is divine and free from the influence and effects of the three traits of Maya. You served Your parents to set an example for Your devotees. O Shree Hari! Some sages say that You have taken birth to re-establish Sanatan Dharma, disintegrated over a period of time, while others say that You have taken birth to propagate Dharma of Pramhans such as Brahamcharya that was destroyed by evil and hypocrites. Some others say that You have taken birth to strengthen Dharma espoused by Udhhavji that was weakened by the evil gurus masquerading as pious interpreters of the scriptures. However, in my humble opinion, You have taken birth to propagate the servile Bhakti along with Dharma, weakened by irreligious people and reward Your devotees for their Bhakti. O Bhagwan! Whoever listens to Your Leelas from pious saints, retains its memory in their hearts and encourages the narration of Leelas becomes free from the cycle of death and rebirth and attains Your Brahampur. O Shree Hari! Anyone who tries to acquire the knowledge of one's soul by observing severe Vratts without Your Bhakti or association with pious saints suffers pain only. Just as the pounding of chaffs is futile and painful, one cannot realise his soul without Your Bhakti and association of true saints. O Bhagwan! I have heard from Your Ekantik saints that one becomes eligible for Your Bhakti only if he has the knowledge (of soul and God), detachment and Dharma. Knowing the great importance of Your Bhakti, I serve You with mind, speech and body at the best of my abilities whilst remaining within the boundaries of Dharma. O Shree Hari! Grant me that whichever life form I get after this birth, I get the chance to serve You, single minded and exclusively. I ask nothing but this!'

Amariba prayed, 'O Bhagwan! I bow down to Your feet. The toe nails of Your feet shine just as the diamonds shine due to the reflecting light. I repeatedly bow down to Your feet which even the Devtas including Brahma, Apsaras of the heaven, sages such as Shuk and Sanak bow down to and whose paeans are sung by the Vedas and Goddess Saraswati. May my mind never get attracted towards wealth, home, family or any worldly possessions! O Hari! Grant me that my mind always retains the memory of Your glorious feet and I get the company of similar minded female devotees.'

Amla prayed, 'O Shree Hari! You become very happy with even our miniscule Bhakti due to Your compassionate nature. You fulfil Your devotees' desires and reward their small efforts with great results. You are a fountainhead of all the divine virtues. O Bhagwan! Grant that my mind, instead of getting attracted towards worldly possessions, remain focussed in You.'

Mena prayed, 'O merciful Lord! The touch of Your feet grant divinity and power to wash away the sins to River Ganga with its three tributaries, Mandakini, Bhagirathi and Ganga. Besides the sinners and virtuous alike, she is able to grant purity to the Devtas including Brahma and Shiva just by the touch of Your feet. I reverentially bow down to Your magnificent feet. I do not desire any materialistic or heavenly pleasures. O Bhagwan! Please grant me the continuous association of and chance to serve Your feet.'

All other female devotees prayed collectively, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! We ask for Your permanent Darshan at Gadhpur. Your beauty is enhanced with twinkling eyes and an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo on Your forehead. Indeed, Your beauty puts Eros to shame! You appear in front of our eyes and meander among the devotees only because of Your mercy, without which any large numbers of Niyam, Vratts and Yagnas would not be rewarded with Your Darshan. O Lord! We are very fortunate that we can have Your Darshan, which is rare even to the Devtas, regularly at Gadhpur without much effort. Your Darshan, which is always benevolent, grants bliss to the devotees, removes ignorance from the minds of seekers and frees them from the vicious cycle of death and rebirth. O Lord! Grant us that we always have Your Darshan in Gadhpur. You speak softly and sweetly, Your beauty is enhanced by many flower garlands around Your neck, diadem on Your head and the strings of flowers and pearls dangling from the diadem. remove all sorrows from the hearts of the devotees. Brahma, Shiva and other devtas repeatedly venerate You. O Lord! Grant us that we always have Your Darshan here. Your Murti is auspicious and removes the fear of bondage of Maya. Your beauty is enhanced by soft, curly and dense hairs and many ornaments of flowers. You sustain the entire universe with Your potency. The sages of higher echelons always mediate upon Your lotus feet. O Lord! Grant us that we always have Your auspicious and benevolent Darshan.'

They continued, 'O Shree Hari! Presently, Gadhpur has become holier than other shrines because of Your physical association. Moksha, for which one has to undertake a hundred and one means at other shrines, has become easier to attain at Gadhpur because of Your direct association. You have repeatedly protected us from the jungle of pretentious Sampradays, dangerous young age and from vices such as greed, taste, desires, envy etc. which are like wild animals always ready to pounce. We have not been overwhelmed by such vices by Your blessings and not due to any effort on our side. You have also protected us from the volcano of anger, quagmire of wealth and young age, demonic ego, fear of death and rebirth, poison of alcohol and meat, thorns of doubts, maligned intellect, insidious desires and unwanted advances of pretentious gurus. O Lord! Your mercy on us knows no bounds! We pray to You to continue to protect us from the evil influences of Maya. We repeatedly bow down to Your feet and ask You to keep our mind and intellect concentrated at Your feet which is our only shield of protection.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari was pleased with the prayers offered by His female devotees. He said, 'Your desires shall be fulfilled. Have no doubt about it. To become detached from the body or its relatives is near impossible even for the Yogis, which you have achieved. Your desires shall be fulfilled because of your devotion towards Me.' O king! Satisfied with Shree Hari's blessings, the female devotees asked Him humbly."

Jayaba and the other female devotees asked, 'O Narayanmuni! O Bhagwan! We want to ask You something. O friend of devotees! The scriptures mention many means such as charity, austerity, Yagna and Vrat to please You. Which one among them pleases You greatly and sooner? Is there one single virtue which is able to attract other virtues like a magnet? Or is there a single virtue whose absence makes the presence of all other virtues futile? O Bhagwan Vaasudev! We, Your steadfast disciples would like to know. Please share with us Your heartfelt opinion.'

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni replied, 'O devotees! Bhakti pleases Me more than any other thing. Charity, austerity, Vrats do please Me, but not as much as Bhakti. Being a Devta or Brahmin is not that vital; neither is having had proper Diksha. The most vital means to please me is unequivocal Bhakti towards Me. To serve Me lovingly with the knowledge of My true form is a unique trait of Bhakti. To realise that My human form, though not visible by ordinary eyes, is as magnificent as My divine form in My supreme abode and is accompanied by My Parshads just as in Brahampur is the true knowledge about Me. The other virtues automatically follow behind Bhakti. Conversely, having all other virtues in the absence of Bhakti does not serve any purpose. However, Bhakti without the true knowledge of My form stunts its growth and does not help in acquiring any other virtues. It may glow at the beginning but will not last long. Just as a child suffering with cancer dies before adulthood; Bhakti without knowledge will wilt before fructifying. With the demise of Bhakti, other virtues such as austerity and charity will disappear. Just as a raging forest fire grows with the passage of time, Bhakti grows in the presence of knowledge. Austerities, Brahamcharya, control of senses, etc. are vital virtues to have for any person to augment his Bhakti, but none of these virtues will last long without the knowledge about Me. How can one's Bhakti be augmented when all vital virtues disappear?'

Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! A person's Shradhhaa (faith) grows in equal proportions to his growing knowledge. Bhakti towards Lord Krishna arises from his inherent faith. Therefore, one must strengthen his faith with the acquisition of knowledge, which in turn strengthens his Bhakti towards Me. The steadfast Bhakti is the best means to please Me. You are My devotees and You have the knowledge about Me. You must regularly listen to the scriptures to augment your knowledge. The Vedas narrate Lord Krishna's magnificence. As the meanings of the Vedas are difficult to understand even for the best of the scholars, Lord Krishna incarnate Sage Vyas, one of Lord Krishna's incarnations, expanded them into eighteen Puranas and the Mahabharata for easier understanding. O devotees! The Shreemad Bhagwat is the nectar of all the scriptures, especially its fifth and tenth cantos. The tenth canto of the Bhagwat narrates the Leelas of our Ishtadev, Lord Krishna, which helps one understand Dharma and augment Bhakti. Therefore, I hold the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat the dearest. Reading or listening to it daily helps one augment and strengthen his Bhakti towards Bhagwan.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King! Pleased with soothing words from Shree Hari, they bowed down to Him with Panchang Pranam before returning to their respective quarters at His behest. They became engaged in cooking, feeding and looking after the guests arriving in Uttam Khachar's court. They had Lord Krishna's name in their mind and on their tongue at all times. Thus whatever they did simply became Bhakti due to the association with Bhagwan. Shree Hari remained in Akshar Bhuvan in the royal palace to the delight of Uttam Khachar and his sisters. O king! Forsaking pride and ego, King Uttam Khachar served Shree Hari daily as a servant serving his master."

Thus ends the 44th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-45

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The female devotees led by Ramaba gathered in Lalitaba's room for the evening Dhun which lasted for some time. After washing their hands, feet and face, they sat for Japa with a Mala in their right hand. Sitting cross legged on a woollen mat, keeping their neck and head straight, they visualised the form of Shree Hari they had encountered earlier in their hearts. Blanking out all worldly thoughts, they chanted His name at the turn of each bead of their Mala. Their straight and impassive bodies appeared as if someone had placed the statuettes in line. O king! Just as the Murti of Shree Hari appeared in their hearts, a miracle occurred. A brilliant halo, as if hundreds of moons have risen, emerged from their midst and spread in the whole room in no time. Just as the clouds cover the sky, the white halo covered the whole room. The sound of many females singing in tune of melodious music seemed to emanate from the halo. The sweet sound attracted the minds of female devotees. This was the first time that their minds were deviated from meditation. The devotees were surprised and disturbed at this digression of their minds.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! As they tried to figure out where the music was coming from, a beautiful maiden with a Veena in her hand emerged from the halo. She was very fair, golden complexioned and her limbs and other organs in perfect proportions which enhanced her ethereal beauty. She was clad in red with many ornaments. The smiling face, sparkling eyes, a large pointed nose, full cheeks and well proportioned two ears adorned with a pair of earrings made her very attractive. Her large bosom and buttocks supplemented her slender waist which was adorned with a gold waistband. The bangles on her hands, golden anklets on her ankles and many bejewelled necklaces around her neck complemented her good looks. She was singing the Kirtans extolling the Leelas of Lord Krishna, Bhagwan Narayanmuni's previous incarnation, in the tune of the Veena and her companions lent their voices in chorus. Her melodious singing and gorgeousness mesmerised Ramaba, Lalitaba and the other devotees. They thought hard to guess the identity of this divine maiden. Was she Laxmiji from Vaikunth, Radhaji from Golok, Saraswati - the goddess of music, Savitri - the wife of Brahma, Parvati - the wife of Shiva or was she Mukti personified? Who has come to grant this divine Darshan? Could Bhagwan Narayan Himself have taken this Mohini form which mesmerised Shiva in bygone era? They could not come to any conclusion regarding the identity of the woman. They were taken aback with the turn of events that they could not even ask her to reveal her identity."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The devotees, led by Ramaba, were worried as this was the first time they were not able to concentrate their minds on Shree Hari despite trying. Ramaba thought, 'How could my mind get attracted towards this lady? I regularly mediate upon Lord Shree Hari when I could block all worldly thoughts. Never in the past was my mind disturbed by anything, but today? I have never desired any materialistic pleasures nor have ever veered towards them. How could my mind deviate from meditation today? I have seen many divinely handsome male and beautiful female devotees while in Samadhi without getting attracted towards them. What is in this woman that my mind got deviated from meditation upon Shree Hari? Jaya, Lalita and the others are similarly steadfast in their devotion. Surely, this must be some trick played by Lord Shree Hari! Otherwise, who else is able to deviate our minds? Lord Shiva always thought that nothing could disturb the peace of his mind despite in close proximity of Parvati. Bhagwan Narayan broke his ego by showing him His Mohini Swarup. Could Shree Hari be testing us to see if our minds get deviated from Him by anything? Could Shree Hari have taken Mohini Swarup once again to test us?'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Ramaba decided to ask her probing question to ascertain her true identity. She asked her, 'O beautiful Devi! I bow down to you. Who are you? Whose daughter are you? Whose wife are you? Why are you mesmerising us? Please tell us quickly and go from here. You are disturbing us in our meditation.' O king! Answering Ramaba's sharp questions, she replied, 'O Ramaba! I am Bhakti, the wife of Dharmadev. I and my husband are always present in divine form in the vicinity of our son and your Ishtadev, Shree Hari. Ordinary people cannot see us or feel our presence. My physical Darshan is possible only at the express wish of Bhagwan HariKrishna. O Ramaba! I am very pleased with the unselfish services you and the other female devotees had rendered during the celebration of festivals of Annakut and Prabodhani Ekadashi. I am impressed by the hard work you put in without worrying about your physical discomfort. You have been granted my Darshan with the express wish of Shree Hari, otherwise, my Darshan is impossible even to the Yogis engaged in Ashtang Yog. I am very pleased with you. Ask for a boon from me.' O king! Ramaba and the others were very pleased with the Darshan of Bhaktimata and bowed down to her with Panchang Pranam. They, with folded hands, said humbly, 'O Bhaktimata! We bow down to you. We are very pleased with your divine Darshan. Please remain in our hearts if you are really pleased with us. We do not desire anything more than this. Our hearts were mesmerised with the Kirtans you were singing. Please tell us whose Kirtans you were singing.' O king! Bhaktimata replied, 'I always reside with my husband, Dharma. I follow him wherever he goes. I never desert him and he never deserts me. You have kept Dharma close to your heart by observing your Dharma sincerely and as a result, I am very close to your hearts as well. One should sing paeans of one's benefactor. This is common sense and supported by the Vedas as well. Bhagwan Narayanmuni, Who resides in Uttam Khachar's palace to placate your feelings and fulfil your desires, is the same Lord Shree Krishna, our son. He had taken many incarnations previously and has protected us from the demons. He protected us from the wrath of demons in this incarnation as well. Sage Vyas had described Lord Krishna's many Leelas in great detail in the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran. I regularly sing these Leelas to delight myself and other listeners. Shatanand swami will compose a scripture detailing Bhagwan Shree HariKrishna's Leelas in the near future which I will sing later on.'

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! After granting them the boon and answering their questions, Bhaktimata disappeared from the scene as suddenly as she had appeared. The female devotees saw nothing but Shree Hari's blessing behind the divine Darshan of Bhaktimata and considered themselves very fortunate for it. Lord Shree Hari fulfils His devotees' latent desires besides protecting them from evil influences. O king! Shree Hari celebrated many other festivals while staying in Gadhpur to the delight of Uttam Khachar, his sisters Jaya, Lalita and Rama. His and His Ekantikdevotee Uttam Khachar's fame spread very widely because of this. Whoever

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari celebrated many festivals in other towns such as Vadtaal, Amdavad, Junagadh, Dabhan, Jetalpur and many others besides Gadhpur. He organised grand festivals in Junagadh every second or third year while He celebrated at least one festival in Amdavad every year. He visited Vadtaal many times every year to augment His devotees' Dharma and Bhakti by celebrating three to four large festivals every year. O king! Shree Hari intermittently celebrated Mokshada, Sanada, Tilda, Jaya, Vijaya, Dhatri, Paapmochini, Vimla, Varuthini, Apara, Nirjala, Yogini, Shayani, Kamika, Putrada, Padma, Indira, Pashakusha, Rama, Prabodhani, Abhaya Ekadashis in Vadtaal. He also celebrated great festivals of Janmashtami, Diwali, Shivratri etc. in Vadtaal at the delight of His numerous devotees. The devotees from far flung places gathered at such festivals to listen to His sermons and have His Darshan. O king! The devotees living in the vicinity of Vadtaal, Gadhpur, Junagadh or Amdavad attended every festival that Shree Hari celebrated in respective towns. The devotees living in central India attended two or three festivals each year while devotees living far away made a pilgrimage to attend at least one festival each year."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari organised Vishnu Yagna some times at Vadtaal while at some other times He would arrange Brahmins to chant the VishnuSahasraNam or hymns of Lord Vishnu. At other times He would organise the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat or gtHoma involving ritualistic offerings accompanied by the chanting of one lac (100,000) or ten million hymns. Shree Hari fed hundreds of Brahmins many times, gave large donations to suitably pious Brahmins and held sacred thread ceremonies to young Brahmins in Vadtaal. He established a grand temple there and invoked Bhagwan to come and reside in the Murtis He installed in the temple. O king! He celebrated these great festivals to re establish the Vedic rituals of Sanatan Dharma. Furthermore, thousands of devotees regularly came to whichever town Shree Hari was residing in for His Darshan. Shree Hari freed thousands of people from the clutches of evil and pretentious gurus and showed them the religious and correct path. This changed their life for the better. Over the passage of time and with His presence, the influence of Kali Yug waned and Sanatan Dharma became firmly rooted in the world. The evil social and religious practices became extinct. O king! I narrated the Katha of Shree Hari in short as answers to your questions. You may ask me further questions if you so wish."

King Pratapsinh was not yet satisfied. He asked Suvrat Muni, 'My thirst for Shree Hari's Katha never gets quenched. I still want to hear more. O guru! You just mentioned that Shree Hari celebrated many festivals in Vadtaal I would like to hear the Katha of the festivals He celebrated in Vadtaal. Shree Hari had taken birth only for the benevolence of His devotees. He visited many places to re-establish Sanatan Dharma. I would like to hear many more of His Leelas.' Suvrat Muni was delighted at such an avid and eager devotee. Many other Leelas became fresh in his mind. He replied, "O king! You have asked very good questions. You want to hear more and more Katha because your intellect has crystallised. I will not be able to do justice to His enormous number of Leelas, but I shall try to narrate some of the Leelas in short to try to satisfy your hunger. O king! Shree Hari repeatedly travelled to Vadtaal from Gadhpur to satisfy His devotees. He celebrated many festivals in Vadtaal. I will narrate the Katha of one such festival. You can apply the same logic for other festivals and guess the grandiose of other festivals."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! There is a town called Vadtaal in central Gujarat, which is populated with Shree Hari's devotees of all four Varna, who were very eager to bring Him to Vadtaal to celebrate the festival of Fuldolotsav (birth anniversary of Lord NarNarayan Dev). Kuberbhai Patel and Joban Pagi were their leaders. All of them started gathering grains and other things needed to celebrate the festival of Fuldolotsav. Joban Pagi and his brother, Sunder Pagi were delegated to travel to Gadhpur and extend an invitation to Shree Narayanmuni. They reached Gadhpur on Purnima of Magh (of Samvat 1875). O king! Sunder Pagi performed Ashtang Pranam to Shree Hari, Who was seated on a high ornate Sinhasan in the midst of an assembly of saints and householder devotees and requested Him to come to Vadtaal to grant His devotees His Darshan. Shree Hari, ever eager to please His devotees agreed to grace Vadtaal and said to Sunderji Pagi, 'O Pagi! You return to Vadtaal to convey My message that I will come to Vadtaal next month.' O king! Sunder Pagi returned to Vadtaal to convey the happy news to the delight of devotees."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The news of Swaminarayan Bhagwan's imminent visit to Vadtaal spread widely very soon. Shree Hari sent many messengers to invite the devotees of outlying villages to converge on Vadtaal for the celebration of Fuldolotsav festival. Many devotees and the saints visiting nearby villages arrived in Gadhpur to accompany Shree Hari on His way to Vadtaal. Shree Hari left Gadhpur on the afternoon of Falgun Sud Chhathh (sixth day) of Samvat 1875. He asked Uttam Khachar to remain behind in Gadhpur for security reasons after promising him that He would return very soon. Jayaba, Lalitaba and many other female devotees followed Him on their chariots and carts. The saints and any devotees of Gadhpur and nearby villages followed Him on foot. O king! Shree Hari advanced on the way to Vadtaal surrounded by hundreds of Parshads on horseback and thousands of devotees on foot. He was astride on His favourite mare, Manaki holding the reins in His left hand. His forehead was adorned with a yellow Urdhvapundra Tilak and a red Chandlo with few grains of rice, which Mayaram Bhatt had applied as good portent and had a benign smile on His face. The spears of the Parshads shone brightly in the afternoon sun.

The saints and some devotees were singing Kirtans extolling His Leelas in tune with many musical instruments. Some devotees were clapping and chanting His name aloud. The devotees unable to travel to Vadtaal lined both sides of the road for His Darshan and quick veneration. Shree Hari stopped at every village on the way to Vadtaal to give His devotees an opportunity to fulfil their desires of offering Him veneration as He passed through their village. He showered His blessings with a benign smile on the devotees lining the road. O king! The Devtas sprinkled flowers on the procession."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari touched Manaki slightly with His heels. Understanding Shree Hari's every command, Manaki galloped ahead. Galloping with full speed with all four feet in the air at the same time, she appeared to be gliding through the air like a bird to the surprise of the onlookers. The Parshads tried to coax their mounts to follow Manaki by rebuke and love, but they just could not catch up with Manaki. O king! The Parshads' bodies wobbled and their diadems became loose due to their leaping horses. They whipped their horses to increase their speed without any success. The horses' mouths foamed and the riders' bodies became wet with sweat, yet Manaki galloped far ahead. Realising His Parshads' problem, Shree Hari stopped Manaki under a mango tree to give the other riders a chance to catch up. The Parshads saw Shree Hari holding the mane of Manaki with one hand and a branch of the tree with other and smiling mischievously in mock pride when He came within their sight. Shree Hari's face and white robes were covered in dust. He asked the Parshads to take rest for a while before moving ahead. The Parshads' fatigue waned immediately upon His Darshan and soothing words. O king! After a while, they moved slowly together on their way to Vadtaal. The news of Shree Hari travelling to Vadtaal had spread far and wide and thousands of devotees were on their way to Vadtaal. The devotees from Kaushal, Kashi, Mithila, Prayag, Mathura, Vrandavan, Jagannath Puri and Avanti regions of Eastern India; Kashmir, Haridwar, Kurukshetra, Pushkar, Abu and Sidhhpur areas of Northern India; Sindhu, Kutch, Saurashtra, Panchal and Sauvir regions of Western India and Rameshwar, Kanchi, Mayachal, Vindhyachal and southern Gujarat regions of Southern India were travelling in large groups towards Vadtaal for Shree Hari's Darshan and to participate in the festival. The devotees coming from afar had loaded the necessary ration in their carts. Though they had warned them of the difficulty on the way to Vadtaal and advised them not to come, the elder devotees, keen for His Darshan, nonetheless joined in this arduous journey. They were finding it difficult to keep up with young devotees, but their enthusiasm was effervescent. The female devotees walked slightly behind other male devotees to keep in line with the principle of the Sampraday. The children simply raced ahead of the group with the healthy competition to become first to have Shree Hari's Darshan."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The area around Vadtaal teemed with thousands of devotees arriving from various districts of India. The land bordered by the Rivers Mahi, Vatrak and Sabarmati is known as Charotar and is very fertile and the ground water table is very high. The vast plain is covered with various trees such as mango, banyan, Peepal, coconut, beetle nuts, dates, Bili, cherry, jackfruit, Neem, lemon etc. with many of them entwined with the various ivies. The wells never dry up and various trees flower and produce fruits in all seasons. There are many lakes and small wooded areas dot the landscape. The travellers always find somewhere to rest under a shade and fruits to eat and water to drink while moving through this area. The area has also become holy due to frequent visits of the saints. The devotees took up residence in the outlying areas of Vadtaal town by pitching tents in open grounds, on the banks of lakes and rivers and under large trees. They entered the limits of the town only on Falgun Sud Dasami and anxiously awaited Shree Hari's arrival. O king! Shree Hari

Thus ends the 47th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-48

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari reached Piplav village at noon on the fifth day. The devotees of the villages on route venerated Shree Hari passing through and gifted Him many types of fruits, flowers and candy sugar. Accepting these fruits, Shree Hari extolled the fertile soil of Charotar. Addressing the devotees of many villages on the way, Shree Hari reached the outskirts of Vadtaal in the evening of Falgun Sud Dasami. Upon hearing the news of Shree Hari approaching, the devotees of Vadtaal rushed westward to greet Him. Thousands of visiting devotees already in Vadtaal joined them. O king! Many devotees put their clothes inside out in the mad rush to greet Shree Hari. Many female devotees were cooking, washing clothes, sweeping floors, milking cows, bathing, getting ready, breastfeeding or doing some other household chores. All of them stopped whatever they were doing and rushed to greet Shree Hari. Some devotees were meditating upon Shree Hari while some were doing Mansi Puja. They left whatever they were doing as soon as they heard of Him approaching. The devotees under the spell of Samadhi suddenly felt the absence of Shree Hari. Disturbed and agitated, they rushed outside to see throngs of people rushing to greet Shree Hari. They joined them without bothering to dress properly. All of them were so excited at the prospect of imminent Darshan of Shree Hari that they did not care about their personal appearances."

Suvrat Muni continues, "O king! The rushing devotees saw the ochre robed saints walking ahead before sighting Shree Hari astride Manaki. They bowed down to the saints and then fell on the ground prostrating at Shree Hari with Sastang Dandvat

Pranam. O king! Shree Hari was holding the reins of Manaki in His left hand and was wearing many flower garlands around His neck. He had tied a shiny piece of cloth tightly around His waist and was benignly smiling at the approaching devotees. He was pleasantly surprised to see so many of them coming forward to greet Him. Thousands of devotees led by Kuber Patel and Joban Pagi fell on the ground to perform Sastang Dandvat Pranam. The exuberant female devotees sat on the ground and performed Panchang Pranam from slightly afar. They were so enamoured with Shree Hari that they, mentally, embraced Him. The male devotees greeted the saints and other devotees accompanying Shree Hari with 'Jay Shree Krishna' and embraced them. The female devotees of Vadtaal greeted Ramaba and other devotees accompanying Shree Hari with 'Jay Shree Krishna' and embraced them warmly. The saints, who had come to Vadtaal from their tour of duty to far flung regions at Shree Hari's behest to propagate His message, rushed to greet Him when they heard of His arrival. They prostrated at His feet with Dandvat Pranam and stood in front of Him with boundless joy. The saints and accompanying devotees greeted them with 'Jay Swaminarayan'.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari greeted His devotees; some with a smile, some with touch, some with eye contact and some with the wave of a hand. He entered Vadtaal flanked by Kuber Patel and Joban Pagi and surrounded by thousands of devotees chanting 'Jay' 'Jay' and sounding conch, cymbals, drums, clarinet and other musical instruments. No verbal conversation was possible in this cacophony. By the time Shree Hari entered Vadtaal, the thousands of lamps were lit in the houses, courtyards and streets. He made His residence in a mango orchard just outside the town. Just as He was about to dismount His mare Manaki, Ratanji extended his hand to help Him. He stood on a bed when He realised that the devotees would not be able to see Him properly if He stood on the ground. He ensured that the devotees accompanying Him were properly looked after by the local devotees. After a while, He took a seat on an ornate Sinhasan placed on a high dais. Narayananand Brahamchari brought cool water in a silver goblet for Shree Hari. Narayanmuni looked at the crowd of people in front of Him. Most of them of course were His devotees but some had come to gawk with curiosity, while some had accompanied their relative to make sure they do not stay back with Him forever. Shree Hari saw devotees wherever He looked. There were people on the trees, on the rooftops and on the walls. Indeed, there were devotees as far back as He could see. He stood up to see further back and still saw more devotees. He shook His head in surprise to see so many people gathered at one place. He asked devotees to sit down by the sign of His hands and all the devotees sat down immediately wherever they were. He put His index finger on His lips to silence them and the mass of people fell silent immediately. O king! He called leading devotees from each district and asked them of their well beings, the spread and the depth of the Sampraday in their districts and what ordinary people thought of His saints and devotees. Shree Hari advised devotees to take up residence in groups according to the area and district they hailed from and make sure that no one from outside, even if one appeared like a Satsangi, entered their respective quarters for security reasons. The devotees went to their respective tents and made suitable security arrangements by appointing sentries from among themselves. They returned back to where Shree Hari was seated and stayed for His Darshan until He went away to retire for the night.

Thus ends the 48th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-49

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! Shree Hari’s elder brother Rampratapji and younger brother Ichharamji arrived at Vadtaal with their families to participate in the celebration of the Fuldolotsav festival. Their bodies had weakened considerably since Ghanashyam Maharaj left home and they had spent every night thinking of Him. Once, Mayajitanand swami visited their home at Shree Hari's behest. When he narrated the life of Shree Hari and His Leelas, the brothers realised that Shree Hari is indeed their brother Ghanashyam and expressed the strong desire to meet Him. They remembered that their father had told them that their brother is none other than Bhagwan in the garb of their brother. They, along with their family immediately left Chhapaiya for Gujarat. Suvasini Bhabhi was more eager than the others as she had a soft corner for Ghanashyam and looked after all His needs in Chhapaiya. Rampratapji's family consisted of his wife Suvasini, three sons - Nandram, Thakurram and Ayodhyaprasadji and a daughter Sidhhi; Nandram's wife Dinmana, his sons Ramsharan and Narayan and a daughter Medha; Thakorram's wife Shivkumari, his daughters Govinda and Kunti and Ayodhyaprasadji's wife Sunanda and his daughter Yamuna. Ichharamji was accompanied by his family which included his wife Variali, sons Gopal, Raghuvir, Vrandavan, Sitaram and Badrinath and daughters Fullsari and Fullzari; Gopal's wife Manda; Raghuvir's wife Virja and his brother-in-law Sufal. They were accompanied by their maternal cousins Manasram, Kanho, Shivdin and Bhagwat and few other relatives."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! As they travelled southward, they were pleasantly surprised to hear many Leelas of Shree Hari. The devotees of villages they passed through venerated Rampratap and Ichharam when they realised that they were their Ishtadev Shree Hari's brothers. When they saw Shree Hari from a distance at Vadtaal, they recognised Him as their brother from the birthmarks on His face such as the black moles near His nose and on His ear lobe. Overcome with the joy of meeting Him after so many years, they ran towards Shree Hari seated on a dais. Their eyes swelled up with tears of joy and their hearts swelled up with happiness. Though Shree Hari was not besotted with His brothers in any way, He got up from His seat to greet them just as devotees travelling from very far for His Darshan. The two brothers and other male members of the entourage embraced Shree Hari, Who greeted them in return. O king! Shree Hari greeted His elder brother Rampratap with Dandvat Pranam while Ichharam, being younger, greeted Shree Hari with Dandvat Pranam. He greeted the others with folded hands and asked of their well beings after their arduous journey. He asked them to take seats near His Sinhasan and formally asked them how they knew of His whereabouts. Knowing Rampratapji and Ichharamji as Shree Hari's brothers, Muktanand swami and the other saints, Mayaram, Hemantsinh and other devotees, Soma Khachar, Mukund Brahamchari and other Parshads and Jaya, Lalita and other female devotees greeted them reverentially. Shree Hari arranged a large house for their stay in Vadtaal and appointed Joban Pagi and Mukundanand Brahamchari to look after them. The relatives realised that the stories they had heard about Shree Hari were no empty talk when they saw His majesty in person and made up their mind that He indeed is Bhagwan Vaasudev Narayan."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! After the brothers and other relatives retired to their quarters, Anandanand swami asked Shree Hari, 'O Bhagwan! A doubt has arisen in my mind. Why did You not allow Your elder brother, Rampratapji to greet You with Dandvat Pranam? Was there any shortcoming in His Bhakti? Or were You trying to espouse the tenet that the elders should not bow down to the young?' O king! Shree Hari Replied, 'O Muni! My brother's devotion towards Me is like Akrurji's. His thoughts are similar to the devotional thoughts Akrur had about Lord Krishna on his way to Gokul. Do not ever underestimate My brother's devotion towards Me. I did not allow him to do Dandvat Pranam to espouse the religious decorum and for the same decorum, I greeted him with Dandvat Pranam.' O King Pratapsinh! Anandanand swami's doubt vanished with Shree Hari's words. The devotees' fatigue of long journeys waned by Shree Hari's divine Darshan."

such as Radiyat, Jeeta, Mani, Rama etc. joined hands to serve Shree Hari. Narayanmuni said to His Parshads, 'O Soma, Sura, Alaiya, Mulji, Khatvang! Hurry up if you wish to have supper. Tomorrow is a day of fast for Dhatri Ekadashi.' They looked at each other and said, 'O Bhagwan! We are not hungry as we had Ladoos for lunch at Piplav. However, we must honour Your words, therefore, we will have something to eat. We consider eating Your Prasad a better option than observing a fast. However, we will undertake a fast to please You.' O king! Shree Hari looked around and called for any local devotee. Kuber Patel appeared from nowhere and said to Shree Hari with the folded hands, 'O Bhagwan! I am at Your service.' Shree Hari asked him if they have arranged for a kitchen and food here. Kuberji replied, 'Yes Maharaj! We have established a separate kitchen nearby and the Brahmin chefs have prepared a large quantity of Ladoos beside rice, lentils and vegetables.' Shree Hari went to the kitchen area for an inspection and realised that the food is not enough to feed so many devotees. He whispered in Joban Pagi's ears to bring some more Penda and Ghee from the village. Joban Pagi went about the task quietly and returned with several trays of Penda with him. Bhalchandra Seth and other devotees of Surat saw an ideal opportunity to serve and please Bhagwan by bringing trays of Penda and Barfi on their shoulders. Bhagwan Narayanmuni was pleased with the timely services of the devotees of Surat and praised their effort. The devotees of Mathura arranged all the Pendas and Barfi in a neat stack. He asked His Parshads to sit there in the rows for their supper. The Parshads, after washing their hands, feet and faces sat down in tidy rows. Shree Hari realised that the saints need to be fed first, so He summoned all the saints to come quickly for their supper. The saints sat down in separate rows near where Parshads had already sat down. Several large torches were placed around to light up the area. All other devotees present stood around to see the divine Darshan of the saints eating. On a cue from Shree Hari, hundreds of Brahmins started serving food to the saints and Suvrat Muni continued, "The Brahmins first served the plates and bowls followed by water. They served various items of food in such a way that they remained separate in the plates. The devotees from the western districts mentioned among themselves that the Brahmins from their region do not serve this way to keep all items of food separate in the plates. Shree Hari asked the saints and Parshads to commence eating once all varieties of the food were served. Shree Hari moved between rows to grant His Darshan and to serve Prasad of Ladoos with His own hands. Understanding the importance of Prasad from Shree Hari's hands, the saints and Parshads did not refuse at any time when Shree Hari came to serve them. Shree Hari asked the Brahmins to serve rice and Ghee to everyone. Instead of buttermilk, the Parshads were served sweetened milk today. Shree Hari ensured that their bowls were overfilled and as a result the soil became wet with milk. Soma Khachar and Alaiya Khachar sitting facing each other kept drinking bowls of milk in mock competition to see who can drink more. This created the ripple of laughter among all Parshads. O king! All the saints and Parshads were fed to their hearts' content. Shree Hari realised that an accident could happen in the melee if the mass of devotees converged on Him in their zeal of touching His feet. He spoke loudly, 'Do not come forward to touch My feet now. Every one will be given an opportunity tomorrow. I want all devotees to go to their respective tents after supper. The day will start early tomorrow. O king! Shree Hari greeted all devotees by saying 'Jay Sacchidanand' and made His way towards the dais and His Sinhasan."

Parshads."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! With a cane in His right hand and left hand placed on His waist, Shree Hari moved quickly. The disciplined devotees made way for Shree Hari to pass through and stood apart with folded hands for His Darshan. The Parshads following Him were trying hard to keep up with Him. O king! Almighty Lord Swaminarayan made His way to the dais and sat on His Sinhasan to grant His Darshan to His devotees. The devotees kept moving from the dais after a short while to make room for other devotees for Darshan. The devotees of Bharuch climbed the dais for His Darshan and placed large quantities of bananas, sugarcane, guavas, Ghee and sugar. Shree Hari greeted them appropriately and asked them the reason of being late in arrival. They informed Him that they had a problem with their carts on the way to Vadtaal. He arranged for their sleeping arrangement and asked them to proceed for supper. Shree Hari asked three Brahmin devotees, Pragji Purani, Mayaram Bhatt and Nachiketa if they had their supper or if they wished to eat anything. The trio replied that they are hungry but very tired due to the long journey and as a result they would rather sleep hungry than bother about having supper in the communal kitchen. Shree Hari took pity on them and as the next day was Ekadashi, He offered them bananas, Ghee and sugar, which the devotees of Bharuch had brought for Him. They gladly accepted. Shree Hari gave them six kilograms of Ghee and so many bananas that they had difficulty carrying them on their shoulders. They went to their resting place and ate to their hearts' content and thanked Shree Hari for taking care of them and wished to have such a supper for the foreseeable future to save the problem of cooking.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari got up from His Sinhasan and asked the devotees to move aside by waving His hands and went to His tent after all devotees had their supper. He took a bath, put on fresh clothes and despite being Bhagwan; He performed all the evening rituals to set an example for His disciples to follow."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The devotees of Vadtaal had prepared food appropriate for the evening of Dasam for Shree Hari. Gangaba had made date pudding, Puri from flour of Shingoda, yam fried in Ghee, Penda, Barfi, etc with love. She placed all the items in a plate and asked Joban Pagi to call Shree Hari to dine. Joban Pagi went to Shree Hari's quarters and requested Him to come for His supper, however, Shree Hari pointed that it was virtually impossible for Him to move through the teeming devotees. Instead, He suggested that they bring the food to Him. Joban sent a messenger to Gangaba requesting her to bring His food to His place. She covered the plate with another plate and a towel to maintain the sanctity of the food. She and the other many female devotees took by lanes instead of using the main road to avoid the crowd of devotees but found them teeming with devotees. They thought about turning back for a moment until Kuber Patel came to their rescue. He asked a few volunteers to make way for Gangaba and the other female devotees through the crowd. The volunteers made a wide gap through the crowd so that Gangaba and others could walk through comfortably."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari saw Gangaba and many female devotees following behind the stick wielding volunteers, making way through the crowd and realised that they were bringing His supper. Gangaba placed the platter near His feet, while the other women stood at a distance with folded hands. Shree Hari sprinkled salt on the fried yam and offered it to Lord Krishna's Murti as Naivedhya. He sat facing the East for His supper. O king! Shree Hari was wearing a golden Dhoti with a stole on His shoulders and freshly imprinted Urdhvapundra Tilaks adorned His arm, forehead and chest. Thousands of devotees looked upon this divine Darshan. He asked Gangaba the names of each variety. He ate only a little fried yam and some Puri whilst just touching the Penda, Barfi and other items as a gesture of acceptance. He sent the remainder of the plate as Prasad to Mukundanand Brahamchari to be shared amongst His main Parshads before retiring to His bedroom. O king! Shree Hari emerged from His bedroom after a short while and asked Nan Khachar to bring His mare. Accompanied by the other horse mounted Parshads, Shree Hari went to inspect the sleeping arrangements for all the devotees who travelled from far off places with the sole aim of His Darshan. He went to different areas and inquired about their well beings and ensured that any shortcomings in arrangements were rectified immediately. The devotees were pleasantly surprised that Shree Hari Himself had come to ensure their comforts. He returned from the inspection and retired for the night. He profusely praised the chaste and sincere Bhakti of all the devotees who had travelled to Vadtaal from far flung places in the company of a few Parshads such as Soma Khachar and Mukund Brahamchari.

Thus ends the 51st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree woke up very early the next morning by the sound of Morning Kirtans being sung by devotees. He sat up cross legged in His bed and meditated upon His own Swarup to set an example to the other devotees, before getting up to answer the call of nature. After a quick shower, He sat down on a mat for His morning veneration followed by a Mahapuja of Lord Krishna due to Ekadashi. O king! Shree Hari invited expert Brahmins to conduct the Mahapuja who conducted all rituals properly. They knew fully well that Shree Narayanmuni was none other than Lord Shree Krishna, Whose Mahapuja they were about to conduct. They established a water jug in the middle of twin lotuses and placed a gold Murti of Lord Krishna in a tray on top of the decorated jug. The twenty four Swarups of Lord Krishna along with their respective spouses and Parshads were established around the jug on the petals of the two lotuses. The air was filled with Brahmins' chanting the Vedic hymns accompanied by many musical instruments such as drums, Veena, clarinet, flute etc. The devotees gathered around for this divine Darshan and started singing Kirtans. Under the expert guidance of Brahmins, Shree Hari completed veneration with all sixteen elements of Mahapuja including Snaan with Panchamrut. Shree offered Lord Krishna new Yagnopavit, robes and ornaments, flower garlands, incense, Naivedhya, Paan and beetle nuts and performed His Aarti and concluded Mahapuja with Dandvat Pranam."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari venerated the Brahmins and gifted them with one hundred cows, one hundred silver coins, plenty of sesame seeds, gold and robes. He sat on His Sinhasan on a high dais to grant His divine Darshan to the thronged devotees."

CHAPTER-53

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! There was only a single sound of 'Jay' 'Jay' coming from the crowd when Shree Hari arrived to sit on His Sinhasan. As soon as He took His seat, the devotees started prostrating at His feet with Dandvat Pranam and there was a rush to touch His feet. Narayanmuni asked everyone to sit down in the form of an assembly after allowing them the chance to touch His feet. The saints, with elders at the front and younger at the rear, sat on His right side. Thousands of male devotees sat behind them in a semi circle with the elders at the front. The female devotees sat in a semi circle on His left side keeping some distance. They sat in the similar fashion whereby the elders were at in the front rows followed by younger devotees. A large space was kept vacant between the front rows and the stage for the devotees to come and perform His Puja. When Rampratap and Ichharam arrived in the assembly, they were greeted cordially by the saints and devotees and were seated at the forefront of the assembly. O king! When everybody had taken their seats, the saints tuned their musical instruments in readiness. They sang Kirtans penned by Muktanand swami and Brahmanand swami in tune with musical instruments for about one hour. Shree Hari asked the saints to rest to give other devotees an opportunity to showcase their musical skills. The devotees of different regions sang and played their musical instruments to please Shreeji Maharaj, Who praised their skills at the end of each performance and rewarded them generously with gifts."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari stood up and saw a mass of devotees as far as He could see. Many of them were standing with veneration platters in their hands. To fulfil their desires, the omnipresent Bhagwan addressed them, 'O devotees! You should come here in groups and make sure that the first group has taken their seats before another group comes here. No group must take unduly long time, so that every group gets a chance to come here and offer veneration.' The devotees heeded His advice and formed the groups according to their residence. The first to come forward were the groups of elder devotees of various districts and villages of Gujarat making a lot of noise. Bhagwan Narayanmuni asked them to keep quiet by putting His index finger on His mouth. They gifted Shree Hari many flower and sandalwood garlands, bejewelled ornaments and pieces of fine fabrics at the conclusion of their venerations. They also brought large quantities of sweets such as Penda and fruits with them as gifts. Their womenfolk followed them and brought many flower garlands and fruits for Shree Hari. O king! Shree Hari did not desire nor had asked for any of these gifts, yet He accepted them to satisfy and please His devotees. Many of the tunics and Jama (slim bottoms) which devotees gifted were of the wrong size. A tailor named Niharchand quickly made the necessary alterations and gave them to Shree Hari to wear to delight the devotees.

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! The strongly built and large eyed devotees, male and female, from the northern and eastern regions followed next for Shree Hari’s veneration. They brought with them many garlands of flowers and pearls, expensive clothes and platters full of candy sugar. Shree Hari returned all the flower garlands to the devotees as Prasad to their delight. They were followed by the devotees from the southern areas wearing large turbans on their head. Shree Hari was pleasantly surprised at the speed they performed their veneration. They gifted Him red, white and yellow robes and expensive ornaments and presented Him with gold bangles, gold anklets, diamond studded rings, armlets for arms, pearl necklaces, a shiny and studded coronet, a pair of pearl earrings and a gold waistband. They also brought with them many items of sweets such as Penda and Barfi and a variety of fruits such as bananas, grapes and sugarcane. They performed Shree Hari’s Aarti in accompaniment of musical instruments and prostrated at His feet with Dandvat Pranam before returning to their seats. Shree Hari gave fruits to the devotees of the South and flower garlands to the saints as Prasad. He got up from His Sinhasan to stretch His legs amid the roar of ‘Jay Swaminarayan’. O king! He was wearing a golden coronet, various ornaments, long flower garlands and pearl necklaces. He looked divinely handsome with a smile on His face and both arms resting on His waist.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! The devotees, led by the Brahmins and Kshatriya from the West, with large turbans on their heads came forward for the venerations. They tried to imitate rituals of the southern devotees without much success, which sent ripples of laughter through the assembly. The male devotees presented Shree Hari with many clothes, jewellery and other gifts. The female devotees of the western region followed their menfolk. They had immense love for Shree Hari in their hearts, kept their minds and senses under their control and had become frail due to their austerities. They carried platters full of coconuts, dates and beetle nuts with them to give to Narayanmuni. Some of them carried platters of silver coins, candy sugar, Penda, Barfi to gift to Shree Hari on conclusion of their venerations. O king! Wealthy devotees brought many expensive items including ornaments and silver and gold coins, while the poorer devotees brought flowers, fruits and leaves for Shree Hari. Bhagwan accepted anything His devotees brought because He looks at the thoughts behind the gift rather than its financial value. Shree Hari accepted whatever was offered to Him with love; He did not discriminate between the wealthy and poor. To Him, the love of the devotees was supreme. Knowing their latent desires, Shree Hari permitted all saints to perform His Puja. They gifted Him fruits and flowers. O king! Thus, Shree Hari fulfilled His disciples' desires to venerate Him."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The clothes, ornaments, fruits, flowers and food the devotees had brought for Him turned into high mounds. Shree Hari sitting on a high Sinhasan appeared as if He was sitting on top of a high mountain surrounded by many hills. He gave clothes and ornaments to the Brahmins, wealth to the poor or to devotees with large families present in the assembly. He did not keep anything for His use and gave everything to the devotees without much thought. O king! Indeed, the only thing He was left with were the clothes He was wearing. Everything else was just given away.

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! All the saints observed a fast on the day of Ekadashi. Shree Hari also observed a fast to set an example to His disciples. The whole day passed by in venerations by the various groups of devotees. He asked His Brahmin devotees to proceed to undertake their evening rituals and went to His private quarters to give a little rest to the other devotees. Taking a cue from this, the saints and devotees went to their respective boarding places. O king! All the devotees, saints and Brahmins who had gone to the banks of the lake to perform their evening rituals re assembled again and sat in their appropriate place as they had sat in the morning. Shree Hari also returned to His Sinhasan on a raised dais after concluding His evening rituals to grant His Darshan to His disciples. He was walking so fast that the Parshad following Him could not keep pace with Him. He looked ethereal with His stole flying in the air due to his brisk walk. He sat on His Sinhasan after greeting all the devotees by a benign smile. He raised His hands and started clapping while chanting Shree Narayan’s name, to which all the devotees followed suit and started Dhun aloud. O king! The devotees’ arms swaying slowly in unison appeared as if branches of rose shrubs swaying in the air. The sound of the chant and clapping spread in all sides including skyward. The thousands of lamps gave the impression of twinkling stars. The light from the lamps on land and the moon in the sky banished the darkness. Vithhaldas and Krushnadas stood on either side of Shree Hari holding burning torches in their hands. Shree Hari concluded the Dhun of Shree Narayan Bhagwan and greeted all the devotees with the folded hands who, in return, greeted Shree Hari with bowed heads and folded hands reverentially. O king! The saints sang Shree Hari’s Stuti.

We repeatedly bow down to You. O Independent! O Master of Maya! O Almighty Lord! Be pleased with us and protect us forever. You are the only One under Whose shelter one must go. O Bhagwan! We repeatedly bow down to You.' O king! The saints and devotees, with their eyes focussed on Shree Hari, prayed to Him after the Stuti, 'O endearing to the devotees! O Shree Hari! Bless us that we speak only Your name, Sahajanand (or Swaminarayan), whenever we fall, sneeze, suffer from fever and all ailments, yawn, fell unconscious or become helpless at the time of death. Your name is powerful enough to wash away all the sins of past births. O Hari! Bless us that our minds never wander away from Your divine feet. O Prabhu! Grant us these and be happy with us. 'O king! The saints and devotees focussed their mind and intellect in Shree Hari for a while, bowed down to Him and returned to their seats. Shree Hari silenced everybody with a gesture and addressed the congregation."

Shree Narayanmuni spoke, "O devotees! O saints! Listen to carefully. The Vratt of Ekadashi is said to be completed only after Jagran. Therefore, we must stay awake tonight singing Lord Krishna's Kirtans.' He asked Muktanand swami and others to sing the Kirtans penned by respective saints. After attracting the devotees' minds in His Murti, He attracted devotees' minds in Him. The saints and devotees started clapping aloud after seeing Bhagwan Shree Hari doing the same. The Jagran lasted until dawn was heralded by the cockerels. He asked the devotees to proceed for their morning rituals and He went to His private quarters and performed Snaan, Sandhya, Japa, Homa, oblation to the Pitris and Bhagwan's worship as part of His daily routine."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari offered a special veneration to Lord Krishna, established in the middle of twin lotuses the previous day, after concluding the normal morning routine. He gifted the gold idol of Lord Krishna to Shivyagnik Vipra and fed thousands of other Brahmins. He fed the saints and Parshads just as He fed them on Dasami, before returning to His quarters to cook Naivedhya. Rampratapji and Ichharamji, along with their respective wives came for Shree Hari's Darshan and said humbly, 'O Nilkanth Varni! You have cooked Your food Yourself until now, which was proper, however, now we have arrived and intend to stay with You forever, we would like You to dine with us. Please give us this opportunity to serve You by cooking for You. Just as others please You with austerity and other means, cooking for You will be our austerity.' O king! Shree Hari recognised their sincerity and agreed with them. He said, 'O brothers! You are respectable for Me, so I will abide with your wishes as your love for Me is unselfish. I will dine with each of you on alternate days. You should call Me for lunch after offering Naivedhya first to Lord Krishna. You must, however, accept grains, Ghee and other raw items that My disciples bring for Me. O king! Both brothers were elated by Shree Hari's assent and Shree Hari dined with Rampratapji the same day."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari returned to His Sinhasan to grant His Darshan to the groups of devotees returning after completing their morning rituals. As a celibate Brahamchari, Shree Hari never slept during the daytime, nonetheless, He returned to His tent for a short while to give respite to other devotees. Mukund Brahamchari, Soma Khachar, Sura Khachar and a few others remained at His service. He returned to His Sinhasan in the late afternoon, where the saints and other devotees followed Him and sat down in front of Him keeping the decorum of the Sampraday in their minds. After taking in His divine Darshan, the devotees of Vadtaal led by Kuber Patel asked Him, 'O Shree Hari! When shall we celebrate the festival of Fuldolotsav? Please advise us so that we can gather all the necessary things."

Suvrat Muni continued, "Bhagwan Narayanmuni replied, 'O devotees! Lord NarNarayan took birth through Dharmadev and Murtidevi as sixteen year old twins on Purnima of Falgun month in the era of Swayambhu Manu. Brahma and other Devtas placed Lord NarNarayan on a swing made of flowers. Since then, this festival has become known as Ful (flowers) Dol (swing) Utsav (festival). O devotees! If and when Bhagwan takes birth as a new born baby, the date should take precedent as to when the birthday should be celebrated, however, if He appears suddenly as a grown up or in any other form (Varah etc.), the constellation at the time of appearance must take precedent over date for the celebration of His birthday. Lord NarNarayan, our Ishtadev and the best among Brahamcharis, appeared as a sixteen year old at the time of His manifestation, therefore, His birth anniversary must be celebrated when the ruling constellation of Uttara Falguni prevails. The Fuldolotsav festival must be celebrated on the day when the Sun is passing through the Uttara Falguni constellation at sunrise.' O king! After explaining the timing of the celebration to Kuberji and other devotees, Shree Hari asked Mayaram Bhatt sitting in the front row for the astrological timing. Mayaram Bhatt opened his astrological almanac and announced that Fuldolotsav - the birth anniversary of Lord NarNarayan falls on Falgun Vad Padvo (the first day of the lunar fortnight). Shree Hari announced that Fuldolotsav will be celebrated on Padvo. Kuberji and the other devotees went to the town to gather necessary rations and other things."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! The groups of devotees from far away regions approached Narayanmuni and requested Shree Hari to come to their boarding places with Parshads and saints on a day of His choice to dine there. Shree Hari replied, 'O devotees! I am pleased at your devotional gesture, but do not insist that I come to eat at your individual place. You are in thousands and eating with each of you will take more than a hundred years! I suggest that the devotees of each region or district should get together and invite the saints for a meal. Feeding and satisfying the saints is equivalent to feeding and satisfying Me. You could provide uncooked raw food material to My brothers' residence if you still insist in feeding Me personally. Your desire to feed Me will be fulfilled by whichever method you choose.' O king! Muktanand swami and the other saints sang Kirtans of Lord Krishna for a while in the evening at Shree Hari's behest. to recuperate from Jagran the previous night, before returning to His quarters. He completed His evening Sandhya, meditation, etc. before retiring for the night thinking of saints' well being. He woke up the next day, Tears, as usual. The local devotees were busy gathering items necessary for the celebration. After completing his morning routine early on Chaudas (thirteenth lunar day), Shree Hari went to inspect the material the local devotees had gathered. Bhagwan Shree Hari praised their efforts to encourage them and proffered these two suggestions, 'The devotees must not swear and sing outrageous songs like other immodest people and never ride on a donkey on a day of Holi."

Thus ends the 56th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! On the morning of Purnima, Shree Hari arrived in the assembly after concluding His morning routine, where the devotees welcomed Him with a Stuti. The female devotees of Vadtaal came in the assembly to offer their Puja to Bhagwan Shree Hari. They were modestly dressed and carried the platters of sandalwood paste, flowers and garlands. O king! The devotees were elated when Shree Hari granted them the permission for veneration. They came forward and individually worshipped Him with sandalwood paste mixed with Kashmiri Kumkum powder, rice and flowers. All of them placed flower garlands around His neck while some of them offered Him expensive necklaces. They gifted many clothes, ornaments and plates of fruits to their Ishtadev, Shree Hari. O king! Shree Hari's whole day and most of the night was spent in accepting venerations of female devotees of Vadtaal."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! He retired for the night quite late yet woke up earlier than normal the next morning. He woke up Mukund Brahamchari and asked him to gather the necessary artefacts for the veneration of Lord NarNarayan. He invited expert Brahmins to conduct the Mahapuja soon after completing His morning rituals. The Brahmins helped Him conduct NarNarayan Bhagwan's Mahapuja as elaborately as was done on Ekadashi with sixteen elements such as Ahvan, Ardhya, Snaan etc. A golden swing with pearl studded ropes were tied to an elaborately decorated Mandap that was prepared the previous day. Shree Hari placed the Murti of Bhagwan NarNarayan in the swing and venerated Him with sandalwood paste mixed with Kumkum, camphor and musk and offered rice pudding and berries as Naivedhya. He stood in front of NarNarayan Bhagwan and swayed the swing for a while. Shree Hari placed the lumps of camphor in a golden tray, lit them and performed NarNarayan Bhagwan's Aarti. The hearts and minds of the devotees were drawn to Shree Hari and His hands moving in an arc with the Aarti. Saints played musical instruments in the tune of the words of Aarti, which spread in all directions. The visiting devotees, alerted by the sound, rushed to the Mandap with sandalwood paste, Kumkum, flowers etc. for veneration. Many of them brought their own musical instruments and joined the saints. The saints threw the coloured powder from the silver trays. The Devtas, alerted by the sound of the Aarti and music, showered flowers from heaven, the Gandharvas (celestial musicians) sang and Apsaras danced. It was as if the whole universe was celebrating the festival of Fuldolotsav. Shree Hari sang Bhagwan Shree NarNarayan's Aarti."
