Shree Hari sang, 'O Dev! Be victorious! O source of all benevolent things! O Narayan! O Purushottam! O brother of Lord Nar! O Omnipresent Soul! Be victorious! Be victorious! Your radiance is brighter than the Sun, therefore, Your bejewelled ornaments reflect the bright light around. You are swaying in the golden Sinhasan like swing in the company of Lord Nar. I bow down to You. O Dev! Be victorious! Be victorious! You have worn a pair of fish shaped diamond earrings and a bejewelled coronet. You delight Your devotees with Your twinkling eyes. You have worn a cotton stole woven with gold threads like a Dupatta around Your neck, armlets and bracelets and many garlands. You are the only one Who accords peace and bliss to Your devotees. Let My mind be focussed in You at all times. O Dev! Be victorious! Be victorious! You are wearing anklets around Your ankles and holding a lotus in Your right hand. Your perfectly aligned white teeth shine like the moon when You smile. You indeed, are incomparable. You left home and accepted Brahamcharya. I think about You all the time. Please protect Me! O Dev! O Bhagwan! I repeatedly bow down to You. O Hari! Let My mind never get interested in home, wealth, body or any possessions, indeed anything except You. O Prabhu! Listen to My prayers and be pleased with Me.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari venerated present Brahmins and gifted them plenty of clothes, ornaments, gold, cows and many other expensive things after He concluded the Stuti. O king! Shree Hari does not love anything as much as He loves Brahmins as they are very reverent to Him. There is nothing that He cannot grant or give to them. He fully satisfied Brahmins with gifts and as a result, He became famous as 'Brahamanyadev' (one who considers Brahmins reverential).

Thus ends the 57th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-58

Suvrat Muni said, "Shree Hari arrived in the assembly in the company of Sura Khachar, Mukund Brahamchari and other Parshads and sat on His Sinhasan after competing NarNarayan Bhagwan's veneration and Aarti. The devotees present in the assembly greeted Him with loud shouts of 'Swaminarayan Bhagwan ni Jay' and drumbeats, at which He blessed them by a benign smile. Joban Pagi, Kuber Pate, Takho Pagi and the other leading devotees of Vadtaal came forward for His veneration and gifted Him expensive robes, jewellery and flower garlands. While other devotees venerated Shree Hari, Joban Pagi and the other devotees brought large pots of orange and red coloured water and emptied them in a large pool prepared in front of Shree Hari. Other devotees brought bags and trays of Gulal (red coloured powder) and syringes and water pumps. Shree Hari recognised His devotees' desire to play Holi with Him. He gifted the expensive ornaments and robes to the Brahmins before coming down to play with the colour."

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! Shree Hari tied a piece of yellow cloth around His waist and held a golden syringe in His hand. He asked female devotees to segregate and stand back from the male devotees and sprayed coloured water on the saints from the syringe. This was a cue for all devotees to start playing Holi. He threw large quantities of Gulal on nearby saints and devotees. Muktanand swami led other saints to shower Shree Hari with Gulal. O king! The saints and devotees played Holi by throwing colour on each other for a long time. Later on, the saints, Parshads and devotees formed into pairs and played exclusively with their partners. Rampratapji and Ichharamji played with each other in their peculiar style of the Koshal region. Muktanand swami paired with Gopalanand swami, Brahmanand swami with Nityanand swami, my guru, Shatanand swami with Sachchidanand swami, Shukanand swami with Bhudharanand swami, Gunatitanand swami with Anandanand swami, Dayanand swami with Premanand swami, Nishkulanand swami with Mahanubhavavnand swami, Purnanand swami with Chaitanyanand swami, Bhajananand swami with Parmanand swami, Raghavanand swami with Gnananand swami, Adbhutanand swami with Sarvagnanand swami, Bhagavdanand swami with Atmanand swami, Yoganand swami with Shivanand swami and Krupanand swami paired with Aksharanand swami and they all played with each other. Similarly Mukundanand Brahamchari paired with Jayanand Brahamchari, Sura Khachar with Soma Khacahr, Alaiya Khachar with Bhaguji, Vasta Khachar with Hemantsinh, Pragji Purani with Mayaram Bhatt while Joban Pagi joined with Kuber Patel in the merriment of throwing Gulal and coloured water on each other. Soma Khachar emptied the whole pot of coloured water on Sura Khachar’s head. The stronger Sura Khachar retaliated by throwing Soma Khachar on ground and smeared his face with Gulal. and went to help Soma Khachar by smearing Sura Khachar's face. Sura Khachar pulled Brahmanand swami's Choti and smeared Gulal on his face. Brahmanand swami tried to retaliate by trying to pull Sura Khachar's Choti, forgetting that he was totally bald. Shree Hari saw this hilarious sight and jumped down from the dais and threw Sura Khachar on the ground and poured coloured water on him and smeared his face with Gulal. Sura Khachar, his large body and larger belly drenched in coloured water and covered in red Gulal, looked like a small mountain. Mayaram Bhatt threw Gulal on Pragji Purani and ran away before Purani could retaliate.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! To grant His Darshan to the devotees playing Holi further away from Him, Shree Hari mounted a horse and made a beeline towards them. Elated at the presence of Shree Hari amidst them, they ran after Him to throw Gulal at Him. Shree Hari move among and around the devotees for some time to ensure that each devotee had His Darshan before asking all of them to follow Him to the Lake Dhana Talav for a bath. He played with the saints and devotees in the water for some time. He asked all of them to return to their respective resting places before He, Himself returned to His tent. Shree Hari had a quick shower there and offered Naivedhya of various items to NarNarayan Bhagwan and performed Maha Aarti of Bhagwan. He took down the Murtis of Lord NarNarayan, venerated Him in the same way, before donating Murtis to the Brahmins. O king! Shree Hari went to the dining area to feed the saints after concluding the full rituals of Maha Puja of Lord NarNarayan. He moved repeatedly amongst the rows of saints to serve them a variety of items to delight them. He went to Ichharam's home for His lunch and retired for a few hours in His personal tent. O king! Shree Hari returned to the assembly once again at dusk, where He was greeted warmly by the present devotees. After Dhun and Kirtans, Shree Hari decided to address the congregation and the devotees fell silent and concentrated their minds on His words."

Shree Narayanmuni said, 'O devotees! Listen to Me carefully. It is very important that none of My disciples, celibates and householder males and females alike, must ever transgress the limitations of the decorum of the scriptures. They should regularly keep contact with pious saints, as only the pious saints can free one from the cycle of birth and death in Kali Yug. However, you must distinguish wisely between the really pious saints and the pretentious ones by their attitude and behaviour and associate only with the pious saints as described in the scriptures. There are many fake saints roaming the world, who wear ochre robes of saints to cheat the gullible. Outwardly they criticise accumulation of wealth and company of women, but secretly they indulge in both. Therefore, you must evaluate the saints and forsake the pretentious ones immediately. O devotees! The 'Asadhu' (fake saints) who accumulate wealth, associate with women, indulge in palate and wear ochre robes specifically to cheat people should be considered representatives of Kali Yug. The fake saints cavorting with women must be rejected from far. Nothing is more cumbersome for a man in this world than the company of a lewd person. The growing saplings of desire of Moksha and Bhakti are destroyed immediately by associating with such lascivious Asadhu. After the wilting of a sprout of the desire of salvation, one gets interested in woman, wealth and violence, the three gateways to Hell. As it is, a man has a natural empathy in woman, wealth and violence, which increases in the company of such Asadhu. O devotees! The Asadhu gurus and their disciples suffer the pains of Kumbhipak Hell forever after their death. Kapil Bhagwan had said the same thing to His mother, Devhuti as mentioned in the Shreemad Bhagwat. Our Ishtadev Lord Krishna had reiterated the same advice in greater detail to Udhhavji in the Shreemad Bhagwat. Therefore, My disciples must never associate with fake saints. Now I will describe the traits of pious saints so that you can recognise them and associate with them.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! The true saints forsake women totally in eight forms; do not accumulate wealth nor ask someone to accumulate wealth on their behalf; do not consume intoxicating substances; have all their senses, especially taste, under firm control; do not torment anybody with thought, speech or actions; have overcome inner foes such as anger and greed; stay away from vices such as gambling; are not overtly interested in their own body, their relatives and other worldly possessions and above all are devotees of Bhagwan Shree Krishna and staunch believers in His supremacy. Moreover, the true saints, road permitting, walk at least a metre away from a woman; emulate humility and detachment of Jadbharat, a son of Rhishabhdev Bhagwan; never travel anywhere without the company of other saints; undertake suitable atonement for any inadvertent transgression from their Dharma and above all never waste a moment without being engaged in Lord Krishna's Bhakti. O devotees! Any man desirous of Moksha must only associate with such pious saints. Any pretentious saints without such traits, however dressed, must be forsaken just as one forsakes a dead dog.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Hearing such a strict interpretation of Brahamcharya, the female devotees were taken aback at a loss of listening to Bhagwan's Katha from the pious saints. They sent some male devotees to ask Shree Hari, who asked Him on behalf of the female devotees, 'O Lord Swaminarayan! We listened attentively to You describing the difference between the pious and fake saints in which You emphasised the renunciation of wealth and women. O Bhagwan! There are two kinds of pious saints; one who have attained Moksha (Sidhha) and others who are still working towards their salvation. There is a vast difference in their status. Then, how could You prescribe the same level of renunciation for both kinds of Sadhus? It is indeed true that the saints who have not attained Moksha must stay away from women and wealth as there is an increased chance of them getting attached to them due to their lower level of Vairagya. However, the Sidhha saints, whose mind, intellect and senses are under firm control, have become independent from their bodies, i.e. their senses and mind cannot digress them from their Dharma. Moreover, they, by the virtue of their staunch devotion in You, can redeem anybody from the cycle of death and rebirth. They do not differentiate between man and woman. Both of them are equally renounceable to them. Many scholars compare such exemplary saints with a raging fire, in which no sin can survive. How could just speaking with women be considered transgression for them when even the physical touch of a woman is not considered sin for them? Ordinary people may develop the same level of detachment and independence as the pious saints by just associating with them. Then, O Lord! What is wrong for such Sidhha saints to narrate Your Katha to female devotees? Such discourses help protect female devotees from evil influences. What and who will protect female devotees from vices and free them from the cycle of death and rebirth? We understand that the saints who are still striving for their Moksha should not hold discourse with female devotees. Moreover, Your female devotees consider a saint travelling alone a fake and never listen to a discourse from such lascivious Asadhu. O Bhagwan! Do a favour to female devotees and permit Your Sidhha Sadhus to address them to augment their Bhakti in You. O Lord! Let such saints observe Brahamcharya by renouncing women in seven forms but permit them to speak to female devotees.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari, knowing fully well the intended and profound meanings of Dharma, smiled wryly at male devotees addressing Him on behalf of the female devotees."

Shree Narayanmuni replied, "O saints and male and female devotees! Listen to Me carefully. I will tell you what is most benevolent for female devotees. Krishna Bhagwan's Katha is redeeming. Just as My female devotees must not listen to it from an evil man, they must not listen to it from even a pious saint on their own without the presence of male devotees. The Sidhha Sadhu falls from his Dharma of celibacy if he holds Katha exclusively for female devotees. Any woman listening to Katha from such a fallen Sadhu indeed falls from her Dharma. This way, both of them, a Sidhha Sadhu and a female devotee become sinners. Ramanand swami had espoused this principle to Me previously. O devotees! Nothing vitiates a man's mind more than the company of a woman and nothing vitiates a woman's mind more than a man's proximity. Many chaste and pious men and women have fallen from their Dharma due to each others' close proximity.

Whatever elevated status a man has achieved, he must never come into close contact with a woman. Let Me quote some verses from the Shreemad Bhagwat in support of this principle. Both types of pious saints, one who have attained the status of Braham through My profound devotion and others who are still seeking salvation, must never associate with a woman, because a woman leads both of them to Hell . A person captivated with desires for a woman, clothes, gold and other worldly possessions loses the sight of his ultimate goal (of salvation) and heads towards his destruction, just as a blinded butterfly heads to the flame. How can one think of proximity of any woman when the secluded company of his mother, sister or daughter subdues the senses of even a highly intellectual person?'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! As you can see from these few quotes, even a Sidhha must never trust his mind and associate with a woman. Similarly, a female devotee, even if she has attained the status of Brahma must never associate with a male by trusting her fickle mind. Indeed, they must not associate with each other even if I command them to do so. Your contention that Mukta saints are akin to a raging fire which is able to redeem a woman devotee does not conform to the Vedas or behaviour of eminent sages of the past. This comparison holds true only for Lord Krishna and none other. Many people have courted infamy by such behaviour. O devotees! Brahma the creator of the universe; Shivji the annihilator, Indra the king of Devtas, moon the foster of all plant life, Brahaspati the guru of the Devtas and others were overwhelmed by lust and have earned notoriety by disregarding the pious Vedic ethics. Therefore, it is most important for pious saints not to speak with women as a mere sight of a woman is enough to digress them. The people who say that exalted saints are beyond committing any sins are fools and sinners. How can the Sidhha saints take liberty of transgression from Dharma when they are supposed to protect Dharma? The close company of a woman leads even a saint who has become totally detached from the world through AtmaNishtha (the knowledge about soul) and Bhakti astray. The same is true for the steadfast female devotees.'

Thus ends the 59th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER-60

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! A man who has attained the status of Brahm should still remain vigilant against the influence of a woman. Even when someone of such calibre as Sage Rhushyashrung, who did not know the difference between genders, was led astray by the company of a woman, what can be said of an ordinary man? I have narrated the tale of Sage Rhushyashrung in detail (at Manavadar) earlier. My wise disciples must not associate with a woman even for a religious purpose or even on My instructions. Forget about the physical association with a woman, there have been instances when the Sidhha sages have fallen from their Dharma of Brahamcharya by just looking at a woman. Therefore, My saints should refrain from looking at a woman. Let Me narrate a tale from the bygone era to illustrate how two eminent Sages, Narad and Parvat, have suffered as a result of looking at a beautiful maiden.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! Sage Narad and his maternal uncle, Sage Parvat had attained the status of Mukta Sidhha. They often visited shrines together. Once they paid a visit to Bhagwan Vishnu's staunch devotee King Ambarish. The king welcomed them warmly and venerated them respectfully. They retired for a while after the sumptuous lunch. O devotees! King Ambarish had a very beautiful and virtuous daughter named Jayanti. He took his daughter for the two sages' Darshan and asked them, 'O sages! You can see past, present and future. There is nothing that you do not know as you traverse the whole universe. I would like to ask you a question. Please reply after due thought. O Rishis! My daughter Jayanti is virtuous and innocent. I cannot find an equally virtuous and suitable groom for her. I am worried about her marriage. You visit various places and know many people. Please guide me towards a suitable match for my daughter.' O devotees! Both, Narad and Parvat, by now overcome with lascivious thoughts, decided to marry Jayanti. Overcome with lust by just looking at Jayanti, they shamelessly asked King Ambarish to marry off his daughter to them. King Ambarish asked them, 'O sages! You are known all over the world as celibate saints. How could you marry my daughter? Is this some kind of joke?' O devotees, Sage Narad and Parvat replied, 'O king! The four Ashrams are meaningless if not useful in Bhagwan's Bhakti. A man desirous of Moksha can worship and devote his life to Bhagwan in any of the four Ashrams. We have observed Brahamcharya Vratt so far to please Bhagwan and we will continue to serve Bhagwan in the Grahastha Ashram from now onwards. Therefore, we have decided to marry your daughter. We will bless you for your services to us.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! King Ambarish was perplexed. He was afraid of the sages' curse if he refused their request, so he said to the sages, 'O Rishis! You are two while I have only one daughter. How can I marry my one daughter to both of you! This is against the norms of society and the scriptures! I have known many instances of men with two wives but I have never heard of a woman having two husbands. Therefore, my daughter will have to select one of you as her husband. I will arrange for the selection process tomorrow. I invite both of you to participate in that process.' O devotees! King Ambarish left them to make preparations for the selection process. Both sages, thinking that a maiden desires beauty, rather than wealth, in her prospective groom, thought of acquiring good looks in exchange for the rewards of their respective austerities. They became envious of each other as they knew that Jayanti will select one of them as her prospective husband. They not only wished for great beauty for themselves, but wanted the other one to turn ugly to enhance their chances of impressing Jayanti. Great rivalry developed between the two best friends. Secretly, both of them decided to seek help from Lord Vishnu to fulfil their latent desires. Sage Narad was first to approach Lord Vishnu. Without letting Bhagwan know that he wished to marry Jayanti, he asked Lord Vishnu, 'O Bhagwan! I have come to You with a small request. A Swayamvar of King Ambarish's daughter Jayanti is to be held tomorrow. I would like to poke some fun at the participating kings. Please make me attractive to women by granting me a muscular body and a handsome face. Also grant me that my colleague Parvat's face turns out to be like a monkey's.' O devotees! Lord Vishnu said 'Amen' and Narad became more handsome than even Eros. On the other hand, Sage Parvat asked Lord Vishnu exactly the same; beauty for himself and ugliness for his nephew, Sage Narad. Lord Vishnu again said 'Amen' and Parvat became more Narad and Parvat kept their visit to Vaikunth a secret and praised each other's good looks and wished each other well for tomorrow. The night became very long for them in anticipation of tomorrow's Swayamvar (selection process).'

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! They spent the whole night praising Jayanti's beauty, citing each of her attributes. They extolled her facial expressions, speech, gait, movement of hands, twinkling eyes, smile and her tender youth. They compared her beauty to the moon and a lotus in full bloom, but still found comparison somewhat inadequate, considering that the moon has blemishes on its surface and a lotus does not have a faculty of speech. O devotees! They had lost all sense of decency by just looking at a woman. They completed their daily routine hastily in the morning and went straight to King Ambarish's palace. The onlookers were impressed with their good looks and gawked at them in astonishment. They sat at the entrance and ahead of other kings who had also turned up for the Swayamvar. The kings were amazed at the beauty of two sages and lost all hope of being selected. The only thing left for them was to guess which of these two sages Jayanti would select. Just as Jayanti entered the hall, both the sages' face turned into monkeys' just as they had asked from Lord Vishnu. They both were elated to see their rival's ugly face and each became assured that only he would be selected. Jayanti, looking at such heinous faces, bolted from the scene. She did not return to the assembly even after being implored by her father. King Ambarish approached Sages Narad and Parvat and asked them, 'O sages! Please go away from here for God's sake. My daughter is scared of you. She will not return as long as you remain here.' They, not realising that both of them had become ugly, saw some sort of conspiracy on the part of King Ambarish. Their desire to marry Jayanti failed miserably and as a result they cursed him, 'O king! You have become conceited with your opulence and hence, do not wish to marry your daughter to ascetics like us. O fool! You insult sages like us in arrogance of your so called knowledge. We curse you to suffer from the possessiveness of your body.' O devotees! So far Narad and Parvat were overwhelmed by lust only, but now anger had subdued their intellect. They cursed devout and innocent King Ambarish in anger. Sudarshan Chakra, which Lord Vishnu had placed to protect King Ambarish, nullified the curse and chased Sages Narad and Parvat.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! The sages saw Sudarshan Chakra followed by their curse in the form of a ball of smoke chasing them. They ran helter skelter to avoid Chakra. They forgot that only Lord Vishnu or King Ambarish can save them from Sudarshan Chakra because their intellect was corrupted by lust and anger. The Chakra followed them wherever they went. Onlookers did not understand why the Chakra was chasing Sages Narad and Parvat, but they were very surprised to see them monkey faced. They sought help from all quarters in vain. They had never suffered so much misery and pain. They went to heaven and hell and went to abodes of Indra, Agni, Varun, Vayu, Rudra, and Brahma. None of them were able to console or protect them from the wrath of the Sudarshan Chakra. They pleaded for help with various Devtas, Brahma and Shiva without any success. Eventually, they went to Lord Vishnu for succour. They prostrated at His feet and begged for His mercy. The merciful Bhagwan Shree Hari calmed the Sudarshan Chakra, solaced the sages and accepted the sages' curse Himself (and made it true during His incarnation as Lord Rama.) Shree Hari showed them a mirror and they were aghast to see their faces. They asked Bhagwan, 'O Bhagwan! How and why did this happen?' Lord Vishnu explained, 'Both of you asked this for the other. Do not get angry with Me. I did this to protect you from women.' Bhagwan returned their faces to their original state.'

Shree Hari concluded, 'O devotees! Sages Narad and Parvat suffered great ignominy as a result of the mere sight of a woman. Therefore, all My devotees, seekers and accomplished, must avoid contact with women. Moreover, even My Mukta saints must not look at copulating birds or animals. Sage Saubhari transgressed from his

CHAPTER-61

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! Just as a man should refrain from looking at a woman, a woman must refrain from looking at a man. A tale of how Devyani, a Naisthik Brahamchari, lost her bearing because of her attraction towards Kach is famous in the scriptures. O devotees! In a bygone era, Shukracharya (the demons' guru) had a virtuous daughter. She had mastered the intricacies of Yoga and was an expert at explaining the profound meanings of the scriptures. She had a firm understanding of the distinction between her soul and body. She tutored the daughters of the demons, while her father taught male students. She was a favourite of her father, who brought her up with much love. When Devyani turned ten years old, her father started looking for a suitable groom for her. He asked her, 'O my child! You are about to attain puberty. It is a father's duty to marry her daughter off to a suitable man. I, a Brahmin, would be tarnished with a grave sin if I neglect my duty in finding a suitable groom for you. Please tell me if you have someone in your mind as a prospective husband, otherwise, I will look for a suitable match for you. Devyani replied to her father, 'O father! It is well known that I am not interested in any man. I prefer the life of austerity to an unending cycle of death and birth. I shall spend the rest of my life in celibacy. Do not worry about me. You will not be subjected to criticism if you do not marry off your daughter if she is unwilling to marry.' O devotees! Shukracharya understood his daughter's feelings and her Vairagya and gave up the idea of marrying her off.'

Shree Hari continued, 'O devotees! Many years passed by. Brahaspati's (the Devtas' guru) son named Kach came to study the art of immortality from Shukracharya. Kach stayed at Shukracharya's home while studying. Over a period of time, Devyani got attracted towards good looking Kach. Her austerity, meditation, studying and teaching took a back seat, while she spent most of her time looking after Kach. She tried to snare Kach in her amour by being in his close proximity and exposing her body on the slightest pretext. She went a step ahead when this didn't work and shamelessly asked Kach to marry her. Kach tried to reason with her, 'You are my guru's daughter. As such you are my sister. Please give up this idea of marriage which is against the scriptures and decorum of the society.' O devotees! Overwhelmed by lust now, Devyani lost the sense of right and wrong and made the same request at every opportunity. Kach, being righteous, did not yield. Devyani felt rejected and lambasted and cursed Kach in anger that his knowledge will fail him. Dejected, Kach cursed Devyani that she, though a Brahmin, will not get a Brahmin husband and will be forced to marry into a lower Varna. Kach, knowing that his education now cannot be completed returned to heaven and Devyani married a warrior King Yayati at the ripe age of one thousand and sixty years. Though Mukta at one stage of her life, Devyani digressed from her Brahamcharya Vratt after coming into contact with a male. She became infatuated with her father's student, her brother in another sense, and cursed the innocent Kach when he did not yield to her unreasonable lascivious demands. She brought shame on the whole Bhrugu clan by marrying into a lower Varna. Her austerities, meditation, Vratt and study turned out to be futile and became only a labour in a lost cause. O devotees! In a very similar case, Renuka, the wife of Sage Jamdagni, was overcome with lust when she saw Chitrarath, the great Gandharva on the banks of River Ganga. She died at her husband's hands when he came to know her intentions. O devotees! An association with a male, however innocuous at the beginning, surely leads to a woman's downfall, regardless of her status and knowledge. Therefore, my wise female devotees must refrain from proximity of a male at all times.'

Lord Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! Male relatives such as a father, brother, uncle, grand father, son or nephew should reiterate the Katha to their female relatives that they have heard from saints. Female devotees may discuss Katha among themselves and seek clarification on any doubts from the saints via their male relatives and but directly. The widow devotees may listen from a distance to the Katha narrated by a Brahmin to an assembly of men. The female devotees must learn the scriptures, Katha, Kirtan etc. only from their close male relatives. They should treat other scholar and virtuous female devotees with reverence due to Radhaji and Laxmiji and should associate with them and follow their foot steps. O devotees! I shall now outline the guidance on how female devotees should behave when the group of saints arrive in their village on occasion of Janmashtami or other festivals. They may go to listen to Katha from the saints with their male relatives provided the Katha is held in an open space. They should sit behind male devotees while keeping some distance from them. They should listen to Katha with reverence, while observing such decorum. The similar decorum must be maintained by female devotees even when saints visit their village on any other occasions. The mixed assembly of male and female devotees is against the tenet of our Sampraday. Moreover, no female devotee must enter the walled or otherwise enclosed residence of saints for any purpose whatsoever. O devotees! Any woman entering the residence of saints contrary to My edict is a grave sinner like a Krutya. My female devotees must not venture out at night even for Darshan, except on Janmashtami and My birth anniversary. They may go out at night for Darshan on these two festivals, but in the company of their male relatives. They must take the utmost care while venturing out at night as the people with demonic tendencies venture out at night waiting for an opportunity to ensnare woman. O devotees! The female devotees must not associate with saints or listen to Katha facing them directly. Any conversation with the saints must be done only through their male relatives. This is the only way to enhance and augment their Bhakti in Bhagwan and maintain their Dharma. O devotees! Now go to the female devotees and relay my answers to their questions.'

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, 'O devotees! My male devotees desirous of salvation must forsake the company of other woman totally. Similarly, the female devotees must stay from other men, especially the young maidens and widows. All My householder devotees must renounce onion, garlic, meat, alcohol, tobacco, drugs and all intoxicating substances by all three means - touch, smell and consume. My devotees shall never eat the food left over by others. They shall not indulge in stealing, gambling and speaking lies. O devotees! You must always sieve milk, Ghee or water before consuming. You must give up anger, greed, envy, ego and violence. No animals shall be sacrificed, not even to please the Devtas (in Yagna) or Pitris (in oblation). One must never commit suicide, even on a pretext of attaining heaven. Water must always be sieved by a cotton cloth before being used, otherwise, according to the scriptures; one is committing the sin of eating meat. The sin of drinking unsieved water for one day is equivalent to what a fisherman accumulates over a period of six months. The householders must not be totally taken in by kin, wealth and other material possessions. They should show keener interest in the company of saints, as only saints are able to free a man from the strong bondage of this world. You should endeavour to listen to Bhagwan's Katha from the devout householders or the saints. However, a householder devotee must undergo a Chandrayan Vrat if he listens to Katha from a saint who accumulates wealth or talks to women. In other words, one must never listen to Katha from such pretentious saints. They should gather at an elder devotee's home or at a temple, if there is one, in the evening for Katha and Kirtans. All My householder devotees must turn the fixed and predetermined number of Mala while chanting Lord Krishna's name or hymn. O devotees! Mansi Puja is a powerful tool to wash away man's sins; therefore, all My disciples must perform Mansi Puja in seclusion. You must perform the Vedic rituals such as Snaan, Sandhya, Japa etc. daily as per your Varna. O devotees! You must undergo appropriate atonement for any moral lapse or a sin committed unintentionally. Many eminent sages such as Manu have shown appropriate atonements for a sin committed inadvertently.'

Shree Narayanmuni continued, 'O devotees! A person who has committed a sin should approach an assembly of devout scholars and seek an appropriate atonement for his sin. An assemblage of ten, seven, five or three eminent devouts, pious and truthful scholars is recommended. It could be made up of only a single person, provided that he is a judicious, religious and truthful scholar of the scriptures. The large gathering of fools, greedy or hypocrites is not considered a suitable assembly to announce atonement. The members of the assembly need not be old, handsome or wealthy but they must be religious, scholars, morally upright, impartial and honest. Even one young but scholar Brahmin is a better alternative than many uneducated elders. Dharma is where the truth is. They exist in tandem. Dharma cannot exist without truth. Together, they always prevail. The pronouncements of such an assembly of eminent persons should be considered Dharma. A person becomes free of fault and chaste after undergoing the atonement imposed by a proper assembly. However, the members of an assembly must speak after due deliberation, otherwise they become culpable of the same sin. Any person delivering the judgment without the proper knowledge of the subject he is deciding upon becomes culpable of a grave sin. Any judgement delivered without the support of the scriptures or due to partiality makes members of an assembly guilty of a grave sin; therefore, all pronouncements must conform to Dharma, truth and impartiality. The members must show clemency towards a child, woman, the aged, frail, sick or otherwise not capable to undergo atonement. They must also take the age, wealth, place and time into consideration. Members are consigned to Hell if they deliver judgement influenced by greed, fear or bias. O devotees! Manu and other eminent sages have written in great detail on appropriate atonement for a variety of lapses. The members of the assembly must take this and prevalent local protocols into consideration before pronouncing their verdicts. The person who refuses to undergo atonement delivered by the assembly remains a sinner forever and is consigned to hell after his death. If the sin is committed in privacy and if the sinner is a scholar of the scriptures, he may choose an appropriate atonement conforming to the scriptures to keep his dignity intact. It is permissible for a sinner to approach an eminent scholar in seclusion to seek atonement, provided the scholar can do the justice without undue influence. O devotees! A child under the age of five should not be apportioned blame for his actions and, hence, he should not be punished in any way for his sins. A father, brother or guru of a child aged between five and ten years old should undertake atonement on his behalf. From the age of eleven until he reaches puberty at the age of sixteen, a child should be given half of the normal atonement for his sins. The same treatment should be meted out to someone older than eighty years, a woman or a sick person. O devotees! A person who refuses to undertake appropriate atonement remains a sinner forever and is subjected to the punishments of hell and is reborn as a dog. Anyone who associates with such a sinner is considered a sinner himself. Therefore, all My disciples must undertake atonement for their sin immediately and must make sure that the same mistake is not repeated.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'All My disciples should gradually disengage from the mundane pleasures and worldly possessions and concentrate their minds in Lord Vaasudev. There are many means to augment interest and love in Bhagwan; faith, conforming to the religious edicts, understanding the greatness and glory of Bhagwan, inquisition of knowledge about a soul and body, the association with the pious, interest in listening to His Katha, contentment from worldly pleasures, being never content with listening to His Katha, sincere observance of Vrats like Brahamcharya, non violence etc., forsaking finding faults in or criticism of others, equanimity in heat and cold and joy and sorrow. These and constant reminisce and chanting of Bhagwan's name sprout and augment Bhakti in one's heart. The blooming of devotion enhances detachment and knowledge. Bhagwan can only be pleased with Bhakti and nothing pleases Bhagwan more than His unadulterated devotion. O devotees! The devotion is the only toll at your disposal to free yourselves from the cycle of death and rebirth. Therefore, always remain engaged in unconditional devotion towards Lord Krishna.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari rested after delivering His divine sermon which greatly pleased the gathered householder devotees. Later Shree Hari urged the saints to sing Kirtans which they duly obliged."

CHAPTER-63

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! After singing Kirtans for a while, Muktanand swami sang a special Stuti of Bhagwan Shree Hari by six hymns in the accompaniment of his Veena."

Muktanand swami sang, 'You repeatedly and continuously perform various Yagnas; You are the ultimate refuge of the vulnerable; You are an ocean of mercy and a helmsman to help steer the difficult course of the world; You are the source of all the virtues. O my friend! Grant me that my mind remains forever focused in You. You always wear white robes; Your beauty shames even Eros; Your benign smile attracts Your devotees minds in You; the fair hairs on Your head enhances Your appearance; You are bowed down by the Devtas led by Brahma. O my friend! Grant me that my mind remain sforever focused in You. You have overpowered the mighty lust and anger, which overwhelm the entire populace; Your long eyes, wide forehead with Urdhvapundra Tilak and numerous flower garlands around Your neck give lasting happiness to the devotees. O my friend! Grant me that my mind remains forever focused in You. You remove the fear of Kaal (death) from Your devotees' hearts; You wash away the sins of Your disciples; You mesmerise the demons with Your divine Leelas and You make Your devotees happy; You rigorously espouse the Vedic principle that Bhagwan is forever in Human form. O my friend! Grant me that my mind remains forever focused in You. You remove the sorrow of the Devtas and Your devotees; You cleanse the devotees' hearts and remove the inner vices such as anger and lust from them; You accept the ornaments and flower garlands offered by Your disciples. O my friend! Grant me that my mind remains forever focused in You. You chasten and destroy evil gurus and please the true saints; You shower mercy and compassion on Your devotees; the Devtas, humans and Rishis bow down to You. O my friend! Grant me that my mind remains forever focused in You.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Muktanand swami, Brahmanand swami and other musician saints sang further Kirtans in vernacular language in praise of Lord Vaasudev in which Shree Hari also joined them by clapping appropriately to the tune of the music. Shree Hari benignly glanced at the large congregation and as a result, thousands of devotees slipped into Samadhi immediately. O king! Many devotees saw the splendour of Akshardham with Shree Hari seated on an ornate Sinhasan and being served by His numerous Parshads while others saw Shree Hari's four armed, eight armed and thousand armed form in His other various abodes such as Golok, Vaikunth, Shwetdweep and Badrikaashram. They described what they saw in Samadhi to their friends and neighbours when they returned to their normal state. This helped cement the beliefs of the vacillating and removed from the minds of many sceptics the shadow of doubt about Shree Hari being the supreme Bhagwan. Many people, who had come to take their friends and relatives forcefully away from the assembly were astonished to hear the description of Shree Hari in Akshardham and became His disciples. O king! Shree Hari, the son of Devsharma, established His status as the supreme Lord of the universe to the delight of His firm devotees. He asked all the devotees to return to their tents and He Himself returned to His tent for the night."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari stayed on in Vadtaal for many days after the festival of Fuldolotsav to grant His devotees the pleasure of His company and His sermons. He held assemblies every evening where He raised and advised the devotees on various topics such as ethical duties of different classes of devotees including females, Sankhya, Yoga, Bhakti, Gnaan and Vairagya. Often he explained profound meanings of the Panchratra and the Shreemad Bhagwat. He would warn His devotees against any lapse from their Dharma and explain appropriate atonements for inadvertent lapses. Though Shree Hari is supreme Lord of the universe, He followed all rituals and Vratts to set an example to his disciples to follow one's Dharma at all times. He celebrated New Year on Chaitra Sud Padvo to mark the start of the creation of the universe by Brahma as described in the Brahma Puran and He venerated Matsya Bhagwan on Chaitra Sud Treej to mark His birth anniversary. He urged His disciples to make large donations to mark this day. O king! He prepared to leave Vadtaal for Gadhpur the next day following lunch at Ichharamji's home."

Thus ends the 63rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Narayan Giri of Vadtaal approached Shree Hari as He was about to depart Vadtaal and pleaded, 'O Swaminarayan Bhagwan! I would like to become Your host tomorrow. Please fulfil my desire.' As Shree Hari assented, Kuber Patel, Joban Pagi, Takho Pagi, Mulji and the other devotees of Vadtaal made similar requests, 'O Bhagwan! You have been in Vadtaal for last twenty three days. You accepted Joban Pagi's hospitality the first day. Since then You have pleased Your brothers and the devotees of far off places by accepting their hospitality. We too are Your devotees. Please also fulfil our desires by accepting our hospitality. We would like to offer food to You and the saints. We plead with You not to proceed to Gadhpur until Vimala (Chaitra Sud) Ekadashi.' O king, Shree Hari assented and postponed His departure for a few days to fulfil the devotees' desires. On Chaitra Sud Navami, Shree Hari observed a fast for the day to mark the birth anniversary of Bhagwan Ram. He venerated Lord Ram with full rituals and reverence at midday. The devotees of Vadtaal fed all the saints and many Brahmins and gifted much wealth to the Brahmins at Shree Hari's behest on Dasami. The Ekadashi was celebrated with full pomp and rituals such as Mahapuja of Vaasudev Bhagwan. Shree Hari placed the idol of Vaasudev Bhagwan in the swing and swayed for a while before concluding the veneration. They stayed awake until the next morning singing Kirtans to observe Jagran on the occasion of the Ekadashi."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! After eating to conclude the fast of Ekadashi, Shree Hari asked the saints and Parshads to get ready to leave Vadtaal. He asked several groups of saints to disperse and visit outlying areas to spread His message while He asked the remainder to accompany Him to Gadhpur. He sat on a Sinhasan so that the devotees of Vadtaal could offer their veneration of departure. He asked all devotees to return to their respective regions and villages and to take care on their journey home. O king! Shree Hari bid farewell to the devotees and mounted His horse. The Parshads also mounted their respective horses and formed a ring around Him. He was wearing white robes, His forehead was adorned with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and red Kumkum Chandlo, His torso was covered with many flower garlands and pearl necklaces and was surrounded by disconsolate devotees. Many devotees followed Shree Hari whom He asked to turn back but in vain. He galloped His horse to go very far from the throng of devotees. The devotees, understanding His intentions stood there until Shree Hari went out of their sight before turning back with their eyes welling with tears. O king! The saints, Rampratapji and Ichharamji and their families were slightly ahead as they were sent off from Vadtaal a little earlier on board the carts and chariots. Shree Hari and the Parshads caught up with them and the whole entourage travelled together on the way to Gadhpur. As they were travelling through Bhaal region en route to Gadhpur, many devotees of Bhaal lined the route and requested Shree Hari to grace their villages. Narayanmuni could not disappoint His faithful devotees and agreed to grace some of the villages. He spent a day or two in some of the villages to delight the devotees of the respective villages. O king! One month passed while travelling from village to village."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! King Uttam Khachar was disconsolate as the time for Shree Hari to return had elapsed. He spent the month with much difficulty as every day he waited for the good news of Shree Hari's return. Another month passed by without any hint of Shree Hari's arrival. He became unable to bear Shree Hari's separation any more as the third month passed by. Becoming restless with worry and apprehension took a great toll on his health and he became frail with irregular meals and sleep. He decided to write a letter to Shree Hari. He wrote, 'O Shree Hari! You left Gadhpur promising to return within a month, however, the time of Your return has long gone by and You have not returned. I am barely alive and that with the hope of Your Darshan. I do not know how long will I survive your separation. Please come back quickly or failing that, grant me permission to come to You.' O king! Uttam Khachar sent the letter with a messenger who reached Shree Hari the same day. He bowed down at His feet and delivered Uttam Khachar's letter to Him. He realised that King Uttam may not survive His separation, hence decided to return to Gadhpur immediately. He asked all gathered devotees to return to their villages and left for Gadhpur the same night in the company of His mounted Parshads. Uttam Khachar received news of the imminent arrival of Shree Hari before dawn. Forgetting to put on his shoes, he rushed to greet Shree Hari. Just as the entrance of a soul awakens a body, Uttam Khachar regained stamina on hearing the news of Shree Hari's arrival. He danced with joy on seeing Shree Hari and prostrated at His feet with Dandvat Pranam. Shree Hari dismounted His horse and lifted Uttam Khachar from the ground and embraced him tightly. He was surprised to see how much weight Uttam has lost due to His separation. Uttam Khachar led the entourage in his royal palace. He arranged for Rampratapji and Ichharamji to stay in his palace with the same respect as he had for Shree Hari."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari celebrated Fuldolotsav with great festivity and pomp at Vadtaal and He celebrated many other festivals during His extended visit to Vadtaal. Whoever recites or listens to this Katha of celebrations will have his devotion in Bhagwan Shree Hari augmented, will have all his desires fulfilled and will attain the supreme abode at death."

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! Uttam Khachar, along with his other family members, served Shree Hari daily with sincerity and reverence. He celebrated the festivals of Annakut and Prabodhani Ekadashi this year (Samvat 1876) with as much pomp and festivities as he celebrated them the previous year. Shree Hari invited all His devotees from far afield to participate in these two festivals to the delight of Uttam Khachar. Shree Hari sent all the visiting devotees back to their respective villages when both festivals had finished. Shree Narayanmuni, Who had taken birth for the primary purpose to re-establish the chaste practices of the Vedic religion, decided to listen to the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat to set an exemplary example to all His disciples. He called a few of His devotees and Parshads after concluding His morning routine on Magsar Sud Chhatth. O king! Shree Hari asked Mayaram Bhatt, ‘O Brahmin! You are an expert in astrology. The month of Magsar is considered very auspicious for religious activities. Indeed, Sage Vyas has described this month as an appendage of Bhagwan Vaasudev. I wish to listen to the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat in this auspicious month. Please refer to your almanac and find a most auspicious date to start the Katha so that there are no hindrances during the Katha.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! Mayaram Bhatt consulted his almanac and replied to Shree Hari, ‘O Bhagwan! Tomorrow is Saptami, Wednesday and the Sun is in Danistha constellation, which makes it the most auspicious date to start the Katha.’ O king! Shree Hari said to Pragji Purani sitting in front of Him, ‘O Purani (an expert narrator)! I wish to start listening to the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran tomorrow morning. O Brahmin! Both of us will conclude our morning rituals early daily during the period of the Katha, start the Katha early in the morning. We shall take a short break at the noon and start Katha again in the late afternoon and conclude the daily session at dusk. O Purani! Tell me your views on this schedule.' O king! Pragji Purani, very excited at the prospect of such an excellent opportunity, replied, 'O Bhagwan! I will recite the Katha to You as per the schedule You have suggested. The break in the afternoon will relieve me from mental fatigue and any physical discomfort due to sitting upright for a long time.' O king! Pleased with Pragji Purani's assent, Shree Hari invited him to recite the Katha and the other devotees to listen to it. He explained the importance of listening to the Katha."

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, 'O devotees! Listen to My benevolent advice. All My disciples must listen to the Katha of Shreemad Bhagwat and other Purans regularly. The people from all four Varnas and Ashram have an equal right to listen to such Katha. Indeed, listening to the Katha is the surest means to fulfil one's desires. Even the Devtas extol listening to the Katha of Puranas as one cannot fathom the true knowledge about God without it and without the true knowledge about Bhagwan, one cannot unshackle himself from the cycle of birth and death. Therefore, all My disciples must regularly listen to the Ramayan and the Puranas and the Mahabharat written by Sage Vyas as it enlightens the minds of the listeners. The listening to the Katha of Puranas is a lamp which banishes the darkness of ignorance and is a miracle cure for the people suffering from the pains of the repeated life and death. All the devotees desirous of salvation must listen to such Katha on daily and regular basis. If unable to listen to it for a longer period, one must still listen to such a Katha for one or half an hour daily without fail. O devotees! Some of you, who are unable to listen to the Katha everyday should endeavour to listen to it on Ekadashis or during the auspicious months.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'Whoever listens to the Katha, even for a short while, does not fall from the grace of God. Whatever rewards one earns by performing all the Yagnas and making all types of donations can be his just by listening to the Katha of Purans reverentially, especially in Kali Yug. There is no better Dharma or a better means to achieve Moksha than listening to the Katha. In comparison to other three Yugs, people of Kali Yug are weaker, suffer from many shortcomings, are afflicted and overwhelmed by vices, short lived and do not conform to the ethics of Varna and Ashram. Knowing this, Sage Vyas wrote the Shreemad Bhagwat and other Purans for benevolence of the people of the present era. O devotees! Upon drinking nectar, a person becomes immortal himself, while, listening to the Katha, he is able to immortalise his entire clan. A person's life is akin to a life of an animal without listening to the Katha. Therefore, all right thinking devotees must listen to the Katha sincerely and devoutly.'

Suvrat Muni said, 'O king! King Uttam Khachar, eager to listen to the Katha as espoused by Lord Swaminarayan, asked Him humbly, 'O Bhagwan! I would like to know where and when one should listen to the Katha. How should a narrator and listener behave and what, if any, ethics do they have to observe for the Katha? What should a listener gift to a narrator at the conclusion of the Katha? These questions arise in my mind. Please satiate my curiosity.' O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari addressed the whole assembly to enlighten all other devotees besides King Uttam."

Shree Hari said, 'O King Uttam! A person should listen to the Katha regularly and reverentially if he wishes to be freed from the consequences of his sins. He should listen to the Katha on days of Vrat such as Ekadashis or during the period of Chaturmaas if he is unable to listen to it daily. I shall reiterate the rewards of listening to the Katha of Puranas as described in the Skand and other Puranas. O king! The listener should humbly invite a scholar narrator after concluding his normal daily routine early. The listener should prepare a podium on a higher plinth with a soft seat for the narrator and place a scripture on a higher planer than the seat for the narrator. The listener should respectfully invite the narrator to take his seat to begin the Katha. The host listener should venerate the scripture and the narrator in that order with sandalwood paste, grains of rice, flowers, fruits and Aarti whilst chanting this hymn, "O narrator! Today you represent Sage Vyas, a son of Satyavati! You also represent the triumvirate of Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva today. I bow down to you." O king! The host should venerate the other saints and Brahmins who have come to listen to the Katha and invite them to take the seats at the front of the congregation. The Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra devotees should take their appropriate seats as per their hierarchy and modicum. The scholars, astute and elders should be given seats in the front row. The ladies should sit behind the male devotees keeping some distance. All the listeners should offer some form of gift such as fruits, flowers, coins or a handful of grains before taking their seats in the assembly. O king! The listeners must treat the narrator with the utmost respect, even if he happens to be young, old, poor or ugly. One should never consider the narrator as an ordinary mortal, as his discourse is able to wash away the sins of the listeners. The narrator is the guru of all the gurus as he is able to liberate the listeners from the never ending cycle of birth and death through his knowledge and interpretation of the scripture.'

Bhagwan Swaminarayan continued, 'O King Uttam! A narrator should preferably be a Brahmin and he must maintain inner and outer chastity, control his senses, overcome greed and envy, be kind, virtuous and fluent. A person who observes strict Brahamcharya and has undertaken Mahadiksha (such as our saints) is also considered a suitable narrator. While sitting on a podium during the Katha, the narrator must not bow down to anybody, except God Himself or His Ekantik devotee, The narrator must not read Katha in front of people who are deceitful, dishonest, sinners or those who want to gain knowledge just to vanquish others in a debate nor should he conduct Katha in drinking and gambling dens. Rather, he should narrate Katha in front of virtuous or inquisitive people, in a shrine, temple, home or on the banks of holy rivers such as Ganga. The listeners, who listen to the Katha attentively, silently, solemnly and reverentially while maintaining the inner and outer chastity, earn the Punya of listening to the Katha. A listener, even a solemn one, loses his wealth if he does not offer any gift to the narrator. O king! The listener who deserts the ongoing Katha is deserted by his wealth and wife in the time of need. One must not wear any headgear such as a cap, hat or diadem and chew beetle leaves, nuts (or gum for that matter) or tobacco while listening to the Katha. No one must sit on a seat higher than that of a narrator or sit with stretched legs in an assembly. One must not listen to the Katha standing up or lying on his back except if unavoidable. A listener who keeps looking at a woman while listening to the Katha is born as a swine in his next life; the one who speaks with others is born as a donkey and so is the listener who argues with the narrator, whereas one who interrupts or hinders the Katha is born as an evil spirit in his next life. Indeed, a listener who criticises the narrator or the Katha itself is subject to a hundred births as a dog. Therefore, O king! One must listen to the Katha reverentially at all times.'

Lord Shree Hari continued, 'O king! The host should look after a narrator well by making tasty food and providing clean water for his bath. A narrator should be given sweetened milk every morning to keep his throat and voice clear. The host should venerate the narrator and offer him gifts at the end of each chapter and as well as on any days of Vrat and festivals falling during the Katha. All the listeners should venerate the narrator and offer him suitable gifts at the conclusion of the Katha. The wealthy devotees should offer gold or silver coins, expensive clothes, grains or vehicles as gifts while the poor devotees may offer firewood or other useful things to the narrator. The narrator should be sent off on a chariot or other vehicle with the listener following him to his home. O King Uttam! I have just explained the normal ritual for listening to the Katha of the Puranas, following which, a listener is rewarded fully as mentioned in the Puranas. This ritual must be heard before the start of the Katha for total fulfilment. The Shreemad Bhagwat Puran is superior to all other Puranas. The sincere listening to the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat and appropriate charity at its conclusion gives unending Punya to the listener of the Katha.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Uttam Khachar's curiosity was not fully sated. He further asked Shree Hari."

CHAPTER 2

Uttam Khachar asked Shree Hari, 'O Prabhu! Please tell me the rituals of listening to the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran, its Purascharan and the charity one should do at the conclusion in detail. Only You are able to remove my ignorance.'

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Pleased by King Uttam's hunger for enlightenment, Shree Hari started answering his questions starting with the superior importance of the Shreemad Bhagwat."

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, 'O king! There are two types of Puranas, major and subsidiary. Sage Vyas composed the major Puranas while other eminent sages composed a similar number of subsidiary Puranas. The major eighteen Puranas composed by Sage Vyas are; the Braham, Padma, Vishnu, Shiv, Shreemad Bhagwat, Markandeya, Naradiya, Agni, Bhavishyottar, Ling, Brahamvaivart, Vaaman, Varah, Kurma, Matsya, Garud, Skand and Brahamand. The subsidiary eighteen are; Sanatkumar, Nand, Narsinh, Kapil, Daurvarsas, Narad, ShaivDharma, Manav, Brahamand, Aushnas, Varun, Kalki, VasishthaLing, Vasishtha, Maheshwar, Parashar, Samb and Saur. Sages Marichi, Bhargav and a few others have also composed some other subsidiary Puranas. The Mahabharat, composed by Sage Vyas, is the historical saga and the Ramayan, composed by Sage Valmiki, is the first lyrical epic. The Shreemad Bhagwat is the epitome and essence of four Vedas and all the Puranas. Just as the River Ganga is the holiest among all the rivers, Lord Vishnu is the most venerated among the Devtas, Lord Shiva is the best among all devout Vaishnavs, the Shreemad Bhagwat is the best among all the scriptures.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, 'O king! There is a very good reason for the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran to be considered the most important among all the scriptures. You will agree to it, once you have listened to it. At the very beginning of the process of creation, Brahma revealed the Vedas for the benevolence of mankind. There was only one Veda in the first Satya Yug. All men were intelligent to understand the concise scripture. Men's intellect retarded as time passed and by the end of Dwapar Yug, it became very difficult for almost every man to understand the Veda. Lord Narayan created Sage Vyas from His own intellect and he divided the Veda into four divisions. Sage Vyas composed seventeen Puranas and the Mahabharat to explain the meaning of the Vedas in which he espoused the Dharma of Varna and Ashram to be followed by every man. He also espoused the secular activities by which to create and earn wealth and religious activities by which one can attain Moksha. O King Uttam! Sage Vyas appointed his four disciples; Pail, Vaishmpayan, Jaimini and Sumantu as the reigning Acharya of four Vedas, Rig, Yajur, Sam and Atharva respectively and Rohmarshan Rishi as the Acharya of the Mahabharat and the Ramayan.'

Bhagwan Swaminarayan continued, 'O king! However, Sage Vyas was not at peace with himself after returning to Shamyapras, his hermitage on the banks of River Saraswati. Sage Vyas was born to propound Lord Vaasudev's Ekantik devotion for the benevolence of mankind. He had propounded Dharma, Gnaan and Vairagya to enhance a devotee's Bhakti towards Lord Vaasudev in the scriptures he composed. However, the verses that extolled devotion became secondary to the verses describing the rewards for observing rituals as people desired the materialistic pleasures of the Heaven more than Moksha. People preferred Heavenly pleasures to the eternal bliss of the supreme abode. Though Sage Vyas meant well, the composition of Puranas failed to achieve their intended goal of veering people towards Bhagwan's Bhakti and liberating them from the cycle of death and rebirth. He considered his task unfinished, was unhappy and restless as his compositions failed in their objective. Sage Narad, at the behest of merciful Lord Narayan, arrived at Sage Vyas's hermitage. Sage Vyas venerated Sage Narad reverentially and asked him the reason for his agitated state. Sage Narad replied, 'O Vyas Muni! You had taken birth to steer people towards Bhagwan, in which you have failed. Therefore, you fell restless and agitated. You need to compose one more scripture as an essence of all other Puranas. Describe the glory of Bhagwan Vaasudev and His staunch devotees in the new scriptures, which will give you peace of mind. The Shreemad Bhagwat will not only fulfil you, it will help people to attain salvation. O sage! Lord Narayan has sent me with this message.'

Lord Shree Hari continued, 'O King Uttam! Sage Vyas meditated upon Lord Narayan and sat down to compose the Shreemad Bhagwat. He drew the essence of the Vedas, all the Puranas, the Mahabharat, the Ramayan and all the Smrutis with his intellect. Just as Lord Narayan had drawn nectar from the ocean after churning it, Sage Vyas drew the nectar - essence from the ocean of all the scriptures. O king! Dharma was orphaned when Lord Krishna returned to His abode after giving up His human body. Dharma found the shelter in the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran since its inception and it has sustained Dharma since then.'

Thus ends the 2nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Narayanmuni said, "O king! Sage Vyas has delved in the depth of the Upanishads, the SankhyaShastra and the YogShastra and narrated their essence in the Shreemad Bhagwat for augmentation and enhancement of one's devotion in Bhagwan. He has covered in detail the central message of the Panchratra that Lord Krishna takes the four forms namely Vaasudev, Sankarshan, Pradhyumna and Anirudhha and He is the supreme Bhagwan, Who manifests Himself in many incarnations. O king! The Shreemad Bhagwat espouses the worship of Lord Krishna to please Him and develop the single minded, deep and staunch devotion in Him; the indifference towards the materialistic objects and pleasures; the divinity towards the births and lives of His incarnations, affinity and empathy towards His devotees and the knowledge of distinction between a body and soul in great detail."

Shree Hari continued, "O king! Only Bhagwan's devotees are able to glean this central theme of the Shreemad Bhagwat. Bhakti is imperative to understand the essence of the Shreemad Bhagwat. Only a person, who observes his Dharma faithfully; is detached from the mundane worldly objects; understands and considers his soul distinct from his mortal body; accepts the supremacy of Lord Krishna and has humble devotion towards Him can fathom the essence of the Shreemad Bhagwat. Such a devotee may not be a scholar of the scriptures or may not be an expert in worldly affairs, yet he can grasp the essence of the Bhagwat by just listening to it. On the contrary, a person, who may be a scholar of the Vedas or an expert in worldly affairs, cannot understand the true meaning of the Bhagwat, even after repeatedly reading or hearing, if he does not observe his Dharma. As a result, Bhakti towards Lord Krishna, an essential ingredient of salvation, never takes root in his heart. O king! A person, who does not imbibe and behave as directed (due to the lack of Bhakti) even after learning the Bhagwat from an eminent saint, is considered ignorant even if he is a scholar or clever otherwise. Therefore, one must read, study and listen to the Bhagwat with due reverence and as a result, he becomes free from the consequences of his sins and is released from the cycle of death and rebirth if he does not commit any further sins."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O king! Listening to the Shreemad Bhagwat is a miraculous medicine which can wash away the sins accumulated over a long period which are not washed away even after undergoing repentance. Sage Vyas taught the Shreemad Bhagwat to his son, Shukdevji, who in turn narrated it to King Parikshit and thousands of sages on the banks of River Ganga, three hundred years after Lord Krishna's return to Akshardham. Shukdevji started the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat on Sud Navami of the month of Bhadarvo and concluded it on Purnima. King Parikshit conquered death and attained Moksha at the end of seven days of Katha. The Katha of the Bhagwat has become prevalent since then. The Bhagwat is the best because it is an essence of all scriptures including the Vedas. Though Ghee is always present in milk, its exalted taste cannot be enjoyed until it is separated from milk; just as the sweet taste of sugar cannot be enjoyed until its separation from the shoots of sugar cane, the true meaning of the Vedas are difficult to understand and imbibe until it is presented in a clear and concise form as in the Shreemad Bhagwat. The Katha of the Bhagwat is capable of saving a man from the greatest difficulties. Nothing comes closer to clear one's mind and intellect. The desire to listen to its Katha arises only as a result of the Punyas accumulated over many previous lives."

Shree Narayan Muni continued, "O king! Just as Shukdevji started narrating the Katha of the Bhagwat to King Parikshit and eighty thousand sages, the Devtas arrived there with the pot of nectar and said to Shukdevji, 'O Muni! Please take this pot of nectar in lieu of the rewards of the Katha. Let King Parikshit sip the nectar to gain immortality and we will imbibe the nectar-like Bhagwat Katha.' O king! Shukdevji mocked the Devtas for comparing a piece of cut glass,the pot of nectar, with a real gem - the Katha of the Bhagwat. He did not consider the fickle minded Devtas suitable to narrate the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat. Brahma was mighty surprised to see King Parikshit attain Moksha as a result of listening to the Katha from Shukdevji. He put the Shreemad Bhagwat on one pane and all other scriptures on the other pane of a scale for comparison and the Bhagwat tilted the scale in its favour. Consequently, the resident sages of Brahama's abode considered the Bhagwat as a verbal form of Bhagwan, capable of granting Moksha. The fame of the Bhagwat spread far and wide and all people, including Marichi, Sanak and other sages on heaven and earth held the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran in the highest esteem. The resident Muktas and sages of Shwetdweep and Badrikaashram also accepted it as the most important scripture and are engaged in its study."

Lord Shree Hari continued, "O king! Other Puranas, the Vedas, the Shrutis and Smrutis felt dejected at their neglect by the people. They approached Brahma and pleaded, 'O creator of the universe! Please listen to our distress. Nobody shows any respect to us since the supremacy of the Shreemad Bhagwat was established. Everyone everywhere is interested only in the Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat. Our name will be erased from people's memory if this continues any longer. We have come to you for help. Please protect our identity, honour and existence.' O king! Lord Brahma solaced them and turned to the Bhagwat, 'O chaste and virtuous! You must not allow this situation to continue. Promise me that you will never go anywhere without the company of your brothers.' The Shreemad Bhagwat understood well that it was Lord Brahma who had enhanced its greatness and bestowed the honour of being the best. It replied, 'O Brahamji! Even I do not enjoy my fame as the best scripture. Since you established my supremacy, I feel weighed down by this fame. I promise you that I will always remain with my brothers as you wish.' O king! Lord Brahma was pleased with the response of the Shreemad Bhagwat and named it as the fifth Puran. Accompanying Shreemad Bhagwat wherever its Katha was held, other scriptures gained sustenance and acceptance with it. However, the fifth (the Shreemad Bhagwat) was always considered mightier than the hundred (other scriptures). "

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O king! Only the fortunate people get an opportunity to listen to the Shreemad Bhagwat which narrates the glory and greatness of Lord Krishna. Listening to its contents for seven days leads one straight to His eternal and supreme abode. All sins of a person, or even of a ghost, are wiped away by listening to the Katha of the Bhagwat Puran for seven days. Just as a fire burns down everything, the Katha of the Bhagwat washes away all the sins committed inadvertently by mind, body or speech. According to Sage Narad, a man's life is futile if he does not take an opportunity to listen to its Katha. O king! This human body is nothing but a mixture of blood, muscles and bones covered with skin. Only difference between a body and a bucket of foul mixture of urine and faeces is the fine cover of skin on human body. Moreover, the body is subject to fragility, diseases and destruction, which is never sated by continuous feeding. It turns into faeces, dust or ash at the end. Wise are the ones who can utilise it for their (souls') salvation. Otherwise, what is the use of this capricious body? Knowing this human body, nourished by the food which becomes putrid and inedible after just a few hours, as fickle as a water bubble, one must utilise it to attain the higher goal (salvation). A person, not grasping an opportunity to listen to Bhagwan's Katha, is born for no useful purpose, just as mosquitoes and flies take birth for no particular purpose."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O king! The Shreemad Bhagwat Puran is a flawless and exemplary scripture for the devotees. Vyas Muni has lucidly described the majesty of Lord Krishna, along with the tales of devotion of His devotees and their Dharma, which enhance their detachment from the mundane world. Whoever listens to, narrates or reminiscences it reverentially, surely becomes free from the cycle of life and death. O king! I just described the greatness of the Bhagwat Puran which augments a devotee's Dharma and Bhakti. However, the Bhakti must be undertaken with Dharma. Just as medication works only if one observes the rules and restrictions associated with it, Bhakti pleases Bhagwan only if accompanied by observation of Dharma."

Thus ends the 3rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 4

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O King Uttam! I will now describe the modalities and duties of the intended listeners of the Katha. A wealthy listener should organise the Katha at his own home while the less wealthy should organise Katha collectively at a temple or other communal place. All must have as much keen an interest and excitement in the Katha as they have in their children's weddings. Ganapatiji must be venerated before the commencement of Katha for its unhindered conclusion. A devotee should listen to the Katha in the mornings only if he wishes to listen to the entire scripture without its detailed interpretation (just the verses); and additionally in the afternoons as well if he wishes to listen to the interpretation of the verses. A devotee, health permitting, may listen to the Katha morning, afternoon, day or night, indeed any time, but with a serene mind. If one cannot listen to the Shreemad Bhagwat daily for whatever reason, he must make sure that he listens to the Katha during the period of Chaturmaas. Katha can be started in any month of the year, including Adhik month, except the month of Posh. A devotee should listen to the Shreemad Bhagwat Katha lasting a month or two with a calm mind. The following periods of sixty six days are considered the most auspicious; from Bhadarvo Sud Navami to Kartik Purnima, from Kartik Sud Navami to Magsar Purnima and from Magsar Sud Navami to Chaitra Purnima. Katha should start on Navami and end on Purnima of any of the months mentioned above, if a devotee is inclined to listen to the Katha only for seven days. A Yajman (a host or a primary listener) should invite his friends and relatives to partake in the Katha. Moreover, he should also invite saints and other devotees from far off places to listen to the Katha and make suitable arrangements for their lodging and boarding."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O king! The Yajman should endeavour to collect all the artefacts needed for the veneration and Katha at least five days prior to the commencement of the Katha. He should erect a Mandap using four trunks of banana plants and decorate it with flowers and colourful fabric and tinsel at a large open ground to accommodate the large number of devotees expected to turn up for the Katha. The seating should be clearly demarcated for male and female devotees. He should erect a raised dais for a Purani - narrator - in the middle of the Mandap and lay a soft cushion for him to sit on. The scripture must be placed on a raised Bajoth (a wooden platform with four short legs) in front of the narrator's seat. Considering the Shreemad Bhagwat as a verbal form of Lord Krishna, the host, after completing his normal daily routine, should venerate it accompanied by the following verses and sixteen elements."

'O Lord Krishna! The twelve cantos of the Bhagwat Puran are considered Your twelve organs, upon which I meditate. You are dark complexioned like the fresh clouds, the beauty of Your face shames even the moon on a full moon night, Your eyes more

O Lord! The Devtas love You with devotion and the demons fear You. O fountainhead of majesty! I meditate upon and venerate You with body, speech and thought. O Bhagwan! O Lord Shree Krishna! The Shreemad Bhagwat is nothing but one of Your verbal forms, which washes away the sins and evil influences of Kali Yug. I plead with You to be present in person. O Vibhu! I offer You a bejewelled golden Sinhasan for You to sit on. O Lord of the Devtas! You redeem the devotees who come under Your exclusive shelter from the ocean of quagmire (the world). O Krishna Bhagwan! Please accept the water to wash Your feet. You take numerous Avatars to protect the pious. O Lord Krishna! Please accept the water scented by sandalwood, rice, flowers etc. to wash Your hands and face. You performed numerous Leelas to delight Your devotees of Gokul. You shattered the ego of Indra, the king of Devtas. O moon of Vrandavan. Please accept the holy water to drink. You had vanquished the thousand hooded Asp Kaliya and banished him from the waters of River Yamuna. O Krishna Prabhu! Please accept the clean water for Your bath. O son of Nand! I have come under Your shelter. Please protect and bless me.'

Lord Shree Hari continued, "O King Uttam! The Yajman should venerate the Purani in exactly a similar way he venerated the Shreemad Bhagwat and offer him new cloths, ornaments and monetary gifts. The Yajman should pray to Purani with this hymn, 'O revealer of the scriptures. You have assumed the form of Sage Vyas to narrate this Katha. O expert in proffering advice! Remove my ignorance with this Katha.' O king! The host should venerate the saints and Brahmins present in the congregation reverentially before taking his seat to listen to the Katha."

Thus ends the 4th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Swaminarayan Bhagwan said, "O king! I shall now describe the characteristics of a narrator and a listener and their respective duties as mentioned in many scriptures. The narrator and listener are classified in three separate categories depending on their traits. A Satvik narrator and listener are the best among them and only they reap the rewards of the Katha. A narrator, who does not follow the order of a scripture; who does not reveal the proper meaning of verses; who speaks at length without relevance to the present context; who reads without interest; who misinterprets the verses of a scripture to suit his biased opinion; who cannot tolerate someone correcting his mistakes; who does not understand the true meanings of verses; who does not distinguish between lyrical and prose parts of the scripture while reading it; who is greedy; who is not devout or does not have full faith in the content of the scripture; who speaks harshly or who frequently ogles at women while reciting Katha is a Tamas Purani. O king! This type of narrator is the worst kind. A narrator, who, sometimes but not always, pronounces words incorrectly; reads in a high pitched voice or very loudly; is not able to express the emotions of the instance being narrated; lets anger and greed overcome him; is more interested in adorning himself with fine clothes and ornaments and is devout but not fully knowledgeable of the content of the scripture or many of its verses is a Rajas Purani. O king! A Satvik Purani, the best narrator, is able to express all emotions at the right places; recites Katha fluently and calmly with clear pronunciations; who does not elaborate more than what is necessary to explain the particular instance; reads prose in uniform voice and lyrical portion with the correct tune; knows the meaning of verses and has firm faith in the sanctity of the scripture he is reciting; is devout and aware of the decorum of the Sampraday; is virtuous, honest, impartial and calm; is an expert in proffering meaningful advice to his audience; is friendly, patient, generous, sated, kind and of immaculate reputation and has his senses under his control."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O king! Such a Satvik Purani must wake up very early, conclude his daily routine and be ready when called upon by his Yajman. The Purani must wash his face, hands and feet and put on fresh clothes before arriving in the assembly. He should bow down to Brahmins, saints and the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran before taking up his seat facing East or North. He should reminisce his guru and Acharya who gave him Diksha reverentially. The Purani should chant three verses extolling the greatness of God and His Leelas as a part of Mangalacharan (an auspicious starting) after the host has venerated him. He should once again bow at the Puran and conclude the Mangalacharan with this verse; 'O Lord of Devtas! O Narayan! O Master of the universe! I am about to commence the narration of the holy Katha of Your Leelas, virtues and glory. Please come and listen to it.' He should narrate the Katha primarily to Bhagwan and secondary to the audience. He should engage only the male devotees by looking at them while explaining and interpreting the meanings of verses without ever looking at the female devotees."

Shree Hari continued, "O king! There are some chapters at which a session of the Katha should not be paused for recess. They are: the first, eighth, tenth, fourteenth and sixteenth chapters of the first canto; the third and eighth chapters of the second canto; the first, seventh, tenth, eighteenth and twenty third chapters of the third canto; the first, third, tenth, seventeenth and twenty eighth chapters of the fourth canto; the fifth and thirteenth chapters of the fifth canto; the first, fifth, sixth and tenth chapters of the sixth canto; the first, fourth and sixth chapters of the seventh canto; the first, second, eighth, tenth and twenty first chapters of the eighth canto; the first, fourth, tenth and fifteenth chapters of the ninth canto; the first, ninth, tenth, twenty second, twenty ninth, thirtieth, thirty first, sixty second, seventy sixth and seventy seventh chapters of the tenth canto; the tenth, twenty second and thirtieth chapters of the eleventh canto and the ninth chapter of the twelfth canto. The sages such as Kashyap, Aruni, Harit have forbidden ending the sessions at these chapters. Ending the sessions at these chapters is considered bad omens and the rewards of the Katha are not attained. This rule must be followed even if one had decided to listen to only one chapter per day. The day should end with the next chapter instead.

Shree Hari continued, “O king! The Purani should conduct Dhun for a few minutes at the end of each session of the Katha. The Purani should bow at the Brahmins and saints once again before returning to his home at the end of a session. O king! A pious narrator must not accept alms from anybody else except the host and other listening devotees, unless they are not able to provide him fully with his needs. He must not accept a cow in charity during the period of Katha from anybody. The narrator must not eat oily, hot and highly spiced food which may cause an upset stomach or a sore throat. He must observe celibacy, truthfulness, non-violence and self-control and not indulge in anything which hinders his mental ability and agility of narrating the Katha. O king! After mentioning the traits and rules for the narrator, I will now tell you the characteristics of the listeners and the rules they must follow for the duration of the Katha.”

Thus ends the 5th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O King Uttam! A Shrota - listener, who does not have faith or devotion; who raises doubts and unwarranted questions without understanding the intended meanings of the scripture; who criticises the scripture and its veracity without full knowledge, who misinterprets or manipulates the meanings of the verses to suit his ends; who does not offer anything in charity even on the days of Vrat or on a conclusion of the Katha and who is greedy or envious is called a Tamas listener. A listener, who, though not devout, comes to listen to the Katha at behest of a devout listener; who donates very little despite being wealthy; who pretends to be very knowledgeable; who expresses anger and pleasure suddenly and intermittently and who is egotistic, hypocrite or jealous is considered a Rajas listener. O king! The best, a Satvik listener, forsakes all his worldly tasks to listen to the Katha of the Bhagwat regularly with full devotion, reverence and humility. He venerates the narrator with flowers and sandalwood paste; gives monetary alms to the narrator at the end of each session, at times of festivities during the Katha andrespects other listeners. He desires nothing except the augmentation of his devotion in Bhagwan as a reward for listening to the Katha. O king! Such a Satvik listener is the best and he should venerate the scripture and narrator before sitting down to listen to the Katha."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O king! Listeners should remove any headgear whilst listening to the Katha. Neither should they sit with their legs stretched out; chew Paan or beetle nuts; talk with anybody, wander about or loiter around; ogle at others or keep changing postures whilst listening to the Katha. They should listen to the Katha with total dedication without being distracted or distracting others. They should observe Brahamcharya and keep their senses under control during the full period of the Katha. If any ambiguity or doubt arises during the Katha, one must ask the narrator humbly for further explanation. The well off listeners should feed a hundred Brahmins and gift them money and clothes generously at the end of each canto, while the less wealthy listeners may gift the Brahmins as per their means at the end of the Katha. O king! The host should venerate Shree Ganesh at the onset of the Katha to ensure its unhindered conclusion. He should appoint one Brahmin to chant the Gayatri hymn three thousand times daily and five Brahmins to chant the twelve syllable hymn (Om Namo Bhagwate Vaasudevay) five thousand times daily before the start of Katha. The host must reward them and other Brahmins generously on the conclusion of Katha.

To avoid going out frequently to answer the calls of nature, listeners should control the intake of food and water. For a Katha of seven days, the listeners should observe a fast for these seven days. Those listeners unable to observe a fast for seven days should undergo one of the following: eat fruits only once a day, drink only milk, eat a bland meal a day or eat only one ordinary meal a day for the seven days of the Katha. O king! This diet is useful in controlling the sloth and lethargy during the Katha. Whichever meal plan is chosen, the primary objective is to forsake lethargy and overcome sleep during the period of the Katha."

Lord Shree Hari continued, "O King Uttam! Ideally the Katha should be held in front of a permanently established Murti of Bhagwan. The host must establish Bhagwan's gold Murti in a temporary shrine if a Katha is held anywhere else. This Murti must be venerated with full rites during the seven days of Katha and gifted to the narrator or other Brahmins. A less wealthy host unable to afford a gold Murti nonetheless must establish any other kind of Murti such as a drawn or picture idol and make suitable donations to a narrator and the Brahmins. A seven day Katha should have two sessions of three hours each with a two hour recess at midday. While the narrator takes a rest, the listeners should hold Dhun during the recess. A Katha of the Bhagvad Gita, whether just the verses or with their meanings as well, should be held on the conclusion of the main Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat to fulfil all desires of the narrator and listeners."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O king! The host should undertake Mahapuja of the scripture and narrator at the end of the Katha as per his financial ability. He should gift the narrator with new silk robes, gold ornaments such as bracelets and earrings and one thousand gold coins. The less wealthy host should gift one hundred gold coins while a poorer host should gift the narrator with whatever wealth he can afford. The other listeners should also gift the narrator with whatever they can afford. According to the seven great sages, even the less wealthy listeners should gift gold at least the equivalent of a grain of Urad (a type of a pulse). The main host should gift a lion made of thirty to forty grams of gold after venerating the gold with this hymn: 'I gift this lion to protect myself from the wild animals, robbers or snakes in a forest or confined places.' O king! King Parikshit donated such a gold lion to protect himself from an untimely death. As a king of all wild animals, a lion can offer protection from them. A host should gift the narrator with a healthy cow. Finally, the host must perform a Yagna by offering grains, milk, Ghee etc. in the sacred fire. The host must donate money equivalent to the expense that might have incurred performing such a Yagna, if it is not possible to undertake the Yagna for some reason."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O king! Whoever wants to earn full reward of listening to a Katha of the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran must follow all these rituals and restrictions. I had explained the rituals of the venerations and Mahapuja earlier and they should also be followed with all other specific rituals associated with a Katha of the Bhagwat. The listeners of the Shreemad Bhagwat, by following these procedures, will have all their desires, materialistic or divine, fulfilled.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O King Uttam! Let Me now explain the process of donating the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran, which fulfils all his desires. Though the Purnima of Bhadarvo month is the most auspicious time to make such a donation, all other Purnimas are good substitutes. The host should arrange a neat and legible hand written copy of the scripture and bind it in fine fabric, making sure that it is not scratched by covering it with hard board at top and bottom and should place it on a Bajoth. O king! One must take care that the scripture the host has prepared is a genuine version of the scripture. The authentic scripture starts with the Gayatri hymn and the Vedantic verses explaining its origin. The genuine version of it is narrated by Sage Shukdevji and its eighteen thousand verses narrate Bhagwan's Leelas such as the killing of demon Vratasur in great detail. It has the factual rendition of (the events in) BraahmaKalpa, ShwetVarahKalp and PadmaKalp (the Eras of those names); the beginning, middle and end espouses the virtue of detachment and the collection of Leelas of Bhagwan Shree Krishna. Only such an authentic scripture satisfies the devout and pious saints and Devtas."

Lord Shree Hari continued, "O king! The host should place the scripture on a golden Sinhasan. King Parikshit had prepared an ornate and bejewelled golden Sinhasan to place the Shreemad Bhagwat, which Sage Shukdevji narrated to him before returning to his hermitage. King Parikshit venerated the scripture and donated the scripture, the golden Sinhasan and one hundred thousand gold coins to Kripacharya and as a result, the king was rewarded with the residence in Vaikunth. O king! A wealthy host must spend his wealth as generously as King Parikshit while preparing the golden Sinhasan as a seat for the Bhagwat. The less wealthy host should place the scripture on a golden leaf weighing about hundred grams while a poorer host should prepare a similar leaf of just ten grams of gold. An image of a lion should be engraved on such a gold leaf. The host should venerate the Bhagwat and narrator or a recipient Brahmin as described earlier and gift him with silk robes, sandalwood paste, flower garlands and gold and pearl ornaments. The host should face the East and recipient should face the North in this rite of donation while chanting these verses, 'O Brahmin! I wish to be redeemed from the sins accumulated over the past lives, which hinder my devotion in Lord Krishna by making this donation. Please accept the gift of the Shreemad Bhagwat, which is akin to the Vedas. O Bhagwan! Grant me that I do not ever get separated from You or Your saints. Be pleased with my donation and fulfil my desires.' The host should donate gold and silver coins as per his capacity beside the golden Sinhasan and leaf to the Brahmin. The less wealthy host should gift eighteen silver coins instead."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O king! Whoever donates the Shreemad Bhagwat accordingly attains Vaikunth. Indeed, by the grace of Lord Krishna, nothing remains unattainable to such a devotee! A devotee desiring an offspring is granted a son, a poor is showered with wealth and a student becomes a scholar upon donating the scripture of the Shreemad Bhagwat. Indeed, O king! Any person who follows these rites of donation will have all his materialistic desires fulfilled as well."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O King Uttam! Let me now explain the process of 'Purascharan', which helps one attain whichever he desires - wealth, desires, religion and salvation. ('Purascharan is the process in which a scripture is read silently by a devotee either on a regular basis or at one event.) When a person reading a verse, or even half or a quarter of a verse indeed attains salvation, what can be said of a person who reads the whole Shreemad Bhagwat? 'Purascharan' (silent reading) redeems one from the clutches of life and death. If one is unable to read a portion on a daily basis, he still must read the Shreemad Bhagwat once a year by setting aside a predetermined time. Some prolific readers may finish the complete scripture in three to seven days, while others may take longer, even up to two months. But read one must! However, a week is the best option for Purascharan. Sage Jamdagni has decreed the minimum numbers of chapters one needs to read, which the wise should follow, to complete the Purascharan in a week. Let Me reiterate them to enlighten you. A devotee should read forty eight chapters on the first day and follow up with fifty one, forty nine, fifty three, forty nine, forty one and forty four chapters on the remaining six days respectively. A devotee may start Purascharan (of a week) in any month except Posh. Similarly a Purascharan must not commence on any Saturday and Tuesday of the year and neither should it start on Padvo, Choth, Ashtami and Chaudas of any month. When the Sun is in constellations Ashvini, Revati, Hast, Pushya, Mrugshirsha, Punarvasu, Anuradha, Abhijit, Swati, Rohini, Shravan, Dhanishtha and ShatTarka are very auspicious times to commence a Purascharan."

Shree Hari continued, "O king! A devotee wishing to start a Purascharan (several times and by others) should anoint five pious and scholar Brahmins to undertake the Purascharan on his behalf and supply them with Dhotis, shawls, water bowl etc. He should appoint another five Brahmins to serve the senior reader Brahmins to provide them with hot water for a bath, cook their meals, wash their utensils and cloths and massage them. A Purascharan ideally should be held in a temple or shrine, but in their absence it can be held in a host's home after establishing a gold Murti of Lord Krishna. The number of times the scriptures are to be read must be predetermined before commencing a Purascharan, however it is best to have it read one hundred and eight times. The Brahmins should read minimum numbers of chapters daily as determined by Sage Jamdagni and any session must not end with the proscribed chapters as described earlier. They must read legibly and not speak to anybody whilst reading. The Brahmins undertaking the Purascharan must not accept alms or gifts from anybody except the host. The host should gift seven gold coins to each of the five Brahmin readers at the end of each week of an ongoing Purascharan. He may give the entire gift (at this rate) at the end of the predetermined numbers or one hundred and eight Purascharan. The less wealthy host should give three and a half gold coins and a poorer host should give minimum of one and three quarters gold coins each week to each of the five Brahmins. O king! The host unable to give the minimum gift to the Brahmins should not ask them to undertake such an arduous task. There are other task he should undertake such as a Purascharan of the 'VishnuSahasraNam' Stotra for peace of his mind or to protect him from evil. The host should anoint other Brahmins to chant the predetermined numbers of Japa of the Gayatri hymn or Bhagwan's other Stotras along with the Purascharan of the Bhagwat."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O king! The host should conduct a Homa - Yagna and feed Brahmins at the successful conclusion of Purascharan. The number of oblations a host should offer in a sacred fire should be equivalent to a tenth of the total numbers of the hymns chanted on his behalf. The Brahmins that the host should feed should be equivalent to the hundredth of the total numbers of the hymns chanted on his behalf. The less wealthy host should do the tenth of the above to earn the full reward of Purascharan. O king! According to Sage Kashyap (in Kashyap Samhita), a wealthy host should offer oblations (of Ghee and milk pudding) in the sacred fire while chanting the verses of the Shreemad Bhagwat, while a less wealthy host should offer oblations while chanting the verses of the tenth canto of the Bhagwat. Some ancient sages, however, prescribe oblations while chanting the Gayatri hymn or other Bhagwan's Stotras. O king! The host unable to perform Homa should chant double the predetermined number of hymns or Stotras or ask the Brahmins to chant twelve times as many hymns or Stotras on his behalf in lieu of Yagna. As the Shreemad Bhagwat is a scripture mainly for the celibate saints, the host and Brahmins must observe total Brahamcharya for the entire duration of Purascharan, otherwise they do not get any reward of Purascharan. O king! The process of Purascharan which I just revealed to you is the abridged version that is described in the Skand Puran. One satisfies his materialistic desires as well as salvation by undertaking the Purascharan. O Uttam Khachar! I have described all the necessary elements of the Katha of Shreemad Bhagwat Puran. You must listen to the Katha with all its associated rituals every year whenever the time and circumstances are favourable.

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! King Uttam was very pleased to hear the narration of rituals associated with the Katha of Shreemad Bhagwat and took a mental note to listen to the Katha as and when time and circumstances permit. Meanwhile, as Shree Hari had already decided to listen to the Katha, He arranged for an erection of a highly decorated Mandap near His personal residential quarters. Shree Hari established an elevated VyasPeeth (a seat for a narrator) in the middle of the Mandap the next day, Magsar Sud Saptami (Samvat 1876), after completing His morning routine. He called for Pragji Purani and requested him to take his seat on the VyasPeeth. After due veneration of the Shreemad Bhagwat scripture and Pragji Purani, Bhagwan Shree Hari gifted Purani with fine robes, golden ornaments such as rings, bracelets, earrings at the beginning of the Katha. Shajanand Swami's brothers, Rampratap and Ichharam turned up to listen to the Katha and took their seats next to Him. Sura Khachar and other Parshads, Uttam and other kings, Mukundanand and other Brahamcharis, Muktanand swami and other saints, other male devotees and female devotees led by Rama, Jaya and Lalita sat in the assembly as per the tradition of the Sampraday. All the devotees, due to their devotion in Lord Shree Hari, had traits of the Satvik listeners. To set an exemplary example to everybody, Shree Hari sat to listen to Katha attentively, even though, He is Himself the source of all knowledge. O king! Whenever difficult to understand topics of theosophy arose during the Katha, Shree Hari explained those points in a simplistic manner at the delight of the devotees."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! A Dhun was held to mark the end of the first day of the Katha, following which Shree Hari said to Pragji Purani, O pious Brahmin! You should buy the grains, oil, Ghee, spices and all other necessary food items from a nominated shop during the period of the Katha. I want you to eat Ladoos every day to alleviate the stress. O king! To provide for the milk, Shree Hari gave two cows to Pragji Purani. Purani was overwhelmed with His generosity, but as Shree Hari did not mention anything about vegetables, he said, 'O Prabhu! I will do as You asked me. However, eating Ladoos will be more pleasant if You could make vegetables available.' With a benign smile, Shree Hari turned to Harnath and asked him to supply the required vegetables to Pragji. Pragji Purani repeatedly bowed down at Shree Hari before returning to his home. The Katha lasted for one month, at the end of which Shree Hari gifted Pragji Purani with hundreds of gold coins and fine robes. He also gave large gifts to other Brahmins who had turned up to listen to the Katha. O king! Many kings were astounded at the amount of wealth Shree Hari showered on Pragji Purani and the other Brahmins. Shree Hari listened to the fifth and tenth cantos of the Bhagwat again for the next two months, after the end of the main Katha of the Bhagwat Puran. He celebrated the festival of Fuldolotsav very grandly in the month of Falgun. Shree Hari then listened to the Shree Bhagvad Gita and its treatise written by Ramanujacharya. Thousands of saints and devotees from far flung places arrived in Gadhpur to mark Shree Hari's birth anniversary. Uttam Khachar celebrated Bhagwan Shree Hari's birthday very lavishly. After sending freshly arrived saints and devotees back to their respective villages the next day, Shree Hari continued the temporary paused Katha. He listened to the treatise of the VishnuSahasraNam, (written by Parashar Bhatt, a favourite disciple of Ramanujacharya) which concluded on Chaitra Vad Teras. After celebrating the birth anniversary of Bhagwan Kurma on Vaishakh Sud Padvo, Shree Hari continued listening to the Katha of more scriptures. He started listening to the Vaasudev Mahatmya the next day which lasted for a month. He sat to listen to the SamVeda (His ancestral Veda) from Adhik Jeth Sud Beej which He concluded at the noon of Jeth (the second) Sud Dasami with the ritualistic worship of the River Ganga. O king! Shree Hari started listening to the Yagnavalkya Smruti on the next day, Nirjala Ekadashi, which concluded on Shravan Sud Trij (Samvat 1877). Shree Hari celebrated the birth anniversary of Varah Bhagwan the next day by feeding hundreds of Brahmins.

He started listening to the VidurNiti on Shravan Sud Choth which concluded on Shravani Purnima (Raksha Bandhan). Shree Hari gifted the narrator with fine robes and much wealth to mark the successful conclusion of the series of Kathas."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The successful organisation of the Kathas helped greatly to re-establish the true Vedic traditions and Bhagwat Dharma. The Katha removed the ignorance and deeply held superstitions from the minds of the listeners and showed them the path of true Sanatan Dharma. Bhagwan Vaasudev established Himself as the only true guru, Who can help overcome the dark influences of Kali Yug from the minds of His devotees. The glory of the greatness of Lord Swaminarayan spread very wide."

Thus ends the 9th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 10

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari arrived under the lime tree in the royal courtyard after sending Pragji Purani home accompanied by the musical band. Jeeva Khachar of Sarangpur arrived for Shree Hari's Darshan along with his pious daughter Devika, two sons (Amrji and Vaghji) and his brothers. The group also included Rathod, his daughter (Malti) and Punjabhai. They bowed down to Bhagwan Shree Hari, Who greeted them in return by asking of their well being. Very pleased at Shree Hari's Darshan, they pleaded with Him. 'O Bhagwan! O redeemer from the clutches of Maya! We have come to invite You to grace Sarangpur. We know we are not as wealthy as Uttam Khachar and we also know that You do not differentiate Your devotees by the amount of wealth they have. Have mercy on us and come to Sarangpur to celebrate the festival of Janmashtami. Consider whatever wealth we have as Yours. We will feel ourselves very fortunate if our wealth became useful in celebrating the festival. We know that You are ever ready to please Your devotees. O Bhagwan! Please concede to our request.' Swaminarayan Bhagwan was very pleased with their sincerity and replied, 'O devotees! I shall surely come to Sarangpur. You return to your village and gather the necessary things for the festival. Have no doubt! I will reach Sarangpur on Shravan Vad Panchmi.' Jeeva Khachar requested Shree Hari to bring the saints and devotees to Sarangpur with Him and formally invited Uttam Khachar to grace Sarangpur with Shree Hari. O king! Uttam Khachar made sure that all the devotees of Sarangpur were fed before their departure."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! On their return to Sarangpur, the devotees led by Jeeva Khachar started procuring cereals, spices, Ghee, sugar, oil, large utensils, mattresses, firewood etc. in the preparation of the festival. Bhagwan Shree Hari gathered Uttam Khachar, Soma Khachar and His other Parshads, saints and other devotees to travel to Sarangpur. He mounted on a red horse holding the reins in His right hand and a cane in His left hand. Rampratbhai, Ichharam, Uttam Khachar, Sura Khachar and other Parshads mounted on their respective horses. The female devotees led by Jaya, Rama and Lalita followed on foot thinking that Shree Hari may not return from Sarangpur for some time. O king! The entourage left Gadhpur for Sarangpur on Shravan Vad Panchmi."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Hearing the news of Shree Hari approaching their village, the devotees of Sarangpur, accompanied by musical instruments, went forward to receive Him. They literally ran towards Shree Hari when He became visible from a distance and fell on the ground in prostration when they came face to face with Him. The arrangement was made for Shree Hari and the saints to reside in Jeeva Khachar's home, the female devotees in Rathod's home and other devotees' homes. Many other devotees from far off villages started arriving in Sarangpur, who were put up in various devotees' homes. The devotees of Sarangpur welcomed all the arriving guests with honour and sincerity and served them with humility. The whole of Sarangpur was teeming with thousands of devotees. Considering the large number of devotees, Shree Hari held an assembly on the outskirt of the village on a large span of ground between the Rivers Falgu and Dhavla."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari held a grand assembly in Sarangpur on Shravan Vad Saptami (of Samvat 1877), where He sat on an ornate Sinhasan placed on a raised dais. Rampratap and Ichharam sat next to the Sinhasan. The senior and scholar saints sat in front of Him followed by the younger saints. Brahmin devotees

Their minds focussed on Shree Hari, they eagerly waited for Him to address the Sabha. O king! Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni did not disappoint them as He addressed the Sabha in sombre voice."

Thus ends the 10th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O devotees! You must all observe the Vrat of Janmashtami, the birth anniversary of Bhagwan Vaasudev Narayan, tomorrow. The Vrat of Janmashtami is very dear to Me because it is Lord Krishna's birthday. This Vrat is very benevolent to all of us and therefore, I will clarify the timing when the Vrat should be observed and the rituals associated with it in detail for your benefit. Shravan Vad Ashtami when Saptami is not lingering at midnight (Sudhha Ashtami), when the Sun is in Rohini constellation and which falls on Wednesday is the most auspicious day for the Vrat, as Lord Krishna was born on the night of exactly this combination. Many scholars differ on the interpretation of the most auspicious time to observe this Vrat. Some even go as far as to separate the Vrat of Janmashtami from Lord Krishna's birth anniversary, though most of the scholars consider it as a single Vrat. Some advise to observe the Vrat of Lord Krishna's birth anniversary on the night of Ashtami, while others insist that the Vrat should be observed only on the night of Ashtami if the Sun is in Rohini constellation. It is said in the Skand Puran that the Vrat should be observed when 'it' has risen. Many scholars differ on the interpretation of this verse as some consider 'it' to be the Moon while others interpret 'it' as the Sun. Some scholars advocate 'Parna' at the end of the relevant date and therefore they are prepared to accept Ashtami with the Vedh (lingering, or when Saptami has not totally elapsed at the midnight of Ashtami) of Saptami, while others advocate 'Parna' only after the conclusion of the rituals and therefore, are not prepared to accept the Vedh Ashtami to observe the Vrat of Janmashtami. Some scholars advocate concluding a fast at sunset while others advocate the end of a fast when the rituals and festivities of Lord Krishna's birth are concluded. Some scholars do not accept Ashtami, whether Sudhha or Vedh, unless it coincides with the Sun being in Rohini constellation. O devotees! As you see, many scholars, depending on their outlook and interpretation, offer many varied and often opposing views on when the festival of Krishna Janmashtami should be celebrated."

Lord Narayanmuni continued, "O devotees! I shall now propound My views to remove all ambiguities, uncertainty and doubts as to when the Vrat of Janmashtami should be observed. The Vrat of Janmashtami must be observed on Ashtami if the Sun is in Rohini constellation at midnight even if Ashtami is with the Vedh of Saptami. However, this (observing Vrat on Vedh Ashtami) is applicable only if it is accompanied by the coincidence of the Sun being in Rohini constellation. Otherwise, the Vrat must never be observed on Vedh Ashtami. If Saptami falls on Wednesday and the Sun is in Rohini Nakshatra (constellation), My fit disciples must observe the fast for two days (Saptami and Ashtami) while weak disciples must undertake a fast on Ashtami only. Unless Saptami falls on the Wednesday and the Sun is in Rohini Nakshatra, My disciples must not undertake the Vrat of Janmashtami on Vedh Ashtami. In all other circumstances, the Vedh Ashtami is unsuitable for the Vrat. Janmashtami is better observed on Sudhha Ashtami, even if the Sun is not in Rohini Nakshatra at midnight. If Ashtami happens to be overlapping with Saptami, the Vrat of Janmashtami may be observed on Navami if Ashtami is lingering, even for a few minutes, at dawn. However, the Vrat of Janmashtami must not be undertaken on Navami if Ashtami is not lingering at dawn. My disciples must bear this guidance when observing the Vrat of Janmashtami."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "One should retire early after a light dinner the previous night thinking of the festival the next day with the reminiscence of Lord Krishna in his heart. After concluding his normal morning rituals, he should take an extra bath at midday for external chastity before proceeding to prepare a Mandap under which the worship is to be conducted. One should decorate the Mandap with multi coloured banters, leaves of mango and Asopalav trees, various flowers and fruits and fragranced with incense sticks. The host should draw or sculpt an ante natal room with Devkiji resting on a bed with baby Lord Krishna suckling beside her and attended by a midwife. He should prepare another similar antenatal room with Yashoda suckling a newly born baby girl. He should establish (real or imaginary) Vaasudev, Nand, Rohini, Baldevji, cows, Gops, Gopis, ShashthiDevi, Vasundhra, Brahma, the groups of Apsaras and Gandharvas, asp Kaliya in the waters of the River Yamuna and seven Chirnajeevis (long living): Ashvatthama, Bali, Sage Vyas, Hanumnaji, Vibhishan, Kripacharya and Parshuram according to a person's abilities and imagination. The Murtis of Lord Krishna and Devkiji should be made of gold if the financial abilities permit. All this should be prepared prior to the worship of Lord Krishna at midnight. Lord Krishna's worship must be carried out with the utmost reverence accompanied by the appropriate Vedic hymns in tune with musical instruments. This should be followed by the venerations of Mother Devkiji, Bhagwan's Parshads, Brahma and the present Brahmins. Devotee must offer his obeisance to Lord Krishna with Sastang Pranam. He should swing Lord Krishna in a cradle for some time and then listen to the portion of the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat which narrates the birth of Lord Krishna with reverence as a part of Jagran. After concluding his morning ritual the next day, he should once again worship Lord Krishna in the Mandap and donate all the Murtis to his Acharya or head priest. He should feed the Brahmins before concluding his fast by Parna."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O devotees! A fast should always be concluded with Parna after the morning routine the next day. There may be only one exception to this rule. If the Sun is about to move away from Rohini Nakshatra soon after the midnight of Janmashtami, the fast should be concluded after the Jagran of one and a half hours after midnight. This rule must not be broken even if the birth anniversary is being celebrated at the midnight of Saptami due to confabulation of three auspicious events, i.e. being Wednesday and the Sun being in Rohini Nakshatra. The fast must still be concluded at the end of Ashtami. Any deviation from this rule of concluding the fast by the date results in the loss of Punya of the eight fold. Therefore, all My disciples must take extreme care as to when to conclude the fast. The able and fit devotees must wait for the end of the date (Ashtami) and migration of the Sun from Rohini Nakshatra before concluding the fast with Parna, while a weak person may conclude his fast at the first of the two incidences. A person attains all his desires if he observes twelve monthly (Vad Ashtami of each month) Vrats of Krishna Janmashtami for a year, followed by the donation of cows to Brahmins.

Bhagwan Swaminarayan continued, "O devotees! Now I shall describe Udhyapan Vidhi (rituals of celebration) of the Janmashtami Vrat. A Bajoth must be placed in the middle of an ornate Mandap. Bhagwan, His ardent Parshads, the Devtas and sages should be established on the petals of two drawn lotuses on the Bajoth as I described earlier. A Kalash (a type of copper vessel) full of water and covered with a white cloth should be placed next to the Bajoth. The host should place the golden idols of baby Krishna and Devkiji for worship. A wealthy host should use ten grams of gold while a less wealthy host should use five grams of gold to make these idols. The idols of the Moon and Rohini Nakshatra made from silver should be placed besides the idols of Lord Krishna. Twenty four platters of Kheer (rice pudding) should be offered to Lord Krishna, which should be distributed among the Brahmins. The temple should be decorated with lamps and Japa of hymns from the 'PurushSukta' or Lord Krishna's name should be carried out as per one's capacity. The Brahmins in multiples of twenty four should be venerated and gifted with sandalwood paste, copper utensils, gold ornaments, cows, shoes, clothes, and beddings etc. as per one's financial capability. O devotees! Persons expecting greater materialistic rewards must never be miser when it comes to spending their wealth in Shraddh, Vrat, pilgrimage, charity etc. as a wealthy miser who refuses to part with his wealth even in religious activities indeed ends up in deep hell. Observation of the Brahamcharya Vrat is primary in all religious rites, therefore, my devotees, male and female alike, must endeavour to observe Brahamcharya while undergoing any religious Vrat. Moreover, all devotees must observe a fast on the day of Janmashtami. A weaker person, nonetheless, may eat fruits in lieu of the fast. However, anyone eating cereal on the day of Janmashtami is committing a grave sin equivalent to cavorting with one's own mother. O devotees! You must all follow the rituals of Janmashtami as I described them to you. Even the persons listening to or reading this discourse will surely attain the rewards of observing the Vrat."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Bhagwan Shree Hari narrated the rituals of Janmashtami which greatly pleased His devotees. They bowed down to His feet before retiring to their respective quarters. Shree Hari retired to His personal quarters as well and underwent His daily evening ritual and went to sleep on the floor late at night."

Thus ends the 11th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Lord Shree Hari woke up earlier than normal on the day of Janmashtami. He venerated Ramanand swami on the auspicious occasion of his birth anniversary after concluding His normal morning routine. He asked His Parshads to prepare a highly decorated Mandap. A Bajoth was established in the middle of the Mandap to place the idols of baby Krishna to be worshipped later. O king! Shree Hari observed a day of fast along with all the other devotees and spent the whole day chanting Lord Krishna's name and singing Kirtans extolling His Leelas. He took a purifying bath in the River Falgu close to midnight prior to the ritualistic worship of Lord Krishna. He placed the golden idols of baby Krishna, Devkiji, Nand, Yashoda etc. and offered them the ritualistic bath with Panchamrut followed by a bath with clean water. He worshipped Lord Krishna with sandalwood paste, rice, flowers, Tulsi and Billi leaves. Bhagwan Shree Hari chanted Lord Krishna's name one thousand times and accompanied each chant with a Tulsi leaf. Shree Hari offered Lord Krishna new robes, ornaments, incense, lamp and four types of food in Naivedhya, beetle leaves, fruits and monetary gifts followed by Aarti and Sastang Pranam. Shree Hari venerated the Brahmins at the conclusion of His worship."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Lord Shree Hari placed baby Lord Krishna in the swing and swung Him for some time whilst listening to the episode of Lord Krishna's birth from the Shreemad Bhagwat. He spent the rest of the night listening to Lord Krishna's childhood Leelas. O king! Shree Hari concluded His morning rituals the next morning and venerated Lord Krishna again before gifting the gold idols to the Brahmins. Shree Hari granted his divine Darshan to His many devotees who never ate anything before His Darshan. Before concluding His fast, Shree Hari fed thousands of Brahmins with sumptuous meals. Bhagwan Shree Hari attended a grand assembly on the banks of River Falgu in the late afternoon, where He delivered the divine sermon on Bhagwat Dharma. He answered many questions raised by His devotees to enlighten them. O king! The devotees gifted Him with expensive robes and ornaments after venerating Him using various artefacts such as sandalwood paste, Kumkum, rice, flowers and garlands. The devotees of Sarangpur fulfilled their lives by serving Shree Hari and the devotees who had come to attend the festival of Janmashtami. Many devotees took turns to feed Shree Hari, His Parshads and saints for many days to come."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The rest of the month of Shravan passed by. Shree Hari asked all His female devotees to undertake the Vrat of Rishi Panchami on Bhadarvo Sud Panchami by venerating the seven great sages. He advised all His female devotees to undertake this Vrat as atonement for any shortcoming or transgression they may have committed knowingly or unknowingly while observing their menstrual Vrat during the past year. Therefore, O king! Many scriptures advise females to undertake this Vrat."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Whilst still residing in Sarangpur, Lord Swaminarayan celebrated the festival of RadhaAshtami. Following the ritualistic worship of Radhikaji, Shree Hari fed sumptuous meals to thousands of Brahmins and devotees on this occasion. As per their daily routine, the devotees of Kariyani, a nearby village, came for His divine Darshan on RadhaAshtami as well. They had previously pleaded with Shree Hari on numerous occasions to grace their village. They had come today with resolute determination to take Shree Hari with them to Kariyani. Vasta Khachar, his two wives Sita and Amari, his son Manshur, Velo Khachar, Karna, Devji, three brothers Viro, Kamo and Raghav and their sister Devika prayed and pleaded with Shree Hari to grace their village today itself. Bhagwan Swaminarayan, knowing their steadfast and faithful devotion, relented and told them, "O devotees! Just as you are Mine, your Kariyani is Mine as well. I do appreciate your devotion and aspirations. I, along with eminent saints such as Muktanand swami and others will indeed come to Kariyani tomorrow morning. Please, return to your village now and prepare for My arrival."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The delighted devotees of Kariyani returned to their village and relayed the heartening news to the excited villagers. They had already made all the arrangements in anticipation of an imminent arrival of Shree Hari. Shree Hari, accompanied by many saints and devotees, left Sarangpur for Kariyani on the morning of Bhadarvo Sud Navami. The crestfallen devotees of Sarangpur bid Shree Hari farewell with moist eyes. O king! Vasta Khachar accompanied by his wives, sons and leading devotees of Kariyani rushed ahead to welcome Shree Hari and brought Him in Kariyani with full pomp and regalia. Shree Hari and the leading Parshads such as Soma Khachar and leading saints such as Muktanand swami were put up at Vasta Khachar's home while other accompanying saints and devotees were put up in various devotees' homes. The devotees of Kariyani served their guests with so much love as if the guests were indeed the owners of the house and they, their domestic servants. Vasta Khachar and his family totally surrendered their house and wealth at Shree Hari's divine feet and lived as guests in their own home. O king! Shree Hari dined at different homes every day to delight His devotees and fulfil their inherent desires. He resided at Kariyani from Bhadarvo Sud Navami until Prabodhani Ekadashi."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Bhagwan Swaminarayan held assemblies every day where He amplified His views on various topics such as the saints' Dharma, Ashtang Yog and the relationship between a soul and Bhagwan. He listened to the Katha of the treatise on the Vyas Sutra written by Ramanujacharya, which He held in very high esteem, every afternoon. He venerated its narrator, Muktanand swami, with sandalwood paste, rice, flowers, Kumkum etc. on the occasion of the conclusion of the Katha on Dhan Teras. O king! Bhagwan Swaminarayan celebrated all major festivals such as Diwali, Annakut and Prabodhani Ekadashi at Kariyani with the same fervour as He did at Gadhpur. The devotees who came to attend these festivals worshipped Shree Hari with much reverence with sandalwood paste and flower garlands and gifted Him various expensive robes and gold ornaments. " Suvrat Muni said, O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari explained the importance of Prabodhani in the assembly held on the night of Prabodhani Ekadashi, as part of Jagran. He extolled highly the pious deeds and condemned vicious deeds at the conclusion of His sermon. King Uttam Khachar, ever eager to imbibe the religious values and an expert in the art of asking the right questions at the right time, asked Shree Hari, 'O Bhagwan! A man is entangled in various deeds to earn his living and fend for his family. Of all the deeds one does, O Lord, which deeds lead him to heaven and which deeds lead him to hell?' O king! Shree Hari paused for a while before proceeding to answer his sombre question."

Bhagwan Swaminarayan replied, "O Uttam Khachar! King Yudhishthir had asked the same question to his grandsire Bhishma. I shall reiterate the same reply that Bhishma gave to King Yudisthir. 'Three types of persons; the one who abducts other women, rapes other women and incites, induces or bribes other women to commit adultery are surely consigned to hell. A person who steals someone's wealth or destroys someone's property by fire or by any other means goes to hell. People who destroy communal watering holes, halls, bridges or other communal buildings go to hell. O king! A person who levels false accusations against an innocent, breaks someone's engagement or marriage, destroys someone's possessions or his livelihood or creates a rift between lovers or friends by making up false stories goes to hell. People who induce five types of women - a young, old, frightened, pious and one who has come for shelter - to transgress from their Dharma by monetary inducements indeed go to hell. A person who backbites or reveals one's secret to others, who help negate the political (or regal) treaty (or ceasefire), who lives off the bribes or is being ungrateful towards those who do him favours goes to hell as well. People who follow pretentious Dharma which is against the basic tenets of the Vedas, finds faults even in the virtues of saints and proper religious edicts, behaves opposite to the accepted norms of society and

People who do not speak harshly even when angry, remain calm and patient even when there is a cause to be angry, do not take somebody's wealth even when found in a forest or other secluded place, do not cavort with a woman even when she has willingly approached him in a secluded place, treat everybody as their friends (without enmity or malice), are engaged in the study of the scriptures, maintain inner and outer chastity, are compassionate, do not go against the accepted social norms, are not habituated to speaking lies, act on their pledges and promises and are satisfied with whatever they earn go to heaven. O King Yudhishthir! Indeed those are the fortunate who, forsaking all foul deeds, remain engaged in good deeds; as one gets the human body after a very long time and with great difficulties."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! King Uttam Khachar and other devotees were very pleased with this sermon from Lord Swaminarayan. Shree Hari fed thousands of Brahmins the next day (Baras). He asked the devotees of far flung places to leave for their respective villages, however, the devotees of nearby villages remained in Kariyani for some time. O king! Listening to His soothing sermons, having His divine Darshan and due to His proximity, their time passed very quickly."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! As the devotees of distant places were getting ready to leave Kariyani after the conclusion of the festival of Prabodhani Ekadashi, King Hemantsinh of Junagadh, wished to invite Shree Hari to his town and celebrate some festivals in similar pomp. He and the other devotees of Junagadh stayed behind in Kariyani awaiting a suitable opportunity to talk to Shree Hari. Vasta Khachar extended his generous hospitality towards them. Three days passed by without getting such an opportunity before Hemantsinh, accompanied by his mother Gangaba, wife Zaverba, brother Anupsinh, his brother's wife Pranba, his sister Adiba, his cousin Motiba, Mayaram Bhatt, Ladkibai etc. approached Shree Hari on the morning of the fourth day (on Kartik Vad Padvo) and prayed, 'O Bhagwan! O defender of devotees and saints! Please have mercy on us! O propagator of Dharma! I would like You to celebrate a festival at my place just as You have recently done at Kariyani. O Master! I know that You do not differentiate between rich and poor devotees. The devotees of Sorath region, including my mother, are awaiting Your arrival at Junagadh.' O king, Mayaram Bhatt, with hands folded and head bowed, added, 'O Bhagwan! You are like Kalpvruksha tree, which fulfils all desires of the seekers. Please accept our request to grace our region. King Hemantsinh has already gathered the necessary items for Your pleasure. O Lord! Grant his wish and grace his palace.' O King Pratapsinh! Upon hearing sincere prayers from Hemantsinh and Mayaram Bhatt, Shree Hari assented and said benevolently, 'O King Hemantsinh! I know your latent desires. I am pleased with your sincerity. I will definitely come to Junagadh with the saints."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Just as Hemantsinh was about to leave, Sura Khachar of Nagadka, accompanied by his wife Shantabai, two daughters - Dhanya and Vallu, son Naath Khachar and head of the village, Sinhjibhai and his wife Tejaswati approached Shree Hari hurriedly and pleaded with folded hands, 'O Bhagwan! I have come to take You to my village Nagadka. We have waited here for a long time to request You. I am at Your mercy. Please help fulfil my desire!' O king! Shree Hari was in a dilemma at these twin invitations. He thought that both, Hemantsinh and Sura Khachar were His sincere and steadfast devotees and He could not disappoint either of them by turning down any ones invitation as both invitations had come at nearly the same time. He asked both of them to give Him some time to decide. Leaving them there, He went to His personal quarters and called for Brahmanand swami and Nityanand swami to find an amicable solution."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! Bhagwan Shree Hari asked both saints, 'O reverend saints! You are well versed in the way of the world. You are like My left and right eyes. Help Me come to a right decision today. Sura Khachar and Hemantsinh have simultaneously invited Me to grace their respective homes. O saints!

Whose home shall I visit first? I want to visit both places but without antagonising either of them. Please show Me the way out of this dilemma.' O king! The saints were mightily surprised and thought, 'Shree Hari is the supreme master of the universe, yet He is seeking our advice and opinion! His Darshan are scarce even to Brahma and the other Devtas yet, He is confabulating with us in seclusion! This is nothing but His mercy upon us. He will not change His mind about visiting both places as He has already made up His mind. We must support Him and give our opinion accordingly."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Brahmanand swami and Nityanand swami replied, 'O Bhagwan! You should surely entertain both requests as both of them are very sincere devotees. However, in our opinion, You should visit Nagadka before proceeding to Junagadh. As Nagadka is on the way to Junagadh, we cannot avoid passing through Nagadka. It will not be prudent to deviate from the main highway to avoid Nagadka on our way to Junagadh. This is our humble opinion. You are absolutely independent to take an opposite decision if You so desire. We will support whatever decision You take.' O king! Shree Hari was greatly pleased with the saints' calibrated opinion. He praised both of them and returned to the assembly hall to pronounce the decision."

CHAPTER 16

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari assured King Hemantsinh that He will definitely grace his town and asked him to return to Junagadh with his family and wait for His arrival. Then Shree Hari turned to Sura Khachar and said, 'I will reach Nagadka tomorrow morning. Have no doubt about this. You proceed to your village and ask Brahmins to prepare lunch for tomorrow.' Sura Khachar was delighted at the outcome and prepared to depart from Kariyani. Ratidevi narrated the whole incident (of Shree Hari's intention to visit Nagadka and Junagadh) to Jayaba, who rushed to her brother, Uttam Khachar and cried, 'O brother! Wake up! We are about to lose everything and you are busy here in your Puja! It is already mid-morning and you are engrossed in Puja! Sura Khachar and Hemantsinh are taking Shree Hari far away from us. Shree Hari may never return to Gadhpur if He is satisfied with the services rendered by the devotees of Junagadh! As Shree Hari loves all His devotees equally, He may decide to reside at Junagadh. O brother! Do something - pray or plead, to stop Shree Hari leaving for Junagadh.' O king! Uttam Khachar, aghast at the thought of separating from Bhagwan Narayanmuni, concluded his Puja quickly and rushed to see Him without bothering to put diadem on his head."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Hemantsinh saw Uttam Khachar as he was rushing to see Shree Hari. He stopped Uttam Khachar and inquired, O friend! Where are you rushing in such haste that you forgot to put on your diadem? I was coming to you to extend an invitation to grace Junagadh with Shree Hari and the saints.' King Uttam Khachar cleverly thought of some excuses to stop Shree Hari leaving for Junagadh and said to Hemantsinh, 'O friend! I thought that you are very wise. People admire your decision making as you always know what to do when. People follow your footsteps. Yet you invited Shree Hari to grace Junagadh at this time of the year! It appears that you have taken this step without much thought. It is so cold at present that people's skin breaks up. People shiver despite wearing layers of clothes and blankets due to the intense cold. How would Shree Hari be able to bear such cold and fresh wind so early in the morning? Will people not mock your love and devotion towards Bhagwan? Furthermore, how would the poor saints such as Muktanand swami, Gopalalnand swami cope with the intense cold as they do not carry blankets and quilts around with them? How would the pious female devotees, weakened as it is by sheer austerities be able to walk barefoot in this weather? Ordinary people will cuss you for making saints and devotees walk in the early morning. I pray that you do not behave as your name, Hemant (cold season). I plead with you not to take Shree Hari to Junagadh in winter. Wait until summer when you may take Shree Hari with you."

Uttam Khachar continued, 'O friend! You along with your family are more than welcome to enjoy my hospitality until then. You can enjoy Shree Hari's divine Darshan and will get many opportunities to feed, serve and venerate Shree Hari at my place. Furthermore, bear in mind that even after taking Shree Hari to your home, all you will do is feed and venerate Him, which you can do anywhere. The wise do not consider a house made of steel and concrete a home. Home is where one resides with his wife and family. A multi storied house without a wife remains a building only whereas a small hut becomes a home with her presence. For a householder, the home is where his wife is. You can fulfil all your desires of serving Shree Hari by staying in Gadhpur with your wife. According to the scriptures, a friend's home is akin to one's own home. Therefore, my friend! Please accompany me to Gadhpur and be happy to serve Lord Shree Hari there. I have said all this due to our friendship. However, you are wise and independent to make your own decisions."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! King Hemantsinh realised the underlying intentions of his friend, Uttam Khachar. He said softly to Uttam Khachar, 'O friend! You have spoken very well to meet your selfish ends! You may be younger in age but your intelligence is greater than a wise old sage! How could you be so selfish despite being in the constant company of altruistic saints? However, let me reply to your objections regarding the cold weather. I will prepare a wind proof palanquin for Shree Hari to travel so that He does not have to endure inclement weather. I will arrange the roofed and enclosed carts for female devotees to travel so that they do not need to walk at all. We will travel only after the mid-morning so that the walking saints and devotees do not feel cold in bright sunshine. As for your advice to take Shree Hari to Junagadh in the summer, have you thought of consequences? How can you say the summer is better than winter for travelling when you know that people often suffer from grave sunstroke due to the very hot sun and harsh wind? As for serving Shree Hari at your place, even you can avail of that facility at my place. As per your own arguments, you need not have to have Shree Hari at Gadhada for you to serve Him and his saints. You and your family can happily accompany me to Junagadh. However, the most important thing is that many years have passed by before Bhagwan has conceded to my request to grace Junagadh. How could you possibly not be happy when my wish is about to be fulfilled? Such is your friendship towards me!"

King Hemantsinh continued, "O friend! Think of thousands of ordinary devotees of villages en route who are going to get an opportunity to have Shree Hari and His saints' divine Darshan. Please do not deprive them of this chance. Furthermore, brothers (and friends) must share their happiness. You have been enjoying Shree Hari's proximity for such a long time. Are you so selfish that you are not prepared to share that happiness (Shree Hari's proximity) with your friends? You should have asked Shree Hari to grace Junagadh without my prompting. This is a vital trait of a friend. A friend should protect and wish well of his friend without being asked just as eyelids protect the eyes and hands protect the body. Are you not ashamed to deprive me my share of happiness? The word 'Mitra' (a friend) has two meanings. It means well-wisher in neuter gender and the Sun in masculine gender. O friend! Let you be my well-wisher by helping me rather than the scorching sun to trouble me."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Uttam Khachar smiled shrewdly and said, 'O friend! Let Bhagwan Swaminarayan be the final arbitrator.' Uttam Khachar proceeded to meet Shree Hari while Hemantsinh returned to his quarters. Thinking that many obstacles arise in pious deeds and one must endeavour to remove such obstacle to fulfil their means, Hemantsinh prayed to Ganapati, 'O Lord Krishna incarnate Ganapati! Please help remove all obstacles from my path. I will venerate you with Sindur and Durva (a type of holy grass) and offer you Ladoos in Naivedhya on the forthcoming Kartik Vad Chaturthi.' O king, Hemantsinh sent his family and devotees back to Junagadh and he decided to remain behind. He returned to see Shree Hari, thinking that Uttam Khachar may say something to change Shree Hari's mind about visiting Junagadh."

Thus ends the 16th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! When Uttam Khachar approached Shree Hari, He was asking Shukanand swami to pack the loose scriptures tidily for transportation to Junagadh. Though Uttam Khachar realised that Shree Hari had made up His mind to go to Junagadh, he did not give up trying to change His mind. Uttam Khachar said sheepishly to Shree Hari, 'O Bhagwan! Jayaba and the other female devotees are worried that You may have to endure severe cold on Your way to Junagadh.' Shree Narayanmuni replied, 'O King Uttam! I was born in the foothills of the Himalayas. My body is attuned to the cold. Please inform Jayaba and the others not to worry about Me suffering from the cold.' Uttam Khachar realised that now there is no scope of changing Shree Hari's mind to proceed to Junagadh. However, to make sure that Shree Hari returned to Gadhpur sooner, he decided to accompany Him to Junagadh with his sisters. Mayaram Bhatt sang appropriate hymns to bring on good omen at the commencement of the journey. Shree Hari mounted on His favourite mare and took off on His way to Nagadka followed by the saints on foot. Rampratap and Ichharam mounted on their respective horses to accompany Shree Hari. Uttam Khachar, Vasta Khachar, Hemantsinh and many others mounted on their horses and followed Shree Hari with spears in their hands. Jayaba, Lalitaba and other female devotees travelled in their designated carts at the rear of the convoy. Shree Hari overtook Shukanand swami accompanying the cart laden with the scriptures and came to the groups of saints led by Nishkulanand swami to their delight. O king! The onlookers were delighted to have such divine Darshan of Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan, surrounded by many saints on the long way to Nagadka."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari reached Loya just before noon (on Kartik Vad Treej of Samvat 1877). Sura Khachar had already arrived from Kariyani and waited for Shree Hari's arrival after having had the lunch prepared by the Brahmins. Sura Khachar and the villagers of Loya and Nagadka went ahead singing and dancing to greet Shree Hari at the outskirts of Loya. They prostrated on the ground when they came face to face with Shree Hari and brought Him to Loya with pomp and honour. The devotees of Loya led by King Sura Khachar and village head Sinhjibhai served Shree Hari and His accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees very reverently. O king! The devotees of Loya offered sumptuous meals to Shree Hari, the saints and devotees and presented robes and ornaments to Shree Hari. Indeed, they put their entire wealth at Lord Swaminarayan's disposal. Shree Hari held large assemblies every evening and gave sermons on various topics such as Dharma, Gnaan and Bhakti to the delight of the devotees. He gave away the expensive robes to His two brothers."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! Devotees brought large quantities of aubergines from their farms, which Shree Hari cooked Himself by seasoning them in Ghee instead of oil to exhibit His knack of cooking. Shree Hari would place large pans with large amounts of Ghee on a burning stove and season the aubergines using spices liberally. As a result of wiping His hands on His clothes, His white clothes would turn yellow due to the turmeric powder. He would laugh heartily at the sight of His stained Dhoti to the great delight of the devotees. He would ask the saints and devotees to sit for lunch and served the cooked aubergine vegetable Himself to each of them. Upon being asked about the flavour of the vegetables by Lord Shree Hari, Brahmanand swami and the other saints would extol its taste as if they had never tasted such tasteful vegetables before. Shree Hari would become very pleased at the praise of His Prasad and made another round to serve the aubergine vegetables. O king! Shree Hari stayed at Loya for many days before arriving at Nagadka, the second village in the fiefdom of Sura Khachar. He, his wife Shantaba, his son Natha Khachar offered great hospitality to Bhagwan Shree Hari, His saints, Parshads and accompanying devotees. Sura Bhakta presented Shree Hari with expensive robes, ornaments and silver coins at the conclusion of veneration of Shree Hari. He stayed at Nagadka for five days (from Posh Sud Panchami to Posh Sud Navami) to grant His divine Darshan to the devotees of the village. As per normal, Shree Hari held assemblies every evening to strengthen the devotees' Dharma and Bhakti. O king! On the evening of the Ashtami, Shree Narayanmuni addressed all His saints and devotees."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O saints and devotees! Listen to Me all of you. Tomorrow is the festival of Uttarayan, when the Sun moves northwards through the tropic of Capricorn. This migration lasts for a period of nine hours, which is most auspicious for charity. All My devotees must take a ritual bath and make donations to suitable persons. Beginning from the day after tomorrow, everyone should undertake a ritualistic bath (Magh Snaan) every morning and perform a Chandrayan Vrat during the month and donate sesame seeds as charity. O devotees! A Chandrayan Vrat is easier to undertake than other Vrats such as a month long Kruchh Vrat or fasting for a month and its reward (Punya) is much greater. This Vrat helps wash away three types of sins (by speech, mind and body). Therefore, all devotees, male and female, must undertake this Vrat or other austerities to clean the soul and to please Bhagwan Ramapati during this month."

Thus ends the 17th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 18

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shukanand swami humbly asked Shree Hari with folded hands. 'O Prabhu! I would like to hear the rituals associated with Magh Snaan and Chandrayan Vrat in full detail. Please enlighten me.' O king! Shree Narayanmuni was delighted at this question from Shukanand swami and prepared to answer it to enlighten not only swami but all other devotees present in the assembly."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! I shall reiterate the same answer that Bhagwan Shree Krishna gave to King Yudhishthir in the Bhavishyottar Puran. Many people exhibit lethargy and do not perform the routine morning bath in Kali Yug. Magh Snaan helps remove this alimony for good. People should perform Magh Snaan (morning bath) primarily at Triveni Sangam (the meeting point of the three holy rivers - Ganga, Jamuna and Saraswati). As it may not be possible for all people, they may take the bath at any other holy shrine. However, bear in mind that the proper reward (Punya) of a bath in the holy centre of pilgrimage can only be received if one keeps his hands, feet, speech and mind in control (i.e. one who does not commit sin with any of them) and whose knowledge, fame and austerity is steadfast (and not volatile). People who are sinners, do not believe in the existence of Bhagwan, are irreligious, are without faith and who always doubt or criticise the sanctity of shrine do not earn any Punya by undergoing Snaan at any of the shrines. Prayag, Lake Pushkar and Kurukshetra are described as the most auspicious shrines in the scriptures. One earns Punya of three days, fifteen days and a month by bathing just once in a virgin river (that does not meet the ocean), an ocean meeting river and an ocean respectively. The great sages extol the bath before dawn. The scriptures extol the bath from before dawn to sunrise. However, the bath when the stars are still visible is the best Snaan, the period when the stars have vanished but before the sunrise is considered median while the Snaan after the sunrise is considered the most minuscule for Punya. Just as Japa is futile without the Vedic hymns, just as a charity given to an uneducated Brahmins is futile, just as food consumed without first sharing it with guests or Brahmins is futile and bathing with hot water during this month is futile (unrewarding). Magh Snaan is recommended for people of all four Ashrams; male, female and eunuchs and child, youth and old. Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya males must undertake bath whilst chanting Vedic hymns while Shudra and females must remain silent while bathing. Magh Snaan must be performed for the period of one month, starting from the Purnima of Posh to the Purnima of Maha months, when the sun is in the constellation Capricorn. A person who undertakes the ritualistic morning bath in this month by chanting this hymn, 'O Govind! O Achyut, I perform this bath to please Bhagwan Vishnu. O Supreme Lord! Reward me with the said Punya of Magh Snaan when the sun is in Capricorn constellation' earns the Punya equivalent of an Ashvamedh Yagna at each step. A person should offer water to the sun after the bath, offer oblation to Pitris while still in water and reminisce, venerate and chant Lord LaxmiNarayan and dine only one meal a day. One must observe Brahamcharya during the month. If one is unable to observe Brahamcharya, nonetheless, he must still undertake ritualistic daily bath (at a shrine, river or an ocean). The Punya of Magh Snaan is so much that even the old and infirm must still undertake it, albeit with hot water. The sesame seeds wash away one's Paap, therefore one may massage one's body with crushed sesame seeds or its oil, offering sesame seeds in sacred fire, sprinkling them in water prior to the bath, eating them and offering them as charity to others. A devout person should offer sesame oil to others prior to the bath, ignite fires for others and build huts for shelter for others. However, seeking warmth from such fires, either before or after the bath negates the Punya earned with the bath. Such fires must be used only to offer oblations. If the circumstances do not permit one to bath in a river, one must fill an earthen pot with water and leave outside to cool during the night. Bathing with such water is equivalent to the bathing with water from River Ganga. O Muni! Indeed, there are no sins which cannot be washed away by Magh Snaan. It is considered even better than fasting for a whole month. According to wise sages, the discomfort endured due to the bath with cold water is worthwhile as; one does not have to endure any pain after death. One must distribute daily Ladoos made of three parts of sesame seeds and one part sugar. Thirty such Ladoos, besides other grains and clothes should be distributed at the conclusion of a month long bath. One may give robes and ornaments to thirty Brahmin couples. Indeed, anything that is dear to him, be it clothes, blankets, footwear, beddings, golden ornaments, should be offered to Brahmins as charity. One should pray to Bhagwan to become pleased with whatever little he has given as charity. One who undertakes Magh Snaan to please Bhagwan becomes reverential even to the residents of the abode of Bhagwan. O Muni! This is how Lord Krishna has described the rituals of Magh Snaan to King Yudhishthir. All My disciples must undertake this ritualistic cold water bath in a river, lake, well, stream or at home daily prior to the sunrise for the duration of the month."

Thus ends the 18th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! Now I shall narrate the rituals of Chandrayan Vrat which is narrated in the Vishnu Puran and other scriptures. This month long Vrat is capable of washing away all sins. A person wishing to undertake this Vrat should decide this upon his mind on Posh Sud Chaudas, a day before the start of Magh Snaan. He should observe Brahamcharya, sleep on floor, bath three times a day, worship Bhagwan LaxmiNarayan in morning and maintain a continuous lamp of Ghee for the duration of the month. He should venerate the moon daily with following three hymns; 'Navonav', 'Ajayasva' and 'Santepyasi' and offer eight oblations of grains. He should offer daily oblations of Ghee to the sacred fire with an additional hymn - 'Yaddev Dev', besides the abovementioned three hymns to wash away all his sins. He should further offer the oblation of rice, oats, vegetables, milk, yoghurt, fruits, roots and water to the sacred fire and consume the leftovers."

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "O Muni! A person undergoing Chandrayan Vrat should eat only fifteen mouthfuls of food on Purnima. He should reduce one mouthful of food every day for next fourteen days and observe a fast on Amavasya (moonless day). With the waning of the moon, he eats one hundred and twenty morsels of food in a fortnight. He should consume one mouthful of food on Magh Sud Padvo and continue to increase one mouthful every day until Purnima of Magh month when the Vrat ends. Exactly in the same way, he consumes one hundred and twenty morsels of food with the growing moon. O Muni! The person should chant these fifteen hymns at each gulp of food depending on the number of mouthfuls he is supposed to eat daily according to the above formula: Aum, Bhuh, Bhuvah, Swah, Mahah, Janah, Tapah, Satyam, Urje, Ida, Ojh, Tejh, Purushh, Dharmah, and Shivah. Each hymn becomes complete by preceeding with 'Aum' and ending it with 'Namah Swaha' (i.e. Aum Namah Swaha, Aum Bhu Namah Swaha, et al). He should gift a cow and a calf to a deserving Brahmin at the successful conclusion of the Vrat. A person's sins are washed away and he is rewarded with wealth, health, happiness and fame in this world. Sakaam devotees attain the heaven and Nishkaam devotees attain Bhagwan's supreme abode at the successful conclusion of a Chandrayan Vrat. O Muni! This Vrat is also undertaken as a primary atonement to wash away any sin committed."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Shukanand swami and other present devotees were very glad to hear a divine sermon and bowed down to Shree Hari. Bhagwan Swaminarayan took a shower of cold water mixed with sesame seeds and gifted the Brahmins with gold, pots full of sesame seeds, blankets, quilts and warm tunics and fed them sumptuous meals. He rested for a while in the afternoon and addressed devotees on the tenets of Bhagwan Rhishabhdev (on Sankhya philosophy) at another assembly at night."

Thus ends the 19th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 20

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari stayed five days at Nagadka before proceeding towards Junagadh. He asked Hemantsinh to take Him to Panchala first. They reached Panchala on the sixth day after leaving Nagadka, where He was warmly greeted by devotees of Panchala led by Anupsinh (Hemantsinh's younger brother).

Shree Hari was led into Panchala with great pomp and accompaniment of musical instruments. He stayed at Hemantsinh's house and the other saints, Parshads and devotees stayed appropriately at various devotees' homes. The devotees of Panchala served Bhagwan Shree Hari and His saints and devotees with due reverence to the best of their abilities. Hemantsinh surrendered his home and wealth at Shree Hari's divine lotus feet and he became a guest in his own home. Realising the vitiated atmosphere of the city of Junagadh, He told Hemantsinh, 'This Panchala village is very serene and hospitable to My saints. I know that both, Junagadh and Panchala are yours and I do not differentiate between them. However, Junagadh is not a suitable place for saints to stay for a long period. I will stay at Junagadh for only two to three days if you insist on taking us to Junagadh, while we will stay at Panchala for two to three months. Now the choice is yours.' O king! Hemantsinh replied, ' O Hari! You stay wherever You want to stay. Junagadh is not more special than Panchala. The devotees of Junagadh will surely come to Panchala as it is not very far. I just want You to be happy!"

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari decided to stay at Panchala and He stayed as merrily as He stayed at Gadhpur, considering Panchala as His second home. The devotees of Junagadh and other surrounding areas came in droves to Panchala for His divine Darshan. On the auspicious occasion of Shivratri, Shree Hari, along with His disciples undertook a day of fast and celebrated the festival grandly. He asked the Brahmins to perform Maha Abhishek of Lord Shiva and gifted them generously before feeding them sumptuous meals the next day. Shree Hari delivered a divine sermon on the profound knowledge from the Vedas to His devotees in the assembly the next evening. O king! Later on, Lord Shree Hari celebrated the festival of NarNarayan Jayanti as grandly as He had done at Vadtaal the previous year. Thousands of devotees, who had come to participate in the celebration of the birth anniversary of Bhagwan NarNarayan, venerated Shree Hari with various artefacts such as sandalwood paste, Kumkum, rice and flowers and gifted Him their hard earned wealth generously. Hemantsinh worshipped Shree Hari daily, today he, along with his family, venerated Him more elaborately with sandalwood paste, rice and many flower garlands, then gifted Him many expensive robes as well as silver and gold ornaments. After prostrating at Shree Hari's feet, Hemantsinh venerated Rampratapji and Ichharamji and gifted them too with expensive robes. Ganga, Aditi, Amruta and other female devotees venerated Shree Hari in turn, followed by other devotees of Panchala. Hemantsinh and his brother venerated all the saints very reverentially with various artefacts and fed them sumptuous meals including sweets such as Ladoos, milk pudding and Jalebi."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari, seated on an ornate Sinhasan surrounded by His saints and devotees, appeared as if the moon in the middle of twinkling stars. All the devotees, saints, householder males and females, took their seats keeping their status and principles of the Sampraday. O king! Shree Hari asked devotees to ask any questions to enlighten them or remove their doubts. Akhandanand swami, on behalf of other Brahamchari saints bowed at Shree Hari and asked Him humbly with folded hands."

Thus ends the 20th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 21

Akhandanand swami asked, "O Bhagwan! You are the only one Who has the total and correct knowledge regarding Aatma and Parmatma, which confuses even the scholar among us saints. On behalf of Muktanand swami and other saints, I ask You to enlighten us. The Shrutis variously say that 'There is nothing but Brahm (Bhagwan) in this universe' and 'everything visible is Brahm'. Some scholars interpret this as 'the world, souls and Ishwar (here Vairaj or Purush) is derived from Maya and therefore illusionary (not eternal)'. While some other scholars interpret another way the saying of the Shrutis -'eternal amongst eternal' to mean the souls, Ishwar and Bhagwan are eternal and totally distinct from each other. O Bhagwan! Which one of these interpretations is correct? Or are both of them equally correct? Only You are able to enlighten us regarding Dvait (dualism) and Advait (non dualism) philosophy."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Lord Swaminarayan, the guru of the universe, prepared to answer Akhandanand swami's question to the delight of all present saints and devotees."

Lord Swaminarayan replied, "O wise Muni! Listen to Me explain the philosophy of Dvait and Advait as espoused in the Vedas. First of all, bear in mind that the term 'Brahm' is mainly used for Lord Krishna, just as Bhagwan and Paramatma. The Vedas address Bhagwan as Brahm due to His divinity, supremacy, virtues and form which are infinite. Whenever Akshar (supreme abode), Purush (Vairaj) or indeed anything that is addressed as Brahm is due to their elevated status attained by their devotion in Lord Krishna but remains subservient to Bhagwan. The virtues such as truth and bringing any prophecy to become reality, divinity, all-encompassing knowledge and other virtues remain constant in Bhagwan while they come and go in other elevated Ekantik Muktas (often referred to as Brahm as well). Therefore, Shrutis describe Bhagwan as an epitome of virtues and might by saying 'Brahm has infinite knowledge and is eternally true'. O Muni! At the Atyantik Pralay (total and final annihilation) Bhagwan Shree Krishna alone remains in His supreme abode called AksharBrahm by concealing all His prowess such as Vairaj. In such a state, the Shrutis describe Bhagwan as one and unique besides describing Him as Nirgun as He is not influenced by any traits of Maya. A Yogi or a Mukta, who has become Nirgun due to his steadfast and Ekantik devotion, sees nothing but Bhagwan under the spell of Samadhi. The Shrutis describe such a Yogi as Brahm because he knows Brahm (Bhagwan) fully and philosophers describe such a Yogi as Brahm (soul) separate and distinct from his mortal body. O Muni! Such a Brahmvetta Yogi sees the whole universe as complete and indivisible form of Bhagwan. He does not see the visible world, the souls, Ishwar or indeed anything except Bhagwan all around him. He imparts the same knowledge to his disciple. O Varni! This is how Shrutis describe 'There is nothing but Brahm (Bhagwan) in this universe'. Now let me enlighten you about how Aatma (soul), Ishwar (Vairaj or Purush) and Parmatma (Bhagwan) are eternal and distinct."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Muni! Ishwar and the souls are not totally destroyed even at the time of Prakrut (annihilation of everything emerged from Prakruti or Maya) or Atyantik Pralay. Only two types of bodies (gross or visible and sublime) of Ishwar called Virat and Sutratma are destroyed while he merges into Maya or Prakruti with his third (causal or eternal) body called Avyakrut. Similarly two bodies of the souls (called Sthul and Sukshma) are destroyed and they merge back into Maya with their Karan bodies. Prakruti, with Ishwar and the souls merged in her now becomes known as Pradhan. Pradhan and Purush (the female and male building blocks of the universe respectively) merge into MahaMaya but are never destroyed. Just as a night disappears with the appearance of the sun, MahaMaya merges into MahaPurush at the time of Atyantik Pralay and eventually into the radiance of AksharBrahm. Nothing remains visible in the brilliant halo of AksharBrahm. The last body - Karan Sharir of the Ekantik souls that had attained the status of Brahm is destroyed by their steadfast devotion in Lord Krishna and attain the divine bodies with His grace and remain in AksharBrahm in His company. O Muni! Thus the souls, Ishwar, Pradhan and Purush are not destroyed even at the time of Atyantik Pralay; therefore, Shrutis describe them as eternal."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Varni! Except for the Ekantik souls that had attained the status of Brahm, Purush, Pradhan Prakruti, Ishwar and the souls re-emerge from AksharBrahm and take their previous forms when Lord Krishna desires to re-create the universe. Ekantik Muktas take birth in this world independently or whenever Bhagwan manifests in this world. Other knowledgeable souls, due to the strength of their devotion in Bhagwan, are also able to see the eternity of other souls and Ishwar as described in the Shrutis. These souls, called Gnaani Muktas, are of a higher status than ordinary souls but lower than Ekantik Mukta. Just as a person standing on a summit of Mountain Meru (a medium height mountain) is able to see other hills, trees and the ground separately, Gnaani Mukta under Savikalp Samadhi see souls, Ishwar, Maya and Bhagwan separately. Whereas a person standing on the summit of Mountain Lokalok (a very high mountain) cannot see the trees, hills and ground separately (due to the distance). Everything appears merged into the ground. Similarly, the Ekantik Muktas under Nirvikalp Samadhi, instead of seeing the souls, Ishwar, Maya and Bhagwan separately; see everything indistinct from Brahm (Bhagwan). O Varni! Nirvikalp (where all desires or thoughts have subsided) Samadhi is of three tiers depending on the strength or depth of their devotion in Lord Krishna. The Samadhi in which one enjoys serenity and bliss in the woken state due to proximity and merger of mind, intellect and senses in Lord Krishna, which is equivalent to the tranquillity attained by a person under the spell of deep trance where mind, intellect and senses have subsided is the lowest tier of happiness. The Samadhi in which one enjoys serenity and bliss in the woken state due to proximity and merger of mind, intellect and senses in Lord Krishna, which is equivalent to the tranquillity attained by Ishwar at the time of Naimittik Pralay (annihilation of the universe at the time of his night) under the spell of sleep where his mind, intellect and senses have subsided is the median tier of bliss. The Samadhi in which one enjoys serenity and bliss in the woken state due to proximity and merger of mind, intellect and senses in Lord Krishna, which is equivalent to the tranquillity attained by Purush under the spell of solitary existence where mind, intellect and senses have subsided following the Prakrutik Pralay when Ishwar, Prakruti and Pradhan are merged into Purush is the highest tier of bliss. O Muni! The happiness or bliss of trance or Samadhi described is for example only, the real happiness and bliss attained by the direct association with Lord Krishna is greater than any imaginable bliss."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Muni! The Gnaani Muktas mentioned earlier are of three types as well, depending on their status and strength of devotion in Lord Krishna. Ekantik Maha Muktas, though they know the eternal existence of souls, Ishwar and Maya, call them illusionary due to their equanimity. Thus, both views; 'there is only Brahm (souls and Bhagwan are one)' and 'separate existence of eternal Jeev and Brahm' are correct and valid. However, a person, who has not yet attained the status of Ekantik Mukta and professes the uniformity of soul and Brahm by quoting the Shrutis, indeed goes to hell. They suffer the punishments of hell for sins committed by them and their disciples. O Muni! Whenever the term Brahm is used twice in any of the hymns of the Shrutis, the first mention of Brahm must always be taken for AksharBrahm (His supreme abode) and second mention of Brahm must be taken to mean Lord Krishna, Who is beyond and separate from His abode. The distinction between souls, Ishwar, Brahm and Shree Hari is universal and well established by the Shrutis. The hymn of the Shruti - 'one who knows Brahm knows Parabrahm', clearly exemplifies that even the Ekantik Muktas are subservient to Parabrahm Parmatma and must serve Him. A soul is described as Bhagwan's body as He dwells in each soul. Though a soul does not realise Him within, Bhagwan controls the soul. He is the deliverer of Moksha. Similarly, as Bhagwan dwells in and controls AksharBrahm, it is called His body. However, Akshar cannot comprehend the majesty of Bhagwan fully. He is the deliverer of Moksha. The abovementioned hymns of the Shrutis make it profoundly clear that AksharBrahm is distinct from Brahm. When even AksharBrahm is distinct from Brahm, how can one consider Purush or Ishwar to be the same as Bhagwan? Then, how can a mere soul be considered the same as Lord Krishna? Therefore, one must give up any ignorance and ambiguity and worship Shree Hari to attain Moksha. Otherwise, he remains shackled to the never ending cycle of death and birth forever. O Muni! Whatever I said in short here is narrated in the Shree Bhashya of Ramanujacharya in great detail."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Akhandanand swami, Muktanand swami and other saints understood Shree Hari's tenets very clearly and bowed down to Him in reverence. The merciful Lord Hari asked all devotees to return to their respective residences and He Himself returned to His personal quarters. O king! Bhagwan Swaminarayan stayed happily in Panchala to fulfil latent desires of delighted Hemantsinh and delivered many sermons over a period of time."

Thus ends the 21st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Hemantsinh had erected the series of tents on the western outskirts of Panchala for the saints. Shree Hari arrived there on PaapMochini Ekadashi (Posh Sud Ekadashi) along with His Parshads such as Uttam Khachar, Soma Khachar, Sura Khachar, Hemantsinh, Anupsinh, Ratanji etc. to grant His divine Darshan to the saints. The saints were playing Raas to the tune of music as a part of their Jagran. They stopped Raas and surrounded Shree Hari as soon as they saw Him and arranged for an ornate Sinhasan under one of the trees. The saints re-started the Rass in circle around Shree Hari seated on the Sinhasan. Looking at their Ishtadev and singing Kirtans extolling His Leelas, they danced until midnight. The tired saints stopped the Raas and took their seats in front of Shree Hari."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! By Shree Hari's grace and mercy, the saints saw radiance equivalent to thousands of suns and moons emanating from Him and spread in all directions. They saw Bhagwan Narayanmuni as Lord Krishna in the midst of a brilliant halo. He was slightly dark complexioned like a newly formed cloud, wearing golden robes and ornaments, skin glowing from the smearing of sandalwood paste, wearing a number of scented flower garlands and dangling strings of scented flowers from His coronet, playing a divine flute with His hands, wearing fish shaped gold earrings on His ears. He was accompanied by and being attended by many of His Parshads such as Vishvaksen and Shridama. His forehead was adorned by Urdhpundrak Tilak; His lips deep red; neat row of His teeth twinkling like white pearls; His eyebrows finely arched; His eyes like the petals of a fresh lotus; His nose raised and round; His smiling face radiating like a full moon, His broad chest marked with insignia of ShreeVatsa and His nails shining. O king! The saints saw Lord Krishna in His full beauty and grandeur."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The saints saw Laxmiji standing on His left. She was fair complexioned, attired in red, wearing many gold ornaments such as necklaces, bracelets and earrings, had a string of flowers entwined in her long plait of hairs, was holding a full blown lotus flower and a silver staff in her hands and wearing tinkling silver anklets. Her face was round and radiant like a full moon, her sparkling white teeth were finely aligned, her shapely eyebrows were forming a perfect arch over her large twinkling eyes, her round breasts were raised slightly and her forehead was adorned with Kumkum Chandlo. She had eyes only for Her Husband. O Muni! The saints also saw similarly attired and beautiful Radhikaji standing next to her. The saints saw Dharmadev, attired in all white, on the right side of Lord Shree Hari. Dharmadev appeared radiant and was wearing many divine ornaments. The saints also saw Bhaktidevi standing on the left of Dharmadev. She was slightly golden complexioned and wearing many divine ornaments. They were accompanied by Dharmadev's other wives such as Shradhhaa, Daya and others and sons such as Gnaan and Vairagya. "

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The saints bowed down to them reverentially and asked their Ishtadev, 'O Shree Hari! O Narayanmuni! O Lord Krishna! O Vaasudev! We bow to You repeatedly. O son of Dharmadev! We know You - our Ishtadev Shree Hari, and Lord Shree Krishna flanked by Laxmiji and Radhikaji, as one and the same because of Your earlier divine Darshan in these two forms. However, we do not recognise the other divine persons standing on Your right.' O king! Shree Hari replied, 'O saints! Standing at the front are My father Dharmadev and mother Bhaktimata. Behind them are his other wives such as Shradhhaa, Maitri and Daya and their sons Shubh, Prasad etc. the whole family is always present near Me, albeit in divine form. Their Darshan is as rare as Mine. My Ekantik devotees sometimes are able to see them only when I so desire and not otherwise. I am very pleased with you today at your observation of Ekantik Dharma and undertaking Jagran and fast on Ekadashi and therefore, I have granted this divine Darshan. Ask for a boon!"

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Urged by Shree Hari, the saints asked boons from Shree Hari, 'O Prabhu! Grant us that we never ever have any doubt in whatever Leelas You do in Your human form. We may always see divinity in Your human form as we are witnessing at the moment. Let our devotion in You grow and become as profound and steadfast as the devotion that Laxmiji has in You.' O king! The saints asked from Dharmadev and his family, 'O Dharma! Be with us all the time! Protect us from the offspring of Adharma such as greed, anger, lust, ego etc. at all times.' O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari and Dharmadev said, 'Amen'. In no time, Shree Hari returned to His saintly previous form of Narayanmuni in front of their eyes." O king! Bewildered yet very happy, the saints bowed down at His feet before Shree Hari returned to His residence with His Parshads. Shree Hari sat on a wooden Bajoth surrounded by Uttam Khachar, Hemantsinh, Bhaguji, Soma Khachar and other Parshads. Surprised and delighted at the divine Darshan they had just witnessed, His Parshads bowed at Him and said, O Lord! Your Darshan as radiant Lord Krishna flanked by Radha and Laxmi and accompanied by Your parents is nigh impossible for us mortals. We are very fortunate that we had this Darshan by Your grace.' O king! The Parshads were overcome by tears of joy and their speech became slurred due to incredible bliss. O king! Shree Hari addressed His Parshads."

Shree Hari said, "Listen to Me the best among the devotees! Such divine Darshan is not impossible to a devotee who has a profound and steadfast devotion in the human form of Bhagwan. Previously, Lord Krishna had granted the Darshan of His cosmic form to Arjun. Shree Krishna had said to Arjun then, 'O Arjun! My cosmic form that you are seeing now is near impossible. Indra and the other Devtas, though desire it, are not granted this Darshan. This Darshan is not possible even after learning the Vedas, performing many Yagnas, undertaking the harshest austerities or giving away large amounts of wealth in charity. It is possible only due to Ekantik Bhakti.' O Parshads! It is repeatedly mentioned in the Sanatsujat chapter of the Mahabharat that only steadfast devotees can have Bhagwan's divine Darshan. Ekantik Bhakti, which can only be acquired by rendering selfless services to Ekantik saints, can free one from the clutches of Maya and the punishments of hell. The rewards for sincerely observing one's Dharma pertaining to one's Ashram and Varna is indeed Ekantik Bhakti. Rewards of selfless social services such as building wells, lakes, communal assembly halls, temples and religious practices such as Japa, observing Vrats, undertaking austerities and venerating Bhagwan, whilst observing non violence and appropriate Brahamcharya is Ekantik Bhakti. The rewards of Ekantik Bhakti are boundless and eternal. Rewards for anything undertaken without Bhakti are temporary. That is the real message of scriptures like the Mahabharat, the Shreemad Bhagwat and other Puranas. O Parshads! You had My divine Darshan due to your exceptional devotion towards Me."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The Parshads realised their great fortune and once again bowed down to Shree Hari and felt fulfilled. Shree Hari fed thousands of Brahmins the next day and concluded His fast with His Parshads. After repeated prayers by Uttam Khachar and his sisters to return to Gadhpur, Shree Hari relented and decided to depart from Panchala. O king! Hemantsinh realised that Shree Hari's blissful stay in Panchala is about to end, bowed down to Him and very reverentially offered his parting prayers."

Thus ends the 22nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Hemantsinh prayed, "O merciful supreme Lord! You are the cause of all causes and beyond the scope of Maya. You are superior to all the Devtas. O merciful Narayanmuni! I know that the staunch devotees are very dear to You. O omnipresent Lord Narayan! I repeatedly bow down to You. O Lord! You have divine insignias in Your feet, You are always smiling, You wear mostly white robes and long flower garlands adorn Your neck and the strings of flowers dangle from Your diadem. O Bhagwan! You are Nirgun (free from the traits of Maya) yet take a Sagun form (having divine virtues) so that Your devotees can relate with You better. O Bhagwan! You are surrounded and served by millions of radiant Muktas in the self luminous Brahampur (Your supreme abode). O Narayan! Your heart is pure, Your mind and senses are fully under Your control and austerities are dear to You. You appear as a normal human being, but I know that You are totally independent. O Parameshwar! You have taken birth to re-establish Sanatan Dharma in this world. O omnipresent Lord Narayan! I repeatedly bow down to You. You observe and propagate Naisthik Brahamcharya; indeed You can only be realised upon observing appropriate (to Ashram) Brahamcharya. You remove sorrows of Your devotees and grant them happiness. Indeed, Your name - Swaminarayan, is enough to wash away all sins and drive away all sorrows. You support umpteen numbers of universes by Your divinity and enlighten and illuminate the whole universe through the sun and the moon. You redeem anyone who comes under Your refuge, You are the master and controller of all the Ishwars and Devtas yet venerate Brahmins with utmost respect, O omnipresent Lord Narayan! I repeatedly bow down to You. Only You are able to harbour peace, compassion, faith etc. within You; Muktanand swami and other pious and eminent saints serve You reverentially, O Bhagwan! You are always eager to redeem all souls that come into Your contact from the clutches of the never ending cycle of death and rebirth. O omnipresent Lord Narayan! I repeatedly bow down to You as You have quenched my long standing desire to grace my home and village. I plead with You to visit Junagadh, which is close by, as well. Thousands of local devotees would fulfil their lives by Your divine Darshan and an opportunity to serve You and Your saints."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Lord Narayanmuni replied, 'O Hemantsinh! I am prepared to proceed to Junagadh immediately if you so desire.' Pleased at Shree Hari acceding to his wish, Hemantsinh asked his brother and other attendants to prepare the horses and carts to take Shree Hari, saints, Parshads and other devotees to Junagadh. As the convoy passed through the villages en route to Junagadh, the devotees of respective villages pleaded with Shree Hari to stay at their villages for some time. Granting them the pleasure of His divine Darshan but declining their requests due to the paucity of time, Shree Hari reached Junagadh the same evening and took up residence at Hemansinh's home. His brother, Anupsinh, who had reached his home earlier, welcomed Shree Hari with utmost reverence. Anupsinh and the other leading devotees such as Ramji, Ambashankar, Rupshankar, Gokul, and Udhhav engaged in the services of Shree Hari and the accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees. O king! Extolling its holiness, Shree Hari visited Mountain Revatachal (Girnar) and took holy dips in Damodar Kund and Gaumukhi Ganga on Amavasya (Falgun of Samvat 1877) and distributed alms to hundreds of Brahmins. He also visited the shrines of Damodar Bhagwan and Bhaveshwar Mahadev and offered His venerations to the ruling deities of both shrines. Realising His supremacy, many Nagar Brahmins became His disciples and requested Him to prolong His stay in Junagadh. Acceding their requests, Bhagwan Shree Hari remained at Junagadh until the Purnima of Chaitra."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The devotees of Junagadh conducted a special veneration of Shree Hari on Chaitra Sud Padvo to mark the Chaitri New Year and gifted Him new robes and silver and gold coins. To mark His birth anniversary, Hemantsinh conducted a special veneration of Lord Swaminarayan on Chaitra Sud Navami using many artefacts such as sandalwood paste, rice mixed with Kumkum powder, scented incense, garlands and strings of Jasmine flowers and various fruits. Holding a platter full of silver coins, Hemantsinh conducted a special Aarti."

Hemantsinh sang, "O Dev! Be victorious! O Lord Narayan! You protect Your devotees from the evil influences of Kali Yug such as greed and anger. O benevolent Bhagwan! Be victorious!

"You, enveloped in a brilliant halo of Brahampur, appear radiant and fair complexioned. Infinite numbers of Muktas and Devtas prostrate at Your divine feet. You dwell in all souls intangibly. You are beyond and distinct even from the eternal Akshar. O benevolent Bhagwan! Be victorious!

"O son of Dharmadev! You bless and please Your devotees! Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Hemantsinh performed Pradakshina around Shree Hari after concluding His Aarti of six hymns and stood in front of Him with his hands folded and head bowed. Shree Hari took off one flower garland from His neck and put it around Hemantsinh's neck, who was greatly surprised and pleased to receive such a momentous divine gift from Him. To the surprise of the gathered devotees, Shree Hari gave away all the expensive robes, ornaments and wealth to the Brahmins. Shree Hari held daily assemblies where He imparted important knowledge to His devotees as long as He stayed at Junagadh. He fed numerous Brahmins on Baras on the conclusion of the fast of Ekadashi and extolled the significance and sanctity of the pilgrimage of Dwarka in the assembly, listening to which, Rampratap and Ichharam sought His permission to undertake the pilgrimage of Dwarka. O king! Shree Hari assented and on the next day, He arranged for two carts, plenty of money and food to facilitate their pilgrimage. He asked Mayaram Bhatt to guide them and some armed Parshads to escort them on pilgrimage. Though other family members including their children wanted to accompany them on the pilgrimage, Shree Hari, knowing the impeding hot weather, did not grant them permission to accompany them. Shree Hari left Junagadh for Gadhpur on the morning of Chaitra Vad Padvo. He stopped the devotees of Junagadh including Hemantsinh and his brother Anupsinh from following Him and asked them to return back to Junagadh. O king! Gadhpur will indeed attain the pleasure of Bhagwan Vaasudev, one's devotion in Him would strengthen by many folds and he would be freed from the bondage of this world."

Thus ends the 23rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 24

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Whilst in Gadhpur, Shree Hari once pondered on the principal objectives of His manifestation in human form. He thought, 'Irreligiosity had prevailed widely in the world. Sanatan Dharma had weakened by the onslaught of evil gurus and kings and as a result the pious saints had to suffer a lot. The earth too became unable to bear the burden of evil. Through the excuse of a curse from Sage Durvasha, I took birth as a son of Dharma and Bhakti. I have managed to destroy such evil kings and hypocrite gurus and Dharma and Bhakti has prevailed. The pious saints and people are able to follow the ethics fearlessly. Adharma has vanished from the face of the world and people are happily living within the boundaries of Dharma. Thus, I have accomplished the objectives of My coming to earth. However, I must take some concrete steps for the future generations. My disciples will feel orphaned after My departure from this world. I must create some support systems for their future. I shall establish grand temples and install My idols in them for the future generations to worship. My worship will grant them an opportunity to attain salvation. Diksha is an important tool to propagate and enhance one's devotion in Me. Therefore, I shall establish a lineage of Acharya in My clan, who will grant them Diksha. The scriptures are necessary to understand My true principles. Therefore, I shall ask Shatanand Muni to compose a scripture narrating My life and message. I shall accomplish these tasks prior to My return to My supreme abode."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! To put His mission into action, Shree Hari asked learned saints to rewrite old and compose some new scriptures in neat handwriting. He organised a large festival on Chaitra Sud Ekadashi and fed saints, devotees and many Brahmins the next day as the conclusion of a fast of Ekadashi."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Thousands of devotees started thronging Gadhpur for Shree Hari's Darshan when they heard the news that He Has returned to Gadhpur after an absence of nine months. Following the festival of Chandan Yatra on Akha Treej, the devotees of Amdavad prayed to Shree Hari, 'O Bhagwan! Please grace our city. We wish to establish a temple in our city. The governor has granted us the permission and has also agreed to provide the land required for the temple. He has immense faith in You. Please grant us the permission to build a temple. O Shree Hari! We will serve You and Your saints to the best of our abilities.' O king! Merciful and benevolent Shree Hari granted the permission to build a temple and called Anandanand swami and said, 'O Muni! The local representative of the British Government has offered the land to build a temple. Please proceed to Amdavad with the local devotees. I want you to erect a magnificent temple according to the ancient architect and traditions. Please let Me know when the temple is ready and I shall come and install the idols of NarNarayan Dev in sanctum sanctorum of the temple Myself.' O king! Anandanand swami was greatly pleased to get such a splendid opportunity to serve Shree Hari and left for Amdavad with the group of saints and took up residence in Amdavad. Upon hearing the news, the devotees of Amdavad thronged for Anandanand swami's Darshan. The collector of Amdavad (Sir Dunlop) came for swami's Darshan as well and offered him as much land as needed for the temple. Anandanand swami chose a large plot of land and started the construction work for the temple with the help of expert architects and sculptors. The local devotees provided all necessary materials and manpower as and when requested by Anandanand swami. He called few Brahmins expert in astrology to decide upon the most auspicious time for the installation of the Murtis when the temple was ready. He sent two saints to Gadhpur to inform Shree Hari on the progress of the work and invite Him to come to Amdavad for the installation ceremony."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari wished to listen to the Katha of Valmiki Ramayana, but was waiting for His brothers to return from the pilgrimage of Dwarka. At midday on Jeth Sud Dasami, Shree Hari celebrated the festival of Ganga Dashara (to mark the appearance of River Ganga from the heaven) and venerated River Ganga. Just as Shree Hari was going to Suvasini Bhabhi's home for His lunch, He heard the news of the arrival of His brothers Rampratap and Iccharam. To restate the custom of greeting returning pilgrims, Shree Hari went to greet His brothers. He offered Pranam to His elder brother Ramprapji with folded hands while His younger brother Iccharam offered Pranam to Shree Hari. All three brothers lunched together after a short session of exchanging pleasantries. He, along with His brothers started listening to the Katha of the Ramayana the next day. Katha started on Jeth Sud Ekadashi - Nirjala Ekadashi (Samvat 1877) and concluded on Posh Sud Ekadashi (Samvat 1878), upon which Shree Hari satisfied the narrator with gifts of clothes, ornaments and money. O king! For a month starting from Chaitra Sud Purnima, Shree Hari undertook the Vrat of Chandrayan and a daily bath in River Unmattganga as a part of Magh Snaan. O king! Just as He was resting after feeding the saints and thousands of devotees and Brahmins on the conclusion of His Vrat, two emissary saints of Anandanand swami arrived from Amdavad. Shree Hari greeted them with honour and arranged lunch for them and asked them for the news of the progress of the temple. The saints informed Him that the work on the temple has concluded and the invocation ceremony of the idols of NarNarayan Dev is set for Falgun Sud Tritiya."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari asked His saints and Parshads to get ready to travel to Amdavad. Shree Hari forbade Jayaba, Lalitaba and other Sankhyayogi female devotees from travelling to Amdavad as the large gathering of devotees will pose a hindrance to their Brahamcharya Vrat. He assured them that He will return soon from Amdavad. O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari, accompanied by His two brothers and the saints, and surrounded by many armed and mounted Parshads including Uttam Khachar, Sura Khachar, Soma Khachar and Bhaguji left Gadhpur for Amdavad on the auspicious day of Magh Vad Saptami, as suggested by expert astrologers. Granting His divine Darshan to the devotees of villages on the way, the convoy reached Amdavad on the fifth day. A large temporary settlement consisting of hundreds of tents was established on the banks of Lake Kankaria on the outskirts of Amdavad. The Brahmin devotees led by Natthuram, Hemantrai and Ganpatram; the Vaishya devotees led by Hirachand, Bechardas, Lalgupt, Maneklal and Damodar and female devotees led by Gangaba, Revaba, Diwaliba, Laxmibai, Shyamabai and Shivabai took it upon themselves to serve Shree Hari and the accompanying saints and devotees. Thousands of enthusiastic devotees thronged the banks of Lake Kankaria for His divine Darshan and serve accompanied saints and devotees. Anandanand swami came and gave a detailed account of the construction of the temple and invited Him to inspect the temple. O king! Shree Hari visited the site of the temple on Baras following the conclusion of the fast and praised the work of sculptors. He asked His devotees to gather all the necessary items for the invocation ceremony as advised by the expert Brahmins before returning to His temporary residence on the banks of Kankaria. Thousands of devotees came for His Darshan and to listen to His blessings daily in the evenings."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Sir Dunlop, as usual, came for His Darshan today as well and stood humbly in front of Shree Hari with folded hands. Shree Hari thanked and greatly praised him for making land available to build the temple. Sir Dunlop asked Him not to hesitate if He needed any other help from the government. After conducting Dhun for some time, Shree Hari sent all the devotees back and performed His evening rituals before retiring for the night. O king! Holding evening assemblies where Shree Hari reiterated the significance of helping in building temples and related festivities such as opening and invocation ceremonies, six days passed by. He would take devotees with Him to Narayan Ghat for a bath in River Sabarmati every morning. In His earlier Avatar (NarNarayan), He had propounded the sanctity of River Sabarmati as redeemer of grave sins such as a murder of a Brahmin. Extolling the holiness of the river, He would conclude His morning routine there before returning to the banks of Kankaria, where He would cook for Naivedhya. O king! The devotees of Amdavad would invite Shree Hari and saints to grace their respective residences, venerate Him reverentially and gift Him with much wealth to fulfil their latent desires. Shree Hari, though not wishing to hoard anything, accepted all gifts to please and satisfy them. The large groups of devotees from nearby villages thronged Amdavad daily for His Darshan."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari took up residence in Nava Vaas near the newly built temple on Falgun Sud Beej for convenience. He called a few Brahmins expert in the invocation ceremony and arranged for serenading rites as a prelude to the important ceremony the next day. Shree Hari, guided by the same Brahmins, performed special veneration of Bhagwan and Devtas with the Vedic hymns and installed the idols of NarNarayan Dev in sanctum sanctorum of the temple on Fagan Sud-3 Samvat 1878. The environs vibrated with the sounds of Vedic hymns, the clapping of gathered devotees and various musical instruments. O king! Following the installation of the idols, Shree Hari performed a grand Aarti of NarNarayan Dev and stood in front of the newly invoked Murtis. A brilliant radiance emanated from the Murtis, which mesmerised the congregation. On the right hand side of Narnarayan dev, Bhagwan Shree Hari installed the idols of Shree Krishna with Radhikaji and on the left hand side He established the Murtis of His father Dharmadev, mother Bhaktimata and Himself in the form of HariKrishna Maharaj. For the benefit of the future generation of worshippers, He permeated within these Murtis and established His oneness with these Murtis. He concluded the Yagna by offering Ghee, milk etc. to the sacred fire as guided by the Brahmins after emerging from the sanctum sanctorum. He gifted those and many other Brahmins with plenty of wealth to their satisfaction before returning to His Sinhasan. He raised His hands and gestured the gathered devotees to quieten down as He wanted to bless them."

Bhagwan Narayanmuni spoke, "O devotees! Listen to Me. This is very benevolent to you. Shree Krishna is our Ishtadev. The same Bhagwan, Who resides in His radiant supreme abode - Golok, has taken birth in human form on the earth for the benevolent of mankind. In the bygone era, Lord Krishna, pleased with the staunch devotion of Dharmadev and his wife Murti, appeared as a twin in the garb of Naisthik Brahamcharis. Bhagwan Nar and Narayan, after blessing them with His divine Darshan, went to Badrikaashram to undertake severe austerities for the benevolence of His devotees. Bhagwan NarNarayan is performing these austerities even today for the materialistic rewards and salvation of His disciples of Bharat Khand (India). O devotees! When once again Adharma became prevalent, He manifested as Lord Krishna and Arjun in the Yadu and Kuru clan respectively, after much pleading by the Devtas. I have established the same NarNarayan Dev in this temple. Whoever worships Him or does His Darshan reverentially will be rewarded by much materialistic pleasure and salvation as the case may be. Indeed anyone desiring a son will be rewarded with a son; a seeker of wealth will be rewarded with much wealth and a scholar will be rewarded with the knowledge to his satisfaction. Just as the desires of desirous will be fulfilled, NarNarayan Dev will grant His Brahampur to a devotee who worships Him without seeking or expecting any rewards. The scholar Brahmins who read religious scriptures such as the Shreemad Bhagwat or Bhagvad Gita within the temple premises will not have any desires unfulfilled. Indeed, all My disciples must come for the Darshan of NarNarayan Dev in the month of Falgun when the sun is in Uttar Falguni constellation (the day of PushpaDolotsav or His birth anniversary)."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! All present devotees nodded in assent at His command and proceeded for NarNarayan Dev's Darshan. Whilst Shree Hari was still seated on Sinhasan, Anandanand swami politely asked Him."

Thus ends the 25th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 26

Anandanand swami asked Shree Hari, "O Bhagwan! You have installed the idols of NarNarayan Dev for the benevolent of mankind. We wish to hear in greater detail about the birth of NarNarayan Bhagwan (You mentioned in brief the manifestation of NarNarayan Dev as sons of Dharma and Murti)."

Shree Narayanmuni replied, "O devotees! I shall reiterate the Katha of the birth of Shree NarNarayan Dev which is narrated in the scriptures as an answer by Dharmadev to Sage Narad in response to his query. Young Sage Sanakkumar once went to Shwetdweep, which is an island of oasis in the middle of the vast Kshirsagar Ocean, for Vaasudev Bhagwan's Darshan. The divine island is replete with thousands of lakes and rivers and numerous varieties of trees. Sanakkumar was surprised when he saw the magnificent home of Dharmadev, encircled with River Virja, he descended from the sky for a closer look. The water of Virja River was crystal clear and its banks were lined with bright white, red, green and black precious jewels and their luminosity spread in all sides. The banks of Virja had many mines of rubies, diamonds, and other colourful gems. Indeed, these gems were so rare that even the Devtas such as Brahma and Indra never got to see them. There were many small gardens on both sides of the river.

Devotees discard their causal and mortal bodies and acquire divine bodies after bathing in crystal clear waters of River Virja on their way to Bhagwan's supreme abode. Sage Sanak saw various hues of lotus including white, red, black and golden floating on the surface of Virja River. The environs reverberate with the sweet sounds of many different species of swans, flamingos and other aquatic birds that thronged the waters of Virja."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O devotees! The small wooded areas near River Virja had the divine tress such as Parijat and Mandar; ordinary trees such as Pipal, banyan, eucalyptus, palm, Asopalav and Neem; fruit tress such as mango, banana, jackfruit, berry, rose - apple, coconut, date and lime; climbing and flowering ivies such as Jasmine and Chameli and many other evergreen varieties of trees. The area reverberated with the lilting sounds of cuckoos, peacocks and swallows. As sage Sanak moved through the gardens, he saw a golden fort. He entered the fortified town called Vishnupur through one of its four guarded entrances. He moved around the village for a closer inspection without stopping at any place. The roads were laid with precious gems, and many ornate aeroplanes were parked in the front of the houses made of gold and silver. He realised that these opulent mansions were the residences of devout Muktas."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O devotees! Sage Sanak saw a large palace of Dharmadev's, even more opulent than other mansions, in the middle of the town. The palace was so radiant as if hundreds of suns had risen within it and its columns and floor were inlaid with precious and rare jewels. Four armed divine attendants of Dharmadev, attired in golden robes and wearing ornaments, were moving swiftly through the corridors of the palace. The palace had separate living quarters for Dhramadev's (twelve) wives such as Ahinsa, Murti and Shradhha and retinue of their maids. The entrances of each of these homes had golden doors inlaid with rubies and pearls and decorated with buntings of green ivies and leaves. The foyers of these houses were laid with ornate Mandaps decorated with buntings and erected on the pillars of banana trunks. The palace had many small ponds filled with water mixed with sandalwood paste, musk, Kumkum and camphor. Many lotuses and other flowers sprung from the water of these ponds. CHAPTER 27

Bhagwan Narayanmuni said, "O Anand Muni! Sage Sanakkumar saw hundreds of Dharmadev's Parshads under the Mandap. They were four armed, fair complexioned and appeared as radiant as Dharmadev himself. Indeed they were comparable to Dharmadev except that they lacked only the insignia of 'Shree Vatsa' and a gem called 'Kaustubh', which was Dharmadev's exclusive prerogative. Sage Sanak also saw hundreds of maids, ever ready to serve Dharmadev's wives. They were very fair complexioned and beautiful with the features such as round smiling faces, thin red lips, evenly shaped white teeth, round and raised breasts, thin waists, large bottoms and slender legs. They were wearing many ornaments such as bejewelled bangles, rings, earrings, anklets and many flower garlands around their necks. The sage saw Dharmadev seated on an ornate Sinhasan with the radiant halo. He was four armed; very fair complexioned; as radiant as hundreds of suns; more beautiful than even Kaamdev (Eros) and wearing all white robes. The long hairs tied in a bun on his face lent an extra splendour to his smiling face. He had bejewelled earrings on his ears, many flower garlands and a necklace with 'Kaustubh' Gem around his neck and the insignia of 'Shree Vatsa' on his bosom. His two hands were offering blessing and protection and other two were holding a lotus and a Chamar. The Asp Shesh had spread his thousand hoods as crown on his Sinhasan. Sanakkumar saw Ahinsa - Dharma's wife, standing on his left side. Her smiling face was as beautiful as a full moon in autumn with twinkling eyes; her forehead adorned with a large Kumkum Chandlo; she was attired in yellow and wearing many divine ornaments such as bangles, anklets, waist chain, bracelets and necklaces and ever ready to serve Dharmadev. Her one hand was holding a green lotus and other hand was held as if to offer protection from evil. Sage Sanak saw Moksha, in human form, standing in front of Dharmadev, ready to follow his command. He also saw Prajapati (ancestral forefather of human race) named Dharma, in a form of a wellbuilt and healthy bullock standing on four legs made up of austerity, truth, mercy and charity and earth in a form of a white cow. He also saw Dharmaraj (god of death) sitting beside the Earth and he saw Artha (wealth) and Kam (pleasure) sitting behind Dharmdev. Sanakkumar - the son of Brahma - was surprised to see them."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "Sage Sanakkumar was sure that the Dharmadev he saw is the fulcrum of the existence of the universe and thought, 'I am very fortunate to have the Darshan of Dharmadev in person. He can see everything around the universe and is a witness to every deed done by all living beings. He is venerated by four great rewards of Punyas namely Dharma (religiosity), Artha, Kam and Moksha (salvation). This is nothing but a great favour of Bhagwan Narayan. I shall take an opportunity to hear the glory and greatness of Bhagwan Narayan from Dharmadev. I have heard it from my father that Dharmadev is adjudicator of all deeds of living beings and is venerated by all the Devtas including Brahma.' O Anandanand swami! Sanakkumar prostrated at the feet of Dharmadev, who in return got up from his Sinhasan and embraced the sage and made him sit on his Sinhasan and venerated him reverentially. Sanakkumar said to Dharmadev, 'I feel my life totally fulfilled as I just have had your Darshan, which is rare even to the Devtas. Previously, I have only heard about you from the scriptures and from my guru, Brahma. This is the first time I have had your Darshan in person and I consider it as only your mercy. I understand that any human or Devtas desiring any pleasures should venerate you. I am unable to describe my feelings of pleasure arising from your divine Darshan.' O Muni! Dharmadev replied, 'O sage! The pleasure is mine for having a Darshan of such a staunch and true devotee. The visits of Ekantik devotees such as yourself are to proffer sanctity to the places. Please tell me where are you coming from and where are you headed.' Sanakkumar replied, 'My name is Sanakkumar and I am son of Brahma, the creator. I was on my way from Badrikaashram to Shwetdweep for the Darshan of Bhagwan Vaasudev and I saw this serene place from the sky. Surprised by the magnificence of your palace, I descended here and was fortunate to have your Darshan."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Anandanand Swami! Dharmadev slipped into blissful Samadhi for some time on knowing the identity of his guest. Sage Sanak was surprised to see Dharmadev slipping into Samadhi and asked Dharmadev when he came out of Samadhi after a while, 'O Dharmadev! Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva meditate upon you. Even Lord Vaasudev holds you in a very high esteem. Then, who do you meditate upon? Whom did you see in Samadhi? I am perplexed. Please explain this to me.' Dharmadev replied, 'O Muni! I, Vaasudev and all other residents of this island meditate upon Bhagwan Narayan. He is the supreme Lord of the universe. He is often referred to as Purushottam and is beyond the eternal Akshar. He should be worshipped by one and all. He has taken the form of a celibate Rishi at present and resides in Badrikaashram near Kalap village. Bhagwan Narayan, the supreme Lord of innumerable universes first took birth in my home in four different Swarups (forms). The mention of Badrikaashram by you reminded me of the birth of Bhagwan Narayan and I slipped into blissful Samadhi. You too can understand the helplessness of the body when one enters into Samadhi as You often meditate upon Lord Vaasudev, another Swarup of Bhagwan Narayan."

CHAPTER 28

Sage Sanak said, "O Dev! What a pleasant surprise. I just heard about Bhagwan Narayan in a form of a celibate Rishi from you. I have heard the same thing several times from my father, Brahma. However, due to my lack of equanimity, I never understood the true greatness of Bhagwan Narayan and His apparent keenness in observing the prescribed rituals for a Brahamchari and His various Leelas in human form. As a result, my devotion in Him never became staunch and due to my lack of enthusiasm, His memorable Katha became a blurred memory for me. Bhagwan's Maya is indeed so overpowering that I could not understand the true greatness of Bhagwan Narayan and considered Him only as a great sage, equal to someone like Sage Narad. Please narrate me the Katha of His true greatness, hearing which, washes away accumulated sins. O Dharma! You hold this universe together. You know the entire truth. The Katha of Bhagwan is not only a rare opportunity for all us humans, it is just as helpful as a boat is to cross the ocean of worldly miseries and helps cut the chains of sorrows. Just as the flames of a fire turns wood to ashes, Bhagwan's Katha burns all sins and enlighten one's heart. Indeed, the rewards of austerity, observation of Vrats and charity are miniscule in comparison to the rewards of listening to Katha. Therefore, O Dharmadev! Please narrate to me the Katha of manifestation of Lord Narayan. You are revered by everyone because Bhagwan Shree Hari had taken birth as your sons in four forms - Hari, Krishna, Nar and Narayan. Please reiterate the whole Katha to me."

Dharmadev replied, "O sage! I know the lucidity of your intellect. The clarity of one's intellect and purity of his heart can be guessed from his speech. You are an ocean of virtues. You along with Narad and other sages are the best among the true Ekantik devotees who are Nirgun (not affected by the traits of Maya) and totally detached from this world. You meander the world only for the benevolence of others so that they can be protected from the evil influences. True devotees never waste any moment without the reminiscence of Bhagwan, be it listening to or singing His Katha or venerating and meditating upon Him. You also have a constant empathy to listen to His Katha as it is a life support system to devotees like you. The holy rivers such as Ganga, the shrines and great sages reside permanently at the homes of devotees where Bhagwan's Katha is sung regularly. Indeed, the shrines are defined as such only where the sages have narrated His Katha at some time. Whoever listens to Bhagwan's Katha reverently is able to redeem his hundred generations and whoever listens to His Katha even at behest of others is able to redeem his entire clan. One gets an opportunity to listen to His Katha only after the accumulation of Punya of past several lives."

Dharmadev continued, "O sage! A person, who listens to, sings or reminisce His divine Katha; venerates Him or serves Him in any way is called a Vaishnav and becomes reverent even to the Devtas. Bhagwan never forsakes such a Vaishnav and always protects him in the world. Only his birth and life as a human can be said as worthwhile. The divine magical powers come to such Vaishnavs, but they do not hanker for such powers. Serving Bhagwan is more important to them than acquiring or having such powers. Just as snakes are afraid of eagles, the all threatening Kaal (deity of death) is afraid of such Vaishnav devotees. No messengers of death ever trouble them, so much so that even the sinners are redeemed of their sins if they inadvertently offer clothes or food to such Vaishnav devotees. What indeed can be said of a person who serves them knowingly and reverently! O Muni! Holy rivers such as Ganga, which redeems the sinners by collecting their sins, want to touch the feet of Vaishnavs to discard such accumulated sins and to become chaste again. Such Ekantik devotees are rare in this world and therefore, I am very pleased at your Darshan. I shall narrate

Dharmadev said, "O Sage Sanak! After Atyantik Pralay (the total annihilation), nothing that was created from Maya remained. Only Bhagwan Purushottam, also known as Shree Krishna, Narayan and Vishnu remained surrounded by His Ekantik Mukta devotees (in His supreme abode). Bhagwan Purushottam, on His own initiative, woke up Prakruti and Purush that were merged in AksharBrahm, from their slumber. Innumerable universes emerged as a result of the union between Prakruti and Purush. Each universe had heaven, earth and hell populated by umpteen number of souls. As the souls engaged in their activities according to their past deeds, Bhagwan thought, 'How could the order in the universes be maintained? Who should take command of everybody? How could the Devtas led by Brahma and Indra, humans and other living beings be redeemed from their accumulated sins? How could their mind, intellect and hearts be purified to attain salvation? I must create Dharma (the ethical order), adhering to which everybody can fulfil their latent desires.' O Muni! Thinking this, Bhagwan glanced at Purush and I was born from his heart as He desired. Bhagwan, Who is beyond the scope of Maya, created all compassing knowledge in a form of a woman and made her my consort. Bhagwan turned towards me and said, 'O Dharma! Go and reside in the universes along with your wife! You are able to provide the order in the universes. I shall destroy anybody, from Devtas to humans, behaving contrary to the order established by you in a short time.' O Sanak Muni! I was pained at the thought of separation from Bhagwan and pleaded with Him, 'O Bhagwan! Please do not ask me to live away from You. My wife and I will not be able to bear Your separation."

Dharmadev continued, "O Muni! Bhagwan condoled me by saying, 'O Dharma! Do not despair. I shall take birth as your son to expand true knowledge in the world. People will attain salvation through this knowledge about Aatma and Parmatma. Not only that, I promise you, I will be born as your son whenever the universes will be re-

CHAPTER 30

Dharmadev said, "O Sage Sanak! I have attained such an exalted state due to constant reminiscence of Bhagwan Purushottam in my heart. Maya does not affect me due to His blessing. Despite living here in the middle of divinity and opulence, I was still yearning for company of Bhagwan. How could I be happy without His Darshan? I can see everything and everybody with my divine sight, yet I couldn't find anyone with the true knowledge about Bhagwan or about His true identity. Even I need the knowledge to sustain myself. I feel dejected without knowledge. How could people, still in the shackles of the never ending cycle of death and rebirth, acquire such knowledge themselves without the help of others? How can devotion and resultant detachment be transplanted in anyone's mind without this knowledge? When every living being is shackled in Maya, how can they acquire the knowledge about Bhagwan Who is beyond Maya? I prayed to Bhagwan to make my desire (for everyone to acquire this knowledge) true. O sage! I decided to undergo austerity to please Bhagwan and arrived in Bharat Khand (India) looking for a suitable place to undergo austerity. I found such a spot on the banks of River Devnadi (present day Sabarmati) and undertook austerity along with my wife to please Bhagwan. O Muni! Meditating upon Bhagwan Narayan in our hearts and mind, we performed austerity in the open. Bearing wind, sun, rain and cold, we ate leaves that fell from the trees. Sometimes in the absence of such leaves we made do with just water. After ten years (of Purush, not earth), we gave up food totally and meditated upon Bhagwan constantly."

Dharmadev continued, "O sage! Bhagwan Shree Hari was pleased with us and granted us His divine Darshan. He appeared with His consort in person to protect us, espouse the knowledge about his true identity, to propagate devotion and sprout detachment into hearts of His devotees. I was bewildered at the sudden turn of events as I was still in deep meditation. All I saw was a very brilliant radiance emerging from myself and my wife's body. The radiance was so luminous, that I was unable to see anything except the radiance. The radiance spread to all sides in no time and it felt like the radiance, equivalent to thousands of suns shining at the same time, pervaded the entire universe and beyond. I was unable to see heaven or hell due to the luminosity of the radiance even with my divine eyes. Brahma, Shiva and other Devtas arrived at our Ashram as they became aware of the imminent arrival of Bhagwan Shree Hari. Even they were surprised at the luminosity of the radiance. Brahma, Shiva, the other Devtas, Devis and myself realised that Bhagwan has indeed arrived yet blinded by the radiance, we started singing His Stuti."

Thus ends the 30th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 31

The Devtas prayed, "O Prabhu! Your luminosity is even brighter than great luminosity of Brahm that surrounds You. The darkness (or ignorance) of Maya cannot penetrate this luminosity, let alone touch You. Maya and Purush can visualise You only in their dream or mind, but are not able to see You directly in person. O Parameshwar! You control activities of all living beings by pervading their souls invisibly. O ocean of virtues! We repeatedly bow down to You. O Bhagwan! When even Virat or Brahma are dazzled and blinded by the radiance emanating from a single pore of Your body, how can us, mere Devtas be able to see anything in this radiance? Indeed, we cannot see anything, ourselves or our colleagues; closer to us or far away in this bright radiance. All we see is the radiance pervading the whole universe. O Shree Hari! Your luminosity is so intense that it penetrates our closed eyes. We are mesmerised and overwhelmed with this bright radiance. We are trying to pray to You but we cannot do that properly without being able to see You through this luminosity. O merciful Lord! Please withdraw Your radiance so that we can have Your Darshan." Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Merciful Bhagwan withdrew His radiance and we were able to see Him and have His Darshan, but what did we see! We saw Bhagwan in four distinct but identical forms in front of our eyes! This was on the early morning of Sunday, Chaitra Sud Ekadashi of the year called Prabhav in the first Yug of the first Manu called Swayambhu in an era called VarahKalp. Our and other pious persons' minds became lucid and happy; the waters of lakes and rivers became serene and crystal clear; the wind became fragrant and soft; the sky became clear of all clouds; the sacred fires ignited spontaneously in front of Rishis and the Brahmins and flames leapt up without any trace of smoke; various musical instruments started playing and flowers rained automatically from the heaven above; Gandharvas (celestial musicians) sang and Apsaras (celestial dancers) danced and earth became holy at the time of manifestation of Bhagwan. Indeed, the sound of music and singing surprised the people and they became aware of the appearance of Bhagwan in human form. Other Devtas and I, overwhelmed by the bliss at having Bhagwan's Darshan in our midst, had a closer Darshan from toe to head of their four identical forms."

Dharmadev continued, "O Sanak Muni! The toes of their divine feet were soft like a newly sprouted shoots; their knees were slightly raised and firmly round; their calves were very muscular; their thighs were like the trunks of banana plants and they wore Dhotis made from the bark of a tree around their waists which was tied with knotted strings. Their circular and deep set navels were surrounded by slightly plump stomachs with clearly visible three lines; their chests had a divine round insignia of 'Shree Vatsa'; their arms were strong and muscular; their uniform hands were long enough to touch their knees and the palms of their hands were pink like the petals of a lotus with slender and long fingers. Their throats were proportionately formed to support a smiling round face; the uniformly formed white twinkling teeth were encircled by bright pink and thin lips; their slightly raised nose was shaped like a sesame flower; Their cheeks sported slight dimples due to their smile; their widely set apart eyes were shaped like long petals of a freshly bloomed lotus covered with thick and arched eye brows, their triangular chins at the bottom and wide raised foreheads at top lent fitting finishing touches to their beautiful faces. Their curly hairs were dense, black and thin. Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo adorned their foreheads, throats and both upper arms. They wore fish shaped earring on their ears, a Yagnopavit across their torso and garlands of lotus seeds. Their hands had several divine insignias including Vajra, Chakra, fish and bow among others and were holding Kamandal and wooden staffs. The soles of their right feet had insignias of a Swastika, octagon, barley, Jambu (rose apple), Urdhvarekha (dividing lines), Vajra (a weapon), lotus, flag and goad and soles of their left feet had insignias of a fish, half moon, a cow hoof, bow, sky, triangle and Kalash (vessel to hold water). Their divine body emitted a divine radiance and they were in a garb of Brahamchari. The Devtas greeted Bhagwan with folded hands and bowed heads and prayed very humbly."

The Devtas prayed, "O Prabhu! The souls suffer great pains in this universe over numerous life times due to detrimental influences of Maya. O Bhagwan! You have appeared at Dharmadev's home to impart the knowledge about Your true identity and enlighten Your devotees on how they are able to remove their ignorance and Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Just as the Devtas were concluding their prayers, Vaasudev, Sankarshan, Pradhyumna and Aniruddha came to my home independently. They bowed down at the four Swarups of Bhagwan and stood along with the Devtas. The Devtas were very surprised that even Vaasudev and others showed their subservience to Bhagwan's four forms. O Muni! Brahma, due to his knowledge and intellect, introduced to me by naming the four Swarups of Bhagwan that had emerged from my own body. The first Swarup of benevolent and merciful Lord will become known as Bhagwan Narayan, as He will redeem and grant salvation to innumerable souls that are lost in the never ending cycle of death and rebirth due to their ignorance or past deeds. He will also be known as Lord Narayan as human race can attain Moksha only through Him. He will also be known as Lord Narayan as He rests on a bed made of the coiled serpent Shesh in the middle of an ocean at the end of Atyantik Pralay. As He is the sole controller of uncountable universes, Maya and Kaal, His second Swarup will be known as Bhagwan Nar. In the absence of all feminine features such as a raised chest (or breasts) and long hair, He will be known as Lord Nar (the complete male). Bhagwan Nar and Narayan will proceed to Badrikaashram to undergo severe austerity together for the benevolence of people of Bharat Khand (India). He will also be known as Lord Nar as He, through His potency, will guide the great kings on the path of righteousness. The third Swarup of Bhagwan will be known as Lord Hari as He will remove all sorrows of the Devtas and anyone coming under His shelter. The fourth Swarup will become known as Bhagwan Krishna as He will attract and merge within Him the brilliant radiance that has mesmerised and bewildered the Devtas and demons. O Muni! The other Devtas and I prepared for the worship of the four Swarups of Bhagwan after Brahma completed their introduction and naming. Suddenly a miracle occurred just as we were in the process of erecting a grand Mandap under Brahama's guidance."

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! A grand divine Mandap appeared at the place we were just about to erect a Mandap. The floor of this divine Mandap was laid with various coloured semi precious jewels; its top front part had two white swans which gave the impression that the Mandap was drawn by two swans; the fabric covering its roof was highly decorated with embroidery of multi coloured silk threads; its columns were made of gold and inlaid with pearls of many hues, buntings embroidered with white pears and leaves of mango were hung on its four sides and the bushes of mango, banana and beetle palms along with the golden water pots marked with Kumkum and rice were placed near each column. Other buntings and flags were hoisted and many tassels of various flowers hung from its four sides. O Muni! A highly decorated golden Sinhasan was placed in the middle of the Mandap. The sunlight reflected from the diamonds, pearls and other gems laid on the Sinhasan illuminated and shone the whole Mandap. Rice, Kumkum powder, sandalwood paste, musk, camphor and turmeric powder were sprinkled on the floor, and the columns of the Mandap as well as on the water pots and the bushes that were placed near the columns. The Mandap was surrounded by many lakes filled with pristine water with freshly bloomed lotuses and other scented aquatic flowers. The swans, flamingos and cranes were floating on water. Their banks were lined with trees of various varieties. A kitchen replete with ample provision of food items such as Ladoos and other sweets, milk, buttermilk, oil, Ghee, yoghurt, jaggery, floor and spices and a vast dining area had come up near the Mandap. O Muni! This divine kitchen had more provisions than the kitchen of the Devtas in heaven and every item of food was being prepared automatically with Bhagwan's blessings. Ghee, milk, yoghurt and buttermilk flowed freely in the kitchen. Mounds of grain, floor, pulses, jaggery, sugar, sweets such as Ladoos, Jalebi and Penda and savouries such as Sev and Ganthia dotted the floor of the kitchen. Many large pans full of spices such as cloves, cardamom, cinnamon, ginger and cumin; cooked vegetables such as aubergines, okras, potatoes and tomato and ready to eat Chapattis and Puris were placed at strategic places for ease of serving to the diners. Thousands of prepared beetle leaves and other after dinner mints and nuts were also ready. Indeed, any variety of food one could think of was there in a very large quantity. O Muni! Everybody present realised that the emergence of the divine Mandap and a vast quantity and variety of sumptuous food was made possible only by the grace and blessings of Bhagwan. None, not even the Devtas, were able to accomplish this much."

Dharmadev continued, "O Sanak Muni! Brahma, Shiv, other Devtas, Rishis and I gathered various artefacts for Bhagwan's worship. Just as we were approaching Bhagwan Narayan, we saw Him seated on the ornate Sinhasan in the middle of the divine Mandap. Nar Bhagwan was standing behind the Sinhasan holding a white umbrella with a bejewelled handle. Bhagwan Hari and Bhagwan Krishna were standing on either side of Bhagwan Narayan holding long bejewelled wooden staffs. Pradhyumna, Anirudhha, Sankarshan and Vaasudev were standing around Lord Narayan with hand held fans and were fanning Him. O Sanak Muni! With the latent desire of venerating Bhagwan Narayan, Brahma, Vishnu and Shiv sat reverently in front of Him after bowing down to Him and me."

Thus ends the 32nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Those who heard the sound of music and singing at the time of manifestation of Bhagwan Narayan, approached my home to participate in His veneration. Humans, the Devtas, the demons, the asps etc. came rushing from all directions holding veneration platters on their shoulders. The groups of Devis walked on foot for the first time in their haste to come to my home. They cursed their large breasts and buttocks as they were a hindrance in their pace. Their breast heaved and their anklets made noise as they rushed towards my home. The female asps transformed their lower bodies (of snakes) after using them to speed up their progress into divine human bodies. Brahmins, anticipating lavish meals, rushed towards my home without bothering to bring their wives and children. The groups of Rishis holding Kamandals in their hands rushed barefoot. The Sanyasins, wearing only bark loin clothes and an Urdhvapundra Tilak on their foreheads, walked in haste while chanting 'Narayan', 'Narayan'. The celibate female Sanyasins and other forest dwellers followed them trying to keep pace with them. The divine and celestial trees such as Parijat and Madar; rivers such as Ganga and Yamuna; mountains such as Himalayas and Sumeru and cows such as Surabhi and Kamdhenu rushed to my home taking their personal forms. O Sanak Muni! Despite the vast number of people turning up to celebrate the birth of Bhagwan Narayan, they were all accommodated under the shelter of the Mandap, which became larger and larger to accommodate everyone."

Dharmadev continued, "O Sanak Muni! Everyone arriving first had Darshan of Bhagwan Narayan and then took their seats befitting their status. The Devtas among the Devtas, old among olds, the children among children, females among females and Sanyasins sat among Sanyasins. Even among their own peer groups, the elders and scholars sat ahead of the young. Everybody's eyes and minds were focussed on Bhagwan Narayan. Bhagwan Narayan, surrounded by a vast number of people, appeared just as the moon appears in the midst of stars. The Gandharvas, after preparing and tuning their musical instruments such as the Veena and Mrudang, Apsaras, adorning themselves in their finest attire and ornaments such as anklets and bracelets and Brahmins expert in conducting rituals were eager to showcase their talent and were awaiting my arrival. Varun Devta brought holy water, Vayu Devta brought scented sandalwood paste, Indra (the king of Devtas) brought various scented flowers, Kuber brought new robes, the Ocean and Shesh brought various bejewelled ornaments, the Sun brought wicks and lamps, Daksha brought plates and bowls, the wives of Devtas brought food of different varieties, Rishis brought Kanthi and Malas of Tulsi, the mountains brought floor mats and cushions and others brought fruits and flowers for Bhagwan Narayan. As all the artefacts for venerations were readied, Bhagwan Vaasudev addressed us before we could start Bhagwan's worship."

Lord Vaasudev said, "O Devtas and others present here! Bhagwan Narayan is master of all of us. Everyone must chant His eight syllable hymn at all times. The various artefacts of veneration must be offered to Him using appropriate hymns. This applies to all devotees, Sakam (desiring worldly rewards) and Nishkaam (not wishing for any rewards). O Devtas! The most important hymn for veneration starts with 'Om'. The name of Bhagwan Nar precedes that of Bhagwan Narayan and name of Bhagwan Hari must precede that of Bhagwan Krishna. The whole hymn consists of seventeen letters - 'Om NarNarayan Hari Krishna, Mam Pahi Te Namah'. People of the first three Varna (Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya) should chant this hymns as it is whilst Shudras should chant this hymns without the first syllable - 'Om'. No one is capable of explaining the meaning of all seventeen letters of this hymn fully. The six organs of the body (head, temple (Choti), eyes, ears, heart and throat) should be touched (to purify the body) by chanting the eight syllable hymn (Om Narayanay Namah) followed by purifying the artefacts of worship by chanting the aforementioned hymn of seventeen letters. One should worship Bhagwan Narayan Who has manifested with Bhagwan Nar, Hari and Krishna, with these and other Vedic hymns. "

Thus ends the 33rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 34

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Guided properly by Lord Vaasudev and with our mind concentrated at the task at hand, we started the grand veneration of Bhagwan Narayan. Accompanied by the chanting of Vedic hymns by the seven great sages, Vishnu placed Bhagwan's feet on a gold platter, Shivji poured holy water from a jug, Brahma washed His feet and I provided Panchamrut to wash His divine feet. We carried out Bhagwan's Abhishek using milk, yoghurt, Ghee, honey, sugar and scented water accompanied with the chants of the Shree Purush Sukta and other portions of the Vedas by the Devtas and scholar Brahmins. After wiping Him dry, we gave Him golden robes, which Bhagwan Narayan accepted gracefully. He also kindly wore clothes given to Him by Indra Kuber, and Varun. Vishnu placed a crown inlaid with rubies and diamonds on His head. Shiva placed various ornaments that the Devtas had brought at appropriate places including bracelets and anklets. Vishnu made sure that the ornaments were placed properly by Shiva. There still remained a large surplus of clothes and ornaments at His feet. All the Devtas, led by Vishnu, venerated Bhagwan Nar, Hari, Krishna, Vaasudev, Pradhyumna, Anirudhha and Sankarshan in turn, whilst chanting various Vedic hymns including the seventeen lettered hymn mentioned earlier. Brahma adorned Bhagwan's foreheads with an Urdhvapundra Tilak of sandalwood paste. Brahma saw Indra, the king of Devtas, bringing many divine flowers from the gardens of heaven to offer to Bhagwan Narayan. Even he was pleasantly surprised to see many varieties and hues of divine lotuses, including one which bloomed in evenings, roses and jasmines. Brahma made garlands from these flowers and placed them around Bhagwan's neck while Vishnu prepared tassels of flowers and placed them on the sides of the coronet Bhagwan was wearing. As soon as the Devtas concluded the veneration, the vast number of people jostled to venerate the four Swarups of Bhagwan. Bhagwan patiently accepted the large quantity of various artefacts such as flowers, garlands and fruits offered by people. The Devtas offered Bhagwan incense when everybody had completed their venerations. Just as they were about to offer Naivedhya to Bhagwan Narayan, Bhagwan Shree Hari came forward and stopped them."

Bhagwan Hari said, "O Devtas! This is not the proper time to eat. One should engage in Snaan, Japa, Homa and meditation at this time - just after sunset. Anybody who sleeps, eats, reaps harvest or listens to small talk or gossip is a fool and indeed goes to hell. Conclude the remainder of the veneration and proceed for a bath and perform pious evening tasks. I will go for My bath soon in River Ganga and then, we will have dinner together."

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! We kept aside the food as advised by Bhagwan Shree Hari. As Brahma lit a camphor lamp for Aarti, I indicated the Gandharvas to sing and play music and Apsaras to dance to their tunes on my cue. The sound of various musical instruments, the anklets of Apsaras, the clapping of present congregation and shouts of 'Jay', 'Jay' filled the environs. The saying 'the sound beautifies the sky' became the reality. Standing in a semi circle in front of Bhagwan, Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva and the other Devtas in turn sang aloud 'Be victorious O son of Dharma!' O Sanak Muni! All the Devtas had flowers in their hands and waited for the music and Aarti to end. Let me recount the names of some of the leading Devtas present there. Vaasudev, Pradhyumna, Aniruddha, Sankarshan, Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva, eleven Rudras, Ashwinikumar twins, Pruthvi (earth), Vaayu (wind), Agni (fire), Varun, Indra, the sun, the moon, Yama, Pitris led by Agnishvata, thousands of sages including Narad, Vasishtha, Rhibhu, Hans, Aruni, Marichi, Atri etc. The musicians were eager to showcase their expertise to please Bhagwan, Who in return acknowledged their service by looking at them benevolently. The singers' throat arteries puffed-up due to strain yet they continued. Apsaras were turning and twisting their waists and tossing balls made of flowers. Bhagwan Narayan, pleased with them, asked them to stop. He asked Kuber (treasurer of Devtas) to gift them clothes and ornaments. The musicians, singers and dancers felt their lives totally fulfilled as they had an opportunity to please Bhagwan. They, silently but reverently, bowed down to Bhagwan with folded hands and lowered eyes. O Muni! We concluded our worship with His Pradakshina, Sastang Pranam and prayers with folded hands. We stood in front of Him with our eyes and minds totally focussed on Bhagwan. Almighty Bhagwan Narayan clad in divine golden robes and wearing many ornaments and flower garlands, took His seat on the divine Sinhasan placed on a high plinth in the middle of the Mandap."

CHAPTER 35

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Laxmi, Saraswati, Durga, Savitri, Shachi, Rati, Svaha, Svadha, Prabha, Sangna and many other Devis approached Bhagwan Narayan with folded hands to seek His permission to perform His veneration."

Bhagwan Narayan addressed them, "I have decided to undertake the vow of Brahamcharya for a long time. Therefore, any of the eight types of contact with a woman is proscribed. Listening to women accidentally or unintentionally is a definite deviation from the Brahamcharya Vrat. O Devtas! Kruchh (Chandrayan) Vrat is the only atonement of digression from Brahamcharya. I have decided to observe Brahamcharya to establish its supremacy and to set an example for other pious people to follow on the path of religion. Therefore, I shall not tolerate the touch of women at present. Brahamcharya Vrat helps Brahmins and Brahamcharis to attain whatever they desire. It is said in the Vaasudev Mahatmya that any knowledge imparted to his disciple by a guru who does not observe Brahamcharya, becomes futile and the guru and his disciple surely fall in hell after their death. Samadhi, which is the highest accomplishment, can only be attained after due observance of Brahamcharya. A wise person must forsake the contact with women and transgender in all eight ways.

Dhyan (meditation) is one of the important (and fifth) elements of Ashtang Yog. A Yogi must endeavour to understand the twelve things that help him in Dhyan on his way to achieve Samadhi (the last element of Ashtang Yog). The twelve are: a holy and serene place which is free from trouble caused by an evil king or thieves; control of intake of food (overindulgence) and movement; a disciple who understands him and obeys his edicts; storage (or supply) of enough food to survive; expertise in sitting postures (that helps him to maintain concentration); absence of greed, anger, ego, attachment, envy etc. vices; understanding every step of Yog and Samadhi; practice of keeping eyes focussed on a tip of nose (not looking around); keeping senses under control; forsaking lust, greed and anger from the mind; withdrawing five senses away from their normal (mundane) activities and realising the pain caused by birth, death, aging and sorrow. Understanding the finer points of the abovementioned twelve and gaining advantage from them, a Yogi should control his senses and mind with suitable arguments. He should acquire the true knowledge about his soul to sharpen his intellect. A Yogi who has his mind and intellect under his control indeed is redeemed from his sins accumulated over a number of his previous lives. This is the only way for one to become free from the cycle of death and rebirth; regardless of his efficiency or lack of knowledge of the Vedas or whether he has or not performed any Yagnas. If death comes before full accomplishment of Yog, he is able to continue the process in his next life before being liberated (going to Akshardham)."

Bhagwan continued, "O Devtas! He should give up the possessiveness towards his mortal body and consider his soul as his true and only identity to attain such an accomplishment or power of Samadhi. Before he is able to give up the possessiveness of his mortal body and able to slip into Samadhi, he needs to arrive at a few Dharnas (conjectures). I shall explain the seven among them that are the most important. (1) He should focus his mind on feet, calves, ankles and thighs and postulate that his body does not contain any portion of earth (as one of the five base elements that make up a mortal body) at all. With the power of mind over matter and enough will power, he does not feel the presence of these organs and he is able to achieve the objective of subtracting the portion of earth from his mortal body. This is said to be his victory over earth. (2) He should now make the presupposition that his thighs, anus and genitals are nothing but water that remains at the time of annihilation and imagine that no trace of Jal (water) exists within him. This is his victory over Jal. The earth submerges in water as it is its natural precursor. (3) He should now focus on the part of his body from his genitals to his heart and consider them to be the by products of Tej (fire). He should now win over Tej by imagining that Tej and these organs do not matter to his existence as a pure soul. (4) He should now concentrate upon the part of his body from the centre of his heart to the middle portion of his brows and imagine them to be originated from Vayu (wind), which his soul does not need for its independent existence. (5) He should now presume the rest of his body i.e. from his brows to the top of his scull have originated from Akash (sky or space). He should win over Akash just as he has won over the other elements. Just as in the process of Pralay, only Akash, which is uncontaminated and miniscule, exists and all other base elements have merged in their precursors. (6) Concentrating his mind in Akash, he should try to rise above Akash by thinking he is an independent soul and even the building blocks of his body had originated from Ahankar. (7) He should now take a final step and rise above Mahtatva from which his body and the entire universe has emerged. O Devtas! This is the only way a Yogi can overcome his possessiveness towards his body, his senses and intellect."

Bhagwan Narayan continued, "O Devtas! Let Me now tell you the accomplishment a Yogi achieves after triumphing over each of these seven elements. He is able to create people from his body just like Brahma after overcoming earth. He acquires the power of becoming invisible to all after conquering Jal. He becomes strong enough to move earth and anything on it just with his toe after surmounting Vayu. By prevailing Akash, one can become omnipresent just like Akash and appear and disappear independently. All these five accomplishments may be achieved by overcoming just one element, Ahankar. One becomes fully knowledgeable after conquering the intelligence. I told you the rewards of each of the seven accomplishments in short, however, a true Yogi considers these powers as an end in itself. He does not get entangled in these super natural powers as he realises that all powers may be destroyed by almighty Kaal (time). Such an accomplished Yogi becomes very radiant, satisfied and blissful due to the strength of his Brahamcharya Vrat. He is neither born at the start of a creation nor dies at the time of total annihilation. Indeed, he becomes truly independent."

Thus ends the 35th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 36

Bhagwan Narayan said, "O Devtas! One must endeavour to safeguard one's Brahamcharya Vrat at all costs for the reasons I have explained to you. Control of senses (and sensual organs) is the most useful tool in guarding Brahamcharya Vrat. Our sensual organs such as eyes and ears must be withdrawn from their respective subjects such as sight and sound to stop the mind meandering in sensual pleasures. Performing great Yagnas such as Ashvamedh, undergoing harsh austerities or giving vast amounts of wealth in charity are futile without one's senses being under control. A man's aura enhances, his grave sins such as killing of a Brahmin are negated and his fear of death vanishes if he keeps his senses under control. According to the Mokshdharma, only such a person can sleep, wake and move about blissfully and remain happy at all times. Otherwise, such a person is a danger to the society just as demons are. Therefore, I have granted permission to the kings to punish such persons.

The sincere observation of ethics of one's Ashram and Varna are rewarding to the people whose senses are under their control. The control of senses grants one total purity. O Devtas! I shall now tell you the traits of such a person whose senses are under his control. He has full trust in his guru; he has forsaken greed, anger, fear, ego, attachment towards mundane objects, indulgence of taste; he has become immune to praise and criticism and happiness and sorrow; he is truthful, honest, pious, happy, patient, soft spoken and compassionate towards all; his truthfulness is not harmful to anybody; he does not indulge in gossip; he has no enmity towards anyone and does not criticise or level false allegations against anyone. Mokshdharma mentions these same traits in a person whose senses are under his control. O Devtas! For this reason I have decided to guard my Brahamcharya Vrat by declining the request of worship by female deities. They should venerate Bhagwan Nar, Hari and Krishna instead."

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! My wife Ahinsa and I were aghast to hear this. We were too stunned to speak for some time. When we regained our consciousness, I said to Bhagwan Narayan, 'O Narayan! O merciful! You have incarnated to please us. How could You talk about Naisthik Brahamcharya Vrat! You appear totally detached from us as if You have decided to leave us. How could You leave us so soon? It can't be right! Why have You decided to observe Naisthik Brahamcharya Vrat? Why are You so detached from all of us? How can You think of leaving us without satisfying our desires and dreams? Even the Vedas command that a man must become free from the debts towards Devtas and parents before death. Furthermore, how can You think of not becoming a Grahastha (householder) knowing that a householder helps sustain Brahmins and Brahamcharis? How can You even think of forsaking Grahastha Ashram when it is extolled as the best among all Ashrams? One has to pass through all four Ashrams in order to attain the ultimate bliss. 'O Sanak Muni, Bhagwan Narayan replied profoundly. "

Bhagwan Shree Narayan said, "O father! O mother! Listen to Me carefully. Whatever I say will be conforming to the Vedas, Dharma and natural justice. Both, Grahastha and Tyag (renunciation) Ashrams have their merits and limitations. Grahastha Ashram is suitable to people who do not have apathy towards sensual desires due to his lack of knowledge (temporary or fleeting nature of all pleasures). He should not renounce the world as he has not developed deep detachment and his half hearted renunciation brings nothing but sorrow to him and others around him. He does not derive any happiness that is due only as a result of renunciation. Re indulgence in the senses after the renunciation is like licking vomit. How can one derive any pleasure by such a despicable act? It is for this reason only that the Vedas extol Grahastha Ashram. However, for an enlightened person who has a natural apathy towards mundane pleasures, renunciation is the best option for him. He becomes free from the debts of men, Devtas and parents as soon as he develops deep detachment towards the world. He becomes eligible for Tyag Ashram (renunciation) at the time of ascent of his Vairagya (detachment). O father! As I have a profound detachment from the world, I consider Myself not suitable for Grahastha Ashram. I shall now tell you the reasons behind My deep detachment."

Thus ends the 36th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Narayan said, "O father Dharmadev! I consider the pleasures of a householder are miniscule. As the desires of a householder never abates, the stream of never ending desires causes nothing but pain to him. Seeing him singed by the vices of anger and greed, I have developed immense dislike for the mundane pleasures of senses. Even the pleasures of the heavens above are fleeting. The period of thirty days of earth is equivalent to a day of Pitrilok (abode of dead ancestors). Thirty such long days make one month and twelve months make one year of Pitrilok. Pitrilok itself and all its physical pleasures are destroyed at the end of one hundred years. Hundred earth years make one day of Indra, the king of heaven and the Devtas. Thirty such long days make one month and twelve months make one year of Indralok (heaven). The heaven, its opulence and residents are destroyed after the passage of one hundred heavenly years. I have no desire of such temporary pleasures of Pitrilok and Indralok. The day of Vairajpurush seems very long as 24,000,000 solar years make his one day. Even the abode of Vairajpurush is destroyed after his one hundred years. I have become aloof even from such pleasures. I am not even interested in status, power and pleasures beyond the scope of Vairajpurush. The day of HiranyaGarbh is equivalent to the lifespan of Vairaj. Calculate the period of his months and years. Even he and his abode are destroyed at the end of his one hundred years. I am not interested in his pleasures either. O father! The day of Avyakrut Purush is equivalent of one hundred years of Hiranyagarbh. After the passage of time equivalent to one hundred years of Avyakrut Purush, he submerges into impure Maya. The day of impure Maya is equivalent to one hundred years of Avyakrut Purush and after the passage of one hundred such years; impure Maya submerges into Sudhha Prakruti (pure Maya). A day of pure Maya is as long as one hundred years of impure Maya. Pure Maya in turn submerges into Purush. Just as the earth's solar year is determined by its orbit around sun, the years of Vairajpurush, Hiranyagarbh etc. are determined by their abode's movement around the sun. The progressive length of a year become greater as one travels upwards. However long the lifespan of Maya seems, it is indeed destroyed one day. Therefore, I am not taken in by their pleasures. My renunciation is credible. Furthermore, I am Naisthik Brahamchari since time immemorial. My Brahamcharya Vrat is eternal. I observe Naisthik Brahamcharya Vrat in every Kalp to set an example to others. O father! You are getting attached to My incarnation due to your ignorance as you do not know all My previous incarnations. I have not forsaken Brahamcharya Vrat in the past and I do not intend to do it now. Only a person observing Naisthik Brahamcharya Vrat after considering the whole universe as subject to annihilation attains Akshardham -My supreme abode. Naisthik Brahamcharya is the most important tool to attain Moksha (salvation), and the eternal bliss of Akshardham can only be attained through Brahamcharya. Therefore, O father! Permit Me to leave to undertake austerity."

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Our illusion and ignorance vanished after hearing Narayan Bhagwan's sermon. Narayan Bhagwan asked Bhagwan Nar, Hari and Krishna to let the female deities worship them. Listening immediately to Lord Narayan, Bhagwan Nar said, 'Hold on! Nar and Narayan cannot be separated. Nar always follow Narayan. Whatever Narayan does, Nar emulates.' Just as Bhagwan Hari and Krishna were about to stop female deities offering their worship, Bhagwan Narayan asked them to relent. Understanding the latent desire of Bhagwan Narayan, Lord Hari and Krishna permitted deities to worship them. The female deities, aware of Lord Narayan's wish, happily performed elaborate worship of Lord Hari and Krishna with camphor, Kumkum, sandalwood paste etc. They offered many expensive golden robes, ornaments such as bracelets and earrings and many flower garlands. The devout female deities worshipped Vaasudev, Pradhyumna, Anirudhha and Sankarshan with the same fervour and devotion. At the conclusion of their worship, they offered Aarti to all Swarups of Bhagwan. O Muni! They bowed down at the feet of Bhagwan Nar and Narayan from a distance. They felt their lives fully fulfilled at such a splendid opportunity."

Thus ends the 37th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 38

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Bhagwan Narayan discarded His expensive robes and ornaments and gifted them to the Brahmins and His coronet to Indra, the king of the Devtas. Bhagwan Nar followed suit and both of them were now attired in the garb of a Brahamchari as earlier. However, Lord Narayan stopped Bhagwan Hari and Krishna from following in His footsteps and discarding their robes and ornaments as He wanted them to remain as they were so that the people at large could offer their venerations to these forms. Narayan Bhagwan asked me to prepare food for everybody and went to the banks of River Devnadi to perform His evening routine. Bhagwan Nar, Hari, Krishna, Indra and other Devtas and Rishis accompanied Him to the banks of the river. I requested Laxmiji and other female deities to prepare various items of food which they accomplished immediately with their magical powers. O Muni! Sage Narad followed Bhagwan Narayan and has remained with Him since then for His pleasure. As Bhagwan Narayan entered the waters of River Devnadi, River Ganga and the other rivers felt disappointed at the lost opportunity. They flew skyward and took the forms of clouds for His Darshan. Lord Narayan remembered His favourite river as soon as He entered the waters and looked around for her. He asked River Abhramati (another name of River Ganga, meaning one which clears the intelligence) to come near Him. River Ganga and other rivers duly obliged and merged into the waters of River Devmati. River Devnadi became known as Sabhramati (with Abhramati) and has since then been able to wash away grave sins such as a murder of a Brahmin. (The river is now known as Sabarmati). O Muni! All the rivers, with the result of contact with Bhagwan, formed themselves as high waves around Him as if they wanted to bathe Him. Lord Nar, Hari, Krishna, the Devtas and sages sprinkled water onto each other and on Bhagwan Narayan. After enjoying themselves for a while, Bhagwan Narayan and others offered their veneration to Varun (Devta of water) and emerged from the waters and returned to my home after concluding their evening Sandhya and Japa."

Dharmadev continued, "O Sanak Muni! Lord Vaasudev asked everybody to sit in rows for their dinner as the Devtas and their wives prepared to serve food to them. Thousands of Bajoths were placed under the shimmering Mandap as if by a miracle. A slightly higher Bajoth was laid for Bhagwan Narayan in the middle of other Bajoths for the Devtas and Brahmins. Everybody took their seats as guided by Lord Vaasudev. Bhagwan Narayan asked for the expensive golden clothes to be given to the Rishis and Brahmins as a replacement for their tattered old clothes. He was very pleased with the Rishis as they all declined to accept expensive robes lest they deviate from the Vrat of not amassing anything. Nonetheless, the Brahmins accepted new clothes as suggested by Bhagwan. Lord Narayan venerated golden attired Brahmins with incense, rice and garlands in accompaniment of the hymns from Purush Sukta before taking up His seat for dinner. Everybody under the Mandap had their sights fixed on Bhagwan Narayan. O Muni! The light shining from the jewels of the ceiling and columns of the Mandap enhanced the aura of Brahmins, Rishis and Devtas so much that it became difficult to distinguish them from each other (everybody looked equally radiant)."

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Just as everybody had taken their seats, the Devtas and Devis emerged from the kitchen with bowls and platters full of various items of food. None thought that serving people beneath their social standings may lessen their social status. They were just happy to get an opportunity to serve me and Bhagwan Narayan. Rather than consider it as chore, they thought of this as a humble service to Bhagwan. The Devtas and Devis placed golden dishes and small bowls in front of every diner. Many Brahmins, seeing the shiny golden plates for the first time, were taken aback with surprise. Vishnu placed a large golden plate and sixty four small goblets in front of Bhagwan Narayan. Many of the Brahmins were captivated with the smell of various types of Ladoos coming from the kitchen. They became restless to start eating and called for supervisors from the kitchen to speed up the serving. Before the supervisors could come to them, many items of food such as Shiro, Ladoos and Jalebi were served in their plates. Devis, attired in white long Saris embroidered with pearls which covered their ample bosoms fully, moved swiftly between the rows. They served food quickly without looking at the diners. O Muni! The surprising thing was that though there were many items of food, none of them got mixed with each other. Rice remained in the middle, various chutneys remained at the front, beans remained on the left while vegetable remained on the right side of the plates. Thirty types of Ladoos, thirty types of Shiro, four types of milk pudding, five hundred types of vegetables, sixty four types of drinks and various fruits were served to all the diners."

Dharmadev continued, "O Muni! I indicated to them with my hands to start eating when every variety of food was served to everyone. Bhagwan Narayan, to delight the diners sitting close to Him, kept asking the names of various items. Even Brahma failed to identify each item correctly which caused a loud smirk among the surrounding diners. He, knowing that Ghee is very dear to the Brahmins, made sure that they were served milk pudding and Ghee repeatedly until they could eat no more. The meal was sumptuous and the varieties were so numerous, that even Devtas were surprised at its lavishness and could identify only about a quarter of the items. The Rishis were not able to distinguish various tastes, yet praised the food. Looking at the varieties of Ladoos, some of them even asked among themselves what sort of fruits are they. As these Ladoos were of different colours, some of them opined them to be lemons and limes in reply. Some of them did not eat 'Sutarfeni' as it appeared as an entangled web of fine cotton threads. The Brahmins, in contrast, extolled the white sweet Ladoos laced with lots of Ghee and ate them merrily. The plentiful amount of ground mustard in a few varieties of food singed some of the diners' tongues which spread a thinly disguised mirth among the others. I walked among the diners and advised them to eat slowly. Sage Narad played his Veena in background to please Shree Narayan Bhagwan while extolling his fortune of having the Darshan of Bhagwan Narayan dining with Bhagwan Nar, Hari and Krishna; the Devtas and Rishis."

Dharmadev continued, "O Sanak Muni! The Devtas put on their upper garments after washing their hands. As thousands of Brahmins were unable to get up due to their overindulgence, Lord Vaasudev asked the Devtas to help them get up. Lord Vaasudev told the Brahmins when everyone had finished their dinner, "O Brahmins! Rest here for a while. There are mounds of expensive cloths and gold around here. Dharmadev has asked you to take whatever you want from them before you depart from here tomorrow morning. Nobody must depart empty handed.' O Muni! Lord Vaasudev said the same to other alms seekers. As the Brahmins prepared to retire for the night, all Devtas assembled in front of Bhagwan Narayan sitting on an ornate and divine Sinhasan some distance away. All of our sights were fixed on His benevolently smiling face while His loving and kind eyes spanned the whole assembly."

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! We were sitting in front of Bhagwan Shree Narayan with our hands folded and in anticipation of the divine sermon or blessings. He did not disappoint. He addressed the congregation, through me and my wife Ahinsa."

Bhagwan Narayan said, "O father! Please be patient! We are going to Badrikaashram to undergo austerity for the benevolence of mankind. O mother! Consider yourself as an eternal soul, distinct from three types of mortal body and meditate upon Me. All of you, men and women, will gain eternal bliss only when you realise yourself as an eternal soul distinct from the mortal body, senses, mind and intelligence. Therefore, refrain gradually from all types of attachments and concentrate your mind in Me to attain divine bliss. One, even if he happens to be great scholar of the scriptures, can never be happy until the possessiveness towards one's body and its relatives is forsaken. O father! I, therefore, consider renunciation the best option for a man. You can never overcome the pit of sorrows until you are able to develop detachment towards your body. Attaining peace and harmony without prerequisite detachment is totally futile. One may attain just a semblance of peace without renunciation of body, wife and children which ultimately leads to the sorrows. Indeed, the central message of the Vedas and other scriptures are the same - one needs to develop detachment for eternal peace and happiness. Wealth spent in pursuance of Vedic rituals such as Yagnas is really meant to develop detachment towards wealth. Similarly Vrats such as Chandrayan are the reasons behind the development of detachment towards his body, wife and other relatives and materialistic possessions and pleasures. The Vedas and other scripture say that detachment from one's body and its relatives is the best means for eternal bliss; therefore, the wise people must endeavour to develop renunciation. Realising that a soul is a distinct entity from anything that has emerged from Prakruti (including mortal body), wise people meditate upon Me."

Bhagwan Narayan continued, "O father! The philosophy of Sankhya, as espoused by Kapil Muni and other Rishis, define variously the numbers of distinct entities. One opinion says there are twenty eight entities namely; Purush, Prakruti, Maya, Mahatatva, Ahankar (ego), Satva, Raja, Tama, Pruthvi (earth), Jal (water), Tej (fire), Vayu (wind), Akash (sky), Sabda (sound), Sparsh (touch), Roop (sight), Ras (taste), Gandh (smell), Ksotra (ears), Tvak (skin), Netra (eyes), Rasna (tongue), Ghran (nose), Vak (mouth), Pani (hands), Paad (feet), Payu (anus) and Upastha (genitals). Some opine that there are twenty six entities namely; Prakruti, Mahatatva, Ahankar, five base elements (earth, water etc.), five senses (sound, sight etc.), five sensory organs (eyes, ears etc.) five functional organs (hands, feet etc.) and mind makes twenty four entities, while a soul is considered the twenty fifth. Parmatma - Bhagwan - who enlighten the ignorant soul is deemed the twenty sixth. Others consider twenty five entities. They consider the soul and Parmatma as indivisible and indistinct as they both are luminous and eternal. The other twenty four entities are common in these two views. Yet others consider twenty four entities where a soul and mind are considered one and the same. Some consider the number of entities variously as seventeen (five base elements, five senses, five sensory organs, mind and soul), sixteen (where mind and souls is considered one), thirteen (five base elements, five senses, mind, soul and Bhagwan), eleven (five base elements, five senses and soul), nine (Mahatatva, Ahankar, Prakruti, Purush and five senses), seven (five base elements, soul and Parmatma) or six (five base elements and indistinct soul and Parmatma). Accepting any of these various (and seemingly contradictory) views, one must try to understand the true identity of soul (distinct from body) and Narayan. The central teaching of Sankhya philosophy is that one's true identity is beyond and distinct from three types of body; Sthul, Sukshma and Karan - gross, sub conscious and causal."

Bhagwan Narayan continued, "O father! Consider yourself as distinct from your senses and three types of body and its relations and worship Me to attain happiness. This place (banks of River Sabarmati), where you had undergone austerity, is very auspicious. The rewards of austerities performed here are multiplied by many folds. Many Devtas and I have bathed in this river and as result, it has become very sacred. Anyone bathing in this river will have his sins accumulated over past many lives washed away. From now on this place will become famous as Narayan Ghat and anyone performing Shraddh here will earn the same rewards as performing Shraddh on banks of River Ganga. I will grant My Darshan in a very short time to whoever meditates upon Me here. O sinless! There shall come a time in the future again when you and I will reside here together. However, please proceed to Vishnupur, your abode on the north banks of Kshirsagar and live happily. I shall forever protect you from evils."

Dharmadev said, "O Sanak Muni! Bhagwan Narayan got up to leave after soothing my mind with His divine sermon. He asked Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva and other Devtas to return to their respective abodes. He stopped Bhagwan Hari and Krishna from accompanying Him and for the benevolence of mankind, advised them individually. 'O Hari! Please proceed to Vainkunth with Laxmiji. O Krishna! Please go and make Your home at Golok. O Vaasudev! Please proceed to Shwetdweep and O Sankarshan! You proceed to the bottom of earth to hold it steady. O Pradhyumna! Protect and sustain the whole universe by residing on Lokalok Mountain. O Aniruddha! Dwell as a soul of Virat and help in the process of creation.' O Muni! Bhagwan Nar and Narayan, dressed as Naisthik Brahamcharis and ever eager to undergo severe austerities, departed for Badrikaashram after assigning the various benevolent tasks. We were very depressed, but nonetheless, sprinkled flowers as a good portent on the path Bhagwan Nar and Narayan walked. Their radiant and round faces had a serene smile; their eyes were large and beautiful like petals of a lotus, their hands were long enough to reach their knees; their teeth were uniformly set and sparkling white, their large chest were adorned with the insignia of 'Shree Vatsa'; their wide foreheads and beautiful ears lent their faces an extra splendour and their bodies emanated luminous radiance like the sun or moon. Holding Kamandalus in their hands, Bhagwan Nar and Narayan walked together, flanked by many people eager for their Darshan. I, other Devtas, Gandharva and sages led by Narad walked behind Him to bid Him farewell. Bhagwan Narayan stopped us after a while and asked us to turn back. He went to Badrikaashram and lived under a berry tree called 'Vishala' where Bhagwan Nar has remained in His service ever since. As others returned to their respective homes and hermits, I came here. O Muni! Whoever listens to this Katha of birth (manifestation) of Lord Narayan will have all his sins washed away."

Lord Swaminarayan said, "O Anandanand swami! Sanak Muni bowed down to Dharmadev and went to Shwetdweep for Darshan of Lord Vaasudev. I just told you how Bhagwan Narayan manifested on earth the first time. O devotees! Now I shall tell you the Katha of how Bhagwan Narayan took birth the second time."

Thus ends the 40th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 41

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! Many aeons later in a Manvantar named Chakshus, life and civilisation was totally destroyed from the world due to Sage Durvasha's curse. With the total lapse of religion from the face of the earth, there was nothing left for Bhagwan Narayan to protect, He left Badrikaashram and returned to His Brahampur. Much time later and with the fresh beginning of life on earth, Dharmadev and his wife Ahinsa undertook severe austerity in Shwetdweep for the benevolence of mankind. Bhagwan Narayan granted him His divine Darshan after the period of twelve years and granted him a boon to incarnate as his son to protect the pious. Dharmadev was pleasantly surprised at the turn of events and awaited for the prophecy of Bhagwan's birth to become reality. After some time, Bhagwan Narayan emerged from the womb of Murti, a daughter of Daksha Prajapati, and took the form of a sixteen year old celibate. Apsaras danced to the tune of divine musical instruments. O Muni! It was very early morning of the Purnima of Falgun month of Prabhav century in a Manvantar called Vaivasta in Satya Yug, when the Sun was in Uttar Falguni constellation. The Devtas, their consorts, Rishis, Gandharvas, Apsaras and others rushed towards the hermits of Dharmadev. The Devtas built a swing and cradle of flowers at the behest of Dharmadev. The supporting strings of the cradle were entwined with scented flowers and mango leaves and the trunks of banana plants were placed around the swing. Dharmadev and Murtidevi lifted young Narayan Bhagwan and placed Him on the cradle of the swing. The great sages ritualistically venerated Lord NarNarayan with sandalwood

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Anandanand Muni! Dharmadev and Murtidevi stood on either side of the swing and rocked young Lord NarNarayan gently while the Devtas showered flowers on Him. The environs reverberated with shouts of 'Jay' 'Jay' accompanied by musical instruments and chants of Vedic hymns. The Devtas and Bhagwan Shree Hari showered Gulal (red coloured powder) on each other. Sometime later the Devtas reverentially worshipped Bhagwan with heavenly flowers and fruits and gifted Him with many expensive gold and jewelled ornaments. Men followed suit and worshipped Him with sandalwood paste and flowers and gifted Him with fine robes and clothes. The Devis, realising His Brahamcharya Vrat, worshipped Him from a distance with flowers and fruits. Bhagwan Narayan, keeping nothing for Himself, gave away robes and ornaments to the Brahmins immediately on the conclusion of worship. Bhagwan NarNarayan said to Dharmadev, 'O father! I have manifested to protect you and others. However, I shall proceed to Badrikaashram as austerity is very dear to Me. You remain here and meditate upon and venerate Me.' Dharmadev replied, 'O Bhagwan! I would like to remain close to You. Please grant me the permission to accompany You to Badrikaashram.' Bhagwan Narayan answered, 'O Father! I shall indeed return here when the evil will ascend and rule over pious. However, you and mother Murti may accompany Me as you wish. We shall return once again on earth in Kali Yug to protect My devotees from demonic and irreligious people.' O Muni! Dharmadev sent all the Devtas and others to their respective abodes and he, along with his wife accompanied Lord Narayan and Nar to Badrikaashram. Dharmadev established a separate hermitage at some distance away at DevPrayag at the union of Rivers Bhagirathi Ganga and Alaknanda."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Muni! When Lord Krishna returned to His supreme abode at the onset of Kali Yug, vices such as greed, anger, lust and other irreligiosities ascended and became prevalent in the world. As the pious and devotees suffered at the hands of demonic persons, Bhagwan Shree Narayan decided to come on the banks of River Sabhramati. Goddess Laxmiji, at the behest of her husband Lord Narayan, asked Devi Bhadrakali, 'O Devi! Please go and establish a large city on the banks of River Sabhramati. Lord Narayan and His parents shall make their home there. You are dear to Bhagwan as you have accomplished many of His tasks in the past. Gopis united with Bhagwan due to your blessings.' Getting another chance to serve Bhagwan Narayan, Bhadrakali established the city of Shrinagar (another name of Amdavad). She remained there and became the ruling deity of this city. Lord NarNarayan, along with His father Dharmadev, came and lived invisibly on the banks of River Sabhramati. O Muni! Urged by Bhagwan Narayan Himself, the pious devotees of Amdavad built this temple where I established the idols of Bhagwan Nar and Narayan. You must never visualise or think these idols as mere statues as these idols are Bhagwan NarNarayan Himself. O Anandanand swami! I told you how Bhagwan NarNarayan manifested in this world at His own independent will. Whoever listens to this Katha and greatness of this city of Shrinagar shall have their sins washed away and will have their belief in Bhagwan NarNarayan strengthened."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Anandanand swami, other saints and devotees were very pleased hearing the Katha of Bhagwan Narayan's manifestations. "

Thus ends the 41st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 42

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari fed thousands of Brahmins on the occasion of inauguration of the temple at Amdavad and gifted them generously. The lanes of Amdavad, though wide, were teeming with devotees from afar places and the air reverberated with the sound of various musical instruments. Shree Hari returned to the tent city on the banks of Lake Kankaria in the evening and had His dinner at His elder brother Rampratapji's place after concluding His evening Sandhya and bath. He wished to arrange a special feast for the Brahmins of Amdavad and nearby regions the next day. With His blessings, the devotees collected vast quantitie of grains, sugar, oil, ghee and other items needed to feed the mass of people. The feast was cooked and thousands of Brahmins were fed the same day on the banks of Kankaria. The Brahmins and their wives enjoyed this special festival organised by Bhagwan Shree Hari, where He gifted them much wealth as well. The people of Amdavad and other regions were greatly surprised at His ability to gather so much ration and cook vast quantity of food in such a short time to feed thousands of Brahmins. They were awestruck and heaped praise on Him and His devotees."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari prepared to offer ritualistic veneration to Lord NarNarayan the next day, the Panchmi. He arranged the preparation of four metal faced insignias depicting conch, disc, mace and lotus, the four items held by Lord NarNarayan in His hands. Addressing them in an assembly, He urged all devotees to have these four insignias hot stamped on both their arms and added that any devotee, male or female, having their arms hot stamped with these insignias will never have to enter hell as Bhagwan will indeed take them straight to His supreme abode."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Devotees spent the next day having their arms hot stamped with the insignias as decreed by Swaminarayan Bhagwan. Shree Hari held a large assembly on Saptami. He sat on an ornate Sinhasan on a raised dais in the middle of the temple complex and all devotees sat around Him according to the tradition of the Sampraday. Ramabhai, the king of Muli, had also come to participate in the festival. He pleaded with Shree Narayanmuni, 'O Bhagwan! Please consider my request. You have incarnated just to fulfil the desires of Your devotees. I, my family, my ministers and the people of Muli wish to have a temple built in our city. Please grant Your permission and blessing. We will complete the temple in a very short time with Your grace.' O king! Narayanmuni, the refuge of all devotees, consented to the request of Ramabhai and other devotees of Muli and asked Brahmanand swami seated in front of Him, 'O Brahm Muni! The town of Muli is very dear to Me. I would like you to go to Muli and construct a temple according to the traditional Vedic architecture.' Brahmanand swami got up immediately to proceed to Muli with Ramabhai. King Ramabhai and other devotees accompanying him bowed down to Shree Hari once again and sought His permission to leave."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Ramabhai and other devotees departed for Muli along with Brahmanand swami. The devotees of Muli and surrounding regions donated a lot of wealth for the construction of the temple. They and skilled sculptors helped in the construction of the temple under the expert guidance of Brahmanand swami. Shree Hari along with saints left Amdavad for Gadhpur on Falgun Sud Ashtami. He stopped numerous devotees of Amdavad following Him and asked them to return back to Amdavad. Thousands of devotees who could not attend the festivities at Amdavad had gathered at Gadhpur for His divine Darshan and for the festival of Fuldolotsav. O king! Jaya, Lalita and other female devotees satiated their hearts and eyes with His Darshan after a long absence."

Thus ends the 42nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 43

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Gangaram Mall, Sunderji Suthar and other leading devotees of Bhuj, who had reached Gadhpur before Shree Hari's arrival from Amdavad, were very pleased with His Darshan. Uttam Khachar made suitable arrangement for their stay at Gadhpur. After the conclusion of the grand celebration to mark the festival of Fuldolotsav, Gangaram bowed down to Shree Hari and requested, 'O Bhagwan! Please consent to construct a temple at Bhuj. We assure You that we will provide all the assistance for the early construction of the temple. We, the devotees of Bhuj are very eager to have Your temple established in our city. Please fulfil our desires.' O king! This request to build a temple by the devotees of Bhuj was expressed with Shree Hari's own inspiration. He consented immediately and asked Vaishnavanand swami to proceed to Bhuj with the devotees to start the construction of temple soon. He advised swami to inform Him when the temple is ready so that He can personally come and establish the Murti of Shree NarNarayan Dev. Vaishnavanand swami bowed down to Shree Hari and sought His blessing before leaving for Bhuj with delighted devotees."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Vaishnavanad swami with the help of expert sculptors and the devotees of Bhuj had the temple constructed in one year. While in Gadhpur, Shree Hari engrossed Himself in the Katha of the Mahabharat. The Katha started on Chaitra Sud Beej and concluded on Chaitra Sud Navami of the next year. Bhagwan Shree Hari satiated Brahmins with ample monetary rewards at the conclusion of the Katha and held a special feast for them the next day. Lord Swaminarayan celebrated Vimla Ekadashi with much fanfare. A messenger from Bhuj arrived on Purnima of the same month and relayed Vaishnavanand swami's message, 'O Bhagwan Shree Hari! The temple is constructed and ready at Bhuj. Vaishnavanand swami has invited You to come and consecrate the temple and establish the Murti of NarNarayan Dev as soon as possible.' O king! Shree Hari immediately consulted an expert astrologer to seek the most auspicious day for the consecration of the temple and chose the forthcoming Vaishakh Sud Panchmi. He advised Uttam Khachar to remain at Gadhpur and departed for Bhuj on Chaitra Vad Beej. Accompanied by numerous saints and devotees and halting for night at towns en route, Shree Hari reached Bhuj on Chaitra Vad Teras. The devotees of Bhuj, with tears of joy rolling from their eyes, rushed forward to welcome their Ishtadev, Lord Swaminarayan. Shree Hari took up residence in a house near the newly built temple and devotees took upon themselves to serve Him and the saints. They arranged for all articles and artefacts necessary in the rituals of consecration."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari celebrated the occasion of the establishment of Shree NarNarayan Dev's Murti (on Vaishakh Sud Panchmi of Samvat 1879) as grandly and as passionately as He had done earlier at Amdavad. A Vedic Yagna accompanying the consecration of the temple was done on such a grand scale that even the kings could not think of matching it. A sumptuous feast was laid for thousands of Brahmins, who were also given generous alms including money. Two days later, on Saptami, Shree Hari guided Vaishnavanand swami to carry out elaborate ritualistic worship of Lord NarNarayan Dev as per Udhhav Sampraday to establish the correct procedure. O king! Shree Hari visited different devotees' homes everyday to accept their veneration and to grant them His divine Darshan during His stay at Bhuj. This Leela delighted His numerous devotees."

CHAPTER 44

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Just as Shree Hari was thinking of returning to Gadhpur, a messenger from Muli reached Bhuj. After bowing down to Shree Hari's feet, he gave Him a letter from Ramabhai. Shreeji Maharaj asked Sukanand swami to read the letter aloud in presence of saints and devotees. Shree Hari said to Muktanand swami, 'O saints! Ramabhai has invited Me to consecrate the newly build temple and install idols of Lord Krishna at Muli.' He turned to Mayaram Bhatt and said, 'O Brahmin! I would like to install Murtis in this month itself. You are an expert in astrology. Look for an auspicious date for the installation of idols at Muli.' O king! Mayaram Bhatt consulted his almanac and replied, 'O Bhagwan! The forthcoming Baras (of Vaishakh) is a very auspicious day to perform religious rites. Furthermore, tomorrow is an auspicious day to commence journey.' Shree Hari asked saints, Parshads and devotees to be ready to depart for Muli the next morning. He arranged for the messenger to have lunch after asking him to relay this message to Ramabhai, 'Vaishakh Sud Baras is fixed for consecration of the Muli temple. I shall reach Muli a day early with saints and devotees.' Ramabhai and leading devotees started collecting artefacts needed for the event when he received Shree Hari's message. Brahmanand swami unpacked the Murtis and placed them in sanctum sanctorum while awaiting Shree Hari's arrival with impatience."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! Surrounded by saints, Parshads and many devotees, Bhagwan Shree Hari left Bhuj in the morning of Vaishakh Sud Astami. Delighting His devotees of the villages en route with His divine Darshan, Bhagwan Narayanmuni reached Muli at the evening of Ekadashi. On hearing His arrival, Ramabhai and other devotees of Muli rushed to the outskirt of town to receive Him with fanfare. Ramabhai made arrangements for Shree Hari and leading saints in his palace and other accompanying devotees in suitable homes of local residents. Everyone was served fruits for dinner. Shree Hari said to Brahmanand swami who was sitting at His feet after Darshan, 'O Muni! Please go and collect all things required for tomorrow's consecration ceremony.' Brahmanand swami replied, 'O Prabhu! The whole temple is built and carved out of red stone according to ancient Vedic architecture as You wanted. The Murtis to be installed tomorrow have been prepared as You wished. Hemantram and other Brahmins expert in religious rites have been invited and all things have been gathered under their expert guidance. Furthermore, grain, oil, ghee, jaggery, utensils etc. have already been gathered. However, I would like You to have a final look to see if anything is amiss.' Bhagwan Swaminarayan immediately got up from His Sinhasan. Brahmanand swami held His hand and led Him for inspection. On seeing the arrangements complete, He profusely praised Brahmanand swami and Ramabhai for their effort and an eye for detail. Bhagwan Shree Hari was even more delighted on seeing Murtis of RadhaKrishna and the preparation for consecration. The Brahmins bowed down to Shree Hari to seek His blessings. Shree Hari also visited the kitchens where large quantities of Ladoos were already prepared and other sweets were being prepared."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Looking at the flour being baked to make Ladoos, Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said to Brahmanand swami, 'O Brahm Muni! What will you mix in the flour to sweeten it, sugar or jaggery?' Swami replied, 'Bhagwan! We only have sugar and Ghee. Oil and jaggery has taken leave of Muli since your arrival!' Shree Hari smiled at swami's witty answer and went to His quarters. He ate a little serving of fruits after concluding His evening Sandhya. Shree Hari woke up early the next morning after the short retirement and completed His morning routine quickly. Just as He reached the Sinhasan of the temple, the Brahmins arrived there fresh from their morning worship. The saints and other leading devotees converged in the temple as soon as they realised Shree Hari's presence there. Lord Swaminarayan sat on an ornate Sinhasan and saints, musicians and male and female devotees sat around Him as per the decorum of the Sampraday. Shree Hari invoked the presence of Ganapati and other Devtas to be present while He conducted the ritualistic worship of idols in the Vedic tradition as directed by expert Brahmins chanting Vedic hymns. Shree Hari positioned the idol of Lord Krishna in the central Sinhasan of the temple. He placed the idol of Radhikaji on the left and His own form as HariKrishna Maharaj on the right side of Lord Krishna in the main Sinhasan. Shree Hari established the idols of Ranchhodrai

The environs reverberated with the sound of various musical instruments, loud chants of Vedic hymns and cries of joy. Shree Hari offered expensive robes and ornaments to the idols of Bhagwan and performed Aarti with reverence. O king! As Shree Hari stood in front of Murtis with folded hands, the bright radiance emerged from the Murtis and spread all around. The devotees present at this juncture felt their lives fulfilled by just witnessing Shree Hari installing His own forms in Sinhasan for them to worship in His physical absence. Bhagwan Narayanmuni gifted a large amount of money to the Brahmins who had participated in the consecrating ceremony. A special feast was laid for thousands of Brahmins, saints and devotees. Satisfied Brahmins returned to their respective villages praising Shree Hari's generosity. O king! Shree Hari returned to His quarters after concluding the worship of newly established Murti of Lord Krishna. He cooked the food, offered Naivedhya to RadhaRaman Dev and ate Prasad. He rested for a while before returning to grace the assembly. He sat on an ornate Sinhasan and devotees sat in front of Him keeping their status and practice of the Sampraday in the mind."

Thus ends the 44th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari glanced at the seated devotees and addressed them benevolently."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O devotees! The town of Muli is very dear to Lord Krishna, Who had stayed here for three months on His way from Mathura. Due to persistent harassment, He moved on to the impregnable island of Dwarka, built by Vishwakarma, the celestial architect to protect His subjects. The step well of Muli is very sacred as Bhagwan Shree Madhav (Krishna) and His devotees had bathed in it repeatedly. You should also take a dip in it as it absolves one's sins. Anyone who reverentially does Darshan of RadhaKrishna Dev of Muli will have all his desires fulfilled. Anyone who does the Darshan of RadhaKrishna Dev regularly on Ekadashi and Purnima of each month shall indeed attain My Akshardham. O devotees! Do not despair if you cannot come to Muli this frequently. Nonetheless, you must all endeavour to come to Muli once a year on either Vaishakh Sud Baras (Patotsav) or Kartik Sud Purnima. Vasant Panchmi (Maha Sud Pancham) is another auspicious day for Bhagwan's Darshan at Muli when you should feed Brahmins as per one's means. Due to the past association of Muli with Lord Krishna, pilgrimage of Muli is equivalent to the pilgrimage of Dwarka."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari appointed Brahmanand Muni as the first Mahant (head of temple and chief saint) of Muli temple and gave him enough money to carry on celebrating future festivals. Nearer to midnight when all arrangements were completed, Shree Hari asked Brahmanand swami, Ramabhai and other devotees to disperse and He returned to His quarters for the night. The devotees of Muli took turns to conduct Shree Hari's elaborate worship with sandalwood paste, flowers, rice, garlands and incense the next morning. They gifted Him with many valuable ornaments and much money. Shree Hari in turn accepted their worship and gifts to please them and gave them fruits and flowers back as Prasadi. O king! The assembly dispersed only at noon when Shree Hari returned to His quarters to complete His noon time ritual such as bathing, cooking and offering Naivedhya to Lord Krishna. The large groups of devotees from outlying villages arrived daily at Muli for Shree Hari's Darshan. Each group invited Shree Hari to grace their respective villages and merciful Bhagwan accepted these invitations to please His devotees."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The routine of holding assemblies continued at Muli as well, where a large number of devotees came for His Darshan and to hear His sermons. Shree Hari delivered sermons on various topics such as devotion, detachment, ethical practices, Sankhya and Yog philosophies and creation and annihilation of the universe. He calmly answered all the questions raised by devotees to remove their doubts and ambiguities. King Ramabhai employed an army of Brahmins to cook for saints and visiting devotees. His ministers and courtiers took turns to invite Shree Hari, saints and Parshads to come and dine at their homes. As a result, the other devotees could not fulfil their desire of feeding Shree Hari and saints. Merciful Lord Swaminarayan found a solution to this. He visited homes of many devotees each day to give maximum number of devotees a chance to feed Him and His saints. The devotees, male and female alike, considered themselves fortunate for having His presence in their homes and venerated Him reverentially. This would continue from

Thus ends the 45th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Numerous groups of devotees converged on Muli on Purnima for the Darshan of Shree Hari in person and Lord Krishna, HariKrishna, Dharmadev etc. in idol forms in the newly consecrated temple. After looking at the beautiful Murtis, they were unable to return to their villages and decided to spend the night at Muli. Swami Shree Sahajanand Maharaj held a large assembly in the evening. He sat on an ornate Sinhasan and devotees sat on the ground in front of Him. Saints sang Kirtans extolling Leelas and virtues of Shree Hari in accompaniment of various musical instruments. Shree Hari asked them to stop after a while and asked devotees to ask Him questions. Vasudevanand Brahamchari humbly asked Him, 'O Prabhu! Everybody knows that only Bhagwan is independent while all other souls are His subordinates. They also know that their happiness lies in following the religious path as shown by Him and deviation from this path always brings only heaps of sorrow. Why do they still transgress from religious decorum and behave contrary according to their whims? It is possible that not everybody can recognise Bhagwan in human form due to Your illusionary Maya. However, that could not be the real reason why some people discard Dharma and commit sins.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari replied, "O best among Varnis! Kaal (time) is the mighty force. The four cornerstones of Sanatan Dharma; truth, chastity, compassion and austerity, do get weakened by the influence of time. Adharma ascends as Dharma gets weaker with the passage of time. The four cornerstones are at their strongest in Satya Yug and diminish in Treta Yug, Dwapar Yug and Kali Yug by twenty five, fifty and seventy five percent respectively. Dharma totally vanishes from earth at the end of Kali Yug just before the annihilation of civilisation as we know it. The life span, aura, strength and intelligence of humans also decrease through the ages. O Varni! Let Me illustrate this point by explaining the evolving process of creation. Brahma created people first time just by his thoughts. The people procreated just with thoughts without mating. Everything they required was available with just thoughts. They lived on the shores of oceans, banks of rivers and lakes and in caves of mountains. They were beyond base instincts such as hunger and thirst, heat and cold and ego and envy. Males and females alike trod the religious path. The sin as such did not exist. With the passage of time, their desires became cavernous. Gradually, their desires of morning became reality only at noon. They remained young until the end and begot children towards the end of their life. They were all equal in status (all were Brahmins) and had the same life span. As they became greedier with the passage of time, their prosperity and intelligence decreased. They had many children due to their increased obsession with their wives who had now started menstruating every month. Their desires were fructified only under the Kalpvruksha (divine tree). With increased and wanton lust in their womenfolk, the Kalpvruksha became extinct and were replaced with ordinary trees to quench their hunger. They made their homes under these trees which also provided them with clothes and ornaments. Peoples' desires had no end and in the quest of having more and hoarding, they started cutting the same trees that provided them shelter and food. They built houses in clusters around the foothills of mountains to seek shelter from the heat and cold. People became agitated with hunger and thirst. Brahma asked the rains to fall on earth and as a result, soil sprouted cereal and fruit bearing trees. With the increased population and greed for more, there developed the scarcity of self sprouting vegetation. Anger, greed, lust and such vices became widespread."

Shree Hari continued, "O Varni! Brahma, overcome with people's pleadings for mercy, dispersed them the grains of cereals to sow in unploughed and virgin soil. Due to their increased desires and greed, the soil became too barren to sprout grain saplings. Overcome with grief, they pleaded with Brahma once again for mercy. He taught them farming by which people now quenched their hunger. Just as their intelligence diminished with the passage of time, the vices percolated through their minds. With the ascent of vices such as greed, lust and wanton desires, they became irreligious. O Brahamchari! Whenever Dharma diminishes and Adharma takes ascendency, Lord Krishna independently manifests for the benevolence of His devotees. Whoever comes under His shelter is able to cross over the sorrowful world along with their descendents. However mighty the Time may be, it cannot overwhelm true devotees as Bhagwan is superior to the Time."

Suvrat Muni said, "O Pratapsinh! Vasudevanand Varni and other devotees present in the assembly were pleased and satisfied with the answer. They bowed down reverentially to Shree Hari. Bhagwan Shree Hari stayed at Muli for twelve days to the pleasure of His staunch devotees. He sought King Ramabhai's and local devotees leave and returned to Gadhpur along with His saints, Parshads and accompanying devotees."

Thus ends the 46th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 47

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Kubersinh and other leading devotees of Vadtaal came to Gadhpur for Shree Hari's Darshan on Nirjala (Jeth Sud) Ekadashi. King Uttam Khachar made suitable arrangements for their stay in the royal residence. After the conclusion of festival of Ekadashi, Kubersinh and other devotees of Vadtaal approached Bhagwan the next day with folded hands and pleaded, 'O Lord! Please listen to our request! We urge You to grant us permission to construct a temple at Vadtaal. We are prepared to set aside the land and money required for building the temple. Please fulfil our desire.' O king! Shree Hari, Whom the devotees are very dear, consented readily and asked Aksharanand swami, 'O swami! Proceed to Vadtaal with your group of saints and start the construction of a splendid temple. The Charotar region is as dear to Me as Vrandavan. I will come and install the idols of Laxmi and Narayan when the Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The devotees of Vadtaal and groups of saints led by Aksharanand swami left for Vadtaal on the following Purnima after taking blessings from Shreeji Maharaj. They reached Vadtaal on the fifth day after leaving Gadhpur. The devotees of Vadtaal made a large area of land available to swami for the construction of the temple and laid their wealth at his disposal. Swami called expert sculptors from Vadodara and with the earnest assistance from local devotees, a magnificent temple came up in fifteen months. Aksharanand swami sent Jukha Pagi to Gadhpur to invite Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan to consecrate the temple and install deities. O king! After sending Aksharanand swami to Vadtaal, Shree Hari wished to hear the Katha of the Upanishads. He invited an expert interpreter and narrator and started listening to the Upanishads on Ashadh Sud Beej. He gifted the narrator with a lot of wealth on conclusion of the Katha on Aso Sud Purnima. He organised a grand feast to feed thousands of Brahmins the next day at the start of the ritualistic bathing season of fifteen days in the month of Aso. The festival of Annkoot was celebrated as grandly as in previous years in the presence of thousands of devotees. O king! Jukha Pagi reached Gadhpur on the same day and relayed Aksharanand swami's message that the devotees of Vadtaal were awaiting His arrival as the construction work of temple was complete and fully ready to be consecrated. Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari called an astrologer to find an auspicious date for the consecration of the temple. The astrologer advised Shree Narayanmuni that Kartik Vad Baras is a very auspicious date for installation of deities in the temple. Shree Hari informed the saints and Parshads to be ready to depart for Vadtaal the next day. He called Uttam Khachar and said to him, 'I would like you to come to Vadtaal with the whole family. We will depart tomorrow morning. However, tomorrow is the festival of Bhai Beej - Yama Dwitiya, when the householder male devotees should dine at their sisters' homes and offer them gifts as per their abilities. This festival has become prevalent since Yama (deity of death) gifted his sister Yamuna (the river) with money and clothes following the lunch at her home. Dine at your sister Panchali's home and offer abundant gifts to all your four sisters and be ready with the family to depart for Vadtaal by mid morning. O king! Shree Hari concluded His morning and noon rituals early. Shree Hari, both His brothers along with their families, Uttam Khachar and his family along with sisters left Gadhpur at noon for Vadtaal. Halting at villages en route for the night, the whole caravan reached Vadtaal on the morning of Panchami. The devotees of Vadtaal rushed forward with various musical instruments to welcome Shree Hari and led Shree Hari, His brothers, saints, Parshads and other accompanying devotees to the village and arranged accommodation for them in suitable homes. Shree Hari stayed at the resident of Suthar Bhakta. O king! The devotees took it upon themselves to serve almighty Lord Swaminarayan and other visiting devotees with pleasure and sincerity."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! Led by the leading devotees of Vadtaal, Shree Hari came to look at the newly constructed temple. He was very pleased to see the East facing temple with three spires, its large foyer and a guesthouse. He profusely praised Aksharanand swami and the devotees who had contributed the land and wealth in the construction of the temple. He rewarded the expert sculptors generously on the spot. O king! Shree Hari sent a messenger to Umreth to invite Hari Sharma and other Brahmins, expert in conducting Vedic rituals. Numerous groups of saints and thousands of devotees started arriving at Vadtaal for Shree Hari's Darshan and to participate in the consecration festival. He asked the local devotees to amass Ghee, oil, flours, grains, vegetables, sugar and other items needed to feed thousands of expected visitors and gather artefacts required in consecration ceremony. Mandap, kilns for sacred fire and small dais to perform ritualistic worship of Devtas were erected under the watchful guidance of Brahmins."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari established Murtis of Laxmiji and Bhagwan Narayan in the central Sinhasan on Kartik Sud Baras of Samvat 1881. He also established the idols of Dharmadev, Bhaktimata and Himself (in form of HariKrishna Maharaj) in the left Sinhasan and Radha, Krishna and Himself (again as HariKrishna Maharaj) in the right Sinhasan. After establishing all Murtis in their Sinhasan, Shree

Hari performed a grand worship and Aarti of all Murtis. The sound of Brahmins chanting Vedic hymns in accompaniment of various musical instruments reverberated the surroundings. O king! Shree Hari spent some magical looking at all idols without blinking. A brilliant radiance emitted from all the idols as Shree Hari looked at them. The on looking devotees were greatly surprised at such a miracle of radiance emerging from Murtis. Shree Hari gave a large amount of money and several apparels to other Brahmins besides those conducting Vedic rituals at the end of ceremony. He returned to the assembly hall and sat on a high and ornate seat and raised His hand to gesture devotees to sit down. The devotees sat down and eagerly awaited His sermon."

Shree Hari said, "O devotees! Listen to Me very carefully. LaxmiNarayan Dev that I have established in the central Sinhasan is indeed Lord Krishna, the king of Dwarka Himself. Shree Krishna accompanied by Radhikaji in the right Sinhasan is indeed the same Lord Krishna who resides in Vrandavan. Murtis of HariKrishna Maharaj next to Shree RadhaKrishna and Dharmadev-Bhaktimata are indeed My own form. Whoever worships LaxmiNarayan Dev and other Murtis of Bhagwan that I have established here at Vadtaal will attain Moksha and My supreme abode. Whoever comes here for the Darshan of LaxmiNarayan and My other forms on each Purnima will surely attain all the happiness of this and the next world. The rewards of performing Japa or recital of hymns will multiply enormously if conducted in front of this Murti of Lord Krishna at Vadtaal. Lord Krishna, the king of Dwarka and LaxmiNarayan Dev are one and the same. Trust Me to preach this! Furthermore, Bhagwan Narayan will soon quell if anyone has an iota of doubt in sanctity of oneness between these two forms."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! All the devotees reposed full faith in Shree Hari's words. Shree Hari arranged for a lavish feast for all the Brahmins until Purnima and distributed monetary alms generously among them. He made sure that He turned up Himself to serve food whenever the saints sat down for their meals. After making suitable arrangements for the continuous veneration and celebration of all forthcoming festivals, Shree Hari decided to leave Vadtaal on Kartik Vad Padvo. Nathbhai and other devotees of Vadodara approached Shree Hari just then and pleaded with Him, 'O Bhagwan! Many local scholars oppose our strongly held views that Moksha is possible only through direct contact with Bhagwan in person. They misrepresent and misinterpret our religious tenets. We would like You to send some eminent saints to give them a befitting reply. Though we are not swayed by their calculated arguments and do not have any doubts in our minds, we would still like You to demolish their inflated egos.' O king! Shree Narayanmuni, ever eager to satisfy His devotees, said to Muktanand swami seated in front of Him, 'O Mukta Muni! Please proceed to Vadodara with these devotees. King Sayajirao is just and religious. He will side with truth and justice. Establish the sanctity of our Sampraday with well formulated arguments. Always bear in mind that truth shall always prevail over falsehood."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Muktanand swami bowed down to Shree Hari and willingly departed for Vadodara with local devotees to reach there the next day. Bhagwan Shree Hari asked all visiting devotees to return to their respective villages as He prepared to return to Gadhpur. Revashankar and other devotees of Dholka (Dhavalpur) approached Shree Hari and pleaded humbly with Him, 'O Bhagwan! The construction of temple at Dholka has been completed and we are eagerly waiting for You to consecrate the same. The astronomers have decided on Kartik Vad Panchmi as the most auspicious day for consecration of the temple. We implore You to come to Dholka to install the Murtis in temple.' Shree Hari conceded their request and decided to proceed to Dholka instead of Gadhpur. He duly informed His saints and Parshads of His decision and departed for Dholka the same day with His entourage of saints, Parshads and devotees. Accepting venerations of the devotees of the villages on route, He reached Dholka on Kartik Vad Treej and stayed at Revashankar's home. The local devotees made suitable arrangements for the stay of accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees and served them humbly."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari made sure that various food items and artefacts needed for consecration were at hand. He held the consecration ceremony with the same grandeur as He had just done at Vadtaal to the satisfaction of local devotees. On Kartik Vad Panchmi, Shree Hari established the Murti of MurliManohar Dev flanked by Radhikaji on the left and Himself (as HariKrishna Maharaj) on the right in the central Sinhasan of the temple. O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari arranged very lavish meals for Brahmins for five consecutive days and distributed so much wealth among them as to make even great kings envious. Shree Narayanmuni left for Gadhpur on Vad Saptami after making arrangements for continuation of proper venerations to the newly installed idols of MurliManohar Dev at Dholka temple."

Thus ends the 47th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 48

Suvrat Muni said, “O Pratapsinh! Whilst in Gadhpur, Shree Hari desired to increase the scope and practice of individual and personal worship. He decided to distribute the pictorial image of Lord Krishna to all His devotees so that individual devotees may have the pleasure of Darshan and worship Bhagwan on a daily basis. He called Naranjibhai from Junagadh and asked him, ‘I have heard of your expertise in making small images and drawings. I want you to prepare a cast of RadhaKrishna Dev and HariKrishna Maharaj which we can make many prints on paper.’ Naranji Suthar was very pleased to get such an opportunity to serve Shreeji Maharaj. Naranji took great care and prepared two separate silver casts; one of Lord Krishna with Radha and Bhagwan Shree Hari and the other of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata accompanied by Shree HariKrishna Maharaj. Shree Hari was so pleased with both die casts that He asked Naranji Suthar to make an additional cast of Murti of Bhagwan NarNarayan Dev. O king! Naranji prepared all three casts in two months. Pleased with Naranji Suthar’s devotion and effort, Bhagwan Narayanmuni rewarded him generously with a lot of wealth, new clothes and a pair of gold bangles. Shree Hari asked Adharanand swami to make hundreds of paper imprints and distributed them amongst His devotees.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! Both of Shree Hari’s brothers Rampratapbhai and Iccharambhai wanted to send their elder sons back to Chhapaiya as they had decided to spend the rest of their lives with Him. Though Nandram and Gopalram agreed to their respective father’s commands, they requested to let them remain at Gadhpur until the festival of spring. Bhagwan Shree Hari organised a special grand veneration of Lord Krishna on Magh Sud Panchmi with sandalwood paste, Abil, Gulal, Kumkum, flowers etc. to mark the start of the season of spring in the presence of thousands of devotees. He offered Lord Krishna a sumptuous Naivedhya, grand Aarti and fine saffron coloured robes. Shree Hari showered red Gulal and Kumkum on saints and devotees before serving them food. O king! The large assembly was held in the evening in a large pandal in the grounds of the royal courtyard where Shree Hari sat on an ornate large Sinhasan. The saints, Brahamcharis, scholar Brahmins, Parshads and thousands of devotees took their appropriate seats on the floor facing Shree Hari. His brothers, nephews and other male members of their family sat near His Sinhasan. Shree Hari, with a radiant halo and surrounded by thousands of devotees, appeared as if a moon surrounded by numerous stars."

Shree Narayanmuni addressed the assembly, "O devotees! Listen to Me. All followers of our Uddhav Sampraday must undertake pilgrimage of the shrines. Darshan of many eminent saints, pious persons, devotees and Murtis of Lord Ram and Krishna is possible only at the shrines. Great sages led by Markandeya, Dhaumya and Lomash have extolled pilgrimage as it offers an opportunity to meet other devotees. Eminent kings such as Yudhishthir and others have undertaken pilgrimage during their lifetime for the same reason. Therefore, you, My disciples must undertake pilgrimage of important shrines such as River Ganga with due reverence. Whoever undertakes religious rituals like bath, veneration etc. and offers food and alms to the Brahmins at the shrines has his sins washed away. Dwarka, the golden town built by Vishvakarma, is the most important shrine in this region. Lord Krishna is eternally present at His temple in Dwarka. When the whole of the Yadav clan was wiped away at PrabhasPatan, the whole of Dwarka submerged in the ocean except His temple. He remains present there even now for our benevolence. Therefore, Dwarka is considered as a gateway to His supreme abode in the present Kali Yug. All My disciples must undertake the pilgrimage of Dwarka and observe all rituals associated with it with due reverence. My householder devotees should seek out pious persons and feed Brahmins and offer them alms there."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari advised Nandram, Gopalram and Mansaram (His maternal cousins) who were about to depart for Chhapaiya, 'O brothers! Please proceed on pilgrimage of Dwarka before returning to Chhapaiya. One must undertake Darshan of Lord Krishna, bath in River Gomti, receive hot imprints of a Chakra, mace etc. on arms and offer alms to Brahmins and saints at Dwarka.' O king!

Nandram replied on behalf of others, 'O Bhagwan! We will surely visit Dwarka and observe all rituals associated with the pilgrimage. However, we are not sure of our way to Dwarka as we are new to this region. We are ready to proceed to Dwarka immediately if You can kindly arrange for a familiar guide.' O king! Shree Hari thought of Sachchidanand swami as a person most suitable for the task at hand."

Shree Narayanmuni said to swami, "O swami! Please accompany My brothers on pilgrimage to Dwarka. You are not only a steadfast devotee and familiar with the route; you are reverential to other saints. Though many other saints are eager to undertake the pilgrimage of Dwarka, they will depart only after the onset of summer. I shall accompany them later. However, My brothers are not in position to wait until then. O Muni! Therefore, proceed to Dwarka immediately.' O king! Sachchidanand swami replied, 'O Bhagwan! Your command is my wish. Ask Your brothers to take some supply of food with them.' Shree Hari looked at Mayaram Bhatt and asked him to decide upon the most auspicious day to commence the journey. Mayaram consulted his almanac and replied, 'O Prabhu! The forthcoming Navami is the most auspicious day for this purpose.' O king! Nandram and others made the necessary arrangements and departed for Dwarka on (Magh Sud) Navami with Lord Krishna's name on their mind and heart. Shree Hari gave them some money and arranged for horses, carts and armed Parshads to accompany them on their way to Dwarka."

Thus ends the 48th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 49

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Due to their enthusiasm for Darshan of Lord Krishna, they reached the old town of Dwarka on the banks of River Gomti on Vad Padvo (i.e. on the eighth day). Gugli Brahmins, guarding the waters of Gomti like vultures, prohibited them from bathing in holy waters without payment. Nandram and the other householders in the group paid up for the privilege without asking Sachchidanand swami as they thought that any restriction did not apply to the saints. With reminiscence of Lord Krishna's name in his heart, Sachchidanand swami was wandering on the banks of River Gomti. Greedy Brahmins surrounded him seeking money just as crows surround food. He took no offence nor got angry as they tugged at his clothes. Not knowing swami's exalted state of mind; some considered him mad while others thought that his serene state of mind is due to intoxication. They left him alone and awaited the emergence of Nandram and the others from the water as new prey. Sachchidanand swami sat in a middle of a road for a rest and immediately slipped into Samadhi. Nandram and others moved unconscious swami some distance away for his own safety."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Gopalram, worried about immobility of swami, asked his elder cousin, 'O brother! What should we do now? How do we proceed from here?' Mansaram added, 'We can neither carry him with us nor can we abandon him here. We should remain here with swami.' Gopalram replied, 'O brother! I know calibre of Sachchidanand swami. He often slips into Samadhi and sometimes remains in this state for up to fifteen days. There is no certainty as to when he will emerge back from Samadhi this time.' O king! Nandram thought of a compromise and suggested, ' A shrine is like a home to saints. The saints are safe everywhere in this world. We shall return from our pilgrimage within eight or nine days.' The others agreed with this suggestion and the next day they continued their journey ahead. They took the hot imprints on their arms at a village called Aaravan after paying for them and reached the majestic temple after crossing the shallow reef of sea. They undertook all the rituals associated with the pilgrimage at the shrine such as veneration and stayed there for five days before returning back to where they had left swami."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Here on the banks of Gomti, Sachchidanand swami emerged from Samadhi on the same day the others had departed. Realising that the others from the group had left him behind, he went for a bath in the river. The guardian Brahmins did not allow him the pleasure of a bath as he did not have any money to give to them. Many of them recognised him as one of the disciple saints of Sahajanand Swami, who disassociated themselves from money and women. They deliberately did not allow anyone to offer him any food due to their jealousy. As a true saint, who disregarded the materialistic comforts, Sachchidanand swami did not beg for food either. He remained hungry and without a bath for three consecutive days. O king! Despite the hardship he had to endure, swami did not get agitated as he considered this as nothing but Shree Hari's wish."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Sachchidanand swami saw many poor and hungry people roaming around seeking someone helpful to give them hot insignias on their arms. He saw many people, including women and children, writhing on the ground with shrunken bellies due to repeated fasts. The speech of some of people slurred due to their weakness caused by hunger. Many of them were robbed of their wealth on their way to Dwarka. They begged local administrators to imprint their arms with hot insignias. However, local overseers did not oblige them without payment. As the poor visitors persisted, some of the locals used very hot metal to brand their arms mercilessly. O king! Sachchidanand swami was overcome with compassion at their suffering. He approached some locals to have his arms imprinted with imprints. When they asked for money, swami replied that as a true Tyagi saint, he did not keep any money. The locals insisted that he must have hidden money in his shawl. Swami gave his shawl to them to check if they could find any money. They threw his shawl away when they could not find any money hidden in it. A local Brahmin said that some of the saints hide money in their Kaupin and long matted hair. He even asserted that he has witnessed such instances of money hidden in Kaupin. As one of the Brahmins tried to pull swami's Kaupin, he replied, 'I am a disciple of Lord Swaminarayan. We do not keep or hide money.' O king! Upon hearing Lord Swaminarayan's name from swami Sachchidanand, one of the Brahmins said haughtily, 'O beggar! Your master Lord Swaminarayan has plenty of money. Go back and bring money from Him if you want imprints on your arms. We will not give imprints without payment.' He pushed swami away. Thinking that the locals might relent sooner or later and give him imprints, he went to the vast and crowded village square and decided to remain there for few days. He saw that only people offering money were given hot imprints on their arms while the poor were insulted and mocked. The cruelty of the locals reminded him of the cruelty of Yamdoots (messengers of death) in Hell."

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! Sachchidanand swami saw a pretentious saint approaching from a distance. He was very tall and muscular with a wide chest, his long matted and yellowish coloured hair was tied in a bun on his head, his wide eyes were reddened with intoxication, his body was smeared with white ash and he was holding a pair of steel pincers in his hand. He was wearing a three stringed belt and steel chains on his waist and a Kaupin just narrow enough to cover his genitals. Pretending to be a great devotee, he demanded to be given hot imprints on his arms immediately. Local administrators ignored him totally, yet he stood his ground. He chased away people sitting in queue and took his position at the head in front of a person administrating imprints. The group of locals moved him away by force. Not able to resist the force, the fake saint protested that as a holy saint he did not keep money with him. The locals were not impressed with his plea of innocence. The fake Sadhu continued to protest that the only valuable asset he had on him was a steel chain on his waist. As one of the local Brahmin tugged at his hairs, one gold coin slipped out of his plaited bun. Excited other locals saw an opportunity to get their hands on a bounty and untangled his hairs. Four more gold coins fell from his hair which the local Brahmins pocketed. The Sadhu, defeated and dejected, retreated from the scene without getting imprints and cursing the locals. O king! Sachchidanand swami was greatly surprised at an unbelieving event unfolding in front of his eyes and realised that giving imprints on arms has become a business just for profit.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “O king! Some of the local Brahmins turned towards swami and mocked him saying, ‘O Sadhu! Did you see how we retrieved money from another Sadhu? We have no doubt that all Sadhus are same. We will now recover money from you in the same fashion.’ Sachchidanand swami replied, ‘I do not have long plaited hairs on my head. All I have is this tattered shawl which even robbers do not take away. The only new thing I have on me is my Kaupin. I am prepared to give it to you in return for hot imprints.’ O king! The local Brahmins mocked swami and went away. He remained patient despite pain and hunger with reminiscence of Bhagwan Swaminarayan and travelled towards Shankhodwar, the shallow reef of the sea between the mainland and Lord Krishna's temple on an island. O king! The true saints are unable to see others in pain. In the Purans, Sage Vyas has compared their hearts with a blob of butter, smooth and soft."

Thus ends the 49th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 50

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Just as Sachchidanand swami crossed the shallow reef to enter the main temple, members of the group led by Nandram and Gopalram crossed the reef in opposite direction to arrive back on the banks of River Gomti without seeing each other. Very excited at the prospect of divine Darshan of Lord Krishna, swami rushed to climb the steps. Before he could enter the temple, the Brahmins guarding the entrance stopped him to check for hot imprints on his forearms and demand money as an entrance fee. The guards pushed him back to make way for other pilgrims ready to pay money. Swami pleaded with Googly (a caste of Brahmins) Brahmins guarding the entrance, 'O Brahmins! Please let me in for Lord Krishna's Darshan. I have heard that Brahmins are compassionate, so please be kind to me and let me in.' O king! The Brahmins taunted swami that all the saints that come for Darshan here have money hidden in their Kaupins and matted hairs. They added that he will not be allowed in until he tenders the money. Sachchidanand swami pleaded again, 'O Brahmins! Believe me! I do not carry any money. I am a disciple of Shree Sahajanand Swami. I am a celibate and have forsaken the world. How could I have any money?' The Brahmins replied, 'O Sadhu! In that case, we will ensure that you do not get a chance of Darshan. Why do you roam around for Lord Krishna's Darshan when your guru, Sahajanand Swami declares Himself as Lord Krishna in person? We are sworn enemies of Lord Swaminarayan. He may stoutly pretend to be Lord Krishna, but He hasn't met us yet. As His disciple, we will not only turn you out of temple but from town itself.' O king! The Brahmins disregarded swami's pleas and went away."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! Some of the onlookers took pity on Sachchidanand swami and advised him to pay the fee and have Darshan instead of lying on the ground starving, while others insulted and mocked him as a charlatan in a garb of a pretentious Sadhu. No one considered him as a pious saint, let alone greet him with reverence. O king! This was due to the resentment towards Lord Swaminarayan. Swami sat in front of the gates dispassionately and watched events inside and around the temple. There was a great commotion to enter temple before others and in the process, ladies and children suffered physical abuse. The cruelty, disregard for civility and greed of money on the island was even worse than that of mainland. As the dusk fell, he thought, 'What can I do? How can I have Darshan of Lord Krishna? I have come here with the express wish of Bhagwan Himself, but find myself in this unfortunate circumstance. What will happen to Muktanand swami and other saints when they come here for Darshan? How would they be able to suffer such indignities? How can I return to Gadhpur without Darshan of Lord Krishna when Shree Hari has asked me to return only after Darshan?' O king! Swami meditated upon Lord Krishna and prayed for His Darshan. He was sure that Bhagwan will surely listen to him and fulfil his desire. Sachchidanand swami remained there for four days in deep meditation without food and water with the single aim of having Lord Krishna's Darshan. With profound reminiscence of his guru Shree Sahajanand Swami in his heart, swami prayed to Lord Krishna on the fifth day."

Thus ends the 50th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Sachchidanand swami prayed, "O Shree Krishna! O companion of Rukmini! O beautiful one! Shiva, Brahma, Indra and the other Devtas venerate You. Dharma (religion) and Bhakti (devotion) take shelter in You. Your Katha redeems narrator and listener alike. O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons. O master of all potencies! O eternal resident of Dwarka! You hold a conch, disc, mace and lotus for protection of Your devotees from all evil. O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons. assembly and she sought Your help to save her honour; You left the comforts of home and company of Rukmini and rushed immediately to her rescue and saved her honour by providing her never ending supplies of clothes. O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons. You could not bear the insult heaped upon Draupadi as she was being dragged by Dushashan, egged on by his brothers, pulling her hair. You made sure that their wives were forced to shorn their tresses by making all of them widows. O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons. When Duryodhan sent Sage Durvasha by deceit to the hut of Pandavas in a forest to seek alms knowing fully well that they could not provide him with food, You rushed to their rescue without bothering to put on sandals. You ate a morsel of leafy vegetable (to satisfy sage's hunger pangs) and defended their ethical duty of serving food to a visitor. O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons. To fulfil Satyabhama's desire to bring Parijat (a divine tree) from heaven to Dwarka, You fought and defeated the army of Devtas led by Indra. O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons. Though demons maintain enmity towards You, insult You by cursing and try to kill You, yet, O merciful! You grant them Your supreme abode. O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons. You granted Your Darshan to wealthy and poor devotees alike in past, but today, only the wealthy are able to have Your Darshan while the poor are turned away. How can I address You non-discriminatory? O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons. You imparted the complete knowledge (of Dharma, Vairagya and Bhakti) to Your disciple Udhhavji for benevolence of mankind. I follow the principles laid down and espoused by Udhhavji (Ramanand swami) himself. O king of Dwarka! Be pleased with me and grant me boons.

profound devotion in Him, Lord Krishna appeared in person in front of swami. Lord Krishna granted His divine Darshan to Sachchidanand swami late at night on Vijya (Maha Vad) Ekadashi of Samvat 1881. Bhagwan appeared in swami's heart along with Rukmini, Satyabhama, Arjun, Satyaki and Udhhav in the midst of this halo brighter than thousands of suns shining at the same time. O king! Just suddenly as He had appeared, Bhagwan disappeared from swami's heart within a moment. This disappearance brought swami back to consciousness from the state of deep Samadhi. Sachchidanand swami saw the same Lord Krishna in front of his eyes that he had just seen in his heart a moment ago. His complexion was dusky just like newly formed clouds and a brilliant radiance emerged from His body. He was wearing golden robes, numerous ornaments including a bejewelled crown and was holding a conch, disc, mace and lotus in His four hands. His large twinkling eyes made His ever smiling face more enchanting while His neck was adorned with numerous flower garlands and necklaces of pearls and diamonds. He was flanked by Laxmiji, wearing divine robes and ornaments and holding a hand held fan and a lotus in her hands, and Satyabhama, similarly attired and holding a water pitcher in her hands. Udhhavji on His right and Satyaki on His left waved Chamar around Lord Krishna while Arjun, in his full glory, held an umbrella on His head. Sachchidanand Muni immediately prostrated at His feet."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Swami's body was weakened considerably due to the continuous hunger and thirst of eleven days. Yet, his face enlivened and his eyes welled with joy as he saw Lord Krishna in person, Whom he constantly meditated upon in his heart. Overcome with compassion at swami's condition, Lord Krishna, letting go of a conch, disc, mace and lotus from His hands, rushed forward to raise swami from ground. Bhagwan Shree Krishna caressed swami on his head and shoulder and embraced him. He said to swami, 'O Muni! You are one of the best among My saints and devotees. I am very pleased at your single minded devotion towards Me. Ask for a boon. There is nothing in this world that I can't grant to you.' O king! Sachchidanand swami forgot all his pain and sufferings by Bhagwan's divine touch. Tears of joys welled up in his eyes at Bhagwan's mercy and compassion towards him. With bowed head and folded hands, swami let his heart speak."

Sachchidanand swami prayed, "O king of Dwarka! O jewel of Yadu clan! I repeatedly bow down to You. O benevolent Bhagwan! You are an oasis of mercy. You destroy uncountable number of sins of Your devotees. You have been very kind to Arjun. You fulfilled the latent desire of thousands of maidens by marrying them. O omnipresent Lord Krishna! I repeatedly bow down to You. O son of Devki! You destroyed egoist and evil kings just as a fire destroys trees in a forest. O Vaasudev! You removed the destined poverty of Your friend Sudama. O consort of Rukmini! You always defend Dharma and its pious adherers. O merciful Lord! Be pleased with me. Your compassion for Your devotees is legendary and reigns supreme. O Prabhu! You have made my life worthwhile by granting me Your divine Darshan. O Ishwar! I have become so happy at Your Darshan that I do not wish for anything else. However, there is one request. My guru, Sahajanand Swami has decreed that we, His disciple, must undertake pilgrimage of Dwarka at least once in our lifetime. This pilgrimage is easy for wealthy people. O Bhagwan! The saints of Uddhav Sampraday have forsaken the world, wealth and women and do not keep money on them. Pilgrimage of Dwarka is near impossible for such saints and other poor people. I could not have a holy dip in River Gomti, I could not have hot imprints on my arms and I could not even enter Your temple due to the lack of money. The entire area and its populace have become merciless and greedy. How can the saints of the Uddhav Sampraday complete the pilgrimage of Dwarka and follow the edict of their guru? O Bhagwan! I know that devotees are very dear to You. I ask You to do something so that they can have Your Darshan at Dwarka. I ask nothing more from You."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Kind and merciful Lord Krishna said to Sachchidanand swami, 'I will do as you have asked. I know that the people at large have become merciless and greedy. It is impossible for true saints to have My Darshan here. My devotees of Uddhav Sampraday are singled out for harsh treatment. I will grant My Darshan by residing in the Murtis of LaxmiNarayan Dev at Vadtaal. My Darshan at Vadtaal will be just as equally rewarding to the devotees as here in Dwarka. Do not despair or doubt My words. Pilgrimage of Vadtaal will become equally rewarding because a shrine is where I reside. Udhhav is very dear to Me and so are the followers of the Sampraday established by him. O Muni! Return to Gadhpur. I will follow you.' O king! Saying this, Lord Krishna disappeared from the scene. Sachchidanand swami was awestruck for a moment. He understood well that the Darshan of Lord Krishna was nothing but the result of his guru, Shree Hari's blessings. Elated at the divine Darshan of Lord Krishna in person and memory of the momentous event in his heart, Sachchidanand swami returned to the banks of Gomti."

Thus ends the 51st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 52

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Nandram, Gopalram, Mansaram and others returned to the banks of River Gomti and looked around for Sachchidanand swami. They were aghast and worried by not finding swami anywhere. They thought, 'O God! What did transpire? Where could Muni have gone? We have committed a grave mistake by leaving swami unattended here. How could we return to Gadhpur without swami? How could we face Shree Hari without one of his most ardent disciple? What will we answer to Shree Hari? What will we say to King Uttam Khachar? They started blaming each other. Mansaram said, 'You did not listen to me. I told you not to leave swami behind.' Gopalram protested, 'What could I do? I could not override elder brother Nandram. It was his idea to leave Muni behind.' Nandram retorted, 'Why blame me? You mentioned the longevity and unpredictability of swami's Samadhi.' O king! Mansaram calmed down and said, 'Whatever had to happen has happened. We cannot defy destiny. We must stop worrying and pray to Shree Hari. Lord Krishna will guide us. I am sure that swami must not have gone to Gadhpur without informing us or leaving us behind. He may have gone to the main temple for Lord Krishna's Darshan. We should wait here patiently for him.' O king! Gopalram and Nandram heeded Mansaram's advice and agreed to wait for Muni."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! They would conclude their morning routine early including a bath in holy River Gomti every day before having Darshan of Lord Krishna while awaiting arrival of Sachchidanand swami. After concluding a fast of Ekadashi, their eagerness of seeing swami heightened on Baras. They were hoping that swami would turn up unexpectedly to have his lunch with them after a fast on Ekadashi. Nandram's right eye and Mansaram's right side of body twitched which was a sign of good omens. Gopalram saw Muni arriving in an early morning dream, which tends to become reality. As they were talking about their good omens, they indeed saw Sachchidanand swami approaching them in a leisurely pace. They rushed towards him to greet him and embraced him repeatedly as if their life force has returned. They exchanged their respective experiences after having lunch together. They left Dwarka the next day (Magh Vad Teras) and reached Gadhpur on Falgun Sud Chatth."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! They witnessed Lord Krishna, along with Laxmiji, accompanying them whenever they rested for a night on their way to Gadhpur. They prostrated at the divine lotus feet of Lord Swaminarayan, Who was seated on an ornate Sinhasan in the assembly at the royal courtyard of Gadhpur. Shree Hari warmly welcomed them and asked for their well being. Sachchidanand swami narrated the problem he faced when going for a holy dip in Gomti, the denial of hot imprints and refused entry to the main temple. However, he did not mention anything about Lord Krishna's divine Darshan and His pledge to come and reside in Murtis at Vadtaal in the open assembly. All that saints were pained to hear the hindrances swami had faced and were disappointed that they will never be able to undertake a successful pilgrimage of Dwarka. Sachchidanand swami recounted Lord Krishna's Darshan and His pledge upon seeing dejection on the saints' faces. All saints were elated on hearing swami's divine encounter with Bhagwan Shree Krishna. Shree Hari was also very pleased and asked swami to repeat his experience many times at the delight of everybody present. Everybody present, including Sachchidanand swami had no doubt whatsoever that whatever had happened has happened with express wish of Shree Hari Himself."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari decided to celebrate the forthcoming festival of Fuldolotsav at Vadtaal and asked everybody to get ready to travel to Vadtaal. He wrote letters to His saints and devotees of far off places to invite them to Vadtaal for the festival. O king! All the saints saw Lord Krishna travelling to Vadtaal in their dreams that night, which they relayed to each other and Shree Hari the next morning. Shree Hari, surrounded by thousands of devotees left Gadhpur the same day, Sud Saptami. He was astride His favourite mare with reins in His left and a cane in His right hand, surrounded by hundreds of similarly astride Parshads such as Soma Khachar,

The numerous groups of devotees from different regions and villages had started reaching Vadtaal by then. O king! By then, Muktanand swami had overcome many opponents of Shree Hari and the Sampraday in a debate at Vadodara and he, along with the devotees of Vadodara, had also reached Vadtaal."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! Many of the visiting devotees were very delighted after having Darshan of LaxmiNarayan Dev - Lord Krishna, the king of Dwarka - for the first time at Vadtaal. Many of the devotees saw the arrival of Lord Krishna from Dwarka in their dreams. The visiting devotees worshipped Bhagwan LaxmiNarayan according to their devotion and means available at their disposal. The festival of Fuldolotsav was celebrated with full pomp and festivities under the watchful eyes and guidance of Bhagwan Shree Hari. O king! The supreme Lord Swaminarayan Bhagwan Himself served food to His saints by serving each saint repeatedly to make sure they were fully satisfied with Prasad."

Thus ends the 52nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 53

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Not only Lord Krishna, but peripheral shrines came to Vadtaal with Him. River Gomti entered a nearby lake, Ganga and other rivers merged in Gomti and Dwarka spread herself in Vadtaal. Lord Krishna appeared in the dreams of Shree Sahajanand Swami and conferred with Him that hot imprints of conch, disc, mace and lotus should be given to all devotees in the morning. The devotees, after having a holy dip in Lake Gomti, imprinting their arms with hot symbols of conch etc. and the Darshan of LaxmiNarayan Dev considered their pilgrimage to Dwarka concluded. O king! A large assembly was held in the precinct of the temple in the evening where devotees took their appropriate seats as per the decorum of Sampraday.

Lord Shree Hari arrived and took His seat on a raised ornate Sinhasan to bless and address His devotees."

Almighty Bhagwan Shree Hari said, "O devotees! Listen to My benevolent blessings. You must have realised by now that Lord Krishna, the king of Dwarka, Himself has arrived at Vadtaal. Just as the retinue of a king follows him, the others shrines have also arrived with Bhagwan Shree Krishna. Therefore, consider the town of Vadtaal as Dwarka and the nearby lake as Gomti and holy rivers. Whoever takes a dip in Lake Gomti will have all his sins washed away. Oblation offered to the Pitris will purify them. One should observe Brahamcharya, non violence and a fast here and feed Brahmins, offer oblation to Pitris and shorn his head as a part of the ritual of pilgrimage. Ritualistic oblations offered to Pitris on the banks of Gomti will multiply many folds. Whoever takes a daily holy dip in Gomti for the duration of Kartik, Magsar, Magh or Chaturmaas will have all his desires fulfilled. Japa undertaken in this temple will be rewarded fully and immediately. The Brahmins undertaking the recital of Shreemad Bhagwat, Bhagvad Gita or other scriptures and hymns will be rewarded with materialistic pleasure in this life and Moksha in the next. A single recital of the Shreemad Bhagwat, while observing a fast, will fulfil all of one's desires. An elaborate Mahapuja of LaxmiNarayan Dev will be rewarded with the entry to Golok. Indeed, even a minor worship will result in having one's desires fulfilled and attainment of Bhagwan supreme abode. Whoever feeds the Brahmins or saints in Vadtaal will earn great pleasures of His abode. Anyone having a holy dip in Gomti and hot imprints on their arms will become free from the fear of death. Indeed, Punya of pilgrimage of Vadtaal shall be equal to that of a pilgrimage of Dwarka."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Devotees bowed down at Shree Hari's feet before retiring for the night. Thousands of devotees took hot imprints of a conch, disc, mace and lotus on their forearms after taking a bath in Lake Gomti the next day. They worshipped LaxmiNarayan Dev and Bhagwan Shree Hari with whatever means was available at their disposal. Shree Hari, to the delight of local and visiting devotees, stayed back in Vadtaal for a month. He asked visiting devotees to return to their respective villages only after celebrating RamNavmi. He permitted Nandram, Gopalram and the others to return to Chhapaiya, before Himself leaving for Gadhpur on (Chaitra Sud) Baras."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O Pratapsinh! Dwarkadhish (king of Dwarka) Bhagwan Shree Krishna arrived at Vadtaal on the day of Dhatri (Falgun Sud) Ekadashi (of Samvat 1881). Vadtaal attained the same fame and sanctity as Dwarka from that day onwards. Anyone who recites or listens to this episode will indeed be rewarded with all materialistic pleasures of this world while alive and Bhagwan's supreme abode after his death."

Thus ends the 53rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 54

King Pratapsinh asked, "O Suvrat Muni! You just mentioned that sagacious Muktanand swami returned from Vadodara. I know that any mission undertaken with blessing of Shree Hari indeed becomes successful. Yet, please tell me in great detail what did Muktanand swami actually accomplish at Vadodara?"

Suvrat Muni replied, "O king! Two Brahmin brothers, Ramchandra and Harischandra; Shobharam Shastri (another Brahmin); Narupant, a minister in the court of the king of Vadodara and his friend Chimanrao of Vadodara were intelligent and highly educated in various scriptures such as the Vedas and its branches. These five good friends were religious, able to interpret and explain the scriptures in detail and highly revered in the political and social circle. Though they had studied many scriptures and theists, they could not come to a conclusion regarding which (if any) form of Bhagwan they should pay obeisance to. They approached a highly educated Brahmin called Hariharacharya of Vadtaal once to set their doubts to rest. They asked him, 'O Acharya! You are highly educated and respected. You are capable of removing our doubts. We have learned that Bhagwan resides in Vaikunth, Brahampur and Kshirsagar. He is variably described as two armed, four armed and eight armed. People call Him Ram, Krishna and Narsinh. You are not only educated but a devotee as well. Please enlighten us with your considered views."

Hariharacharya, a hypocrite hardened by political influences and an expert in answering questions to suit and please the enquirer replied, "You are wise and humble. Listen to me carefully. You must worship Lord NarNarayan, as He is the ruling deity of Bharat Khand (greater India). Worshipping any other deity is adulterous and results in being entangled in the vicious cycle of death and rebirth. Lord NarNarayan Dev of Badrikaashram is the supreme Bhagwan and sole cause of all incarnations. He creates, sustains and destroys innumerable universes and manifests Himself as Matsya (fish), Katchh (turtle), Varah (boar) etc. to protect Sanatan Dharma and its adherers. He is the supreme Lord of the universes and though two armed, assumes four armed and eight armed forms to please His devotees. Therefore, you must worship Him by constantly chanting His name. Just as a devotee attained salvation by meditating upon Lord Vishnu in Satya Yug, just as a devotee attained Moksha by name worshipping Lord Vishnu in Treta Yug, just as a devotee redeemed himself by serving Lord Vishnu in Dwapar Yug, a devotee in Kali Yug attains salvation by chanting His name. Yama such as Ahinsa, Niyams such as Brahamcharya, Yoga and austerity is not possible to be undertaken in Kali Yug, therefore, the Shreemad Bhagwat considers Japa as the best means to attain salvation in Kali Yug. Bhagwan Vishnu incarnates Himself in Satya, Treta and Dwapar Yugs, therefore, He is known as 'Triyug'. He does not incarnate in Kali Yug. How can we, the devotees of Kali Yug have a direct association with Bhagwan? Some people may say otherwise, but it is nothing but an amusing tale to please one's mind."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The five reposed full trust in Hariharacharya and came to the conclusion that Bhagwan's incarnation is not possible in Kali Yug, and hence, the Japa of His name is the only means of salvation in present times. They espoused the same view wherever and whenever debating assemblies were held. The other scholars were unable to defeat them in debates. They mocked Shree Hari's disciples who held a firm view that He is indeed Bhagwan in human form and Moksha can be attained by the direct association with Him. The trusting but simple devotees had no answers to their clever arguments. O king! Once Muktanand swami came to Vadodara to grant his Darshan to a devotee called Nathji. The gang of five visited Muktanand swami on the pretext of Darshan and sat in front of him with fake humility.

Muktanand swami said, "O Ramchandra! Ask me for any clarifications if you have any doubts regarding anything."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Not wishing to reveal their opinion and pretending to be curious, they asked Muktanand swami, 'O swami! How can people in Kali Yug attain salvation? Please reply according to the views expressed in the scriptures.' O king! Though Muktanand swami was able to answer the simple question straightaway, he wanted the group of five to reveal their opinion first. Hence, he asked them, 'O Brahmins! Tell me what you think. What in your view will emancipate the souls from the clutches of vicious cycle of death and rebirth?' O king! Ramchandra replied, 'We have come to the conclusion that people in Kali Yug can attain Moksha only by chanting the name of Lord NarNarayan of Badrikaashram. There is no other means than this."

Muktanand swami replied, "One must meditate upon the form of Lord Krishna, which, one has realised or visualised in person, while chanting His name for the reward of Japa. One, whose mind is wandering around in mundane things while chanting His name, gets no reward for his efforts. How can one concentrate upon Bhagwan if he has not seen Him in person? How can he see the Murti of Bhagwan in his heart if he is not sure of which of His form to meditate upon? It is not possible to attain Moksha just by chanting Bhagwan's name if one's mind is engrossed with the mundane objects that one visualises during his waking hours. The knowledge about Bhagwan and His worship as espoused in the Vedas and other means described in the scriptures become futile if one accepts your view that Japa is the only means to attain Moksha. No sane or ethical person will support any views expressed which are contrary to the Vedas. Our Sampraday is the Vedic one. The Shrutis espouse that an absolute knowledge of Bhagwan and direct association with Him (see Him) are the only means to attain Moksha. One's sins are washed away and he earns Punya by chanting His holy name, but salvation, freedom from the cycle of death and rebirth, can only be attained through the direct Darshan of Bhagwan. Have you had the Darshan of Lord NarNarayan? If not, first endeavour for His Darshan to attain Moksha."

Ramchandra replied, "O Mukta Muni! The knowledge, devotion, observation of Yama and Niyams and other means described in the Vedas are indeed impossible for men to undertake in Kali Yug. How could one possibly have direct Darshan of Bhagwan NarNarayan in Kali Yug? Therefore, chanting His name is the sole mean to attain Moksha. Have you not heard a tale of King Ajamil (as described in the Shreemad Bhagwat), who attained Moksha by just calling out Bhagwan Narayan's name?"

Muktanand swami replied, "Emancipation that King Ajamil attained was only from his accumulated sins and from the clutches of messengers of death. Let me quote what Yamaraj said to his messengers, 'Look at the auspiciousness of Bhagwan's name. By calling out His name (indeed name of his son), even without realising, he was freed from the clutches of death.' O Ramchandra! 'Therefore Sage Shukdevji said to King Parikshit, 'O king! Chanting the name of Bhagwan is a great redeemer from one's sins.' If you think that Ajamil attained Moksha after calling out Bhagwan Narayan's name, why did he undertake Japa on the banks of River Ganga? Indeed, Ajamil was freed only from the messengers of death and his sins after calling out for Narayan. He attained Moksha only after meditating upon Bhagwan Narayan (after seeing Bhagwan's Parshads driving away the messengers of death). No sane person would ever vouch that Bhagwan does not manifest Himself in Kali Yug. My guru, Sahajanand Swami is Bhagwan in person. Thousands of His disciples, besides me, have had an experience of Him being Bhagwan in human form. The direct experience (of His existence) is always better than imagination. One's belief, however strongly held, can never negate the personal experience. Therefore, I do not agree with your views that Bhagwan's incarnation is not possible in Kali Yug."

Muktanand swami continued, "O Brahmins! Even if you do not accept my contention that Bhagwan indeed manifests Himself in Kali Yug, many scriptures mention that Bhagwan manifests Himself whenever Sanatan Dharma is subjugated by evil people. I will quote some verses from highly esteemed scriptures such as the Bhagwat and Gita. Bhagwan Janardan has said in the Mahabharat to Sage Markandeya, 'I take birth (manifest Myself) from pious parents whenever terrible demons, undefeatable even by Indra - the king of the Devtas create havoc in world.' O Brahmins! Lord Krishna Himself has said in the Bhagvad Gita, 'O Arjun! Whenever evil people subjugate Sanatan Dharma and Adharma become prevalent, I manifest Myself on earth to protect Sanatan Dharma and the pious and punish the demons.' The Bhagvad Gita must be considered as the highest authority as it is narrated by Bhagwan Himself. There is no scope of any contrary or imagined view. The Shreemad Bhagwat Puran, which is considered as the cream of the Vedas, is another high authority among others scriptures. Let me quote two verses from it. 'Lord Krishna manifests on earth with His full potency, glory and virtues such as compassion, truth from time to time; whenever the evil kings, under the evil influences, tread the path of irreligiosity' and 'Whenever demonic people harass us, Lord Krishna independently manifests Himself from time to time as an animal or human to protect us from them.' There are hundreds of other such examples in the Bhagwat Puran. Do you truly believe that Adharma never ascends or prevails in Kali Yug? Does Dharma always prevail and reign in Kali Yug that you negate the possibility of Bhagwan's incarnation in present time?"

Muktanand swami continued, "O devotees! Ask the persons who negate the possibility of Bhagwan's incarnation in Kali Yug whether they believe in the truthfulness of the Shreemad Bhagwat or the Mahabharat which is considered the fifth Veda. The Bhagwat describes Lord NarNarayan as Lord Krishna and Arjun. The other Puranas narrate the Katha of incarnations of Lord Krishna, Arjun, Buddha and Kalki, all of them in Kali Yug. Do they believe in their (scriptures') sanctity or not? The earnest devotees consider great Acharyas such as Ramanuj and others born in Kali Yug, who have worked hard to propagate Sanatan Dharma in the world, as incarnations of Bhagwan. People who negate the possibility of Bhagwan's incarnations happening in Kali Yug have not understood the profound meanings of the scriptures. They do not even realise that they contradict themselves. They celebrate Janmashtami without realising the exact timing of the birth of Bhagwan Shree Krishna. O Brahmins! The paths of ordinary people and people desirous of Moksha are divergent. People desirous of Moksha have attained Moksha after direct association with pious saints while others are still lost in the quagmire of death and rebirth. The primary trait of true saints is a direct association with Bhagwan. How could we find such saints if God is not present on earth in this Kali Yug? Who could the devout associate with, in the absence of such pious saints? Whoever has attained Moksha in the past has attained it with the help of such saints. If we accept your argument that Bhagwan does not manifest Himself in Kali Yug, how could one aspire for Moksha at present in the absence of the incarnation of Bhagwan and His saints? Are people born in Kali Yug not eligible for Moksha ever?"

Muktanand swami continued, "Furthermore, according to the scripture, only humans can attain Moksha. The human body is said to be a boat needed to traverse the quagmire that is this world. All the means that are required to be undertaken to attain Moksha are possible only in human life. A human life is a miraculous gift from God which must not be wasted for any other purpose except to attain Moksha. The acquisition of the knowledge about a soul and Bhagwan is not possible in any other life form. According to the Bhagwat, such human life is given by Bhagwan after the ascent of Punyas accumulated over innumerable births and it says, 'A life of a man is futile if he does not endeavour to attain Moksha even after being granted a human life that is sought by all but given to only some of them.' O Ramchandra Vipra! We are very fortunate to be given a human life in Kali Yug. If Bhagwan's presence on earth is possible only in the first three Yugs (Satya, Treta and Dwapar) and if we were present then in aquatic or other life form, we could still not attain Moksha. What good can be served by such a life? Many Satya Yugs have passed and we have not attained Moksha as we failed to connect directly with Bhagwan in the past. Therefore, we are still entangled in the vicious cycle of death and rebirth. Now as we have been given a human life, rest assure that Bhagwan is present in this world for us to attain Moksha. As Moksha is not possible without meeting Bhagwan in person and we have been given a human life by Bhagwan Himself, Bhagwan's presence in this world in not only possible but certain. The (nine) Yogeshwar said to King Janak, 'People from other Yugs seek birth in Kali Yug as devout people will get shelter of Lord NarNarayan Dev and lead a religious life.' How could people become His devotees if Lord NarNarayan Dev's presence is not possible? Bhagwan Narayan incarnates Himself repeatedly in all four Yugs and one must seek Him and engage in any one of the nine types of His Bhakti. O devotees! I have answered your question as per the scriptures and my own experience. You may ask again to clarify any point if your doubts are not subsided."

Suvrat Muni said, "O Pratapsinh! Ramchandra's and the others' latent wish to defeat Muktanand swami in a debate almost vanished. The others present in the assembly saw their defeat written large on their gloomy faces."

CHAPTER 56

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Harischandra and Narupant accepted Muktanand swami's view wholeheartedly that Bhagwan does manifest Himself in Kali Yug. However, Ramchandra was not yet fully convinced. He still wanted to engage Muktanand swami in a further debate and asked further, 'O Muni! I believe you because you are truthful, benevolent and rightly indebted to your guru, whom you consider an incarnation of Bhagwan. It is said in the Skand Puran, 'Guru is Brahma, guru is Vishnu, guru is Mahadev and indeed guru is the form of almighty Bhagwan.' However, a doubt lingers in my mind. Bhagwan is called 'Triyug' in many scriptures because He manifests Himself only in three Yugs. You know and interpret scriptures well. You are capable of putting my doubts to rest.' O king! Wise, sagacious and humble Muktanand swami prepared to answer."

Muktanand swami replied, "O Brahmin! I am not talking about the reverence that a disciple shows towards his guru which is akin to the reverence shown by a wife towards her husband. I do not profess Shree Hari as an incarnation of Bhagwan Narayan just because He is my guru. Thousands of other people besides me have experienced His divinity directly and have become His disciple. He is indeed Bhagwan, Who has manifested Himself on earth for the benevolence of people. Now let me expand on the meaning of the term 'Triyug'. It does not imply that Bhagwan Narayan manifests Himself in the first three Yugs only. Actually, the second syllable of the word 'Yug' implies the pair. The three (Tri) Yug, the pairs; the creation and annihilation, transmigrations and salvation of the souls and knowledge (that leads to salvation) and ignorance (that subjects a soul to rebirth); are exclusive to Bhagwan. Only Bhagwan knows these six totally. O Ramchandra! The other three pairs; potency and Dharma, knowledge and detachment and indefinite abundance of wealth and fame (these are called six 'Bhag' as well) are present in Bhagwan to the maximum extent. The other persons may have a large quantity of these three Bhag, but not totally. There is one more explanation of the same term (Triyug). As people had attained a total unison with Bhagwan in the first Satya Yug, there was no need to perform any Yagnas. Thus, YagnaNarayan is present in person only in the other three Yugs. O Brahmin! Even if you take Triyug to mean three Yugs - Satya, Treta and Dwapar, it should imply the three eras in the mind."

Muktanand swami continued, "Yugs can be considered of two types; external and internal. The external Yugs are more widely understood and people use them to denote the time. Sage Shukdevji described four Yugs that effect the mind and intellect to King Parikshit. I will reiterate them to you. Our intellect is affected by the three traits of Maya namely Satva, Rajas and Tamas. When the mind, intellect and senses are under the influence of Satva trait, austerity, devotion and knowledge ascends within. This should be considered Satya Yug within. Whenever a person is engaged in undertaking religious rituals such as Yagna in return for heavenly rewards, consider that Treta Yug is ruling his mind which is predominately influenced with Rajas property of Maya. A person is said to be ruled by Dwapar Yug, a mix of Rajas and Tamas traits of Maya, when he undertakes rituals for the materialistic rewards and is under the influences of vices such as greed, dissatisfaction, ego and hypocrisy. When Kali Yug prevails in a person's intellect, he is under the total influences of ignorance, violence, stupor, fear, lust, lethargy etc. O wise Brahmin! A person must understand which Yug rules his intellect by introspection. Bhagwan cannot enter a person's heart when Kali Yug reigns his intellect, even during an era of Satya Yug. Similarly, even during Kali Yug, a person's intellect can see Bhagwan in his heart if his intellect is being ruled by Satya Yug."

Muktanand swami continued, "O Brahmin! The prevailing Kali Yug is not capable of troubling Shree Hari as He is said to be the Lord and cause of Yugs (the Time). He can prevail over the virtues of Satya Yug such as austerity and knowledge even in the present era of Kali Yug as He is the master of the universes. Even the Vedas describe Bhagwan Shree Hari as the cause of Kaal (time). Grandsire Bhishma has said to King Yudhishthir (in the Mahabharat) that a king is a cause of time and not vice versa. Even when an ordinary king is capable of altering the traits of prevalent time (Yug), one should have no doubt in almighty Bhagwan's ability to alter the course and traits of a Yug. Therefore, know Bhagwan as the supreme Lord of everything and do not doubt the manifestation of Bhagwan in Kali Yug. Theist person like you should consider the meaning of the term 'Triyug' as I described. Only atheists interpret it to negate the possibility of manifestations of Bhagwan in Kali Yug. When Prahalad described Bhagwan Nrusinh as Triyug, he meant that Bhagwan remains concealed in Kali Yug, but did not deny His manifestations in Kali Yug. He said, 'O Bhagwan Nrusinh! You have manifested as a fish, turtle, animal, Rishi and man in past to protect Your devotees, destroy demons and Sanatan Dharma as prevalent in Satya Yug. You protect the same Sanatan Dharma in Kali Yug as a man by concealing Your prowess.' Let me elaborate on how Bhagwan conceals His potency. At one moment He exhibits His great potency and the next, He behaves like an ordinary mortal man. As Lord Krishna, He revealed His full glory as a four armed divine form to Devkiji just before birth and the very next moment He became a small helpless child in her lap. He revealed the whole universe in His mouth to Jashoda and the very next moment He behaved like her son. He showed His supreme abode, Vaikunth to the cowherds of Varj and the very next moment He appeared as their peer. Even Brahma, who prayed to Him after killing insuperable demons, was taken in by His human form as a young child. He revealed Himself in the depth of waters of River Yamuna to Akrur and the next moment Akrur saw Him sitting in the chariot as his companion. There are thousands of examples when Lord Krishna revealed His great potency just for a moment to conceal it the next. O Brahmin! Listen to these two verses by which the Rishis prayed to Lord Krishna at Kurukshetra. 'We bow down to You O Lord Krishna. Your intellect has never been corrupted by anything and You have managed to conceal Your potency. These kings and Yadvas gathered here - corrupted by the influences of Maya, do not recognise You as the cause and master of the universes."

Muktanand swami continued, “O Ramchandra Vipra! Bhagwan conceals the full extent of His potency not due to the fear of Kali Yug, but due to his own wish to mesmerise conceited and irreligious demons. Just as the demons hide their demonic tendencies to misguide the innocent, Bhagwan traverses the world concealing His potency to mesmerise and fool the demons. Bhagwan, in the garb of a man, seeks out demons and kills them. As it is said in the Vayu Puran, ‘The demons are unable to hide their demonic tendencies for a long time and they are exposed as demons sooner or later, but they cannot recognise Bhagwan as He can conceal His potency at all times.’ O Brahmin! The demons are mesmerised by His seemingly ordinary deeds, while His devotees are not swayed as they consider all His deeds divine. It is said in the Brahm Puran, ‘Ignorance, helplessness, mundane tasks, birth and death are not Bhagwan’s traits. He exhibits these tendencies to fool the demons.’ The Brahmand Puran adds, ‘O Brahmin! Recognise Bhagwan’s mundane deeds as innocent and divine.’ Therefore, the demons such as Kans and Jarasandh were unable to recognise Lord Krishna as supreme Bhagwan. You may then wonder how did such demons attain Moksha without recognising Him as Bhagwan? This is due solely to the divinity of Bhagwan. They attained Moksha as they thought of Him subconsciously at all times. Just as evil people do not forsake their evil tendencies, Bhagwan does not forsake His divinity even for a moment. Just as a man gets burnt by touching fire even inadvertently, an association with Bhagwan, however inadvertent, grants one salvation. Any form of association with Bhagwan frees one from the clutches of the cycle of death and rebirth.”

Muktanand swami continued, “O Brahmin! The demons and evil men not only fail to recognise Bhagwan as the supreme Lord but ignore and insult Him. Bhagwan Shree Krishna Himself says in Gita, ‘O Arjun! Ignorant and fools do not recognise Me in human form as the supreme Bhagwan of this universe. Overcome by their demonic tendencies, their natural intelligence is destroyed by their sins and Maya. They ignore Me, insult Me and never attain Me. As a result, they remain shackled forever to the vicious cycle of death and rebirth. They suffer pain wherever they take birth.’ The demons deny the existence of Bhagwan while the pious accept and recognise His presence in all the four Yugs. I have explained the meaning of the term ‘Triyug’ in great detail. You may ask further questions to satiate your curiosity.”

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! Ramchandra became subdued, whilst wise Shobharam Shastri asked a further question.”

Thus ends the 56th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 57

Shobharam Shastri asked, “O Mukta Muni! Our long standing doubt regarding Triyug has been put to rest. Please rest my other doubt. Most of the scriptures recount ten incarnations of Bhagwan. Most of the learned scholars accept this point. You consider and espouse your guru, Sahajanand Swami, as an incarnation of Bhagwan Vishnu. Which incarnation is Sahajanand Swami out of these ten? O Muktanand swami! You have recognised Him as an incarnation. Please enlighten us and subside our doubt.”

Ever smiling and serene Muktanand swami replied, “O honourable Shastri! As Bhagwan is independent to manifest Himself as and when He desires, one cannot say that His incarnations are only ten. None of the scriptures mention the figure ten, therefore, anyone vouching for only ten incarnations will face many contradictory statements from various scriptures. When King Janmejay (son of King Parikshit) asked Sage Vaishampayan (in a scripture called the Harivansh) about the number of Bhagwan’s incarnations, the sage replied, ‘According to the scholars of the Vedas, once gathered in an assembly, Bhagwan Vishnu is eternal and omnipresent. Brahma mentioned in the same assembly that there have been thousands of Bhagwan’s incarnations in the past and thousands more will indeed happen in future for the benevolence of mankind. O king! Bhagwan manifests Himself repeatedly whenever Sanatan Dharma is subdued by evil people.’ Sut Purani (narrator of the Bhagwat) has said in the first canto, ‘Just as innumerable small streams originate from a vast lake, thousands of incarnations of Almighty Bhagwan Shree Hari occur over a period of time.’ Brahma has said in the second canto of the Bhagwat, ‘ O sages! Even I, Brahma, am not able to count Bhagwan’s incarnation, neither can the sages born before you or the sages yet to be born are able to put a figure on number of Bhagwan’s incarnations. Asp Shesha, with his thousand tongues, has not yet finished counting the number of His incarnations.’ O Brahmin! In the tenth canto of the Bhagwat, Brahma prayed to Lord Krishna, ‘O Bhagwan! You manifest Yourself to protect the pious and punish the evil. However, nobody in the entire universe can comprehend and describe fully how, where, when and how many times You will manifest.”

Muktanand swami continued, "O Shobharam Shastri! Not only that, Bhagwan Shree Krishna has said Himself to King Muchkand, 'O king! My births, (incarnations), Leelas and names are indefinite, just like Me. Maybe a man can count the number of dust particles on the earth over a number of lives but no one will ever be able to count My incarnations, Leelas and names. Even sages such as Sanak are not able to put a figure on My past, present and future incarnations.' Bhagwan Shree Krishna says to Arjun (in the Gita), 'You and I have taken innumerable births. There was not a time when you, these kings and I were not present, nor will there be a time in the future when all of us will not be present.' O Brahmin! These and hundreds of other examples disprove the theory of only ten incarnations. Forget about the false notion of His ten incarnations and concentrate on His present incarnation. Ignorance accumulated over the hundreds of past lives can only be removed by direct association with Bhagwan in person. Therefore, come to Him. Shree Vallabhachrya has said in his critique on the Shreemad Bhagwat called Subodhini, 'The devotees, who have recognised Shree Krishna as Supreme Bhagwan and have associated with Him, have redeemed themselves from this world. People who had no such direct contact and had only theoretical knowledge of Bhagwan were unable to redeem themselves from this world. Just as a latent fire present within wood cannot burn it without the presence of external fire, Bhagwan present within one's heart cannot be realised fully until one realises and recognises His presence outside. The theoretical knowledge in the mind is unable to ascend (and remove ignorance) until one has a direct contact with Bhagwan. This is the real purpose of His incarnations."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shobharam Shastri was fully satisfied with Muktanand swami's answer. Ramchandra, his brother Harischandra, Shobharam Shastri and Narupant were fully satisfied and accepted that Bhagwan Narayan does indeed manifests Himself in Kali Yug and Shree Sahajanand Swami is His present manifestation. However, Chimanrao still had some doubts about Shree Hari being Bhagwan in person. He asked Muktanand swami, 'O swami! The others and I do accept that Bhagwan does indeed manifest Himself in Kali Yug. How do I accept that your guru indeed is Bhagwan? He has not performed any miracles such as lifting Mountain Govardhan or killing any mighty demons. What are His divine traits by which you accept Him as Bhagwan? Please enlighten me."

Muktanand swami replied, “A person desirous of Moksha can easily recognise Sahajanand Swami as Bhagwan in human form by looking at His divine Leelas and enhanced stature of His devotees. Thirty nine virtues remain embodied in Bhagwan whenever He takes a human form as described in the Bhagwat in a form of dialogue between the earth and Dharma. These are; truthfulness, internal and external cleanliness, compassion, not getting angry despite the presence of a reason to get angry, renunciation, contentment, forthrightness, control of mind, control of senses, austerity, non enmity towards all - treat friends and foes alike, forbearance - ability to tolerate pain and pleasure with equanimity, indifference towards worldly comforts, belief in sanctity of the scriptures, knowledge, non attachment, grandeur or opulence, bravery, aura, strength, memory, independence, expertise, beauty, patience, gentleness, ability to influence events or people, humility, virtuous, mental agility or expertise, ability to comprehend by sensual organs, agility of physical organs, absence of ego and pride, beyond hunger, thirst, happiness, sorrow, ageing and death, solemnity, composure, theistic - belief in existence of God, fame, devoid of ego and pride, ability to protect anyone seeking refuge. Unlettered and uninitiated in the intricacies of Yoga are able to traverse beyond the three stages of body (awake, dreaming and stupor) and attain divine bliss with His mercy. With His blessing, His devotees are able to control their mind, which even Brahma and other mighty Devtas are not able to do. He puts His devotees into deep Samadhi even without first mastering the intricacies of Ashtang Yog and shows His various forms in His divine abodes. His devotees are able to overcome anger, lust, affection, taste, greed and ego with His benevolence. All this is not possible by anyone except Bhagwan Himself.”

Muktanand swami continued, “The other divine Leelas such as vanquishing Asp Kalinag are incidental for a specific incarnation and for the devotees to reminiscence Him by retelling them. Holding Mountain Govardhan on His finger tip was to illustrate His supremacy to waylaid Devtas such as Indra. Such Leelas are not indicative of Him being Bhagwan. The mighty demons such as Hiranyaksha held up not only mountain but the whole globe. Does that make him Bhagwan? Of course not. The principal trait of Bhagwan is to remove ignorance of His devotees and annihilate the demons (in whatever form), who threaten Sanatan Dharma and its adherers. O brave one! There are two types of demons; one bearing weapons of mass destruction and the other in the garb of an evil saint. Bhagwan uses two distinct methods to kill them; the armed ones are killed by weapons (beheading etc.) while the pretentious Sadhus have their livelihood taken away by exposing their religious malpractices. The scholars recognise two types of livelihood (or behaviour); divine and demonic. Bhagwan Shree Krishna explains both types of traits in great detail in the Bhagvad Gita as. 'O Arjun! Valour, piousness, enhanced knowledge of spiritual knowledge, natural empathy for learning, charity, austerity and Yagna, truthfulness, gentleness, humility, chastity of body and mind, patience, determination, clemency, strength, compassion and absence or apathy towards anger, greed, criticism of others, ego enmity and jealousy are some of the main divine traits a devout person is born with. A demonic person is born with vices such as hypocrisy, ego, pride, anger, ignorance and violence. Divine traits are redeeming and liberating from the cycle of death and rebirth, while the demonic traits are binding. O Bharat! Do not despair. You are born with divine traits. There are two types of people in this world. I have explained the life of divine people. Now let Me explain how the demonic people behave in this world. They do not have the power to discriminate right from wrong. They lack piety, chastity and truth. They espouse that there is no supreme authority (Bhagwan) in this world and they believe that it is merely a product of union of male and female created to satiate desires and base instincts. Trying to fulfil the unquenchable stream of desires, they spend their entire life in terrible and harming action, which leads to the destruction of the world as we know it. The dimwits commit innumerable sins in futile attempt to acquire temporary assets and pleasures. They believe that one should endeavour to quench sensual desires until the last breath. They acquire wealth by foul means to satisfy their urges. As they attain their goals, they keep planning for further goals. They are never satisfied with what they have acquired and try to acquire more. They think they are the wealthiest, mightiest, happiest and indeed the master of everything they set their eyes on; no one is above them and they will now enjoy the fruits of their labour. O Arjun! They do not know the truth! Entangled in illusionary Maya, overwhelmed by their own foolishness and drowning in the quagmire of their never ending desires, they go to hell after their death. The religious rites they perform, such as Yagnas, border on incredulity and are an exercise in futility. Burdened with the vices such as greed, anger, ego, lust and physical power, do not recognise Me, dwelling in their hearts and the hearts of others.

Muktanand swami continued, "O Chimanrao! This is how Lord Krishna describes the two types of people. Whenever the weapons bearing demons create havoc in the world, Bhagwan manifests Himself to kill such demons with weapons. On the contrary, Bhagwan kills their inherent demonic tendencies only (without killing them) whenever the demons hide themselves as fake saints and try to lead people astray by maligning Sanatan Dharma. The divine tendencies within them ascend as their demonic tendencies are removed by Bhagwan's grace. People at large are able to see the miraculous change in their lives after a divine encounter with Bhagwan. Shree Hari ensures their liberation from the cycle of death and rebirth. Sinners attain Moksha after encountering Him and coming under His tutelage. We call Shree Sahajanand Swami Bhagwan because He has all the virtues associated with God and not just because He is our guru. Thousands of sinners have given up their murky past to lead pious lives after meeting Him. Thousands of people have witnessed many devotees slip into blissful Samadhi without mastering the intricacies of Yoga. Thousands of people, devotees and non devotees alike, have witnessed His and His Parshads' coming to take devotees to His supreme abode at the time of their death. It is for these reasons that people at large call Him Bhagwan and become His devotees. You may ask me further questions if you are still not convinced that our guru is indeed a manifestation of Bhagwan in human form."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! All their doubts were laid to rest after hearing Muktanand swami. They forsook their views and embraced the principle espoused by Muktanand swami and concluded that Shree Sahajanand Swami is indeed a manifestation of Bhagwan Vishnu in person."

CHAPTER 58

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Ramchandra and others bowed down to Muktanand swami and said very humbly, 'O chaste Muni! You have removed our all doubts. Nobody could have explained the principle of the scriptures as good as you can. The scholars we had encountered so far were pretentious and interested only in accumulating wealth, enjoying palate and cavorting with women and therefore could not explain the profound meaning of the scripture. We had heard the tales of greatness and piety of Lord Swaminarayan and His saints from people at large, but nobody had clarified His position as candidly as you have. Local scholars criticise Lord Swaminarayan and due to their ignorance, allege that He is just an ordinary mortal man. They do not realise that He can liberate men from the clutches of Maya. We had defeated many scholars in open debates; and overcome with ego, did not bow down to any scholars. However, you have silenced us with your arguments. We have realised that your guru, Shree Swaminarayan, is indeed Bhagwan in person and we have become His disciples. Please take us to Bhagwan Shree Hari for His divine Darshan.' O king! Muktanand swami realised that their ego had vanished and they have become humble. Swami said, 'You are intelligent and desirous of Moksha, otherwise, you would not have been able to accept Shree Swaminarayan as supreme Bhagwan in person. You should listen to His Katha everyday from me, by which your latent doubts will vanish. His Darshan becomes fully gratifying only after understanding His greatness. We will go for His Darshan once your views on His godliness become totally resolute.' O king! Ramchandra and his companions bowed down to Muktanand swami once again and returned to their respective homes happy and fully satisfied. The others in the assembly, though not fully convinced by swami's arguments, were bewildered at their defeat and returned in silence."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Many local people believed in Lord Swaminarayan as supreme Bhagwan in person and came to Muktanand swami to hear his discourses. Muktanand swami was not at all surprised by the fact that he defeated scholars such as Ramchandra, Shobhram and Chimanrao because he knew that this was due only to Bhagwan Shree Hari's blessings. Muktanand swami talked only about the greatness of Bhagwan in his regular discourses, which were attended by a large number of people including Ramchandra and his group of five. Their belief in Shree Hari being Bhagwan Himself became more resolute and their desire for his Darshan became stronger as days passed by. Muktanand swami advised them to meditate upon Shree Hari's dusky Murti attired in white robes. O king! Ramchandra and others heeded swami's advice and had Bhagwan's Darshan in their heart very soon. They slipped into Samadhi and saw Shree Hari in the middle of a brilliant radiance. Their joy knew no bounds at such a divine Darshan so soon. They faithfully followed Muktanand swami's advice and instructions to enhance their devotion towards Shree Hari. Ramchandra and his group advised their followers to follow Muktanand swami if they desired Moksha. Thousands of people of Vadodara became Shree Hari's disciples and joined the fold of the Udhhav Sampraday."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Narupant, a friend of Ramchandra and a minister in the court of King Sayajirao narrated the whole event to his master. Surprised at such an amazing turnaround of events, King Sayajirao, along with his retinue, came for Muktanand swami's Darshan on Vasant Panchmi. He humbly bowed down to swami and said, 'O swami! I know that my happiness and well being is due to pious saints like you. I am indebted to you that you came to Vadodara to grant your Darshan to my subjects and me. I wish to have Darshan of Lord Swaminarayan as well. I urge you to request your guru, Sahajanand Swami to grace the city of Vadodara to grant His divine Darshan. Make my wish come true."

Muktanand swami replied, "O king! You have thought well. Though Bhagwan Shree Hari acts independently, I will surely request Him on your behalf. You are pious, learned and wise and know what is good for you. I know that you have very little time from your royal duties, but you must still find some time to meditate upon Him. His reminiscence is the only means to attain eternal bliss in the next life. According to the scriptures, the reward of having virtues such as compassion, chastity, leniency and control of senses is love for Bhagwan. What is the point of having any virtues if one's mind is not engaged in His reminiscence? Everything in this world is futile except love for Bhagwan. All of us are troubled by vagaries of this world. The scriptures espouse that one needs to take shelter under Bhagwan's divine feet if he wishes to segregate his mind from ill effects of the world and attain lasting peace. Listening to His Katha subsides all worries. There is nothing more redeeming than chanting His name, even inadvertently. Bhagwan does not forget His devotees even for a moment. He protects His devotees from the onslaught of inner foes such as anger and greed as well as external foes. Therefore, His devotees call Him Prabhu. He is omnipresent in the hearts of all living beings, but can be recognised and realised only by the help of His pious saints. O king! One can cross over the quagmire like world only with the help of His tutelage. The vices such as anger, greed and lust overwhelm one without the constant remembrance of his name."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! King Sayajirao of Vadodara was delighted at listening to Muktanand swami's discourse. He bowed down to swami once again before returning to his palace. Continuing his daily discourses, Muktanand swami stayed at Vadodara for three and a half months before sending for a request for Bhgawan's Darshan. On getting permission to travel to Vadtaal, Muktanand swami, accompanied by many devotees led by Nathji, Ramchandra and others arrived at Vadtaal on Falgun Sud Ekadashi. Ramchandra saw Bhagwan Narayanmuni exactly as he had seen in Samadhi at Vadodara. Delighted at His divine Darshan in person, he prostrated at His feet. Shree Hari was very pleased when Muktanand swami narrated the events of Vadodara and profusely praised swami. O king! I narrated the episode of Vadodara in short at your request. By Bhagwan's grace and divinity, even the devotees in far flung places attain Samadhi without mastering the intricacies of Yoga, which is difficult even to accomplished Yogis.

Thus ends the 58th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

King Pratapsinh said, "O Muni! My hunger for hearing His Katha remains insatiate. Please continue and tell me what transpired after Shree Hari returned to Gadhpur from Vadtaal."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! You are very interested in listening to Shree Hari's Katha because your intellect has become lucid as a result of His Bhakti. (As I mentioned at the end of chapter 53) Bhagwan Shree Hari left Vadtaal (on Chaitra Sud Baras, Samvat 1881). He delighted the devotees of the villages en route by staying in their villages for a day or two, before reaching Gadhpur on Vaishakh Sud Padvo. After concluding His routine morning rituals, He celebrated the birth anniversary of Katchh (Kurma) Avtar. He fed His saints, Parshads and thousands of Brahmins at the end of the festivities. O king! On the same day, Hemantsinh of Junagadh and Punjaji of Dholera arrived at Gadhpur for His Darshan. Inadvertently, they reached the entrance of the royal courtyard at the same time and went for Shree Hari's Darshan together, after exchanging greetings and pleasantries. Shree Hari heartily welcomed them and asked of their well being. Uttam Khachar made suitable arrangements for them to stay within the royal residence. They were looking for an opportune moment to present their proposals to Shree Hari, which they found on the evening of Jeth Sud Purnima after the festivities of Chandan Yatra were over.

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Narayanmuni was sitting on an ornate Sinhasan in His personal quarters. King Hemantsinh humbly said to Shree Hari with folded hands, 'O Bhagwan! We want you to fulfil the latent desires of the devotees of Junagadh by granting us the permission to build a temple dedicated to Lord RadhaKrishna there. King Bahadurkhan of Junagadh, though a Muslim, has granted his consent for the temple. You have already fulfilled such desires of the devotees of other towns.' O King Pratapsinh! Just as Hemantsinh finished his pleadings, Punjaji made a similar request, 'O Bhagwan! We desire the same. We will extend all help in building a temple at Dholera.' Shree Hari addressed them together, 'Both of you have thought well. I also want the same. Go ahead and construct the temples and I shall come and install the idols of Lord Shree Krishna at the appropriate time."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari called for Brahmanand swami and said to him, 'O Muni! I want you to go to Junagadh with Hemantsinh and start the construction of a temple. Let Me know when it is complete so that I can come and install idols in the Sinhasan.' O king! Shree Hari turned towards Adbhutanand swami and made a similar request, 'O Muni! Go to Dholera with Punjabhai and start the construction of a stone temple.' Brahmanand swami and Adbhutanand swami bowed down to Shree Hari and nodded in assent. Hemantsinh and Punjaji left Gadhpur with respective saints on Narsinh Chaturdashi after seeking Bhagwan Shree Hari's blessings. Brahmanand swami and Adbhutanand swami engaged expert sculptors and stonemasons and with the help of local devotees, started the construction work at Junagadh and Dholera respectively."

After the departure of Hemantsinh and Punjaji, Shree Hari, along with His two brothers Rampratapbhai and Ichharam, started listening to Katha of the BrahmVaivart Puran on Vaishakh Vad Panchmi. At the conclusion of the Katha on Bhadarvo Sud Choth, Shree Hari reverentially offered His veneration to Ganpatiji and fed Ladoos made of Ghee and jaggery to thousands of Brahmins. Shree Hari listened to the Katha of the Pancham Skandh of Shreemad Bhagwat Puran next, which was concluded on Dhan Teras (Aso Sud Teras). He gifted Pragji Purani with plenty of wealth and robes. O king! Shree Hari celebrated the birth (second) anniversary of Hanumanji the next day with full pomp and regalia. He offered a special veneration to all His celibate Brahamchari as a special honour of Hanumanji. He celebrated the festivals of Diwali and Annkoot in the same way as of the previous years. To mark the birth and death anniversaries of His mother Bhaktimata and birth anniversary of His father Dharmadev at Vadtaal, Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan left Gadhpur on Kartik Sud Choth."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The wives of His two brothers and other womenfolk of Gadhpur followed Shree Hari on His way to Vadtaal. Encircled by hundreds of armed Parshad led by Uttam and Soma Khachar, Shree Hari reached Vadtaal at noon on the fourth day. The devotees of Vadtaal rushed forward to greet and welcome Shree Hari in their town. Shree Hari retired at His personal quarters called Hari Mandap within the precinct of the temple after the Darshan of LaxmiNarayan Dev and arranging for suitable boarding for other devotees. He sent messengers to invite His devotees from far afield to participate in the anniversary celebrations of His parents and asked for local devotees to gather the necessary artefacts and food grains, oil, Ghee etc. He gifted cows, cloths and ornaments to hundreds of Brahmins to mark the onset of the first Satya Yug the next day. He marked the death anniversary of His mother on Kartik Sud Dasmi and birth anniversary of Dharmadev the day after. On both days, Shree Hari fed sumptuous meals to thousands of His devotees and gifted thousands of Brahmins generously with money and cloths."

CHAPTER 60

Suvrat Muni said, “O king! Shree Hari held a large assembly in the evening of Prabodhani Ekadashi. While He took His seat on a high and ornate Sinhasan, the devotees of the Sampraday took their seats as per the decorum of the Sampraday. Rampratapbhai, Ichharambhai and their sons sat on a floor near Shree Hari’s Sinhasan. Varnis (Brahmin saints) such as Mukundanand, Jayanand and Vaasudevanand; eminent and elder saints such as Muktanand, Brahmanand, Gopalanand, and Nityanand; scholar Brahmins such as Shivram, Mayaram and Dinanath; kings such as Uttam, Sura, Vasta, Soma, Hemantsinh, Punjaji and Kakabhai; Kshatriya devotees such as Bhaguji, Ratanji and Viraji; Vaishya devotees such as Ranchhod and Nathji and female devotees led by Jaya, Lalita, Rama, Amari, Ganga, Reva and Punji took their appropriate seats in the assembly.”

Suvrat Muni continued, “As soon as everybody sat down and fell silent, Shree Hari said to His two brothers, ‘O brothers! Listen to My benevolent words. The seat that I adorn at the moment (of being the guru and leader of the Udhhav Sampraday) was thrust upon Me by Ramanand swami. I agreed to take up this responsibility for two reasons; one, I must obey My guru’s decree and two, so that I can espouse and propagate the tenets of the Sanatan Dharma in this world. However, influenced by repeatedly listening to the fifth and tenth cantos of the Shreemad Bhagwat, I have decided to renounce everything and engage only in the Bhakti of Lord Krishna. I have decided to establish descendants of our Father Dharmadev as the heirs to this throne. Therefore, I ask both of you to give me one son each, whom I can adopt.’ O king! Rampratapbhai replied, ‘O Hari! I have three sons and You can choose any one of them.’ Ichharam agreed to His request and said that He is free to choose any one of his five sons for adoption. O king! Shree Hari was pleased with His brothers’ positive response and said to His brothers, ‘I ask Ayodhyaprasad and Raghuvir from Rampratapbhai and Ichharambhai respectively. ‘O King Pratapsinh! Both brothers readily agreed and presented their two named sons to Shree Hari. Accompanied by elaborate rituals prescribed in the scriptures, Bhagwan Swaminarayan adopted Ayodhyaparasad and Raghuvir as His sons. He made them sit on His own Sinhasan, gifted them with new expensive robes and asked leading devotees to venerate them.”

Shree Hari addressed His sons, “Listen to Me carefully. Lord Krishna is our Ishtadev (personal form of God). I have built many temples and have asked devotees to donate five or ten percent of their income for their perpetual upkeep. NarNarayan Dev temple at Amdavad and LaxmiNarayan Dev temple at Vadtaal are the two principal temples. I have divided India into two dioceses for administrative purposes. The Northern diocese will be known as NarNarayan Desh (region) and Southern diocese will be known as LaxmiNarayan Desh. Whatever donations - money, food grains, land etc., offered by the devotees of respective regions shall be deemed to belong to that diocese. I establish both of you as Acharyas of each diocese to act as the devotees' guru and to make sure that devotees of your Desh remain within the boundaries of religiosity and behave as per the decorum of the Sampraday."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari asked Shukanand swami to prepare two identical copies of the documents (known as Desh Vibhag Lekh), one for NarNarayan and the other for LaxmiNarayan Desh setting out all the details as He had narrated. He asked Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji to pick one copy each. Raghuvirji Maharaj picked the copy marked LaxmiNarayan Desh and Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj picked the one marked NarNarayan Desh. O king! Shree Hari addressed the congregation, 'O devotees! As from today, consider Raghuvirji as Acharya of the southern LaxmiNarayan diocese and Ayodhyaprasadji as Acharya of the northern NarNarayan diocese. All My disciples residing in the respective regions must accept them as their guru and Acharya. The female devotees of respective regions must accept their wives as their respective guru. This is My wish and command which all of you must comply with. All of you must respect and venerate them with food, cloths, ornaments and wealth as per your financial means. Whoever venerates these two and other future Acharyas will indeed attain Bhagwan Shree Krishna's supreme abode."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari turned to His sons and said to them, 'O sons! You must consider only the residents of your diocese as your disciples and not of the other region. You must accept offerings from the devotees of your own Desh and not from the devotees of the other diocese. However, the saints and Parshads will treat you equally without any partiality. Any saint showing partiality towards any of the Acharyas will be considered a transgressor. You must appoint two householder (Grahastha) devotees to mediate upon any dispute regarding the disciples or wealth.

The celibate saints must never be asked to solve any monetary disputes. Similarly, your wives must ask two married women to mediate but never any widows. The saints and widows must never be allowed to mediate in the disputes of the householders. Your behaviour must always conform to the eight scriptures I have recommended and you must ensure that you and your disciples follow the same principles. O sons! Your fathers and your siblings will have no right on whatever I have given you (in inheritance) - the temples and wealth, as I have acquired them through My own means. I am Narayan Rishi of Badrikaashram; I came here independently and one day, will return to My abode independently. I have maintained celibacy and renunciation while in this world. I have given whatever I wanted to give to whoever I wanted to give. Just as I have established you as Acharya in My place, you must appoint one of your sons as future Acharya to take your place. He must be suitable to protect his disciples; well liked by the congregation and religious. There is no rule to appoint the eldest son as an Acharya. O sons! If none of your own sons is suitable to become Acharya, you must follow My example and adopt a child born in the clan of My father Dharmadev. The dignified post of Acharya must never be given to an unsuitable heir. You and all My other disciples must obey this decree. Anyone not conforming to this decree must be expelled from this Sampraday."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! All disciples present in the assembly agreed to abide by Shree Hari's decree. The newly appointed Acharyas, Raghuvirji Maharaj and Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj bowed down to Shree Hari and said, 'O Bhagwan! You are the supreme Lord of the universe. You have come on this earth on Your independent wish. You are indeed Narayan Rishi in human form. Only You are venerable to all of us, Who has come to re-establish Sanatan Dharma. We pray to You to grant us that we remain engrossed in You and we never transgress from the path of religion espoused by You or become attached to our worldly relatives.' O king! CHAPTER 61

Suvrat Muni said, O king! As Shree Hari was recuperating after the hectic celebration of the birth and death anniversaries of His parents, Narupant of Vadodara came for His Darshan. Shree Hari accorded him the welcome befitting a minister to the royal court of Maharaja Sayajirao Gaekwad. Narupant prostrated at the lotus feet of Shree Hari and pleaded with folded hands, 'O Bhagwan! King Sayajirao has sent his regards to You and invited You to grace Vadodara. Indeed, I have come to ask You to accompany me to Vadodara. He has become very impatient for Your Darshan since he saw Muktanand Swami.' O king! Muktanand swami, who was sitting nearby concurred with Narupant and urged Shree Hari to proceed to Vadodara to fulfil Sayajirao's desire. Shree Hari replied to Narupant, 'I know that King Sayajirao has sincere devotion towards Me. Muktanand swami has already made Me aware of his devotion prior to your arrival. Your arrival and invitation has reaffirmed that fact. I will indeed come to Vadodara. However, I want you to proceed to Vadodara tomorrow morning and inform the king that I shall arrive at Vadodara on Kartik Vad Panchmi in the company of My saints, Parshads and devotees.' O King Pratapsinh! Narupant passed the gifts that King Sayajirao had sent for Shree Hari. Shree Hari in turn gave an expensive shawl to Muktanand swami and distributed various fruits amongst the rest of the saints."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Narupant returned to Vadodara after a day's rest at Vadtaal and recounted the details of his meeting with Shree Hari and His intention of gracing Vadodara soon. Sayajirao arranged for Shree Hari's hospitality in a guest house in a park nearby his palace. On Kartik Vad Chaturthi, Shree Hari left Vadtaal for Vadodara. Astride a horse, He was surrounded by many Parshads astride their respective mounts. Hundreds of saints and devotees followed Him on foot. The devotees of the villages en route offered Him their venerations. After crossing the River Mahi, Shree Hari reached a village called Sankarda in the evening and stayed the night at

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The news of the imminent arrival of Shree Hari had spread throughout Vadodara. The antagonists could not sleep the whole night thinking and devising new ways to challenge His supremacy. Some of them even prepared to wage an armed battle with Him. The devout were very eager to see Lord Swaminarayan in person. Some people were simply bewildered and curious, while the others still went into hiding fearing that they may be mesmerised with black magic. King Sayajirao was very excited at the prospect of having Shree Hari's Darshan. He asked Narupant to take a platoon of army including cavalry and infantry; and several elephants adorned with finery and mounted with Howdah. Narupant proceeded to welcome Bhagwan Shree Hari and met Him at Chaani village, approximately four miles away from Vadodara. Narupant dismounted from his horse as soon as he saw Bhagwan and prostrated on the ground. He asked Shree Hari to sit astride a lead elephant and other saints were seated on other elephants, horses, chariots, palanquins and carts. O king! Narupant sat behind Shree Hari on the same Howdah, ever ready to carry out His command. The whole procession inched towards the city of Vadodara accompanied by the royal band. Tens of thousands of citizens of Vadodara lined both sides of the avenue that carried the procession for His divine Darshan. Astride a highly adorned elephant, wearing all white robes including a diadem, Shree Hari appeared very radiant. His royal elephant was surrounded by the cavalry of Vadodara with soldiers holding shining spears in their hands. The accompanying saints and devotees sang Kirtans extolling His glory while the band played music. The devotees lining the avenue shouted 'Jay' 'Jay'. The various sounds reverberated around the area. O king! Alerted of Shree Hari's arrival by the sounds, King Sayajirao rushed forward to greet Him. Sayajirao bowed down to Shree Hari and extended his hand to help Shree Hari dismount from the Howdah. Pleased with the king's humility and decorum, Shree Hari embraced him."

CHAPTER 62

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! When freed from the embrace by Shree Hari, King Sayajirao bowed down to Shree Hari again with folded hands. Holding His hand, the king led Him inside the palace. He seated Shree Hari on a royal throne and said humbly with folded hands, 'O Prabhu! The purpose of my life is fulfilled with Your Darshan. The whole earth has become holy with the touch of Your feet. You have done a great favour by granting me Your divine Darshan. I have come under Your shelter and will obey all Your commands.' O king! Sayajirao led Shree Hari to His temporary residence in a guest house in the lush garden. Numerous tents were pitched in the grounds of the garden for accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees. The king accorded a suitable welcome to Shree Hari and the other accompanied devotees and appointed Ramchandra and Nathji to oversee their comfort and needs. The leading devotees offered opulent venerations to Shree Hari the next day and gifted fine robes to Him. King Sayajirao brought Shree Hari to his palace astride an elephant for veneration on the third day. The king made Shree Hari sit on his royal throne while he and his kith and kin sat in front of Him."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni spoke to the king to please him. 'O king! Listen carefully to My benevolent words. Human life is the most desirable thing in this universe. Even the Devtas yearn for it. The materialistic pleasures, for which many people toil hard, are easily available in all other life forms; but Moksha can be attained only through human body. All pleasures, however lengthy they appear, are temporary in nature and are always followed by the period of sorrow. The periods of happiness and sorrow are intertwined in a vicious circle, from which there is no escape. Though people at large consider a king like you very happy, I consider him an epitome of sorrows. A king is always worried about his enemies and thieves, lest they plunder his ancestral wealth. How can a king be happy when his whole life is devoted after accumulating wealth? O king! The true and eternal happiness lies with Bhagwan. Bhagwan is independent from all external forces and his happiness is self-derived.

His devotees attain this happiness through His devotion and subservience. What can be said about the happiness of any king on earth when bliss of even Indra, the king of Devtas, is miniscule when compared to the happiness of His devotees? Just as an elephant sitting in the waters of the river is not affected by the prevailing heat, the devotees remain calm in the face of unconquerable vices such as ego, lust and anger. All other people are vanquished and troubled by such vices. O king! You are intelligent. Seek shelter of Lord Krishna, from which you will attain both; pleasure and Moksha."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Maharaja Sayajirao replied, 'O Bhagwan! I have no doubt that You are Lord Krishna in person. I have come under Your shelter. Have mercy on me and stay here for some time.' Shree Hari replied, 'O king! I wish to listen to the Katha of the Puranans. I haven't come here to enjoy the opulent sojourn or luxuries of your palace. I have come here as a direct result of your sincere devotion towards Me, otherwise; I would not have come here.' O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari gave a lengthy sermon on devotion to Sayajirao following which he venerated Him reverently with sandalwood paste, incense, rice, flowers etc. The Maharaja also venerated the accompanying saints with equal reverence. Shree Hari once again advised to tread the path of religiosity before he got up to leave. King Sayajirao alerted his soldiers to provide a guard of honour, while he followed behind Shree Hari on foot. Shree Hari rode on the royal elephant at the head of the procession after asking Maharaja Sayajirao to return to his palace. O king! After realising the honour bestowed on Shree Hari by the maharaja of Vadodara, the antagonists could not do anything untoward. Shree Hari left Vadodara with the same regal pomp that He had entered the city and His fame spread even wider after His visit to Vadodara. Shree Hari asked the royal entourage to return back to the city after some distance away from Vadodara and He returned to Vadtaal on a horseback accompanied by His mounted Parshads, saints and devotees."

CHAPTER 63

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Upon reaching Vadtaal, Shree Hari praised King Sayajirao Gaekwad profusely. He gifted everything valuable the He had received from Sayajirao to Raghuvirji. As He wanted to listen to the Katha of the tenth canto of Shreemad Bhagwat in seclusion, He asked King Uttam, his family and Rampratapbhai to return to Gadhpur. He assured them that He will return soon after the conclusion of the Katha. Though not happy at the prospect of separation from Shree Hari, King Uttam and others returned to Gadhpur as asked. All other devotees of far off places returned to their respective villages at Shree Hari's decree. The saints spread out to various regions to spread Shree Hari's message and His glory."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari listened to the Katha of the tenth canto of Shreemad Bhagwat very reverently, for one and a half months starting from Kartik Vad Ekadashi. Shree Hari listened to the Katha of the fifth canto of the Bhagwat following the tenth canto which concluded on Maha Sud Panchmi. Shree Hari praised the contents of these two cantos highly and held them in high esteem. They were His favourite. He generously gifted the narrator of the Katha much wealth and new robes. He celebrated the festival of colours in the afternoon culminating in the elaborate worship of Lord LaxmiNarayan. O king! Shree Hari fed sumptuous meals to one thousand Brahmins at the conclusion of the festival and gifted each of them a soft blanket. Many devotees of nearby villages also turned up to participate in the festival of spring."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari sat in seclusion in the evening and decided to compose a scripture for the benevolence of all His disciples. He thought, 'I should write a small scripture setting out the code of ethical conduct for the benevolence of all My disciples. They will understand exactly what I intend to say and how I would like them to behave, by reading this composition. It will remove any ambiguity from their minds. This scripture – Shikshapatri will guide them and strengthen their devotion towards Me when I am no longer present in their midst in My current form.' O king! Thinking thus, Shree Hari asked for a pen and papers from one of His

Thus ends the 63rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, O king! Lord Swaminarayan offered auspicious prayers at the beginning of writing the Shikshapatri, 'I meditate, in My heart, upon Lord Shree Krishna, on whose left stands Radhikaji, in whose heart resides Laxmiji and who plays (with His Bhaktos) in Vrindavan' before continuing further, 'I, Sahajanand Swami, write this Shikshapatri, Gospel of Life Divine, to all My disciples who reside in different parts of the world from Vadtaal. Rampratapji and Ichharamji, the sons of Shree Dharma Dev, are My brothers. Rampratapji's son, Ayodhyaprasadji and Ichharamji's son Raghuvirji, both of whom I have adopted as My sons and established them as the Acharyas (Heads) of this Satsang and its adherers. The NaisthikBrahamcharis (the Brahmin celibates), represented by Mukundanand; and the devoted householders like Mayaram Bhatt and others. All My female disciples, married and widows; and all My Sadhus like Muktanand and others may you accept My divine Blessing (which are there to defend our religion) prescribed by the happy remembrance of Shreemann Narayan. My disciples shall all concentrate on the benevolent aim of writing this Shikshapatri, which is written for the spiritual and material welfare of everybody. Those who observe the Ethics (e.g. non-violence) as prescribed by Holy Scriptures, such as the Shreemad Bhagwat, shall derive happiness in this world as well as in the next. However, those who violate these Rules of ethics and behave contrary are evil-minded and shall suffer great distress in this world as well as in the next. Hence, all My disciples shall lovingly follow the commandments of this Shikshapatri vigilantly and shall never violate them.'

'My disciples shall never intentionally kill any living creature, not even small insects such as lice, mosquitoes, flies or bugs. They shall never kill goats and/or other living beings in sacrifices performed for any kind of Yagna, for non-violence is declared by all the scriptures, as the highest Dharma. One shall never commit homicide, even in order to acquire women, wealth, political power or an empire. other means. One shall never eat meat, nor drink liquor, wine or intoxicating beverages even in a moment of extreme necessity; and even if offered as remains of a Yagna or Prasad of a deity. One shall never mutilate any part of one's body or that of others' with a weapon or by any other means, in order to punish oneself or others for any unworthy deed or sin either by oneself or by others. One shall not steal, even for the sake of performing an act of Dharma. No article, even firewood, flowers etc… owned by others shall ever be taken without their owner's permission. My male and female disciples shall never commit adultery nor indulge in gambling and similar vices. They shall abstain from inhaling and drinking intoxicating substances such as bhang, tobacco, snuff and the likes. My devotees shall not accept any food or drink prepared by a person from whom one is prohibited to take such things by the Holy Scriptures, even if it is the Prasad (sanctified food) from the offerings to Lord Shree Krishna, at any place, except the Prasad of Lord Jagannath of Puri. One shall never make false accusations or abuse anyone even if it serves one's self-interest. '

'Never criticise, slander or speak ill of any Deity, Devta, places of pilgrimage, Brahmin, chaste and devout wife or the Vedas, nor listen to such criticism or slander. One must not accept Prasad of any deity to whom alcohol or meat is offered and/or before whom goats or other animals are scarified. When passing by temples of Lord Shiva and other deities, one must bow to them and perform Darshan of residing deities with due reverence. One shall never abandon one's own Dharma (ethical duties) as ordained by one's own Varna and Ashram nor follow a course of conduct prescribed for others, nor follow any faith which is pretentious or fictitious. One must not listen to the religious discourse from a person who is trying to deviate us from Bhakti of Lord Krishna and our true religious behaviour. One shall never speak such truth which might bring about great harm to one's self or to others, nor keep the company of ungrateful people, nor take any bribe from anyone in social affairs. You, My devotees, shall never associate with thieves, sinners, addicts, hypocrites, licentious, lecherous and deceitful persons. One must not associate with persons who under the pretext of religion or devotion lust after wealth, women or other worldly pleasures and commit sins. One shall never hear or believe those scriptures in which the existence of Lord Shree Krishna and His incarnations have been skilfully and deceitfully denied or degraded.'

'My devotees must not drink water or milk without filtering it first. They must not bathe in water which has many small micro-organisms. One shall never take medicine which contains alcohol or meat extracts, nor take medicine from an unknown physician

One shall never excrete, urinate or spit in dilapidated temples, banks of rivers or ponds, main roads, fields sown with seeds, shades of trees, orchards, gardens or similar places prohibited by scriptures and society. One shall never enter or exit through a secret passage, and shall not occupy, even temporarily, any private property without the permission of its owner. My male disciples must not listen to the religious discourse (Katha) by females, nor enter into arguments with females, rulers, courtiers and their relatives. One shall never insult a guru, elders, famous, dignified, learned or armed. One shall never perform duties pertaining to one's social affairs in haste without careful consideration, whereas duties relating to Dharma shall be performed immediately. Those who are learned shall impart their knowledge to others, and shall always associate with saintly persons. One shall never go empty handed to a guru, a deity or a king. One shall never commit a breach of trust and shall never praise oneself. My disciples shall never wear clothes which are likely to cause an indecent exposure of their body. One shall never practise devotion to Lord Shree Krishna without observance of Dharma and shall never give up devotion to Lord Shree Krishna for fear of criticism or disapproval from ignorant persons. All those who come to the temple of Lord Shree Krishna either daily or on days of religious festivals, must avoid direct contact with persons of the opposite sex within the temple precinct; and after coming out from temples, they may behave normally.'

'My Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya disciples who have been initiated into this Satsang by their guru shall wear a double stringed Kanthi made from Tulsi wood around their neck and do a Tilak-Chandlo on their forehead, chest and both arms. This Tilak should be done with Gopichandan or sandalwood paste mixed with Kumkum, which has previously been offered to Lord Shree Krishna. One shall do a Chandlo in the centre of the Tilak of Gopichandan or Kumkum, which has been previously offered to Radhikaji or Laxmiji. My devout Shudra disciples observing their Dharma, shall wear a Kanthi of Tulsi and Tilak-Chandlo similar to those of the Brahmins, the Kshatriyas and the Vaishyas. My other disciples, who are lower than Shudras, shall wear double stringed Kanthi of sandalwood around their neck and only a Chandlo (without Tilak) on their forehead. Brahmins, who have inherited Tripund (three lined horizontal Tilak) or Rudraksha Kanthi from their forefathers, may continue to do so even after becoming My disciples and being initiated into this Sampraday. No distinction shall be made between Lord Narayan and Shiva, as they both have been proclaimed as Brahmasvarupa by the Vedas. My disciples shall never practise the relaxations of edicts or rules, permitted by scriptures for extremely adverse conditions, as the principal

'All My disciples shall get up daily before sun-rise, offer prayers to Lord Shree Krishna, while still in bed, before attending the call of nature. Then proceed to brush teeth, which must be done sitting or standing at one place. Then bathe with clean water and wear washed and clean two items of clothing, one around the waist and other around the torso. Then sit in a clean place, on a clean and suitable cloth, untouched by others, and facing North or East to prepare for daily Puja. All male devotees must do Tilak and Chandlo on their forehead. All married women devotees must mark a Chandlo of Kumkum on their forehead. Widows shall neither do a Tilak nor a Chandlo. All My disciples shall then meditate upon Lord Shree Krishna and perform Mansi Puja with sandalwood, flowers etc. Then they shall, with due respect, bow down before the Murtis of Shree Radha Krishna, and recite the eight syllabled holy hymn of Shree Krishna according to their capacity. After Puja they may proceed to attend to their daily routines. Those of my Atmanivedi devotees, like King Ambarish, who have entirely dedicated their lives in My service, must also follow morning rituals described above up to and including Mansi Puja and meditation. Then My Atmanivedi devotees shall worship Shaligram or the Murti of Lord Shree Krishna made of stone or metal with the offerings of real fruits, flowers, sandalwood paste, rice etc. according to their ability. They shall then recite the eight syllabled sacred hymn of Shree Krishna. They shall then read hymns or the religious scriptures about Lord Shree Krishna according to their ability, and those who do not know Sanskrit, shall sing songs in the praise of Lord Shree Krishna and chant His name. They shall offer Naivedhya to Lord Shree Krishna, and eat this sanctified food as His Prasad. They shall thus always remain in the service of Lord Shree Krishna with dedication and supreme love. These Atmanivedi devotees are considered as Nirguna (free from the effects of the three qualities of Maya) because all their deeds are purified by their continuous and devout contact with Lord Shree Krishna, who is forever Nirguna. Such Atmanivedi devotees shall never drink water or eat roots, fruits, leaves etc. without first offering them to Lord Shree Krishna. '

'My disciples, who have become disabled by old age or by some illness, shall give their Murtis of Puja to some other disciples. The disabled disciples shall thereafter serve God to the best of their ability. My disciples shall worship only those Murtis of Lord Shree Krishna, which have been given to them by the Acharya of DharmaKul or installed by him. Other idols may be respectfully bowed to, but not worshipped. All My disciples shall go to the temple everyday in the evening and once there, they shall sing the praise and glory of Lord Shree Krishna loudly. They shall read and/or listen to the Katha with deep reverence. They shall celebrate all festivals by singing Kirtans with the accompaniment of musical instruments. All My disciples shall always behave as mentioned above and shall also study the religious scriptures in Sanskrit or other Vernacular languages to the best of their abilities. A person should be assigned any work only after carefully considering his ability and suitability and not otherwise. My disciples shall always take care of their dependants or servants with regard to food and clothes to the best of their abilities. A person should always be addressed according to his status, taking into consideration the time and place, but not otherwise. My courteous disciples shall, on the arrival of a guru, a ruler, a very old person, a person who has renounced the material world, a scholar and an ascetic, accord a warm welcome by rising up from their seat, bowing down, offering a seat and saying pleasant words. One shall not sit with one leg over the other or with knees bound with a cloth strap, in the presence of a guru, a deity or a king, or in a congregation.'

'My disciples shall never enter into arguments with their Acharya, but honour and serve him by offering food, money, clothing etc, according to their abilities. On hearing the news of the arrival of their Acharya, My disciples shall go forthwith to the outskirts of the village or town to welcome him with honour and respect and on his departure shall accompany him up to the outskirts of the village or town to bid him farewell. One shall never undertake any activity, which is devoid of Dharma, irrespective of its material or financial benefits as Dharma alone can fulfil all human efforts, therefore, one shall not give up Dharma in the hope of some benefits. One shall never adopt or follow any of the unethical deeds of the great people of the past but shall only follow their good or ethical deeds. One shall never disclose the secrets of others to anyone else and shall give due respect to deserving persons, but under no circumstances shall the bounds of courtesy be violated for observing a false decorum of equality. All My disciples shall perform additional religious duties during Chaturmaas (the four months of monsoon) and those who are incapable shall perform them at least during the month of Shravana. The following are the best additional religious duties to be adopted and followed:-Reading religious scriptures, Listening to religious scriptures, Reciting hymns of His divine qualities, Performing Mahapuja, Chanting His Mantra, Reciting other sacred hymns, Performing Pradakshina (Going round the images of God in a clockwise direction) and Prostrating (Pranam) before God's images or Murtis. I highly value these eight observances; so all My disciples shall observe anyone of them devoutly during the period of Chaturmaas.'

'They shall observe self-discipline on Ekadashi (the eleventh day of each half of every lunar month), Janmasthami (birthday of Lord Shree Krishna) and birth anniversaries of other deities, Shivratri etc, and celebrate them with great reverence

They shall observe a Vrat (day of fasting and self-discipline) on Ekadashi (the eleventh day of each half of every lunar month), Janmasthami (birthday of Lord Shree Krishna) and birth anniversaries of other deities, such as Shivratri , etc, and celebrate them with great reverence and festivity. One shall make every effort to avoid sleeping during the daytime on a day of a Vrat. Just as sexual indulgence nullifies the fast, so does sleeping during the daytime. My disciples shall observe all Vrats and festivals as prescribed by Shree ViththalNathji, the son of Shree Vallabhacharya, one of the most prominent Vaishnav. They shall observe the modes of worship and Bhakti of Lord Shree Krishna as prescribed and expounded by Shree ViththalNathji. All My disciples shall undertake a pilgrimage with due rites, to the main holy places like Dwarka. At the shrines, they shall always be charitable and compassionate towards the poor according to their resources. My disciples shall reverently respect the five deities namely Vishnu, Shiva, Ganapati, Parvati and the Sun. My disciples, if ever afflicted by any evil spirits, shall chant "Narayan Kavach" or "Hanuman Strotra", but shall never chant the Mantras of any other deities.'

'Whenever an eclipse of the Sun or the Moon takes place, all My disciples shall immediately suspend all work, and after purifying themselves shall chant the Mantra of Lord Shree Krishna. When the eclipse is over, they shall take a bath with the clothes worn at that time. Householders shall give alms to the poor according to their means and the ascetics shall worship God. All My disciples shall observe Sutak immediately after a birth or death of a relative, according to the closeness of the relationship, as prescribed by the scriptures. My Brahmin disciples shall develop virtues such as tranquillity, self-restraint, forgiveness, contentment etc, and My Kshatriya devotees (warrior caste) shall acquire bravery, patience and similar virtues. My Vaishya devotees shall practise farming, trading, money lending etc, and the Shudra devotees shall serve the above-mentioned three castes. The twice-born (Dwij) disciples shall perform all Sanskars like conception and birth, their daily rituals and Shradhdh at the appropriate time and according to their family traditions and individual means. If My disciples do commit any sin, small or big, knowingly or unknowingly, they shall expiate and repent their sins according to their means and capabilities.'

'I hold the following eight scriptures as superior and a true authority on our philosophy and religion:- The Vedas, Vyas-Sutra, Shreemad Bhagwat, Shree VishnuSahasraNam, Shree Bhagvad Gita and VidurNiti (Code of ethics espoused by Vidurji) from Mahabharata, Shree Vaasudev Mahatmya from Vishnu Khand of Skand Puran and Yagnavalkya Smruti. All My disciples, desirous of salvation, shall listen to all these eight scriptures and My Brahmin devotees shall study, teach and preach them to the others. This is an easy way for salvation – Moksha. Amongst the eight scriptures mentioned above, My disciples shall consider the Mitakshara commentary on Yagnavalkya Smruti as the guiding authority to take decisions on matters of daily routines and rituals, secular business affairs and code of expiation. The Fifth and the Tenth cantos of Shreemad Bhagwat Puran shall be regarded as the best amongst these scriptures for a clear understanding of the greatness and glory of Lord Shree Krishna. The Tenth Skand (of Shreemad Bhagvat) shall be considered as Bhakti (devotional) Shastra, the Fifth Skand as Yog (knowledge) Shastra, and Yagnavalkya Smruti as Dharma (religious) Shastra. They shall consider the Bhashya (commentaries) on Vyas-Sutra and Shree Bhagvad Gita by Shree Ramanujacharya, as My spiritual philosophy. The texts, which tell the greatness of divinity of Lord Shree Krishna, religion, devotion and renunciation, in these scriptures, shall be considered to be of greater value than others. The secret of these and all other scriptures is that the devotion to Lord Shree Krishna must always be accompanied by Dharma and not without it.'

'Dharma is the correct and virtuous behaviour as authenticated by Shruti and Smruti. Bhakti is a profound and exclusive love for Lord Krishna coupled with knowledge of His majesty and magnificence. Vairagya is non-attachment to everything except Lord Shree Krishna. Gnan (knowledge) is comprehensive understanding of Jiva (soul), Maya (illusion) and Ishwara (God). The soul lives in the heart, and is smaller than the smallest atom. It is knowledgeable, and by a virtue of its subjectivity, controls the whole body. It is impenetrable, invisible, indivisible, indestructible and eternal. Maya has three qualities namely Satva (good), Rajas (mixed) and Tamas (evil). It is full of darkness (ignorance) and is the power of God. It is the source of creation of ego and the attachment towards the body and its relations. Just as the soul dwells in the heart, Ishwar (God), by His controlling power, dwells in the soul. He is the supreme sovereign of this universe and the dispenser of fruits (rewards) of our actions. And that Ishwar is Lord Shree Krishna, who is Parbhram Purushottam (Supreme Being) and our most cherished deity. He is worthy of worship by us all. He is the reason and origin of all incarnations. When Lord Krishna is accompanied by Radhikaji at His side, He is known as RadhaKrishna. When He is with Laxmiji or Rukminiji He is known as LaxmiNarayan. When He is accompanied by Arjuna(Nar), He is known as Bhagwan NarNarayan. In the same manner, when Balbhadra or other devotees are by His side, He shall be known by such other appropriate names. At times, devotees such as Radhikaji and others are alongside Lord Shree Krishna, but at other times, they, with extreme devotion, dwell within Lord Shree Krishna, then Lord Shree Krishna shall be considered as Himself. Therefore, one shall not discriminate between the different manifestations of Lord Shree Krishna, as the four armed or thousand armed manifestations of Lord Shree Krishna are the manifestations of the two armed Lord Shree Krishna, at His own free will.'

'All persons shall worship Lord Shree Krishna with devotion, knowing that there is no better means to attain Moksha other than devotion towards Lord Shree Krishna. The virtue of virtuous is only the result of devotion towards God and the company of saints, without which, even a learned or virtuous person is bound to degenerate. Lord Shree Krishna, His incarnations and His images alone are worthy of worship and meditation. Therefore, one shall never meditate upon a person or deity, even though he may be a profound devotee of Lord Shree Krishna or a Brahmvetta (having acquired unison with Bhagwan and divine qualities). One shall consider one's soul as distinct from the three forms of a body; Sthool (gross), Sukshma (subtle) and Karan (causal) and identify the soul with Brahma and with that sublime form shall always worship Lord Shree Krishna. My disciples shall listen to, with reverence, the Tenth Canto of Shreemad Bhagwat everyday or once a year; and the pundit shall read it daily or once yearly. They shall perform the Purascharan (the repeated pious reading) of the Tenth Skand of Shreemad Bhagwat and VishnuSahasraNam in a holy place, according to their abilities, as these performances help them to attain their desired objects. In the event of a natural or political calamity or an epidemic, one shall always act in such a way that one can save one's own life and also that of others but shall never act otherwise. The place, time, age, financial means, caste and physical ability shall be taken into consideration when deciding upon the matters of daily rites and rituals, secular business affairs and the code of expiation (repentance). My philosophy is the theory of Vishishtaadvait (specific non-dualism). Golok is my beloved abode. I believe Mukti (salvation) as being able to serve Lord Shree Krishna, in the divine sublime state, in Golok Dham. The codes of conduct (Dharma) described so far are the ones applicable equally to all My disciples, male and female, and shall be followed accordingly. I shall now describe additional specific Dharma applicable to specific groups of disciples. '

'Acharyas, the sons of My elder and younger brothers and their successors, shall never give Diksha (initiate into Sampraday) to female devotees nor preach to females who are not closely related to them. They shall never touch or talk to females not closely related to them. They shall not be cruel to any living beings nor accept any deposits from anyone. They shall never stand as surety for others in social matters. In the event of hardship, they shall subsist on alms but never incur debts. They shall never sell food grains given to them by their disciples. However, old cereals may be exchanged for new; as such an exchange is not considered a sale. They shall perform the worship of Shree Ganapati on the fourth day of the bright half of the month of Bhadrapada (Bhaddarvo), and that of Hanuman on the fourteenth day of the dark half of the month of Ashwin (Aso). I have appointed two Acharyas as spiritual leaders of the Sampraday in order to defend and preserve the religion of all My disciples. They shall initiate male devotees, desiring Moksha, into Sampraday. They shall see that all disciples conform to their respective Dharma. They shall treat saints with respect and reverence and study Scriptures with reverence. They shall worship, with due rites LaxmiNarayan and other images of Lord Shree Krishna installed by Me in the prominent temples. They shall provide food to those people who come to visit the temple in need of food and treat them with due hospitality according to the available means. They shall establish educational institutions and appoint Brahmin scholars to impart knowledge, as propagation of true knowledge in this world is the greatest act of benediction.'

'The wives of the Acharyas, with the permission of their husbands shall initiate female devotees into the Sampraday. They shall not touch, talk or even show their faces to males, except those who are closely related.'

'My male householder disciples shall not touch widows except those who are closely related to them.They shall never remain in a secluded place even with their mothers, sisters or daughters who are young, except in unavoidable circumstances and shall never give away their wives to anybody. They shall not associate with a woman who has contacts with rulers. They shall welcome and entertain anyone who comes to their house as a guest, with food, drink etc, according to their means. They shall perform with due respect, sacrificial rites to deities and oblational rites to Pitris, according to their abilities. My disciples shall render lifelong services to their parents, guru and ailing persons according to their abilities. They shall take vocations suitable to their Varna (caste) and Ashram (stage of life) and according to their abilities. The farmers shall never castrate the bulls. They shall store food and accumulate wealth for their future requirements according to their circumstances and their abilities. Those who own cattle shall store sufficient stock of fodder. They shall keep cows, and other cattle only if they are capable of taking care of them with fodder, water etc, otherwise they shall not keep them.'

'They shall not undertake any sort of dealings pertaining to land or money without a written document duly witnessed, even with their sons or friends. Agreements regarding amounts payable by either party in matrimonial affairs, shall be in writing and duly witnessed, rather than just the verbal agreement. They shall spend money according to their income. Those who spend more than their income put themselves into severe difficulties. They shall keep daily records of their income and expenditure relating to their social affairs in their own legible handwriting. They shall set aside and give one tenth of their earnings, money or food grains, to Lord Shree Krishna. Those with insufficient income shall offer one twentieth. The rituals of Vrats such as Ekadashi and others shall be performed and celebrated as prescribed in religious scriptures and according to their means. The ceremonies so performed, fulfil one's aspirations. In the month of Shravana, they shall worship with reverence, Mahadev (Lord Shiva) with Bilva-patras (Bilva-leaves) or ask others to worship Mahadev on their behalf. They shall never borrow money from their Acharyas or from temples. They shall not borrow, for their social use, utensils, ornaments, clothes and such other articles owned by the Acharyas or temples. When going on pilgrimage to the temples or visiting saints for Darshan, they shall never eat anything given free, either in the temples or en-route, because the free food takes away one's Punya (benediction). They shall eat food bought with their own money. Under no circumstances, shall they pay their employees any less than the agreed remuneration. Repayment of their debts, births and marriages of their children must not be kept secret. They shall have no dealings with wicked persons.'

'In the event of a natural disaster or harassment by a ruler or wicked persons where one cannot uphold one's honour or protect one's life and possessions, My wise householder disciples shall quit that place at once, even if it is their native place or inherited estate and reside elsewhere where they can live happily and without harassment. My wealthy Satsangis (disciples) shall perform non-violent Yagnas for propitiating Lord Vishnu. They shall feed Brahmins and ascetics in places of pilgrimage and also on auspicious days. My wealthy disciples shall organise celebrations of great religious festivals in temples and shall give various kinds of alms to deserving Brahmins. The kings among My disciples shall treat their subjects as their own children in accordance with Dharmashastras, and shall establish a rule of Dharma on earth.They shall fully know the seven constituents to administer the state successfully, the four expedients to have a successful conquest, six diplomatic qualities and significant places to send the spies to. Not only shall they know the characteristics of persons well versed in worldly matters and social affairs but also the qualities of persons who deserve to be punished and those who do not deserve to be punished.'

'Married women among My disciples shall serve and worship their husbands in the manner in which they serve and worship God, even if they are blind, ailing, poor or impotent, and shall never utter harsh words to them. They shall never keep any association with any young man other than their husband even though the other young man may be handsome and virtuous. Devout wives shall never behave in a manner

They shall never go out to see vulgar shows nor associate themselves with debauch women. When their husbands are away from home, married women shall never wear beautiful clothes or ornaments, nor visit other peoples' homes, nor indulge in merriment. '

'The widow disciples shall worship Lord Shree Krishna with the same fidelity as they would have served their husbands. They shall always live under the command of their father, sons or such other male relatives but never act independently. They shall never touch any male who is not closely related to them. Young widows shall never converse with any young man unless it is absolutely necessary. Casually touching a suckling child is not an offence just as there is no offence in touching an animal. Also there is no offence in touching or talking to an old man if necessary. They shall not receive education from a male person who is not closely related. They shall constantly control their body and senses by observing Vrats and fasts. If they have only enough wealth for lifetime sustenance, widows shall not donate any part of this wealth even for religious purposes. They may donate wealth only if they have more or surplus to their requirement. They shall eat only once a day and sleep on the floor. They shall never deliberately look at any creatures in act of coition. They shall never dress themselves like a married woman, nun or a female recluse, nor dress in a manner which is contrary to the custom of the place and their family traditions. They shall never associate with, nor even touch women who practise abortion, nor shall they indulge in or listen to amorous talks regarding males. Except in an emergency, young widows shall never stay in a secluded place with young men, even if they are closely related. They shall never play Holi, nor put on ornaments, nor dress themselves with transparent clothes interwoven with gold strands.'

'No women shall bathe without any clothes on and shall never conceal their periodical menses. No woman shall touch anybody or any clothes etc. for three days during the period of menses, but can do so on the fourth day after taking a bath. (The special duties for male and female householders should also be followed by the Acharyas and their wives as they are also householders).'

'My Naisthik Brahamchari disciples shall never touch nor talk to nor deliberately look at any female. They shall never talk about females nor listen to talks about females and shall not go for bathing, washing etc. to places which are frequented by females. They shall never touch nor purposely look at the images of females, pictures or idols

They shall never look at nor talk to a man disguised as a female. They shall not give religious discourses directed at females. They shall not obey a command which violates their vows of celibacy even if that command is given by their guru. They shall always be patient, contented and without pride. They shall immediately stop a female who deliberately advances towards them, by insulting her or by showing contempt towards her. However, in the case of an emergency, when the lives of females or their own lives are in imminent danger, they shall protect the females and themselves by talking to females or even by touching them. They shall never massage their body with oil, nor arm themselves, nor put on frightful clothes. They shall control their sense of taste. They shall never go for alms to those Brahmin devotees' homes where food is served by a female but shall go elsewhere, where food is served by a male. They shall study the Vedas and other holy scriptures, and serve their guru. They shall never associate themselves with effeminate males just as they would never associate with females. Those who are Brahmins by caste shall never drink water which has passed through a leather vessel. They shall never consume foods like onions or garlic. Brahmins shall never take meals without performing daily rituals viz. bath, Sandhya (special prayers), chanting of Gayatri Mantra, worship of Shree Vishnu and Vaishvadev (offering food to others).'

'Just as Naisthik Brahamcharis, Sadhus shall avoid association with females and effeminate males, visually and verbally. They shall conquer five inner enemies; lust, anger, greed, pride and envy. They shall control all senses, especially the sense of taste, and shall not accumulate wealth or ask others to do so, on their behalf. They shall never accept deposits from others, never lose patience, and shall never allow a female to enter their place of residence. Except in an emergency, they shall never go out alone during the night nor shall they go out without company at any other times. They shall never put on clothes which are expensive, decorative, dyed with gaudy colours, shawls, or such other garments, even if they have been reverently given to them by others. They shall never go to a householder's place except for religious gatherings or receiving alms. They shall always utilise their time in devotion to God instead of wasting it idly. They shall go for meals to a householder's place where food is served only by males, and where they have no contact with or sight of females. If

'Brahamcharis and saints shall strictly abstain from consuming betel leaves, opium, tobacco and other similar intoxicating substances. They shall never dine at ceremonies pertaining to conception, and death including the oblation rites of the eleventh and the twelfth day or any other similar ceremonies. They shall never sleep during the day time except when they are unwell. They shall never intentionally indulge themselves in any gossip. They shall never sleep on a bed except when they are unwell. They shall always behave transparently with other saints. They shall not retaliate if misguided or wicked persons abuse them or beat them, but shall, instead, be tolerant and always wish them well. They shall never act as a messenger, indulge in backbiting or spying. They shall avoid egoism and shall not have attachment towards their relatives.'

'I have thus described briefly, the general and special Dharmas of all My disciples. They shall refer to the other scriptures of our Sampraday to learn them in greater detail. I have written this Shikshapatri, taking the essence of all scriptures. It fulfils the wishes of all My disciples. Therefore all My disciples shall always observe the precepts of this Shikshapatri, but never behave contrary as they desire. My male and female disciples shall attain the four desired objects (Dharma, Artha, Kama and Moksha) by following this Shikshapatri. My male and female disciples shall understand that those who do not follow the precepts of this Shikshapatri shall be considered as excommunicated from our Sampraday. My disciples shall read this Shikshapatri daily, and those who cannot read, shall listen to it with reverence. When there is no one to read this Shikshapatri to them, they shall worship it daily. All My disciples shall reverently honour My word as My Divine Self. This Shikshapatri shall only be given to a person with divine virtues, but shall never be given to a person with wicked tendencies. This Shikshapatri is written by Me on Vasant Panchmi (Maha Sud Panchmi) of the year Vikram Samvat 1882, and is auspicious and benevolent to mankind. '

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari asked saints to make eight copies of Shikshapatri and sent them to the leading devotees, who in turn made more copies and distributed them among other devotees of their respective regions. All the devotees were very delighted to receive their individual copy of the Shikshapatri. They obeyed all the commands mentioned in the scriptures enthusiastically considering Shree Hari and Lord Krishna one and the same. To the surprise of the devotees of Amdavad, Shree Hari arrived at Amdavad unannounced. As soon as the devotees of Amdavad heard of His arrival, they rushed forward to greet Him at the outskirts of the city and brought Him with them with much pomp. O king! Shree Hari made His residence within the premises of Shree NarNarayan temple after reverentially having Darshan of Bhagwan NarNarayan Dev. The devotees of Amdavad took it upon themselves to serve Shree Hari. He held assemblies every evening in the grounds of the temple where the Katha of the Vaasudev Mahatmya was held. He extolled Vaasudev Mahatmya greatly, holding it a pivotal scripture of the Sampraday, while explaining the profound meaning of the scripture during the evening assembly. This Katha lasted one month. O king! Shree Hari celebrated the festival of Fuldolotsav as grandly as He had previously done at Vadtaal in the presence of thousands of devotees including His brothers and King Uttam from Gadhpur. To grant the pleasure of His Darshan and to give an opportunity to perform His worship to the visiting devotees, Shree Hari stayed another fifteen days at Amdavad. The devotees gifted Shree Hari with various expensive new robes, ornaments and much wealth, which He gifted to Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj."

King Pratapsinh said, "O Suvrat Muni! Please narrate in detail how Shree Hari celebrated the festival of Fuldolotsav at Amdavad. My thirst for listening to the various Leelas of Bhagwan Shree Hari does not get satiated. I wish to hear each and every Leela in great detail from you." Suvrat Muni was impressed with the king's faith and interest in the Katha. He remembered his guru Shatanand swami before speaking further.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Once when Shree Hari was resting after a session of the Katha of Vaasudev Mahatmya, Anandanand swami and Ayodhyaprasadji said to Bhagwan Narayanmuni, 'O Prabhu! The festival of Fuldolotsav is nearing. Please permit us to gather various items needed for celebrations.' Shree Hari replied, 'O son! I know that the festival of Fuldolotsav must be celebrated as manifestation of Bhagwan NarNarayan Dev is for the benevolence of mankind. Whilst busy with listening to the Katha, it has slipped through My mind. Ask the people of Amdavad to gather utensils, cutlery, firewood, wheat, rice, spices, sugar, jaggery, Ghee, oil etc. from the outlying villages. Also, send invitations to devotees of other regions and arrange for their temporary stay. You need to look for expert cooks and chefs and gather large quantities of Kumkum, Gulal and flowers. You need to rush as very short time remains before the day of festival.' Ayodhyaprasadji replied, 'O Prabhu! Thousands of devotees along with their kith and kin arrive for this festival regularly every year as decreed by You earlier. They do not need to be invited specifically. They will be here on the forthcoming Ekadashi. Furthermore, Anandanand swami has already collected most of the items as per normal. We will need a slightly larger quantity as many more devotees will turn up for the festival due to Your presence.' O king! Shree Hari was pleased to hear about the preparations and said, 'O son! There is always 'Anand' (bliss) around wherever Anand Muni is present. Anandanand swami is as alert as I am in collecting the rations and other things needed for the celebrations of festivals. Even you have gained much experience beyond your young age. Therefore, I have kept you two here. I leave you to take care of the preparations."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari went in the temple for the Darshan of deities leaving those two to make preparations. As the day of Fuldolotsav approached,

Thus ends the 65th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 66

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! The mountain load of wheat, flour, rice and other cereals; thousands of containers of Ghee and oil; mounds of jiggery and sugar and vast quantities of vegetables were amassed in the temple along with innumerable vats, pots, pans, jugs, platters and ladles of different sizes and shapes. Ganga, Reva and other female devotees started making poppadums, Sev and other dry savoury items. At Ayodhyaprasadji's behest, the expert Brahmin cooks started making sweets such as Ladoos from Dasam. Anandanand swami looked after the boarding of the incoming devotees at local devotees' homes in the city and its suburbs. He also made suitable arrangements for the groups of saints arriving from far off places for the celebrations. O king! The entire city teemed with so many devotees that the city appeared to be overcrowded. Many of the devotees were put up in tents in the fields on the outskirts of the city."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari went to oversee the preparations of the food in the kitchens on the night of Ekadashi. He wanted to make sure that enough food was prepared for the visiting devotees. As He entered the kitchen, He saw many Brahmin chefs led by Kuber and Laxman busy preparing various sweets. He saw the mounds of various prepared sweets such as Ladoos, Jalebi, Barfi, Khaja and varieties of Pendas. He was very pleased with the preparations. Just as He was about to leave the kitchen, Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj led Him to the store to show Him the large quantities of various types of Ladoos prepared by Ganesh, Somnath and Kuber. Shree Hari profusely praised Ayodhyaprasadji for his foresight and preparedness. After inspecting the kitchens and as He was making way to His residence, He saw two Brahmin female devotees named Ganga and Yashaswati and asked them if the female devotees had a separate area for cooking. Ganga invited Shree Hari to come and have a look at the preparations in their kitchen. While Sunanda (Ayodhyaprasadji's

As He was about to praise the efforts of the female devotees, Devbai pointed out that Sunanda and Suvasinibai had played a major role in preparing these items. He left the kitchen smiling benevolently. O king! Shree Hari saw Anandanand swami hastily walking towards the kitchen area accompanied by two persons carrying large vessels on their head. Shree Hari asked swami where he was heading in such haste. Anandanand swami replied that he was taking rice and pulses to the kitchen to be cooked early tomorrow morning. Upon arriving at His residence, Bhagwan Narayanmuni generously praised the collective efforts of all the devotees in preparing the food in front of Mukundanand swami and others and added that He need not worry about food preparations at all."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! After concluding His morning routine, Shree HariKrishna Bhagwan arrived in the grounds of the temple and sat on an ornate Sinhasan. Thousands of devotees, saints and Parshads surrounded Him for the divine Darshan. He called Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj and asked him to arrange for the supply of raw food materials such as rice, wheat flour, sugar, Ghee etc. to the Brahmins who do not eat food prepared by others, which he duly obliged. Bhagwan Shree Hari asked the devotees to conclude the fast of Ekadashi before going to perform Rajbhog Aarti of Lord NarNarayan Dev in the temple. Before He could return to the Sinhasan after Aarti, Mukundanand swami reminded Him to permit the saints to dine. Upon getting the assent from Shree Hari, all the saints, Brahmins, Sanyasins and Parshads made a beeline to the dining area and sat in rows as per their hierarchy and the decorum of the Sampraday."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari had appointed various persons to look after various groups of devotees. Highly virtuous Brahmanand swami was appointed to look after the well beings of all the saints; Nathuram Bhatt looked after the interests of all the Brahmins; Bhaguji took care of all Kshatriya devotees including numerous kings; Vaasudevanand swami looked after the well beings of Brahmcharis; Becharbhai and Kubersinh looked after Vaishya and Shudra devotees respectively; Viraji and Doraji looked after charioteers, messengers and personal attendants and Gangaram took care of the musicians, singers and other artisans. All the devotees willingly obeyed all instruction given by the appointed leaders who in turn took the cue from Shree Hari Himself. These leaders made sure that all the people under their wings were served food properly. When all the food items were served to each one of the devotees, they started eating after the collective shouts of 'Jay Shree Hari'. Muktanand swami, Gopalanand swami, Shukanand swami, Nityanand swami and Anandanand swami moved among the rows to tell everyone to eat slowly and to their hearts' content and guide the servers while Mahanubhavanand swami made everyone, including Shree Hari seated at some distance, laugh with his banter."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Just as about everyone had finished eating, Shree Hari rose from His seat and tied His upper garment around His waist and came amidst the rows of diners. He wanted to please his saints and devotees by serving them with His own hands. At the behest of Brahmanand swami, the saints immediately brought the platters full of variety of items to Shree Hari. He served two Ladoos to each saint. Though the saints were full, they merrily devoured the Ladoos knowing that Prasad from Shree Hari's hands was a rarity even to the Devtas in the Heaven. The saints' plates were empty as soon as He returned to the head of the row after serving Ladoos. This time He served all the saints a handful of Jalebi followed by milk pudding. He kept serving them other sweets until they steadfastly refused to be served any more. He asked servers to serve rice before moving in the rows where Uttam Khachar, Sura Khachar, Soma Khachar and other Vaishya devotees were sitting. He followed the same pattern of serving them until they were no longer able to take any more food. O king! Knowing His task of serving Prasad was complete; He washed his hands and went to Rampratapbhai's residence for His lunch. All the saints and other devotees returned to their respective residences after their lunch, reminiscing about the pleasure of receiving Prasad from Shree Hari. Shree Hari had a shower, completed His normal routine of midday and had His lunch before returning to His residence."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The process of feeding umpteen numbers of people continued for many days. No one, not even Brahma, could possibly count the number of people who had their food on this occasion. Even the kings of larger realms were surprised at the generosity and extravagance of Shree Hari. Nobody, even non devotees, was denied food on the orders of Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj. Whoever had the food had praise for Shree Hari for such a sumptuous lunch. O king! Even after feeding so many people, the food did not run out. Such was the prowess of Shree Hari!

Thus ends the 67th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 68

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari returned to the courtyard of the temple and sat once again on the ornate Sinhasan. He was wearing a white Dhoti, diadem, tunic and shawl; He had many white flower garlands around His neck and His forehead was smeared with yellow sandalwood paste. Thousands of devotees sat around Him keeping the convention of the Sampraday in mind. Some people climbed the trees in the courtyard, some on the balconies, walls and terraces and yet some on the rooftops. The female devotees sat in one corner keeping distance from the male devotees. Shree Hari feigned a surprise at such a large number of devotees present. O king! Bhaguji held an ornate umbrella over Shree Hari's head, Viraji and Devaji shook Chamar (fly drivers) while Ratanji fanned Him with a hand held fan. Mukundanand Brahamchari held a handkerchief in his hand; Vaasudevanand Varni held a pitcher of water, while Uttam Khachar held Shree Hari's sandals. Sura Khachar and Soma Khachar and other regal Parshads stood attentively on His either side while Kubersinh, with a golden staff in his hand, stood next to Him. Rampratapbhai, Ichharambhai, Ayodhyaprasadji, Raghuvirji and other male family members sat near His Sinhasan. Senior saints and scholar Brahmins sat at the head of the assembly followed by other saints and Brahmins. The householder devotees sat behind them. Nobody in the assembly transgressed the decorum of the Sampraday."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Upon sighting the musicians and singers standing at distance, Shree Hari beckoned them by hand to come forward and showcase their talent in the assembly. Pleased with their talent, Bhagwan Shree Hari asked Ayodhyaprasadji to gift them with new robes. Shree Hari then asked Muktanand swami, Premanand swami, Yoganand swami, Devanand swami and other musician saints to showcase their talents. They sang many Kirtans extolling Bhagwan's Leela and glory in the accompaniment of their musical instruments. Shree Hari heartily praised their talent. A local devotee named Damodar asked Anandanand swami to seek Shree Hari's permission to perform His veneration. On getting Shree Narayanmuni's permission, Damodar performed elaborate worship with scented sandalwood paste, Kumkum, rice, flower garlands etc. and gifted Him with new red silken pyjamas embroidered with golden motifs. Shree Hari put on the pyjamas over His clothes at a great delight of all the devotees present in the assembly. Taking the cue from Damodar, the other devotees sought Shree Hari's assent to perform His venerations. Nathu Bhatt, Hemantram and other Brahmin devotees and Hirachand, Bahechar, Lala Gupta and other Vaishya devotees led the procession to worship Shree Hari. All these devotees performed His veneration with utmost faith and humility using scented sandalwood paste, Kumkum, rice and flower garlands and offering Him new fine and expensive robes, golden ornaments and much wealth as per their individual financial abilities."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Other Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra devotees took their turn to perform Shree Hari's veneration as per their abilities, which He accepted heartily without making any distinction between rich and poor devotees. He accepted gladly whatever was offered to him - flowers, fruits or money by His devout disciples to delight them. When the devotees of other villages got up to perform His veneration, Shree Hari asked them to postpone their veneration until tomorrow. As the bells and drum beats of the evening Aarti reverberated around, Shree Hari stood up from His Sinhasan and started clapping His hands. All the devotees present in the assembly followed His example and started clapping in unison with Him. O king! The sound of the simultaneous clapping of thousands of devotees reverberated throughout the city of Amdavad. Everybody sat down on the conclusion of Aarti before greeting each other and Shree Hari with folded hands. Hundreds of torches were lit up to illuminate the grounds of the temple. As silence descended in the assembly, Shree Hari asked if anybody, celibate saints or householders, had any questions to pose to Him."

Thus ends the 68th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 69

Brahmanand swami asked Shree Hari, "O Prabhu! What are the traits of an entangled (in Maya) soul? How can one become liberated (from the clutches of Maya)? What happens (or what are the rewards) to an emancipated soul? You are the best teacher in the world. Please answer these questions in detail."

Bhagwan Shree Hari replied, "O Muni! Let me tell you the traits of an entangled (or enslaved) soul. An entangled soul, due to the close proximity to the body it dwells in, behaves in five distinct modes. These are: Annamay (idle), Pranmaya (breathing or living), Manomay (sensing), Vignanmay (knowing) and Aanandmay (unconstrained pleasures). The Pranmay mode is always present in other four modes. Behaving in these five modes, the enslaved soul considers itself as a body and as long as it remains under this erroneous misconception, it remains shackled in the cycle of death and rebirth. A soul, when dwelling within a body made up of five base elements (sky, wind, light, water and earth) and sustained by food, is said to be living as Annamay. When its life force behaves in unison with five dynamic sensual organs (speech, hands, legs, genitals and anus) is said to be living as Pranmay; when its mind is in unison with five sensual organs (ear, nose, tongue, eyes and skin), it is said to be living in Manomay state, when its discretionary intellect is firmly enjoined with the senses, a soul is in Vignamay state and while an enslaved soul is enjoying the unhindered pleasure under trance like state, it is said to be in Anandmay state. The body has three states: Sthool (conscious), Sukshma (sub conscious) and Karan (unconscious or causal). The Annamay state of a soul is related to the Sthool state of body, Pranmay, Manomay and Vignanmay states of a soul are related to the Sukshma state of body while the last, Anandmay state of soul is related to the Karan state of body. Though these five states are of a body, as an enslaved soul behaves in unison with the body (considers body and itself as one), these five states are said to be of a soul as well."

Bhagwan continued, "A soul is smaller than any small thing one can imagine. Indeed it is smaller than an atom. Due to its inherent strength, it pervades the whole body from head to toe. An ignorant soul, though distinct from a body it dwells in; considers body, life force, mind, senses and its organs as its own due to constant and close proximity with a body. A soul, in its ignorance, considers the three states (Sthool, Sukshma and Karan) of a body as its own. As a result, it faces the consequences of all the deeds done by the body. It remains entangled in the never ending cycle of death and rebirth. It takes millions of different bodies such as insects, birds and animals without ever getting satisfied with the mundane pleasures. Neither does it ever develop the sense of detachment from the body. Enjoying the mundane pleasures unabashedly and contrary to the ethics attested by the Vedas and Bhagwan, a soul suffers the pains of enslavement just like a bird trapped in a net. O Muni! Merciful Bhagwan bestows upon a soul a birth as a man after the passage of millions of years. The human body is rarest of rare; not attainable with any means and it helps souls to free itself from the cycle of death and rebirth."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "A human body can be compared to a fort with nine entrances: two eyes, two nostrils and a mouth on the East, an ear on the North, an ear on the South and genitals and anus on the West. Limbs are said to be blind as they have no orifices. A man looks at with his eyes and feels with his (blind) hands and legs, a beautiful woman, who is slyly seeking company of a man. A soul of a man also looks at her ten senses and her mind (a leader of her senses) and overwhelmed by lust asks her, 'O maiden! Who are you? Who are your companions?' A woman replies, 'I do not know yours and my creator. Neither do I know an Atma (soul) and Parmatma (Bhagwan). All I know is that I desire your company. The senses and desires are my companions. My mind is their leader who remains alert all the time to defend them, even when I sleep. Come and join me and I will satisfy your carnal desires for the rest of your life. Marry me and make me your wife.' O Muni! A male soul joins a female soul in merriment."

Shree Bhagwan continued, "O Brahm Muni! Let Me tell you how a soul behaves in his Jagrat (conscious) state. A soul indiscreetly enjoys good and bad smells, sight, taste, touch and words with the nose, eyes, tongue, skin and ears. He expels stool with anus and indiscriminately satisfies carnal desires with his genitals. He uses his limbs to conduct his dealings. He undergoes sorrows, pleasures and fear in the company of his woman. He eats, drinks and sleeps with women. He laughs, cries, sits, speaks, plays and consumes alcohol for and with women. O swami! Bhagwan, independently and imperceptibly, remains with a soul at all times. Though He is an arbitrator of a soul's deeds He remains unaffected by any deeds done by it. When a body enters Sukshma state, the soul enters the Swapna (dream) state. A soul can be compared with a chariot in its Swapna condition which is illuminated by its functional organs (limbs, mouth etc.) and moving at very fast speed. Five senses are its horses, intellect its charioteer, mind as its reins, Punya (good deeds) and Paap (sins) its two wheels, Heart its seat, life force as its bridles, five objects of sense perception (speech, sight etc.) are his missiles, Maya as its axle, sorrow and delusion its yoke, three traits (Satva, Raja and Tama) its banner (or flag) and ego as its arrows. Riding this chariot, a soul in its dream state preys (fulfils) for deer (desires) with the help of his sensual organs. O Muni! A soul remains close to its senses and desires even in its Sushupti (unconscious) state. The cycle of desires and fulfilment restarts when a soul enters the Jagrat state. It begets numerous children in form of requirements and worries. Torn apart in various directions between desires and fears and ambitions and fulfilments; a soul lives a miserable life. Death catches up with a soul that is so overwhelmed by and enamoured of unfulfilled desires and engaged in furtive deeds. As consequences of its deeds, a soul suffers pains and enjoys pleasures in all its three states without seeking salvation. A soul can become free from the cycle of death and rebirth if it controls its greed, lust, palate, anger, ego and desires as described in the scriptures such as Bhagvad Gita or as directed by an intelligent guru. The mind and senses are very powerful and they cannot be overcome without Bhakti of Bhagwan Narayan. Therefore, one must practice HathYog continuously as directed by a devout guru.

CHAPTER 70

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Brahm Muni! Controlling ejaculation of semen, leanness of body, transparency of eyes, bliss on face, freedom from diseases and clarity of sounds are some of the results of continuous practice of HathYog. One must concentrate his mind, without thinking of anything else, in hearing a sound of 'Om' emancipating from within. Such a Yogi hears the sound resembling the waves of ocean, thunder and large percussions such as drums initially, which transforms into the sound resembling the ringing of bells, blowing of conch or beating of small percussion instruments such as Mrudang and Tabla. O Muni! At a higher plane, the sounds resemble that of chiming of small bells, flute or humming of bumble bees. The mind merges into these sounds just as water and milk merges together. His inner life force moves in unison with his external breathe and the latent force that emerges from this unison wakes up his six Chakras and the deep sound of 'Om' emerges from them. (It is said that these six Chakras resemble lotus flowers which are facing downward with the petals closed. When woken up, they face upward and petals open up in full bloom.) His senses retire from mundane objects, concentrate within his mind and eventually enter the six Chakras. A soul, with mind and senses under its full control, progressively moves higher from one Chakra to the other."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! There are six Chakras in a body, namely Muladhar, Svadhisthan, Manipur, Anahat, Vishudhdhi and Aagna. The seventh and distinct from these six is Brahmrandhra Chakra. The sound of Pranav (Om) ascends twenty one thousand and six hundred times from these Chakras collectively. Separately, the sound of Pranav ascends six hundred times from Muladhar Chakra; six thousand times each from Svadhisthan, Manipur and Anahat while one thousand times each from Vishudhdhi, Aagna and Brahmrandhra Chakras. A Yogi should chant hymns equivalent to the number of times the sound of Pranav ascends from each Chakra and offers them to the respective ruling deities of each Chakra. O Brahm Muni! Now let Me explain the deities, number of petals of the lotuses and a length of time Yogi (or his soul) spends in each Chakra. The lotus of Muladhar Chakra, situated in the legs, has four petals and Ganapati with a large elephantine head, riding a mouse and holding a noose, goad and axe in his three hands while the fourth hand is held aloft to bless his devotees; is its ruling deity. Yogi spends just over twenty four minutes here before proceeding to Svadhisthan Chakra situated next to the genitals. Four headed Brahma, riding a swan and holding a scripture and Mala in his hands is the ruling deity. The lotus of Svadhisthan Chakra is golden in colour and has six petals. A Yogi spends just over twenty four minutes here in meditation and Japa before proceeding to the higher shiny bluish coloured Manipur Chakra situated in the navel. The lotus of Manipur Chakra is black and has ten petals. Vishnu, riding an eagle and holding conch, lotus, mace and Sudarshan disc in his four hands is the ruling deity of Manipur Chakra. After spending the aforementioned time in Manipur Chakra, the Yogi travels to the fourth Chakra called Anahat situated in his heart. Its lotus is pearly white in colour and has twelve petals. Shambhu - Shiva, with radiant bluish complexion, riding a bull and holding axe, bow and trident in three hands while the fourth is raised to bless his devotees, is its ruling deity. After spending just over twenty four minutes meditating upon Shiva, the Yogi's soul migrates to Vishudhdhi Chakra, situated in his throat; where he spends just over eighteen minutes in meditating upon knowledgeable Vairaj, the origin of the universe. Its lotus has sixteen pearl white petals. O Muni! Leaving Vishudhdhi Chakra behind, the Yogi now enters Aagna Chakra, situated in his brows. KalRudra, the destroyer of the universes and scholar of Pranav is the ruling deity of Aagna Chakra. Its lotus has two petals, as radiant as all consuming fire. He spends just over eighteen minutes here in meditating and Japa. Just bear in mind that spouses of all these six ruling deities are present on their left in their respective Chakras. As a result of accomplishment of Hath Yog, a Yogi is able to traverse these six Chakras independently. With the help of unwavering devotion towards Bhagwan, such a Yogi can visualise himself separate and distinct from his gross body. Being able to attain unison with Virat, he can also see the whole universe within his own body."

Thus ends the 70th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 71

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "After attaining unison with Virat, Yogi can see the whole universe within him. He sees Patal in the soles of his feet; Rasatal in his shins; Talatal in his ankles; Mahatal in his legs; Sutal in his knees; Vital in his thighs and Atal in his genital. (These seven are the netherlands (hells) below the earth.) He sees the earth in his waist. He also sees Bhuvarlok in his navel; Swarg (heaven) in his heart; Maharlok in his throat; Janlok in his mouth; Taplok in his forehead and Satyalok on top of his skull. After seeing these fourteen abodes, Yogi discards his Sthool body and dons his Sukshma body as he migrates himself in Virat's heart. He sees Shesh (Sankarshan) in the element earth and migrates beyond earth to attain water. He sees, Vedvati, the abode of Lord Vishnu, encircled with the golden fort and its four entrances guarded by the moon and others. O Muni! Vedvati, spread over the area of fifty thousand square miles, has thousands of lofty magnificent temples situated in all directions. Furthermore, the walled city is defended by eight mighty four armed guards named Kumud, Kumudaksh, Pundrik, Vaman, Shankukarna, Sumukh, Suprasthit and Sarvajeet; holding aloft spears, sabres etc. The residents of Vedvati are four armed and with divine aura. The Yogi sees the homes of Vaasudev and Laxmiji on the east; Vaikunth (of Vishnu) on the southeast; Sankarshan on the south; Revti on the southwest; Pradhyumna on the west, Rati on the northwest; Anirudhdha on the north and Shanti on the northeast regions of Vedvati. As he travels further between North and Northeast and migrates to Tej (the fire), he sees Lord Narayan, ensconced in a magnificent Sinhasan in a thousand pillared temple. Lord Narayan is flanked by Shree and Bhu, two of His potencies and thousands of parshads such as Jay, Vijay, and Vishvaksen. A tall lotus arises from His Navel."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continues, "O Muni! After spending two Ghatika (forty eight minutes) or forty six Pal (just over eighteen minutes) meditating upon and praying to Lord Narayan and MahaLaxmi, resting on a lotus of a thousand petals which is as radiant as thousands of suns; the Yogi travels further and migrates to the element Vayu (the wind). He sees radiant Bhagwan Mahesh with eight arms, three eyes and his long hair tied in a bun on his head standing on a bluish lotus of a thousand petals in the element wind. Bowing down to Lord Mahesh and with his consent, the Yogi moves further and attains the sky. He sees five headed Lord Shiva in the middle of sky. Each radiant head of Shiva has three eyes. Bowing down reverentially to the ten armed Lord Shiva, the Yogi travels further up and finds himself in front of Rodhini (one of the potencies of Bhagwan, in female form) in an abode named Bindu. She is wearing divine robes, a bejewelled tiara and many other jewelled ornaments besides several flower garlands around her neck. With the blessings of Rodhini, the Yogi moves ahead and finds himself in a place from where mysterious yet pleasant sounds originate. He sees five Shaktis (forms of Parvati) namely Radhika, Deepika, Rochika, Mochika and Urdhvagamini within this place. O Muni! He sees a very vast lotus, as radiant as thousands of moon shining simultaneously. Just as he is marvelling the beauty of the lotus, Jyotirling emerges from the centre of the lotus. Lord Shiva emerges from Jyotirling right in front of his eyes. Lord Shiva has five heads with a long hair tied in a bun and each handsome head has three eyes. His beauty surpasses that of Eros; his aura is as bright as hundreds of moons shining simultaneously; he is holding a trident aloft in his hand and Urdhvagamini is sitting on his lap. The Yogi bows down to Lord Shiva and Urdhvagamini and with their blessing proceeds further and sees another mighty form of Lord Shiva called BrahmShiv. BrahmShiv has five heads with each head having three eyes; his aura is brighter than thousands of moons shining together; has ten hands and the moon is shining from his entwined hair. O Brahm Muni! Yogi sees all these forms in his heart consecutively as he meditates enthusiastically after discarding the Sthool body and donning the Sukshma body, i.e. after realising his soul as distinct from his body."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Brahmanand swami! The Yogi's intellect becomes lucid after meditating upon various forms beginning from Shesh and ending with BrahmShiv. He understands clearly what is 'Gnaat' (known to him), what is 'Gnaan' (the knowledge that has helped him know the known) and what is 'Gneya' (worth knowing). At the height of his meditation and the knowledge gained thereof, he forgets the whole universe. O Muni! The wise scholars describe this elevated state as 'Dharna' (conjectures). He can proceed further from here only with the help of his devotion in God. His Sukshma body is left behind as he progresses ahead. He attains unison with Brahm (liberated soul or Akshar) and he becomes potent to travel further. His previous knowledge of Bhagwan and His Bhakti in Bhagwan become his boat to cross over the ocean that bridges the imaginary (illusionary visible universe created from Maya) with the real (eternal Bhagwan that is beyond Maya). After attaining the unison with Brahma, the souls understand fully well as to Who creates the universes and in Whom the universes merge at the time of total annihilation. This knowledge remains with him forever. The great sages call this knowledge the ultimate. The Yogi (or rather his soul), after attaining unison with Brahm, remains with (or in) his body as is predestined and undertakes all bodily functions like an ordinary person. However, he remains beyond his Sthool, Sukshma and Karan bodies in Jagrat, Swapna and Sushupti states and feels unified with Virat, Sutratma and Avyakrut bodies of Ishwar. He leaves his body at his own accord and travels to Bhagwan's supreme abode via two different paths called 'Vaihangam' and 'Paipilik'. O Muni! Whichever path he travels upon, such an exalted Yogi indeed attains almighty Purushottam Shree Hari and not any other Devtas."

Thus ends the 71st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 72

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Upon describing the state and destination of a Yogi by Bhagwan Shree Hari, Brahmanand swami asked Him again, 'O Bhagwan! You mentioned the two different paths a Yogi takes upon leaving his body. Please kindly describe the difference of the two routes and how a Yogi reaches his destination treading these two paths."

Shree Bhagwan replied, "O Muni! Let me first describe the path called 'Vaihangam', treading on which a Yogi attains Moksha immediately. A Yogi, when he desires to leave his body, sits in one place controlling his breathing. Withdrawing his senses from mundane objects, he brings his mind under his control through his inherent intellect. He merges his intellect in his soul and attains unison with Virat and as a result he attains the state of Brahm. He presses his anus with both heels to push Vayu (his life force) upwards. Meditating upon Shree Hari, he slowly but surely elevates his life force through six Chakras beginning with Muladhar Chakra. O Muni! The Yogi's soul migrates through Brahmrandhra Chakra by discarding his body, life force and senses and attains Bhagwan immediately."

Lord Swaminarayan continued, "O Muni! Now listen to the second path called Paipilik, by which a Yogi attains Moksha gradually. Sometimes a Yogi has a latent desires to see the abodes of Devtas and Rishis or wish to see how this cosmos is structured. A Yogi in this state leaves his Sthool body behind as in the previous example but due to the attached desires, cannot discard his Sukshma body. As a soul with the Sukshma body is not able to migrate outside the universe, this Yogi travels taking the path of Sushumna (an ascending invisible path). Yogi travels upward and progressively sees Bhuvar Lok (abode) and its resident minor Devtas Indra and other Devtas in Swarg Lok with their built in pleasure houses. Yogi moves away from these abodes without getting distracted or attracted towards them. He reaches Mahar Lok, the abode of great sages such as Bhrigu, Jan Lok, Tap Lok and Satya Lok of Brahma. Through his in built intelligence, Yogi understands well that all these abodes are not eternal and subject to annihilation sooner or later. Knowing his destination (Bhagwan's eternal abode), he continues his journey to the higher plane and gradually migrates through the five elements, Pruthvi, Jal, Tej, Vayu and Akash and five senses smell, taste, sight, touch and sound. The senses and their organs merge into Ahankar (ego) which merges into Mahatatva. At this stage his Sukshma body is destroyed and he merges into Pradhan and attains the inherent Satva Gun of Pradhan."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O swami! There are thousands of Vishnu Loks (abodes of Vishnu) and Shiva Loks (abodes of Shiva) within this Satva Gun. Vishnu and Shiva of each of these Loks are responsible for the creations, sustenance and destructions of their respective universes. Thousands of Muktas (liberated souls), chaste and as radiant as sun, reside in these abodes. These Muktas are golden complexioned and unchanging, are the epitome of Gnaan (knowledge), Bhakti (devotion) and Vairagya (detachment), and eternal. Vaishnavs worship Vishnu and Shaivs worship Shiva unhindered and their appearance (birth) and disappearance (death) is solely at Bhagwan Shree Hari's wish. O Muni! Just as a large island divides the ocean, the darkness of Maya divides these abodes from the ever radiant abode of Lord Krishna. Only through the unwavering devotion in Lord Krishna a Yogi is able to cross over the darkness of Maya and reaches Bhagwan, Who is beyond Maya. Anandansh, by which a Yogi attains the bliss of Bhagwan and Chidansh, by which a Yogi attains radiance of Bhagwan, are the two paths he uses to attain Bhagwan. Whichever path he chooses, Yogi indeed attains the unison with Bhagwan and understands the process of creation, sustenance and destruction of the universes. The supreme Vedic knowledge that he acquires, which helps him to perform the deeds of the sense such as to listen to or hear is never forgotten by himself or erased, even by Maya. O Muni! The true extent of the pleasures and bliss of Akshardham cannot be described by anybody. Only residents of Akshardham know their true superiority. I have described the state of an enslaved soul, how it can attain Moksha and the rewards of Moksha in short."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Brahmanand swami, Muktanand swami and other eminent saints in the assembly were greatly delighted on hearing this sermon from their Ishtadev, Shree Hari. Shree Narayanmuni directed all saints to return to their respective quarters before Himself retiring for the night. O king! Shree Hari held similar assemblies every evening until He remained in Amdavad and different subjects of theosophy were broached upon. A daily feast was laid up for all the saints, Brahmins, devotees and visitors during His presence in Amdavad."

Thus ends the 72nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 73

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! After concluding His daily routine on the morning of Teras, Bhagwan Shree Hari arrived in the assembly and took His seat on an ornate Sinhasan. The devotees wanted to offer their veneration to Bhagwan. The devotees of the East offered Him many pieces of fine and expensive white fabrics, pearls, studded ornaments, several platter full of Pendas, Barfi and other sweets after worshipping Him with sandalwood paste and flower garlands. The devotees of the North offered Him red and ochre robes, Chinese utensils, plenty of sugar candy and fruits after worshipping Him with flowers and sandalwood paste. The devotees of the South presented Him with many gold and silver coins while expert and scholar Brahmins amongst them chanted relevant Vedic hymns. They also offered Him sugarcane, bananas, grapes and almonds. The devotees of the West, wearing large diadems, presented Him with silver and gold coins and ornaments besides coconuts, dates and Ladoos made of sesame seeds. At the end of venerations, large quantities of clothes, coins, flowers and fruits had gathered in front of Shree Hari, despite Mukundanand Brahmchari returning half of them back to the devotees as Prasad. "

Suvrat Muni continued, "Knowing Shree Hari's generous nature, Anandanand swami distributed fine pieces of fabric and silver coins among thousands of Brahmins present. There was still plenty left which Shree Hari gave to Ayodhyaprasadji, the Acharya of NarNarayan Dev temple. Upon hearing the drums to indicate the imminent onset of RajBhog Aarti, Shree Hari went towards the temple followed by the throng of devotees. Shree Hari arranged the sumptuous feast for the devotees and He served food to the saints and devotees before returning to Rampratapbhai's residence for His lunch. Another assembly was held in the afternoon where the devotees of the central region bordering the River Ganga and Yamuna performed Shree Hari's worship with flowers and fruits. Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni accepted their gifts of ornaments and robes to please them. He answered many questions from the devotees to remove their doubts by citing examples from Holy Scriptures. Towards the end of the assembly, Shree Hari pronounced, 'O devotees! Tomorrow is Purnima due to the absence of Chaudas in the almanac. Furthermore, the Sun will be in Uttara Falguni constellation at dawn. According to the wise astrologers, the birth anniversary of Lord NarNarayan must be celebrated on Purnima of the month of Falgun when the Sun is in Uttara Falguni constellation. I accept this opinion and will perform ritualistic worship of Lord NarNarayan Dev early tomorrow morning. When playing the sport of colours tomorrow, I want all of you to bear in mind that householder male devotees must only splash colour on other householder males only. They must not splash colour on celibate saints or female devotees. The saints and female devotees must follow the same principle and splash colour only on their counterparts. After dispersing the assembly, Shree Hari, after freshening up in His personal quarters, went to visit the temple to inspect the preparations for the next day. He wanted to advise the saints to expedite the preparations."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari saw many Varnis including Vaasudevanand swami, Harikrishnanand swami, Mukundanand swami, Keshavanand swami, Vaikunthanand swami and led by the priest of the temple Narayananand Brahamchari busy in preparing and decorating the swing for Lord NarNarayan Dev. He saw Suvratanand Brahamchari and Jayanand Varni bringing various artefacts needed for the worship. Shree Hari saw other Varnis bringing cut trunks of banana plants; leaves of mango and Asopalav trees; vast quantities of flowers of various hues; different varieties of fruits and lengths of sugar canes. He profusely praised the Varnis engaged in various tasks. He then saw Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj, with his dhoti tightly Shree Hari was satisfied in His mind that the preparations were going at full steam. He saw many saints including Mahanubhavanand swami, Gnanannand swami, Sarvagnanand swami, Tadrupanand swami, Badrinathanand swami, Uttamanand swami, Avinashanand swami, Dayanand swami, Krushnanand swami, Bhudhranand swami, Abhedanand swami, Gnanswarupanand swami and Sarvanivasanand swami checking the condition of and repairing as required the hand pumps to be used for splashing the colour tomorrow. O king! Shree Hari praised the saints as well for their efforts before retiring to His personal quarters for the night, very pleased with the ongoing preparations."

CHAPTER 74

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Pujari saints woke up early in the morning to complete their morning routine and started the invocation and veneration early. The other saints gave the final touch to the swing by decorating it with fresh flowers. Just as Vamanand Brahamchari went to call Shree Hari to invite Him to the sanctum sanctorum of the temple, he saw Bhagwan Swaminarayan rushing towards him leaving behind the retinues of saints and personal attendants. Brahamchari returned back to the Sinhasan and laid a woollen mat for Shree Hari to sit. Leaving His footwear outside the temple, Shree Hari entered the sanctum sanctorum and bowed down reverentially to Lord NarNarayan before taking His seat on the mat and started veneration of Bhagwan Balmukund following all the rituals. Shree Hari placed the idol of Lord Shree Krishna in the cradle of an ornate swing and offered Him flower garlands and Naivedhya. O king! The scholar Brahmins and saints were chanting appropriate Vedic hymns and musicians were playing their instruments during the veneration. Lord Shree Hari performed Aarti of Lord Krishna in accompaniments of beating drums and cymbals while thousands of devotees clapped their hands in unison and in tune with the beats of the drums. Many devotees fired their firearms to express their joy on this occasion. O king! Every devotee seemed in an exhilarating trance with their senses and mind focussed exclusively on Bhagwan Shree Hari. He stood with folded hands for a while in front of the cradle at the conclusion of Aarti as saints sang Kirtans extolling the Leelas and glory of Bhagwan."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari took a golden hand pump and splashed coloured water onto the throng of devotees to indicate the start of the festival of colour. The male devotees splashed colour on other male devotees and saints splashed colour on others saints as directed by Shree Hari the previous day. Shree Hari threw handfuls of coloured powder on His devotees who followed suit and started throwing coloured powder on each other. Devotees made room for other devotees by moving away after being drenched with colour to give others the same opportunity at the hands of Shree Hari. He then directed saints and devotees to make pairs for more orderly enjoyment. O king! Following the instructions of Shree Hari devotees and saints formed pairs. Muktanand swami paired with Gopalanand swami; Mahanubhavanand swami with Brahmanand swami; Anandanand swami with Nityanand swami; Mukundanand Muni with Vaasudevanand Muni; Vamananand swami with Ramchandranand swami while Narayananand Brahamchari paired with Anandanand Brahamchari. Ayodhyaprasadji played with Raghuvirji in their distinct north Indian manner while Uttam Khachar pired with Hemantsinh; Sura Khachar with Soma Khachar and Bhaguji with Viraji. O king! Shree Hari was pleased to see other saints and devotees enjoying themselves with their respective partners. He went inside the temple for a while to perform some rituals of the worship of Lord Krishna before returning to continue splashing colours. Shree Hari mounted His horse and went to Narayanghat on the banks of River Sabarmati for a bath followed by thousands of devotees, Parshads and saints."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! After returning to the temple, Shree Hari arranged for a feast for all the devotees including Brahmins, saints and Parshads before having His lunch at Rampratapbhai's home. After a short afternoon siesta, another assembly was held in the early evening. Shree Hari, seated on an ornate Sinhasan and surrounded by His devotees, looked as splendid as the moon looks marvellous in the midst of

Thus ends the 74th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 75

Hemantram asked, "O Bhagwan! Celibate saints have forsaken the materialistic world and therefore, they can engage in Your Bhakti peacefully and without any hindrance. As a result, their Moksha is easy and assured. However, Your householder devotees like us are engaged in so many tasks. Due to our affection in materialistic chores, we are unable to forsake the world. What will happen to us? How can we attain Moksha? Please enlighten us on how we can attain liberation."

Almighty Bhagwan Shree Hari replied, "O Brahmin! Householder devotees can attain salvation by having unwavering, unadulterated and exclusive faith in Lord Krishna and by rendering selfless and sincere services to Him. Forsaking the world or living within it is not the primary reason for liberation. His devotion is the sole means to attain Moksha for both types of devotees. One may live within the world as a householder or forsake it and become a saint as per one's liking and develop profound devotion towards Bhagwan. O Brahmin! Both of them need a profound devotion towards Bhagwan to attain Moksha. I shall reiterate a tale from the Mahabharat that will eliminate your doubt. Sage Vyas had a son called Shukdev who had a full understanding of the Dharma of householders and Tyagis and he chose to be a Tyagi. He had profound knowledge and understanding of the Vedas and other scriptures; was aloof from the materialistic world; an accomplished Yogi; highly religious and had steadfast faith in Bhagwan. Seeking permission from his father to leave home, he said, 'O father! I am not interested in living here (at home). I wish to travel freely in this world. Please grant me your permission.' O Brahmin! Sage Vyas replied, 'O son! Bear one thing in mind. A soul attains Moksha only through association with pious devotees. Therefore, always seek their association while you travel all over the world. Janak, the king of Mithila, is one of such liberated soul. You must pay a visit to him for his Darshan. Always revere the elders, befriend the peers and advise the younger ones whilst travelling around."

Shree Hari continued, "O Hemantram! Getting his father's blessing, Shukdevji travelled around visiting various hermitages, villages, towns and cities while keeping his magical powers hidden from people. He treated dust, rocks and gold with equal disdain while travelling around. He saw mountains, rivers, lakes, trees, villages and towns on his travels without showing any real interest in them. He spent nights only at hermitages. As suggested by his father, once he decided to visit Mithila, the capital of King Janak's kingdom. The city of Mithila could boast the opulence equal to that of the heaven. It was guarded by infantry and soldiers mounted on elephants, horses and chariots. He was stopped by a sentry from entering the walled city. Not affected by the insult heaped by the sentry and nor by the scorching sun, he waited patiently. As King Janak, by his magical powers, realised Shukdevji's arrival at the gates, he sent one of his ministers to accompany Shukdevji in the city. Shukdevji saw the rows of opulent houses and well stocked shops on either side of the road without any interest. The minister took Shukdevji to a beautiful garden, offered him a seat before departing for the palace."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! Five hundred young maidens, as beautiful as Apsaras of heaven came forward to serve him. They were wearing fine red clothes and golden ornaments. Their smiling faces were round like a full moon; their bosoms and bottoms were large and round; their voice similar to the tinkling of the chimes and expert in the art of seduction. With an enchanting smile on their faces, they said to Shukdevji, 'O Rishi! We are your maids. Your command is our duty.' Saying this, they brought clean water to wash his feet, scented and sweetened water to drink, sandalwood paste and oils to massage his body and various items of food. Expert in testing and observing the vacillation in nature, they wondered around him in a meaningful way asking each other to bring camphor, sandalwood, pearl necklaces, fine clothes, garlands, ornaments, honey, milk, beetle nuts, cloves, cardamom and nutmeg. They tried every trick in the book to entice him. Shukdevji treated them with total disdain. Indeed he treated them like female demons without looking at or speaking to them. Due to his steadfast Brahamcharya and his mind and senses under his total control, he neither felt happy nor sad. As the evening fell, Shukdevji lowered his sight on the tip of his nose and started meditation. The maidens thought of this as an opportunity to attract his attention. Some of them started singing while others started dancing erotically. Some of them even brought an ornate bed and placed it in front of Shukdevji. When they could not entice Shukdevji despite trying very hard, they thought of him very highly. Though they admitted their failure to lure him, they spent the night in the garden as they were ordered by the royal decree. After washing his hands and feet, Shukdevji performed his evening rituals and after spending considerable time in meditation, he retired for the night, around midnight. He woke up early in the morning and, though surrounded by the beautiful maidens, started meditation again. With the help of periodical reporting by the spies, King Janak kept himself informed of the highly astute status of Sage Shukdev. O Brahmin! The king sent his minister to bring Shukdevji to his palace at sunrise."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Hemantram Brahmin! Accompanied by his ministers and priests and taking drinking water on his head, King Janak went forward to greet Shukdevji. As soon as the king saw the sage, he prostrated at his feet. Shukdevji raised the king and embraced him lovingly. King Janak led Shukdevji by hand towards his palace and offered him a golden Sinhasan and venerated him in the presence of the head priest of his kingdom. When Shukdevji returned to the Sinhasan after his bath and morning routine, King Janak repeatedly bowed at his feet with folded hands."

King Janak asked, “O great Rishi! Your arrival in my kingdom is very auspicious for me and my subject and we wholeheartedly welcome you. How are you and your father, Sage Vyas. I know that austerity is very dear to you and I hope that you haven’t transgressed from your austerity. What brings you to my kingdom?” Sukdevji replied, “O king! My father and I are fine and my austerity does remain unsullied. My father, who is undergoing austerity on the summit of Mountain Meru, has asked me to meet all the liberated souls, including you, in the world. Therefore, I have come for your Darshan. I have seen many Muktas whose mere Darshan gets rid of the sins. The scholars recognise such Muktas by their behaviour as described in the scriptures. Indeed, one can imagine their piety from their external traits. However, I do not see a single trait of a Mukta. You are engrossed in the polity of your kingdom day and night. How can a king like you be called a Mukta when even a householder is entangled in his home and hearth? You being a Mukta can only be misnomer. O king! I ask you a direct question. How do you behave? How have you become a Mukta? What exactly is the state of your mind?”

Slightly bemused King Janak replied, “O great sage! You are right. I do not exhibit a single exterior trait of a Mukta. You need sublime eyes to recognise a Mukta. A true Mukta is who considers his soul as distinct from his mortal body and whose mind and senses are under his control. Mundane deeds do not entangle such a person. Just as polished grains do not germinate ever, the deeds of such a Mukta do not bind him to the cycle of birth and death. Vairagya arising from the knowledge is true Vairagya. Vairagya without true knowledge is futile and fleeting. Just as the trees do not bear fruit without flowering first, Vairagya does not propagate without knowledge. O Shukdevji! One becomes Nirgun (free from the traits of Maya) only as the result of the knowledge and I do have that knowledge. Other means (such as observing Vrats and austerity) are mere subsidiary tools. My Vairagya is born of the knowledge. I do not have any interest in this vast kingdom which others can only dream to acquire. I treat shearing my one hand with a saw and smearing my other hand with sandalwood paste as equal. Moksha can be attained by the three; acquisition of knowledge, conducting sacred deeds and having the utmost faith and reverence in Bhagwan. With the blessings of my guru, Sage Panchsikh, I have all three elements in abundance. He has stopped me being corrupted by the power and wealth. O Muni! The attraction of the senses towards the objects of enjoyment is dependent on one's mind. It is neither absolute nor independent. The senses of a yogi, who has mastered the control of his mind, do not wonder in any objects nor are they able to corrupt his heart. My guru has not asked me to foresake the kingdom and with his blessings and teaching, I am totally detached from my kingdom. I have separated myself from my kingdom and therefore, I am a Mukta."

King Janak continued, "O Muni! Nobody, including a great Yogi like you, is unable to renounce everything totally as long as one maintains unison with the body. Therefore, rather than the external renunciation, the wise consider the mental renunciation as the real renunciation. However, some misguided scholars extol the external renunciation in the form of having only a pitcher and wooden staff as possessions and wearing ochre robes. Often, such renunciation is illusionary and therefore, the wise consider it futile. Furthermore, if having a pitcher, wooden staff and ochre robes are the means to attain Moksha, why could a king not attain Moksha by having regal paraphernalia despite both of them having the same knowledge and understanding? One accumulates whatever one needs. In that case, how can a Grahastha be criticised for his acquisitions? How can one become free of association by leaving Grahastha Ashram for the other Ashram (Sanyas)? Such a Sanyasi is in no way superior to a king. Indeed, he has an additional vice of having an ego of renunciation. The true knowledge and understanding are the sole reason for Moksha and not the external paraphernalia. Therefore, O Shuk Muni! Do not cast doubt on my status due to my kingdom. As I have untangled myself from the kingdom and its opulence with the knowledge, the others and I consider myself Mukta."

Shree Hari said, "O Brahmin! Shukdevji was flabbergasted at King Janak calling himself Mukta and at a suggestion that a king and a Sanyasi could be equal in their renunciation."

Thus ends the 76th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shukdevji said to King Janak, "O king! I heard what you said, but it does not conform to the scriptures and normal practice. One cannot do anything, even the smallest function, without immersing himself in that task; then how could you rule your kingdom? You have not looked into your heart when saying that you are independent and detached from your kingdom. How could you pronounce that you are not affected by the senses engrossed in the objects as your mind is not with the senses? Five organs of perception - eyes, ears, tongue, skin and nose and five organs of action - hands, feet, tongue (speech), genitals and anus engage in their object (work) in conjunction with the mind. According to the Vedas, their engagement is not independent. Everybody hears with the mind and sees with the mind. Moreover, the mind cannot do anything without the concurrence of a soul. Therefore, the soul is the real actor. O king! How can you describe the organs as real doers when even a mind is not a doer itself? The mind and organs are mere instruments of an action while the soul is the real doer. The two triads; the knowledge, knower and what needs to be known and doer, deed and action (process) accomplishes everything in this world."

Shukdevji continued, "O king! Have you not studied the process of creation as narrated in the Vedas and Puranas? The body of Virat was created from portions of twenty four elements. Though it had all the senses, mind and organs, the body was not able to function at all on its own. Only when Bhagwan sublimely entered the body of Virat as its soul, it managed to get up and function. This proves that mind, senses and organs are not able to perform any task independently. When Virat is able to act only in this way (through soul), how can you say that you are detached from your actions? Anyone who says that 'I rule this kingdom with detachment' is the real doer.

Anyone undertaking any task has to bear its consequences in the form of entry in heaven or hell. Then how could you say you are not afraid of death when you are engaged in deeds all the time? Moreover, O king! You say you are separate and independent from your actions. However, I do not see any trace of independence in you. You are totally engrossed in your duties. You depend on your spouse for conducting private affairs, on ministers for running the business of state and on horses and chariots for travelling. How do you consider yourself independent? Several people approach you one after the other seeking advice or answers with whom you confer. They do not even let you sleep in peace. O king! You see, hear, eat, drink and defend your kingdom with the help of others or on their advice. How could you be independent when you still bear mental and physical scars? You do not get any time for meditation and introspection as you are forever engaged in war, peace and expeditions against the enemy. You still see people as your enemy or a friend. You arrest and punish criminals. How could you consider yourself Mukta when you engage in dastardly deeds such as cruelty? How can you be at ease with yourself when you hanker to win the land that you have lost in a war or to re-establish the towns ravaged by a fire. It is indeed surprising that you do not show any remorse for your actions that you undertake in pursuit of running the kingdom. When a householder becomes entangled in his home whilst running a single household, how could a king running such a vast empire remain untangled? Are you not ashamed to compare yourself with the true Muktas who have renounced the world?"

Shukdevji continued, "O king! It is said in Shrutis that a love for his village is the cause of entanglement for a villager dwelling in it while an open forest is considered as a dwelling fit for the Devtas. Interest in living in urban areas is the rope that ties one to the village which the pious try to cut. Only sinners prefer to be tied down. Just as a lion gets hold of a goat, death clutches the man engrossed in unfulfilled desires and tasks. How could you compare the sorrows of the kingdom and happiness of renunciation? Just as the darkness and brightness has no similarity, renunciation and attachment are totally dissimilar. The scriptures propound renunciation for the scholars and not for the ignorant. A Sanyasi becomes liberated after renouncing everything. Kaupin, beard, pitcher, wooden staff and ochre robes are kept only for the decency. O king! Keeping these does not entangle a Sanyasi but a king's attachment towards his kingdom surely destroys his knowledge and leads him to hell. Therefore, you must never think that you are liberated or a Mukta, know Braham or do not need to do anything else."

Thus ends the 77th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 78

Sage Shukdevji said, "O King Janak! Even the most indifferent person gets shackled by deeply associating with anything. In the bygone era of Satya Yug, there was a king named Bharat, who was son of Bhagwan incarnate Rhishabhdev.

His empire stretched to all corners of the world. With teaching and blessings of his father, he understood very well that his immortal soul and his mortal body were two distinct entities and his soul was his true self. Realising that his vast kingdom was in his way to salvation, he renounced the kingdom and went to an area of forest called Pulhashram. He undertook severe austerity in solitude for a long time. He became attached to a baby deer due to compassion and as a direct result; he had to take another birth as a deer. What indeed will happen to you O King Janak, when a great King Bharat, so near to salvation, was subject to rebirth due to his association and attachment to a baby deer? You are totally engrossed in the polity of your kingdom. Why would a mighty King Priyavart forsake his kingdom if knowledge alone was liberating? Even he was very knowledgeable and was able to see his soul. King Bharat had become free from the three states of his body (Jagrat, Swapna and Sushupti) and blessed with many divine and magical powers, yet gave up his kingdom and wealth in search of salvation. Similarly, the great kings such as Ikshavaku, Mandhata, his son Muchkund, Yayati and many others were so mighty that they even provided assistance to the Devtas. They were scholar of the Vedas and had a clear understanding of their souls due to their knowledge and experience as a result of their gurus' teaching and blessings. However, all of them renounced their vast kingdoms as they understood that their kingdoms were hindrances in attaining the liberation from the cycle of death and rebirth. If knowledge regarding Aatma and Parmatma alone is able to deliver salvation, would such mighty kings renounce the world? Even one of your ancestors, King Nimi, who was revered by the Devtas, renounced the kingdom. O king! I am sure that when you equate running the kingdom with renunciation, you are doing that just because of your interest and attachment in your kingdom and its paraphernalia. Renunciation is always superior to the acquisition."

Shukdevji continued, "O king! Even the Vedas extol renunciation. The Vedas propound Brahamcharya for the first stage of life and recommends maintaining Brahamcharya and Sanyas (renunciation) if aversion to the world is strong. One cannot renounce unless he has a strong aversion to the world and for such a person, the Vedas recommend Grahastha Ashram. To emphasise the renunciations, the scriptures recommend remaining a householder until he turns fifty. After that one should accept Vanprastha to develop apathy towards the world. O king! The Vedas decree to become a Sanyasi after that so to emphasise the virtue of renunciation. Saptarshi (the seven great sages), though householders, have extolled renunciation as they understood the true message of the Vedas. Brahma, the creator of this universe revered by the Devtas, demons and humans, and revealer of the Vedas, has forsaken his opulent abode (Satya Lok) and performs austerity on Mountain Vaijayant. Lord Shiva, with whose blessings one attains opulence of Satya Lok or bliss of Vaikunth, has renounced everything and has taken up residence on the apex of Mountain Kailash to undertake severe austerity. He even burnt Kaamdev (Eros) to ashes as he considered him responsible for the attraction towards women which is a great hindrance in attaining salvation. O king! All these examples prove with the concurrence of the scriptures that the attachment towards home, hearth, woman and children is a primary and great hindrance to the acquisition of the true knowledge."

Shukdevji continued, "O king! Now let me come to the point why your guru has not asked you to renounce the kingdom. Just as the best doctor prescribes medicine according to the state of his patient, the wise guru imparts knowledge based on the ability of his disciple. Sage Panchsikh may have granted you the permission to run the kingdom after considering your attachment and interest in it. He surely must have thought that you may develop Vairagya after some time. Otherwise, no Tyagi sage likes Grahastha Ashram due to their superior knowledge and aloofness towards the world. Your guru's guru, Bhagwan Kapildev manifested Himself as a son of Sage Kardam. Kapil Bhagwan renounced everything and went away to perform austerity in solitude at Gangasagar, where River Ganga meets the ocean. Sanat, Sanak and their two brothers, though the sons of Brahama, did not obey the command of their father to procreate to further the process of creation as they considered that against salvation. They roam the world without associating with anything and anybody, not even clothes. All these people I mentioned are far superior to you in the term of their knowledge, Bhakti and Vairagya, yet they all renounced everything. If living within the world was not considered entangling, why would Sanat, Sanak and his two brothers renounce the world? If you think carefully and try to test it against the axiom of the scripture, you will realise that running the kingdom can never be equated with renunciation."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! King Janak heard Sage Shukdevji patiently and asked him reverentially."

Thus ends the 78th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 79

King Janak said, "O great sage! Whatever you said is true and conforms to the scriptures. However, I would like to ask you something. No one can attain Moksha without knowledge and according to you; the knowledge and renunciation go hand in hand. Therefore, the householders, however religious or pious, cannot acquire the knowledge. If that is so, how can the householders ever attain salvation? Many householders in the past have attained salvation. Swayambhuv Manu, though being a king, attained salvation. The kingdom and home did not shackle him. King Prahalad and his grandson King Bali attained Moksha, though both of them were householders and mighty kings. There are many similar examples of kings and householders who had attained Moksha in the past. How did households not become entangled in them?"

Shukdevji replied, "O king! Let me explain the rationale behind it. First of all, Swayambhuv Manu and other kings were privy to the true knowledge from their respective gurus. As a result, they did not have any attachment towards their body and its deeds or relatives and were engaged in Bhagwan's Bhakti all the time. They delegated polity of empire to their ministers and household responsibility to their children. They lived their life as the witnesses and not as the participants. This gave them the peace of mind to conduct Bhagwan's Bhakti at leisure. The whole of their life was spent in one of the nine types of Bhakti. O king! They attained Moksha as a result of this Bhakti. They lived as a householder only to serve Bhagwan and His devotees. As Grahasthas, they gained an extra benefit of performing Bhagwan's worship with actual artefacts. They lived in their homes as guests and not as owners. The devotees from other three Ashrams do not get an opportunity to serve and venerate Bhagwan as lavishly as Grahastha. Furthermore, Grahastha devotees sustain the people of the other three Ashrams. A householder, who does not sustain people from the three other Ashrams is not worthy of any praise. Any Grahastha who spend his life with as much disinterest as the aforementioned kings can attain Moksha even today. However, any Grahastha who considers himself a Mukta only on the basis of his supposedly superior knowledge is mistaken. I consider such a householder devotee entangled in the clutches of Maya."

Shukdevji continued, "O king! A person is never attracted or attached in mundane worldly affairs whose intellect has become steadfast in the almighty supreme Bhagwan. His senses never wonder in worldly object. After listening to the discourse from a true saint, a person's fickle mind becomes focused in Bhagwan. His Katha is able to bring the wondering mind back immediately at His feet. The mind and senses corrupted by bad influences and association is chastened and brought back to Bhagwan after listening to His virtues, glory and greatness. Just as clean water is able to remove dirt from the clothes, listening to Bhagwan's Katha is able to remove vices from the mind. The mind that has become restless by the evil influences of Maya becomes serene by taking refuge in Bhagwan's Murti. Therefore, the devotees engage themselves in His devotion at all times. Just as a king remains safe by sheltering in a fort, a devotee becomes safe after conquering the inner vices with the help of Bhagwan's Bhakti. O King Janak! I answered your question as to how a householder may attain salvation. Now do some introspection and decide what is best for you and act accordingly."

King Janak said, "O Muni! You have cast aside my doubt. Sage Narad has said the same thing to me earlier. With the blessings of pious sages like you and mercy of Bhagwan, I know and believe exactly as you have just said. My ministers run this kingdom and I do indeed live as a guest in my home. O Muni! This was my belief from the beginning, yet I asked you the same question (how can a householder attain salvation) just to ascertain and accentuate my belief. However, I will make doubly sure that my behaviour does conform to your tenets. I consider you superior in knowledge and aloofness to the other sages and myself. You are beyond happiness and sorrows; not interested in music, dance or festivities, not attached to your siblings and are fearless despite the existence of fear (of death). You treat gold, dust and corpse; male and female and friend and foe with equal disdain. I have become indebted to you for your sermon. I feel indebted to your father and guru Sage Vyas for prompting you to visit me. My home has become holy with your presence. Your presence at my home will render it famous and praiseworthy despite a home of a householder not considered very highly."

Shukdevji said, "O king! Even I had heard about your state of mind from my father. I spoke at length to test your opinion and resolve. I have come here just for your Darshan. O king! You are great indeed. I bless you. Now I will take your leave."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Sage Shukdevji stopped King Janak following him at the gates of the fort of Mithila and urged him to return to his palace while he went ahead."

Shree Hari said, "O Hemantram Vipra! Sage Shukdevji merrily continued his journey visiting many hermitages to meet various seers. Any householder or Tyagi can liberate himself from the cycle of death and rebirth and attain salvation by having steadfast faith in Bhagwan. Corollary, nobody can attain Moksha without having firm faith in Lord Krishna."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! All of Hemantram's doubts were laid to rest after listening to Shree Hari. The other householder devotees seated in the assembly were delighted as well. They bowed down to Shree Hari. He stayed in Amdavad until Falgun Sud Panchmi, holding assemblies every day and broaching on different topics to delight

CHAPTER 80

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! After lunch on Falgun Vad Panchmi, Anandanand swami informed Shree Hari that the construction work of a temple at Jetalpur has been completed and awaiting consecration. Delighted at the news, Shree Hari left Amdavad and arrived at Jetalpur the next morning. The devotees of Jetalpur rushed ahead with musical instruments to welcome Shree Hari. He praised Anandanand swami after looking at the intricately carved and magnificent temple. Bhagwan Shree Hari installed the Murtis of Balram, Revati and Himself in the form of HariKrishna Maharaj in the Sinhasan on Falgun Vad Astami (of Samvat 1882). A large celebration on the scale of that celebrated at Amdavad was organised on this occasion at Jetalpur. Sumptuous feasts of Ladoos laced with plenty of Ghee and other sweets were laid for thousands of local visiting devotees, Brahmins and saints. Shree Hari had a bath in a nearby large lake named DevSarovar every morning with hundreds of devotees to delight them. He held assemblies every evening to remove doubts or ambiguities of His devotees which enhanced their faith and Bhakti in Him. Male devotees led by Ashjibhai and female devotees led by Gangaba served Shree Hari reverently. One such assembly was held under a tree in a park near the lake. Lord Swaminarayan was seated on large ornate Sinhasan. He was attired in white robes and held a Mala in His right hand. Muktanand swami, Brahmanand swami, Nityanand swami, Anandanand swami, Mahanubhavanand swami and other saints were present in the assembly and so were Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya devotees of Jetalpur and nearby villages. He was flanked by some of His Parshads including Bhaguji, Ratanji and Veraji. Shree Hari was delighting His devotees by benevolently smiling at them while the devotees mind and eyes were focused in their Ishtadev."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Always thinking of enhancing devotion and the understanding of His devotees and to impart the correct religious tenets to them, He Finding household cumbersome and hindrance in our Moksha, we have renounced the world and taken refuge under You to serve You and the saints. What is our specific Dharma (ethical duties)? How do You become more happy with us? Please tell us how could our faith in You become stronger. Who better than You can explain this to us?"

Bhagwan Shree Hari replied, "O Prashads! Let Me reply to your questions pertaining to your ethical duties which will enhance our mutual love for each other. Just like the saints, you must not look at, talk to, think about, play with, listen about or think about cavorting with women. You must not accumulate wealth for personal use nor ask others to accumulate it for you. According to the Shreemad Bhagwat, wealth is the root cause of fifteen evils such as stealing, speaking lies, violence, ego, hypocrisy etc. Whatever wealth you have must be used for religious activities such as venerating God and saints and feeding saints and Brahmins. The money you have lent others prior to leaving your home must be treated as vomit and no attempt must be made, either by you or somebody on your behalf, to recover that wealth. Accepting such wealth is akin to eating one's own vomit. You may keep money as safekeeping on behalf of your guru for his welfare as this is akin to serving your guru."

Shree Hari continued, "O Parshads! Now let Me tell you what garments you should keep with you. You should possess one length of course fabric, costing less than two rupees, to use as a turban to cover your head. Fine or expensive fabric must never be used for this purpose. You should keep a pair of tunic and Dhoti, each one not costing more than one and a half rupees; a length of cloth not costing more than a half rupee to tie around your vest and similar cloth of the same value to cover the torso; two Kaupins; one bedspread costing no more than one and a half rupees and one blanket to keep you warm costing no more than one and a quarter rupees. The blanket must be made from old clothes and not of ginned cotton. My Parshads must not keep more than this with them, failure of which will attract atonement. A fast for a Shree Hari continued, "The Parshads shall serve wherever - at temple, at a farmhouse, cattle farm or at his residence - Acharya Maharajshree asks him to serve. They shall bear arms as and when Acharya Maharajshree asks them to. They should accompany their Acharya on his visits to various villages without any hesitation. They should safeguard gifts given to deities, money donated to the temple or Acharya. Keeping such money for safekeeping is not a sin. My Parshads shall always obey their gurus and never behave independently or maliciously. A Parshad who has affection or concern for his home or his family or asks someone else on his behalf to take care of his home or family is a lowly person and he should not be allowed to be a disciple of our Sampraday. He should not keep any money to sustain his home or family. He should undertake a Chandrayan Vrat for inadvertent lapse of this decree and ensure that the same does not happen ever again. An elderly Parshad may speak to a woman if asked to do so by his guru or five saints but not otherwise. Any association with women in any form is strictly prohibited to My celibate disciples. My Parshads shall have no association with their brothers and neither shall they visit their village on their free will. However, if they have to visit the same village, they must ensure that they do not visit their homes or eat any food from their brothers' house. My Parshads must observe a day of fasting for any lapse of this decree. I have explained the way you, My Parshads, should conduct your affairs for your betterment."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari stayed at Jetalpur till Chaitra Sud Beej, when He left Jetalpur accompanied by the devotees of the western region after asking other devotees to return to their respective villages. Bhagwan Sahajanand swami, accompanied by many of His saints, reached Kamiyala, a village in Bhaal province of Gujarat on Astami. The devotees of the village pleaded with Shree Hari to stay for some days in their village. Shashivarna, Hathisinh, Vahbhai, Khemraj, Avarbhai and other male devotees and Jijiba and her companions arranged for Shree Hari's boarding and lodging very lovingly and served Him very reverentially. celebrated the festival of RamNavami the next day when thousands of devotees of nearby villages turned up to participate. The visiting devotees took an opportunity to venerate Shree Hari with many artefacts. At the request of the devotees, Bhagwan Shree Hari remained at Kamiyala until Purnima."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Punjaji of Dholera came to Kamiyala on the morning of Chaitra Vad Padvo just as He was preparing to leave. He bowed down to Shree Hari and informed Him that the temple at Dholera is nearly complete and the rest of the work will be completed soon after the invocation of the idols in sanctum sanctorum of the temple. Shree Hari was pleased at the news and agreed to travel to Dholera to inaugurate the temple. Following the departure of Punjaji, Shree Hari left Kamiyala with the saints and reached Dholera before noon the same day. Punjaji arranged for Shree Hari to stay in his own home and the other accompanied saints were put up at various devotees' homes. After inspecting the almost complete temple, Shree Hari called astrologers to inquire about the most auspicious day for installation of Bhagwan's Murtis. The astrologer Brahmins advised Shree Hari that forthcoming Vaishakh Sud Teras is the next most auspicious day. Bhagwan Narayanmuni wished to visit other villages before returning to Dholera as the auspicious day was some time away. Punjaji and other devotees pleaded with Him to prolong His stay. Bhagwan, who is ever ready to please His staunch devotees, assented and stayed behind at Dholera. The devotees of Bhal region converged on Dholera as the news of Shree Hari's presence there spread. His discourses and Darshan created the aura of festival during his presence at Dholera. O king! Shree Hari installed the idols of MadanMohan Maharaj and Radhikaji in the central Sinhasan in accordance with Vedic ritual on Vaishakh Sud Teras (of Samvat 1882). The vibrant sound of musical instruments and chants of the Vedic hymns by scholar Brahmins filled the environ. Thousands of Brahmins and devotees were satisfied with sumptuous feast. Shree Hari rewarded Brahmins generously with money and clothes. Great festivity was conducted the next day as well to mark the birth anniversary of Narsinh Bhagwan. O king! Shree Hari left Dholera after lunch the next day and reached Gadhpur in the late afternoon. The devotees of Gadhpur were elated by His return and Darshan. Benevolent Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan resided merrily at Gadhpur for some time"

Thus ends the 80th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 81

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! After lunch on Vaishakh Sud Panchmi, Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji Maharaj came to Shree Hari and sat near His feet after bowing down to Him. Shree Hari asked them, 'O sons! Do you wish to ask Me something?' They asked Shree Hari, 'O Prabhu! You have asked us to initiate Satsangis into this Sampraday. We would like to know the ritual of initiation. We will follow Your guidelines.' O king! Shree Hari reminisced Lord Krishna and His guru Ramanand swami in His heart before answering their question."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "(whilst remembering Lord Krishna in His mind first) Bhagwan Shree Krishna, the fountainhead of the virtues such as truth and knowledge, resides in His supreme abode. At the same time, He dwells in the hearts of Purush and Prakruti and everything that is created by (the union of) Purush and Prakruti. Just as Agni (Devta of fire) and Varun (Devta of water) pervade the whole universe sublimely in the form of light and water while still residing in their respective abodes, Bhagwan Shree Krishna takes a human form for the benevolence of mankind while residing in His supreme abode. O Lord Krishna! Bless this world. (Now reminiscing His guru Ramanand swami) Your face is as radiant as a full moon of Autumn; your eyes are shaped like the petals of a lotus; your complexion fair and radiant; your hands are long enough to touch your knees; always attired in white robes and you are holding a lotus in your right hand. O Uddhav incarnate Ramanand swami! Spread this Sampraday widely. O sons! I shall repeat the same rituals of initiation that Ramanand swami, who was always enthusiastic to protect and defend Dharma and Bhakti of his disciples, narrated to Me when anointing Me as the head of this Sampraday. I shall explain how an Acharya of the Uddhav Sampraday should initiate a man into the Sampraday by bestowing common and special Bhagwati Diksha to him. A procedure by which one's desire for the true knowledge regarding Aatma and Parmatma arises and his sins accumulated over the previous lives are washed away is called Diksha.

As Lord Krishna Vaasudev is the ruling deity of this process of Diksha, it is called Bhagwati or Vaasudevi Diksha. "

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "O sons! There are two types of Diksha; Samanya (common, for householder males) and Mahadiksha (for celibate saints). The disciples who have undergone Samanya Diksha are called Satsangis and those who have accepted Mahadiksha are called Atmanivedi disciples. Of these two types of Diksha, I shall describe Samanya Diksha first, which every disciple of the Sampraday must have. There is no set time, place for getting Samanya Diksha, of which a person of any Varna can avail. One becomes eligible for Samanya Diksha when his desire of Moksha is aroused by either listening to the scriptures or association with the pious saints. There is no need to find an auspicious time; no need to follow any specific ritual or observe special Vrat; there is no need to observe a fast as atonement. Indeed, whenever his hunger for Moksha is aroused with the help of a guru is indeed the best time for Diksha. Mumukshu - a person desirous of Moksha must accept the tutelage of a guru born in the clan of Dharmadev with due reverence. A Mumukshu must be able to differentiate between right and wrong; must have faith in scriptures, Vrats and rituals; must work for his moral upliftment; intelligent, adherer in moral ethics, sincere and theist; must have love and faith in saints and must have the fear of Yamraj and the cycle of death and rebirth prior to approaching his Acharya. O sons! An Acharya, born in the clan of Dharmadev, must have the following qualities; he must not speak to or touch any woman who is not a close blood relative, he must treat all women as a daughter, sister or mother other than his wife, he must be devout, religious and ethical, he must follow all his daily routines and he must foremost have full and firm faith in Bhagwan. A Mumukshu must not treat any person not born in Dharmakul as a guru in spite of having all the qualities listed above, and must not accept Diksha from such a person or accept his tutelage."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "After having a bath in clean water and concluding his daily routine, a Mumukshu must approach his Acharya wearing white clothes and taking coconut and other fruits with him as an offering. Placing his offering at his guru's feet, he pleads with folded hands, 'O guru! I have come under your shelter. Protect me from the fear of the cycle of death and rebirth. I have come under the shelter of Bhagwan Shree Krishna for protection from Kaal (death), Maya, sins and messengers of death. Ask Bhagwan to protect me from all my fears.' An Acharya must take him under his tutelage and assure him that Bhagwan will indeed protect him from the fear. Then an Acharya should mark the disciple's forehead with an Urdhvapundrak Tilak and give him a double stringed Kanthi while the Mumukshu pledges to follow ethics of the Sampraday. A Mumukshu should place the aforementioned Kanthi around his neck. An Acharya should speak an eight syllable hymn of Lord Krishna in the Mumukshu's ears thrice. An Acharya should then speak a hymn of six syllables (Swaminarayan), which can be chanted at any time and at any place and which indeed washes away the sins of his disciples. An Acharya should speak this great hymn in the right ear of the disciples of the first three Varnas (Brahmin, Kshatriyas and Vaishyas) while the Shudra disciples should be spoken the hymn in their left ear without actually touching the ear."

Shree Hari continued, "O sons! The Acharya should give the following sermon outlining the greatness of Lord Krishna to his new disciple. 'O disciple! Now you have become a devotee of Bhagwan Shree Vaasudev. Almighty Lord Narayan, the master of the universe, manifested Himself as a man in this world for the benevolence of His devotees. Nobody can fully describe His mercy, Who had taken birth only to protect Dharma and Bhakti of His devotees. He even granted His supreme abode to the felonious persons who considered Him their enemy and consumed alcohol and meat. Instead of acutely mulling over the vices and crimes of such felonious persons, He looked at their good qualities, however minute they may have been. When Bhagwan granted such evil persons His abode, why would He not grant His supreme abode to the people who worship Him devoutly? Indeed He would! Now that you have come under His shelter, you have become free from the bondage of this world (the cycle of death and rebirth). As Bhagwan Shree Krishna has said in the Gita, 'Nobody can overcome My unwieldy Maya with its three traits without coming to Me; therefore come under My shelter.' O Mumukshu! Observe and obey your ethical duties and reverentially worship Lord Vaasudev, Who manifests Himself to defend Dharma and Bhakti."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O sons! The disciple, after hearing the greatness of Lord Krishna from his guru, bows down to his Acharya's feet and says, 'O Maharaj! I have become free from the fears of Maya and the messengers of death due to the mercy of Lord Krishna. The Acharya now should give his disciple a pictorial Murti to be worshipped daily and proffer this advice, 'O disciple! Always act in accordance with your ethical duties as the whole universe is dependent on and held together with Dharma. Bathe every morning, mark your forehead with an Urdhvapundrak Tilak and Chandlo and perform mental and actual worship of Bhagwan. You must chant Lord Krishna's hymn a predetermined number of times every morning and evening. You must fast on every Ekadashi and on Bhagwan's birth anniversaries such as Ramnavmi and Janmashtami and hold great celebrations on these days. You must not consume meat, alcohol, tobacco, opium or any other intoxicating substances; not steal someone's wealth; nor harm or kill any living being including yourself; not level false allegations against anyone; not commit any sin or evil act; not cavort with other women; not drink milk and water prior to sieving with a cloth; not speak lies or cuss anybody; not undertake worship of any other Devtas; not speak even a truth which harms others and not touch any woman, especially widows, who are not close blood relatives. You must have a bath if you touch any woman inadvertently and observe a day of fast if you touch a widow. You must fast for two days if you touch a widow deliberately and lasciviously without anybody noticing it and undertake Chandrayan Vrat if the abovementioned act was witnessed by anybody. However, touching a widow while buying or selling something or trying to save her or your own life, is not a sin. You must not associate with lascivious, extremely greedy, atheist, sinners or ShushkVedanti and neither must you listen to even Bhagwan's Katha from them. Always associate with pious saints, listen to and read attested scriptures and worship Bhagwan by any of the nine ways. O devotee! After being given Diksha, you will become known as Dikshit and while observing these Dharmas, you will become known as 'Satsangi'. The Dikshit Satsangi now must venerate his Acharya enthusiastically with scented sandalwood paste, flower garlands and bouquets and gift new clothes, gold and silver coins as per his financial abilities. He should also venerate Brahmins and saints after this. He should prostrate at the feet of his guru and return to his home after guru's consent."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O sons! The Dikshit Satsangi must now obey all the decrees of his Acharya enthusiastically and engage in devotion of Bhagwan. He must imprint his forehead with an Urdhvapundrak Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo every day. Grahastha (householders), Varni (Brahmin saints) and other saints should use Kumkum that is left over from the veneration of Radhikaji for Chandlo while Vanprasthi, Sanyasins and Agnihotri Brahmins should use sandalwood paste for Chandlo. All householders and saints should use a mirror to imprint an Urdhvapundra Tilak at four places - two arms, chest and forehead. There are four types of Sanyasins mentioned in scriptures (and earlier in this tome) - Kutichakra, Bahudak, Hans and Paramhans. Among them the first three types of Sanyasins should imprint an Urdhvapundra Tilak at three places namely head, forehead and chest while the fourth type - Paramhans - should imprint an Urdhvapundra Tilak only on their forehead. Vanprastha and Varnis should do an Urdhvapundra Tilak at five places - forehead, throat, chest and two arms. The chaste Shudra Dikshit Satsangis should do an Urdhvapundra Tilak at four places while the devotees of lower Varnas should do Chandlo only on their forehead. (they should not do Tilak)."

Shree Hari continued, "The devotees should chant four names of Bhagwan while placing four Tilaks (forehead = Vaasudevay Namah, chest = Sankarshanay Namah, right arm = Pradhyumnay Namah and left arm = Aniruddhay Namah). While doing Tilak at five places, Vanprasthis and Varnis should chant five names of Bhagwan namely; Krishna, Keshav, Narayan, Madhav and Govind or chant a hymn called Vishnu Gayatri. When doing three Tilaks, Sanyasins should chant 'Aum' and Pramhans should chant name of Lord Narayan. A Tilak should ideally be done with the ring finger of the right hand, but devotees unable to do it with finger may use a metal frame or a thin stick. While doing an Urdhvapundra Tilak, devotees must bear following things in mind; it should start at the top of the nose where the two brows meet and end at the bottom of the hairline and its two vertical lines must be parallel. It must not be too big or too small, very thin or narrow, very long, slanted, dry (without water), unscented, placed anywhere except mentioned above, reddish and done with the left hand."

Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan continued, "The devotees must wear a double stringed Kanthi made of Tulsi around their neck and keep a mala of Tulsi to chant Bhagwan's name. A Mala of sandalwood is an acceptable alternative to a Mala of Tulsi. A Dikshit devotee must worship the Murti given to him by an Acharya at a pre designated place daily, every morning following their bath and other routine and chant the hymn of eight syllables of Lord Krishna for a predetermined number of times. Sitting at one place, maintaining silence, calmly (without haste) chant Bhagwan's name (in mind) while keeping Mala covered under a cloth. A devotee must visit Dwarka for pilgrimage and imprint his arms with the hot metal imprints of Bhagwan's weapons and name. He should go for his guru's Darshan on days of Janmashtami and other festivals and in assemblies. He should bow down and prostrate at his feet from his right side from little distance. He should not insist on touching his guru's feet without his consent. A devotee must always serve his Acharya subserviently, honestly and truthfully. A disciple must never sit on his guru's seat or bed; not wear his footwear and not drink water from his pitcher or tumbler. Though a Satsangi lives in the materialistic world like the other householders by his guru's decree, he never has to be reborn ever again."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O sons! There is another category of Samanya Diksha which depends on Varna and the suitability of a disciple. The abovementioned ritual of Diksha applies to the disciples of all four Varnas and four Ashrams. The disciples who fall outside the recognised Varna are given Diksha in a slightly different manner which I shall now explain. Such a disciple wishing to take Diksha must wait outside the Acharya's home with folded hands. Instead of speaking a three lettered hymn in his ear and proffering the advice to forsake meat, alcohol and other sins to him directly, an Acharya should delegate that to one of his Dikshit disciple of the first three Varnas. A newly Dikshit disciple must now follow his Dharma faithfully without fail. Such disciples must not touch saints without their express permission. They should regularly go for Darshan if their village has a Murti of Bhagwan installed at a Vaishnav devotee's home. They must only do Mansi (mental) worship of Bhagwan but not directly with any artefacts. Their reward for Mansi Puja is equivalent to the direct Puja with artefacts. Such disciples must nonetheless chant Bhagwan's name regularly and do a Chandlo with sandalwood paste on their forehead. They should keep some item of Shree Hari's Prasadi such as a garland, a piece of cloth or sandals in their home if there is not a temple in their village. They may touch such items of Prasadi but never Bhagwan's Murti. O sons! I have now concluded the rituals of the second type of Samanya Diksha. All disciples of our Uddhav Sampraday, Acharya and Mumukshu alike, must follow this. Now I shall describe the rituals of Maha Diksha (for celibate saints)."

Thus ends the 81st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 82

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! The time after the set of Planets Jupiter and Venus, seven days after their rise or when Jupiter is in Leo and the other lower constellations is an inauspicious time for Diksha. However, Prabodhani Ekadashi, Janmashtami and RamNavami are always auspicious days regardless the position of Jupiter or Venus. Adhik month (extra lunar month) and months of Ashadh and Bhadarvo are inauspicious for Diksha. The days of sun and moon eclipses are always auspicious regardless of any other consideration. Indeed the days of an eclipse are more auspicious than any other days. Similarly all Ekadashis and Baras are auspicious for giving and accepting Diksha. The mornings are the best time for Diksha. Places mentioned in the scriptures as auspicious are best for giving Diksha. The guru must test the disciple wishing to take Maha Diksha for the whole year to make sure that he is fit to accept Diksha. Otherwise, the guru becomes a partner to the sins of his disciple. Just as the sins of a minister are borne by his king, just as a wife's sins are borne by her husband, an Acharya has to bear the sins of his disciples. Therefore, an Acharya must make sure that the disciple wishing to accept Maha Diksha is fit and proper."

Shree Hari continued, "Let Me now tell you the traits of a good disciple who is suitable to take Maha Diksha. He should be calm, pious, religious, a firm believer in his Dharma, without jealousy and envy, desirous of Moksha, truthful, must have learnt the scripture to his ability and must have enough wealth to sustain him for the rest of his life. He must be fearful of touching a widow, afraid to commit any sins, not have committed any of the grave sins such as murder of a Brahmin or killing a cow and is always enthusiastic in observing his Dharma. He must not covet anything that does not belong to him, not take anything that does not belong to him without the permission of the owner, not be partisan in feeding his relatives and dependants, not very greedy, not lethargic in observing Vrats such as a fast on Ekadashi and not renegade on the promised payments to the tradesmen as agreed beforehand. He must have overcome vices such as anger, ego, envy and lust and his senses, must be patient, tolerant and sincere and enthusiastic to serve the saints. He must not have been a disciple of a woman as his guru previously and must not be believer in evil Sampraday such as Kaulmarg. He must have overcome lethargy and a habit of sleeping during the day and totally apathetic to worldly affairs. Maha Diksha should be given to only such a Mumukshu."

Shree Hari said further, "O sons! There are some people who should not be given Diksha despite having all the qualities mentioned above. Anyone who is totally blind or blind in one eye, cross eyed, lame, mute, deaf, dwarf, deformed, insane and bigoted; whose lips, nose or ears are deformed or split; has any digits missing or cut off; who suffers from serious disease such as leprosy, tuberculosis or vitiligo; whose life has been taken over by evil spirits or ghost; very old and who commits sins despite being born in a high clan. Giving Diksha to anyone without due consideration indeed invites a great calamity and infamy."

Thus ends the 82nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! I shall describe the rites of Maha Diksha for the householder men of the first three Varnas; Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya. A disciple, who has already taken Samanya Diksha, wishing to accept Maha Diksha should approach his guru, Acharya Maharajshree. Acharya, after testing the resolute and suitability of his disciple, must ask him to undergo repentance. A disciple living as a Brahamchari or Grahastha should undergo one day's fast, while widowers must observe a fast for two days as a token of atonement for past sins. A disciple must shave his head prior to the rituals of Maha Diksha. Early to mid morning is the most auspicious time for Maha Diksha. On the morning of the acceptance of Maha Diksha, a devotee must chant the eight lettered (Om Krishnay Namah) hymn of Bhagwan Krishna eighteen thousand times in front of Bhagwan's Murti. An Acharya should chant the hymn of Diksha one thousand times following his morning Puja for his chastity. He should invite an expert Brahmin to conduct initiation rituals. The Brahmin should guide an Acharya and his disciple to conduct Bhagwan's Maha Puja. This ceremony may last for one or two days as the time and convenience permit. The Brahmin should guide the disciple undergoing Diksha to undertake Nandimukh Shradhdh and should prepare the disciple for Diksha with his blessings the previous day or the morning of granting the Diksha."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "The Brahmin should arrange a Bajoth for Puja and to establish Bhagwan, His Parshads and the Devtas. A golden or copper pitcher should be placed in the middle of the Bajoth and eight other similar pitchers should be placed around it. All the pitchers should be filled with clean water and jewels, its mouth covered with leaves and fruits and sides covered with the cloth. Bhagwan RadhaKrishna should be imagined and invoked in the central pitcher while Shiva, Shridama, Durga, Vishvaksen, Suryanarayan, Garud, Ganapati and Hanumanji should be imagined and invoked in the eight pitchers placed on the eight sides starting from the North. The Brahmin should guide the devotee to conduct veneration and undertake Nandimukh Shradhdh if not conducted on the previous day. The Brahmin should invoke sixteen mother Goddesses and establish them on the Bajoth. The Brahmin should guide a devotee to conduct the worship of Bhagwan Shree Krishna with this: O Lord Krishna! I bow down to You; O husband of Radhikaji! I bow down to You; O defender and sustainer of Dharma! I bow down to You; O NarNarayan! I bow down to You; and other Vedic hymns. Bhagwan must be worshipped with all the sixteen steps starting with invocation and ending with dispersal. The Parshads, Devtas and Goddesses established on the Bajoth must be offered similar venerations. After concluding the worship of Lord Krishna, the Brahmin should ignite a scared fire on the right side of the Bajoth, next to the devotee. The Vedic hymns must be chanted while lighting the fire to purify the fire and flames. The pot of rice must be cooked in this fire to be used as an offering to the sacred fire. The sacred fire must be given offerings of a mixture of sesame seeds and barley, Ghee and previously cooked rice twenty eight times while chanting the hymns: Aum Narayanay Namah. O sons! An extra offering for each Parshad and Goddess should be given to the sacred fire at the conclusion of Homa Yagna. Following Aarti and Dandvat Pranam, the disciple must pray to Lord Krishna, 'O Bhagwan Shree Krishna! Let my tongue be engaged in singing Your glory; my ears be engaged in listening to Your Katha; both my hands be engaged in Your services; my mind be engaged constantly in Your memory; let my head be bowed at You and my eyes be engaged in You and Your saints' Darshan at all times."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "The disciple must continue the prayers with the following set of eight hymns (known in the Sampraday as RadhaKrishna Ashtak). O dusky complexioned one! You are wearing fish shaped earrings on Your ears and a superbly bejewelled coronet to which a peacock feather gives a wonderful aura. O RadhaKrishna Dev! I bow down to You. O RadhaKrishna Dev! I bow down to You. You have delighted the residents of Vraj with Your divine Leelas; You have shown Your supreme abode to Your father Nand and others; You remove all sorrows of Your devotees who come to You for shelter. Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "O sons! The guru should offer his disciple a fresh set of white cloths, place a Kanthi around his neck; imprint his arms, chest and forehead with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Chandlo and weapons of Bhagwan on his arms with scented sandalwood paste that was leftover after Lord Krishna's veneration. Sitting facing the North and with a calm mind, the guru should speak the hymn of Diksha in the disciples right ear thrice. The disciple must sit facing the East while hearing the Diksha hymn. The metre of the verse is Anusthup, revealer of the hymn is Sage Narad and the hymn is addressed to Lord Krishna for His pleasure. They should return to original positions in front of the sacred fire and the guru should proffer the following advice to his disciple."

"O Shishya (disciple)! You should now always sport an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Chandlo, wear a dual stringed Kanthi around your neck and perform regular veneration of Bhagwan Vishnu. You should use Gopichandan to mark your Urdhvapundra Tilak at the time of worship, oblation and offerings to the Pitris. The Tilak should be done with the ring finger of the right hand as far as practical starting where the eyebrows meet and end at the hairline. The devotees of the first three Varnas should sport an Urdhvapundra Tilak at four places. All four Urdhvapundra Tilaks must have a Chandlo done with Kumkum or Gopichandan in their centre. The sandalwood paste left over after the conclusion of worship may also be used to do a Tilak. A mirror should be used while doing Tilak and Chandlo for accuracy. O disciple! You should chant hymns of Vaasudev, Sankarshan, Pradhyumna and Anirudhdha while doing Tilaks on your forehead, chest and right and left arms respectively. You should also wear a Kanthi of small Tulsi beads around your neck at all times. Whenever you put on new Kanthi, you should chant this hymns - 'O Kanthi! You are very dear to Bhagwan Krishna and His devotees. I wear you around my neck with the request to make me as dear to Lord Krishna as you are.' O Shishya! You should undertake Bhagwan's worship with whatever artefacts are available. The worship can be performed without any artefacts. However the worship is done, with or without any artefacts, it must be done with the utmost faith and sincerity. Only the Brahmin devotees may worship Shaligram (the form of Bhagwan as a black stone mined from the bed of River Gandki) while the other devotees should use Murti of metal for their personal worship. You should chant the hymn that I have just revealed to you and read chapters from the tenth Canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat after concluding your morning Puja. If ever you are afflicted by evil spirits, you should chant Shree Narayan Kavach Stotra. You should also chant Bhagwan's name and read the Tenth canto in the evening. Indeed, you must not waste a moment without reminiscence of God. Rather than pursuing worldly affairs, you should spend your time in any form of Bhagwan's Bhakti such as singing, reading or listening to His Katha or Kirtans and meditation. You must not touch a woman except in an emergency nor eat anything without first offering it to Bhagwan. The other Devtas and Pitris should be venerated with Prasadi left over after offering Naivedhya to Bhagwan. You must have a bath after passing stool and wash genitals with water after urination. You must observe additional Niyams during Chaturmaas and months of Kartik and Magh; wake up very early in the morning (at least one and half hours before sunrise) and retire for the night not before at least three hours after sunset; must not sleep during the daytime on days of Vrats such as Dasamis, Ekadashis, Dwadashis and Janmashtami; must not add salt directly to prepared meals; must have only one meal

"O Shishya! Consider your soul distinct from your mortal body; as a witness to all the deeds of the body in all its three states (Jagrat, Swapna and Susupti) and controller of the senses, mind and intellect. It is neither born nor dies and is eternal, permanent and constant. It is impregnable as it cannot be pierced or destroyed by the weapons; cannot be burnt down by fire; cannot be wetted by the water nor can it be dried by the wind. It has no finite shape so it cannot be comprehended by the mind and intellect and it is incorruptible and unchangeable. You should meditate upon Lord Shree Krishna with the help of your soul, which in its purest form is like Akshar and Brahm. O son! You must always associate with chaste saints and observe the Vrats such as Brahamcharya and non violence as depicted and directed by them. You have totally submitted yourself to Bhagwan Shree Krishna just as King Ambrish had done in bygone era and as a result you will become famous as an Atmanivedi devotee just like him."

Shree Hari said, "O sons! The newly Dikshit disciple should heed the advice given by his guru and venerate him and gift him with money, land, gold etc. as per his financial ability. The disciple then should venerate saints and Brahmins, repeatedly bow at them reverently and give them suitable gifts. The Brahmin who conducted the rites of Diksha now should proffer the following advice to the newly Dikshit devotee, 'O fortunate one! You are privileged to get Diksha from an Acharya. Your life has become fulfilled. Your clan has become holy as a result of your Diksha. Your desire to become a great devotee has been fulfilled today. The knowledge regarding your Ishtadev is the root cause of all happiness which your guru has imparted on you through his experience. Therefore, you should serve him well by controlling your senses. Lust can be overcome by forsaking all thoughts of woman; anger can be overcome by forsaking the desires to indulge in sensual pleasures; greed can be overcome by knowing the immorality of acquisitions; fear of death can be overcome with the theosophical knowledge; sorrow and infatuation can be won over by the knowledge of immortal soul and mortal body; ego can be overcome by associating with the pious saints; desire to engage in gossip can be overcome by silence and violence can be overcome by inaction of the body and its organs. You may overcome the hurt caused by other people by pity; mental sorrows by the meditation, physical pains by Yoga such as Pranayam and lethargy by a chaste and holy diet. Overcome the thoughts and desires emanating due to the effects of Rajas and Tamas traits of Maya with the help of Satvik trait and overcome Satvik trait by maintaining equilibrium of mind (treating happiness and sorrow equal). These may sound difficult, but is easily attainable by serving your guru with reverence. Indeed, one should have the same reverence and devotion in his guru as he has in Bhagwan to attain aforementioned goals. Therefore, serve Bhagwan and your guru with the equal fervour."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "The Brahmin now should conclude worship and disperse the artefacts. Newly Dikshit devotees must donate golden Murti, clothes, utensils etc. items used in Puja to the Brahmin who conducted the Puja. The disciple and Guru must not undertake a fast on the day of initiation, even if that day happens to be an Ekadashi. They should eat fruits on Ekadashi. A disciple should feed the Brahmins and saints as per his financial ability on the day he receives Diksha, whether Samanya or Maha Diksha. A householder devotee should return to his home and act according to the advice given by his guru while serving shrines to the best of his abilities. The shrines are of two types; static and mobile. River Ganga, Dwarka and installed Murtis are stationary shrines while the saints are the mobile shrines. One should visit the static shrine and undertake veneration, bath and other rituals while one should venerate the saints, listen to Katha from them and feed them. O sons! I explained the rites of Maha Diksha applicable to the householder devotees of the first three Varnas in detail. Now I shall explain the small difference in the rites of Maha Diksha for the Shudra devotees. Only the pious Shudra devotees are eligible to get Maha Diksha and these rites are applicable only to them. He should observe a fast on the previous day and undertake the worship of Lord Krishna as explained above. As they are not permitted the use of the Vedic hymns, the hymns from the Puranas should be used instead. Similarly, while offering Ghee etc. in the sacred fire, he should not end the hymns with 'Swaha'. After marking the four Urdhvapundra Tilaks and weapons of Bhagwan (conch, disc, mace and lotus) on his arms, the Acharya should reveal the eight lettered hymn (Aum Narayanay Namah) in the disciple's left ear (instead of the right). The Acharya should proffer the same advice as he gave to the other householder devotees. The householder devotees who have taken Maha Diksha and act in accordance with their Dharma should be treated on par with Tyagi devotees. They attain all happiness in this and the next world."

Thus ends the 83rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, "O son! Now I shall describe the rites of Maha Diksha for the devotees who are outside the Ashram system classification. A person who has not married even after the conclusion of his education, whose wife has died or left him are called 'Anashrami' - a person not belonging to any Ashram. Though the rites of Maha Diksha for Anashrami are the same as applicable to the devotees of all four Ashrams, Anashrami male devotees have a different code of conduct following the Diksha. They should not keep moustache or beard; they should not wear trousers, pyjamas or Surval; they should not wear coloured clothes and they should not wear clothes that are vulgar or do not meet the social approval. They should forsake every type of contact with women just like the Brahmcharis and serve the saints reverently. They should only eat one meal a day for the rest of their lives. A supper just after the sunset is the best option for Anashrami, Brahmcharis and Tyagi devotees, as a meal after nightfall washes away one's sins committed during the day. However, if the daytime meal is preferred, lunch should be taken only after midday."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "One can accept fruits or Prasad but should keep aside and eat only during the supper. Consuming even Prasad during the day time nullifies the Vrat of having supper as the only meal. However, refusing to accept Prasad is an insult to Prasad, therefore, one should either bow down to it and not take it or accept it and pass it onto others or keep it aside to eat later. Prasad must not be refused directly as it constitute its insult. The same applies to the Prasad being offered on the day of a fast. Bow down and politely turn it down as a token of honour, but the Vrat of a fast must not be compromised in any way. One must not eat anything that has been given up as part of Niyams, is not favourable to one's body or is not suitable to eat in any way even as Prasad at supper. They should keep a constant reminiscence of Bhagwan or sing or listen to His Katha to gradually withdraw from the worldly affairs. The Dikshit devotees must never consume food cooked by even his brothers if they have not taken Samanya or Maha Diksha. The same applies to the person who is being boycotted socially. A Kshatriya, Vaishya or Shudra devotee may eat the meal cooked by a Brahmin, but a Brahmin must never eat food cooked by other Brahmins who has not taken Diksha of the Sampraday. An Anashrami devotee must endeavour to remain detached from worldly affairs and behave like Tyagi devotees. He must not be overtly greedy and earn only as much as is needed to survive. Just like a Brahmchari, he must wear a Kaupin. Indeed, an Anashrami devotee must keep a step ahead (do more) of a Dikshit householder devotee while observing Dharma and engaging in Bhakti. He should wear sandals, keep a pitcher full of water with him and observe Dharma pertaining to his Varna faithfully. A Brahmin Anashrami devotee should use Shaligram in his daily Puja and learn the meanings of and chant hymns called Vishnu Sukta. These are the basic difference for an Anashrami devotee who has taken Maha Diksha from his Acharya."

Shree Hari continued, "O sons! Any householder devotee who has developed a great detachment from the world as a result of learning the scriptures or due to the association with the saints should take Maha Diksha. Rather than migrate to Vanprastha or Sanyas Ashram which are proscribed in Kali Yug, such devotees should spend rest of their life in Bhakti of Bhagwan. If such a householder devotee has already taken Maha Diksha, he should start wearing white clothes and withdraw from worldly affairs just like an Anashrami Dikshit devotees. O sons! The aforementioned slightly distinct behaviour pertains to the three classes of male devotees; those who have given up Brahamcharya with a view of getting married but never found a wife, whose wife has died and a married devotee who wishes to give up the pleasures of the married life."

Thus ends the 84th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 85

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, “O sons! I shall now tell you the rites of Maha Diksha for a Brahmin devotee, who wishes to take the vow of a Naisthik Brahamcharya. The Brahmin devotee must have undergone Upanayan Sanskar previously. When he approaches his Acharya, i.e. you two, the Acharya first must promise to protect him from the vagaries of Kaal and Maya. The vow of a Brahamcharya must be prescribed through his Brahamchari disciple (not directly by himself) in the presence of a Brahmin who is to conduct the initiation rites. The Brahmin conducting the rites must establish the Bajoth, invite and invoke Bhagwan and subordinate Devtas and Parshads as described earlier and guide the disciple to conduct the worship of RadhaKrishna Dev. The Acharya should give two Kaupins, two sets of clothes (Dhoti and upper garment), deer skin, a bamboo or wooden staff and copper Kamandalu (pitcher) to the Brahmin Brahamchari. The Acharya should speak the Gayatri hymn in his right ear thrice and teach its meaning to him. The hymn set in Gayatri metre, was revealed by Sage Narad and Bhagwan Shree Hari is its ruling deity. The Brahamchari should be given a new name ending with ‘anand’(for example Krishnanand or Vaasudevanand). The Acharya should advise him on the Dharmas of Brahamcharis as mentioned in the scriptures and emphasise the need to avoid eight types of contact with women altogether. The Brahamchari should venerate his Acharya with sandalwood paste and flowers and prostrate at his feet. He must observe his Brahamcharya Vrat strictly.”

Shree Hari continued, “An Acharya should give Maha Diksha to his Brahamchari disciple only if he is sure of his firmness of Brahamcharya, ability to learn the scriptures, humility, calmness of mind and body and permission from his parents and other relatives. The disciple must observe a day of fast the previous day in lieu of atonement from the past sins. Ekadashi and Dwadashi are the most auspicious days to give Maha Diksha. The Brahamchari and Acharya should conduct the worship and Homa of Bhagwan RadhaKrishna under the guidance of an expert Brahmin as previously. The Acharya should give two white Dhotis to the Brahamchari, put a fresh double stringed Tulsi Kanthi around his neck and imprint his arms with the insignias of Bhagwan’s weapons.

The Acharya, facing the North, should speak the eight lettered hymn (Aum Narayanay Namah) in the Brahmchari saint's right ear thrice and proffer the following advice, 'O Brahamchari! You must not speak even with your mother or a wife of your guru as from today. Indeed, you must not look at women at all. You must observe a day's fast if you can make out age or beauty of a woman, even inadvertently. You must avoid all contact with wealth just as with women. You must protect your Brahamcharya Vrat at all costs and pursue the study of the scriptures daily."

Shree Hari continued, "O sons! The new Brahamchari saint should agree to obey his Acharya's advice faithfully and bow down to him again to show his assent. He should then bow down to the other saints present there. This is the only difference in giving Maha Diksha to the Brahamcharis; the other rituals remain the same as for the others. His Brahamcharya becomes firmer after Maha Diksha. Nonetheless, the Varni must continue to observe the Niyams pertaining to His Brahamcharya for rest of his life."

Thus ends the 85th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 86

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! I shall now describe the rites of Maha Diksha for the other non Brahmin Tyagi disciples who have renounced the world. A patient, desirous of Moksha, trusting, religious householder male devotee, able to differentiate right from wrong and who wishes to renounce the world and become a Tyagi saint should perform his last rites before seeking Tyagi Diksha from his guru and Acharya. He must have his family's permission before he can take Tyagi Diksha. The Acharya should keep a close eye on such a disciple and test his virtues and resolve, before agreeing to give Diksha. The Mumukshu desiring Diksha as a Tyagi saint must not have any physical deformities such as blindness in one or both eyes and missing fingers or toes or suffer from chronic illness or terminal disease. The Acharya himself must ascertain that the disciple's relatives are not going to object to him becoming a saint and his renunciation is total and permanent, otherwise, the Acharya should send the disciple back home."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "Once the disciple has shown the resolve, the Acharya should give him Tyagi Diksha through another Tyagi saint.

Ekadashis and Dwadashis are the most auspicious days to give Diksha. The disciple must observe a day of fast the previous day of the Diksha. The disciple must shave hairs from armpits, genitals and head but should keep Shikha (Chotli or ponytail) on the head. The saint who is designated to give Diksha to the disciple must give him a Kaupin and ochre robes and a small quilt to sit upon before he comes for Puja of RadhaKrishna Dev. An expert Brahmin should guide the Acharya and disciple to conduct the worship and Homa reverently. The saint giving Diksha should imprint the disciple's forehead, chest and arms with Urdhvapundra Tilaks, put a double stringed fresh Kanthi of Tulsi wood around his neck; and give him a fresh Yagnopavit of three threads and an alms bowl and a jug. The Acharya should softly speak the Vishnu Gayatri hymn in his right ear and give him a new suitable name ending with 'anand', 'muni' or 'das'. He should advise him to observe the ethics pertaining to the Tyagi as mentioned in the scriptures and to read the Bhagvad Gita daily. The other rituals are exactly the same as described earlier."

Lord Shree Hari continued, "O sons! The newly Dikshit Sadhu (saint) should prostrate at the feet of his Acharya and bow down to the other saints and Varnis. The Acharya should steer him to remain under the guidance of a senior saint whom he should treat as a guru and serve him obediently and sincerely and learn scriptures from him while observing his Dharma faithfully. Just as a bullock remains under the control of a farmer, the new Sadhu should obey every command of his guru and learn various rites from him. He should serve his guru with mind (wish his wellbeing), speech (honour him verbally) and body (physical services). He must forever remain subordinate to Bhagwan Shree Krishna and the other saints even if he becomes a great scholar or achieves divine powers. He must give up ego and be prepared to suffer contempt, insults or harsh words from other saints. He should wish well of even the people who insult him and should serve other saints humbly and without rancour. Just as a householder bears harsh words from his wife and sons, a saint must bear harsh words of other saints. A true Sadhu who willingly gives up his natural traits and follows the instructions of other saints becomes dear to Bhagwan and attains Moksha and His supreme abode."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "Even among such exalted saints, some of them wish to rise above the others and wish to take Maha Diksha. I shall describe the rites of Maha Diksha to such Tyagi saints. They must have more resolve in observing their Dharma such as Ahinsa, Brahamcharya, consuming bland food, serving their guru and a far superior knowledge of the scriptures than their peers. A saint who is not highly educated in the scriptures such as the Bhagwat, yet very stern in observing his Niyams is also eligible to take Maha Diksha. A Sadhu desiring to take Maha Diksha should approach his Acharya with the view of taking Diksha from him. The Acharya must ascertain his virtues before agreeing to give him Maha Diksha. The auspicious times, the mode inviting and invoking Bhagwan and the Devtas and conducting Puja and Homa are exactly the same as pertaining to Maha Diksha of Naisthik Brahamcharis. The Acharya should give a white Kaupin, white set of clothes, a fresh Kanthi of Tulsi and mark his arms with the insignias of a conch, disc, mace and lotus. With the reminiscence of Bhagwan Shree Krishna in his heart, the Acharya should speak the eight lettered hymn in his right ears thrice and proffer him this advice, 'O disciple! Observe your Vrat of Brahamcharya sincerely. Do not look at a woman, even a statue of her. You must observe a day's fast if you can make out the age of a woman inadvertently. You must worship Shaligram daily with whatever artefact you can muster; read a portion of the fifth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat before eating anything; eat and sleep little; remain engaged in Bhakti at all times and above all protect your Brahamcharya Vrat at all costs. You must observe other Dharmas of Tyagi Sadhus for the rest of your life.' This is the only difference in Maha Diksha of such Atmanivedi Sadhus. Everything else remains exactly the same as I mentioned earlier. O sons! I reiterated the rites of various types of Tyagi's Bhagwati Dikshas to you as Ramanand swami had told Me prior to his demise. All My Dikshit Tyagi, Sadhu and Brahamchari disciples must undertake the pilgrimage of Dwarka. "

Thus ends the 86th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, “O sons! All disciples of the Udhdhav Sampraday, who have taken Samanya or Bhagwati Diksha, must worship Lord Krishna daily. They must obtain the idol of Lord Krishna from their Acharya for this purpose. The Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and pious Shudra devotees, whether undergone Samanya or Maha Diksha, must worship the idol of Bhagwan. However, the lower Shudra devotees must not use any type of idol of Bhagwan in their Puja. The idol for worship, whether a pictorial image or cast from metal, must have been given to them by their Acharya. Any other Murti of Bhagwan may be bowed down to but must not be used for their regular Puja. A devotee must take a sipful of water left over after the Puja in the palm of his right hand drink it while chanting this hymn, ‘I drink this water, which is the nectar of all the shrines and is capable of washing away the sins of past innumerable lives and push back the untimely death.’ All disciples must ensure that a single drop of this holy water is not spilled on a floor as it results in accumulation of sins eight times the intended Punya of sipping the holy water. The devotees must engage in Bhagwan’s Bhakti regularly without lassitude.”

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, “Whilst engaged in Bhakti, all devotees must bear in mind that they are not crossing the limits of the decorum of Bhagwan and the Sampraday. I list the things one must not do while in temple or in front of Bhagwan’s Murti: Going in the temple astride any type of vehicle; entering the temple whilst wearing footwear; not offering special rituals or services on the days of Vrat such as Janmashtami; not bowing down to Bhagwan; sitting on a seat higher than that of Bhagwan; remain with a woman in solitude even for a moment; not maintaining chastity after visiting the toilets; bowing to Bhagwan with just one hand, cussing or swearing in a temple; sitting with legs stretched in front of Bhagwan; sitting whilst holding two knees together; sleeping; speaking lies; eating Paan or beetle nuts; shouting; sobbing or crying in the memory of the dead; beating or ordering somebody; quarrelling with somebody; looking furtively at, touching or speaking harshly to a female devotee; eating anything without first offering to Bhagwan; not observing a fast on the days of Vrat; farting within His vicinity; gossiping and praising one's self. All these are sins, which are a real hindrance in Bhakti. All devotees, especially the priests, must take a great care that they do not commit any of the aforementioned sins in a temple. The devotee must observe a day's fast if he inadvertently commits any of these sins and seek Bhagwan's clemency by prostrating at His feet and a plea, 'O Bhagwan! I offend You hundreds of times during the day. Please consider me as Your humble servant and forgive my shortcomings.'

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "My disciples shall only accept leftover food and Charnodak (the water with which the feet are washed) only from their Acharya. All devotees of the Uddhav Sampraday must not transgress the boundaries of the Varna system while accepting Charnodak and leftover food. They shall never accept fruits even from their Acharya if they are bitten or half tasted by him. This is the decorum of our Sampraday. The Dikshit devotees who remain within the boundaries of their respective Dharma are called Ekantik devotees. They get a divine body and travel to Akshardham by airplane after their death and serve Bhagwan Shree Krishna along with great devotees such as Shridama and Nand."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "An Acharya must give Diksha only to male disciples. He should direct his wife to give Diksha to female devotees. Indeed, the Acharya falls from his Dharma if he frequently associates with women, even if just to give Diksha. A sinner Acharya cannot protect the decorum of his Sampraday, therefore, the Acharya must never sermonise women under any circumstances. O sons! I mentioned the rites of Diksha in answer to your question. My guru, Uddhav incarnate Ramanand swami, had explained these rites to Me which I reiterated to you. Understand these rituals properly and always follow them while giving Diksha to the various classes of your disciples."

Thus ends the 87th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 88

Bhagwan Swaminarayan said, "O sons! I shall now describe the Diksha rites for women disciples. You should understand them properly and explain them to your respective wives. Only Lord Krishna can save them from the pains they have endured from their husbands in their innumerable past lives. Just like Radha and Laxmi previously, the Gopis were granted salvation and bliss of His Dham due to their unwavering devotion towards Him. Therefore, all wise female disciples should take Diksha from the wives of Acharyas born in the clan of Dharmadev and engage in Shree Hari's Bhakti. A chaste woman must always fear from the shadow of a male and as a result, must never take Diksha from a male guru, even one from the clan of Dharmadev. A man and a woman are liable to be corrupted by merely looking at each other. Thousands of women have been laid astray from the Vrat of faithfulness and have become promiscuous due to taking Diksha from male gurus. Therefore, women must never take Diksha from a man. I shall now reiterate the rites of initiation for women disciples as I have been told by Ramanand swami."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "A woman who is afraid of the punishments of hell; who wishes to be liberated from the clutches of the cycle of death and rebirth; who wishes to attain Moksha; who wishes to protect her vow of faithfulness and who can differentiate right from wrong should approach their guru, the wife of the current Acharya. The wife of an Acharya, who observes all Vrats such as Ekadashi and festivals, is devout, religious, faithful to her husband and obeys her husband should take a woman under her wings and give her Diksha. However, she must give Diksha and sermon only after concurrence and permission of her husband and not independently. There is no set time or place for giving Samanya Diksha. Whenever the desire to attain Moksha ascends in a devotee is the best time for Diksha. Following the conclusion of her daily Puja and wearing a fresh set of clothes, she should go to her guru prior to eating anything. A female disciple must take fruits with her as an offering for her guru. She should plead and request her guru to protect her from sins and evil gurus."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "The guru, a wife of the current Acharya, should console her disciple that Bhagwan Vaasudev will protect her from all her fears. She should place water in disciple's right hand and ask her to repeat this hymn of shelter, 'I have come under the shelter of Bhagwan Shree Krishna. Let Bhagwan save me from Kaal, Maya, sins and the messengers of death.' The guru should place a double stringed Kanthi of Tulsi wood around her disciple's neck and mark her forehead with a Chandlo if she is Sadhava. A Chandlo should be marked on a throat of a Vidhava disciple. The guru should speak an eight lettered hymn of Bhagwan Krishna (Aum Krishnay Namah) thrice in her disciples left ear and advise her to chant 'Shree Krishna' regularly and at all times. These rites of Diksha are equally applicable to the disciples of the first three Varnas and pious Shudras. The guru should give an eight lettered hymn of Lord Krishna to the other disciples outside the recognised Varna system through one of her disciples and not directly. The guru should proffer these advices to all her newly Dikshit disciples."

"O disciples! You must never consume meat, alcohol in any form, any intoxicating substances, tobacco, unholy food and water and milk without sieving; not harm or kill any living beings including yourself; not deviate or transgress from your Dharma pertaining to your Varna; never steal; never associate with a male who is not a close blood relative; never hear anything, even Katha, from evil people; never insult any deities even verbally and never level false allegations against anyone or swear at anyone. You must venerate Bhagwan without any indolence; worship Lord Krishna every morning and chant His hymn without failure. The mind should be kept serene, body still, eyes closed and maintain silence while slowly chanting His name whilst turning the beads of a Mala kept under the cover. You must observe all Vrats such as Ekadashi and Janmashtami sincerely and never associate with evil and sinners, male and female alike. Vidhava amongst you must forsake man in all eight manners. You will become famous as a Satsangi and be free from the fears of Maya and death if you follow this path of religion. You will attain Golok after death if you continue Bhagwan's Bhakti in this manner. Merciful Bhagwan Vaasudev will indeed fulfil all your desires and grant you all the happiness."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "The guru of female devotees should give all her disciples of the four Varnas a pictorial Murti of RadhaKrishna Dev for personal worship. However, she should advise her disciples who are lower than Shudras or outside the Varna system, 'You must do Darshan of Bhagwan without touching directly and physically any type of Bhagwan's Murti, whether at other devotees' home or in a temple. You should keep flowers or a piece of cloth worn by Bhagwan as a memento for Darshan if there is no Murti in a village. As you do not have the Vedic sanction to perform Bhagwan's worship directly with artefacts, you must only do Mansi Puja every morning. You will earn the same Punya from Mansi Puja as one earns from Puja done with physical artefacts.' O sons! The newly Diskshit female devotees should venerate their guru with flowers, garlands, Kumkum, rice, clothes and money as per their individual financial abilities. They should return to their homes after taking Diksha and behave as advised by their guru. I just explained the rites for Samanya Diksha. Now I shall narrate the rites for Maha (or Bhagwati) Diksha applicable to female devotees."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "The female devotees of only the first three Varnas (Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya) are eligible for Maha Diksha. They must not be physically deformed or suffering any major disease, habitual liars, lethargic, over indulgent in eating, masculine, rude or loitering. She must eat after feeding her parents and other dependents, be able to keep secrets and not very inquisitive, shy, lenient and faithful to her husband. She must not be a street hawker or keep company of irreligious or vagabond women. She must act under the guidance of her husband (if he is alive) or of her parents or brother (if she is a widow). The guru (wife of an Acharya) must ensure that the disciple wishing to take Maha Diksha is fit and proper to take Maha Diksha. A disciple seeking Maha Diksha must observe a fast for a day. Ekadashi and Dwadashi are the most auspicious days to give Maha Diksha. A Mandap supported by the trunks of four banana plants and decorated with buntings, flowers, leaves and multi coloured fabrics should be erected. A Bajoth should be placed in the middle of the Mandap with the same rituals as I described earlier (ch. 83). The guru should come and sit in front of the Bajoth following her routine morning Puja. She should ask a few other women to accompany her to sing Bhagwan's Kirtans accompanied by the musical instruments. The Bajoth should be covered with a white cloth and a lotus of eight petals should be established on it with coloured powder and rice. The Murti of Bhagwan Vaasudev and Radha Krishna should be placed in the middle of the lotus. The disciple should sit next to her guru in front of the Bajoth. The guru should guide her disciple to conduct the veneration of Bhagwan Shree Hari using the hymn 'Shree RadhaKrishnay Namah'. She should place a new Tulsi Kanthi around her disciple's neck and mark her Sadhava disciple's forehead with a Chandlo of Kumkum or throat of her Vidhava disciple with a Chandlo of Gopichandan or sandalwood paste."

Shree Hari continued, "The newly Dikshit female devotee now should pray to Bhagwan thus, 'O Krishna! Be pleased with me! O Narayan! You hold a divine flute in Your hands. O son of Devki! You have granted the pleasure of Your Darshan to Radha and Laxmi. O king of Dwarka! Your benevolent smile greatly pleases Laxmi. O Parmeshwar! Be pleased with me! I have just taken Your Maha Diksha. Please shield me from anger, greed, lust, palate and evil people. I have only one wish - my love in You remains steadfast. O Prabhu! Please ensure that my Bhakti towards You does not ever waver. O Vaasudev! Have mercy on me. I have come under Your shelter. Consider me as Your maid servant as from today.' O sons! The disciple now should bow down to Bhagwan Vaasudev and her guru and sit facing the North to accept the hymn of Lord Krishna. Facing the East, the guru should speak the hymn of Lord Krishna thrice in her left year and proffer her this advice."

"O pious woman! I consider you my daughter. I have allied you with Bhagwan today. You must venerate Bhagwan daily and regularly with a focused mind. He will protect you from being a wife to any more husbands in this life and the next (will free you from the cycle of life and death). You should venerate Bhagwan three times a day and eat only once during the day and the night. Never eat twice during the daytime or night except during illness, travel or on a very important social occasion. All food must first be offered to Lord Krishna as Naivedhya before consumption. If the detrimental period such as illness does not allow the food to be physically offered to Bhagwan, it must be offered to Him in thought. You should wake up very early in the morning (at least one and half hours before dawn) and remember Shree Krishna before arising from the bed. You must only retire to bed after three hours after dusk. You must not sleep during the daytime on every Dasam, Ekadashi, Baras and other days of Vrat. You should spend your time in any of the nine types of Bhakti. You must never exhibit envy, ego and anger against other female devotees and not engage in futile debates with them. As per the decorum of our Uddhav Sampraday, you must observe your Dharma until the body allows and must chant Shree Krishna Bhagwan's Mantra daily and regularly. You have surrendered yourself to Bhagwan Shree Krishna and by following your Dharma faithfully, you will become known as an Atmanivedi devotee. You will indeed attain the same level of pleasure that Radhikaji has attained by serving Him in His supreme abode. Due to the weight of your Punya, your husband and parents will attain salvation' O sons! The guru should emphasise a few additional points to her widowed disciple that they must eat only one meal a day and must never sleep during the daytime except in detrimental times. After advising them on their ethical duties, the guru should bless her disciples that they become staunchly loyal and subservient to Bhagwan Vaasudev for the rest of their lives. O sons! The newly Dikshit disciple must bow down to her guru and other present female devotees before leaving. She should also arrange to feed numerous devotees after taking any type of Diksha. I have narrated the process of granting Diksha to the female disciples of our Uddhav Sampraday, which you must pass on to your respective wives and ask them to follow these guidelines."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Delighted at the full explanation of rites of Diksha, Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji Maharaj bowed down to Shree Hari and returned to their respective quarters."

Thus ends the 88th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

He asked them to grant both types of Diksha to their respective wives. Shree Hari fed thousands of Brahmins, saints and devotees the next day. Thousands of devotees had thronged at Gadhpur to attend this festival of Diksha. After the ritualistic bath in the river, a large assembly was held in the royal courtyard. Shree Hari sat on a high Sinhasan in front of the congregated devotees. O king! Shree Hari addressed the assembly, 'O devotees! Listen to Me. Devotees attain the rewards of Bhakti only after taking Diksha. Therefore, all disciples of the Uddhav Sampraday must take either type of Diksha as appropriate. The male devotees residing in the southern Laxminarayan diocese must take Diksha from Raghuvirji Maharaj and female devotees must take Diksha from his wife. Similarly, the male devotees of the northern NarNarayan diocese must take Diksha from Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj and female devotees of that diocese must take Diksha from his wife. The female devotees must never accept Diksha from a male. O devotees! You must take an idol of Bhagwan Shree Krishna for your daily worship from your respective Acharya and guru. You all must worship Bhagwan daily and live according to the ethics that are appropriate to your Varna and Ashram. You may ask Me if you have any misgivings on this.' O king! The devotees present in the assembly concurred with Shree Hari and pledged to live as He had directed." Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari directed all male devotees of both dioceses to take appropriate Diksha from their respective Acharyas. Shree Hari directed Raghuvirji Maharaj to give the pictorial Murti of LaxmiNarayan Dev and Himself (as Sahajanand Swami) to his disciple and Ayodhyaprasadji Maharaj to give the pictorial Murti of NarNarayan Dev and Himself (as Sahajanand Swami) to his disciples. The female devotees were directed to accept Diksha from their guru, the wives of the respective Acharyas. They were given similar pictorial idols according to their residential status. O king! Shree Hari propagated the decorum of the Uddhav Sampraday for the benevolence of His disciples. Both brothers, Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji once again came to Shree Hari and humbly sat near His feet. Shree Hari realised that they wanted to ask Him something and to encourage them He requested they ask any questions. O king! Both brothers asked Shree Hari, 'O Bhagwan! You have established a system of celebration of various festivals falling throughout the year. Please guide us on the mode of celebrating various festivals. We shall celebrate these festivals in the temples under our respective control as You direct.' O king! Pleased with the query, Shree Hari explained the modes of celebrating various festivals."

Thus ends the 89th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 90

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! We must accept the precedent set by Vitthanathji when it comes to which festivals we should celebrate, their timings and the manner of their celebrations. I shall reiterate the same with any particularly additional information. I shall start the calendar of festivals with Janmashtami (Shravan Vad Ashtami), the birth anniversary of Lord Shree Krishna, as He is our Ishtadev.

(Translator note: It is important to know how a Tithi is decided when deciding on which days to celebrate each festival. On average a lunar Tithi (a day) is from 19 to 26 hours in length due to the varying speeds of earth and the moon around their orbits. Normally, Tithi prevailing at sunrise is considered. However, if a Tithi starts just after the sunrise and ends before the next sunrise, it is eliminated altogether. (Tithi is said to be missing). Similarly, if a Tithi starts just before sunrise and lasts longer than the next sunrise, the two consecutive days will have the same Tithi. Though, normally the Tithi prevalent at the dawn is taken as the Tithi for that day, the days for Vrats and festivals are said to start four Ghadi (96 minutes) before sunrise. This period is called BrahmMuhurt. If the preceding Tithi (say Dasami) has not ended by this time, it is said to be in Vedh with the following Tithi (i.e. Ekadashi). Such Tithi (in Vedh with the previous Tithi) is often considered inauspicious for religious rituals. Suddha Tithi is where the previous Tithi has ended before onset of BrahmMuhurt (ninety six minutes before the sunrise). For more detail, see Chapter 33 of the third Prakaran.

Ashtami Tithi prevailing at midnight, providing Ashatami is not in Vedh with Saptami at midnight, is considered the most auspicious. Otherwise, any Ashtami, one even not prevailing at midnight, but without Vedh of Saptami should be considered. However, an Ashtami even with Vedh of Saptami should be considered for the birth anniversary of Bhagwan Krishna if it falls on Wednesday and the moon is in Rohini Nakshatra. This verdict is attested by the Agni Puran and the other scriptures. The devotees conclude their fast only after the completion of Ashtami Tithi the next day.

However, if Saptami falls on Wednesday and the moon is in Rohini Nakshatra and the Tithi at the next midnight is Ashtami, the able devotees should observe a fast for two consequent days, while weaker devotees should observe a fast on Ashtami. Unless with the combination of Wednesday and the Moon in Rohini Nakshatra, the wise devotees must never consider Ashtami with Vedh of Saptami to celebrate Janmashtami. Ashtami without Vedh of Saptami is always preferable even if the Moon is in Rohini Naksatra on Saptami but it is not Wednesday. If Ashtami prevails even for a few moments at Sunrise, Navami should be taken to celebrate Janmashtami rather than an Ashtami with Vedh of Saptami the previous midnight. A fast and worship of Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be done on Saptami if Ashtami Tithi is missing altogether. The moveable or fixed Murtis of Bhagwan Krishna and Laxmiji must be worshipped together as narrated in the scriptures and as per one's ability. A Murti of Radhikaji may be used for the same purpose if a Murti of Laxmiji is not installed in the temple or is otherwise not available. In the absence of Murtis of Radhikaji and Laxmiji, Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be visualised to have been merged within Him and worship Him on His own. This is applicable on all festivals that are being celebrated in all our temples. I shall now describe the additional rituals applicable to Janmashtami."

Shree Hari continued, "The priest serving Bhagwan should wake up early on the day of Janmashtami and clean the temple, Sinhasan and Murti thoroughly. The sanctum sanctorum should be decorated by new buntings and pictures. He should also clean the artefacts to be used in the Puja such as mats, lamps, bells and utensils and gather Kumkum, sandalwood paste, Gulal, rice, incense, flowers, garlands etc. He should have prepared a new set of fine and embroidered clothes for Bhagwan and white ones for himself previously. He should prepare (or arrange it to be prepared) a Mandap in the assembly hall or courtyard of the temple. The Mandap should stand on four trunks of banana shrubs and decorated with multi coloured flowers, garlands, leaves of Mango and Asopalav trees and red, white, yellow and green coloured fabric. Shiny copper and brass pitchers and numerous lamps should be placed on all four sides of the Mandap. Incense sticks should be lit to create a scented environ around the Mandap. A maternity suite with a bed and two midwives should be established in the middle of the Mandap. A Murti of Devkiji suckling baby Krishna should be placed on the bed. Another bed with Yashoda and a newly born daughter and surrounded by Nand, cows and cowherds should be established (or imagined) slightly away from Devkiji's bed. The Murtis of Shree Krishna, Devki, Vasudev, Jashoda and Nand should be made of gold or silver if viable. These Murtis should be venerated at the nightfall with full pomp and glory, accompanied by various musical instruments. Sweet items such as Jalebi, Penda and Ladoos should be prepared during the day while rice, lentils and vegetables should be cooked nearer the time of worship to be used as a Naivedhya. The installed and fixed Murti of Bhagwan should be worshipped earlier in the evening while the Puja of a mobile Murti of Bhagwan should start three hours after the sunset. The permanent Murti of Bhagwan Krishna and Laxmiji should be bathed with warm water and Panchamrut and offered a new set of clothes. These Murtis can be bathed with just a wet piece of cloth if there is no facility to bathe with much water. Only a small Murti of HariKrishna Maharaj should be offered Abhishek with Panchamrut as a ritual of bathing a mobile Murti. White, yellow and red robes should be used if the mobile Murti of Shree Hari is black, while green, red and black robes should be used if mobile Murti is white. Laxmiji's Murti should be adorned in the similar fashion. The Murtis should be adorned with golden ornaments, pearl necklaces and bejewelled crowns if available. Otherwise, flower garlands should be offered to Bhagwan."

Shree Hari continued, "A newly born Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be placed in a basket at midnight and be carried over to Gokul just like Vasudev. He should be placed next to Jashoda for a while before bringing Him next to the Murti which is to be ritualistically worshipped. The Kirtans depicting the birth of Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be sung loudly and accompanied by musical instruments while bringing baby Krishna next to the Murti. Bhagwan should be bathed with Panchamrut and appropriate hymns as described in the scriptures and offered new robes. The rest of the Puja should be offered simultaneously to the mobile and fixed Murtis. Baby Krishna should be clothed in a long tunic, Salvar and embroidered cap and adorned with various gold ornaments. His feet and forehead should be smeared with scented sandalwood paste and many garlands of jasmine and other scented flowers should be placed around His neck. He should be splashed with highly scented perfume and scented incense should be lit in front of Him. Tassels of flowers and Mala of Tulsi should be offered to Him."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "The Pujari (or devotees conducting this ritual at home) should place a platter of Naivedhya of milk pudding, Shiro, Puri, Naivedhya of Panchajeeri (Ajmo (bishop's weed), dried ginger, dry coriander, jaggery and Ghee) should be offered to Devkiji and Jashoda. After tinkling the bell to indicate the start of the dinner, a Kirtan inviting Bhagwan to eat should be sung loudly. Water should be offered to Him during His meal. After removing Naivedhya from the Bajoth, the Pujari should clean up the Bajoth and surrounding area thoroughly and offer Lord Shree Krishna after dinner mints of clove cinnamon and crushed beetle nuts enveloped in its leaf. Seasonal fruits should be offered to Bhagwan when He has finished after dinner mints. The Pujari should now draw the curtains back to give others an opportunity for His Darshan before performing His Aarti accompanied by the tinkling of the bell, beating of drums and cymbals. Collective prayers should be offered to Bhagwan and His Darshan should be done wholeheartedly. The Pujari should remove heavy ornaments and embroidered robes and dress Him in light clothes as a prelude to putting Him to sleep. Devotees must not consume anything except the water left over after washing His feet and spend the rest of the night singing His glory and greatness. This earns them the full rewards of the Vrat of Janmashtami."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O sons! The devotees should undertake their morning routine the next morning and venerate Bhagwan Shree Krishna again. After offering Him Naivedhya of sweetened milk pudding and performing Aarti, Bhagwan should be retired for a little sleep. The male devotees should smear and splash milk, yoghurt and water on each other while female devotees should smear and splash yoghurt and milk, mixed Kumkum and turmeric powder on other female devotees. The widows, Brahamcharis and Tyagi saints must maintain a distance and never engage in such sports ever. They should have a bath and chant Bhagwan's hymn a hundred times if sprinkled inadvertently with water or milk. They must observe a day of fast if they wilfully engage in splashing colours on other devotees. At the conclusion of the sport, the devotees should take a bath following which they should eat to conclude their day of fast. The festival of Janmashtami should be celebrated every year in this manner. The young Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be placed in the cradle every morning and evening following the routine worship until the birth anniversary of Arjun (Bhadarvo Sud Beej)."

Shree Hari continued, "The great Acharyas have classified five various types of Murtis in the temples of our Uddhav Sampraday. The distinction of Murtis is due to the different identities Lord Krishna has assumed due to His association with the specific places. These five Murtis are not of five distinct or separate Bhagwans. All these five forms are of the same Bhagwan Shree Krishna. Krishna Bhagwan, forever a resident in His Golok Dhaam, took birth as a son of Devkiji and Vasudev in Mathura. Baby Krishna became known as Vaasudev, BalMukund and butter lover. The same (baby) Shree Krishna grew up in the home of Nand at Gokul. Reared lovingly by Jashoda, He enamoured the locals by His divine Leelas such as eating soil and showing His divine form in His mouth to Jashoda. He became known by five names namely; RadhaKrishna, Gopinath, Radhapati, VrundavanVihari and MadanMohan. Most of the temples in the world have His Murti accompanied by Radhikaji and holding or playing a divine flute. The same Shree Krishna became known as RamKrishna when He killed Kans in Mathura with the help of Balram, His elder brother. He assumed two more identities in Mathura; Mathuranath (king of Mathura) and Yadavbhushan (the best among Yadavs). The Murtis of Mathuranath are accompanied by Balram in our temples. When the same Lord Krishna migrated to Dwarka as its king and married Rukmini, He became known as LaxmiNarayan. He is also called Dwarkanath (king of Dwarka) and Yadupati (king of Yadavs). The Murtis of Dwarkanath are accompanied by Laxmiji. The same Dwarkanath spent a considerable time in Hastinapur to protect Pandavas. He became Arjun's friend and elevated the status of Draupadi whilst in Hastinapur, following which He became known as NarNarayan and Pandavpriya (benevolent to Pandavas). Many of the temples have the Murtis of Lord Krishna accompanied by Arjun, where He is known as Bhagwan NarNarayan. Some of these five distinct Murtis are four armed while the others are two armed; some bear weapons while some are without weapons and some are accompanied by His Parshads (Radhikaji, Laxmiji, Arjun, Balram etc.) while some of them are on His own. The manner of worship during all the festivals is the same in all our temples, regardless of which type of Murti is installed in them. I shall mention any variation in the common rituals associated with any specific festival. O sons! The rituals I described for the celebration of the festival of Janmashtami apply equally to all our temples, which you should follow faithfully."

Thus ends the 90th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! I shall now narrate the other festivals that fall in the month of Bhadarvo."

The birth anniversary of Arjun.

"Bhadarvo Sud Beej is the birth anniversary of Arjun. He was born at noon on Wednesday when the moon was in Uttra Falguni Nakshatra in the northern heights of the Himalayas. Devtas danced with joy when Nar Bhagwan took birth as a son of Indra and Kunta. Normally the festival should be celebrated on the day when Beej is running through the midday. It can be celebrated on either the previous or the next day if the moon is in Uttara Falguni Nakshtra. If there are two Beej in a month, the Beej which lasts through the midday (Beej must not be ending before midday) must be taken to celebrate this festival. However, the festival of the birth anniversary of Arjun can only be celebrated on the second Beej which is not prevalent at midday if the moon is in Uttara Falguni Nakshatra on that day. The combination of Beej and Uttara Falguni Nakshatra is more important than Beej being prevalent at noon. The Pujari should place a golden crown inlaid with pearls and other gems on Bhagwan Krishna's head and give Him a bow and arrow, sword and golden shield to hold. He should be adorned in the regal robes and ornaments. He should be offered Puri and sweetened milk pudding laced with Ghee as Naivedhya. This is the minor and only variation from the rituals relating to Janmashtami. The Pujari should worship the fixed Murti of Bhagwan Shree Krishna. He should worship Nar Bhagwan if His Murti is installed in the temple, otherwise, the single Murti of Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be worshipped imagining that Bhagwan Nar has merged and is present within Him. A separate golden Murti of Arjun holding a bow and arrow should be used for worship. The Puja should be done at midday to coincide with the time of His birth. Pujari should prepare a Mandap within the temple compound and conduct Maha Puja. Pandu, Kunti, Madri, Yudhisthir, Bhim etc. and the resident sages of Mountain Shatshrung should be established and invoked during the Maha Puja besides the usual main Devtas. Bhagwan Nar (Arjun) should be offered Shiro, Puri and milk pudding as Naivedhya and His Aarti should be done with wicks made of camphor and cotton wool. The Katha of birth of Arjun should be narrated and the Murti of Nar Bhagwan placed on a cradle next to the Murti of Bhagwan Krishna for some time. After the Aarti, both Murtis should be removed from the cradle and devotees should eat a meal of light grains (Samo etc) at the conclusion of the festival."

Ganapati Choth.

"O sons! Lord Krishna took birth as Ganapati, son of Shiva, on Sunday, Bhadarvo Sud Choth, when the moon was in Hasta Nakshatra and the sun was in Virgo constellation. Just as the Devtas celebrated Ganapati's birth with pomp, we should celebrate his birth anniversary with pomp and glory in our temples. Choth in Vedh with Trutiya should be given priority to decide the day of festival of Ganapati Choth. If there are two Choth on two consecutive days (whether both prevalent at midday or not), the first Choth in Vedh with Trutiya should be considered to celebrate the festival. However, if the first Choth (even if it is in Vedh with Trutiya) is not prevalent at midday and the second Choth is prevalent at noon, the festival should be celebrated on the second Choth. Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be dressed in red clothes and Naivedhya of Ladoos should be offered to Him. The Pujari should prepare a Murti of Ganapati from clay depicting a head of an elephant with a long trunk and one tusk with four arms. The Pujari should worship Ganapati at midday with vermillion, blades of holy grass Durva, leaves of Shami (prosopis spicigera) and Bili (eagle marmaloss), flowers of Karan and Shirish and Tulsi (basil) leaves. Tulsi can be used in worship of Ganapati only on this day. Nobody should look at the moon on the night of Ganapati Choth. One has to face the prospect of false allegation against himself if he looks at the moon inadvertently. To guard against such an eventuality, one should read or listen to the Katha from the tenth canto of the Shreemad Bhagwat where Bhagwan Krishna was alleged to have stolen a diamond called 'Syamantak'. If neither is possible (read or listen to), one should sincerely chant the hymn meaning 'A lion killed King Prasen, Jambuvan (a bear) killed the lion. O Sukumarak! Do not cry and despair. Smayantak diamond is yours only.' One is protected by the curse of looking at the moon on this night by chanting this hymn ten times."

The festival of Radhashtami.

"O sons! On Sunday, Bhadarvo Sud Ashtami, when the moon was in Anuradha Nakshatra, Radhikaji was born in the home of Vrashbhanu. Therefore, we should celebrate the festival of Radhashtami (birth anniversary of Radhikaji) on this day. Normally, Ashtami prevalent at midday should be taken to celebrate Radhashtami. If there are two Ashtami, Radhashtami must be celebrated on the first Ashtami. Ashtami in Vedh with Saptami should not be considered for celebration unless the Tithi of Ashtami is missing altogether. Bhagwan Krishna should be dressed in a red Surval and saffron coloured fine tunic. A diadem of a long piece of fabric with tassels of flowers hanging from it should be placed on His head. He should be adorned with other ornaments that are used on Janmashtami. Radhikaji should be dressed in a long fine yellow Sari with a red blouse and petticoat with numerous and appropriate gold ornaments. The Naivedhya of Motiya Ladoos should be offered. The other rituals pertaining to Janmashtami should be followed. The Pujari should venerate Radhikaji standing next to Bhagwan Shree Krishna at midday. In the absence of an installed Murti of Radhikaji, Laxmiji may be venerated instead. In the absence of both Murtis (of Radhikaji and Laxmiji), the Pujari should arrange for a two armed golden Murti of Radhikaji for veneration. After collectively singing Kirtans related to the birth of Radhikaji, the devotees should eat Prasad before dispersing."

Festival of Dan Leela.

"O sons! On Bhadarvo Sud (Parivartini) Ekadashi, the festival of Dan (levy) Leela should be celebrated. Shree Krishna Bhagwan Himself had collected a levy from the female cowherds going to Mathura to sell yoghurt and other milk products. Dressed as a cowherd Himself, He rode in a boat to collect Dan (levy) from each Gopi on the banks of River Yamuna. The Pujari should dress Bhagwan Krishna as a young cowherd and devotees should take Him to the river bank in a palanquin, whilst singing and playing musical instruments. Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be placed in a boat and given a ride in the river for a while before bringing Him back to the temple. The devotees should sing Kirtans narrating the Dan Leela of Krishna Bhagwan and observe a fast (of Ekadashi) for the day. Bhagwan should be offered rice and yoghurt as Naivedhya. This is the only deviation in the manner of celebrating this Ekadashi. The other rituals of normal Ekadashi should be followed."

Vaman Dwadashi/Jayanti

"O sons! Bhagwan took birth as Vaman (pigmy) as a son of Aditi at noon on Wednesday, Bhadavo Sud Dwadashi (Baras) when the moon was in Shravan Nakshatra. As he was born at midday, His birth anniversary should be celebrated on Baras prevalent at midday. The moon being in Shravan Nakshatra on this day would obviously be an advantage. If Baras is prevailing at midday on Ekadashi, the festival of Vaman Jayanti (birth anniversary) should be celebrated on Ekadashi. The period when the Moon is in Shravan Nakshatra and Baras is prevailing at midday on Ekadashi is called Vishnu Shrankhal, which is the most auspicious time for Bhagwan Vishnu's Bhakti. A physically fit devotee should observe two days of fast while a weaker devotee should eat fruits on Ekadashi and fast on Baras. He may eat normally on Baras after sunset. Vaman Jayanti must always be celebrated on Baras (except on Ekadashi as mentioned above) even if the Moon is in Shravan Nakshatra only on Teras. Bhagwan should be dressed in beautiful golden robes on that day. If one has a mobile Murti of Bhagwan Vaasudev, one should imagine it as a Murti of Bhagwan Vaman and worship it. Otherwise, one should have a small golden Murti of Bhagwan Vaman holding an umbrella, pitcher and a wooden staff made and used for worship. The Pujari should make preparation for Maha Puja under the Mandap and invoke Aditi and Kashyap besides the usual Devtas. The Puja of Vaman Bhagwan should be done very reverentially with flowers, lamps and incense and Naivedhya of Ladoos should be offered to Him. The devotees should sing Kirtans extolling the birth of Vaman Bhagwan. The other rituals of worship common to Janmashtami should be observed. O sons! I have described the festivals falling in the month of Bhadarvo. Now I shall describe the festivals we should celebrate in the month of Aso."

Thus ends the 91st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Vijaya Dasami.

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, "O sons! I shall describe the festival of Vjaya Dasami. The period after sunset when a few stars become visible in the receding light is called Vijay during which all tasks undertaken can be completed successfully. The disciples of the Uddhav Sampraday should choose the first Dasam (of two) even if it is in Vedh with Navami, more so if Dasami with Vedh is prevalent at Vijay period. Bhagwan Shree Ramchandra had defeated demon Ravan on Aso Sud Dasam when the Moon was in Shravan Nakshatra. To mark this event, all devotees should go across the boundary of their village for a while. Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be dressed in regal robes and ornaments and many scented flower garlands. A crown made of fresh and tender cobs of corn should be placed on His head and Naivedhya of milk pudding should be offered to Him in the evening. Devotees should sing Kirtans extolling the conquest of Ravan by Bhagwan Shree Ram loudly and accompanied by various musical instruments."

Rasotsav.

"O sons! Many scholars opine that Purnima (of Aso) without the Vedh of Chaudasi should not be taken to mark Rasotsav. As Bhagwan Shree Krishna commenced Ras Leela from moonrise, My devotees should celebrate Rasotsav when the full moon is its best (when Purnima prevails at moonrise and not when a waning phase of moon has already set in). The Murti of Radhikaji along with those of Gopis, should be dressed elegantly. In the absence of Radhikaji next to Lord Krishna, Laxmiji should be imagined as Radhikaji and Gopis and should be dressed accordingly. She should be dressed in a saffron Sari, saffron petticoat and yellow blouse with numerous ornaments while Bhagwan should be dressed in golden robes and gold ornaments such as earrings and a crown. He should be given a bejewelled golden flute in His right hand and Naivedhya of Penda and Barfi should be offered. The whole temple and sanctum sanctorum in particular, should be sprayed with highly scented perfumes. Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be taken in an ornate Sinhasan on an open terrace under the clear sky. He should be worshipped there and fluffed rice mixed with sweetened milk should be offered. The devotees should sing Kirtans depicting the Ras Leela lasting nine hours in Vrandavan. (This festival is also known as Sharad Purnima, Manekthari Poonam or Kojagari Poonam.)"

Dhantrayodashi (DhanTeras) festival.

"The festival should be celebrated on Aso Vad Teras that is prevailing at the time of sunrise. The Pujari should clean utensils used for Puja of Bhagwan Shree Krishan such as platters, bows, glasses, pitchers, spoons, bell etc. and the temple complex thoroughly. He should do a Tilak of Kumkum on Bhagwan's forehead place a gold embroidered diadem on His head. Laxmiji should be dressed in a green Sari and a matching shiny blouse. Jalebi and Khaja should be offered as Naivedhya. This is the additional ritual for this day. The other common ritual should be followed while performing His Puja. The Sinhasan and temple should be decorated with rows of small lamps and devotees should sing Kirtans of Diwali for the next three days."

Abhyang Snanotsav (Kali Chaudash)

"This festival should be celebrated on Vad Chaudash of Aso which prevails at the time of moonrise. Bhagwan Shree Krishna and Laxmiji should be massaged with scented oils and bathed in warm water at moonrise. Bhagwan and Laxmiji should be dressed in red clothes and Malpuva, Vada and Bhajia should be offered as Naivedhya today. Several wicks should be used when performing Aarti that day. Except for this minor change, the rest of the rituals that are common to all festivals should be followed. Hanuman should be worshipped today with oil, vermillion and flowers of Akdo shrub. His Puja should be done on Chaudash that is prevailing at the time of dusk. If there are two Chaudash and both are prevailing at the dusk, Puja should be done on the first Chaudash. Even if both (or even a single) Chaudash does not last until dusk, the Chaudash with the Vedh of Teras should be considered. Puja of Hanuman must never be done on Chaudash that is in Vedh with Amavasya."

Dipotsav/Laxmi Pujan.

"This festival should be celebrated on Amavasya that is prevailing at dusk. However, Amavasya in Vedh with Chaudash is considered more auspicious to celebrate Diwali and Puja of Laxmiji. The Pujari should adorn Bhagwan with very expensive ornaments that day. The Pujari should perform Puja of Laxmiji with sandalwood paste and flowers soon after dusk. The Murti of Radhikaji may be substituted in the absence of a Murti of Laxmiji in a temple. In the absence of both Murtis, the Pujari should make a special gold Murti of Laxmiji. She should be four armed, sitting or standing on a lotus shaped Sinhasan. The top right hand should have a lotus with a stalk, her lower right hand should have a pot of nectar and her left hands should have a conch and leaves of Bili. A lotus should be entwined with her plait of hair. The Murti should be flanked by two elephants with pitchers in their trunks. This Murti should be placed under a Mandap standing on four trunks of banana plants and worshipped ritualistically with all sixteen elements (Avahan, Ardhya, Padhya etc.). Rows of small lamps should be placed around the Mandap. The mobile Murti of Shree Hari should be dressed in white and Laxmiji should be dressed in red clothes. The Pujari should adorn Laxmiji's forehead with a Kumkum Tilak and rice before performing her Puja with a lotus, lamp and incense.

Thus ends the 92nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 93

Govardhanotsav.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! The festival of Govardhanotsav should be celebrated on Sud Padvo of month of Kartik when Padvo is prevalent at the evening. Padvo in Vedh with Amavasya is considered auspicious but not in Vedh with Beej. Three days of Diwali festival: Chaudas, Amavasya and Padvo should be celebrated on three consecutive days without having a break. These three days are set aside for their merriment and if anyone looks at the moon on any of these three nights, they and their cattle are destroyed. Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be dressed in golden robes with red borders while a crown of peacock feathers should be placed on His head. A flute should be given in His hand; a long garland of five coloured flowers, a mala of Tulsi and gold and pearl necklaces of different lengths should be placed around His neck. A long stole should be placed on His shoulder. A large Annakut (literally a mountain of food) of an abundant variety of food items such as sweets, vegetables, rice, curries and savouries should be prepared and arranged systematically in front of Him at noon. After offering Him after dinner mints, the Pujari should perform His grand Aarti following which devotees, saints and Brahmins should be fed a sumptuous meal. The Pujari and hosts should dine only after feeding others. Devotees should venerate cows, bulls and calves with turmeric, Kumkum and other coloured powders and paint their horns with these powders. They should be brought in front of the temple and fed fresh green grass. A large mountain should be made from dung and venerate it as if Mountain Govardhan before noon."

Gopashtami.

"Krishna Bhagwan went to graze the cattle with other cowherds the first time on Kartik Sud Ashtami and we should celebrate the festival of Gopashtami to mark this divine event. It should normally be celebrated on Ashtami prevalent at sunrise and Saptami if Ashtami Tithi is missing. Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be massaged with sandalwood paste mixed with saffron and dressed as a cowherd in yellow robes with a crown of peacock feathers. Many flower garlands should be placed around His neck and a stick and a flute should be given in His hands. Naivedhya of rice, yoghurt and ground sugar should be offered to Him and the devotees should sing appropriate Kirtans."

Prabodhani Ekadashi.

"O sons! As Bhagwan woke up from His long slumber on Kartik Sud Ekadashi, this Ekadashi is called Prabodhani. There are two types of Ekadashi; Suddha and Viddha. The period of four Ghadi (96 minutes) is called Arunoday. Viddha Ekadashi, where a Dasami overlaps, even by a minute in this period, must not be considered for Vrat. If there are two Ekadashis or Ekadashi is in Vedh with Baras the next day, Vrat should be observed on the second (not in Vedh with Dasami) Ekadashi. My physically fit devotees should observe fast for two consecutive days if the following Baras is in Vedh with Ekadashi while weaker devotees should observe fast on Baras. Both types of devotees may conclude their fast (by eating) after noon on Baras. However, there is no drawback if Parna (conclusion of a day of fast) is not done on Baras after observing two consecutive days of fast. If the confusion prevails on the length of Dasam or conflicting advice is being proffered by different astronomers, My disciples should observe a fast on Baras and Parna on Teras. My disciple must wake up early in Brahammuhurt, conclude the normal morning rituals and gather artefacts needed for Puja. A Pujari should worship Bhagwan Krishna called Yogeshwar. If he so desires, he can make a special Murti of Yogeshwar Bhagwn sitting legs crossed on a white lotus with eyes looking at His nose. Both of His lower hands, holding a lotus and a mace, should be resting on His lap while His upper arms should depict holding a conch and disc. Laxmiji should be seated on His left. Bhagwan Yogeshwar should be worshipped with sixteen elements accompanied by the sounds of musical instruments and Naivedhya of sweetened milk, rice, sultanas, almonds and walnuts."

"Dharmadev's birth anniversary also falls on Prabodhani Ekadashi; therefore, My disciples must offer their veneration to him at midday. In the absence of a fixed Murti of Dharmadev, a gold four armed, four headed and four legged Murti wearing white clothes and many ornaments should be prepared for worship. A Mala of Rudraksha, a scipture, a tool and a lotus should be given in His four hands. A worshipper may make a normal two armed Murti of Dharmadev if he prefers. A two armed and very beautiful Murti of Bhaktimata dressed in saffron coloured clothes and wearing many ornaments should be placed on the left side of Dhramadev. She should be given a golden Kamandalu in her left hand and a platter filled with pearl garlands, Kumkum, sandalwood paste, incense, wicks and food in her right hand. Murtis of the great seven sages such as Kashyap, their wives and Dharmadev's eleven other wives such as Shraddha, Maitri, Daya, Shanti etc. should be made from grass or rice. A worshipper should venerate Dharmadev, Bhaktimata, his other wives and seven great sages and their wives reverently. The whole day should be spent in singing Kirtans and playing musical instruments. The installed Murti of Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be dressed in yellow robes with a large bejewelled crown and Laxmiji should be dressed in red robes and many gold and jewelled ornaments. Bhagwan Yogeshwar, Dharmadev and others should be offered Ghebar and Jalebi in Naivedya."

"A shop should be established in front of Bhagwan in the evening. Silver bowls of various cereals, vegetables, fruits, flowers and sweets should be arranged in front of Him. My disciples must not consume anything except water on that day. Damodar Bhagwan, the ruling deity of this Ekadashi, along with His consort Radha should be worshipped with lotus flowers and Ladoos should be offered to Him as Naivedhya. I have narrated the veneration rites of this Ekadashi in brief. The full details of this and all other Ekadashis is given in many other scriptures (including third Prakaran of this scripture). The Katha of legends associated with each Ekadashi should be narrated and listened to on respective Ekadashis."

After performing Puja of Shaligram and Tulsi, the Pujari should offer necklaces, bangles, nose ring, Gulal, Kumkum and turmeric to Vranda Devi (Tulsi). He should offer flossed sugar candy as Naivedhya. After Aarti, a wedding ceremony, accompanied by the chanting of Vedic hymns, of Vranda and Shree Krishna should be held while devotees sing Kirtans of wedding of Bhagwan with Vranda. The Brahmins should be served sumptuous feasts after the wedding.

He should prepare Shiro, Puri, rice, curry and cooked aubergines to offer Naivedhya to Him. Rows of lamps should be lit in the evening. In the absence of an installed Murti of Bhakti, the Pujari should prepare her golden Murti for her worship. The devotees should sing Kirtans extolling the Leelas of Bhagwan Shree Krishna and Balaram at night. Starting from that day, Pujari should dress Bhagwan in warm clothes and place a warm quilt in His bed at night. This should continue until Purnima of month of Falgun. My disciples may start using quilts at night from this day. O sons! Thus ends the narration of the festivals falling in the month of Kartik."

CHAPTER 94

DhanurMas and Sankranti.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! I shall now narrate the festivals due in the period of three months (Magsar, Posh and Magh). For the period of one month when the Sun is in Dhan (Sagittarius) constellation, Bhagwan should be bathed in scented warm water. After dressing Him and Laxmiji in warm clothes, the Pujari should place an open stove (heater) to stave off the cold. Bhagwan should be offered a Rotlo (thicker Rotli) of millet, butter, yoghurt, Ghee, rice and cooked aubergines as Naivedhya."

Makar Sankranti.

"Every year in the month of Posh (on 14th January), the Sun crosses over the Tropic of Capricorn (transition of Sun from Sagittarius to Capricorn or winter solstice) to start its journey northward. This period of forty Ghadi - eight hours is considered the most auspicious period to perform religious activities by ancient sages. If this happens at dusk or at night, the next day should be considered instead. Special Naivedhya of Ladoos of sesame seeds should be offered to Bhagwan."

Vasantotsav.

"Shree Krishna Bhagwan accompanied by His wives including Rukmini and Satyabhama, brothers Balram, friend Arjun, Parshads such as Yuyudhan and Uddhav, Narad and others sages and many other Yadavs went to Mountain Girnar and played the sport of colour splashing on each other. The trees, earth and sky had become red due to the vast amount of colour splashed. O sons! To mark this momentous event, we celebrate the festival of Vasantotsav on Magh Sud Panchami. It should be celebrated on the day of Panchami prevailing at sunrise. If there are two Panchamis, the festival should be celebrated on the first Panchmi. In the absence of Panchmi, we should celebrate Vasantotsav on Choth. Bhagwan Shree Krishna and Rukmini (Laxmiji) should be dressed in white clothes including a stole and diadem. The Pujari should splash colour and rosewater on their clothes. Fresh blossoms of mango should be placed on His diadem and Naivedhya of Jalebi should be offered to Him. Bhagwan should be dressed in saffron coloured clothes and sprinkled with Kumkum for the next ten days (until Holi) and the spring specific Kirtans should be sung daily in the temple."

"A large mountain symbolising Revtachal should be made from wheat or rice and covered with yellow fabric. A small channel should be made on its surface to symbolise River Gomukh. Small bushes or twigs of mango and Asopalav should be planted around Mountain Girnar. The golden two armed Murtis of Bhagwan Krishna and Rukmini should be placed on the apex of the mountain. Bhagwan should be given a conch and disc in His hands while Laxmiji should be given pitcher and a lotus in her hands. The Murtis of Satyabhama, Balram, Arjun, Uddhav etc. should be placed around Him. Beetle nuts placed on a small heap of rice can be used to symbolise these Murtis. Bhagwan should be invoked in His Murtis to worship Him. Naivedhya of dates, coconuts, sugar candy, roasted grams and semi ripened rice and Juvar, grapes and Penda should be offered to Bhagwan and His retinue before performing His Aarti. The Pujari should sprinkle Kumkum powder on Bhagwan. The male and female devotees should form groups and splash and sprinkle colour on other devotees of the same sex. The saints, Brahmcharis and widows must never participate in the sprinkling of colour. They must bath with the worn clothes immediately and chant Bhagwan's hymn a hundred times if they become an inadvertent victim of sprinkling of colour. A day of fast and continuous chant must be observed if any saint, Brahmchari or widow willingly participates in sport of colours. The devotees should dine after midday following the bath at the conclusion of Vasantotsav."

Shivratri.

"Vad Chaudash of Magh which is prevalent at midnight should be taken to celebrate Shivratri. If there are two midnight prevailing Chaudash, we should celebrate Shivratri on the first Chaudash. Bhagwan Vaasudev and Laxmiji should be dressed in dark multi coloured clothes with appropriate gold ornaments. At the stroke of midnight, Shankar should be worshipped with leaves of Bili and flowers of Jasmine, Dhatura and Karen accompanied by the hymns of Rudra Sukta and offered Naivedhya of milk pudding and Vada. All My disciples must observe a day of fast and sing Kirtans extolling virtues of Shiva. Except for this deviation, the normal routine of worship common to all festivals should be observed. O sons! CHAPTER 95

Fuldolotsav.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! When Bhagwan Shree Krishna played the game of splashing colours on others on Mountain Ravatachal, the mMoon was in Uttara Falguni Nakshatra. Very delighted to participate with Bhagwan in such a divine sport, the Yadavas placed Bhagwan Shree Krishna and Arjun in a cradle, venerated them and swung them for some time. Furthermore, in the bygone era, again when the Moon was in Uttara Falguni Nakshatra, Bhagwan Shree Krishna had taken birth as Nar and Narayan in home of Dharmadev. The Devtas had placed both forms of Bhagwan in a cradle and had swung them for some time in the Ashram. We celebrate Dolotsav to commemorate these two events. This festival should be celebrated on Falgun Vad Padvo when the Moon is in Uttara Falguni Nakshatra at sunrise. If the Moon is in Uttara Falguni Nakshatra on two consecutive days, Dolotsav should be celebrated on both days. The worship of Krishna Bhagwan should be done in exactly the same way as it is done on festival of Vasantotsav (Vasant Panchmi). The Pujari should worship Bhagwan NarNarayan with all sixteen elements with sandalwood paste and Tulsi leaves followed by a grand Aarti. He should be dressed in fine white robes with many garlands of white scented jasmine. Milk pudding and berries should be offered as Naivedhya. Bhagwan NarNarayan should be placed in a cradle facing the South and devotees should swing His cradle and offer Him seasonal fruits and flowers. The devotees should sprinkle and splash colours on each other just as they do on Vasantotsav, bearing in mind the decorum of our Sampraday of not mixing with the opposite sex. After performing Aarti, Bhagwan should be taken off the cradle and allow them to rest. A host or Pujari should ensure that everyone has dined before eating himself. The temple and Sinhasan should be thoroughly cleaned to remove all traces of colour and Bhagwan should be dressed in fresh clothes the next day."

Matsya Jayanti (birth anniversary of Matsya Bhagwan).

"Bhagwan appeared as a fish in the waters of River Krutmala in front of King Satyavrat on Chaitra Sud Treej in earlier times. Trutiya prevalent at sunrise should be taken to celebrate this festival. In case of two Treejs, My disciples shall celebrate Matsya Jayanti on the first Treej. On that day, one should worship Bhagwan Vaasudev thinking of Him as Matsya Bhagwan or have a special Murti of Matsya Bhagwan made of gold. The bottom half of the Murti should be shaped like a fish while the torso and head should of a man holding a conch in His left hand and a mace in His right hand. We should offer Him rice mixed in yoghurt. Devotees should sing Kirtans depicting the manifestation of Matsya Bhagwan and may eat after Aarti."

Ram Janmotsav.

"Bhagwan took birth as Ram, a son of King Dasharath and Queen Kaushalya on Chaitra Sud Navami. The Sun was in Aries constellation, the Moon and Jupiter in PunarVasu Nakshatra and five major planets (Sun, Moon, Jupiter, Venus and Mercury) were in their elevated planetary positions at that time. A fast should be observed on Navami prevalent at sunrise and lasting through midday but not in Vedh with Ashtami. In case of two Navamis, whether lasting until midday or not, My disciples should celebrate Ramnavami on the second Navami. Navami in Vedh with Ashtami must never be considered for this festival even if the Moon is in Punarvasu Nakshatra as Navami, as mentioned in the scriptures. This takes precedent over everything else. Ashtami may only be considered to mark the birth anniversary of Bhagwan Ram and a day of fast only if Navami Tithi is missing altogether. Bhagwan should be dressed in saffron coloured clothes with a gold embroidered stole tied at His waist and a bow and arrow given in His hand. Naivedhya of Biranj (a sweet dish) mixed with saffron, sugar candy, yoghurt and milk should be given to Bhagwan on this day. Either the Murti of Bhagwan Krishna should be imagined to be that of Bhagwan Ram or a specially made Murti of Bhagwan Ram should be worshipped at midday. Bhagwan Ram should be depicted as a smiling young handsome and muscular man with His arms long enough to reach His knees in the specially made Murti. He should be given a bow and arrow in His hand. Devotees should sing Kirtans narrating the birth of Bhagwan Ram in accompaniment of various musical instruments. Devotees observing a fast should Kurma Pujan should be done on Padvo which prevails at sunrise. If there are two Padvos, the second Padvo should be celebrated as Kurma Jayanti. Vaasudev Bhagwan should be offered a special Puja thinking of Him as Kurma Bhagwan. A devotee may make a gold Murti of Kurma Bhagwan. The torso of the Murti should resemble a man with His two hands holding a mace and conch, while His lower body should be made like a turtle. Bhagwan Parshuram should be worshipped with the same rituals that were carried out while worshipping Bhagwan Kurma. Nrusinh Jayanti.

"O sons! Bhagwan took Avatar as Nrusinh (half man half lion) at dusk on Monday, Vaishakh Sud Chaudash when the Moon was in Swati Nakshatra. My disciples should observe a day of fast on this day. This festival should be celebrated on Chaudash which is not in Vedh with Teras or on a second Chaudash if there are two. The fast may be concluded (optional) after worshipping Bhagwan Nrusinh at night. A gold Murti depicting a mighty lion wearing various types of Malas around its neck tearing open Hiranyakshipu's chest with its jaws and long talons may be made and worshipped like other manifestations of Bhagwan. Alternatively, the Pujari may worship the installed Murti of Bhagwan Shree Krishna imagining it as Bhagwan Nrusinh. The devotees should sing Kirtans extolling Bhagwan Nrusinh. O sons! I have just completed narrating the festivals that fall in the months of Falgun, Chaitra and Vaishakh. Let Me next narrate the rituals associated with the festivals due in the months of Jeth, Ashadh and Shravan."

CHAPTER 96

Ganga Dashahara.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sons! The holiest amongst the rivers, River Ganga descended on earth on Tuesday, Jeth Sud Dasam when the Moon was in Hast Nakshatra. As ten types of sins are washed away on this day, this festival is called Dashahara. The coincidence of Nakshatra is primary and therefore Dasam on which the Moon is in Hasta Nakshatra should be taken to celebrate this festival even if there are two Dasams. If there are two months of Jeth in a year, this festival should be celebrated in Adhik (additional) Jeth. (Normally the festivals are not celebrated in Adhik month.) Goddess Ganga should be visualised in Laxmiji and worshipped with scented flowers, lamps and sandalwood paste at midday. In the absence of installed Murti of Laxmiji in the temple, her four armed golden Murti should be made. She should be fair complexioned wearing white clothes and white ornaments and have a radiant smile on her face. Her two arms should be holding a pot and lotus while other two hands should offer blessings and protection. The devotees should sing Kirtans peratining to the descent of River Ganga and eat after worship and Aarti at noon."

Snaan Yatra.

"When Jyeshtha Nakshatra is prevailing at sunrise in a month of Jeth, Bhagwan Shree Krishna should be bathed with water. The clean water mixed with sandalwood paste should slowly be poured over Bhagwan with a conch whilst chanting appropriate hymns. Bhagwan should be dressed in yellow clothes and a red diadem. Naivedhya of Puri, rice, lentils, curry, Bhujia and seasonal vegetables should be offered to Him on that day. Kirtans of Bhagwan playing in water should be sung."

Rath Yatra.

"On Ashadh Sud Beej when Pushpan Nakshatra prevails at sunrise, a well decorated chariot facing the North should be placed in front of the installed Murti of Bhagwan Shree Krishna. Bhagwan should be dressed in yellow and red clothes and gold ornaments and bear suitable weapons. He should be offered yoghurt, rice, sugar and Ladoos as Naivedhya. After Aarti, Balkrishna Bhagwan should be placed in the chariot as if He is going for a ride in it. The Pujari should take Bhagwan Balkrishna off

"On Padvo or Beej, whenever the Sun enters Taurus constellation, Bhagwan Balkrishna should be placed in a cradle of a decorated swing in the evening. The Pujari should swing the cradle for a while and perform His Aarti before placing Him at the usual place in the Sinhasan. This process should be repeated daily until Shravan Vad Treej, when Hindola Utsav (festival) ends. The devotees should sing Kirtans describing Bhagwan swinging in the cradle every day for the month long festival."

Varah Jayanti.

"At midday on Tuesday, Shravan Sud Choth, Bhagwan Varah emerged from the nostrils of Brahma. If there are two Choths, the Choth prevailing at midday should be taken to celebrate this festival. Imagining Lord Krishna as Bhagwan Varah, the Pujari should dress Him in saffron coloured clothes and offer Naivedhya of milk pudding and Vada following His Puja. The Pujari, if he so wishes, may make a special four armed golden Murti of Varah Bhagwan with a head of a boar. A conch, disc, mace and lotus should be given in His four strong arms. Laxmiji should be placed on His left and Pruthvi (earth) and Sankarshan (Asp Shesh) should be placed near His feet. Many sages praying to Him with folded hands should be placed around Bhagwan Varah. The Pujari should offer a special Puja and Aarti to Varah Bhagwan at midday.

Pavitra Ekadashi.

"On Ekadashi or Baras of Shukla (Sud or bright) fortnight, Bhagwan should be offered Pavitra (threads). Pavitra could be of gold, silver, vegetable (such as sisal or jute), cotton or silk but the threads spun from cotton by a female Brahmin devotee are considered the most auspicious. A Pavitra of three hundred and sixty strands is considered the best, of two hundred and seventy strands the median while that of one hundred and eighty strands is considered the lowest. However, the Pujari should make many ordinary Pavitras of three stands to offer to Bhagwan. A Pavitra (of three strands) with one hundred knots is considered the best, of fifty knots a median and one with thirty six knots is considered the lowest. Similarly, a Pavitra reaching Bhagwan's navel Birth anniversary of Ramanand swami.

"O sons! Uddhav incarnate Ramanand swami, a son of a Brahmin called Ajay and his wife Sumati, was born on the morning of Shravan Vad Ashtami. The Pujari should have a two armed golden Murti of Ramanand swami made, which should be used for special veneration. He should be depicted as slightly plump with a benevolent smile on his face, wearing white clothes and holding a Mala in his right hand. The veneration should be performed primarily with sandalwood paste and flowers. Devotees should celebrate the festival of Janmashtami as I narrated earlier following the veneration of Ramanand swami."

Bhagwan Shree Hari concluded, "O sons! All disciples of our Uddhav Sampraday should celebrate all the festivals in the manner I just explained. One must consider his financial ability when offering clothes, ornaments and Naivedhya as I mentioned. The wealthy must not be stingy while celebrating these festivals but at the same time the poor devotees must not burden themselves with a debt in celebrations. Bhagwan is pleased with the honest intent rather than opulence. He is pleased even with leaves of Tulsi if presented with deep devotion and true intention. The installed or mobile Murti may be used at one's convenience to worship Bhagwan. One must bear one's Ashram and Varna when chanting the hymns accompanying the worship. The Dikshit devotees of the first three Varnas should use Vedic hymns while the women and Shudra devotees should chant only Bhagwan's name while performing Puja. Every worshipper must observe Brahamcharya, non violence and other Dharma, when observing all Vrats and festivals. Whoever undertakes these festivals sincerely will become dear to Bhagwan Krishna and attain His supreme abode."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji were very pleased to hear the timings and manner of celebrating all the festivals from Bhagwan Narayanmuni. They followed His instructions sincerely and spread the same message within their diocese."

Thus ends the 96th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Once when Shreeji Maharaj was resting after completing His morning routine, Gopalanand swami approached Him with folded hands and asked, 'O Bhagwan! I would like to hear about the Dharma of Your Tyagi Sadhus from You."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni replied, "O Muni! I shall now narrate to you the Dharma that all My saints should follow. The primary Dharma of saints is to have Ekantik Bhakti, coupled with knowledge of His greatness, towards Lord Krishna, Who is the cause of all causes. Lust, anger, greed, violence, hypocrisy and other vices are the major hindrances in Bhakti. They should strengthen their Bhakti with the help of virtues such as truth, piety, compassion and non violence. Among all the vices, o Muni, the five - greed, lust, penchant for taste, affection and ego are the most difficult to overcome. Indeed, these five are the front of other vices. Therefore, My saints must endeavour to conquer them. I shall point out the other vices that are hidden behind each of these five major vices and an easy way to overcome them."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "Many other vices are associated with greed, all of which must be forsaken as they lead one straight to hell. Indeed, greed is the fountainhead of other vices which steers one on the path of sins. Anger, infatuation, ego, dependency and deceit arise from greed. The greed of wealth leads one to sell his son or force her daughter to marry an unworthy groom. The vices such as not being able to forgive, abandonment of decorum, indulgence in immorality, infamy, hypocrisy, self praise, slandering others, jealousy, lack of Vairagya, inability to donate, non belief in the Vedas and advice of guru, theft, adultery, telling lies, lack of humility and adventure, penchant for taste, contempt for others etc. arise from greed. Therefore, greed is called the father of all sins. One must understand very well that all these vices are an obstacle in your quest for Moksha and try to overcome greed by associating with pious saints. The famous kings such as Janak, Yuvanshva and Vrshadarbhi had attained great highs of bliss after overcoming greed. Greed destroys all virtues and knowledge of a great scholar in a moment. Knowing all these, would any sane saint indulge in greed? Of course not!"

Lord Swaminarayan continued, "Now let Me show you the means to overcome greed. Remember that anything that is acquired, wealth or possessions, is to please a body that is mortal and temporary. A man commits sins to acquire wealth to gratify his body, but does not ponder that both, wealth and body are transitory. The sins committed results in soul suffering various pains of hell and rebirth in lower species such as a dog and pig. My Tyagi disciple must not indulge in gossip and not get attracted to a woman, child, ornaments, fine clothes, gardens, grand mansions or indeed anything that is pleasant to the eyes. A Tyagi saint desirous of Moksha must never be fascinated by the taste of fine foods. He must see tasteful food as an obstacle in his path to salvation. He must not hanker for scented oils, flowers and other similar things that please his sense of smell. Indeed, Tyagi saints must remain aloof from pleasing smells, talks, touch, sights and touch which corrupt any of his five senses. One must control his senses by seeing blemish in all worldly objects and withdraw them from such mundane objects. The mind always tends to follow the senses. The soul is troubled by the mind and the five senses indulging in greed. Therefore, the wise must consider these six as his enemies and try to subjugate them. They can be controlled only by associating with the pious saints who have already controlled them. The true greatness of Bhagwan can only be understood with the help of such pious saints."

Shree Hari continued, "One gets whatever is written in his destiny, therefore one must not chase pleasures. As the body is an important tool to attain Bhagwan and Moksha, one should endeavour to sustain it but only with the means (food and clothes) that are the bare minimum. Anything else is just overindulgence. I shall show how a Tyagi saint should try to sustain his body with the following means. Any other way will take him straight to hell. He should ask the householder devotees to give him old cloths to make a quilt for himself. He may accept, but without asking for them, two Kaupins, two Dhotis, one piece of cloth to cover his torso, a cap and a square piece of cloth to sieve water. He may accept an extra woollen blanket to keep warm and an extra piece of cloth to be used during cooking. Except for the blanket, all other clothes should be of cotton and not any other material and not embroidered or interwoven with metal strands. He must not keep any more clothes than that I mentioned above. He must not accept, even if insisted by a householder devotee, any fine, transparent, embroidered or expensive clothes. He may ask householder devotees to provide him with Dhoti and other clothes if none are offered. All his clothes should be coloured with red soil. He must not wear white or any other coloured clothes. The artefacts needed for Puja such as bowls and spoons must be made of wood and not metal. Similarly his own plates, pitcher and bowls must be made of unpolished and unpainted wood. He may keep other items such as note books, pens, ink, scissors, needles, knife etc. but only what is necessary. He must neither keep money on himself nor ask anyone to keep it on his behalf. Indeed, he must not keep anything, clothes, utensils, cows etc. that may be purchased with money. A Tyagi saint must not steal and neither must he ask anyone to steal anything on his behalf. He must not associate with thieves or allow thieves to reside with him. He must not take anything, even of low value such as flowers, fruits or grains without the express permission of the owner. He must not engage in agriculture and not ask anybody to farm for him. He must not keep anything for safe keeping on behalf of others."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "A Tyagi saint must repent immediately for any transgression from any of the above. He must reveal any sins he may have committed in front of other pious saints and undertake any atonement as they direct. He must observe one Padkrutchh Vrat for deviating from any of these; keeping more clothes than I mentioned above, wearing white, multi coloured, embroidered, fine or expensive clothes or asking for new clothes from anybody. If he keeps or asks somebody to keep wealth secretly, he must observe a fast for the number of days equivalent to the number of days he kept the wealth. Similar atonement applies if he keeps cows or horses for his personal use. He must prostrate at the feet of pious saints and observe a day of fast as atonement for stealing. The other benevolent saints must proscribe any Tyagi saint found to have committed any sin. He should not be allowed to mix with other saints until he has atoned for his sins. By understanding the true greatness of Bhagwan and by associating with His true Ekantik saints, one can overcome greed by following the above mentioned edicts. O Muni! I just narrated the vices associated with greed and how to overcome them. Now I shall mention lust and vices associated with it."

Thus ends the 97th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, "O Muni! Just as an ocean is the source of all water, lust is considered the origin of all vices. Many Yogis who had attained the status of Brahm considered the pleasure of women greater than the pleasure of AksharBrahm. Even the scholars address the assemblies of women under the pretext of spreading Bhakti due to their unquenched lascivious desires. To enjoy the proximity of men, the women falsely opine that there is no difference between Bhagwan and His devotees and serve male devotees willingly. A male guru teaches a female disciple to develop a closer relationship with her and a male disciple seeks a female guru for the same purpose. A man commits adultery with a mother, sister, daughter, a widow and guru's wife due to his unbridled lascivious desires. Even the pious Brahmins are led to prostitutes and women of lowly birth to fulfil their sexual desires. Often a man has sex with another man or animals to fulfil his unrestrained sexual urges. Even the great Tyagis engage in masturbation like a monkey due to their heightened sexual desires. Fulfilment of lascivious desires with anybody, and at any cost, leads to the bastardisation of the population and a breakdown of the Varna and Ashram system. A man kills a woman and a woman kills her husband or father just to remove the so called obstacles in their pursuits of sexual desires. Even a Brahmin indulges in the consumption of meat and alcohol and speaking lies just to fulfil his lascivious desires. Anger, conceit, jealousy, ego, hypocrisy, brazenness, infamy, infatuation, memory loss and the inability to distinguish between right and wrong are some of the vices which are associated with lust. Indulgence in rampant fulfilment of sexual desires leads to diseases, suicides and untimely deaths followed by the pains of hell and rebirth in lower species such as dogs, donkeys and pigs. One never recovers from the never ending cycle of death and rebirth for eons. These and many other sins are the direct result of lust. "

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! Now let Me tell you how a Tyagi saint may overcome lust, which is stronger in one's youth. DharnaParna, good thoughts and association with pious saints are the main tools of overcoming lust. A young saint should undertake Vrats such as DharnaParna, Chandrayan or Parak every year during Chaturmaas. He should also observe other Vrats such as Cruchh, Atikruchh, Uddalak, Parnakruchh, Jalkruchh, Govrat, Yavak and Masopvas periodically. Latent sexual urges are diminished by undertaking these various Vrats; therefore, a Tyagi saint should continue observing these Vrats until his sexual urges are totally subdued. A Tyagi saint must develop pious thoughts about the futility of carnal indulgence by associating with other pious saints. He must understand that the woman he so craves is made of blood, muscles, bones, marrow, phlegm and excreta. The sins committed with licentious women become attached to the soul and pushes one towards hell and its punishments. These sins, clinging to a soul, result directly to be reborn repeatedly as dogs, donkeys and monkeys. A Tyagi saint can vanquish lust if such thoughts are ingrained in his mind. He should strictly observe the decorum and Dharma of a Tyagi saint to remain detached from a woman."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Muni! A Tyagi must never hear or talk about the splendour of a woman. He must never joke with a woman nor must he ever look at her. He must never touch a statue of woman let alone the real one. He must never think of or plan to get hold of a woman. Jumping in fire, drinking poison or diving in a well is better than any alliance with a woman. He must not wear or touch woman's clothes. However, washed or new clothes are exempted from touch only if it is innocent and without intent of gratification. The Tyagi saints must never sit facing women, look at their picture or draw their pictures or images. When walking on open roads, a saint should walk at least six feet away from a woman. However, this is not feasible on the days of festivals such as Janmashtami when thousands of devotees gather in and around temple, in narrow lanes, seeking alms from homes of devotees or young girls wandering within temple premises. Even in these circumstances, a Tyagi must never allow physical contact with a woman. He must behave in the same way with a man dressed as a woman (cross dresser and transgender). They must not go to have their bath at a place which is frequented by women for the same purpose. A Tyagi saint must never talk about vices or virtues of women and never do Katha addressed to or in front of them. He must never listen to Katha narrated by a woman."

Bhagwan Swaminarayan continued, "O Muni! My Tyagi disciple must not go to a home of devotees except to seek alms or do Katha. In any case, he must never venture out of temple on his own for any purpose whatsoever. He must not go for Darshan of even Shaligram, if He is worshipped exclusively by a woman. A Tyagi must not obey any command of even his guru if that command would deviate him from his vow of Brahamcharya. The saints must not allow a woman to enter their residential quarters even temporarily. Anything they need should be obtained through a male devotee. They must never ask a woman to sweep the floor or clean their utensils. Either they should do it themselves or ask a male devotee to do it for them. The saints must have a room previously used by women cleaned by a male devotee before staying in it. The Tyagi saints desirous of Moksha must never associate with women, cross dressers and lascivious males in anyway. A bond created with an attachment with women and lascivious males is stronger than any bond in this world. Any virtues such as Brahamcharya, non violence, chastity, leniency, compassion, control of senses and truthfulness or divine powers acquired with profound devotion and worship are destroyed in a moment by carnal indulgence with a woman, cross dresser or lascivious male. By observing these Niyams strictly, having a profound devotion towards Bhagwan and associating with pious saints, one can vanquish lust which is otherwise impossible to overcome. Kings Yayati and Puruva of the bygone era attained Moksha by vanquishing lust."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! A Tyagi saint must undertake appropriate atonement immediately on transgressing from any of these Niyams for his own good. He must observe a day of fast while chanting Bhagwan Shree Krishna's hymn for any of these transgressions: Narrate a Katha to women or hear Katha from a woman, remain, even for a moment, in women's quarters, address a woman or send a secret message to a woman through a medium of a man, have a carnal desire of a woman, touch a garment worn by a woman, walking within six feet of women except in detrimental circumstances mentioned above, talk to women, inadvertent sight of a nude woman, touch a statue of a woman, looking at a woman eye to eye or seeing any animals or birds in an act of copulation. However, there are some exceptions when more information about women may be sought by a Tyagi saint. If someone approaches a saint with a request to take Bhagwati Diksha, the saint must endeavour to know more about the person's mother, wife or daughter to ensure their willingness in letting that person take Diksha. If a woman sends a male emissary to invite a saint to come and dine at her place or have a written religious clarification, the saint should enquire about her name, caste, financial means and any other relatives in her home. A saint may make similar enquiries about women seeking hospitality of the temple like staying overnight or any other similar religious activities. However, one must bear in mind that not all saints should get involve in these affairs independently. An elder or a leader saint should take the lead and deal with each instance on its merit. Anybody else, if they make enquiries about women, must undertake a bath while chanting Shree Hari's name thrice facing the North. Even the leader of group must follow the same atonement if he listens to a woman directly (without a male intermediary) or speaks or asks more than what is necessary. For accidental ejaculation in a wet dream, a Tyagi saint should observe a fast for a day while he must observe a continuous fast for four days as atonement for deliberate ejaculation by masturbation. Except for going out to answer the call of nature, they must never venture out without the company of other saint. If they become separated during such a venture, both saints must undertake a fast for a day. A Tyagi saint must undertake a fast for three consecutive days if he spends any time in seclusion with a woman or if he walks on his own with a woman."

Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan continued, "O Gopal Muni! According to the scriptures, the atonement of the eighth transgression (an actual copulation) is a fast until death. As self sacrifice is prohibited in Kali Yug, a Brahamchari saint must undertake a Sadhya Vrat for one year. It involves fasting for a day followed by eating Sathvo (dough kneaded with salty water) the next day, in silence and before dusk. This must continue for a full year. A saint unable to gulp Sathvo may eat a single cereal cooked in salty water. An even weaker saint may eat two types of cooked cereal. This meal must be taken only on the alternate days (not on a day of fast). This Vrat may be suspended if he becomes ill during the Vrat. He should eat a single meal everyday during the period of illness without observing the fast on alternate days. Sadhya Vrat should be resumed and continued for the duration of one year at the end of illness after reciting the eight lettered hymn (Aum Shree Krishnay Namah) a thousand times. A Tyagi unable to undertake Sadhya Vrat for a whole year should undertake it for nine, six or three months depending on his physical condition. This Vrat is capable of washing away the sin and cleanse mind and body during which a saint must observe Brahamcharya and non violence in totality. A saint unable to undertake this Vrat even for a minimum period must undertake the pilgrimage of Badrikaashram to wash away his sin. Alternatively, he must undertake Chaandrayan Vrat for one month as atonement for his sin. If this sin (of copulating with a woman) was committed without the knowledge of anybody else, a Sadhu must chant 'Narayan' fifty thousand times (i.e. five hundred Malas) a day for one year. He should sit in seclusion thrice a day and chant Narayan's name devoutly while turning the beads of his Mala. Whichever way, atonement for the sin must be undertaken and he should be allowed to mix with other saints only after atonement. After the completion of repentance, nobody should accuse or remind him of his past sin ever. A Brahamchari saint must undertake Truptkruchh Vrat for having sex with a man or an animal. However, if a saint refuses to undertake appropriate repentance for his sin, he must be ousted immediately from the assembly of saints. O Muni! After narrating the vice of lust and ways to overcome it, let Me narrate to you the vice of indulgence in palate and how to overcome it."

Thus ends the 98th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 99

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! Penchant for taste is the main cause of corruption of other senses. Lust arises from predilection of taste as the wise scholars opine that lust does not ascend from a feeble body. Many kings and Brahmins had taken to eating meat only due to their fondness for taste. The interpretation that 'The Vedas do permit sacrificial Yagnas' has been derived at solely to satisfy their cravings for taste. The Brahmins of the bygone era deviated from Sanatan Dharma, austerity, non sacrificial Yagnas and surviving on uncultivated food only due to their penchant for palate. Even today, many people sacrifice animals in front of Goddesses in the name of religious rituals only to satisfy their cravings for meat and alcohol. People of the four Varnas and four Ashrams have transgressed from their Vedic religion and behave like demons engaged in killing animals and birds due to their penchant for taste. They even steal in order to satisfy their cravings for tasty food. Many scholars discriminate and sit separately or many people even eat without their dependents such as son or wife when faced with the prospect of having tastier food. Many people consume unpalatable food such as the milk of cows or buffalos before the passage of ten days since giving birth to their calves or the milk of donkey's or camels; revolting foods such as onions and garlic and intoxicating substances such as Charas and heroine just to gratify their sense of taste. People take up Bhagwan Narayan's worship, narrating His Katha and singing His Kirtans as a way to earn their livelihood due to their penchant for taste. Indulgence in taste leads one to accept servility of his enemies and many diseases or even indeed death results from it. Other vices such as anger, greed, conceit, envy, ego etc. ascend due to one's love for taste."

Lord Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! After telling you how overindulgence in taste hinders one on the path of salvation, I shall tell you how a Tyagi saint can overcome it. The saints should not have an unhealthy interest in tasty food; otherwise, they wander from home to home like dogs in pursuit of food. This happens to even the saints who may have attained the status of Brahm with their faith and Yoga. Just as a bee sucks a little nectar from different flowers at a time, My disciples should seek small alms from various homes. They should ask for grain from pious devotees of all four Varnas. They must not visit the same homes expecting easy or plentiful grain or flour from a few generous devotees. A Tyagi seeking alms should stand at the doorstep of a home and shout 'Narayan Hare, Sachidanand Prabho'. He should cook whatever he has received from the devotees' home and offer it to Bhagwan as Naivedhya. He should mix leaves of Tulsi and water in that food before consuming. He should be more than happy to share his food with any visitor or hungry man. My Tyagi disciple should accept an invitation to dine at a pious, Dikshit, religious householder Brahmin (except on day of Sutak or other prohibited instances). They should offer Naivedhya to Bhagwan and eat Prasad after mixing it with water. They should take a small mobile Murti of Bhagwan if that home does not have an appropriate Murti to offer Naivedhya to. Regardless of where the dining takes place, the saints must always prepare Naivedhya for the mobile and worshipped Murti. If a Brahmin devotee is unable to cook for the saints or a devotee of Kshatriya or Vaishya Varna invites the saints to dine at their home, the saints should cook food themselves at their homes. The decorum of the Sampraday stipulates that no less than five saints must ever go to a householder's home for the purpose of a feast. They must ensure that a host has the financial capacity to host dinner for them and not encourage poorer devotees to invite them. They must eat whatever the host householder normally eats and not ask or insist on anything special for them. However, an exception may be made for an ill saint. On the days of festivals when householders themselves cook lavish meals, the saints can avail themselves with such lavish hospitality if offered willingly by the host. O Muni! My saints must ensure that they go to the homes of devotees where only males serve them food."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! The Tyagi disciples must never accept garlands unless they have been first offered to Bhagwan. Except due to illness, they must never use scents or eat nutmeg, cinnamon or crushed beetle nuts, even if they are served as Prasad. Even on the days of their fast such as Ekadashi or as atonement, they still must cook Naivedhya for Bhagwan as normal on such days. When more than a few groups of saints gather together at a single home on the days of large festivals, Naivedhya should be prepared considering all the circumstances without troubling the host and other groups of saints. Whenever the circumstances permit, all food should be arranged in front of Bhagwan like Annakut. Otherwise, a small quantity of food should be offered to Bhagwan as Naivedhya before mixing it with the rest of the food to make all food appropriate as Prasad. The Tyagi saints must never, even in a garb of Prasad, accept food from a person considered not a suitable donor or host. Similarly, a Tyagi saint should not offer cooked food to the saints of a higher Varna than himself. The chastity of mind depends greatly on chastity of food; therefore, one must always strive to eat sanctified food."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O Gopalanand swami! The Tyagi saints should eat only once a day except during an illness or ailment. The whole day should be spent in Bhagwan's Bhakti. Eating only one meal a day should not be abandoned even when offered Prasad in the form of cooked food as eating anything cooked after lunch counts as a second meal. The evil practice of saints eating more than once a day is frightening even in thought. Any food or Prasad received on days of fast such as on Ekadashi, should be declined with honour after touching it to indicate acceptance but not consumed. Similarly, any food that he has vowed not to consume or he is allergic to should not be eaten ever again even if offered as a Prasad. A wise Tyagi saint must not use his personal bowl or plate to offer Naivedhya to Bhagwan or use his pitcher or glass in a toilet. He must sieve milk and water before offering to Bhagwan and must not drink such without sieving it first even if it is offered as a Prasad by some ignorant person. A saint should not eat food that causes problems to his body and shall not even touch meat and alcohol. Similarly, the other intoxicating substances such as Bhang and Charas must not be smelt, drunk or eaten in any form. An ill saint may take medicine provided that it does not contain meat or alcohol, sleep on a bed using a mattress and eat several times a day. By following this Niyams sincerely and keeping the company of pious saints and with deep devotion towards Bhagwan, one can overcome even a difficult to control penchant for taste. Sage Mudgal, who sustained himself by picking up grains from the field and kings such as Rantidev and Shibi attained great pleasure and highest bliss (of Bhagwan's supreme abode) by overcoming their fondness of taste."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! A Tyagi saint must undertake an appropriate atonement immediately upon not following any of the above mentioned Niyams. He must undertake a fast for a day if he eats anything cooked that was not first offered to Bhagwan or accept sandalwood paste, garlands or Paan that was not offered to Bhagwan previously. If fewer than five saints dine at a devotee's home, all of them must undertake a fast for a day as atonement. Any saint who gives or accepts Prasad from a person whose food he should not have accepted must undertake Chaandrayan Vrat. A Tyagi Sadhu must eat Sathvo for a month upon inadvertent consumption of alcohol or meat while he must fast for a day if he consumes tobacco or any intoxicating drugs or substances. O Muni! Bear in mind that one's other senses cannot be said to be under his control until his sense of taste in not under his control. Therefore, one must control the sense of taste to control the other senses. Penchant for taste can only be controlled by the restriction of intake of food. Penchant for food cannot be overcome by eating tasty food once or eating bland food often. Therefore, one must eat only what is needed to sustain the body, no more or no less. Limited quantities of food lead to limited movement (loitering). O Muni! After narrating to you the drawbacks due to penchant for taste and how to overcome it, let Me narrate to you the drawbacks of unhealthy affection for anything and how to overcome it."

Thus ends the 99th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Gopal Muni! Any undue affection for anything except Bhagwan Vaasudev is a great sin for a Tyagi saint. Even a Tyagi, who has renounced the world, is dragged back to the never ending cycle of death and rebirth due to affection and longing for his family. Memory (caused by affection) for wife, children, home, wealth or indeed pets and farms leads one to become a ghost. Love for a woman makes a man, whose genitals are cut off, yearn for non sexual contact with her. A man disregards all troubles to provide for his family due to his love for them. A strong mutual affection between a man and a woman drives them away from their parents and native villages. Deep attachment is the only reason a man is unable to leave his wife and family despite being insulted repeatedly by them. The same attachment leads a woman to death after demise of her husband or a son. A man kills animals to provide for his loved family. Indeed, men and birds are prepared to go hungry themselves to feed their offspring. Affection for his family drives a man to steal, tell lies, travel abroad to earn a living, serve an undeserving person or accumulate wealth by foul means. It is not only that a man feels attached to his family; he even develops deep attachment towards his animals, birds and trees. He loves his old and infirm body so much that he tries to drive away death until his last breath. Undue affection causes a man to side with injustice, forsake the correct path, engage in wrongdoings, accumulate wealth by foul means, see faults in virtuous and virtues in the sinners and have unhealthy attachment towards the things such as his mortal possessions that shackles him to the cycle of death and rebirth. Lust, anger, greed, envy etc. are the secondary results of affection. Therefore, My Tyagi disciples must consider affection (towards anything except Bhagwan) a sin and must try to overcome it."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O Muni! Now I shall tell you how one can overcome affection (and attachment). A Tyagi must not have any attachment towards his mortal body and any materialistic accessories or possessions that provide pleasures to the body. He attains happiness and Bhagwan as result of his detachment. Kings such as Bharat and Priyavart and sages such as Dadhichi and others attained Bhagwan after developing detachment from their kingdom, wealth, family, children and body. A Tyagi must never visit the village of his birth ever again. If, for whatever reason he does end up in his village, he must not visit his family members. He must not accept clothes, food or utensils from his family (unless it is given as a charity to all the saints) nor ask them to give to any other saint. He must not share their joy at unexpected windfall or birth of children and sorrows of unforeseen loss or a death in a family. If the affection towards relative is absolute, one must have an equal affection towards relatives of past births, but that does not happen even if one tries! A man was born in many life forms previously and has enjoyed the company of relatives. The relatives of this life should be treated in exactly the same manners one treats his relatives of past lives. A Tyagi saint, who remains attached to his relatives even after renouncing them once, will indeed engage in other types of unsanctified deeds or sins as well. Such a Tyagi should be deemed to be guilty of five great sins. O Muni! Therefore, a Tyagi must consider himself as an immortal soul distinct from the three types of his mortal body and remain detached from all things materialistic."

Shree Hari continued, "O swami! A Tyagi saint must sleep on the floor (and not on a bed). He must never allow a female to prepare his beddings. He must shear his hairs every month, except his Shikha (a pigtail) on his head and hairs around armpits and genitals. He must not shave again within a month. He must not shave on the days of Vrats and on any day after lunch. He must bath immediately after touching a sinner, atheist, woman, accidental ejaculation in a dream and shorning of his head. He should bath upon receiving the news of death of his parents and guru. He must remain engaged in reading or listening to His Katha and Kirtans at all times and not waste away his time in small talks and gossip. He must never be a mediatory in disputes regarding wealth or inheritance nor should he proffer his advice to anybody on these matters. He must not participate in politics and gossip. He must not listen to or talk about the tales of victories, defeats, splendour of far off places, descriptions of tasteful foods, possessions of householder devotees such as their homes and vehicles and their habits and descriptions and powers of different weapons."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! Failure to adhere to any of the just mentioned Niyams, a Taygi saint must chant one of the hymns; 'Aum Krishnay Namah' or 'Swaminarayan' five thousand times. He should observe a fast for as many days as he remains with his relatives. He must undertake a fast for a day for each of these digressions; eating at his relatives' home, giving anything of the temple to his relative, accepting food and clothes from his relatives and sleeping on a bed prepared by a woman. Observing the above mentioned Niyams combined with sincere devotion towards Bhagwan are vital tools to get rid of one's affection in mundane things. O wise Muni! Now listen to the drawbacks of ego (pride) and the means to vanquish it."

Thus ends the 100th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 101

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Gopalanand swami! Ego is the cause of anger, which destroys one's austerity, charity, non violence and other esteemed virtues in a moment. Anger makes one lose the control of differentiation between right and wrong. An angry man does not hesitate to kill parents, guru, saints or indeed himself. He speaks what he should not speak, does what he should not do and behaves in a manner which is contrary to his nature. As a result of his ego, even the exalted scholars who understand their true form as immortal souls (distinct from mortal bodies), start to take pride in their body. Envy is another off-shoot of ego by which a sinner considers him equal to a pious. Ego gives rise to foul or harsh language, cruelty, hypocrisy, deceit and jealousy. A man overcome with ego sees injustice in truth and justice in falsehood; and piety in a sinner and impiety in a saint. He even insults the scholars, wise and elders. He considers himself so great that he ignores and insults the true saints and pious. An egoist man argues unnecessarily with the saints; loses his humility and equanimity, loses the decorum of speaking with modesty and does not even bow down to Bhagwan Himself. He invites displeasure of saints on himself. Looking at these drawbacks, the Tyagi saints must forsake ego if they wish to earn pleasure of Bhagwan. Kings such as Harishchandra, Kushik, Yudhishthir and the others attained great heights by forsaking their ego."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! Let Me now show you the means of forsaking ego. By understanding the exalted Sankhya philosophy, one should understand the traits of Prakruti and Purush and body and soul; and consider one's self as an immortal and eternal soul, distinct from the mortal body. This understanding helps one to forsake ego easily. A Tyagi saint should learn to take insults of other saints or householders in his stride. He must not feel jealous when someone equal to him is granted a greater honour. He must not show any aversion when someone junior or younger is served better food than himself. He should not mind if his guru bestows greater honour to one of peers. A true Sadhu is one who serves and associates with other saints without envy and jealousy. Whichever saints attained great fame in the bygone eras, they earned it with humility and servility. Ego is bad for the householders as well. Duryodhan, Shishupal, Ravan and many others were destroyed along with their friends and siblings due to their ego. Thinking of all these, the saints should forsake their ego. However, they must take pride in their adherence of their Brahamcharya Vrat and other Dharma."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! A Tyagi must not take pride in anything except his observation of Dharma. He must not become agitated even if ignorant persons throw dust and pebbles at him. He must never lash out at them in speech, mind or action in the face of a great provocation, insults or even beating. He must not lie and at the same time he must not speak the truth that maligns or hurts someone. He must not use violence by thought (thinking badly of somebody), speech (cussing someone) or action (beating or hurting anyone). Indeed, he must not address a disabled man as lame, mute or dumb. A true Sadhu does not uproot even grass for his own use. He does not scare anyone or level false allegations against anyone. O Muni! The Tyagi saints should behave like Jad Bharat, a son of Rhishabhdev. They should be as tolerant and forgiving as the earth. Becoming arrogant due to their heightened Atmanishtha, some misguided saints forsake their ethics. My disciple saints must never do that. My disciple saints must wake up early to perform their morning rituals. I did narrate these daily routines to you earlier at Gadhpur (Prakaran 3, Ch. 28). They must not sleep at dawn, dusk or during the day except when unwell. They must not waste their precious time without being engaged in any of the nine types of Bhakti; listening to His Katha, singing Kirtans, meditating upon Him, bowing down to Him, worshipping Him, serving Him, being His friend and totally surrendering to Him. They must read and learn scriptures daily and regularly and celebrate all festivals with fervour."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O Muni! A Tyagi saint must undertake appropriate atonement upon any digression from the Niyams I just outlined. He must undertake a fast for a day if he kicks, punches or beats anyone with a stick even once. A Tyagi should undertake a fast for four consecutive days if any of the above results in bruising or bleeding or a fast for twelve days if it results in permanent damage to the limbs. He should fast for the days equivalent to the times he used swear words. For using abusive or rude words, a Tyagi should fast for a day. Upon killing small insects such as mosquitoes, lice, flies, bed bugs etc. he should chant Bhagwan's eight lettered hymn one hundred and eight times. He should fast for a day for killing small animals or birds such as rats, sparrows or bees. He should increase the quantum of repentance in line with the size of the animal. This is just the very short guideline. Details should be gleaned from the Yagnavalkya Smruti. He should fast for a day for sleeping at dawn, dusk or during the day except when unwell. O Gopalanand Muni! Now let Me tell you what extra atonement the Atmanivedi Sadhus (the exalted saints who have surrendered their lives for Bhagwan) should undertake for digressing from their Niyams. They should fast for a day if they look at a woman long enough to make out her beauty or age. This does not apply for looking at woman accidently while travelling, walking or seeking alms. They must not eat or drink anything without first offering them to God. The Tyagi saints who are old, sick, travelling or engaged in building a temple are exempted from the Niyam of eating only one meal and sleeping during the daytime."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! I narrated the ways to overcome one's ego. They really help only with the help of other humble saints combined with sincere devotion in Bhagwan. Without these two - association of the pious and profound devotion towards Bhagwan, all means and tools are just futile. My Tyagi saints should behave as I narrated to vanquish their greed, lust, taste, affection and ego and repent for any digression from them. They should ask an eminent and pious saint for atonement for any digression I may have missed to mention. On a day of fast, one must not have anything except water and a fully fit person must not drink water repeatedly. A fast of atonement must be observed additionally after concluding the fast of an Ekadashi if an Ekadashi falls on a day of fast due to atonement. The same applies if one is undergoing more than one day of fasting as repentance. However, if he has to undertake additional fasts as atonement when already fasting, two fasts should run concurrently and not consequently. If he needs to repent for looking at or speaking with a woman after he has eaten, he should chant Bhagwan's name for one hundred and eight times and not eat again the same day instead of fasting the next day. He should take a bath and follow the same guidelines for touching a woman after his lunch. No one must call or consider him a sinner once he has undertaken the appropriate atonement. Otherwise the other person must fast for a day. These Niyams and their associated atonements must be observed as long as one is aware of his existence. Any Sadhu not controlling his greed, lust, taste, affection and ego with the help of the Niyams I just outlined is consigned to hell. After undergoing punishments of hell they are reborn on lowly lives as donkeys, dogs or monkeys for eternity."

Shree Hari concluded, "O Muni! The saints who devote their lives in the service of Bhagwan whilst observing their Niyams and have firm knowledge and detachment are called Ekantik devotees. They are variously addressed as Paramhans, Brahamvedi, Mahabhagwat and liberated for life. They should devote their life in devotion of Bhagwan Shree Krishna with full knowledge and detachment while observing their Dharma sincerely. Their body should be adorned with sandalwood and flowers upon their death and cremated, left in a forest or allowed to be flown in the river as per local customs. The wise devotees must not cry on their death. O wise sage! After narrating Dharma of Ekantik Tyagi saints, I shall narrate the traits of knowledge, detachment etc. in great detail as I have learned from My guru, Ramanand swami.

Thus ends the 101st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Narayanmuni said, “O Muni! A human body is subject to the change due to the vagaries of time and endures various pains while a soul is distinct from the body and is unchangeable. It is eternal, impregnable, constant and permanent in nature and is the controller of body, senses and mind. It is neither ever born nor ever dies. The water cannot wet it, the wind cannot dry it, the fire cannot burn it and weapons cannot decimate or pierce it. It remains undefiled and invariable forever. The body’s trait of variability or its faults do not exist in a soul and soul’s trait of permanence does not exist in a body. They are two distinct entities. One should realise such qualities of his soul and consider it as his true form and try to attain unison with AksharBrahm. This understanding is called Atmanishtha and the great scriptures consider this Atmanishtha synonymous with Gnaan, the knowledge.”

Shree Hari continued, “Now let Me define Vairagya - detachment. One’s own body and that of the others is nothing but a bag of twelve wastes; skin, blood, meat, muscles, fat, bones, marrow, excreta, urine, old age and diseases contained within a tout layer of skin. Do you see any goodness in any of them? A body, even if it is of a king, ends up filled with insects, as excreta or ashes. (If left abandoned, it is either putrefied with insect or excreted if eaten by wild animals and burns to ashes if cremated.) A person empathetic with his body is subjected to take many births in one of the four types of life form. He has to bear consequences of all his actions preformed with the body. He endures great pains for his evil deeds and attains great happiness of heaven or a kingdom of this world. This happiness, though appearing eternal, is short lived and vices such as lust, anger, greed, envy etc. do not leave him alone even in this happiness. O Muni! Fourteen Indras (kings of heaven) are born and perished in a single day of Brahma. Even Brahma perishes at the time of Prakrut Pralay. Everything that is created from Maya perishes over a period of time. The apathy developed towards everything that is perishable and the cause of grief is called Vairagya.”

Shree Narayanmuni continued, “O Muni! Serving Bhagwan Vaasudev and His Avtaars with deep love and knowledge of His greatness is called Bhakti. Bhagwan’s supreme abode, variously called Shwetdweep, Akshardham, Golok, Vaikunth is divine and the Parshads residing in His abode are divine. Bhagwan in His human form is independent and supreme master of the innumerable universes. This is the greatness of Bhagwan. Bhakti is to serve Him personally by any of the nine means after understanding His greatness. A person who serves Him with this understanding while observing his Dharma (of Varna and Ashram) is the best amongst His devotees. Such an Ekantik saint should be anointed as a guru, who can redeem one from the gravest of sins. A man should associate with such saints and serve and revere them."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O Gopalanand swami! Dharma is of two types; active (living within the world as a householder) and inactive (dwell in the forest after renouncing the world). Both types of Dharma, if followed sincerely and for His pleasure, help one become Ekantik devotee of Bhagwan. Sages like Sanak attained Bhagwan by following the inactive path while Sage Marichi and others attained the same goal following the other path. Just renouncing the world and living by the code of ethics is not enough to attain Moksha; one has to have profound devotion towards Bhagwan besides living by his Dharma to attain Moksha. This is called Ekantik Dharma. Let Me expand on this. Even the best of scholars cannot hope to become Ekantik devotees without accepting the supremacy and without going under tutelage of Bhagwan. An Ekantik devotee's senses and mind must remain in constant reminiscence of Bhagwan and all his deeds are undertaken just to please Bhagwan. He must become free from mundane desires and observe non violence (in thought, speech and action) strictly before taking up either an active or inactive path of Dharma. Dharma observed under such strict guidelines is called Ekantik Dharma which is capable of redeeming a man. Observing one's Dharma coupled with true knowledge, detachment and Ekantik Bhakti is called Ekantik Dharma. It is not easy for the weak to follow this arduous path. Ekantik Dharma slowly degenerates in the absence of its numerable adherers. People can follow this path with the blessings of its true adherers or Bhagwan Himself. Satya Yug prevails in the presence of such Ekantik devotees."

Lord Shree Hari continued, "O wise Muni! The householder adherers of Ekantik Dharma must earn their living by judicious means and use that wealth to serve Bhagwan by performing various non sacrificial Yagnas. The Tyagi adherers of Ekantik Dharma should serve Bhagwan by performing various austerities such as Kruchh and Chaandrayan Vrats and Japa. Indra and other Devtas must never be considered as the primary benefactor of the Yagnas even when Yagnas are preformed for their homage. Such Ekantik devotees attain My supreme abode and get divine bodies there. Many great sages had undergone severe austerities to become Ekantik devotees. Therefore, any person desirous of Moksha must follow Ekantik Dharma, which liberates them from the cycle of death and rebirth. Whoever attained Moksha in the past did so only by following Ekantik Dharma and not by any other means. O Muni! You are a great follower of this Ekantik Dharma and must ensure that all My disciples; Tyagi and Grahastha alike, follow the same. Whoever in this world observes Ekantik Dharma is never subjected to the cycle of death and rebirth. This narration of Dharma of Tyagi saints is called 'Dharmamrut' (nectar of Dharma). Whoever listens to this Dharmamrut is liberated from the cycle of rebirth and indeed attains Akshardham."

Suvrat Muni said, "O pious King Pratapsinh! Gopalanand swami was greatly pleased to hear the Dharmas of Tyagi saints. Not only did he follow them, he ensured that the other saints followed His sermon sincerely.

Thus ends the 102nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Once Nityanand swami approached Shree Hari and asked Him, 'O Bhagwan! It is said in the scriptures that one cannot hope to become liberated without Gnaan (knowledge). Would You please enlighten me by telling me what this knowledge is?' O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari narrated the knowledge of Sankhya philosophy to Nityanand swami."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! I shall reiterate the knowledge of the creation of the cosmos, knowing which a man can attain Moksha. Just after the total annihilation - Atyantik Pralay, Bhagwan Vaasudev remained alone in His Akshardham. Mahapurush, Mahamaya and innumerable numbers of Pradhan and Purush were lying dormant within the luminosity of Akshardham. Bhagwan is called by various names; Shree Krishna, Purushottam, Parmatma, Vishnu, Parabrahm, Shree Hari, Parampurush, Jyotiswarup, Aksharatit etc. in the Vedas, the Puranas, the Mahabharat and other scriptures. Bhagwan looked at Mahakaal (Purush) when He desired to create a universe. Mahakaal, variably described as Mahapurush, Akshar, Brahm, soul, Nar etc. is the building block of a number of universes. Bhagwan woke up Mahamaya with the same intent. Mahakaal (male) impregnated Mahamaya (female) and as a result, millions of Pradhan (female) and Purush (male) were born from Mahamaya. As a focal reason of Bhagwan's desire, millions of universes were created by the mutation of Pradhan and Purush. Sweat that excreted from the body of Mahakaal (also called Nar) became known as 'Naar' which the wise sages consider as one of the vital building blocks of the creation of cosmos. This water (Naar) is not an ordinary water, but is radiant bliss from which, souls of the universes derive their pleasure. Mahapurush lied on the surface of Naar, the water excreted from his body in the form of sweat. Therefore, the Vedas call him Narayan. The wise scholars describe Narayan as beyond Maya, objectivity, knowledge, senses and the span of measurements; and supreme being, unchangeable, constant, eternal and soul of Akshar. Mahamaya transformed herself in a woman and started massaging the feet of Narayan lying on the water. Bhagwan Vaasudev, on Whose wish Mahapurush woke up, divinely dwells in everything that was created since then. (He is omnipresent in everything.) At the same time, He independently resides in His supreme abode as well. O Muni! I shall describe the process of creation of one universe among innumerable universes that are created just on Bhagwan's wish."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! Mahakaal or Akshar the source of the creation, the controller of Pradhan and Purush is eternal and beyond everything that is created through him. He dwells in Virat with its three bodies; Avyakrut, Sutratma and Virat and assumes the names of Ishwar, Brahm and Vishnu. Though being present in them at all times, he has a separate distinct identity of his own. As he is able to bring about the changes in the three properties of Maya, he is called Sagun Brahm. For the purpose of furthering the creation of the universe, Bhagwan Vaasudev grants him three potencies (Kaal, Karma and Svabhav) to continue the process of creation. With his potency of Kaal, Purush impregnates Pradhan (or Prakruti) by looking at her and the three properties of Maya - Satva, Raj and Tama become potent within Prakruti

(they were present but were dormant). With the potency of Svabhav, Purush brings about a fundamental change in three properties of Prakruti. The birth of Mahatatva from Prakruti is brought about with his Svabhav potency. O Muni! One of the first bodies of Vairaj is called Avyakrut, as it does not have limbs (and proper physical shape); is born from Prakruti. Ishwar is its controlling deity. Though it has three properties of Maya, it is unable to do anything; therefore, it is pure. The Shreemad Bhagwat describes Avyakrut Ishwar as a soul influenced by Maya. The three properties of Maya have now become dynamic within Prakruti with the proximity of Purush. Mahatatva emerges from Satva property of Maya. It is serene, radiant, unchangeable and starting point of the universe. It is also known as 'Chitt' and 'Sutra' due to its potency of thinking and ability to perform. Chitt is pure, constant and has an ability to attain God while Sutra is the life force behind every living being and force behind their power to perform. As every living being gains the ability to perform (to breathe) from Sutra, it is also called 'MahaPran'. Three types of 'Ahankar' - Satvik, Rajas and Tamas along with its ruling deity Rudra, emerge from Mahatatva. The three types of Ahankar have three traits; knowledge, ability to perform and accumulation of matter respectively. The combination of Avyakrut Ishwar and three types of Ahankar results in the second type of body called Sutratma or Hiranyagarbha."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! All souls with their Sukshma and Karan bodies, five subtle elements - Shabda, Sparsh, Roop, Ras and Gandh and five gross elements - Akash, Vayu, Agni, Jal and Pruthvi, dwell dormant within Sutratma. When Sutratma body becomes dynamic due to its Kaal, Karma and Svabhav potencies, the souls, according to their past deeds, prepare to emerge from Hiranyagarbha (they get bodies according to their past deeds and endure the consequences of their past deeds.) Just as the sky is known by three different names (Meghakash, Mathakash and Kumbhakash) according to its association with three distinct entities (respectively open space, house and a pitcher), Purush is known as Ishwar, Hiranyagarbha and Vaishvanar by due association with Avyakrut, Sutratma and Virat bodies. (He is a single entity. Just as a human body has three bodies - Sthool, Suksma and Karan; Purush has three bodies.) O Muni! I shall now narrate how this universe was created by (or emerged from) three types of Ahankar and the formation of Virat body."

Thus ends the 103rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Narayanmuni said, "O Nityanand Muni! Maya, Kaal, Karma, Svabhav, a gaze of Purush and Shree Hari's express desire are the causes of everything that is created. Mind and its ruling deity, the Moon, emerged from Satvik Ahankar. The mind is the cause of all thoughts and desires. Patience, imagination, compassion, the good and the bad, haste, delusion, art of discussion are some of the traits of the mind. The next to emerge from Satvik Ahankar were ten deities, namely Dig (the sides like East, West etc.), Vayu, Surya, Varun, Ashvinikumar, Agni, Indra, Vishnu, Mitradev and Prajapati of the five sense organs and five functional organs. These deities provide the power to the organs to function. Five sense organs - ears, skin, eyes, tongue and nose; five functional organs - tongue, hands, feet, excreting organs and genitals; intellect, Brahma and life forces (Pran) emerged from Rajas Ahankar. To hear, touch, see and undertake their respective functions are the traits of these ten organs. To provide the ability for the organs to undertake their functions, doubt, determination, memorise, conjecture, thinking and meditation are some of the properties of intellect. Some adherers of Kapil philosophy do not accept that anything emerged from Rajas Ahankar. Rather, they think Rajas Ahankar has only a subsidiary function to assist Satvik and Tamas Ahankar."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! Shabda (sound) is the first to emerge from Tamas Ahankar. Akasha, a receptacle for the sound, emerged from the sound. Sparsh (touch) emerged from Akash and Vayu (wind) emerged from touch. The wind has two traits; it spreads the sound and converts the sense of touch into reality. Roop (sight) emerged from Vayu and Tej (radiance) emerged from sight. Radiance (or light) reveals the vision and as it has emerged from the wind, it also has two traits of wind, sound and touch. Rasa (taste) emerged from Tej and Jal (water) emerged from Rasa. Water (or liquid) gives taste to everything and taste is the main trait of water. The traits of its predecessors (Akash, Vayu and Tej), sound, touch and sight are its other traits. Gandh (smell) emerges from the water and Pruthvi (earth or soil) emerged from Gandh. Smell is the main trait of the earth while sound, touch, sight and taste are its other traits. Thus the earth has all the five traits in it. The five gross (or base) elements - sky, wind, light, water and earth have emerged from the five senses - sound, touch, sight, taste and smell. Thus, logically, the senses are the mothers of the elements. The sky has only one trait - sound, but the elements that emerged from it progressively have the properties of its predecessors. Thus wind has two, light has three, water has four and the earth has five properties within. The traits of sound, touch, sight, taste and smell are to be absorbed by five sense organs - ears, skin, eyes, tongue and nose respectively."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Nityanand swami! Sage Vyas has described the other traits of the five senses and five base elements in great detail in the Mahabharat, which I shall reiterate for your knowledge. To shelter mind, organs and life forces, to occupy the space within and out, not being subsidiary to any other elements, to be present in all other elements, amorphousness and not subject to decomposition are some of the properties of Akash. To hold and transport the sound around, to transport sound and touch to its organs, to quiver plants, to gather dry leaves and hay, to help move stool and urine out of the body, to transport souls to its destination after the death of its body and to provide functionality to the organs are some of the important properties of wind. To remove oxides and thus give a sheen to gold and other precious metals (by heat), to cause pain, to ripen the grain, to reveal the true shape, size and colour of all objects, to remove chill and to generate thirst and hunger are some additional traits of light. To cool, to wet, to soften, to quench the thirst, to diminish the heat, to cook the food, to provide fluidity, to smoothen, to give mildness, to bestow life to everything, to beautify the objects (by cleaning) and abundance are extra properties of water. To absorb water, to divide or separate the other four elements, patience, an ability to endure, to feed the plants, stability, calmness, solidity, ability of not to be altered by the presence of other elements within and to provide imagination of God and an opportunity to give Him homage in a form of His Murti are other substantial traits of earth."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O Muni! Now listen to the properties of the five senses. The sound reveals the identity of the speaker and the meaning of what they want to convey. It is of seven types (Shadaj, Nishad, Rhishabh, Gandhar, Madhyam, Dhaivat and Pancham). The sounds of musical instruments, animals and plants are different. Similarly, touch is of various types such as cold, hot, happy, sad, lovely, soft, harsh, short, long, malicious and innocent. Sight (expressed as colours and shapes) is of sixteen types; white, black, red, blue, yellow, variegated, thick, thin, round, quadrangle, short, long, hideous, enchanting, soft and slippery. Though taste is only one, the six tastes; sweet, salty, hot, bitter, sour and astringent have become prevalent due to its association with various things. Though smell is a trait of soil, it has developed into a myriad variety due to its association with various objects. Such as an aroma of incense, burning of oily substances such as oil and Ghee, sweet as of lotuses and roses, sour due to its association with sour things such as tamarind and lemon, atrocious as of onions, garlic or asafoetida, stench as of drains, mixed, a distinct smell of burning of mixture of barley, sesame and Ghee in a sacred fire and stale as of stale food. Many sages have described these five senses in various ways."

Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan continued, "O Muni! The world is made up of twenty four building blocks; five gross elements, five sense organs, five functional organs, five senses, mind, intellect, Chitt and Ahankar. They are unable to create the universe on their own. After the entrance (in sublime form) of Bhagwan Vaasudev in each of them, they, from their molecules, create the universe. This universe is surrounded by eight covers; water, radiance, wind, sky, Ahankar, Mahatatva, Pradhan and Purush, each subsequent of them is ten times bigger than the preceding one. This and innumerable other universes float in the water (sweat) excreted from Mahapurush. After a passage of eons and with the express desire of Bhagwan, a body of Vairaj is formed. The wise scholar envisages six upper Loks (Bhur, Bhuvar, heaven etc.) in his torso and seven nether Loks (Atal, Vital, Patal etc.) in his posterior. This human body of Vairaj, from toes to head, holds all fourteen Loks while floating on water, he also lives in Satya Lok in a different form. He floats on the water which he himself has excreted with innumerable souls merged within his body for thousands of years. Gradually, the body takes a finite form and senses and organs sprout from it. The ruling deities of all ten organs such as the sun and moon come and dwell within his organs to enlighten them. Vairaj is variably described as Adhyatmik, Adhidaivik and Adhibhautik. As a controller of the senses, he is called Adhyatmik, as a controller of the ruling deities of the organs he is called Adhidaivik and as a controller of sense organs he is called Adhibhautik. He is unable to function in an absence of any of its three states; senses, organs and their ruling deities."

Shree Hari continued, "O swami! Vairaj's distinct form is its soul which is formless, indestructible, impenetrable and beyond the scope of senses. He is called Kshtragna and is the controller of everything and knower of everything. His day is equivalent to the passage of four Yugs (Satya, Treta, Dwapar and Kali) one hundred times (i.e. 4,320,000,000 earth years). His night is of the same length. This period of Viraj's twenty four hours is called 'Kalp'. With the help of Maya, Kaal, Karma, Svabhav and at behest of Bhagwan Shree Hari, the universe emerges from Vairaj. The senses, organs, their ruling deities and innumerable souls emerge from Vairaj Purush. Brahma rises from his navel at the beginning of each Kalp, a cycle of creation. Brahma continues the further process of creation. He single-mindedly creates bodies for the souls and their residences. Therefore, he has become known as the father of creation. The Devtas, sages, humans, animals, snakes, demons etc. populate the fourteen Loks which are encompassed within the body of Vairaj. At each Kalp, Brahma the creator rises from the navel of Vairaj on his own. O Muni! This creation is called Paadma as it was created by Brahma astride a lotus (Padma) which arose from Vairaj's navel. This Kalp is called Paadma Kalp. The scriptures narrate these two types of creation (one up to Brahma and one after Brahma).

Thus ends the 104th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 105

Bhagwan Narayanmuni said, "O Nityanand Muni! Developing unison with Vairaj, Brahma created trees, mountains, humans, animals, their habitats and food chains. The souls that have rose from Vairaj engage in the same type of karma as they were engaged in the previous Kalp. They initially engage in deeds they were engaged in at the time of annihilation. They get the bodies, intellect and means of livelihood as per their deeds - good, bad and mixed as in the previous Kalp. The souls, shackled in the cycle of Karma remain immersed in Karma. Sthool bodies of souls are made up of the five gross elements; Pruthvi, Jal, Tej, Vayu and Akash. One of the elements is predominant in the bodies while other four elements are secondary. The body in which Pruthvi is predominant, the other four elements; Akash, Vayu, Tej and Jal are present subordinately. Similarly in a body in which Tej is predominant, the other four are auxiliary. The souls get the bodies with one of the elements predominant and habitats and means of living is according to that type of body. The bodies which have Pruthvi predominant reside on the earth while those which have Jal predominant reside in the water. The bodies which have Tej predominant reside in the heavens and which have Vayu predominant reside in the open while the bodies which have Akash as its predominant element dwell in the sky. O Muni! In a nutshell, Bhagwan gives the souls the bodies they deserve."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O swami! The bodies have five types of by-products that have resulted from the five elements. Skin, flesh, muscles, bones and marrow are by-products of earth. Phlegm, sweat, blood, fat and bile are the by-products of water. Eyes, anger, digestive power, semen and body heat are the five wastes of Tej. Pran, Apan, Vyan, Udan and Saman are five types of winds present in the body. The cavities of ears, nostrils, mouth, heart and rectum are said to be the by-products of Akash. Thus each body consists of twenty five by-products and full of wastes such as stool and urine. It is unclean, yet the soul develops unhealthy attachment towards the body. O Muni! There is another form of body called Sukshma (sub conscious) present within Sthool (gross) body. It is made up of Pran (breathing air), organs, mind and intellect. Pran is of five types; Pran, Apan, Vyan, Udan and Saman. It is subdivided into other five catagories; Nag, Kurma, Kukal, Devdatt and Dhananjay. The air in the heart is called Pran, Apan is in the rectum, Saman in the navel, Udan in the throat and Vyan is present in the whole body. Pran ascend while Apan descends and helps push urine and stool out of the body. Saman forwards food and liquid through the oesophagus, stomach and intestines; Udan takes a soul when it leaves a body and transports it to the new body while Vyan helps movement of the body. Nag helps one speak, Kurma controls the movement of eyelids, Kukal creates hunger pangs, Devdutt helps one yawn and Dhanajay nourishes the body. Devdutt is within Pran, Kukal in Apan, Dhanajay in Saman, Kurma in Vyan while Nag is composite part of Udan. As the later five are composites of the former five, Pran is said to be of only five types."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! Let me now describe the ten Indriyas - organs. An organ by which the soul hears sound is called Kshotra Indriya (the ears). It is skin by which the soul feels touch and eyes which sees, tongue which tastes and speaks and nose which smells for the soul. Soul excretes stool with the anus and urine with the penis. These are ten external organs. The four: mind, wisdom, intellect and ego collectively are called Antahkaran. Some scholars do not differentiate between mind and wisdom, but in fact the soul doubts or raises questions with its mind and decides and determines with wisdom. Chitt (intellect) provides understanding and consciousness while ego causes self-importance and vanity. The combination of Indriyas, Pran and Antahkaran is called Sukshma body of the soul. Sthool and Sukshma bodies always remain together to perform all tasks. Independently, they just cannot function. O Muni! A third type of the body of soul called Karan body, is fused with Sukshma body. It is predominantly ignorant, eternal and is home of accumulated Karma of the soul. Just as a seed always has a sprout within it, Karan body always contains accumulated Karma. Just as smell and soil are inseparable, a soul and its Karan body are inseparable."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Nityanand swami! Affected by the three properties of Maya, the body has three states; Jagrat (fully conscious), Swapna (dream like semi conscious) and Sushupti (stupor like unconscious) in which a soul enjoys the objects of desire. Jagrat state is synonymous with and a result of a state of Vairaj Narayan by which he sustains the universe. A state in which the soul, taking the name as Vishva, enjoys the external or physical objects of desires taking pride in its Sthool body and with total involvement of external organs and its Antahkaran (mind, wisdom, intellect and ego) judiciously and according to its past deeds is called Jagrat state. It is predominantly influenced by Satva property of Maya and is said to be dwelling in eyes. When Raj trait of Maya ascends slightly in Jagrat state, the soul enjoys the objects of desire with delusion or false notions. This Jagrat state is said to be tainted with Swapna state. Similarly when Tama trait of Maya ascends in Jagrat state, the soul enjoys the same objects of desire indiscriminately without differentiating between the good and under the influence of distress or fatigue. Such awakened state is said to be tainted with Sushupti state. O Muni! Bhagwan Vaasudev Himself in a form of Vaishvanar rewards or punishes souls for the deeds done in awakened state. The knowledge to differentiate between three states; Jagrat, Swapna and Sushupti can be acquired from the pious saints and holy scriptures. One can realise Bhagwan and attain His supreme abode with this knowledge. Each of the three sub categories of awakened states are predominantly influenced by one of the three properties of Maya; Satva, Raj and Tama, which in turn affect his deeds. I shall describe the traits of three properties of Maya later on."

Shree Hari continued, "O swami! A state of body that is synonymous with, and as a result of the state of Vairaj as Hiranyagarbh, the creator is called Swapna state which is predominantly influenced by the Rajas property of Maya and it is said to be situated in the throat. A state in which the soul, taking the name Taijash, taking pride in its Sukshma body and with involvement of its Indriyas (organs) and Antahkaran enjoys the pleasures in his dreams as per its accumulated deeds and unfulfilled desires is called Swapna state. It is predominantly influenced by Raj property of Maya and is said to dwell in the throat. When a soul enjoys these pleasures judiciously and discreetly, as if fully in control of its dreams, it is said to be in a dream state influenced by the awaken state. Conversely, in a dream state tainted by Sushupti, a soul does not realise what dreams it is dreaming under the influence of Tama trait of Maya as if under the state of unconsciousness. Vaasudev Bhagwan in the form of Hiranyagarbh decides on rewards and punishments for the deeds done or enjoyed in the dream state. O Muni! Omnipresent Bhagwan grants the knowledge to the soul even in its dream state. Sushupti state is synonymous with the annihilation process of Vairaj in which the soul takes the name Pragna and enjoys the pleasures through Karan body. It is predominantly produced by Tama state of Maya and is said to be situated in the heart. The sensibilities of external organs and Antahkaran, the impressions on the mind (memory) of the past deeds which causes pain and pleasures and who is the actual doer and what it is doing is lost in this unconscious state. Sometimes, in such an unconscious state, the soul realises its identity (as a doer) due solely to its past good deeds. Such Sushupti state is said to be affected by Swapna state. Sometimes, the soul, though burdened by pain and grief, awakens suddenly and realises that what it is doing is against its grain (inherently wrong). This state of daze is said to be influenced by Satvik Jagrat state. O Muni! Bhagwan Shree Hari gives this knowledge to the soul to recognise his Sushupti state and mercifully grants it the power to return to the awakened state. The soul must realise Bhagwan with its sublime mind."

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "O Nityanand swami! Satva, Raj and Tama properties of Maya are the cause of these three states of the soul. Let Me explain the characteristics of these three. Happiness, contentment, true knowledge, satisfaction, piety, leniency, non violence, equanimity, chastity, honesty, charity, compassion, free from debt, working towards Moksha, theism, truthfulness, forgiveness, afraid of misdeeds, clarity of thought, discrimination between good and bad and devoid of ego, anger, lust, affection, conceit and self praise are some of the main characteristics of Satva property of Maya. Weakness of tastes, fondness of beauty, miserly towards even good causes, cruelty, conceit, worry, revenge, partiality, stealing, insincerity, anger, lust, harshness, ruthlessness, dissatisfaction, glee, interest in gossip, confrontation, interest in acquiring power, impatience, fickleness, lack of shame and disregard are some of the main characteristics of Rajas property of Maya. Anger, ignorance, undue affection, fear, poverty, lethargy, excess sleep, intemperance, incompetence, hypocrisy, malice towards religious persons, interest in music and dance despite having no knowledge of art and gratuitous interest in scents, clothes, material possessions, mundane pleasures and criticising others are some of the prominent traits of Tama property of Maya. O Muni! One must understand these three; Satva, Raj and Tama with their characteristics. Three types of body - Sthool, Sukshma and Karan with senses and their ruling deities; three states - Jagrat, Swapna and Sushupti; three properties of Maya - Satva, Raj and Tama collectively is called Kshetra (field). Aatma is called Kshetragna because it knows the Kshetra. Though it is omnipresent in the whole body, it is said to dwell in the heart explicitly. It is radiant, smaller than an atom and the knower. O Muni! I shall tell you about Kshetragna - a soul in more detail that is narrated in the Mokshadharma."

Thus ends the 105th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Narayanmuni said, "O Nityanand Muni! Penis is Adhyatma, Prajapati Adhidavat and copulation is Adhibhut. A man feels, sees or performs other task with Adhyatma (relevant organs) with the help of their Adhidaivat (ruling deities)."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! The mind is Adhyatma, the moon Adhidevta and thought process is Adhibhut. Wisdom is Adhyatma, Brahma Adhidaivat and power of determination is Adhibhut. Ego is Adhyatma, Rudra its Adhidevta and pride is Adhibhut. Chitt is Adhyatma, the soul is Adhidaivat and thinking and affection are Adhibhut. Of these three, Adhyatma and Adhidev are the causes, motives or the instruments of action, while the third, Adhibhut, is Karma or deeds. A man (or his soul) cannot comprehend or perform any tasks without the simultaneous presence of all three. Yet, the soul is a distinct entity from these three. Though it dwells in the heart, it is present in the whole body through its power of knowing. Subject matter or objects of enjoyment is smaller than external organs such as eyes and limbs. Mind is even smaller than objects of enjoyment; Buddhi (wisdom) is smaller than mind and the soul is even smaller than Budhhi. The entity that thinks it knows it has enjoyed the objects with organs powered by their ruling deities is the soul. A person can distinguish body (Kshetra) and soul (Kshetragna) with this knowledge. O Muni! A man remains shackled to Maya and unending cycle of death and rebirth until he understands and realises that his own true form is his soul which is distinct from the three types of his mortal body."

Thus ends the 106th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 107

Bhagwan Narayanmuni said, "O Nityanand swami! With the help of knowledge of Sankhya, one must realise that a soul is different from his three types of body (Sthool, Suksma and Karan) and Ishwar (Vairaj) is distinct from his body. A man should visualise his soul in unison with AksharBrahm. When that unison is realised, the soul becomes chaste and is called Brahm. He should worship Bhagwan Vaasudev with such a chaste soul with utmost devotion whilst observing Dharmas appropriate to his Varna, Ashram and gender. O Muni! A man must spend the rest of his life in Shree Hari's devotion. These Dharmas have been narrated in various scriptures. However, bear in mind that none other, however mighty or the Devtas, except omnipresent Bhagwan Vaasudev, should be worshipped. This is the pivotal premise of all the scriptures. Bhagwan Vaasudev is superior and master of all the Devtas including Brahma and all the liberated souls. The radiance equivalent to thousands of moons shining together emanate from His body; He is ever a teenager and beauty personified; He wears golden robes; His body aroma spreads far afield in all directions; He is playing a flute with His hand; He is wearing a grand bejewelled crown on His head, anklets, waistband, bangles, bracelets, armlets, earrings and other ornaments; His wide chest is marked with 'Shree Vatsa' insignia (a circular emblem to signify the presence of Laxmiji in His heart); His eyes are comparable to the petals of a lotus; His face always sporting a benign smile and looking benevolently at His devotees. Radhikaji and Laxmiji, worship Him with fine clothes and various ornaments, incense, lamp, sandalwood paste and flower garlands. O Muni! A person desirous of Moksha should visualise Bhagwan Vaasudev with these attributes in his heart and meditate upon Him. Bhagwan Vaasudev should be worshipped with the various imagined artefacts that are mentioned in various scriptures. Bhagwan should be invoked in His Murti and worshipped with available artefacts such as sandalwood paste, flower, incense etc. Devotee must mediate upon Bhagwan and chant His name a predetermined numbers of times at the end of Puja."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! There are nine types of devotion; listening to His Katha, singing His Kirtans, reminiscence His name and image, massage His feet, worship Him with physical artefacts, bow down to Him, serve Him humbly, be His friend and surrender everything to Him. Engaged in and serving Bhagwan in any of these nine ways increases the devotee's profound love in Him. The devotees Pran, Indriyas, mind and intellect concentrate exclusively in Him and he sees Bhagwan everywhere and in everything. He cannot only see his own eternal soul as chaste, radiant and elevated to the status of Brahm, but sees Bhagwan dwelling within his soul. Just as the sky is the support and fulcrum of other four base elements, Bhagwan really sustains the souls, Ishwar (Vairaj), Prakruti (Maya) and AksharBrahm. Just as sound resides in the sky, Bhagwan Purushottam dwells in AksharBrahm. The devotees see his own soul in its original form (radiant and eternal) as well as Bhagwan. He can see Bhagwan in person in front of him. Sankhya Shastra describes this elevated understanding as Para Bhakti (devotion par excellence). Bhagwan Shree Krishna describes such a devotee like thus in the Bhagvad Gita, 'A blissful person who has attained the status of Brahm do not fret and do not seek anything. He sees Me in everything. He develops My profound devotion.' O swami! Only by developing such a profound Bhakti in Bhagwan, one becomes free from the three properties of Maya and attains total bliss. Therefore, the wise people should try to emulate such a deep devotion."

Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan continued, "I have laid the principles of Sankhya philosophy as it is. Many ignorant people describe it in different manners. They assert wrongly that a soul and God is one and the same. Considering themselves as equal to Bhagwan Vaasudev, they indulge in all types of vile activities without fear or remorse. They either do not know the true meaning of the hymn - 'there is but only one and unique Brahm' or misinterpret to mislay the people for their selfish ends. A person seeking salvation from the shackles of this world must never accept their point of view that a soul and God is one. He should accept only the view that was propagated by Ramanand swami and attested by Myself. Bhagwan Purushottam Narayan, Who is also called ParBrahm; the souls such as that of humans, demons and the Devtas; Ishwar (Vairaj); Brahm (liberated souls) and AksharBrahm (His supreme abode) are distinct from each other. According to the Vedas and Vedant, this distinction is eternal and permanent. The saying of the Vedas; 'Brahmvetta attains PraBrahm' makes it very clear that even a person who has attained unison with AksharBrahm must worship only ParBrahm Parmatma. The Shrutis further says, 'As Parmatma pervades a soul, it is called His body. He controls the soul from within. A soul does not know Bhagwan. Only Bhagwan is the liberator. Akshar is called a body of Bhagwan as Bhagwan resides in Akshar. Bhagwan controls Akshar from within. Akshar does not know Bhagwan.' All these hymns attest that even Akshar and Bhagwan are not one and the same. This is further clarified in the Shreemad Bhagwat in a form of dialogue between Sage Maitreyi and Vidur. 'This universe is enveloped by seven (water, light, wind etc.) layers, each of them ten times bigger than the previous layer. This vast circular universe with the diameter of 400,000,000 miles appears as small as a molecule in front of Akshar. There are millions of such universes inside Akshar. ParBrahma Parmatma, the causes of all causes, dwells in AksharBrahm. When even such a mighty Akshar is not able to become equal to Bhagwan, what can be said of Vairaj and the other souls?"

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Nityanand swami! Whatever and whenever AksharBrahm and ParBrahm are said to be one, it is the opinion of people who have attained Nirvikalp Samadhi. It is not the absolute truth. Just as a person standing on the apex of Mountain Lokalok (a very high mountain) is not able to see or decipher the other smaller mountains, trees and people distinctly (he sees everything as a blur), a person who has attained Nirvikalp Samadhi (oneness with Bhagwan) sees the elements, souls, Ishwar and Parmatma as a single vision and not distinctively. Some people, who have not attained such an exalted state, take cue from this and wrongly understand that Brahm and ParBrahm are one and the same. They indulge in vile deeds and go to hell on their death. O Muni! Therefore, understand well that Bhagwan Vaasudev, the master of innumerable universes, and souls and Ishwar are not one and the same. The souls and Ishwar must worship the one and only supreme authority, which is Bhagwan Vaasudev. Whoever worships Bhagwan Vaasudev with total devotion attains Samadhi, which leads him to His supreme abode, Akshar."

Thus ends the 107th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 108

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, "O Nityanand Muni! Pran and Indriyas of a Mumukshu, whose devotion towards Bhagwan has become very profound, become totally focussed in Bhagwan. His body becomes inert and lifeless like a piece of wood. Due to the enslavement of his exclusive devotion towards Bhagwan, he is not able to enjoy any mundane objects of desire with his organs. He may wonder on the earth as if in trance seeing Bhagwan in everything and everywhere. He sees the whole world as Bhagwan and sees Bhagwan in the whole world. Let Me narrate the way such a Yogi attains Bhagwan's supreme abode at his death. Just before his death, a Yogi can see the radiance spreading from his Muladhar Chakra in his heart to Brahamrandhra. He can see this radiance emitting from the holes of ears and eyes and pores of the body. Just as the rays of light emit from a glasshouse, the radiance emanate from his body. He can hear the tinkling of small bells, chiming of large bells and beatings of the drums originating from the radiance. His overt and covert desires subside. The external radiance (normal light) and the radiance emanated from his body merge into a single radiance. Jagrat, Swapna and Sushupti states of his body is eliminated and the Yogi sees his body as radiant as his soul. He sees his soul asexual and without being supported by any type of body. He sees the radiance spreading in all direction and travelling beyond the earth and its seven enveloping layers and reaching to the end of the universe. The Yogi sees the thunder, lightening, whirlwind, rain and the heat of the sun, as severe as they happen at the time of annihilation, arising from within his Sthool body. The Yogi sees his body merging in the body of Vairaj. Bhagwan Shree Hari grants him a divine body with which he migrates to Akshardham and serves Bhagwan therein. This divine body is immortal; it is neither destroyed at the time of total annihilation nor is formed at the time of creation. The liberated Yogi remains in His supreme abode; beyond old age and death, sorrow and happiness, pain and pleasure, ascent and descent and serving Bhagwan until eternity."

Lord Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! I have imparted upon you the knowledge which is the nectar of the Upanishads and which is liberating. You should impart the same upon only the pious and religious devotees who have grown beyond desires and ego; are not indulging in violence, gossip, sins and are wise and not lascivious. This should not be revealed to lascivious, angry, greedy, cruel, egoist, atheists, envious, irreligious and other evil persons. O Muni! Whoever listens to this knowledge reverently whilst observing his Dharma indeed attains the wisdom which helps him attain Moksha."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Nityanand swami, upon hearing such profound knowledge, became very happy and all his doubts vanished. He saw his soul as radiant Brahm and Bhagwan Narayanmuni as ParBrahm and worshipped Him as the supreme master of the universe for the rest of his life."

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! Shivram Vipra (Brahmin) once asked Shree Hari humbly with folded hands, ‘O Bhagwan! I wish to listen to the Dharma (ethical behaviour) of all men. You sustain and propagate Dharma (religion). Dharma always remains with You. Whenever Dharma regresses, You manifest to nourish and defend it. Even the best of the scholars are not able to comprehend it fully. No one is more knowledgeable than You. I wish to hear Dharmas of the people from all four Ashrams and four Varnas separately.’ O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari was very pleased with Shivram’s question as He was sure that this question and its answer is benevolent for all people.”

Shree Narayanmuni said, “O Brahmin! You have asked a very benign question. The religion that is attested by the Vedas is the real religion. Anything contrary or anything that contradicts the Vedas is not religion. The Vedas have originated from Bhagwan Narayan Himself. Therefore, they profess unblemished and total truth. Many sages have woven the same principle in their Smrutis, and therefore, they are authentic as well. The fourteen; the Purans, Nyay, Mimansa, Dharmashastra (the collection of Smrutis), six branches of the Vedas such as Vyakaran and four Vedas; are the authentic scriptures which truly reflect religion. Sages Manu, Atri, Vishnu, Harit, Yagnavalkya, Angira, Yama, Apastamb, Samvart, Katyayan, Bruhaspati, Parashar, Ushnas, Shankh, Likhit, Daksha, Shaatatap and Vashistha have written Smrutis and should be considered the propagators of religion. Many other sages besides these have followed their footsteps and have written extensively on Dharma. Their works should also be considered authentic. O Vipra! Though the interpretations of Manu and other sages are correct, they are not suitable for all eras. The ethics mentioned by Sage Manu is relevant in Satya Yug, those by Sage Gautam is most relevant in Treta Yug, those of sages Sankh and Likhit are relevant in Dwapar Yug while those mentioned by Sage Parashar are relevant in Kali Yug. The ethics mentioned in the Mokshdharma section of the Mahabharat, the Shreemad Bhagwat and Bhagvad Gita are more relevant in the present Kali Yug. A man who follows the ethics mentioned in the Shrutis and Smrutis attains high fame in this world and Bhagwan's supreme abode after his death."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! Dharma can be categorised into six; Varna, Ashram, Varnashram, Gun (applicable only to the select few with certain conditions), Naimittik and common. Let Me define these six types of Dharma in short. The ethics that are applicable to the people of a specific Varna (such as Brahmins) is called Varna Dharma and the ethics applicable to a specific Ashram is called Ashram Dharma. The ethics that are specific to Varna and Ashram together (such as a Brahmin Brahamchari wears a waist chain made of Munj, a type of bead) is called Varnashram Dharma. The ethics applicable to people with specific virtues (such as a Kshatriya who has been crowned as a king should defend his subjects) is called Gun Dharma and ethics to be followed due to some reasons (such as atonement or repentance) is called Naimittik Dharma. The ethics that are universally applicable to all is called Samanya (common) Dharma (such as compassion, non violence, truth and forgiveness). Dharma followed in an unholy place becomes futile, while Dharma followed in a holy place becomes rewarding. The place where deers roam freely or the pure hearted devotees reside is called a holy land. Aryavart (India) is said to be a holy land. It is not necessary to inflict great pain to the body or need to have a lot of wealth to behave ethically. However, it is not possible to follow Dharma without having deep faith in it. Therefore people with faith should reside in a holy land and follow their Dharma sincerely to strengthen it, which helps them in the next life. The wealth or friends do not help in the next life in any way."

Thus ends the 1st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, “O Shivram! The four Varnas - Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra were created from the mouth, arms, thighs and feet of Vairaj respectively. I shall narrate the Samanya (common) Dharma of all people of four Varnas first. Non violence, Brahamcharya, renunciation, forgiveness, honesty, satisfaction, chastity, austerity, compassion, truthfulness, control of senses, discrimination between wrong and right, forbearance, tranquillity, self-restrain, fear of committing sins, aloofness from mundane pleasures, servility towards devotees, staying away from the company of evil, empathy towards all living beings, piety, understanding the pains of birth and death, listening to Bhagwan’s Katha and Kirtans, reminiscing Bhagwan at all times and serving Shree Hari in any which way are the common ethics the people of all Varnas and Ashrams must observe. Equanimity, self-restrain, austerity, cleanliness, contentment, patience, modesty, honesty, non violence, affability, truthfulness, fortitude, compassion, charity, fear of committing sins, pious behaviour, veneration, leniency, absence of envy and spite, knowledge of Aatma and Parmatma, accepting supremacy of Bhagwan over everything, theism, studying the scriptures and equability towards all are twenty four ethics or virtues the Brahmins should have. Bravery, patience, strength, forbearance, agility, generosity, vigour, composure, enthusiasm, respect, ability to win, ability to defend self and subjects, suppression of foes, dexterity in all undertakings, interest in weapons and carriages, gratification, charity, veneration of Brahmins and Bhagwan, treatment of the subjects and refugees with compassion and never eloping from a battlefield are the main virtues the Kshatriya should have. People of Vaishya Varna should have the following ethics (Dharma) or virtues. Total belief in the existence of heaven, hell and the supreme abode, agility in earning wealth, honesty, serving Brahmins, supporting other three Varnas financially, reverence in guru, interest in agriculture and cattle and ingenuity. People of Shudra Varna should sincerely serve the people of above three Varnas and being content with the wealth earned therewith.”

Shree Hari continued, “O Vipra! Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya collectively are called Dwij as they have undergone Upanayan (sacred thread) Sanskar. All Shudras, due to ineligibility to undergo Upanayan Sanskar are classed as a single Varna. Dwij means one who is born twice. The first birth is to be born in a pious clan and the second birth is upon undergoing the Sanskars mentioned in the Vedas. Garbhadan (impregnation), Punsvan (at three months of pregnancy), Simant (at six months of pregnancy), Jatkarma (natal rites at birth), Naamkaran (naming), Nishkraman (first outing at three months), Annprashan (feeding solid food at six months), Chaulkarma (shaving head at three years), Karnavedh (holing the ears), Vratadesh (or Vidhyarambh, the start of education at five to six years), Upnayan (sacred thread ceremony at eight years), Vedarambh (study of the Vedas, soon after Upanayan), Keshant (first shave at sixteen years), Samavartan (graduation, completion of studies), Vivah (marriage) and Agnihotra (acceptance and maintaining the sacred fire) and Tretragni (or Antyesti, funeral or final rites) are the sixteen Sanskars; details of which should be learnt from Vyas Smruti. Male Brahmins, Kshatriyas and Vaishyas should undergo these Sanskars accompanied by the Vedic hymns. The females of three Varnas should undergo ten Sanskars, the first nine and Vivah accompanied by the Vedic hymns. Male and female Shudras should undergo the same ten Sanskars but without the Vedic hymns provided they are born in a pure clan and have forsaken meat, alcohol, hunting etc. People born out of wedlock or mixed marriages are called AsatShudra and they should undergo only one Sanskar of Vivah. O Brahmin! The Sudras are allowed to perform Yagnas and other religious rites but they should do so under the expert guidance of the Brahmins and without using the Vedic hymns (they may use hymns of the Puranas). They may also listen to the Puranas and Mahabharat from the Brahmins. Even the women underwent Upnayan Sanskar and had the right to learn the Vedas and chant the Gayatri hymn in the bygone eras of Satya, Dwapar and Treta Yug. The women of those eras were very intelligent and scholars. They were of two types. The first type, Brahvadini, remained in their homes, kept sacred fire and maintained total Brahamcharya. The second type, Sadhyovadhu, got married soon after undergoing Upnayan Sanskar. However, women in Kali Yug are forbidden for Upnayan Sanskar and study of the Vedas due to diminished intelligence."

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram Vipra! Brahmins should earn their livelihood by these three methods; teaching, guiding others to perform (or perform on their behalf) Yagna and other religious rites and accepting the alms from pious devotees. Those Brahmins who find seeking alms unacceptable may sustain themselves by the other two means while others who find fault in all three may sustain themselves by collecting grains from the field. There are another four means of livelihood for Brahmins; farming or business that is not forbidden or prohibited, accept without asking or seeking, asking for food daily that is enough for just that day and picking up grains from a field after harvesting or from outside the granary or shop. These four are superior to the others in the reverse order (the last one is the best). Kshatriya should earn their livelihood by joining the army, protect the homes and people from thieves, fighting battles and rule justly. Vaishyas should engage in farming, animal husbandry, trade and business and lending money to earn their livelihood. O Brahmin! Shudras should engage in serving people of the other three Varnas and trade of milk, honey, oil, salt, etc. commodities. Trading in meat or alcohol, consuming meat or alcohol, adultery and theft are the four means by which Shudras transgress from their Dharma. Yagnavalkya and other sages attest these ethics in their Smrutis. After telling you the Dharma of four Varnas, let Me narrate to you the Dharma of people of four Ashrams."

Thus ends the 2nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O wise Brahmin! There are four Ashrams; Brahamcharya, Grahastha, Vanprastha and Sanyas for people of the first three Varnas. Some sages do not recommend Sanyas Ashram for Kshatriyas and Vaishyas. Let Me start with Dharma of Brahmcharis of three Varnas. A child, who may have undergone the first nine Sanskars, becomes Dwij only after undergoing Upanayan Sanskar. A Brahmin child should undergo Upanayan Sanskar eight years after conception or birth; a Kshatriya child at an age of eleven years and a Vaishya child should be given Upavit at the age of twelve. Some sages opine that if a child is very bright, a Brahmin could be given Upavit at the age of five, Kshatriya at the age of eight and a Vaishya at the age of nine. According to Manu Smruti a scholar Brahmin child with a strong desire and interest in austerity and studies may be given Upavit at the age of five, a Kshatriya child desiring strength may be given Upavit at the age of six while a Vaishya child with a strong desire of wealth may be given Upavit at the age of eight. All children of all three Varnas have to undergo Upanayan Sanskar as prescribed in the scriptures. A Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya male child should be given Upavit in spring, summer and autumn respectively. Alternatively, a Brahmin may be given Upavit between months of Magh and Jeth. Upanayan Sanskar must not be conducted in the month of a child's birth, day of his birth and at a time when the Nakshatra at the time of his birth is prevalent. Any religious rites of the eldest son or daughter should not be conducted in the month of Jeth. However, according to the Sages Garg, Bhargav and Shaunak, religious rites may be performed in the month of Jeth provided it is done in the opposite fortnight of a child's birth. That means a child born in Sud (the bright) fortnight may undergo a ritual in Vad fortnight. When the planet Jupiter is strong; when the planet Venus is weak and the Sun is in Pisces constellation in the month of Chaitra or on any day that is auspicious for a wedding are auspicious days for Upanayan Sanskar. Rituals should be carried out before noon. Upanaya Sanskar should be performed by the child's father, grandfather, uncle or brother in that order in the absence of the previous one."

Shree Hari said, "O Vipra! A Janoi (Upavit) should be made of continuous three cotton threads while sitting in a holy place. Its length should be equal to ninety six circular turns around the base of four fingers of the right hand. There should be only one knot in the whole Janoi (to connect the two ends). Though the cotton Janoi is the best option for all Dwij, some propose a Janoi made of jute fibre for Kshatriya and of hair of the goats for Vaishya. Two separate Janoi should be worn to denote the rites of Shrutis and Smrutis and the third one in lieu of the upper garment (Janoi of a total of nine threads). Brahamcharis and Tyagi saints should wear a single Yagnopavit (of three threads) while a Grahastha and Vanprastha should wear two Upavits (six stringed). A Janoi should go over the shoulder and pass over the navel. It should not be too short or too long.

Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya should wear a waist girdle (a narrow stringed belt) made of Munj (a type of grass), Kash (a type of grass) and jute respectively. The waist girdle should be triple stringed and as per the tradition of their respective clans. A wooden staff the size of the child's height, a staff as long as reaching his forehead and a staff as long as reaching his shoulder should be given to a Brahmin, Kshatri and Vaishya Brahamchari respectively. It should be made of Palash or Bili; Kher and Pilu, Pipal or Umbar (all various types of trees) respectively. Loin cloth of a deer and goat are most suitable for a Kshatriya and Vaishya Brahamchari respectively. A wise guru, sitting in the North east of the sacred fire, should explain the meaning of the Gayatri hymn to a Brahamchari sitting facing the West. A new Brahamchari, wearing an Upavit, waist girdle and deerskin loin cloth should do a Pradikshina of the sacred fire before proceeding to seek alms. While seeking alms Brahmins, Kshatriya and Vaisya Brahamcharis should use the word 'Bhavati' at the beginning, middle and at the end of the yell of asking for alms. (Brahmin should yell 'Bhavati Bhiksham Dehi', Kshatriya 'Bhiksham Bhavati Dehi' and Vaishya 'Bhiksham Dehi Bhavati'. This is to let the benefactor know the Varna of an alms seeker."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram Vipra! Until a child is given an Upavit by his father, he may wander about, speak and eat whatever he chooses. After undergoing Upanayan Sanskar, he becomes known as Dwij Brahamchari and has to abide by certain restrictions and should live at his guru's home for his education. He must never be without an Upavit, waist girdle, wooden staff, loin cloth and Kamandalu (pitcher for water) at any time. He should pay attention and learn the Vedas from his guru. He should always bow down to his guru at the beginning and end of his learning sessions. A guru is permitted to use corporal punishment to his inattentive or disruptive disciple. A guru should hit on the lower body of his disciple gently but never on the head or chest. A child should be nestled cosily for the first five years, strictly punished (if necessary) for next ten years and he should be treated as a friend from the age of sixteen years. A Brahamchari must control his senses and organs during period of his studies. O Brahmin! There are four cornerstones of Brahamcharya. A guru should never be criticised or insulted and should be accorded the same respect that is due to one's parents. A Brahamchari should treat a wife and children of one's guru with equal reverence, control his latent senses and maintain internal and external purity. He must serve his guru sincerely bearing in mind that the favours of his guru can never be repaid. He should endeavour to please his guru with mind, speech, body, deeds and wealth. Acquisition of knowledge, truthfulness, forgiveness, afraid to commit sins, equanimity, patience, austerity, absence of passion, self-restrain, charity, lack of envy and performing Yagna and other rituals are considered the virtues. Greed, lust, anger, lamentation, disfavour, undue affection, desires, envy, covetousness, disservice, denigration and reproach are considered vices. A Brahamchari, discarding these twelve vices and acquiring the twelve virtues, should concentrate his efforts in learning the Vedas."

(sacred fire) and the sun at dawn and dusk and chant Gayatri hymn and bow down to his guru and elders each evening. A Brahamchari who likes to bow down and serve his elders has his knowledge, intelligence, age and power strengthened many fold. He should seek alms from the homes of the householders each morning and evening and offer it to his guru before taking a portion of it by his guru's permission. Gluttony must be avoided as it is unhealthy, shortens the life span, is generally frowned upon and leads one to hell. He must not visit the same household often to seek alms. He must observe his Niyams sincerely and eat only after offering prayers. He should always stand with folded hands in front of his guru and obey his instructions. He must not sit improperly in front of his guru and must not mimic his style of gait, speech and gestures. He must always answer back or punish the people foul mouthing his guru and if he is unable to do so, he must leave the scene but never hear it. He must not venerate his guru from a distance, when angry or in the vicinity of his wife. He must never answer back to his guru or speak loudly with him. He should always be ready to serve his guru like fetching drinking water, firewood, flowers, tooth twig, bathing him or massaging him with oils. A Brahamchari must never step over a flower garland taken off by his guru or his bedding, footwear, seat, shadow or cot. He must always be honest to his guru and not venture anywhere without his prior permission. He must not sit with legs spread, show off his strength, sleep or laugh loudly in front of his guru. He should walk fast behind his fast pacing guru and walk slowly behind if his guru is walking slowly, must never address his guru with his name and never speak unless told to do so by his guru. A Brahamchari must always control his senses and organs, be serene, maintain inner and external cleanliness and be soft spoken in the presence of his guru."

Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan continued, "O Shivram! A Brahamchari must always avoid listening to, speak about, look at, speak to, play with, covet or desire women in general and in particular touch women. He must forsake lascivious and transgender men just like women. As the wife and son of his guru are as reverent as his guru, they must never be insulted. However, he must not massage, bathe, comb hairs or touch the wife of his guru. Instead of touching her feet directly, a Brahamchari must bow down on the ground from a distance to show his reverence. Maternal aunts, paternal aunts, wives of his brothers and uncles, step mother and sisters should be considered as reverent as the wife of his guru. A Brahamchari must not desert or abandon his guru who has imparted knowledge (Vedic or spiritual) upon him due to ignorance or for wealth and never insult him or allow anyone to insult him. However, as Manu has said a guru who has digressed from the path of religion, is overwhelmed by his ego and has no belief or does not know how to perform religious rites should be discarded immediately."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! A Brahamchari who fears the crowd just like a snake, gluttony like death and women like demons succeeds in his quest for acquisition of knowledge. Gambling, looking after (try to keep clean) his books, liking for wandering in the parks and gardens, talking with women, lethargy and sleep are the six hindrances in acquisition of knowledge. While staying at his guru's home, a Brahamchari should have a regular bath and veneration thrice a day and never associate with the sinners. He should avoid flower garlands, sandalwood paste, Kumkum, scents, looking into a mirror, massaging his body with oils, gambling, music, dance, consumption of alcohol, meat, garlic, etc. and brushing his teeth vigorously. He should overcome greed, lust, anger and fear. He should not sleep at dusk, dawn, during the day, before one and half hours after dusk and should wake up before at least one and a half hours before dawn. He should not indulge in back biting, watching dance, hearing erotic tales and speaking lies. A Brahamchari should not wear any footwear, chew or smoke tobacco and sleep on a bed. He should follow his daily routine including baths sincerely."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Vipra! A Brahamchari should start learning the Vedas at a time that is in line with the traditions his family follows depending on their respective branches of the Vedas. A Brahamchari should start studying the Vedas at any morning of the month of Shravan; at noon on Purnima of Shravan; and on a day when the Sun in Hasta Nakshatra prevails in the month of Shravan for a Brahamchari of a clan whose branch is RigVed, SamVed and YajurVed respectively. A Samvedi (whose branch is SamVed) Brahamchari may start studying the Vedas on any day the Sun is in Hasta Naksahtra or on a Panchmai if the eclipse occurs on Purnima. The study should not commence on a day if an eclipse is to occur before midnight on that day. A Dwij Brahamchari should conclude his study of the Vedas on a day in a month of Posh when Rohini Nakshatra prevails. He should go to the outskirts of the village near a body of water such as a lake and formally end the period of study following which he should venerate his guru and sages. Some scholars are of the opinion that the conclusion should be done on the day the study was started. A guru should check his disciple's behaviour, patience and lack of ego before teaching him the Vedas and the other scriptures. A Brahamchari student should complete the study of one, two, three or four Vedas as per his inclination and give a suitable gift to the guru. This formal end of study is called Samavartan Sanskar."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram Vipra! After completion of studies, a Brahamchari should introspect to see his level of Vairagya. A Brahamchari with a low level of Vairagya should enter Grahastha Ashram, with a moderate Vairgya should enter Vanprastha Ashram and one with a high level of Vairagya should enter Sanyas Ashram. The Brahamcharis can be classified into four categories; Savitra, Prajapatya, Braahm and Naisthik. A Brahamchari who observes Brahamcharya Vrat for three days after undergoing Upanayan Sanskar is called Savitra. One who observes Brahamcharya for one year while learning the Vedas is called Prajapatya Brahamchari. A Brahamchari who observes Brahamcharya Vrat while studying the Vedas or for twelve years is called Braahm and one who observes Brahamcharya for the entire life is called Naisthik Brahamchari. O Vipra! They are considered progressively better in this order."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Dwij must undergo Upanayan Sanskar once again for chastity after inadvertent consumption of alcohol or meat in any form, including in medicines. A Brahamchari residing at guru's home must observe all his Niyams properly, failing which he must undergo suitable atonement. He must not go to seek alms and not venerate a sacred fire for seven continuous days for digression of his Brahamcharya Vrat. For the following transgressions he must take a bath, sit in a holy place and chant the Gayatri hymn one thousand times; eating food of the sinners, looking at a nude woman, sleeping at dusk, dawn or during the day, sleeping nude, strolling in a cemetery, travelling on a horseback or vehicles, disobeying the reverent, eating without wearing Janoi, accepting jewels, killing scorpions or snakes and chopping a tree. I shall narrate suitable atonements for other transgressions later on."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Naisthik Brahamcharis, Vanprasthis and Sanyasins do not need to observe Sutak for any death in their family. Brahamchari needs only to bath after performing the funeral rites of his guru, Acharya, mother and father. He must never forgo his daily routine of venerations. He should perform Shradhdh while following his Niyams. O Vipra! After narrating Dharma of people in Brahamcharya Ashram, I shall narrate their daily routine which they should follow properly."

Thus ends the 3rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! Snaan (bath), Sandhyopasana (veneration at dawn and dusk), Japa (chanting Bhagwan's name), Homa (offerings to the sacred fire), Swadhyay (study of scriptures), Pitrutarpan (oblation to the dead ancestors) and Devpuja (worship of Bhagwan) are the six rituals a Dwij Brahamchari must perform daily. No ritual may be carried out without having a bath in the morning. Open bodies of water such as a river, lake or well is considered a better option for bath than one's home. Taking either clean clay, sesame seeds, Darbh or cow dung and having his Shikha tied up in a knot, a Varni should enter the water. He should think of Shree Hari in his heart and chant hymns addressed to Varun (water) Devta while scrubbing himself with any of the four abovementioned to clean himself thoroughly. He should offer Tarpan as a part of Snaan before putting on fresh clothes. He should do Achman as a part of his morning worship. O Brahmin! One should not use sesame seeds for Tarpan in the morning. Kush (a type of grass) and water held in the hands should be used instead. Having a bath with hot water is considered futile, however, the old or infirm are allowed to use hot water. Using hot water is especially prohibited on Sundays, Amavasyas, the days of Sankranti (a day the Sun moves from one constellation of the Zodiac to the next), eclipses or Vrat. Weak Varnis should have a bath without wetting their head and ill Brahamcharis may use a sponge bath. Ancient sages recommend some alternatives for a main bath depending on place, time or other detrimental circumstances. Dipping Darbh blades in water and sprinkling dripping water on the body while chanting hymns addressed to Varun Devta is called Braahm Snaan. Smearing the ashes from toe to the head is called Agneya Snaan. Letting the body be sprinkled by the dust thrown up by the passing herd of cows is called Vayavya Snaan. Standing under the rain in sunshine is called Divya Snaan. Imagining having a bath while meditating upon Bhagwan is called Manas Snaan. O Vipra! These six types of bath are recommended only for the infirm; all able bodied Brahamcharis must take a proper bath by wetting their body in a body of water. The morning bath must be completed before dawn, even if it means rushing through while a bath at midday may be taken at leisure."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! Brahamcharis should do an Urdhvapundra Tilak with Gopichandan or Tripundra Tilak with ashes and perform their morning veneration as per the traditions of their clans. Ancient sages opine that Sandhya start at the last two Ghadi (48 minutes) of the night (before sunrise) and end with the appearance of sunrays on the horizon. Making out a shape of an ear of a cow (by keeping the first three fingers together and palm arched inward), a Brahamchari should hold some water in his palm. He should sip water from his palm making sure that thumb and little fingers are not touching each other and any other fingers. Water should pass through the base of thumb while sipping. The base of thumb contains Braahm Tirth, base of the first finger holds Pitru Tirth, the base of the little finger holds Pajapatya Tirth, the tips of the fingers hold Daiva Tirth and the centre of the palm contains Agni Tirth and Chandra Tirth. Different Tirth are used in different rituals such as Achman, oblation to Pitris and veneration. Achman must always be done through Braahm Tirth. After doing Achman thrice, a Brahamchari should perform three Pranayam, followed by chanting of Gayatri hymn with an appropriate breathing exercise. Pressing his nose with five fingers of the right hand and holding his breath is called Pranav Mudra, which cleanses away all sins of a Grahastha and Vanprasthi; while holding his breath by pressing his nose by thumb, ring and small fingers, called Omkar Mudra, is recommended for Brahamcharis and Sanyasins. The morning veneration - Sandhya and meditation of Goddess Gayatri (the chant of Gayatri hymn) must be concluded before sunrise. Goddess Gayatri, the wife of Brahma, should be visualised as riding a swan, red complexioned eight years old attired in red clothes, holding Rig Veda in her lap, Kamandalu and garland of red flowers in her hands and venerated by Sage Vyas. A group of demons called 'Mandeha' torment the rising sun every day. They cannot be defeated by other Devtas but are killed by oblation of water. However, due to a boon from Brahma, they become alive the next day to torment the sun. Therefore, Dwij must perform Sandhya (veneration) daily. A Dwij who fails to offer three Arghya to kill the Mandeha demons and assist the sun becomes a demon himself. He should offer Arghya (oblation of water) by letting water drop on earth and venerate the sun daily at morning, noon and evening. He should venerate the sun with folded hands in the morning, with hands normally dangling at the sides at noon and with hands folded like a bud of lotus in the evening. (Just as the morning Sandhya is addressed to Goddess Gayatri) Sandhya at noon is addressed to Rudrani (wife of Rudra). She should be visualised as young and fair complexioned, riding a bull, wearing white clothes and ornaments, adorned with white flower garlands, having Yajur Veda in her lap, holding a trident in her hand and venerated by Sage Kashyap. O sinless Brahmin! A Dwij Brahamchari must conduct this Sandhya in the eighth Muhurt of the day, around noon (sunrise is nominally set at 6 o'clock to save problems arising out of varying actual time). Aged and dusky complexioned four armed Saraswati is the reigning Goddess of evening Sandhya. She should be visualised as radiant, riding an eagle, with Sam Veda in her lap and venerated by Sage Vashishtha. Morning Sandhya done at the time when the stars are still visible is said to be the best, done at a time when the stars have disappeared before sunrise is considered median and done after the actual sunrise is considered the worst. Midday Sandhya done before actual noon (nominally 12 o'clock) is deemed the best, done at noon the median and done after midday the worst. Similarly an evening Sandhya done in twilight is deemed the best, after sunset but before appearance of the stars the median and done after the stars become visible the worst. O Brahmin! A Dwij who does not perform three Sandhyas while being engaged in worldly affairs is akin to the dead and like a Shudra. He becomes a dog in his next life."

Thus ends the 4th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A Dwij should chant Gayatri hymns with Pranav (sound OM) thrice a day. Om is a singular sound of Brahm and is the source of the Vedas from which Gayatri hymn is sourced. There is no sound beyond Om. Pranav is made of three letters (a, u and m) and just as a tree is present in a seed, the Vedas are present in Pranav. Pranav pervades three Loks (earth, hell and heaven), three properties of Maya (Satva, Raj and Tama), three periods (past, present and future or morning, noon and evening), three fires (Pavak, Pavaman and Suchi or three kinds of sacrificial fires) and three Vedas (Rig, Sam and Yajur). Therefore, Gayatri hymn must be preceded by Omkar. One should know five elements of a hymn; its originator (or author), meter, reigning deity, reward and any obstacle and etymology (history and meaning) from the scriptures. Gayatri is nectar of all hymns and indeed the Vedas personified chanting of which is rewarded by great and mystical powers. It is comparable to the Vedas. One's effort at studying the scriptures is futile if he has not learnt the Gayatri hymn. Once when Brahma was weighing the Vedas and the Gayatri hymn on balancing scales, he found the scales tipping in favour of the Gayatri hymn. Gayatri is reverent to all the Devtas, is the greatest hymn, is prevalent all over the world, removes one's sins, is a mother of all hymns and indeed the Vedas;, and chanting of which grants one all happiness in this and the next life. Vashishtha and other sages attained God and the Devtas were able to defend three Loks by chanting the Gayatri hymn. Just as there is no greater fortune than having Vairagya, just as there is nobody superior to Bhagwan Keshav, there is no greater hymn to chant than the Gayatri hymn. All Dwij should regularly chant the Gayatri hymn. Indeed, the scriptures call it Gayatri because it protects its chanter. Many sages writing commentaries on the Vedas opine that as it protects the life of its chanter, it is called Gayatri."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Agni is its mouth; Brahma its head; Shree Hari its heart; Rudra its armour; the suns and moon its eyes; earth its navel; sides (east, west etc.) its duodenal cavity; hell its feet; Saraswati its tongue and Sankhya is its lineage. Gayatri hymn has twenty four letters and each letter has a different meter, stance, ruling deity, ability to wash away sins and resultant rewards. Knowing all these elements from an expert guru, a person wishing to do Japa of the hymn should sit on a grass mat, hold a few blades of Kush in his hands and meditate upon Shree Hari keeping his senses and organs under control. Imagine Gayatri hymn as Prakruti and Pranav as Purush. Union of Prakruti and Purush fulfils expected rewards. Omkar should be added at the beginning and end of the Gayatri hymn starting with 'Bhurbhuvah Swah'. O Brahmin! Three types of Japa; Vachik, Upanshu and Manas are increasingly better in that order. Japa with clearly audible syllables according to their meter is called Vachik. Japa done with lips moving but in such a hushed tone that it is audible only to the self is called Upanshu, while Japa done in total silence in which tongue, teeth and lips do not move at all is called Manas and is considered the best. Japa should be done in one's mind without moving lips, teeth, head, neck and limbs. Otherwise, its reward is taken away by demons, spirits, Yaksha and Pitris. One must not haste at all while chanting; not look around aimlessly or allow his mind to wander about. He must be patient and guard against falling asleep as sleep is the greatest hindrance in chanting. One must not chant while walking, talking, laughing, looking around, moving hands about or not sitting properly. He must make sure that his head and torso is covered, mind is focussed on the task at hand and nobody is able to hear the sound of Japa. Gayatri Japa in the morning should be done standing facing the East until the Sun rises, while in the evening he should stand facing the West until the stars become visible. The noon Japa can be done either standing up facing the sun or seated facing the East. He should keep his hand on his navel, heart and in front of his nose while chanting the Gayatri hymn in the morning, noon and evening respectively."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! Japa of Gayatri should be done regularly which washes away the sins. Chanting hymn a thousand times is the best, hundred times median and ten times the worst. Chanting ten times washes away the sins of this life; chanting hundred times washes away the sins of the past life and chanting one thousand times washes away the sins of past three lives. Japa should always be done with three elements; Pranav, verse and its etymology. Chanting the Gayatri hymn on the banks of a lake or river, outside one's home, in temple or in a forest relieves one from the cesspool of his sins just as a snake becomes free from its skin. Chanting the hymn one Lac (100,000) times while observing Brahamcharya, being compassionate towards all living beings and overcoming gluttony redeems him from all his sins. Goddess Gayatri herself grants rewards when Japa is accompanied by Homa. The offerings of sesame seeds mixed with Ghee in Homa washes away all sins. A person seeking serenity should offer barley, wishing longevity should offer Ghee and one wishing for specific rewards or fulfilment of desires should offer rapeseed in the sacred fire whilst chanting the Gayatri hymn. A person seeking divine powers should offer milk, wishing to defend himself from the vagaries of the planets should offer twigs of the trees which discharge white sap and one seeking wealth and opulence should offer seeds of lotus or Bila plants. A person desiring a son or knowledge should offer milk pudding, desiring good health should offer tender Durva (a type of grass) mixed with milk and one wishing for good fortune should offer Guggle (a kind of fragrant gum) to the sacred fire. An offering of Durva and milk protects the country with untoward calamities. Homa of one Lac offerings or Purascharan of 240,000 Gayatri hymns fulfils all of one's desires. O Shivram! Any Dwij who has undergone the tenth Sanskar (of Upanayan) must forsake lethargy and chant the Gayatri hymn daily as per his ability and as I have just narrated."

Thus ends the 5th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A Dwij who misses veneration at the time of his Sandhya due to lassitude must atone for his lapse. He should take a bath immediately, do Achman, chant the Gayatri hymn one hundred and eight times and perform veneration. One may perform his midday veneration in the morning if there is some pressing engagement at noon, but this must not be followed regularly. A Dwij who does not regularly perform veneration each morning and evening is considered a Shudra and should be boycotted from religious functions. This practice must not be stopped even during Sutak when one should perform Mansi veneration and Arghya should be offered without Kush and water. The rewards of Sandhya performed at one's home, in a cowshed and on a riverbank are progressively ten times better than the previous one. The reward of Sandhya performed at the union of two rivers is hundred times better while one performed in front of Bhagwan is innumerable times better than the one done at the banks of an ordinary river."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Sandhya should be concluded with Homa. Homa done personally at the conclusion of Sandhya is more rewarding than one done by someone else on his behalf (e.g. when travelling about) except a priest, his guru, son, brother, nephew or a king. The reward of Homa performed by anyone else on his behalf is halved. Except in an emergency or in a detrimental time, a Dwij must not perform a partial Homa. Homa should be performed with washed hands, a calm and focussed mind and eyes and other organs under control. He should wear a ring in his right hand. Rings of Darbh, copper, silver and gold are considered progressively better. 'Pavitri', a gold ring with Bhagwan Narayan's name etched on it, is considered very holy and is a useful appendage in all rites. Wearing a gold ring on a ring finger, a silver ring on an index finger and a Darbh ring in a little finger makes a man pure and holy. The Dwij should bow down to the sacred fire and other Devtas, offer them Naivedhya and flowers and greet guru and elders at the conclusion of Havan. He should then proceed to a secluded place, sit on a grass mat and learn the Vedas. He should regularly read the four Vedas with their branches (Siksha, Vyakaran etc.), Puranas, Mahabharat, Ramayan etc. to deepen his knowledge. He must utter Omkar at the beginning and the end of his study sessions."

Bhagwan Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O Brahmin! A Dwij should perform Tarpan (libation) of the Devtas and sages with rice and barley mixed in water and Pitris with water and sesame seeds and according to their family traditions. Tarpan of the Devtas should be performed facing the East; of the sages facing the North and of Pitris facing the South. Pitris should be offered sesame seeds and water from Pitri Tirth (see chapter 4) of the right hand as Tarpan. Yama (Devta of death), Brahma and other Devtas should be offered Tarpan from Daiv Tirth. Saying 'Let the whole world from Brahma be satisfied', he should place the mixture of water and barley on the ground. (Contrary to the practice of wringing worn clothes at the end of Tarpan) Clothes should not be wrung or soaped on Baras, Chaudas, on a day when the sun is moving from one Rashi to another and during the period of Shradhdh. Upavit should be worn normally for Tarpan of the Devtas, should be wound around the neck for Tarpan of Rishis and should be placed on a right shoulder for Tarpan of Pitris. The hymns that are appropriate for each category should be chanted during Tarpan. Water should pass through Daiv Tirth, Braahm Tirth and Pitri Tirth before being allowed to drop on the ground as Tarpan rites for the Devtas, Rishis and Pitris respectively. He should hold a blade of Darbh (with roots) with the right hand (left hand holding the right at the wrist), dip its tip in water and offer Tarpan with water drops. A tip of Darbh should be used for Tarpan of the Devtas; middle part for Rishis and roots for Pitris."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! There are ten types of holy grasses useful in religious rituals; Kush, Kash, barley, Durva, Kunder, Ushir, Godhum, Vrihi and Munj. They may be used repeatedly. The grasses plucked or brought on Amavasya are considered fresh forever. A plant of grass approximately six inches is called Kush, of twelve inches is called Darbh, of eighteen inches is called Vajra and as long as a cow's tail (two to three feet) is called Trun. Kush is best for Shradhdh, Darbh for charity, Vajra in Havan and Trun for oblation of Pitris. The rewards for Tarpan performed with Darbh are a hundred times greater than done with hands. Devtas should be offered a single Anjali, Rishis two Anjalis and Pitris three Anjalis. Mother, grandmother and great grandmother should be offered three Anjalis while other female relatives should be given one Anjali. Sesame seeds must not be offered as a part of Tarpan on Sundays, Fridays, Chhatth, Saptamis, Ekadashi, Padvo falling on Tuesday, Teras, at night, dawn, dusk and when Magha Nakshatra prevails. However, where and when Tarpan with sesame seeds is vital, such as places of pilgrimage or on banks of River Ganga, the above mentioned restriction does not need to be observed. Water passed over silver or gold may be used for Tarpan Vidhi on the days sesame seeds are prohibited. Water

Thus ends the 6th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! After concluding his morning Sandhya and prior to sitting down for his morning Puja, he should gather flowers, Tulsi leaves, sandalwood paste, water and other artefacts needed for Puja. The Dwij should gather these things himself and not ask a Shudra to bring them for him. He must not conduct Puja, veneration or oblation with water and other items brought by a Shudra. He must sit facing the Murti of Bhagwan, the East or North with his legs folded and worship Bhagwan with utmost reverence. Eight types of Murtis are attested in the scriptures; Murtis made of stone, wood, metal, paste (sandalwood etc.), sand and jewel plus a pictorial image and an image visualised in mind. One may choose any of these nine types of Murti for worship as per one's liking and worship it sincerely with the available artefacts. Bhagwan Keshav accepts even leaves of Tulsi, fruits or water willingly, if they are provided with affection, but He does not even look at the vast amount of wealth if offered without love. Persons of all four Varnas, including females, are eligible to worship His Murti."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Shaligram form of Bhagwan can only be worshipped by the Brahmins or Kshatriya and Vaishya devotees who have taken Vaishnavi Diksha. One may worship these five deities; Vishnu, Shiva, Ganapati, Parvati and Suryanarayan or only Bhagwan Vishnu. Shaligram must always be worshipped in even numbers, e.g. two, four or six and not in odd numbers i.e. three, five or seven. A single Shaligram may be worshipped. Damaged Shaligram may still be worshipped. One must not keep two Shivling, two Shaligram, two Chakra (round pebble mined from River Gomti at Dwarka) and two Murtis of Suryanarayan in his home for worship. Similarly, three Murtis of Goddess Ambika, three Murtis of Ganapati, two conches and a damaged Murti of Bhagwan must not be worshipped."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O Vipra! When the five deities are to be worshipped, they should be worshipped in the order they were established and invoked. Vishnu should be established in the middle and Shiva, Ganapati, Surya and Parvati should be placed surrounding them in the North East, South east, South West and North West respectively. All these five deities should be worshipped with sixteen elements whilst chanting PurushSukta hymns or specific hymns addressed to each deity. Bhagwan Narayan is a ruling deity of PurushSukta hymns which are addressed to Purush Himself and its meter is Trishtup. Whilst worshipping Ganesh, the Dwij should touch his hands, feet, thighs, two sides of abdomen, navel, heart, throat, arms, mouth, eyes and head in that order whilst chanting PurushSukta hymns and mentioning the time and place of worship. After making sure that flowers, rice, etc. are free from all impurities, he should also venerate the bell and conch. He should then meditate upon the form of Lord Vishnu that he has seen or understood before worshipping Him. Due to his heightened devotion and strengthened austerity resulting from his sincere, continuous and regular Puja, his Ishtadev comes and resides in His Murti. The Murti attains oneness with Him. O Dwij! A worshipper should worship Bhagwan with sixteen elements; invocation, Asan (offering seat), Padhya (water to wash hands and feet), Ardhya (water to wash face and gargle mouth), Achman, Snaan, Vastra (offering robes), Upavit (offering Janoi), Chandan, Pushpa, Dhoop (incense), Deep (lamp), Naivedhya, Tambool (Paan - mouth freshener), Dakshina (gift) and Puspanjali (bowing down), accompanied by the chanting of the appropriate sixteen hymns of PurushSukta daily. Avahan and Visarjan (dispersion) should not be done for a self-established Shivling, Shaligram or a permanently fixed Murti. One must meditate upon and worship with PurushSukta hymns of such forms of Bhagwan where Avahan is not needed. One must never be a miser (tight fisted) while worshipping Bhagwan."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! Vishnu should not be worshipped using rice, Dhaturo (white thorn apple) or Aakado, Ganapati with Tulsi leaves, Devi (Goddess Parvati) with Dharo (a type of holy grass), Suryanarayan with Billi leaves and Shiva should not be venerated with Champo flowers and Ketki (agave). The scented flowers like jasmine, Malti, rose, lotus, Champo etc. are considered the best to worship Bhagwan Vishnu. However, one must not use stale flowers in worship. The flowers bought from a florist are considered fresh on the day they were bought. Billi leaves, Tulsi leaves, lotus, buds of flowers and the water of River Ganga do not become stale so they are considered fresh for worship. One must not pluck leaves of Tulsi at dawn, dusk, night; on Sundays, Tuesdays, Fridays, Ekadashi, Baras and Purnima; and when the sun is migrating from one Rashi to another. A Dwij should chant the following hymn whilst plucking the leaves of Tulsi (except on days proscribed above): 'O Tulsi! You are very dear to Bhagwan Keshav. I am plucking your leaves only for Bhagwan Keshav. Bless me (that I become equally dear to Bhagwan).' O Vipra! The reward of offering Tulsi leaves with clusters of bloom on Bhagwan Krishna's head is greater than offering millions of flowers made of gold."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram Vipra! One must not accept cooked food or indeed fruit, water or flowers as Shiva's Prasad when he is worshipped as a Shivling in the absence of the other four deities. This attracts great sin. However, Prasad may be accepted when Shiva is worshipped along with Shaligram. Similarly, Prasad of Jyotirling (self-established Shivling), Shivling made of metal or where a Murti of Shiva is worshipped may be accepted without attracting any drawback. The Brahmins should worship Devi during the Navratri festival with the same fervour as they worship other deities but without ever offering meat or alcohol. They should not be taken in by the scriptures written by evil people that advocate Devi's Puja with meat and alcohol. The pious Dwij must not even touch meat or alcohol as it causes them to transgress from their Dharma. One must not accept even clean food or water as Prasad of Devi where meat or alcohol is offered as Naivedhya. A Dwij should offer coconut, milk pudding and other savoury items as Naivedhya to Devi. Whoever transgresses this constraint shall indeed go to hell and suffer its severe punishments. Anyone, due to ignorance, arrogance or association, offers meat and alcohol to Devi will become a spirit in a waterless forest."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O honourable Brahmin! After narrating the rituals of worshipping Bhagwan's Murti, I shall now narrate the method of venerating Bhagwan in absence of His Murti. He may invoke Bhagwan on a small heap of sand after drawing a conch, Chakra, lotus, etc. on it and worship Him reverently in his mind. He may visualise Bhagwan in the sun and worship Him with little water, he may visualise Bhagwan in fire and worship Him with Ghee or may visualise Him in water and worship Him with sandalwood paste and flowers. Whichever way he chooses, he must follow all the elements and offer all the artefacts in his mind. Brahmins and His Ekantik devotees should offer Him sweets and greetings befitting their kith and kin. O Dwij! The healthy devout Dwijs must worship Bhagwan three times a day (morning, noon and evening) while infirm Dwijs must worship Him once in the morning. One must spend a little time in His meditation and chant the hymn of Bhagwan Shree Krishna that is given to him by his Acharya at the time of Diksha, at the end of Puja. They may chant this hymn reverently and with the utmost devotion in detrimental times (when Puja cannot be done). I just narrated the six rites a Dwij Brahamchari must follow daily. I shall now narrate Dharma of Dwij Grahastha."

Thus ends the 7th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Dwij! A Brahamchari without great Vairagya should conclude his studies by the consent of his guru. He should offer suitable rewards to his guru and have a bath as a part of Samavartan Sanskar. He should wear two white clothes, two Yagnopavit, gold earrings and footwear; keep a water pitcher, wooden staff and umbrella and have his hair, beard and nails cut and hair combed. He should return to his home after graduating with the knowledge of the Vedas. He should always remain in any one of the Ashram and observe its Dharma (i.e. he should maintain Brahamcharya until married). He should marry a virtuous girl of his own Varna, not born in the same paternal clan and not closely related to his mother. Dwij men were allowed to marry outside their Varna in the bygone eras to clamp down on adulterous and illicit relationships. However, the ancient sages have forbidden this system in Kali Yug, so one must marry within his Varna. He should not marry a woman suffering from Tuberculosis, leprosy, vitiligo or other grave illnesses or born in a lowly, irreligious or notorious clan. She must be free from masculine traits such as growth of facial hairs, be younger than him and good natured. Rather than marrying a woman who may be very beautiful but without good character, he should opt for a virtuous woman who may not be beautiful. A virtuous maiden is always preferable."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! There are eight types of marriages; Braahm, Daiv, Arya, Prajaptya, Asur, Gandharva, Rakshash and Paishach. The first four are recommended for Brahmins, Kshatriyas and Vaishyas prefer the next three while the last one is mainly for Shudras. A Dwij should keep the fire (in whose presence he got married) alight to please the Devtas. If it was not kept (alight) at marriage, he should endeavour to keep it alive at the time of divisions and inheriting the ancestral property. A younger brother should not marry and accept fire before his elder brother. In this case the elder brother becomes known as 'Parivitti' and younger brother becomes known as 'Parivetta' and both must atone. However, there is no drawback if the younger brother marries with the consent of his elder brother or if the elder brother is ill, infatuation with earning wealth or is an atheist. A Dwij Grahastha should use the fire accepted and kept alive at the time of marriage or inheritance to light the hearth (for cooking) and perform Vaishvadev (regular daily offerings to the Devtas) or Homa while a fresh fire should be invoked for Yagna and other sacrificial fires. A Dwij who is unable to keep the fire permanently alive due to lack of resources or space should offer Anjali of water instead of Homa. While offering Anjali of water at dawn and dusk, he should chant these two hymns; 'SuryaPrajapatiBhyam Namah' and ' AgniPrajapatiBhyam Namah' respectively."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram! A Grahastha Dwij must not indulge in carnal pleasures with his wife indiscriminately but within the limitations imposed by the scriptures. The first sixteen nights after the onset of menstrual cycle are recommended by the scriptures for copulating. The first four nights among the sixteen are considered less favourable. Sex during the daytime is totally prohibited. A man should have sex on the even nights for a son and odd nights for a daughter. The next fourteen nights are considered progressively more fertile for conception. A man must not have sex with his wife on Dasam, Ekadashi, Baras, Purnima, Amavasya, days of Vrat, a day of Shradhdh, a day previous to Shradhdh and days of Sankranti. Any man having sex with his wife on these proscribed days is reborn as a dog or a cat. A Grahastha Dwij must protect, provide for and take care of his wife with not only food but adorn her with gold ornaments. A woman should be protected by her father in childhood, her husband in her youth and her children in her old age. They are not meant for an outright independence as unbridled freedom renders even a virtuous woman to astray. Therefore, Brahma has not imagined absolute freedom for women."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "Adultery is a grave sin which negates all Punyas and diminishes one's life span. Therefore, people of all four Varnas must not commit adultery. Adultery destroys one's austerity, Punyas, fame, virtues, achievements, health and wealth. Nothing in this world is more harmful to one's life than adultery. Men who think of women with perverse minds are born diseased and those who look at them lasciviously are born blind in the next life. Any man who ties up woman for sex; torments a woman who defies his advances, moves among the group of women, encourages a woman to have lesbian encounters with another woman, who earns by sending a woman known to him to another man for sexual gratification, cross dresses to lure a woman, rapes a woman resisting his advances, frequents assemblies of women or entraps a woman by his wealth or on pretext of sympathy ends up in hell for the number of years that are equivalent to the numbers of pores on a woman's body. Yamdoots boil them in oil and feed them to the insects and worms or make them walk across a raging fire. A man is born as a eunuch in his next life for having a homosexual relationship with another man. A Grahastha man must not touch a widow who is not closely related to him, except in a detrimental time. A wise man must never remain with his mother, sister or daughter in seclusion, and speak with them only when necessary. An association with women and lascivious men is one of the causes of entanglement in the cycle of life and death. Therefore, O Dwij! A wise man must forsake both and associate with pious devotees."

Thus ends the 8th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Brahmin! Dharma of a Dwij Grahastha ascends to a great level if he does not harm or torment anybody. Only Dharma is helpful after death; wealth, parents, siblings, wife, friends or children do not help at all. Friends and family cremate the dead body and re-engage in their affairs, only Dharma accompanies a man after his death. Why do you think Lord Shiva burnt Eros (lust) and King Harischandra forsook his wealth if lust or wealth were useful after death? King Shibi and Sage Dadhichi and many others in the bygone eras protected their Dharma even at a cost of their lives. Almighty Bhagwan Shree Hari can be pleased with the help of Dharma. Indeed, the whole universe is held together by Dharma. Dharma is held superior among the trio of Dharma, Arth and Kaam. Arth (wealth) is considered median and Kaam (desires and acquisitions) is deemed the lowest. Therefore, one must consider Dharma as most important and the acquisition of wealth and fulfilment of desires must be in accordance with Dharma. O wise Brahmin! These ten elements enhances one's Dharma; austerity, charity, faith, decency in intentions, learning of scriptures, performing Yagna, compassion, truthfulness and control of senses. Rishsi were able to cross over this quagmire-like world with the help of Dharma, the Devtas attained greatness by observing Dharma and people attain great fame by living according to Dharma. Therefore, one must act according to Dharma and seek shelter in Dharma."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A Grahastha must undertake five Yagnas daily to protect him from the sins of killing living beings such as insects. This killing happens at five places; a pounding bowl, grinding stone, hearth, storage places for water and a broom. Chances of killing small insects inadvertently are immense whenever one pounds, grinds, sweeps or lights a hearth. A Grahastha must undertake these five Yagnas daily to neutralise the sin of violence (as repentance); Dev yagna, Bhut Yagna, Brahm Yagna, Pitri Yagna and Manushya Yagna. These five Yagnas protect a Grahastha from the sins of killing living beings. Reverently offering Ghee to the fire kept alive since marriage, in Homa or in the fire of hearth as way of pleasing the Devtas is called Dev Yagna. As an alternative to Homa, a Grahastha may offer an Anjali of water in water or on the ground. Offering the grains left over after completing Homa to five base elements (Panch Mahabhut) such as earth is called Bhut Yagna. Studying the Vedas and others scriptures as per one's ability is called Brahm Yagna. Ideally the study should be done before Tarpan or failing that, after Vaishvadev. Braham Yagna may be done in the morning or afternoon; after concluding evening Sandhya (veneration) or after Vaishvadev. A Dwij following the Rig Veda should undertake study after his bath while holding Darbh in his hand and then undertake noon Sandhya while other Grahasthas (whose main Veda is other than Rig Veda) should undertake their study of the Vedas in the afternoon after concluding the noon Sandhya and before Tarpan. He should regularly read a chapter or a portion thereof while unwell. A Grahastha not well versed in the Vedas should chant Gayatri hymns at least once.

Feeding one Brahmin regularly or offering a lump of dough (by a less well off person) in the memory of Pitris (dead ancestors) is called Pitri Yagna. After offering food to Bhagwan (Vaishvadev), he should feed cows, dogs, crows and others and then wait for a guest to turn up. Any person - old or young, scholar or idiot who turns up uninvited at his doorstep should be treated as if Lord Vishnu has turned up. He should daily feed a guest or provide him with food as per his ability. This is Manushya Yagna. A single morsel (or mouthful) of food is called 'Bhiksha'; four morsels 'Agra' and sixteen mouthfuls of food is called 'Hantkar'. A guest should be venerated with sandalwood paste and flowers. A friend or someone known to the householder should not be treated as a guest. A true guest is one who is unknown and has turned up uninvited. A wise householder should not ask a guest his Varna, clan, character or education and nor should he be discriminated by his looks. The one who does not stay behind is a guest. By satisfying an uninvited guest, a householder becomes free from the debt of society."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram Vipra! The six; a traveller, poor, student, Tyagi, Sanyasin and Brahamchari are mendicants, whose Dharma is to seek alms from others. The four; a Sanyasin, Brahmin, one who is observing a Vrat and one who is conducting a Yagna are considered perennial guests. A householder who eats without feeding a guest is committing a sin, as a result of which is reborn as a worm. A guest who leaves the home of a householder without getting alms takes away the home owner's Punyas and leave behind his sins. A Grahastha should feed his guest the same food he eats himself. One must never think of suitability when providing food to the hungry or clothes to a naked man. They deserve their alms. O Vipra! I just narrated briefly the five Yagnas a householder must undertake daily. A Dwij not performing these five Yagnas is committing a grave sin and has to endure severe pains for his sins of killing living beings at five places in his home. A householder eating without undertaking these five Yagnas is reborn as a bird. Therefore, a wise Dwij Grahastha must conduct these five Yagnas daily and regularly."

CHAPTER 10

Shree Narayamuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A Dwij Grahastha should follow the footsteps of the pious devotees and behave as described in the Smrutis. They should never transgress from their Dharma. He should have a bath daily in the morning, perform Sandhya; chant Gayatri hymn faithfully; overcome envy, greed and infatuation; be polite, lenient, calm and truthful; love and serve his parents, Brahmins and Bhagwan; control his senses; not harm or insult others, perform five Yagnas daily and earn his livelihood and fulfil his desires within the ambit of his Dharma. A wise householder must not even think of earning wealth or enjoying pleasures which do not conform to his Dharma. He must not abandon his Dharma despite difficulties. However, he must not torture his body in pursuit of Dharma, wealth or pleasures. He must share his food with everyone from dogs to sinners. As all living beings have a soul that is similar to his children, he should treat all living beings with equal compassion. He should support his parents, brothers, sons, friends and society generally without undue affection. He should regularly associate with and serve the pious saints. He should provide for his home and family without allowing profound affection to develop in them."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! A Dwij Grahastha should perform various types of Yagnas prescribed in the scriptures as per their financial abilities. As Yagnas such as Ashvamegh are proscribed in Kali Yug, a householder devotee should perform non sacrificial Yagnas such as Vishnu Yag and Maharudra. Satvik Devtas and Bhagwan prefer non violent Yagnas, therefore a Mumukshu householder should only perform such Yagnas. There is no greater Dharma than non violence and no greater sin than killing living beings. Ghee and milk should be used to satisfy the sacred fire and the Devtas and Brahmins should be satisfied with generous Dakshina and sumptuous feasts. A Yagna should be started in an auspicious time. A householder performing Yagna, his wife and a Brahmin priest anointed to conduct the ceremony, must observe strict Brahamcharya for the duration of the Yagna. For not observing Brahamcharya during Yagna or atonement not undergone immediately for its lapse makes the Yagna and atonement futile. The rewards of a Yagna is nullified if a householder does not reward Brahmins as promised, if it is conducted in the absence of a Vedic Brahmin or if the Brahmins are not satisfied with sumptuous feasts. Shree Hari becomes more pleased with a householder feeding Ladoos to Brahmins than offering Ghee to a sacred fire. Therefore, satisfying Brahmins with ample feasts made with Ghee and sugar is deemed the best Yagna. Satisfying Brahmins satisfies Shree Hari and one satisfies the entire universe by satisfying Shree Hari. Shree Hari loves Brahmins more than His body, the Devtas and indeed Laxmiji. Venerating Brahmins is equal to venerating Shree Hari and insulting Brahmins is akin to insulting Bhagwan Himself. A Brahmin is always reverent, whether scholar or not and must never be insulted, therefore a wise householder must always respect the Brahmins."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Dharma - religious rites, charity, etc. undertaken at auspicious times and places is more rewarding. The places where one meets pious saints; Bhagwan has manifested or taken birth; pious and compassionate Brahmins reside; Bhagwan is reverently worshipped in His Murti form and which are frequented by pious sages are considered holy. The towns situated on the banks of holy rivers such as Ganga, lakes such as Pushkar and hermitages of sages are auspicious places. Holy deeds or rites performed at such holy places or shrines become thousand times more rewarding than those conducted at other places. A place where Bhagwan takes birth, visits or lives attains holiness due to His association. Similarly, a place becomes a shrine after great sages makes it their residence. A Grahastha desiring to go on pilgrimage should observe a day of fast at home and venerate Ganesh, Brahmins and Pitris before departure. There is no need to test suitability of Brahmins and hungry persons at a shrine. They should be fed and given Dakshina regardless. A pilgrim must shave his head and fast on a day he reaches the shrine. He should venerate Brahmins and offer oblation to his Pitris at the shrine. A pilgrim must keep his Indriyas and mind under control, should not show off his knowledge, austerity and fame at the places of pilgrimage to get the full reward of pilgrimage. To get the intended reward of pilgrimage, he should have full faith in the shrine he visits, control his anger, be compassionate towards all living beings and be truthful and honest. A man who visits a shrine sincerely is never reborn in low species or vile places. He either attains heaven or Satsang which helps him attain Moksha, but does not suffer any sorrows. The following five types of people; one who does not have faith in the majesty of the shrine he visits, doubts sanctity of the shrine, visits shrine for no set (religious) reason, an atheist and a sinner are not rewarded for visiting the shrine. Furthermore, a person who undertakes a Vrat or visits a shrine without observing Brahamcharya Vrat does not get any Punya for his efforts. Any sin committed at an ordinary place is redeemed by visiting a shrine, but a sin committed at a shrine is etched permanently, never to be washed away. Therefore, one must keep his mind, organs and senses under control while performing any rituals or charity at the shrine. Older women should be accorded the respect that is due to his mother, younger women should be accorded the love that is due to his sisters and the very young girls should be considered as daughters at the shrine. A Grahastha, on returning from a pilgrimage, should revere and feed Brahmins once again to get the full rewards of his pilgrimage.

A wise householder should use his wealth to undertake religious activities such as visiting shrines and performing Shradhdhs of his ancestors. He should conduct Shradhdh of his parents, uncles, etc. either separately (if the means allow) or collectively on a single day during the dark fortnight of Bhadarvo."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram! Now let Me list the days that are more auspicious than others to perform religious rituals and charity. Daan, Japa, Homa, Shradhdh, feeding the Brahmins and other noble activities conducted on these days is more rewarding. Ekadashi, Baras, Purnima, Amavasya, Makar (Zodiac Capricorn) and Kirk (Cancer) Sankranti (14th January and 18th July respectively), conjunction of Uttara Falguni, Uttara Bhadrapad or Uttarshadha Nakshatra on Ekadashi or Baras; conjunction of Anuradha and Shravan Nakshatra on Baras; Kartik Sud Navami, Magh Sud Saptami, Chaitra Sud Treej, Ashtami and Navami of Vad fortnights of Hemant season (months of Magsar and Posh), Kapila Chhatth, one's own birthday, birth anniversaries of Bhagwan such as Ramnavami and Janmashtami, the days when the Sun migrates from one sign of Zodiac to the next and the days of solar and lunar eclipses are considered auspicious days for religious activities. Amavasya falling on Mondays, Saptami on Sundays, Choth on Tuesdays and Ashtami on Wednesdays are considered as holy as the days of eclipses. The rewards or Punya of charity, Tapa and Homa done on these days are a million times greater than those done on other days. The days on which Sanskars such as Garbhadan or Simant were carried out, birthdays of his sons, death anniversaries of parents or on a day one received unexpected money are other auspicious days to conduct noble deeds. One must give some money to either a scholar, virtuous, astute, humble or poor Brahmin. O Vipra!

Charity in Kali Yug is as beneficial to a man as austerity in Satya Yug, Yagna in Treta Yug and ritualistic worship of Bhagwan in Dwapar Yug."

Thus ends the 10th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! Of all the charities, providing food is the highest charity as food sustains life. Provider of food is called life giver for this reason. Brahma has described food as nectar as the whole universe sustains on food. A householder giving food to a deserving hungry Brahmin is gathering Punya for his next life. The one who gives food to any hungry man whether Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya or Shudra by remaining hungry himself knows Dharma truly. Even a sinner's sins are washed away if he gives food to a hungry man, especially a Brahmin. All desires, in this and the next life, are fulfilled of a donor of food. Lack of food saps the strength of a strong man. All living beings, static and mobile, live by food, therefore wise persons must be prepared to give food to others. The strength, power, fame and Punya of a donor of food ascend all the time. The donors of food enjoy an opulent lifestyle in heaven. Their palaces are radiant like the sun, the columns and veranda of their palaces are studded with jewels and they get to sleep on thick and soft mattresses. A person who feeds milk puddings to ten thousand, one thousand or even a hundred Brahmins goes to heaven in an aeroplane as radiant as the sun. Even the Devtas sing his paeans in heaven. Just like a donation of food, a donation of land is considered a major charity in this world. All the desires of a donor of land are fulfilled. A donor who gives a fertile piece of land just enough for a hundred cows and one bull to sit on, is rewarded with immense Punya. All his sins are washed away immediately and he earns Punya greater than performing Ashvamedh Yagna. He earns the reward equivalent of donating gold, silver, pearls and gems. He redeems five previous and five next generations besides himself by donating land. A person who donates a house with furniture attains Braham Lok. He lives in the golden palaces studded with expensive

A person who donates a copper vessel full of sesame seeds in the month of Magh never goes to hell. A donor who gives water and footwear in the summer and umbrella in the monsoon attains Chandra (moon) Lok."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! A person, who feeds devotees and Tyagi devotees, in particular on Baras, is rewarded with the Punya of all Yagnas. Bhagwan is pleased with him and grants all his wishes. A person who feeds devotees on Baras of Magsar following worship of Keshav Bhagwan is rewarded with Punya of Ashvamedh Yagna. A Grahastha who feeds Brahmins on Baras of Posh after ritually worshipping Bhagwan Narayan earns Punya of Vajpeya Yagna. A man earns the Punya of Rajsuya Yagna by feeding Brahmins on a Baras of Magh following the worship of Bhagwan Madhav. A Dwij is rewarded with the Punya equivalent of performing Atiratra Yagna by feeding Brahmins on Dwadashi of Falgun after the devout worship of Bhagwan Govind. A Grahastha devotee who feeds Brahmins on a Baras of Chaitra after the worship of Bhagwan Vishnu is rewarded with Punya of performing Paundarik Yagna and attains Bhagwan's supreme abode which is nigh impossible even for the Devtas. A Dwij, who, after worshipping Bhagwan Madhusudan on Baras of Vaishakh, satisfies Brahmins with food, earns Punya of Agnishtom Yagna. O Shivram Vipra! A person who feeds Brahmins on Baras of Jeth following the worship of Bhagwan Trivikram earns Punya of Gavayana Yagna. A Dwij earns Punya of Soma Yagna by feeding the Brahmins on Baras of Ashadh after worship of Bhagwan Vaman. A householder who feeds the Brahmins or devotees on Baras of Shravan following the worship of Bhagwan Shreedhar is rewarded with Punya of performing Vishvajeet Yagna. A householder devotee is rewarded with Punya of Soutramani Yagna if he feeds Brahmins on Dwadashi of Bahdarvo following the worship of Bhagwan Rhishikesh. A Dwij should worship Bhagwan Padnabh on Baras of Aso followed by feeding the Brahmins to earn Punya equivalent to performing Soma Yagna. A person feeding Brahmins on Baras of Kartik following the worship of Bhagwan Damodar earns Punya of performing all Yagnas. As Dwadashi Tithi is very dear to Bhagwan, one should perform some noble deeds on each Baras. Punya earned by such deeds on Baras is immense and becomes everlasting. The Brahmins should be fed seasonal food and given some monetary Dakshina to satisfy them. A Grahastha devotee who feeds Brahmins as a part of his charity is taken to Akshardham in an aeroplane decorated with many small tinkling bells."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Vipra! A person who supplies medicines and suitable food to the ill enjoys a long and healthy life. The one who provides copies of the Vedas, Mahabharat, Bhagwat and other scriptures to a Brahmin will have all his sins washed away and his Punya will become eternal. A Grahastha gains all happiness by providing blankets, warm clothes and firewood to a needy Brahmin in winter. One should donate whatever is dear to him or useful to others to a virtuous Brahmin. A person attains heaven by providing white cloths to Brahmins daily or on Sud Baras of Chaitra. A Dwij who donates gold in month of Vaishakh, footwear and umbrella in Jeth and beddings in Ashadh attains Shwetdweep. A person redeems his clan by donating the books in Shravan, cows in Bhadarvo and horses in Aso. A Grahastha who donates blankets in Kartik, salt in Magsar and food, saffron and sandalwood in Posh remains happy forever. Charity should not be done due to fear or greed; or to earn fame in the world. It should only be done for his welfare in the next life. O Vipra! Donation must never be given to a Brahmin who, despite being noble, spends his money wantonly or to satisfy his vices; or the one who hoards whatever he receives without spending any of it in religious activities. If there is no Brahmin within vicinity at an auspicious time such as an eclipse, a householder should make a mental pledge to donate something to a suitable person. That pledge can be fulfilled at a later stage when an opportunity arises. He earns the same Punya of a later donation as if he made a donation at that time. Charity should particularly be aimed at the Brahmins who are scholars, poor, needy, virtuous, have overcome their anger and lust, religious, truthful, have their senses under control, non-egoist, are able to bear insults, are not greedy, compassionate towards all living beings, friendly and honest. Donation given to such a pious Brahmin earns high rewards. A Brahmin who is a scholar in four Vedas and Vedang, performs his six daily chores (Snaan, Sandhya, etc.) sincerely, is free from envy and infatuation and has his senses under control is said to be a worthy recipient of charity. A wealthy householder donating to a worthy recipient is rewarded many folds. By satisfying even a single pious and a scholar Brahmin, a householder is able to redeem his whole clan. In an absence of such a worthy Brahmin, a householder should invite such a Brahmin from far away and serve and venerate him. Any charity given to these nine; abashed, bard, thief, quack, cunning, rogue, deceitful, wrestler and servant (who has a selfish motive for praising) is futile. O Vipra! A Grahastha must make charitable donations from his judiciously earned wealth within his means. Donation must not be done with ill-gotten wealth or money saved by not providing amply for the family"

Thus ends the 11th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 12

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A wealthy householder should construct a sturdy temple to establish the Murtis of Bhagwan within. Punya earned by constructing the temple is in direct proportion of the size and sturdiness of the temple. A temple and adjoining assembly hall should be built as per the scriptures. Accommodation rooms for the visiting devotees should also be built within the boundary of the temple. A large garden should be established in its courtyard and a well should be dug for an uninterrupted supply of water. Bhagwan Vaasudev should be established in the central sanctum sanctorum. Murtis of Goddess Durga, Suryanaraya, Brahma and Lord Shiva with Ganapati should be established in Southeast, Southwest, Northwest and Northeast respectively. Bhagwan Shree Hari initially prepared the Panchratra and Saptaratra (scriptures by those names). Narad and other sages expanded and wrote treatises on these scriptures and they became prevalent in this world. There are twenty five Tantras (scriptures that narrate the methods of worshipping Bhagwan and the Devtas) ; Hayagriv, Vaishnav, Paushkar, Gargya, Galav, Praahalad, Nardiya, My disciples should follow Vaishnav Tantra to build temples, invoke Murtis in it and for the rituals of worship of Bhagwan Vaasudev."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! A very wealthy devotee should build separate temples for Lord Shiva, Suryanarayan, Ganapati and Parvati besides that of Bhagwan Vishnu. Chaitra, Falgun, Vaishakh and Jeth are generally considered auspicious months for inauguration of temples and invocation of Bhagwan in it. However, some scholars do not recommend invocation in Chaitra. Meat and alcohol must not be used in Pratistha Vidhi of Lord Vishnu. Pratishtha of Devi (Parvati) should not be done in Dakshinayan (June 21 to December 22). The Sud fortnights of Magh, Falgun, Vaishakh, Jeth and Ashadh are considered auspicious for Pratishtha of Lord Shiva. A Dwij who builds a temple and a hostel for visitors redeems his seven generation. He enjoys the hospitality of heaven for a number of years that are equal to the number of bricks used in construction of a temple. Indeed, a wealthy Grahastha devotee who builds a permanent temple of Bhagwan Vaasudev attains Moksha. A builder of an ordinary temple attains Vaikunth while one who builds a shanty like flimsy temple still goes to heaven. By building an ordinary or a flimsy temple, a less wealthy devotee attains the same reward that is reaped by a very wealthy man building a sturdy temple. By undertaking Pratistha of Bhagwan Vaasudev in a temple built by someone else one gets a large kingdom; by building an ordinary temple one gets the kingdom of the world and by providing financial means to conduct Puja of established Murtis of Bhagwan one attains Braham Lok. O Vipra! When a person undertaking these three separately is rewarded so handsomely, think of the rewards that await a person who undertakes all three task of building a temple, establish Murtis in it and making suitable arrangement of worship of the Murtis! He becomes a Parshad of Bhagwan. A person who constructs a temple, without hypocrisy and just to please Bhagwan, redeems a hundred generations and sends them to Vaikunth; while someone who renovates an old temple earns great Punya. Whoever cleans a temple, colours its walls or even provides Ghee to light the lamps in it attains Vishnu Lok."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O pious Vipra! The Grahastha devotees who dig a well or pond or build step wells also earn great Punya. A Dwij who renovates a lake so that it holds water throughout the monsoon earns Punya that is due to an Agnihotri Brahmin while if it holds water till autumn, earns Punya equivalent of donating one thousand cows. If the water still remains in a lake till winter, the Dwij earns Punya of performing Agnihotra Yagna and donating gold at its conclusion; while if it retains water till spring, he earns Punya equivalent to performing many such Yagnas. If the renovated and excavated lake retains water till summer, the Dwij earns Punya of an Ashvamedh Yagna. A Grahastha devotee redeems the whole generation and earns never diminishing Punya if saints, cows and other animals and birds quench their thirst with the water retained in a lake built or renovated by him. A person remains in heaven for ever for planting trees around a lake; therefore, a Dwij desiring great bliss should plant mango and other such trees to provide shade on the banks of a lake. He should also plant flowering bushes and creepers. A person planting a mango, banyan, tamarind, Peepal and other such trees is saved from going to hell. O Vipra! Any Grahastha undertaking any noble deeds for the pleasure of Bhagwan Vishnu earns everlasting and great Punya. However, all deeds must be done devotionally and only for His pleasure."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O sinless Brahmin! All Grahastha devotees and especially the kings must venerate the sun and other planets daily, every month or at least once a year. A satisfied planet gifts happiness to the worshipper while an angry planet can cause havoc with his life. The sun in the seventh house (one of the twelve divisions- Bhava on a natal chart) and the moon in the eighth house brought the downfall of Ravan and Haranyakshipu respectively. Namuchi was killed on the battlefield due to unfavourable Mars while the pious Pandavas were coaxed into gambling by unfavourable Mercury. Duryodhan was killed mercilessly due to Jupiter in an unfavourable house at the time of his birth and Venus in the sixth house caused the death of Demon Hiranyaksha. King Saudash was forced to survive by turning into a cannibal by angry Saturn while Rahu made King Nala roam the world after losing his kingdom. King Sangramjit wondered the world aimlessly after Ketu made him lose his kingdom. O Vipra! There are many more such examples when unfavourable or angry Planets caused havoc in the lives of many kings. Therefore, the Dwij devotees should venerate the Planets and offer appropriate charity to placate them. The red hued sun, a son of Kashyap, was said to be born in Kaling (present day Odisha) and is reverently worshipped there. Similarly, the other planets born in different regions are venerated more prominently in those regions. The white complexioned moon, a son of Brahma, was born in central India; red hued Mars, a son of Rudra, was born in Avanti (present day Madhya Pradesh); yellow coloured Mercury, a son of the moon, was born in Magadh (present day Bihar); yellow coloured Jupiter, a son of Brahaspati, was born in Sindh;

white coloured Venus, a son of Sage Bhrigu, was born in Bhoj (present day Rajasthan), dark complexioned Saturn, a son of the Sun was born in Saurashtra; black planet Rahu, a son of Prajapati, was born in Lanka while another black planet Ketu, a son of Agni, was born in central India. They are venerated fervently in the respective regions of their birth. Different planets should be venerated with the different varieties of gems and pearls. The sun with Manikya, the moon with pearls, Mars with Vidrum, Mercury with Markat, Jupiter with Garutmat, Venus with Pushparag, Saturn with Shyamvajrak, Rahu with Gomed while Ketu should be pleased with Vaiduyak gem. Similarly, the sun and other planets should be given appropriate Dakshina to please them. The sun should be offered cows, the moon the conch, Mars a red bull, Mercury gold, Jupiter a yellow piece of cloth, Venus a white horse, Saturn a black cow while Rahu and Ketu should be given a block of steel in Dakshina. All planets are pleased with Snaan, Daan, Homa, Puja and Dakshina.

O Brahmin! These planets do not trouble a Grahastha Dwij devotee who bows down to the Brahmins and Devtas, obeys the decrees of his guru, associates with pious saints regularly, learns the scriptures as per his ability, performs or does Darshan of the Yagnas, chants Bhagwan's name with sincerity and donates portion of his wealth to the needy and Brahmins."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A Dwij Grahastha should perform Yagna and other noble deeds only if he has enough means. He should perform Soma and other Yagnas only if he has enough stock of food grain to last for three years for his family. He should remain satisfied with deeds up to Aghihotra (keeping marriage fire alight all the time) if he has stock of grain to last for one year. This is enough to fulfil all his desires. Performing Agnihotra, Darsha, Paurnamas, Pashu, Chaaturmas and Soma Yagnas are called Shraut Dharma (optional noble deeds). They are further divided into two categories; Kamya (desirable) and Nitya (daily or regular). A Dwij Grahastha who has enough stock of food grain to last at least three years should perform Kamya Karma and who have stock to last for only a year should perform Nitya Karma. Soma Yagna should be done once a year; Pashu Yagna should be performed twice, at Makar and Kark Sankranti; Agnayaneshti Yagna should be performed at the harvest time and Chaturmaas Yagna should be done yearly at the beginning of Chaturmaas. A Dwij should perform other Yagnas from time to time throughout the year. The seven Yagnas; Agnyadhan (lighting fire in the morning), Agnohotra (keeping fire alight permanently), Darsha, Paurnamas, Chaturmaas, Ayan and Sautramani should be done by offering Ghee to the sacred fire. The seven; worship of Bhagwan Shree Krishna on all Vad Ashtami, Sthalipak (feeding the visitors), Shradhdh, Listening to the Katha, Pratyavrohan (controlling the senses), Shulgav and Ashvayuji are the holy institutions (Yagnas) to be performed in Hemant and Shishir (period of four months from Magsar to Falgun). There are further seven Yagnas; Agnishtom, Atyagnishtom, Ukath, Vajpeya, Atiratra and Aptoryam. A wealthy Dwij should perform these Yagnas from time to time to please the Devtas and through them, Bhagwan Shree Hari."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! No one should sacrifice live animals while performing any of these Yagnas. The ancient Vedic sages have deemed that Yagnas must be performed by offering rice to the sacred fire. The animals that are killed for sacrifice during a Yagna tear apart that person when he goes to hell after his death. A Dwij may perform an all-encompassing Vaishvanari Yagna in lieu of Soma and other Yagnas if he is unable to perform those due to lack of time or resources. A person, due to lethargy or lack of faith, who does not invoke holy fire - does not perform Yagnas - surely goes to hell. A Dwij who eats only after Snaan, Japa, Homa and feeding the guests is indeed eating nectar. He enjoys eternal bliss of the supreme abode after his death. O Vipra! Anyone eating food without a bath is eating waste or sins; anyone eating without Japa is drinking blood; anyone eating without Homa is eating insects and worms while someone eating without feeding a guest is eating stool. The Dwij Grahastha is able to sustain the Sanyasins, Vanprasthi, Brahamcharis, poor, saints and alms seekers. Therefore, the scriptures hold Grahastha Ashram higher than the other Ashrams. A householder should welcome and greet a guest warmly, bow to him and offer him a seat. He should feed his guest lovingly. By satisfying a guest, a householder is satisfying the whole world. Conversely, by insulting or ignoring a guest, the householder is paving his way to hell. Animals, birds and insects all eat only for themselves without caring for or sharing with other living beings. If a Dwij Grahastha

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! After telling the duties of all Dwij Grahastha, I shall now narrate special Dharma for a Brahmin Grahastha. He should maintain external (of body) and inner (of mind) purity and be always eager to follow six daily routines. He should be serene, forbearing, keep his senses under control, observe his Dharma and never associate with evil persons. He should wear white but not very fine clothes, keep his hair short and grow a beard and moustache. A Grahastha who undergoes Snaan, Sandhya, Japa, Homa has faith in Shradhdh is redeemed from the world. One is not a Grahastha just because he lives in a home with his wife. A true Grahastha is one who shares his food with Pitri, Devta and guests and is forgiving and compassionate towards the needy and poor. He should always perform five Yagnas daily; Ahut - Japa of Gayatri hymn, Hut - Homa or offering Ghee and rice to sacrificial fire, Prahut - oblation to Panch Bhut (five base elements), Prashit - Tarpan of Pitris and Braahm - feeding a guest. He remains free from the sin of violence that occurs in his home daily by undertaking these five Yagnas. Otherwise, he just accumulates the sins. The life of a Brahmin Grahastha who eats for himself, keeps his wife just for copulation and learns the Vedas just to earn a living through them is futile. The knowledge must not be acquired just to impress people. A Brahmin who lives in an opulent mansion, eats sumptuous feasts and regales people with his knowledge of the scriptures never attains Moksha. He can attain Moksha by living in seclusion, withdrawing his senses from the worldly affairs, observing Dharma, reminiscing Bhagwan all the time and not harming or insulting anyone. A Brahmin Grahastha should always respect fire (perform Homa and Yagna), undertake austerity and keep senses and organs under his control. He must not boast his religiosity by publicising the observation of Chaandrayan and other Vrats. He must not indulge in adultery and stealing to save him from the criticism of others and going to hell. He should keep distance from a heretic, anti-religious, critical of the Vedas, atheist and anyone who behaves contrary to the Vedas. O Vipra! Indeed his entire clan is devastated if he indulges in lies and adultery, eats indiscriminately without conforming to his Varna Dharma or forsakes his Dharma or daily Shraut rituals such as keeping fire alight permanently. A Brahmin born in even the best of the clan is debased by marrying a woman from the lower Varna, not performing Snaan, Sandhya and other rituals, not learning the Vedas or by offending the other Brahmins. He must not criticise others, praise self and never call a pious person a sinner. A Brahmin should do an Urdhvapundra Tilak with Gopichandan after bath, a Tripundra Tilak with ashes after Homa, an Urdhvapundra Tilak with sandalwood paste mixed with saffron after venerating the Devtas and with water while offering oblations standing in water. He must not eat before Snaan, Sandhya, Tarpan, Japa, Homa and worship. He should perform evening Sandhya without lighting a fire. A Brahmin's life is not just to indulge in materialistic pleasures but to gather Punya for the afterlife by undertaking various religious austerities."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A Brahmin Grahastha is proscribed to earn his livelihood by pulling a bowstring, torturing enemies, farming, trading, animal husbandry and serving the people of lower Varna. A Brahmin should sustain himself and his family by gathering unwanted grains or seeking alms. Ideally, he should not hoard any grain. However, he may stock grain for three, six or twelve days, or sustain himself from the grain received without asking. Teaching, performing religious rituals and receiving alms (without asking for it) are the best means to support his family. They may be difficult to follow in present Kali Yug, therefore, a wise Brahmin should ask for alms from door to door on a daily basis. However, he should not accept alms from a king, Shudra, criminal or sinner and he should not visit the same household daily. The Purity of food leads to the purity of mind, which in turn leads to the purity of intellect. The purity of intellect is very important for meditation; therefore, a Brahmin must always endeavour to maintain purity of food. He must never accept or eat food of a Shudra, sinner, prostitute, pimp or criminal. O Vipra! Though the scriptures prohibit a Brahmin Grahastha to accept food from Shudras, there are some notable exceptions. He may accept food from his share cropper, his family friend, his cowherd and one who has come under his shelter. He must serve the same food to his family, servants and guests that he cooks for himself."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram! A Brahmin householder should sit on the floor to dine. The first morsel should be set aside for five base elements;

॥२९॥ नाद्याच्छूद्रस्य विप्रोऽन्नं नटनर्तकयोरतः । गणान्नं गणिकान्नं च हीनजातेश्च सर्वतः ॥३०॥ अतिथीनां च सर्वेषां प्रेष्याणां स्वजनस्य च । सामान्यं भोजनं नित्यं गृहस्थस्य प्रशस्यते ॥३१॥ आर्धिकः कुलमित्रं च स्वगोपालश्च नापितः । एते शूद्रेषु भोज्यान्ना यश्चात्मानं निवेदयेत् ॥३२॥ भूमौ बलीनुपाहृत्य कृत्वा चापोशनं ततः । प्राणाग्निहोत्रपूर्वं तु वाग्यतो भोजनं चरेत् ॥३३॥ स्नास्यतो वरुणः शक्तिं जुह्वतोऽग्निर्हरेच्छ्रियम् । भुञ्जानस्यान्तकश्चायुस्तस्मान्मौनं त्रिषु स्मृतम् ॥३४॥ अन्नं मध्ये प्रतिष्ठाप्यं दक्षिणे घृतपायसम् । शाकादि पुरतः स्थाप्यं भक्ष्यं भोज्यं च वामतः ॥३५॥ एकपङ्क्त्युपविष्टेषु यद्येकोऽप्यघवान् भवेत् । सर्वेषां तददघं तुल्यं पङ्क्तिभेदो न चेत्कृतः ॥३६॥ अग्निना भस्मना चैव स्तम्भेन सलिलेन च । द्वारेण चापि मार्गेण षड्भिः पङ्क्तिर्विभिद्यते ॥३७॥ पितृदेवमनुष्येभ्यो दत्त्वाऽश्नात्यमृतं गृही । स्वार्थं पचन्नघं भुङ्क्ते केवलं स्वोदरम्भरः ॥३८॥ इतस्तातश्च यज्ञार्थं नैव याचेत वाडवः । याचितं चेत्सर्वमेव देयं तद्यज्ञकर्मणि ॥३९॥ प्रतिग्रहे सूनिचक्रिध्वजिवेश्यानराधिपाः । दुष्टा दशगुणं पूर्वात्पूर्वादेते यथाक्रमम् ॥४०॥ अशास्त्रवर्तिनो भूपाल्लुब्धात्कृत्वा प्रतिग्रहम् । ब्राह्मणः सान्वयो याति नरकानेकविंशतिम् ॥४१॥ अजिनं मृतशय्यां च मेषीं चोभयतोमुखीम् । कुरुक्षेत्रे च गृह्णानो न भूयः पुरुषो भवेत् ॥४२॥ लौहं तिलाश्च महिषी तैलं लवणमेव च । तिलधेनुर्मणिश्चेति घोराः सप्त प्रतिग्रहाः ॥४३॥ प्रवाहमवधिं कृत्वा नद्या हस्तचतुष्टयम् । न तत्र प्रतिगृह्णीयात्प्राणैः कण्ठगतैरपि ॥४४॥ कृष्णाजिनप्रतिग्रही हयानां क्रयविक्रयी । नवश्राद्धस्य भोक्ता च न भूयः पुरुषो भवेत् ॥४५॥ अहर्निशं श्रुतेर्जाप्याच्छौचाचारनिषेवणात् । अद्रोहवृत्त्या बुद्ध्या च पूर्वजन्म स्मरेद्द्विजः ॥४६॥ यथा दारुमयो हस्ती यथा कृत्तिमयो मृगः । तथा विप्रोऽनधीयानस्त्रयोऽमी नामधारिणः ॥४७॥

the second and third morsels respectively should be offered to the Devtas and life forces. He should maintain total silence while eating. A person's strength is taken away by Varun Devta, wealth is taken away by Agni Devta and longevity is taken away by Yama Devta if he talks during bath, Homa and eating. Therefore, one must not talk while bathing, performing Homa and eating. He should place rice in the centre, milk pudding on the left, Ladoos on the right and vegetables, curry and lentils to the nearside of his platter. A single sinner sitting in a row of pious diners renders the whole row of diners the sinners. Therefore, a pious Brahmin must never sit in the same row as a sinner. A row can be divided by placing a burning stove, sprinkling a little ash, by a column, body of water, door or pathway. A Brahmin eating for himself is eating sins while the one who shares his food with Pitris, Devtas and guests is eating nectar. He must not seek grains for Yagna from all and sundry and whatever he has received for Yagna must be used in Yagna. Ghee or grains received for Yagna must not be used for personal consumption. A Brahmin must never accept charity from these five ; a butcher, oil extractor, wine distiller or seller, prostitute and irreligious king. A Brahmin and his descendants are consigned to hell for accepting charity from an irreligious or a greedy king. By accepting a deerskin, beddings of a corpse and a pregnant goat at Kurukshetra, a Brahmin never gets to be born as a human ever again. Similarly, steel, sesame seeds, buffalo, oil, salt and precious jewels should never be accepted as a charity even at a cost of his life. A Brahmin never gets another human birth but is born in the species of birds and animals for accepting a black deerskin, trading in horses and eating food of oblation to Pitris."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O sinless Brahmin! A Dwij Brahmin Grahastha should thank his Punya of past lives for his ability to learn the Vedas in his present and to live life as prescribed in the scriptures without offending anybody. Just as a wooden elephant is an elephant only in name, just as a stuffed deer is deer in name only; an unlearned Brahmin is a Brahmin only in name. They are not real and are useless. A Brahmin who, despite his lack of education and religious austerity, accepts charity just because he was born in a Brahmin clan leads both - himself and the donor to hell. Just as a piece of wood is destroyed by the raging fire; an uneducated Brahmin is destroyed upon accepting charity of gold, cow, horse or sesame seeds. Conversely, heaven is not far for an educated Brahmin, though eligible to accept charity but declines to accept. A Grahastha Brahmin who sustains his family without asking for charity (gathers unwanted grain from field), does not indulge in carnal pleasures and lives by his Dharma attains Mahar Lok. A Brahmin is born as a Shudra in the next life if he eats food of a Shudra for just a month or fifteen days. However, a starving Brahmin seeking grains from a Sat (good) Shudra household does not attract any sins. A Shudra born in a chaste clan, not drinking alcohol or eating meat, engaged in trading and who holds Dwij in high esteem is called Sat Shudra. A Brahmin should eat only the leftovers from Homa and sleep during the first and the last Prahar (three hours) of the night for his happiness. A Brahmin should atone by fasting for a day concluded with eating Panchgavya for wearing clothes stained by indigo dye. A Brahmin householder must never (even in exceptional times) consume alcohol, meat and other inedible foods such as onions or garlic. Indeed, he must not even smell meat or alcohol. He must repent for inadvertently smelling alcohol or meat by having a bath, chanting Bhagwan's name performing evening Sandhya at the outskirts of his village. He should have himself, his wife, son and daughter undergo all Sanskars such as Diksha, Garbhadan, Upavit and Vivah sincerely at appropriate times."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! No one and a Brahmin in particular, must sell his daughter i.e. accept money in lieu for marrying her. Otherwise, he is consigned to a hell called Raurau. Any money accepted from a bride in dowry not only destroys the husband but the whole family. Any ornaments that a bride wears at her wedding, even those given by her husband, must be returned to the bride as she leaves her paternal home. Nothing should be retained by her father. Grandsire Bhishma had attested in the Mahabharat that the father does not attract any sin for accepting any money (as wedding ornaments) in such a way. However, a father must never accept any money from his son-in-law's family as a selling price for his daughter. An eight year old daughter is called 'Gauri', a nine year old is called 'Rohini' and a ten year old is called 'Kanya' and older than ten is called 'Rajsvala'. A father marrying a Gauri attains heaven, marrying a Rohini attains Vaikunth, marrying a Kanya attains Brahm Lok but a father marrying a Rajasvala (daughter older than 10 years old) is consigned to hell. If ever an unmarried daughter starts her menses at her paternal home, she is deemed as Shudra and her father attracts the same sin as an abortionist. A daughter should be married at an appropriate time and a prospective groom's education, age, clan, health, wealth and virtues should be taken into consideration prior to the marriage. A boy with the following six characteristic must never be chosen as a prospective groom; who lives very close by, who lives very far, who is very poor, who is spoilt by his wealth, who does not have a means of livelihood and who is a dimwit. A woman is highly likely to be widowed if her marriage takes place when Jupiter is in Leo constellation or the Sun is in either Capricorn or Pisces Zodiacs. A marriage should not take place in an area between Rivers Godavari and Ganga when Jupiter is in Leo or anywhere when the Sun is in Magha Nakshatra and in Pisces constellation. However, marriage or Upavit Sanskar can take place in an area north of River Ganga and south of River Godavari even when Jupiter is in Leo Zodiac. A daughter should be married off at any time (not proscribed otherwise) after she turns seven. The ancient sages considered the first three months of odd years and the last three months of the even years as the most auspicious period to conduct marriages. O Brahmin! One should not worry about or postpone Simant, Jatkarma, Chaul, Upavit or Vivah Sanskars, start of Yagna or pilgrimage or a king's coronation during 'Gahtchandra'."

Thus ends the 14th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 15

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! One should earn his livelihood by judicious means and spend that wealth in good causes. A Brahmin Grahastha should acquire wealth by means other than servitude of the people of lower Varnas. A Brahmin householder may earn his livelihood from any of these four means; Shilonchch, Shaleen, Sanchay and Varta. They are deemed progressively worse than the previous one. He should choose one of the four depending on place, time and his ability. To gather the grains left behind in a field after harvesting by a farmer is called Shilonchch; to accept something without asking for is called Shallen; to earn by teaching or to guide other Dwij to perform religious rituals is called Sanchay while having his farm tilled by other Dwij is called Varta. These are the general means. Excellence or eminence of education may lead to some unexpected wealth. Sometimes a Brahmin is unexpectedly rewarded by the Devtas pleased with his performance of Homa, Tarpan or following Dharma devotedly. A pious Brahmin is sometimes rewarded by an accidental discovery of gold, silver or gems from a mine or an unexpected windfall due to mercy of the sages. This unexpected or accidental wealth is deemed judicious and can be used for religious purposes. Similarly, a king may be rewarded by an unexpected windfall due to his polity, which again is deemed judicious."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A Brahmin may take up some work which may not conform with his Varna to support his family during detrimental times. He may take up trading or farming. However, he must never ever take up arms like Kshatriyas. A king may take up farming or trading in unexceptional circumstances. A Vaishya may take up serving others like a Shudra and a Shudra may engage in carpentry, washing clothes etc. to sustain and earn a living if the circumstances force him. They all must revert back to the occupations suitable to their respective Varnas once the detrimental circumstances cease. O Brahmin! There are some inherent problems for the Brahmins and Kshatriya to earn their livelihood strictly according to their Varnas in the present Kali Yug. Therefore, they may take up occupations of a Vaishya. They may engage in agriculture or trading to earn their livelihood. The third option of lending money at interest should not be taken up by the Brahmins as it causes some agony to a person who borrows money. A Brahmin must never borrow money from anyone unless facing death as the only other alternative. This applies even to undertake any religious activities as well. There is no greater pain than being in debt for a poor Brahmin. The pain of being indebted is greater than the pain of getting vegetable to eat only every fifth or sixth day. If ever a Brahmin finds himself unable to support his family with occupations suitable to his Varna, may take up agriculture as the best alternative. O Vipra! In the Shreemad Bhagwat, even Lord Krishna has recommended agriculture as a suitable alternative for a Brahmin."

CHAPTER 16

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Shivram Vipra was surprised and perplexed hearing Shree Hari (advocating farming for a Brahmin). He asked Him, "O Prabhu! You initially forbade the Brahmins to take up farming, but just now recommended farming as an alternative occupation for a Brahmin. O Bhagwan! Please remove my doubt."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Dwij! Though agriculture is forbidden for the Brahmins per se, I recommend agriculture only as a last resort for survival. Gathering grains lying in a field is not feasible in Kali Yug; people do not have inclination to perform Yagnas and even the wealthy do not have interest in learning; so the recommended means of livelihood such as teaching are not viable any longer for most of them. As there are not many pious donors in this world, the Brahmins are not able to survive on charity. Therefore, I agree with Sage Parashar, who has recommended agriculture as a viable option for the Brahmins. Other occupations such as servitude or accepting charity from lower Varnas are even worse alternatives to agriculture. Any drawbacks of engaging in agriculture can be negated by using his produce to venerate the Devtas, Pitris and Brahmins. A farmer should give a sixth portion to the king (as tax), twentieth of the remaining to the Devtas and Pitris and thirtieth of the remainder to the Brahmins as charity to negate any drawbacks attracted from agriculture. A Brahmin or Kshatriya engaged in farming must still continue performing their daily routine such as Snaan, Sandhya etc. even in difficult times."

Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! A farmer should not use a lame, weak, tired, diseased, hungry, old or blind bullock to plough the field. A bullock which is young, healthy and not neutered should be used in farming. He should allow enough rest and not engage a bull for a whole day. He should not beat or torture his bullock hard in anger. The size of plough, yoke, goad and other artefacts needed should be in accordance with the Parashar Smruti, especially a plough which should be neither larger nor smaller than the recommended size. A farmer is liable to become a pauper if he uses a plough made from Rayan, Bili or Nimb tree. An expert must be called upon to run a rein through a bull's nostrils. A wooden bar of eight inches made of Kher or Shinshap tree should be used to pierce a bull's nostrils. Nostrils should be pierced when a healthy male calf is of three to four years old. The cows and bulls are vital for a farmer's survival; therefore, he must care for his animals. A cow satisfies its owner by giving milk and the Devtas by giving Ghee just by eating grass or hay. A cow is always reverent. Indeed, all the Devtas dwell within her body. Therefore, a cow must always be cared for. A cow without a calf must not be milked and neither should she be milked before her calf is being fed and satisfied. A cow, which has miscarried, has twin calves, waiting for insemination, is diseased and within ten days of giving birth to a calf, should not be milked. A Brahmin should tie his cow and bullocks facing the East or West and not facing North or South. A sharp sickle should always be kept near where the cows, bullocks and horses are tied (cow sheds, etc.) so that in case of a fire, the ropes can be cut immediately to save them. A person who venerates and looks after the cows earns the same reward as performing Ashvamedh Yagna. Conversely, a person is consigned to Raurav hell for thousands of years for torturing, beating or hurting otherwise, by starving or not feeding the cows."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O pious Brahmin! The ancient sages have opined that Punya earned by caring for the bullocks is far greater than caring for the cows. Whoever castrates a bull will indeed have his family and descendants wiped out. Such a person attracts great infamy and is consigned to hell called Asipatra. Whichever species he is reborn, he suffers from the same pain of castration that he inflicted on a bullock. A Brahmin Grahastha who castrates a bull is akin to a Shudra and loses his right to perform or conduct religious rites such as Yagnas and Tarpan. The bullocks plough the fields for harvest, separate chaff and grains with their hooves and transport the grain from the field to the home on a cart. Therefore, the bullocks should be revered. They do not complain or protest despite tiring from heaving the heavy loads. All they get for their excellent efforts is hay or useless chaff. As bullocks are very useful for the growth of society, they should be cared for. A Grahastha is consigned to a deep hell for neglecting, ill-treating or malnourishing his cattle. A poor household, who can no longer afford to look after his animals, should give them away to a wealthy Grahastha rather than starve them. One should consider looking after his bullocks as Dharma and engage in farming. A farmer growing various types of grain and other crops does not suffer from sorrows."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A farmer should learn the timing of sowing different crops and type of soil suitable for each crop from our scriptures and harvest rice, wheat, sugarcane, cotton and vegetables accordingly. A farmer who sows densely in monsoon, cares for his bullocks, stocks his grains and goes to his fields early in the morning prospers. He should perform a special veneration on an auspicious day before he starts tilling his fields. He should also perform Nandi Shradhdh in any of the following Nakshatras; Magha, Mool, Anuradha, Vishakha, Rohini, Hasta, Mrugshirsha, Uttara, Pushya, Dhanishtha, Paushma and Ashvini. He should excavate a little soil with the tip of his plough and place yoghurt, Durva, rice, flowers and leaves of Shami tree as a token of veneration of Sitaji, who had emerged from earth. He should offer Naivedhya, Aarti and Pradikshina at the conclusion of veneration and offer Prasad to Kshetrapal (defender of the fields or land). He should smear colour on his bullocks' horns, place flower garlands around their neck, smear Kumkum and rice on their foreheads before yoking them in a plough. He should rub the point of his plough with gold or silver and pray to Sitaji, 'O Devi Sita! You had granted prosperity to Sage Parashar at the request of the Devtas. O mother! Please grant prosperity to me as well.' O Vipra! A Farmer must implore in the same manner at the time of sowing, harvesting and transporting the grain from the farm. He should exercise proper care of his bullocks when yoking them to plough, cart or take any work from them. Otherwise, a farmer is consigned to hell called Kumbhipak. Brahma created bullocks (at Shree Hari's behest) to assist the production of food, which in turn sustains the whole world. Just as a crop is ruined without a strong fence surrounding the field, all farming activities such as ploughing, sowing, etc. do not yield properly without the veneration of Sage Parashar, Sita and the field. A farmer should not plough or sow a common field on the outskirt of the village, area immediately surrounding a crematorium, a land covered by large trees, a land earmarked for performing a Yagna, a land on the banks of a river, a land full of stones and rocks, a saline land and a field that does not belong to him. Any farmer ploughing these proscribed pieces of land is consigned to hell called Tamisra. A farmer encroaching upon even a small piece of land that belongs to others is consigned to Raurav hell. A farmer faces a lot of problems for ploughing a land very near to or very far from his village. A field which belongs to him without any dispute of ownership and which has a facility to irrigate with water is considered the best to cultivate. He should build a strong fence around his land to protect it from vandalism by animals or vagabonds. A Dwij farmer should sow the crops depending upon the type of soil and a time of year and be prepared to feed with fertiliser and protect from insects. A farmer must not undertake any agricultural activity on Amavasya, otherwise he and his Pitris are consigned to hell. Anyone cutting a tree on Amavasya attracts the sin of as many abortions as there are leaves on that tree."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! By harvesting the crops, a farmer sustains the life and fills up the king's treasury. The grain he produces is used to perform the Yagnas. He should feed the hungry insects and worms to negate some of the sins that are inadvertently committed while farming. The birds and worms that eat the grains left behind in the field after harvesting also help wash away his sins. A farmer washes away his sins of farming with donation of grains. He should perform a Yagna addressed to Sita (called Sitamakh) once the crop is brought to the barn. He should erect a strong fence with a single entrance around the barn to protect it from the animals. He should venerate Sita thrice on the day the harvest is brought in the barnyard and sprinkle little water on the crop while chanting appropriate hymns. He should mix ash (as an insecticide) into his crop of grains to protect it from insects. He should not mention or reminiscence about ghosts and spirits around the barn and protect it from any unwanted intruders. He should weigh his crops on a morning of an auspicious day and venerate his barn in the ninth Muhurt (i.e. after 12.30 PM) by distributing some grain among alms seekers. He should venerate the Devtas, Pitris and Brahmins by setting aside a small portion of his produce for them. As mentioned earlier, any donation given at the time of veneration of the barnyard, marriage, birth of a son, Makar Sankranti and eclipses multiplies many fold. A fifth, seventh, ninth or twelfth portion of the crop should be donated to the Brahmins as a part of venerating the barnyard. The farmers should give some grains to Shudras, poor, orphans, lames, deaf, dumb and other misfortunate people besides the Brahmins that have gathered around the barn. After distributing the needy and poor, a farmer should bring his crop home. A Brahmin farmer should give a sixth of it to the king (as tax), twentieth to the Devtas (as offering to sacred fire) and thirtieth to the Brahmins (as charity) to negate drawback of the farming."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Vipra! Many ancient sages have opined that a part of produce or earning from farming, trading or accepting charity must be donated to the Brahmins to negate any drawbacks attached to each activity. A Brahmin should give a quarter of what he receives in charity, a trader should give a third of his profit and a farmer should give a twentieth of his produce to the Brahmins to wash away their sins. Farming is the best occupation in Kali Yug. A farmer never goes hungry and without clothes. Farming done with the ethics, grants one happiness and prosperity. A farmer can serve and satisfy the guests and Devtas. O Shivram! I have reiterated the ethics of farming for Dwij as attested by Sage Parashar. All My Dwij disciples engaged in farming must obey these principles."

Thus ends the 16th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 17

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! I consider the respect given to one's guru and parents and looking after them as a great virtue. Such a virtuous person enjoys happiness in this and the next life. Mother, father and guru are three Vedas, triumvirate of Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva three sacred fires. Therefore, their edicts amount to Dharma. Nothing in three Loks (earth, heaven and hell) is difficult to achieve for one who honours his parents and guru. One must never insult them as their displeasure makes all noble deeds futile. One should not take pride in any Punya he has earned, as any Punya earned is due to their blessings. A teacher of Gayatri hymn, Acharya, is ten times better than a teacher of other Vedic hymns. Upadhyay, who gives Upavit, is ten times more reverent than an Acharya. A father is more reverent than ten Upadhyays while one's mother is ten times greater than his father. Indeed, a mother is greater than anybody else. Yet, I consider a guru in higher esteem than parents, because while parents give one a human body to undertake religious deeds, a guru gives one knowledge which can release him from the bondage of this world. Therefore, a guru is greater than parents. Parents and guru must always be revered and respected, even if they have many faults."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! A Dwij Grahastha, or for that matter anybody, must never insult his guru by thought, speech or deeds; as guru has given him the knowledge to differentiate the good from bad. Whoever insults his guru attracts sin greater than killing an unborn child and all his knowledge is futile. One satisfies Braham by pleasing his father and satisfies Pruthvi by pleasing his mother. However, venerating his guru is equivalent of venerating almighty Bhagwan Purushottam. Therefore, a guru is more reverent than the parents. A Dwij is consigned to Kumbhipak hell for insulting or tormenting his parents and guru. Betraying a friend, ungrateful, destroying one's livelihood and insulting a guru are four sins for which there is no repentance. A person must never argue with his parents, guru, uncle, servants, guests and a priest conducting a Yagna. He must also not argue with his son, daughter, elder, cousins, relatives, child, weakling, one suffering from pain, brother's wife and own wife. Indeed, a person who is obedient to his parents and guru can make the whole world obedient to him. By pleasing and not arguing with any of the above, a person achieves following; not arguing with a guru leads him to Brahma Lok, father leads him to Satya Lok, a guest leads him to Indra Lok, priests lead him to heaven, brother's wife leads him to Apsara Lok, relatives and cousins lead him to Vishvadev Lok, mother and uncles lead him to Pruthvi, elders, children and weaklings lead him to other ethereal Lok while brothers, sons and daughters lead him to the highest heaven. Therefore, a Grahastha must always take good care and respect them for his own good."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Brahmin! A Dwij wishing for his well-being should study the scriptures. Their profound meaning should be learned from scholars. By not understanding their intended or profound meanings, some people find fault and criticise the scriptures for their content. Such people are committing the sin that is equivalent to killing a Brahmin. A Grahastha must never accept water or food from a Sanyasi. Eating a Sanyasi's food is akin to eating meat and drinking his water is like drinking alcohol. Just as anyone offering gold to a Sanyasi, a quid to a Brahamchari and shelter to a thief is consigned to hell, anyone who accepts food or water from a Sanyasi is surely consigned to hell. Conversely, anyone offering food to Sanyasi earns great Punya. Similarly, A Dwij earns great Punya for building a hostel for Sanyasis and provides medicine for ill and poor. Punya of a Dwij is destroyed if he does not welcome or greet a Sanyasi or does not offer him a seat. A Dwij is committing a sin of killing a Brahmin by not giving alms or insulting a Brahamchari, Tyagi or Brahmin. The nine; mother, father, guru, wife, children, servants, alms seeker (or mendicant), guest and fire are considered one's dependents and should be looked after. A Dwij desiring prosperity must be prepared to give food to the poor, orphans and scholars. By not giving them food, one becomes mendicant himself in the next birth. Any charity done should be done from his judiciously earned wealth. A Grahastha should donate his wealth with faith. Donation given without faith or given to an unsuitable person leads to destruction of not only the donation, but the remainder of wealth as well. The rewards (Punya) of a Yagna are destroyed by lying, austerity by ego and donation by self-praise while one's life span is shortened by insulting the Brahmins. A Grahastha should always respect the elders,scholars and persons of a higher Varna. A Brahmin is great by his knowledge (and not age), a Kshatriya is great by his bravery, a Vaishya is great by his wealth and a Shudra is great by his age. The donation and food should be served to the Brahmins in order of their arrival and without discrimination. Just as one does not pour Ghee in ash instead of a fire, a scholar Brahmin should be venerated before an unlearned one even if the later has come before the former. O Shivram! A Dwij Grahastha respecting or venerating the elders, scholars, Brahmins and saints earns great fame and has his desires fulfilled in this life and a greater bliss after his death."

Thus ends the 17th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! Now I shall narrate Sadachar (ethical behaviour) for Grahastha devotees, which is attested as Dharma by the pious people. By following this Sadachar, a Grahastha attains long life, wealth, children, respect and fame in this life and eternal abode after death. Sadachar is the supreme Dharma and austerity, following which one can attain Bhagwan. It grants longevity and washes away the sins. The pious behaviour of the saints and scholars who have overcome infatuation and envy is called Sadachar and it is Dharma. Yama (restrain) and Niyams (resolutions) are primary elements of Dhrama. Truthfulness, forgiveness, honesty, meditation, non violence, pity, self-restrain, satisfaction, integrity and compassion are ten Yamas while external and inner cleanliness, Snaan, religious austerity, charity, silence, worship of one's Ishtadev, study, keeping Vrat, fast and Brahamcharya are ten Niyams. Whoever overcomes the six vices; lust, anger, ego, infatuation, jealousy and greed can overcome anything. One must always protect Dharma by behaving according to it as only Dharma is useful in after life. Wealth remains hidden where concealed, the sons and brothers return from cemetery while only Dharma accompanies a soul after death. Not studying the Vedas, forsaking Sadachar, lethargy and eating indiscriminately are the main reasons a Dwij remains shackled to the cycle of death and rebirth. Therefore, a wise Dwij must study the Vedas as per his ability, behave religiously, associate with pious saints and visit shrines to enhance and strengthen his Dharma."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! The last Pahor (three hours) or Muhurt (48 minutes) of a night is called BraahmMuhurt. A Dwij must wake up in BraahmMuhurt (a period before sunrise or 6'O clock) as sleeping during this period diminishes one's Punya. A Dwij must repent by undergoing a Padkruchch Vrat for remaining asleep in BraahmMuhurt. He should meditate upon his Ishtadev for a while and reminiscence the names of prominent saints and devotees. He should call to mind the names of the Devtas, great sages, shrines and holy rivers and bow to them. He should recite the following three hymns daily (while still in bed). 'To alleviate the pain and fear of bondage of this world, I meditate upon Bhagwan Narayan who rides an eagle, who is dusky yet radiant, whose eyes are like the petals of a newly bloomed lotus, who is bearing Sudarshan Chakra in His hand and who had granted Moksha to the elephant.' 'I bow down with mind, speech and body at the lotus feet of Bhagwan Narayan who is the only refuge of the devotees and Brahmins and rescues them from the quagmire like world.' 'I bow down to Bhagwan Narayan this morning who removes the fear of bondage of the world of His devotees and pardons the sins of His devotees committed in their previous lives, who removed sorrows of the elephant and granted him Moksha when death was near. I repeatedly bow down to Bhagwan Narayan holding conch and Chakra.' O Brahmin! Bhagwan Shree Hari grants His supreme abode to a Dwij who chants these three hymns with faith and devotion."

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "A Dwij should get up from bed and go far away from the village on the Southwest to answer the call of nature. He should cover the ground with grass, cover his head and place Upavit on his ear while defecating. He should sit facing the North in daytime or evening, face the South or whichever side is convenient at night when defecating. He may sit facing any direction if there is any danger facing the stipulated direction. One should not go outside the village at night and old or ill may defecate near their homes. One must never defecate or urinate in water, while standing up, in a cowshed, on a ploughed field, on banks of a river, on the road, in presence of women, amidst the herd of cattle, in a disused temple, in a barnyard or facing a Brahmin, the sun, moon, fire or a cow. He should not defecate within two hundred feet of a body of water (river or lake) and eight hundred feet of a shrine, temple or other holy place and he must not urinate within a hundred feet of a body of water and four hundred feet of a temple or shrine. He should wash his hands and feet thoroughly by soil and water. He must not use the soil from a mole hill, left behind by others or from the vicinity of where he had defecated. He should use clean and fresh soil. He should wash his penis once, anus thrice, left hand ten times, both hands together seven times and feet three times each with clay and water after defecation. The women and Shudra should do half of this for their cleanliness and so should anyone if they needed to go while travelling. A Dwij should wash his penis once, left hand thrice and two hands together twice with earth and water for cleanliness after urinating. A Dwij should gargle his mouth twelve times after passing stool and four to six gargles after urinating. He should not drink the water left over after washing up or gargle from the same vessel. In an absence of another vessel, he should throw away some water from that vessel before drinking to quench his thirst. The mode of cleanliness described above is for a Dwij Grahastha. A Brahamchari should do double, a Vanprasthi should do triple while a Sanyasi should do quadruple as described for a Grahastha. Old and ill should use their discretion after taking place and time into consideration while maintaining cleanliness. In the absences of water immediately after passing stool or urine, one must take a bath with clothes worn when water becomes available. Utensils such as Kamandalu and money being carried do not become impure when one goes to answer the call of nature at night, while travelling or in an absence of water. A Dwij must maintain proper cleanliness as any religious deeds such as Sandhya or veneration are futile without cleanliness."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O Brahmin! Washing up with soil and water is outer cleanliness while purity of thought is inner cleanliness. Outer cleanliness is useless unless accompanied by the inner purity. Therefore, A Dwij must maintain both types of cleanliness together. What use is external cleanliness when the mind is engrossed with wealth and woman, body tormenting other living beings and speech telling lies? Washing his body with a mound of earth and water from holy rivers is useless for such an insolent man. A Dwij should brush his teeth with a Datan (a thin wooden toothbrush) of fresh twig which is as thick as a tip of his little finger. A Brahmin should use a nine inch (approximately) twig while descending Varnas should use progressively an inch shorter. A Dwij should not brush his teeth on Amavasya, Padvo, days of Vrat and at times of Sankranti. Mouth should be gargled twelve times instead on the days proscribed to brush teeth or when a Datan is not available. Only a fool or a sinner brushes his teeth with the first finger while gargling his mouth. A wise Dwij must perform these nine daily; Snaan, Sandhya, Japa, Homa, Svadhyay, Puja, Vaishvadev, feed a guest and Tarpan. A Dwij not performing these nine is akin to a Shudra."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram Vipra! A morning Snaan grants one enthusiasm, intelligence, good fortune, beauty, wealth and mental fulfilment. It removes sins, poverty, impurity, uncleanliness and bad dreams. It even makes the body healthy. One must not bathe, even in an emergency, in a stagnated and dirty lake or a lake used by the low caste persons even if its water is clean. Similarly, A Dwij must not live at a place or rest under a tree frequently used by people of low caste. Food, water and hospitality must never be accepted without ascertaining Varna of provider. A Dwij who has not performed Sandhya is not fit to undertake other religious activities and he gets no Punya if he insists on doing so. Japa is considered an important Yagna, indeed higher than many result oriented Yagnas. A Dwij who does not perform Homa at morning and evening due to lethargy or obsession with earning wealth is consigned to hell. A Dwij who does not learn the Vedas or other scriptures such as the Mahabahrat or Bhagwat is deemed to be a killer of a Brahmin. A Dwij is reborn as a dog and swine for not regularly worshipping Bhagwan Narayan daily. A Dwij should perform Vaishvadev (offering to the Devtas) himself at noon and ask his wife to perform it at evening without chanting the Vedic hymns. A fool Dwij becomes impoverished in this life and is reborn as a crow in the next life for abandoning Vaishvadev. Urad, Tuver, white beans, gram or anything cooked in oil or laced with salt must not be used for offerings to the Devtas. Homa destroys sins, Svadhyay removes worldly sorrows and worship of Bhagwan grants heaven or His abode. One must not check suitability of anybody who comes to ask for food. Indeed, food offered to dogs or a sinner does not go waste. A Dwij who does not perform Tarpan of his Pitris (dead ancestors) suffers the pain equivalent of someone drinking his blood. If Grahastha are interested in listening to the scriptures like Bhagwat every day, they should listen to just the verses (without explanation) before dinner and listen to its explanations only after having their dinner. All Grahastha should associate with pious and religious devotees as time permits because only such an association gives them the required wisdom and higher intellect."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Brahmin! A Grahastha should bow to his guru after concluding his morning routine of Snaan, Sandhya, etc. The blessings that he receives alleviate many of his problems. One should consider the following as his guru and should regularly bow down to them; an Acharya who taught him the Gayatri hymn, Upadhyay who gave him Janoi and taught him the Vedas, a teacher, mother, father, scholar and elder. He should first bow to a guru who taught him the Vedas or spiritual knowledge. However, he must not bow down to someone who supports spurious religious beliefs, a sinner, an atheist, those who antagonise saints and the ungrateful, even if he happens to have taught him previously. He must not bow down to or greet his guru while he is walking hastily, distracted, bathing, answering the call of nature, brushing his teeth, vomiting, performing Japa or Homa, keeping silence as a part of Vrat, bringing flowers, Darbh or fire and having a water pitcher or alms bowl in his hand. A Grahastha, upon noticing a Murti of Bhagwan, a devotee, Tyagi or Sanyasi should always bow to them with folded hands. Similarly a Grahastha woman should bow to her elder relatives such as mother-in-law and a wife of a guru. She should not bow to a woman who has given birth to a child recently, is in menses and a sinner. A householder who regularly bows to the elders and greets them with respect enhances his longevity, wisdom, fame and strength. A Grahastha should not commit these ten sins; three of body, four of speech and three of mind. Killing living beings, adultery and stealing are three sins of body. Lying, speaking harshly, revealing someone's secret and levelling false allegations are four sins of speech. Making plans to steal someone's assets, wishing bad of somebody and misinterpreting, not believing or negating the sanctity of the Vedas are three sins of mind. One must not think of committing such sins. O Shivram! Just as a tree provides its shade to a person who has come to cut it, a Grahastha should greet warmly even an enemy who has come to his doorstep."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A householder must not have sex with his wife when she is in menses, observing a Vrat, ill and on Ekadashi and Dwadashi. A husband who forces himself upon an unwilling wife goes to Kumbhipak hell. A wise Dwij Grahastha must not eat garlic, onion, white aubergines, Grunjan (a red bulb similar to garlic) and Kalingadu (wild watermelon). He must not watch the sun when it is rising, setting, directly above the head (at midday) or eclipsed and he must not see its directly reflected image in water. If he ever sees a temple, Brahmin, cow, honey, mound of earth, Ghee, elder, scholar, Sanyasi, Peepal tree, guru, pot of water, cooked food, yoghurt and snake; he must walk keeping them on his right side. He must give way to an approaching aged person, person bearing a load on his head, a king, scholar, woman, bridegroom, drunk, mad, the ill and a saint. He should always welcome and feed a guest, Kshatriya, Tyagi and the hungry. A Brahmin scholar of the Vedas can redeem twenty one; ten previous and ten future generations of a person who satisfies him with food. A Grahastha should accompany his guest to the outskirt of his village to bid adieu after feeding him. He must respect and show humility towards all, especially towards the pious devotees. He must not be infatuated with eating at the place of others. However, there is no harm in accepting their hospitality upon invitation. One must control agility of eyes and limbs and gluttony."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram Vipra! A Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra should draw (imaginary) a square, triangle, circle and crescent under his dinner plate at dinner time. He should chant five hymns starting with 'Aum' and ending with 'Swaha'. Each of these five hymns should have a name of one of the five Vayu (winds) of body; e.g. 'Aum Pranay Swaha' and 'Aum Adanay Swaha'. The sixth hymns should include only Aum and Swaha i.e. 'Aum Swaha'.

The first morsel held with the first and second fingers and thumb is an offering to Pran; the next morsel held with the ring and small fingers and thumb is an offering to Apan, the following morsel held with the middle and ring fingers and thumb is an offering to Vyan; the next morsel held with the middle, ring and any other finger is an offering to Udan and the fifth morsel held with the thumb and all fingers is an offering to Saman. The sixth morsel may be held as per normal liking. Each morsel of food, accompanied by an appropriate hymn should be gulped down without chewing. A Grahastha couple should eat only after feeding the aged, Brahamchari, a pregnant woman, children, guest and servants. The householders must not eat grains on Ekadashi, RamNavami, Janmashtami, Shivrati and Vaman Jayanti and try not to conduct any normal business related activity unless absolutely necessary. A Dwij male Grahastha should not dine with his wife. He should not look at his wife while she is eating, sneezing, yawning, relaxing, massaging her body, answering calls of nature, naked, smearing kohl to her eyes and giving birth. He should not sleep at dawn, dusk, the first and last Pahor of the night, during the day and with dirty clothes or body. (Dawn and dusk are nominally set at 6'O clock). He must not eat at dawn or dusk. One can save himself from bad dreams by reminiscing Parshuram, Kartik, Hanuman, Garud or Bhimsen while going to bed."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O Vipra! A Dwij must not inform an owner of a cow suckling her own udders or her calf is drinking her milk. He must never point out a rainbow in the sky to anybody else. He must not sleep alone in a vacant house and nor should he walk alone on a road. He should not talk to a woman in her menses, walking alone on a road or a woman in seclusion. He must not give away his wife nor should he ever abandon his family. He must not consume alcohol meat or other inedible and must not steal anything. He must not associate or speak to atheist and sinners and not trade in forbidden items such as animal skins or blue lac. He must never abandon his Dharma even for a seemingly great reward. A Dwij householder should not treat blind, deaf, mute, lame, hunchback, ill or otherwise disabled persons with contempt or derision. He must not come between a wife and husband, a Brahmin and scared fire, Shiva and Nandi (his mount, a bull), Vishnu and Garud (his mount, an eagle) and two women. He should not crouch or sit putting one leg over the other straightened leg at a time of Homa, Achman, eating, worship, Svadhyay, giving donation or in front of Bhagwan or his guru. A householder should not speak his wife's, guru's, elder son's, elder daughter's, sinner's or his own name (unless asked for). Calling them out with their names reduces their life span. Guru, saint, elder, scholar, virtuous, devotee and king must always be addressed with due respect. He must not alert an owner of a field about a cow grazing on it and not tie his cattle for night without giving them water. He must not stop anyone making charitable donations to Bhagwan, guru or Brahmins. He should not criticise or backbite others and not heap praise on himself. Any Dwij should not try to jump over a well, play with weapons, wash his feet by rubbing one foot with the other, play mischief with fire, reveal the faults of his guru to anybody and not foretell about an imminent death or misfortune."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Brahmin! A wise Dwij must not add salt to a prepared meal at the time of eating. He should chant Bhagwan's name and look at the sun after sighting a known rogue or sinner. He should forsake a philosophy or point of view that is against the grain of the Shrutis or Smrutis, put forward just for the sake of arguments, contrary to Sanatan Dharma or negates the existence of Bhagwan in Sakaar form. He must not eat food touched by birds or dogs, containing hair or minute insects, food that has come into contact with meat or alcohol, cooked by a menstruating woman or left over on a plate by his wife and in a dirty place. He should not cut down any trees at a roadside which provides shade to the travellers or a tree reserved for veneration in a shrine. He should not cross over the bed of an eminent scholar or a sinner. He should not behave or speak in a proscribed manner. He should not entice anyone to give up his wealth to him or entrap a woman. A householder must remunerate a tradesman or labourer with the amount previously agreed. He must not consume any intoxicating substances. A wise man never shows off his good deeds nor hides his misdeeds. He should be compassionate towards all living beings. He should always act according to his age, clan, education, Varna, wealth, health, pledge (vow) and intelligence. He must never accept or use wealth belonging to Bhagwan or a Brahmin because such wealth is deadlier than any known poison. He must not take anything belonging to others without prior permission as stealing is very damaging to a thief. A wise man must not take flowers, fruits or grass without the owner's permission even to use for Bhagwan's worship. It is even worse if he takes anything for his personal use. He must not level false allegations against anyone; otherwise he is consigned to hell called Puyod till eternity. He must always speak truth. Though, there is no Punya higher than speaking truth, it must not be the cause of harm to somebody. Eons ago, Brahma weighed Punya of one thousand Ashvamedh Yagnas and truth on a scale and found that the Punya of speaking truth was greater. However, one may speak untruth to women, in jest, to earn a livelihood, at a wedding, to save someone's life or for the benefit of cows, Brahmins or guru. He should always speak and wish well of others. He should associate only with the pious but never with the evil."

Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! A Dwij must not associate with persons who do not believe in ethics, behave indiscriminately without regards to what is good or bad, get intoxicated regularly, are lascivious and indulge in adultery and stealing. One should not keep company of very greedy, spendthrift, revengeful, cruel, liars, infamous, criminals, sinners, gamblers, adulterous, murderers, resourceless or one who considers the fate supreme. He should always look out for ethical, scholars, polite, pious and resourceful persons and keep their company. A wise householder must not enter in deep water, house on fire, climb atop a tree and grind his teeth. He must avoid crossroads, cemetery, garden and company of promiscuous woman at night. He must be tolerant to the loss of wealth. He must not develop enmity with anyone, even at the prospect of gaining wealth, as enmity is one of the worst calamities. He must never occupy a seat that is higher than his guru. A man, who calms down angry siblings without rancour and comforts the frightened people, attains happiness better than even heaven. A man's fame spreads wide who always speaks with humility and whose wife, sons, brothers, friends, servants and associates are polite. While walking, a man should not look high, sideways or very far. He should look with eyes slightly downwards so that he can look a few feet ahead. It is highly virtuous to donate everything one owns, but he must never donate all if he has dependents such as a wife or children. He must never give away his wife, sons, dependents and source of earning even in extreme circumstance. He must never hide the fact that he has cleared his debts, the births of his children, sale of his farming produce such as grains, engagement and wedding of his daughters and any special qualities or abilities he has. He must not eat at the feasts on occasions of Sanskars such as Garbhadan or Shradhdh of Pitris; however this does not apply to close relatives. He must not have an undue interest in music or dance; eat too much at night, ride a bullock or swim a large river. The wise Dwijs should take up residence in villages whose ruler is religious, where scholar Brahmins live, a river flows nearby, rich traders are willing to provide loans and that has a good doctor. Conversely, they should not live in the villages populated mainly by irreligious and evil people, that have no source of livelihood or whose ruler is wicked. Dwelling in a village where residents live in harmony, judiciously and without rancour is highly desirable. One should not pick body hairs or cut nails with teeth and not cut nails or pluck grass with nails. Whatever deed is started for the wrong purpose or likely to end up hurting somebody must never be undertaken by a wise Dwij Grahastha. One must never enter his or anybody's home through a secret passageway or entrance. A man must not play a game of dice and not befriend anti-religious persons. A householder must not sleep naked. A healthy man should not pick his nose, ear or mouth unnecessarily; touch pubic hair; scratch his head with two hands; shout without a good reason; thump thighs or stomach with his fingers and pluck hairs with nails. Water after washing feet, urine, spit, phlegm and leftover food must be thrown out of the house. He must not hate himself for loss of his wealth as wealth or knowledge is not difficult to accumulate for a hardworking man. O Vipra! One should always speak truth. However, the truth must not be unpalatable or harsh. One must not lie just to please somebody. This is the opinion of the wise seers. He must not drink water or milk without first sieving it with a cotton cloth. He must not drink water from a large current, while standing or with the left hand unless eating. Any person must not drink milk of a filly, camel, ewe or a cow which has given birth to a calf within ten days. Yoghurt must not be eaten at night."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! A householder from the first three Varnas must not drink alcohol or meat as meat is obtained through violence, which is a sure gateway to hell. Whoever eats meat to satisfy their palate does not gain happiness in this or the next life. The eight; one who kills animals, who condones it, chef of meat, actual eater, buyer, trader, transporter of meat to the trader and seller of animals to an abattoir are considered equal sinners of violence. Nobody must eat cooked pod vegetables such as peas without opening the pods as it entails possible killing of small insects. One must not commit suicide in anger by consuming poison or by strangulation and at a shrine thinking of earning a great reward for dying there. A Dwij Grahastha should inquire on the well-being of a Brahmin, health of a Kshatriya, happiness of a Vaishya and contentment of a Shudra as a way of greeting. A wise Grahastha should forsake back biting, adultery, anger, insulting others, stealing, hypocrisy, conceit, hatred and malice altogether. He should not reveal publicly his time and date of birth, sexual escapades, faults of members of his family, being victim of cheating, wealth, longevity, wife's antecedents and insults he has endured. He must never criticise the Vedas, Devtas, a Brahmin, king, saint, ascetic and chaste woman. He must not pray to a man.

He must control the vagaries of mind, speech and taste. One must not cuss himself. Any monetary help provided to a needy person is rewarded greatly in this and the next life. A person earns great Punya by helping an orphan with money to undergo Sanskars such as Upavit or getting married. The Punya earned by helping someone undergo Upavit Sanskar is greater than performing many Yagnas. A Grahastha receives all happiness of this world and attains heaven at death for getting an orphan Brahmin married. O Brahmin! A Grahastha should dwell in a house in a good region, befriend the pious, love a faithful woman and impart knowledge to a good disciple. How can a resident of a kingdom ruled by an evil king be judicious? How can a friend of an evil person think of his own benevolence? How can a man married to a promiscuous woman ever be happy? What is the point of teaching to an unsuitable disciple? These indeed are the causes of sorrow."

Thus ends the 19th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! One must have a bath immediately after a bad or wet dream, touching a sinner, atheist or a corpse, shaving head and sex. He should look at the sun and chant Shree Hari's name after the bath. On touching a woman in her menses, a baby is purified by sprinkling water on him, an infant is purified by an Achman while 'Kumar', a young child, is purified by a bath. A child is considered a baby prior to Annprashan Sanskar, an infant before Chaul Sanskar and Kumar prior to his Upavit Sanskar. Grains in a barn yard, water of a well or pond and milk in a cowshed remains forever pure despite being touched by an untouchable such as an atheist or sinner. According to Sage Manu, a Dwij may accept water, roasted grains, yoghurt, buttermilk, Ghee and milk from a Shudra. A washerman holding a washed cloth, grain stored in a container in a shop and food received as Bhiksha may be purified by sprinkling water on them. However, cooked food touched directly by a Chandal cannot be purified by sprinkling water on it. Grain is purified by the wind blowing over it; Ghee is purified by heating it and utensils, Bajoth, other wooden items and cotton clothes are purified by washing with hot water after being polluted by the touch of a Shudra. A deerskin and items of ivory are purified after a passage of time. A fresh inflow of water in a small pond is deemed suitable for bath after three days while that flowing in a large lake is deemed clean after ten days. However, in the absence of other facilities such as a well, water of a pond or lake may be used for bath after just one day. A home is purified by replacing an old mud floor with a fresh one and utensils polluted by contact of vile substances such as meat is purified after washing it thoroughly with mud. Woollen blankets, silk, and jute fabrics and other expensive clothes should be hung in bright sunlight to purify them. Quilts, mattresses, pillows, etc. should be hung outside and cleaned with hand. Copper utensils should be cleaned with tamarind or lemon, tin and lead utensils with caustic soda and alloyed (of copper, zinc and tin) with ash provided they have not come into contact with alcohol, meat, faeces and urine. Polluted by such vile substances, alloy utensils should be rubbed so hard with sand and ash as to remove its top layer, copper utensils should be heated on a stove while lead utensils should be cleaned with ten types of caustic substances. If ever a dog or another animal defiles a mound (or a large quantity) of grains, that portion of grain should be discarded and the remainder should be sprinkled with little water to purify it. O Vipra! Dust, fire, horse, cow, trees' shade, sunrays, rain drops, earth, wind, flowing water of a river, calf, etc. never get polluted even by the touch of a Chandal. Darbh, black deer skin, hymns, cows, fire, Brahmins and sesame seeds may be used repeatedly as they never become stale or impure after use. Darbha used in Tarpan or Shradhdh, Brahmin eating a feast of Shradhdh, the Vedic hymns chanted by a Shudra and fire used by a Sanyasi become worthless. A body becomes clean by water, a mind by truth, a soul by knowledge and austerity and intellect becomes clean by the realisation (or understanding) of Bhagwan."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! I shall now narrate how long a Sutak should be observed by Dwijs according to their Varna and Ashram on occasion of birth and death of their relatives and what should be done to absolve from Sutak. I shall mention Sutak of birth first. A father should bath with worn clothes and observe Sutak for ten days, during which he must not perform Sandhya and worship. A mother giving birth to a son and daughter is absolved after twenty one days and thirty day respectively. This period is additional to the first ten days of normal Sutak. The relatives of seven generations should observe Sutak of ten days and eighth to fourteen generations should observe Sutak of three days. All relatives may touch each other except the new mother in childbed during the period of Sutak. A bath must be taken upon touching a new mother. A father remains free of Sutak on the first, sixth and tenth days of birth of a child. Therefore, a father may donate gold, money, cows or land after the bath on the day of birth of his child and a Brahmin may receive such donation with impunity. If a newly born child dies within ten days of birth, a mother should observe Sutak (of birth) for full ten days while father and other close relatives should observe Sutak of three days. I shall now reiterate Sutak of death. Normally relatives of the seven generations should observe Sutak of ten days and relatives of eighth to fourteenth generation should observe Sutak of three days. The siblings of a baby dying within ten days of its birth should observe Sutak of his birth (ten days) only and not of its death. The relatives of seven generations should just take a bath on hearing the news of death of a child who is named (normally on the sixth day) but before any teeth had emerged. On a death of a child from the growth of teeth but before reaching the age of three, the relatives of seven generations should observe Sutak of one day. Normally, people of all four Varnas should observe a Sutak of ten days, but some sages opine that Brahmins should observe Sutak for ten days, Kshatriyas for twelve days, Vaishyas for fifteen days and Shudras for thirty days. However, even the rule of ten days may be skipped in an emergency. A Sutak of three days should be observed on a death of Acharya, maternal grandfather, daughter's son and sister's son. Upon death of a maternal uncle or aunt, father or mother-in-law, son-in-law or sister, a householder should observe Sutak of three days if the death occurs in his own home or one day if death occurs anywhere else. A Sutak of one and a half day (two days on either side of one night) should be observed upon a death of a father's sister, mother's sister, wife's brother, good friend, disciple, king or ruler of country or village. One should bath with the worn clothes on hearing of the demise of other distant relatives. There is diverse opinion as to when a period of Sutak should start. Some advise to count the previous day as the first day of Sutak if the death occurs before midnight while others advise to count previous day if the death occurs in the first two thirds of the night, while still others opine to consider the previous day if the death occurs any time before the sunrise. The period of Sutak should start on the day of death of an Agnohotri and from the day of cremation for the others. O pious Brahmin! One does not have to observe Sutak of ten days if the news of death reaches after the tenth day. Following stipulations apply in this circumstance. If one becomes aware of death after ten days and before the lapse of three months, a Sutak of three days should be observed and if the death had occurred between four and six months ago, a Sutak of one and a half days should be observed. For a death occurring between six and nine months before one become aware, he should observe a Sutak of one night and if the news of death is relayed after ten months, one needs to take a bath to absolve from Sutak. Some sages opine that for a death occurring overseas or a death of a Vanprasthi or Sanyasin, one is absolved of Sutak by having a bath. A region divided by a huge river like Ganga, range of high mountains or where the language is different are also considered overseas. However, wherever one lives, a Sutak of ten days must be observed for the death of wife, husband and parents, even if the news reaches after the lapse of one year. One must not observe Sutak of a man who has committed suicide or death in a battle or while saving cows and Brahmins."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Vipra! If one receives the news of birth or death during the period of Sutak, both Sutak runs concurrently, i.e. the second Sutak ends with the first one. If the news of Sutak of ten days comes on the tenth day (but before the end of the tenth night), an additional two days of Sutak should be observed. If only the last third of the tenth night is left when one hears the news of Sutak of ten days, Sutak should be extended for an additional three days. The second Sutak is absolved after additional two or three days. If the news of Sutak of birth arrives during the Sutak of death, the Sutak of death ends with the Sutak of birth. In a reverse situation, a Sutak of death is not cancelled out; it should be observed fully according to the relationship. Long Sutak (of ten days) does not end with the short Sutak (of three days) if it becomes known during the later one. A Sutak of ten days must be observed in totality. O Dwij! A son or brother must perform Shradhdh of a dead father or brother as per normal even if the second Sutak extends the original Sutak of death. A person performing the eleventh day Shradhdh remains chaste on the day of Shradhdh and becomes inauspicious the next day till the end of Sutak. Many ancient sages have narrated Sutak variously, which can be learned from various scriptures. Brahamcharis, Vanprasthi and Sanyasins do not need to observe Sutak of death or birth. They need to take bath with worn clothes only upon the death of mother, father and guru. One does not need to observe Sutak if the news arrive after the start of Vrat, Yagna, marriage, Shradhdh or Homa. It must be observed normally if the news reaches before the start of such a process. Appointment of a chief priest for a Yagna, Nandi Shradhdh (or writing of wedding document) prior to a wedding and cooking for Shradhdh indicate that the process has already started. An annual Shradhdh (death anniversary) should be performed after the end of Sutak or on the following Amavasya. Sandhya, worship, etc. daily rituals must not be performed during Sutak. A Brahmin should perform Manasi Puja without Darbha and water and avoid Vaishvadev for ten days. He may perform Homa straight after Snaan but should ask another Brahmin to perform other religious rituals on his behalf. Salt, fruits, flowers, raw vegetables, firewood, Ghee, oil, milk and dry items for sale do not become impure during Sutak, so it may be accepted from a person observing Sutak. O Shivram! If a person is unable to have a bath due to illness, a healthy person should bath ten times on his behalf after touching him after each bath. Similarly, an unwell woman unable to take bath on the fourth day of onset of her menses should ask another woman to take ten baths on her behalf, touching her after each bath, to attain purity. A king, his courtiers, chefs of communal kitchens, doctors, artistes, carpenters, etc. may continue their work immediately after bath."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O Brahmin! After narrating a period of defilement due to birth and death of a close relative, let Me narrate the third type of Sutak, which pertains to an eclipse. People of all four Varnas should bath at the onset of an eclipse, perform Japa and throw away cooked food from the house. Pickle, milk, buttermilk, yoghurt, sweets cooked in oil or Ghee and water stored in large tanks may be saved from defilement by placing the blades of Darbha in them. Water of holy River Ganga never becomes unholy. One must not eat four Prahar (twelve hours) prior to an eclipse of the sun and three Prahars (nine hours) prior to an eclipse of the moon. Old and ill are exempted from this strict observation. One must not eat the previous night or day if the sun or moon were to rise eclipsed. If the sun sets eclipsed, one must observe a fast for the rest of the night and eat after the next sunrise. If the moon sets eclipsed, one should have a purifying Snaan at the end of eclipse and eat only after the next moonrise. Children, aged and ill should avoid food at least one Prahar prior to an eclipse. Any sinner eating during the proscribed period prior to an eclipse becomes chaste after undergoing Prajapatya Vrat and one needs to undergo fast for three days if he eats during a period of an actual eclipse. An eclipse of the sun on Sunday and an eclipse of the moon on Monday are more auspicious than other eclipses. Punya earned on such occasions is thousand times greater than that of other eclipses. One should have a bath at the beginning of an eclipse, Japa during the period of an eclipse, donation at the start of the shadow moving away and Snaan at the end of it. A person not bathing at the end of an eclipse remains Sutaki (defiled) till the next eclipse. Cold water is deemed better than hot water, own water is superior to the water of others, water of a lake is deemed better than water of a well, water of a stream is considered more auspicious than that of a pond, water of a lake is better than water of a stream, water of rivers, especially of the holy rivers such as Ganga is better than water of lakes, and sea water is the most auspicious for a bath at the end of an eclipse. One should have a bath to become chaste again after an eclipse and donate gold, silver, cows, land and sesame seeds as per individual ability. A donor of a land becomes a king, donor of food becomes very happy and famous, donor of silver becomes handsome, donor of lamps or Ghee has his eyesight improved, donor of cows attain heaven, donor of houses becomes owner of a palatial home, donor of clothes attain abode of the moon, donor of a horse becomes owner of many vehicles, donor of bullock becomes very rich, donor of palanquin or beddings is rewarded with a faithful wife. Therefore, a Dwij householder must donate something with faith. Charity must be given and accepted with the utmost faith. Both, donor and receiver attain heaven if they have faith in the charity. Charity given or accepted without faith is futile. Whoever performs Shradhdh on an occasion of an eclipse earns Punya equivalent of donating the whole world. One may perform Shradhdh at night even during an eclipse of the moon. A person observing a Sutak can also perform Shradhdh at such an auspicious time. Grahastha devotees must follow this practice of Sutak for their happiness. Whoever follows this practice with full faith earns great fame in this world and Golok after his death.

Thus ends the 20th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A male Dwij Grahastha must perform Shradhdh rites according to the time and wealth at his disposal. The food and charity given with full faith as an oblation in the memory of his dead ancestors is called Shradhdh. There are twelve types of Shradhdh; Nitya, Naimittik, Kamya, Vrudhdhi, Sapindikaran, Goshthi, Paarnav, Shudhdhi, Karmang, Daivik, Paushtik and Yatrik. Some sages classify Shradhdh into just four categories; Naimittik, Paarnav, Vrudhdhi and Sapindikaran. Shradhdh should be done in the sloping southern regions, at shrines or at home. The floor of an area of a house where Shradhdh is to be performed must be cleaned with water prior to it. Pitri Shradhdh is best performed amidst the plants of Tulsi. Shradhdh performed at Gaya (Prayag or Allahabad) redeems one hundred and one generations of seven family lineages. (The seven lineages are; father, mother, wife, sister, daughter, father's sister and mother's sister. One hundred and one generations are; twenty four of father, twenty of mother, sixteen of wife, twelve of sister, eleven of daughter, ten of father's sister and eight of mother's sister.) O Vipra! Shradhdh must not be performed at night, dawn and dusk, on a terrace of a house, in an area devoid of theist devotees and in an absence of a Brahmin. If the time and place are agreeable, a wealthy Grahastha should perform ninety six Shradhdh; twelve Amavasya, fourteen anniversaries of Manu, four anniversaries of onset of Yug, twelve days when the Sun migrates from one Zodiac to the next, thirteen instances of Vaidhruti, thirteen instances of Vyatipat (otherwise inauspicious to undertake other religious rites), sixteen days of Mahalay or Shradhdh fortnight (from Purnima of Bhadarvo to Aso Sud Padvo), eight Vad Ashtami and four Vad Navami of Hemant and Shishir seasons. Shradhdh performed during Gajchhaya period - when the Moon is in Magha and the Sun is in Hasta Nakshatra on Bhadarvo Vad Teras, is deemed very auspicious and rewarding. One may perform Shradhdh of a living father on the banks of holy rivers such as Ganga and places of pilgrimage - except Gaya. A son whose father is alive must not perform Shradhdh at Gaya, Paavarna and Mahalay Shradhdh and should not offer sesame seeds as oblation during his father's Shradhdh at Ganga or shrines. One may perform Tirth Shradhdh at Gaya while on a visit but must not make a special visit just to perform Shradhdh there. A Grahastha nonetheless should perform Shradhdh at six occasions; at a wedding of his son or daughter, at the time of birth of his son, at the beginning of a Putreyashti (performed with a desire to have a son) and Soma Yagna, on a visit to a place of pilgrimage and on arrival of a Brahmin who is a scholar of the Vedas even when his father is alive. Shradhdh performed at Gaya and on sixteen days of Mahalay and Ashtami and Vruddhi Shradhdh pertain to the twelve Devtas (father, grandfather, great grandfather, great great grandfather, mother, grandmother, great grandmother, maternal grandmother, maternal great grandmother and maternal great great grandmother) and other Shradhdh pertain to the six men (father, grandfather, great grandfather, maternal grandfather, maternal great grandfather and great great grandfather). A wise Grahastha should not offer Pind (a ball made of cooked rice) as an oblation to Pitris on Shradhdh, preformed on the days of Sankranti, when the Sun is in Aries, Libra, Cancer and Capricorn Zodiacs, anniversaries of fourteen Manu and four Yug. The other rituals should be performed as described. A mother's Shradhdh should be performed separately on four Vad Navami (of months of Magsar, Posh, Magh and Falgun), her death anniversary and on Vrudhdi Shradhdh and Shradhdh performed at Gaya. On all other occasions, her Shradhdh should be done simultaneously with her husband."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A Brahmin who is a scholar of the Vedas, observes his Dharma and regularly undergoes religious austerities is suitable to venerate and feed on Shradhdh and not an irreligious or unethical one. However, a Brahmin knowledgeable only of Gayatri hymns but observing his Dharma faithfully is far better than a scholar of all four Vedas yet is unethical or a sinner. However, according to sage Manu, a Brahmin's virtues must not be inquired into at the places of pilgrimage. Any hungry Brahmin at such places is deemed suitable to feed at Shradhdh. In an absence of ethical Brahmins, a maternal grandfather, if he is religious, may be venerated and fed. Maternal grandfather, daughter's son, sister's son, maternal uncle, his son, Masi's (mother's sister) son, her grandson, son-in-law, father-in-law, brother-in-law, his son, priest conducting Yagna, guru, teacher or a learned Brahmin are all suitable to partake in Shradhdh, provided they follow religious ethics. Any Brahmin who is not notorious for vices or sins is deemed suitable to be venerated at Shradhdh. Shradhdh is deemed to be a great success if a devout Tyagi eats food offered by a host. Nobody should overlook or exclude the resident saints or Sanyasins at Shradhdh, otherwise the oblation that is offered to Pitris is taken away by the demons. The Brahmins should be seated in the North facing the East in Daiva Karma (religious rituals addressed to Bhagwan or the Devtas) while seated in the North and facing the East in Pitri Karma (Shradhdh). Two Brahmins should be fed in Daiva Karma while three Brahmins should be fed on Pitri Karma. Alternatively, only one Brahmin may be fed in both. One should not invite more than stipulated number of Brahmins even if he can afford. The value of religious rites, place, time, chastity and virtues of Brahmins diminish by stretching or extending them. A visiting Brahamchari or an alms seeker must be invited to dine even if the other invited Brahmins have already started to eat. A Dwij Grahastha performing Shradhdh must avoid Datan, Paan, massage, fast, sex, taking medicine and eating other's food. A person who is going to eat at Shradhdh must avoid a second meal, carrying a load or burden, study of the Vedas, sex, receiving or giving donation and Homa. A person performing or going to eat at Shradhdh should endeavour neither to eat nor to have sex with his wife the previous night. Pitris reside in semen of a person who has sex with his wife after performing or eating at Shradhdh. Pitris are satisfied with grains, milk, Ghee, honey, sugar, etc."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O Shivram Vipra! Some Puranas do advise to offer meat while others forbid it to the Pitris. Let Me tell you My views. The Puranas espouses the Vedas for the benevolence of the Devtas, Asuras and mankind. Just as there are three types of people, The Pitris are of three types and they dwell in different places. Some are predominantly Satvik, others are Rajas while some are Tamasi. The Satvik Pitris are called Devtas, Rajas Pitris are called humans while Tamasi Pitris are called demons. The Satvik Devtas love wheat, barley, rice, milk, honey, Ghee, sugar and sweets made from them, the Rajasi Pitris like tangy, hot, sour and salty foods while the demonic Pitris love cooked and raw meat, alcohol and stale, smelly and foul food. The Devtas, humans and demons can be classified into three further categories depending on the proportion of the three properties of Maya in them. Due to their different nature, they like different taste. Among many types of Pitris, only the Rajas and Tamas Pitris desire meat of various animals but not the Satvik Pitris. The Satvik Pitris never cherish meat, indeed they so vehemently dislike meat that they do not even come into contact with it. They are satisfied with cereals, sugar, milk and items made from them. Even the Rajas and Tamas Pitris are easily satisfied with items made from cereals, milk, Ghee and sugar and not with meat. Therefore, a performer of Shradhdh should be very careful as to what he offers to Pitris. He should consider the traits of his Pitris and offer them food accordingly. He should not be reckless and offer them meat in oblation. Even the Rajas and Tamasi people sometimes give up their bad nature and become Satvik due to Satvik people's company. King Ajamil is a classic example. Though eating meat and drinking alcohol, an adulterous King Ajamil became pious and famous as a devotee due to his association with saints. There are numerous other persons who abandoned their demonic tendencies and became Satvik due to an association with the pious. Many Rajas and Tamasi people have become Satvik even after their death. Benevolent sages such as Narad travel through three Loks to encourage people to live a pious life. One's Pitris, if they have become pious due to their efforts, become sinners again if they consume meat offered as an oblation during Shradhdh. Offering meat to such Satvik Pitris is akin to killing them. By killing animals in the name of oblation at Shradhdh, one becomes a sinner of killing animals, violating the sanctity of his Satvik Pitris and a violator of his whole clan. There is no repentance for such a grave sin. Besides, he courts infamy and is consigned to hell till eternity. Therefore, a man must not offer meat as an oblation at Shradhdh. All three; performer, a guiding Brahmin and Pitris whom Shradhdh is addressed are defiled by such actions. Offering meat at Shradhdh is especially forbidden in Kali Yug. Sage Parashar had proffered this advice to his disciples in his Parashar Smruti, 'Pitris are pleased by feeding grains, vegetables, milk, sugar and honey to pious Brahmins. A person who offers meat to his Pitris can be compared to a silly man who smears his body with coal instead of sandalwood paste. Just as a child falls in a well if he tries to retrieve something he has thrown in it, a person who offers meat to his Pitris drowns in a quagmire like world. It is nigh impossible to come out of it.' O Brahmin! One should bear this advice of Sage Parashar and avoid using meat at Shradhdh and satisfy his Pitris with cereals and milk. Cow's milk, yoghurt and Ghee are considered holy in Shradhdh. Bufallo's Ghee is deemed fit to use in Shradhdh but not her milk or yoghurt made from it. The eighth Muhurt (time around midday) of a day, a Nepalese blanket, silver bowl, Darbah, sesame seeds and son of a daughter are auspicious in Shradhdh."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Brahmin! A Dwij Grahstha performing Shradhdh should call out the names of his ancestors and clan (lineage) ending with 'sat' while offering oblation. If one is unaware of the name of their clan, they should speak the name of Sage Kashyap, as according to the Vedas all humans are his descendents. The terms 'Pruthvisat', Antarikshsat' and 'Divisat' should be used if the names of the father, grandfather and great grandfather is not known. The names of the Pitris should be taken with an appropriate case (inflection of a noun) as oblation offered without case is futile. The second Vibhakti (case) should be used when invoking the Pitris, the sixth Vibhakti should be used for their seats, the fourth Vibhakti should be used when offering them food and other Vibhaktis may be used while addressing them. The six Vidhis (rituals); Visarjan, Patrachalan, Vikir, Panktivaran, Hastasudhdhi and Aposhan should primarily be addressed to the father while the others should be addressed to the Devtas. The Janoi should be placed on the left shoulder when performing the following six Vidhis; Swagat, Swastivachan, Gotrashesh, Pradikshina, Arghya and Dakshina and on the right shoulder while performing all the other Vidhis. The six; the flowers of Agathia and Champo (names of shrubs), leaves of Bhangra and Amadi (names of plant), two leaves of Tulsi with a blossom and flowers of sesame are desirable to the Pitris while the flowers of six shrubs; Ketaki, Karen, Borsalli, Mogro, Padal and Jai should be avoided. A non Agnihotri or poor Dwij may and a Shudra should always perform Shradhdh with uncooked (raw) grains. However, a Dwij must never perform Sapind Shradhdh, a Shradhdh of death anniversary or Mahalay or a Shradhdh performed at Gaya with raw grains. A scholar Brahmin guiding Shradhdh Vidhi should chant hymns of Avahan (invocation), Swadha (exclamation) and Visarjan (dispersion) of the Devtas with 'Uha' and the others without 'Uha'. In an absence of even raw grains, a wise Dwij should perform Shradhdh with gold valued four times the value of the grains (that much gold should be donated). Shradhdh at the birth of a son must always be done with gold and not with food (again gold should be given in charity and not the food). A Dwij unable to perform Paarnav Shradhdh (to be performed on the day of festival) separately, should perform it mentally (imagining it) during another Shradhdhs. The six; Avahan, Swadha (chanting of hymns), Arghya, lighting fire, Vikir (placing food on the ground) and offering Pind to the Pitris should be avoided during the Sankalp (mental) Shradhdh. O Vipra! In an absence of a Brahmin or scarcity of money, a Dwij Grahastha should observe a fast and offer just the Pind, give a fruit basket to a Brahmin and feed the cows, but a day of Shradhdh must not pass without remembering his ancestors. To perform Brahmyagna and Tarpan only after concluding the Shradhdh (and not before its conclusion) is applicable only to the Rigvedi Brahmins (whose primary Veda is Rigved)."

during the period of Mahalay, a Shradhdh should be performed on the fifth day or on Amavasya. However, he must perform the monthly and annual Shradhdh on the day due even if his wife is in menses. If the day of Shradhdh falls on a day of fast, a Dwij should just smell the food to be offered in oblation, but the fast of Vrat must be kept intact. A son should perform his father's annual Shradhdh normally even his father had taken Sanyas prior to his death while a Paarnav Shradhdh should be performed on Dwadashi during Mahalay. Vrudhdhi Shradhdh such as Nandi Shradhdh should be performed early in the morning, common Shradhdh (for many relatives together) should be performed at mid-morning, Akodashti Shradhdh (Shradhdh pertaining to a single ancestor) should be performed at midday while Paarnav (pertaining to a festival) Shradhdh should be done in the afternoon. The annual Shradhdh may be performed during the months of Magsar and Magh or on any Amavasya if one is unaware of the date of death of his ancestors. A Dwij should perform a Vrudhdhi Shradhdh (an additional or incremental) prior to Sanskars such as Garbhadan, Upanayan, Samavartan or Vivah and a Yagna performed at the consecration of the Murtis. A son should offer the same amount of charity on occasion of his father's Tirth or Vrudhdhi Shradhdh that his father had offered to his ancestors previously, even if the father committed sins or became irreligious before his death. O Vipra! Arghya, Avahan, Vikir and asking Brahmins if they are satisfied must be avoided on an occasion of a Tirth Shradhdh. A Dwij should feed a few guests at the conclusion of all Shradhdh. A Shradhdh is deemed complete only after feeding the guests. A Brahamchari should perform all funeral rites upon the death of his parents. A Sanyasi should not wail, perform any funeral rites, observe Sutak and perform Shradhdh upon the death of his parents. A person who does not perform Shradhdh or venerate the Devtas regularly is indeed consigned to hell. Conversely, a person performing Shradhdh is blessed with health, wealth, longevity and sons and grandsons. The angry Pitris suck the blood of a person who does not perform Shradhdh due to his disbelief in such rituals. Just as a calf finds her mother from a herd, the food offered to Pitris by citing their name and clan finds its intended destination. The food offered to the Pitris becomes nectar, food, grass or wind for the Pitris that have become a Devta, human, animal or a snake respectively. The food offered by the descendants finds their ancestors, no matter where they have taken residence after their death and satisfies them. Therefore, O Vipra, one must perform Shradhdh with faith and care. I just narrated the proper Vidhi of Shradhdh in short. I shall now narrate some of Dharmas that are proscribed in Kali Yug.

Thus ends the 21st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! Many scriptures narrate Dharma of gender, Ashram and Varna. As grandsire Bhishma had advised to King Yudhishthir, Dharma changes with Yug and Dharma applicable to a particular Yug should not be followed blindly in another Yug. Dharma vary and is different for Satya, Dwapar, Treta and Kali Yug. I shall now mention some Dharmas that should not be followed in the present Kali Yug which are proscribed in Puranas and many Smrutis. Gaumedh, Narmedh and Asvamedh Yagnas and consumption of meat and alcohol are prohibited in Kali Yug. Alcohol must never even be smelt during Sautramani Yagna and animals must not be sacrificed for the Devtas, guests or anybody. Meat must not be offered to Pitris. Agnihotra (keeping marriage fire alive) and Sanyas are proscribed in Kali Yug. A widow must not remarry after the death of her husband. Brahamcharis must not keep an earthen pitcher and a man must not inseminate his elder brother's wife for an heir's birth. A person in Kali Yug must not take a vow of lifelong celibacy unless he is capable of sustaining it. Vanprastha Ashram is forbidden in Kali Yug. Atonement that may result in death must not be given or undertaken. A Brahmin must not be killed even in a holy war and live animals must never be sacrificed in a Yagna. An associate of a person who has committed a grave sin such as murder of a Brahmin must not be given the repentance as the sinner. Nobody should end their life by immolation, jumping from a mountain, scaling the Himalayas or drowning in either old age or to attain heaven. One must not drown in water as atonement for a grave sin as mentioned in the scriptures in Kali Yug. Rather, one should atone for his sins by chanting Bhagwan's name. One may remain incognito for the rest of life if unable to bear the infamy, but must never end his life. A person unable to remain incognito should leave his village and reside miles away but must not commit suicide. One must not steal in Kali Yug even after going three days without food."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! One must not marry a daughter of his father's or mother's sisters or a maiden of different Varna in Kali Yug. A Brahmin must not accept food of a Shudra even if it is cooked in milk or Ghee. A disciple must not massage the feet of a guru's wife. The Sanyasins should not seek alms from persons of all four Varnas. In Kali Yug, a disciple should give suitable Dakshina to his guru as per his abilities but must not give his guru what he asks. One must not do Achman with the water that has been used by a cow for drinking. A scholar of the Vedas must not be slack in observing Sutak by taking undue pride in his knowledge and one must not touch anybody after collecting ashes from a crematorium. All theses edicts are forbidden in Kali Yug. You must bear in mind that such edicts are applicable to the bygone Yug whenever you read or hear them from the scriptures. O Brahmin! Agnihotra and Sanyas Ashram are proscribed in Kali Yug per se, but a detached and religious Brahmin may accept both if he is capable of observing it for the rest of his life. As long as the Varna system and the Vedic rituals prevail in this world, an able Brahmin can accept both. According to Sage Deval, the sages have proscribed these for common men who do not have profound detachment and the wherewithal to observe Dharma faithfully. I narrated to you the Dharma of Grahastha which must be observed faithfully by all of My Grahastha disciples. I have narrated the Dharma of Brahmins which should be followed by Acharyas and their future generations. I shall narrate their specific Dharma in very short. They must not eat anything without first offering to Bhagwan. They must not talk, touch or give sermon to any Sadhva devotee except their close blood relatives. Not touching a Vidhva is part of the common Dharma, but Brahmin Acharya must observe this more strictly. I shall now narrate the specific Dharma of the Grahastha kings, following which they attain great fame and happiness.

Thus ends the 22nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A person born in a Kshatriya Varna and crowned as a ruler and who takes care of his subjects with parental concern and religiosity is a true king. An ideal king should have full faith in Dharma and the Devtas, be truthful, generous, brave, benevolent and have his senses under his control. Just as the rising sun in spring is temperate, a king should not be too lenient or too harsh. People indulge in criminal activities if a king is too lenient and become anxious and agitated if he is too harsh. His wisdom and wealth should be used for the good of his subjects. A king should take care in recognising the qualities and traits of people surrounding him. The qualities of some people can be known directly through loyalty or ingratitude; some by the changing facial expression or body language; some by comparing their earlier behaviour while some by chiromancy. A wise king must forsake these eighteen vices; hunting, game of dice, sleeping during the day, back biting, adultery, singing, dancing, music, alcohol, slander, torture, misadventure, harsh words, severe punishments, envy, detraction of the merits of others, wasteful expenditure and seizure of other's wealth. The first ten vices are the corruptions of the time while the later eight are the result of anger. All of them consign the king to hell. Just as a pregnant lady defends her unborn child at all costs, a king should guard the benevolence of his subjects at all costs, including his pleasures. He should not develop bonhomie with his courtiers and subordinates as they transgress the diffidence and decorum. As a result they become lax towards their duty, do not follow the king's instruction faithfully and sometimes even defy the king. They often befriend the sentries of womenfolk to satisfy their lascivious desires; they behave brazenly in front of the king and use the king's chariot wearing the regal attire. Such courtiers often ignore or even insult the king in an assembly and torment the innocent citizens. Therefore, a wise king should always maintain a distance from his courtiers. He should always be judicious, patient, hardworking and frighten his enemies. The seven; a king, minister, friend, treasury, country, fort and army are indivisible elements of a realm and a rebellion against any of them must be punished severely. He should endeavour to mitigate the impact of a calamity such as hurricane, deluge and draught on his subjects, especially farmers. He should ask the farmers to bring their produce home before the onset of the rains. He should collect taxes himself or keep an eagle eye over the system. All his decisions must conform to the scriptures, the truth and Dharma without favour or fear. He should observe his Dharma, accumulate wealth and conduct his other duties so as they do not cause conflict with each other. He should endeavour that his subjects also follow their Dharma faithfully and he must not repose blind trust in anyone without knowing them well."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! A wise king should recognise the strength and weakness of his cavalry, mounted and vehicular units of his army and bear in his mind the most suitable places to wage battle against his enemy. He should recognise the most favourable time to wage war, Dharma of the detrimental times and the four opportunities; alliances in his favour, increase in his revenue, break up of alliance of his rivals and loss of his enemy's revenue. The king himself must decide on this six; a truce, war, expedition against the enemy, increase or decrease hostilities with the opposition, surrender and to sit tight in his fort and wait for an opportune time to wage war. He should listen to the scriptures daily. He should appoint spies to keep an eye on these fifteen places; the commander of an army, doorkeeper of an entrance to the fort, motivator or trainer of the army, guard of the women's quarters, jail superintendent, chief accountant of the public works, messenger who relays the king's message to others and vice versa, chief treasurer, head of the town, head priest, manager of the assembly, judge, president, chief sentry to the fort and head of forest guards. He should keep tabs on a minister, regent and family priest of his enemy besides the above fifteen through trusted spies. He should protect his fifteen from the rival's spies and make sure that his spies are not compromised. He should recognise the strength and weakness of these five; a minister, country, fort, treasury and army. He must endeavour to weaken these five before thinking of waging war with an enemy. A good king is one who himself behaves ethically, forsakes unethical pleasures, speaks gently and associates with the old and scholars. He should keep himself informed of all the affairs of the state through his spies. He should make sure that his servants (including soldiers) are looked after properly, charity is distributed fairly and justice is meted out correctly. A king who is always angry, doubtful, greedy, deceitful and vengeful is often killed by his own family members. He should seek help of people who are healthy, chaste, devout, brave, polite, honest, learned, honourable, courteous, religious, believer in the existence of hell and heaven and one who recognises the fault lines of the society in stately affairs. He should treat them with respect and equality except in the matter of royal parasol, throne and decree. The king's happiness lies in respect of his advisors. A king should provide food and clothes to the needy and poor, renovate derelict temples and palaces, hold regular army exercises to keep an enemy at bay and serve, respect and seek advice of elders and scholars to earn gratitude of his subjects. He should look after his subjects with fatherly instincts. An honest, happy, quick acting and generous king earns kudos of his subjects. He should remove the fear of stealing from his subjects' mind so that that they can enjoy their wealth without fear and behave ethically. Protection of his subjects is the main duty of a king and a quarter of his Punya is due to this duty. He should arrest and punish thieves, robbers and other evil people. When Dharma was decimated in this world in a bygone era, Bhagwan had created the kings to defend Dharma. Therefore, o Vipra! The kings must observe Dharma themselves. A king should distinguish between the people who should be punished judiciously before meting out punishment to the enemy, wicked or his own children. He should also clearly understand that some categories of people should not be punished.

Thus ends the 23rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Brahmin! A king should avoid these fourteen; atheism, speaking lies, anger, lethargy, procrastination, ignoring ethical scholars, indolence, giving into his whims, acting upon seeking advice, seeking advice of the ignorant, not acting upon decisions taken, not keeping consultation a secret, not worshipping Bhagwan and waging war with many enemies simultaneously. He should not make a truce and sign any accord with these twenty; a child, very old, scared, diseased, excommunicated by his clan or Varna, greedy, bribed by someone, Tyagi, fearful, lascivious, someone given misleading advice, critical of the Vedas and Brahmins, misfortunate, believer in fate and not in effort or ability, afflicted by profound sorrow, gung-ho on waging war, irreligious, untruthful, foreigner and hypocrite. He should not let anyone unauthorised into the state secrets. A king should not sleep during the first and last three hours of the night. He should wake up early and revisit the previous discussion he held with his minister the previous day. He should recruit fifteen year old young Kshatriya males and train then in art of warfare. A king should retain one scholar at the cost of letting go one hundred fools. He should appoint a person as a head priest who is polite, born in a chaste clan, scholar of many scriptures, very intelligent and free from envy. King should appoint an astrologer who is an expert in palmistry, body language, good and bad omens; planetary positions, its effects and absolutions and can predict calamities such as earthquakes. His personal physician should be an expert in different branches of medicine, more knowledgeable and elder than him and friendly towards him. A king should recognise ten dangers that may contribute to the defeat of the enemy king. The five of them are natural calamities; fire, flood, drought, outbreak of epidemic and serious malady, and five relate to humans; thieves, robbers, enemy, saboteurs and greed. A king should bribe the commander of the enemy's army with much wealth. He should remain vigilant and await an opportunity when the enemy is distracted or wage a war during the harvesting season or famine. A wise king should protect his clothes, food and scents from poisoning by an enemy. He should appoint trustworthy people to protect a treasury, armoury, silos of grains and entrances of the fort. A king should be on his guard from his personal valets, chefs, commander of his army and others (lest they are bribed by an enemy) and protect his minister and sons from enemies. He should periodically augment his treasury by levying judicious taxes. He may take a third, sixth and twelfth of the income in tax respectively in good, average and poor years. He must not allow his treasury to be depleted. He should regularly provide food and clothes to his dependents, servants, elders, learned, artisans and poor. A king must not fire his faithful courtiers or servants just because allegations levelled by ignorant or jealous people. He must investigate any allegation before taking any actions. He must appoint religious persons in conducting religious activities, scholars in stately affairs and eunuchs to protect women's quarters. None of his appointees should be overtly greedy or foolish. Someone who is too clever, appointed due to his wealth or angry or foolish only brings ruination of any work they delegated."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A wise king should consult his spies in seclusion in the late evening after concluding his Sandhya and dinner. He should win over the foreigners living in his kingdom. He should give money to greedy, respect to egoist, frighten the cowards and speak politely to the scholars to keep them on his side. He should continue to allow the customs and practices of the kingdom he has just won over and not try to force his values on the populace. He should make sure that the wells or lakes are established evenly in his kingdom to provide for safe drinking water. A king should appoint a committee of five wise people in each of the villages of his realm. He should establish the colonies of artisans and build shops to allow them to sell their produces and collect tax from such income. He should protect the womenfolk of his palace and keep them away from petty quarrels. He should never share any secrets with them. He should compare his and his enemy's strengths and weaknesses and form alliances accordingly to strengthen his position, protect it from predators and augment his treasury. He should engage in economic activities which are highly rewarding and never harass traders and farmers or hinder their activity as they are his main source of income. He should make sure that every fort of his kingdom is stocked with food grain, water, weapons, archers, machines and skilled craftsmen to maintain them. He should appoint a brave, patient, sincere and an expert in warfare as his commander of army. He should reward his brave soldiers returning from winning a battle handsomely and publicly. He should also honour and reward the scholars and artisans from time to time. He should send spies to gather information from the nearby kingdoms. The thieves and cheats should be arrested and punished and not let off with a fine. A poor person who has come into vast amount of wealth in a very short time must not be accused of financial malpractices without any evidence and should be offered protection. A king should protect the visiting traders from far off places who come to do business from the local charlatans and levy tax on their income. He should listen to the advice of religious persons and elders and praise and honour them. A king should supply artisans enough money and raw material to last for four months. He should defend his kingdom against wild animals, demons and fire and take care of dumb, mute, blind and otherwise disabled citizens. A wise king must avoid these six; sleep, laziness, fear, anger, leniency and procrastination."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O wise Brahmin! A king should learn ethics of politics from a good teacher. Let me mention the qualities of a good teacher. He should be a scholar of the Vedas, its six subsidiaries, the Puranas, the Mahabharat and other important scripture; intelligent; good orator; expert in debate and discussions; scholars of various polities; expert at deriving correct meaning of sentences used in different context; with a good memory; expert in various religious rituals and their significance; ethical; scholar of geography; able to decipher double meaning sentences; able to foresee the consequences of actions; expert to notice virtues and drawbacks in others; scholar of Sankhya, Yoga, music, warfare and an expert archer. Someone who has all these qualities is fit to become a king's teacher. A king should learn archery, politics and warfare from him. He should learn about cannons and fireballs and how to manufacture and use them from his teacher. A king should also learn about intoxicating and stimulating properties of various drugs and medicines. The knowledge of chariots, elephants and horses is also very important for a king. A king should reward his teacher generously with ornaments, gold and silver coins, house and clothes.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! Observing Dharma is absolutely essential for a king as he attains great fame and heaven and wins over enemies by observing his Dharma. A king living by his Dharma makes his courtiers and subjects behave ethically as well and good times, intentions and deeds prevail all over his kingdom. A king should have knowledge of the three Vedas for his religious , of agriculture and trade as livelihood of his subjects, of taxation to augment his treasury and of soul, body and Bhagwan for his Moksha. The four; conciliation, reward, punishment and division (creating) should be used to have his way. When everything else fails, he should resort to the indifference. There are three types of alliance or treaties. The treaty entered into due to the fear of an enemy is the worst, due to the welcome offered by an enemy is the median (treaty between the equals) and the treaty entered into after accepting wealth from an enemy (after defeat or fear of defeat) is the best. Similarly, victory is of three types; victory gained after bribing the commander of an opposing army is called Arthjay (gained by money power); a victory gained through unethical deceit such as a battle mounted at night or from behind is called AsurJay (demonic victory) and the victory gained through the battle fought according the ethics is called DharmaJay (ethical victory) and the best. Chariots, cavalry mounted on the horses and elephants, infantry, loaders and guides are an overt army while the experts in poisoning and black magic are a king's covert army. A king should learn about the movement of the sun through various Nakshatras and its influences, the topography of the battlefield, art of warfare and personal defence from weapons and black magic. He should know the different types of pincers of battles so that the opposing army can be decimated at the lowest causality rate on his own side. A king should learn how to train elephants and horses for military purpose; how to build chariots, manufacture, maintenance and use of various weapons; causes of rebellion and how to put down a rebellion; how to encourage and raise confidence of his army; traits of friends, foes, indifferent and spies; how to eradicate evil people; the customs of various regions and villages; punishment for various types of crimes and above all his own Dharma from various scriptures. He should befriend four friends of his friends, foes and neutrals to find out their intentions. A wise king should learn warfare, ethics and politics from an eminent guru and expand his kingdom by vanquishing his enemies through the ethical victories. He should undertake an actual battle as the last resort only after exhausting the options of conciliation, reward and division. An ethical king should return the won kingdoms to the heirs of the kings, after signing treaties favourable to him, if they are slain in battles. An enemy king should be imprisoned if captured alive and looked after for the rest of his life because an imprisoned king is more pitiable than a cow. A king who kills the captured prisoners attracts the sin equivalent to killing a Brahmin. A king who mounts war without first trying the three (conciliation, reward and creating division) not only loses a battle but his army and animals as well. Indeed, his kingdom and wealth is lost forever and he turns into a pauper and engages in stealing and robbing for his survival."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! A king should use a third of his income for his personal use and the rest for religious purposes and welfare of his subjects. He should keep his populace in good humour by treating them compassionately, punish the punishable and not punish the unpunishable. The populace of an unjust king becomes morally and sexually corrupt and his kingdom suffers from repeated droughts. A king who collects the tax without protecting his subjects from external and internal dangers is earning only sins. All his Punya is destroyed. The tax, up to the maximum of a sixth of the income, is collected in lieu of granting protection to his populace. A wise king should win his mind before embarking upon winning enemies as only a king whose senses are under his control become victorious. A king should learn the Vedas along with six branches. He should be generous in giving and undertake Yagnas and religious austerities from time to time. He should reward his courtiers and the others who help in running the affairs of the state but at the same time make sure that high officials or his regent do not harass the general public. The public follow on the king's footsteps, so an ethical king's subject become ethical. A good king can prevail good times in his kingdom and establish the religiosity that is synonymous to Satya, Treta, Dwapar or Kali Yug. Indeed, he transforms the time and not vice versa. The king is the cause of prosperity of citizens and security of that prosperity and troubles and fears of populace. A king is subjected to punishment for a thousand years in hell for each day he fails to protect his public and enjoys the pleasure of heaven for ten thousand years for each day his populace feels safe under him. A king is rewarded with a quarter of Punya earned by his subjects if they are protected properly by him. A king should reimburse the stolen wealth of his subjects if he is unable to apprehend thieves or recover their stolen wealth. He should patiently listen to a complaint of a common man against his minister or courtiers and offer them protection against harassment by such elements while being investigated. He should honour wise, learned, famous, influential, truthful, pious, brave and scholars. He should offer financial assistance to the miserly, orphans, old and widows or provide them a means of livelihood. A king should regularly visit the hermitages of the scholar Brahmins, revere them, provide them with grains, clothes and utensils. He should honestly seek their opinion and advice. He should trust such hermits in detrimental times. O Vipra! A king should appoint a headsman to look after the affairs of each village. Similarly and in hierarchical order appoint a responsible person to look after the cluster of ten, a hundred and a thousand villages who would conduct the affairs of the villages under their supervision and report any problems to a higher authority. He should ensure that no one in the position of authority take undue advantage of their positions. A king should tax traders and craftsmen considering their income and expenditure. He should not act upon any allegation without them being substantiated or verified independently. O Brahmin! There are many in this world who speak what one wants to hear but very few who could speak without fear or favour. Hearing unpalatable but beneficial truth is better in the long run. Such speakers have a king's interest in their heart. A wise king should not pay attention to the people who heap gratuitous praise even if they happen

Shree Narayanmuni said, “O pious Brahmin! A king should observe his Dharma without rancour, strive for his Moksha with love, manage stately affairs without using foul language and enjoy pleasures within the boundaries of ethics and splurging wealth. He should be eager to do favours, brave but not adventurous, generous but not giving to unworthy and compassionate but not lax. He should not be at loggerheads with his brothers, not form alliances with evil, not be miser with his spies and not torment anybody. He should not reveal his plans to the untrustworthy or associate with them, not accept anything from the saints, not praise himself, never delegate any work to the greedy, not reveal his secret plans, not punish without investigation and never befriend an ungrateful. A king should defend the honour of women without bias, not keep company of women, be free from hatred and envy, be honest and not indulge much in sweets. He should venerate the Devtas sincerely, honour elders and scholars with humility, serve his guru honestly and accumulate wealth that is just. He must never abuse his enemies. A king should attend to stately affairs in time and should not postpone decisions repeatedly. He should not get angry for trivial reasons, not punish anybody, even an enemy without his fault established and not be lenient towards an ungrateful person. A king with thirty six qualities attains great fame and becomes invincible. A king should appoint a person as a minister who is a patient, thoughtful, tolerant, intelligent, ethical, compassionate, brave, scholar, benevolent, not envious and always temperate whether honoured and insulted by his king. A king’s courtiers should be brave, patient, knowledgeable, truthful, satiated, pious, honest, know the customs of the land and be able to know someone’s hidden intent by his body language and facial expressions. There are five secret ingredients for a successful statecraft: offering assistance - physical or monetary; when and how to initiate actions; not to transgress the limitations of time or place; avoidance of calamity and solution to the problem; and accomplishment of the task which a king must not reveal to others. should forsake ego arising from wealth, knowledge or children and keep his plans secret until they fructify. A wise king should overcome sleep and lethargy. He should never hold secret consultations with lazy, weak, less intelligent and one who delays taking immediate steps. A king should hold secret consultations in his private chambers, on top of a mountain, in a secluded places or an open field. Money, earth (land), mountain, forest, water and humans are the six forts or shields of a king. A king may take shelter among any one of these six, but the last, the human shield is the most difficult for an enemy to overcome. He should take care of people of all four Varnas as happy populace increases the king's fame. A king should keep gamblers, cheats, fakes, lascivious, flirts and alcoholics out of his kingdom as far as practical. He should always honour and respect the wealthy and never cut a fruit bearing tree. A wise king should provide for a means of livelihood to Brahmins. He should take care of orphans, the old and poor. Such a benevolent king never faces any problems. He should not procrastinate in an emergency as any hesitation or delay may invite great malady. A wise king should always defend the cows and Brahmins and wage war where necessary in their defence. He should never take away wealth of a Brahmin or destroy ploughs or other farming implements. Similarly, he must not take away tools of trade of the craftsmen, even when it becomes necessary to forfeit everything from them. A king should not take away weapons, vehicles or musical instruments which are their owners' livelihood nor take away ornaments from a prostitute. O Vipra! Taking away the means of livelihood is worse than beating; therefore, a wise king must never destroy anyone's means of livelihood.

and friends as the members of a judicial tribunal. They must be able to differentiate between justice and injustice after hearing arguments from both parties. Along with his minister, judge, head priest and members of assembly, a king should hear and decide upon eighteen types of disputes. A tribunal of seven, five or at least three members who are knowledgeable in local customs besides the Vedas and Dharmashastra should be set. The four elements must be considered before announcing a verdict in any dispute or allegation. They are Bhasha - noting down the statements and facts pertaining to a case such as names, dates and genders of the parties; Uttar - to hear arguments for and against in the presence of both parties; Kriya - checking the veracity of evidence presented and Sadhyasidhdhi - delivering the verdict after due consideration. The eighteen categories of the disputes are : Runadan - a dispute regarding the debts between a lender and borrower; Nikshep - a dispute pertaining to the security or deposit lodged for safekeeping and its return to the depositor; Aswamivikraya - selling of surety without permission of depositor and an allegation of selling or buying of stolen property; Sambhuya Samuthan - a dispute regarding the division of profit between the business partners; Dattanapkarma - a dispute between trader and customer regarding the sale of unsuitable or faulty products; Samvid Vyatikram - dispute arising out of following the customs described in non-Vedic scriptures or on false pretences; Simavivad - dispute regarding the actual boundaries of field or houses; Steya Sahas - allegation of cornering someone's wealth by stealing, cheating or robbing and abduction of a woman; KrayaVikrayanushay - dispute arising between a seller and buyer of commodities with the alleged prospective appreciation in their value; Swamipal Vivad - a dispute between an owner and cowherd or owner and sharecropper about the wages or returns; Abhyupetyashushrusha - a dispute arising due to one not keeping a promise of taking care of the other; Vakparushya - a dispute arising from taunting or insulting someone about his place of residence, Varna, clan; Dandparupya - an allegation of causing bodily harm by beating someone; Streesangraha - an allegation to lure a woman by inducement or enrage her modesty by touching her; Vetanadan - a dispute between an employer and his employees regarding the wages or other remunerations; Dhyutsamahya - dispute arising due to sharing of returns from gambling; Daybhag - dispute between siblings regarding share in the ancestral assets and Streepurushdharma - a dispute between a wife and husband regarding the behaviour of one party towards the other. O Vipra! These are eighteen different types of disputes that come for hearing in front of a judicial tribunal."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! There are two types of acceptable evidences; human (direct) and divine (indirect). The human evidence, consisting of witnesses, documents and possession is considered the best by ancient sages. I endorse the primacy of human evidence as well. In the absence of direct evidences to make a judgment, a king and tribunal may take one of the eight divine evidences into consideration. Standing on a scale, carrying a red hot ball of steel, dive in spelled (incantation) water, consume poison, drink water that has been used to bath fierce deities, sprinkle rice after incantation to bring on black magic, dip hand in a boiling oil and choose a pot from the two, which have the chits marked Dharma and Adharma hidden within. The unanimous verdict is the best and faultless. A king should consider the subject of dispute, propriety of the evidence submitted, time and place before announcing his verdict. If there is a disagreement within the tribunal on acceptability of human or divine evidences, the king must choose the human evidence, even if that particular evidence is not universally acceptable. A king that arrives upon a verdict based on advice of his tribunal and human evidences, is deemed the best while a king basing his verdict based only on divine evidences while defying the advice of his consuls is deemed despicable. O Vipra! The king's and the tribunal members' intelligence is tested when arriving at a verdict. A judgment arrived at without tormenting anybody is a sign of great intelligence. A head of a tribunal (judge) should ask questions, the king should check the veracity of the answers, one member should note down the evidence and judgment while the other one counts the money collected in the fine (if levied). A king should face East, a writer should face South, a collector should face West and a judge (and additional members) should face North while delivering the judgment. The mornings are the best time to hold courts. Failing that, the courts can be held at any time except the afternoons. A wise king should not consider monetary disputes on Ashtami, Chaudash, Purnima and Amavasya. He should hold a court in the forest for forest dwellers, in a cantonment for soldiers and in the chambers of the trade councils for the traders. A king must consider the local customs pertaining to the place and Varna besides the edicts mentioned in Dharmashastras."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O pious Brahmin! A king should consider the character of a witness, as some vile witnesses are expert at lying for money. A person who licks or bites his lips frequently, cannot stand calmly at one place, speaks hesitantly due to fear, cannot look into the eyes of an inquirer, contradicts himself, is sweating and makes faces should be considered an unreliable witness. However, a king must use his wisdom to distinguish a fake witness from a genuine witness who may speak haltingly due to the nervousness in the presence of members of a tribunal. A person born in a chaste clan, generous, religious, astute, pious and regularly following his ethical routines is considered an ideal witness. Minimum of three witnesses should be called to give evidence. The witness from the same Varna and gender of an accused (or warring parties) are preferable, however, in their absence any other witnesses are acceptable. A woman, child, very old, drunkard, arrogant, gambler, depressed, criminal, thief, disabled, impudent, enemy, atheist, hypocrite, family member, outcast, liar, ballad, partner and writer of fake documents should not be called upon as witnesses to give evidence as they are all unreliable. A woman witness is considered a suitable witness in dispute between women or if an accused is a woman. A witness is tying a thousand nooses around his neck by not telling the truth due to greed, anger or fear or speaks otherwise despite knowing the facts or witnessing an event. A lying witness is said to be freed from one noose every year after his testimony. A person who knowingly levels false accusations against the other person is transgressing the boundary of Dharma. The members of tribunal not knowingly stopping such an accusatorial person become a sinner themselves. A judge earns half and other members earn a quarter of punishment for such a sin while a real transgressor earns the remaining quarter. The fifteen generations (seven ancestors and seven descendants) are ruined and all Punya is destroyed of a witness giving false testimony. Indeed, he suffers the same punishments (in hell) as arsonist and killers. However, someone lying in a court just to save a life of an innocent man or a cow is not punished for telling a lie. A person lying in a court suffers the pains equivalent to that which afflicts a person who has lost his entire wealth, is jailed by a king, is wounded by a tiger, whose son has died, whose husband has abandoned her and remarried or a widow. Therefore, all witnesses and members of a judicial tribunal must always speak truth. O Vipra! A king should decide upon an appropriate punishment as recommended by the judge and pronounce the same after due consideration. He should not levy fines just to augment his treasury; otherwise, all his Punyas are destroyed."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A king should mete out punishment to criminals without considering who the criminal is. He should treat all miscreants equally, be he is a friend, foe or indeed his own son i.e. they should be given the same punishment for the same crime. Justice is above everything and Dharmashastras should always take precedent over Arthshastra (monetary fines) in matter of justice and punishment. The edicts in various Smrutis contradict each other or indeed, sometimes the edicts of the same author (in the same Smruti) contradict each other. Let Me explain the reasons behind it. The sages have categorised men according to their traits - Satvik, Rajas and Tamas and for the benevolence of all. The edicts mentioned therein are liked by the people according to their individual traits. However, the edicts that amplify or emphasise the need to observe the ethics should take precedent over other edicts when a king pronounces the quantum of punishment. The punishment meted out without considering this Dharma brings downfall of a king while punishment given without prejudice and to maintain the ethical constitution of the subjects makes a king invincible. Adharma prevails over Dharma if criminals are not punished as they would become bold and fearless. The administration of justice was prevailed in this world by Rudra at the request of Brahma and the other Devtas when large number of people abandoned Dharma and became miscreants. Punishment and a fear of punishment make people embrace Dharma and behave ethically. Dand (literally a wooden staff but symbolically punishment) Devta, initially venerated by Brahama, Indra and other Devtas remains reverent to all the kings in this world. He is dark complexioned and has four arms, eight legs, numerous eyes and forked tongue. The powerful Dand Devta's body hairs stand upright, his ears are like long sharpened nails and he wears armour of a tiger's skin and holds a machete in his hand. He roams the world looking at the deeds of everybody. The Devtas, demons and humans fear frightening Dand Devta and remain within their Dharma. People do not kill or harm the others due to the fear of Dand, the punishment. Indeed, the world would become chaotic without this fear. A king must use punishment to defend Dharma and people live in harmony due to fear of punishment. However, the punishment meted out must conform to the scriptures and not be whimsical. Punishment is to bring people onto the path of religion and not to mete out capital punishment at will."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, “O Brahmin! A pious king must not give death sentences to Brahmins, devotees of Bhagwan, Tyagi and orphans even if they commit grave crimes such as murdering a Brahmin or treason. Their faces and arms should be branded with hot iron so that everybody knows of their crime and banished permanently from the kingdom. A king should imprison a Brahmin rather than kill him even in a battle. Incidentally, he should not kill a tired warrior, a frightened, crying due to pain or sorrow, child, old, diseased, one who is not ready or prepared to fight, helpless, Shudra, beggar, one who has come under his shelter, eunuch, unarmed, fighting with somebody else, onlooker, distracted, bewildered, charioteer, messenger, running away from a battle, whose hair or Dhoti - lower garment - are untied, terrified, a warrior without charioteer, whose horse has been killed, taken shelter on a tree, one without armour, dining, horse, elephant and bullock even in battle. Just as fire is doused by water, a king’s bravery is destroyed by punishing a Brahmin. Therefore, O Vipra! A king must never torment Brahmins. He should not give corporal punishment to his parents, guru and saints. He must not pass capital punishment against a female species of any animals including women. A Brahmin or a scholar of the Vedas should not be punished for stealing for survival. Indeed, a king should provide food, shelter and a means of living to poor Brahmins, widows, orphans, Tyagi and destitute. If they do not stop stealing despite given ample assistance, they should be exiled from the kingdom along with their family. A king must never kill a messenger, no matter how dreadful news or message he brings. A messenger should be pious, soft spoken, virtuous, able to deliver the message as it is without adding or subtracting anything. A king surely goes to hell for killing such a messenger. A king and his minister are consigned to hell called Kumbhipak for taking away a means of living of a Brahmin, saint, orphan or the distressed. A king is forced to be reborn as an insect in faeces for sixty thousand years for destroying the livelihood of a Brahmin. He should always be kind towards the distressed and orphans. A poor man's eyes are like fire and poison which destroy a king and his clan that torments them. He never comes out of his troubles. A king and his courtiers are destroyed whose poor subjects are not protected from being tormented by the others. Any arrogant person tormenting the poor will ultimately perish along with his family. To remove sorrows of and care for the poor, helpless and aged is the primary duty of a king. He must not forsake this primary duty of a Kshatriya due to fear, greed, enmity or lethargy. The kings of bygone eras such as King Yudhisthir's fame have remained intact until today due to the adherence of their royal duty of caring and providing for their subjects."

Thus ends the 28th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 29

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram! The fulfilment and pleasure of the Brahmins strengthens a king's kingdom while their displeasure obliterates the same in no time. When the Brahmins can make even Devtas serve them with the power of their religious austerity, think what they could not grant a king if they become happy with him? Many kings of the bygone eras had earned great fame and Punya by venerating the Brahmins and at the same time many mighty kings had fallen wayside due to their arrogance towards Brahmins. Many Devtas and demons have suffered great ignominy due the curses of angry Brahmins. Therefore, a king wishing the best for himself must always revere and honour Brahmins. Otherwise, he may become a pauper in a very short time. A king must never ignore or insult Brahmins. They must be taken care of and venerated at all times. Brahmins know, explain, espouse, propagate and defend Dharma. They write treatises and scriptures to maintain the tradition of Dharma in the world. Their gratitude keeps the Devtas and humans alive as they conduct all Yagnas. Whatever oblation that is offered to the Devtas, Pitris and sacred fires are offered first to Brahmins in a form of food. Therefore, they are deemed the first recipients of all oblations. Brahmins are the Veda's garden where they (the Vedas) feel at ease. Brahmins are aware of the activities of all living beings. O Vipra! Brahmins can grant divinity to an ordinary person and can take away divinity of a divine. They are capable of creating newer worlds. A fire is still raging in a forest call Dandak and the water of the oceans have become saline due to their curses. Not only adults but a Brahmin child is equally respectable. Brahmins are reverent from the birth and they become even more reverent due to their knowledge and religious austerity. They are authoritative among the authentic. When even an unlearned Brahmin is considered as one of the most appropriate recipient of charity, what can be said of a highly scholar Brahmin? He is another form of the Devta. Just as fire is always pure whether lighted with hymns (e.g. a sacred fire) or without, a Brahmin is reverent whether knowledgeable or not. Just as the flames of a fire remains pure whether they belong to a sacred fire or funeral pyre, a Brahmin always remain reverent whether a scholar or not. All people and especially the kings should venerate Brahmins. An irate Brahmin can be a cause of a lost empire. A king should regularly feed Brahmins with Ladoos, Jalebi and other sweets made from Ghee and sugar. A pious king should take whatever necessary steps to satisfy Brahmins with sumptuous meals. O Shivram! Believe Me, Lord Narayan is more pleased by offering food to Brahmins than offering the same to the sacred fire. Brahmins should be fed with the same love as one feeds Bhagwan Narayan. They should be given ample Dakshina after food and before they return to their homes. A king should feed one, ten, hundred, thousand or ten thousand Brahmins and gift them with money, cows, gold and silver as per his financial capabilities. He should observe his birthdays and other Vrats by gifting Brahmins with various items described in the scriptures."

Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram Vipra! A king should dig wells and lakes and build step wells and water sanctuaries so that others besides the Brahmins quench their thirst. A person who builds a lake big enough to store water even in summer never undergoes any problems. A person earns great Punya by feeding Brahmins every month or every season with mango pulp and milk pudding. A king should offer milk, rice, Ghee and other foods to the sacred fire to please the Devtas and offer money and clothes to Brahmins to please them. A king should build magnificent temples, establish Murtis therein and arrange for their upkeep. He should also build caravanserais and seminaries and provide for their future upkeep and provide housing and clothing for Brahmins. A king should gift the fruit orchards and flower gardens to the Brahmins. A king should take a large number of his subjects on a pilgrimage to earn the Punya of many Yagnas. Venerating a single Brahmin with due reverence while keeping his senses under control, a king earns more Punya than any other rite. A king should provide food for the hungry as charity of food is considered very highly. A charity of food is one of the best charities as it helps sustain life. Therefore, a king should build food sanctuaries in all his villages, where the hungry can eat merrily. A king satisfies the Devtas by providing food to poor, travellers, Brahmins and guests. A king's Punya is diminished every time a person goes without food for the night. Therefore, O Vipra! A king should seek the hungry from his town and make sure they are fed. A provider of food is considered a giver of a life and its Punya is immense. He goes to heaven in a golden and radiant aeroplane which is replete with various varieties of food, clothes and Apsaras adorned with gold ornaments. Gandharvas sing his glory and he enjoys the pleasures of heaven for a very very long time to come.

Thus ends the 29th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O chaste Brahmin! A king himself must not only refrain from eating meat himself, he must stop his subjects from eating meat. Ahinsa is the most sacred Dharma held higher than any other aspect of Dharma. Therefore, all people must forsake violence by mind, speech, body and association. Just as an animal cannot survive for long with its one leg severed, Ahinsa Dharma cannot survive with any one of the four mentioned above missing. A man first forsakes violence by mind and then progress towards non-violence by giving it up by speech and deeds. A man who has forsaken violence does not indulge in eating meat. A king is deemed a father of all living beings and all animals are deemed his children, therefore, he should protect all life from being killed and a fear of being killed. A man who knowingly consumes meat just to satiate his palate is indeed a demon. Many kings of bygone eras had given up their own lives to protect the lives of others. King Sibi even gave his own flesh to protect a life. As a result they attained heaven. All the great sages, including sixty thousand sages led by Sage Valkhilya that walk in front of the sun forbid eating meat. Whenever and wherever it is mentioned on the sacrifice of animals in Yagna, it is mentioned to diminish the wanton killing of animals by people of Rajas and Tamas tendencies. In reality, the Vedas does not espouse the killing of any animals. A wise king should appoint his elder son as a king in his place in his old age and spend the rest of his life in devotion of Bhagwan in the company of devout and pious saints away from the urban areas. Such a devout king indeed goes to Bhagwan's supreme abode after his death. A king killed in a battle goes to heaven, where he enjoys various pleasures for a long time. He gets a human life once again so that he can overcome his desires in the company of the devotees before attaining Shree Hari's supreme abode. However, a king courts great ignominy in this life and severe punishments of hell after his death for eons if he transgresses his ethical duties due to his arrogance or self-beliefs. He still does not get respite from the cycle of death and rebirth and has to take innumerable births in the species of insects, birds and animals."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Brahma compiled a scripture of one hundred thousand chapters called Nitishastra (science of political ethics) at the beginning of creation for the guidance of the kings. Lord Shiva abridged it in ten thousand chapters and named it Vaishalksha. Indra, the king of the Devtas, abridged it further and called it Baahudant. With the passage of time and diminished wisdom of mankind, Sage Brahaspati shortened it further and named it Barhaspatya which consisted of three thousand chapters. Sage Shukracharya abridged Barhaspatya further into a hundred chapters and made it prevalent all over the world to make the kings aware of their ethical duties. Sage Bhardwaj at first and many other sages since then have abridged the original Nitishastra even further considering the shortened lifespan and diminished wisdom of people at large. O wise Brahmin! I have reiterated the same ethics of a king in short. The central theme of all the scripture pertaining to Niti (ethics) is that a king should protect his subjects by observing his Dharma. Whichever king rules by these ethics will surely enjoy the pleasures of heaven in the company of Indra. Any Grahastha man observing his Dharma with Bhagwan's devotion attains His supreme abode. He will surely attain heaven even if he observes his Dharma sincerely without devotion towards Bhagwan. He will enjoy the pleasures of heaven for a very long time before getting birth as man in a pious household. He will progress on the path of righteous

CHAPTER 31

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! Let Me now narrate Dharma of Sadhava and Vidhava separately. I shall reiterate what Sati, the wife of Lord Shiva had narrated to Ganga and other pious women gathered at Mountain Kailash. A woman born in a good clan and married to a suitable man with the consent of her father and brothers is called Sadhva. A woman whose husband has died is called Vidhava whose Dharma regarding the opposite sex are akin to those of a Sanyasi. These are two types of Sadhva ladies; adulteress and faithful. An adulterous woman may be born in a good family but she is foul natured, quarrelsome and does not believe in ethics. Such an injudicious woman detests her husband and thinks about other men. She scorns her virtuous husband. Due to her lascivious nature, she eyes other men with lust and treats them as if Eros personified. She is quickly overwhelmed by lust upon seeing a handsome, masculine or well-groomed man. Though already married, she takes a paramour to satisfy her lust. She cannot be controlled by her guru, father, husband or sons. Even a king is unable to control her wayward ways. She likes nobody, but at the same time she can make anyone dear for her means. Just as a wondering cow roams from one field to another in search of fresh grass, an adulterous woman desires newer man all the time. She is not interested in housework, Vrat, religious rituals but only in other men. She loves other men more than she loves her guru or other elder relatives."

Shree Hari continued, "O wise Brahmin! The adulterous women are further categorised in three according to the men they desire and associate with. A Svairini likes men of the same Varna as herself, Kamini likes men of any Varna while Punschali not only like men of any Varna, she also likes men who are related to her. All three types of adulterous women suffer the punishments of hell for a very long time and never attain salvation. A wife who remains faithful to her husband and loves him more than even her life is called Pativrata. She respects and loves her husband more than any Devta, demon or man. A Pativrata wife undertakes Vrat, Daan, Japa, Homa, austerity and worship of Bhagwan under her husband's guidance and instructions. Just as the mind of a man with just one son is occupied in his son; just as a devotee's mind is occupied in Bhagwan; just as a thirsty man thinks nothing except his thirst; just as a hungry man is preoccupied with the thoughts of food; just as a lascivious man constantly thinks of a woman; just as a man with one eye is thinking about his vision and just as the thieves always think of ways to corner somebody's wealth; an adulterous woman is constantly thinking about the other men. Just as the scholars are engrossed in the scriptures and just as traders are engrossed in their business, a Pativrata woman's mind is engrossed in her husband. I shall narrate Dharma of Pativrata women, following which they attain Sati Lok which is desirable even to the wives of the Devtas."

Thus ends the 31st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O pious Brahmin! A husband is deemed God for a Pativrata wife; therefore she must venerate her husband with equal fervour as she venerates Bhagwan. She should wake up early and after concluding her morning rituals, washing up utensils and wearing fresh clothes, she should start serving her husband. She should provide him warm water for bath, fresh clothes to wear and message his feet. She should sit her husband on a chair and smear his forehead, arms and chest with sandalwood paste before garlanding him. She should then bow down to him and venerate him lovingly with whatever artefacts at her disposal whilst chanting the hymn - 'Namah Kantay'. She should cook tasty food for her husband and eat only after feeding him. A pious woman should wake up before her husband and sleep after her husband has gone to bed. She should always deck herself for her husband and give up wearing ornaments while the husband is away. She should never address her husband with his name. Indeed she should not call anybody by name whose name is same as her husband's. She should not retort to her husband's harsh or angry words nor should she get angry if her husband beats her up. She should always speak to her husband politely and softly and never in a loud tone. She should give up whatever she is doing and immediately attend to her husband when he summons her and obey all his commands obligingly. She should have everything ready what her husband needs or might need including utensils needed for worship in the morning without asking for them. She should eat what is left over after her husband has eaten and accept everything happily that her husband gives. She should eat only after offering food to the Pitris, guests, cows, alms seekers and servants. She should always endeavour to provide food for the Brahmins, poor, orphans and disabled. A Pativrata wife must not undertake fast or Vrat without prior permission from her husband. She should place all household utensils at their proper place and not waste or splurge money. She should not attend weddings or other social functions and not go on a pilgrimage without her husband's consent. She should not disturb her husband's rest without an important reason."

Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! A Pativrata wife should not speak nor show her face to her husband during the three days of her menses and behave normally only after the bath on the fourth day. She should not look at any other man. She should look at the Sun and reminiscence about her husband during his absence from home. She should never be without Kumkum Chandlo, Sindoor in her hair, kohl in her eyes, Mangalsutra around her neck, a blouse, bangles, earrings, nose ring and plaited hair if she desires her husband's longevity. She should never associate with a washerwoman, eunuch, prostitute, evil minded, impatient, gluttonous, jealous, untrustworthy and misfortunate. She must never befriend a woman who does not have faith in religion and its rituals, follows a pretentious faith, cheats the gullible, wears masculine clothes, talks too much, frequently visits others' homes, gambles, drinks alcohol, backbites, endeavours to defeat others, steals and who has an enmity with her husband. She should not remain alone nor should she bath naked. A Pativrata wife should not sit on a grinding stone, high chair or stool, broom, machine, piece of rock and threshold. She should always maintain modesty except when cavorting with her husband and develop interest in her husband's hobbies. She should not visit the neighbours without reason nor use embarrassing or insulting words. She should always respect her in-laws by not speaking loudly or rudely to them. A pious wife should not talk to or touch other men; however she may speak when necessary to a shopkeeper, doctor, Sanyasi or an old man. She should not even ogle at a male animal species either. She should not quarrel with others nor level false allegations against anyone. For a true Pativrata wife, her husband is the most divine. Therefore, she must never disobey him even if he is poor, diseased, impotent and ill-fated or has bad habits or nature. She should be happy in her husband's happiness, sad in his sorrows and love him equally in affluence and poverty. She should never use the term 'finished' or 'don't have it' even when there is no salt, Ghee or oil in their home. She should never push her husband in any activity that is beyond him. A wise Pativrata wife should rush forward to greet her husband arriving home and offer him water and a seat; fan him and massage his feet and speak to him lovingly to give him respite from fatigue. A husband is her Devta, her guru, her shrine, indeed her everything; therefore, she must never insult her husband. She should treat another man with total disdain even if he is handsome, wealthy, cultured or indeed a Devta. She should always follow her husband like his shadow as she took a vow to follow him at the time of her marriage. She should undertake Vrat, fast, etc. religious austerities and rituals with her husband's consent. O Dwij! I just narrated Dharma of a Pativrata Sadhava woman. A true Pativrata wife is a rarity in this world"

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Vipra! A Pativrata wife should atone immediately for any deviation, however small, from any of the abovementioned Dharma. She should observe a fast for a day for each inadvertent transgression. She should undertake a 'PadKrutchh' Vrat for swearing at him; fast for four days for beating him and undertake a 'Parak' Vrat which involves fasting for twelve consecutive days for beating her husband with a stick. A wife undertaking any Vrat without her husband's consent reduces his life span and goes to hell after her death. Her fast, charity and other Punyas are futile as she has transgressed from her Dharma. Only a wife who reveres her husband with thought, speech and deeds earns Punya mentioned in the scriptures. Indeed, the whole world depends upon the chastity, patience, piety and tenderness of the Pativrata wives. There are various atonements prescribed for swearing, beating, etc. but nothing is prescribed for losing her chastity. An adulterous woman can never be called a Pativrata even after repenting. She is never able to attain Moksha. She is forced to be reborn in thousands of species of birds and suffers in her each life. Even if she gets a human life ever again, she is born in the lowest of the low caste. Therefore, a woman must guard her chastity at any cost. O Vipra! A wife who retorts angrily to her husband is reborn as a bitch or a fox; a wife who abandons her husband for another man is reborn as an owl; a wife who attacks her husband is reborn as a tigeress or cat, a wife who ogles at other man is reborn as cross eyed or blind in one eye; a wife who eats delicacies without giving to her husband is reborn as a hog or bat; a wife who addresses her husband without due respect becomes mute in her next life; a wife who mistreats her husband's second wife with envy remains inopportune in her next lives and a wife who secretly admires other men becomes ugly in her next life. An adulterous wife suffers great pains in this and the next life and throws three clans - her parents' and husband's - in hell. Even a virtuous husband falls from grace by his wife's adultery. A woman must defend her chastity. She should not defile her body, which Bhagwan has granted her to attain Moksha by observing her Dharma, for miniscule immoral pleasures."

Shree Hari continued, "O pious Brahmin! A woman attains great fame while alive and heaven after her death if she observes her Dharma faithfully. She is befriended by Laxmiji. A pious woman may abandon her husband if he becomes irreligious or commits a grave sin such as killing a Brahmin. She should accept him when he mends his ways or becomes chaste once again after undergoing suitable repentance. A Pativrata wife gets to enjoy the pleasures of heaven with her husband for millions of years as a result of Punya earned by observing her Dharma. Both parents and a husband of a Pativrata wife, who is Laxmiji personified, are indeed very fortunate. She redeems her three families - mother's, father's and husband's. Indeed, she is able to redeem her drunkard and non-virtuous husband besides herself. A husband gets a Pativrata wife as a result of Punyas of one hundred lives. The sun, wind and fire are scared to touch her and whenever they touch her, it is to redeem themselves. All the shrines of the world reside in her feet and her body swathes the aura of saints and divinity of the Devtas. The earth becomes holy by her touch and sinners redeem themselves by bowing down to her. A Pativrata wife has the power to ravage the world. She is as chaste and powerful as Arundhati, Savitri, Shandili, Satya, Draupadi, Shatrupa, Mena, Suniti, Sangna, Swaha and Lopamudra. However, a pious Pativrata wife does not dwell in every home, they are very rare indeed. The wives in most of the homes are akin to the bitches. Only some auspicious homes have a true Pativrata, whom even the Devis bow down to."

Thus ends the 32nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 33

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sinless Brahmin! Pativrata wives can be categorised into three types - the best, median and the lowest. The lowest, observing Dharma of Pativrata wife totally, desire sexual gratification from her husband. She tries to entice her husband with her beauty, charms and words. She cannot control her mind on seeing a handsome and virtuous man but does not commit physical adultery. A median Pativrata wife, whilst observing her Dharma faithfully, does not covet physical pleasures from her husband but enjoys sex when initiated by her husband. She is able to control her mind, speech and body when she sees other men wealthier, more handsome, more virtuous and more masculine than her husband. Normally, she does not desire a man other than her husband even in her dreams; however, she may give into temptation if the time, place, company so conspire. She does not ask or initiate any sexual interaction with her husband but enjoys what is given to her with pleasure.

The best Pativrata wife is not tempted by other man, however superior he is to her husband, even if place, time and company are unfavourable. She does not covet other man even under the influence of intoxicating substances or under a mental spell. She does not covet nor enjoy sexual pleasures. She gives in to her husband's demands nonchalantly without getting excited just as one eats tasty food after sucking many lemons. She treats her and man's body and such pleasure of no consequence while in pursuit of eternal pleasures of Bhagwan's Bhakti. She does not even mind if her husband marries for the second time for his sexual gratification and serves the second wife with servility. However, Shivram! Such pious Pativrata woman is a rarity in this world. Even the Devtas are unable to look at them with the intention to deviate them from their chastity. The lowest Pativrata becomes median Pativrata after seven births and she in turn becomes the best after another seven births."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Brahmin! Now listen to what happens to these three categories of Pativrata after the death of their husbands. The best Pativrata wife gets a definitive premonition of the exact time and date of her husband's death. She can see her and her husband's past seven or more lives exactly as they transpired. She attains the unison with her husband prior to his death and her soul becomes free from her body prior to her entering her husband's funeral pyre to immolate herself. As the fire burns her soulless dead body, she suffers no pain. She does not attract the sin of committing suicide as her soul had already transmigrated to Sati Lok before she entered the pyre. The median Pativrata wife gets an intuition of her husband's death on the day of his death and she becomes aware of her and her husband's past life. She enters the funeral pyre of her husband with bravery and patiently bears the pain of burning just like a warrior on a battlefield. The lowest Pativrata wife does not get any premonition of her husband's death nor can she see any of her or husband's past lives. She knows that she would neither be able to maintain her chastity and dignity nor be able to observe the Dharma of a Vidhava faithfully after her husband's death. Therefore, she enters her husband's funeral pyre to save herself and her father's family from ignominy. She suffers the pain of burning but does not come out due to the fear of disapproval of the society. All three types of Pativrata wives attain Sati Lok. O Vipra! The best Pativrata enjoys the best pleasures with her husband, the median Pativrata enjoys average pleasures with her husband while the lowest Pativrata wife enjoys the lowest pleasures of Sati Lok with her husband. However, a Pativrata wife who is pregnant or ha small children; devout; desirous of Moksha; able to observe Dharma of a Vidhava and who understands the true status of Aatma and Parmatma must not immolate herself on her husband's funeral pyre. She should rather spend her life in devotion of Bhagwan. Just like Dharma of Varna and Ashram, Dharma of Pativrata wife can be with or without Bhagwan's Bhakti. A reward for observing Dharma of Pativrata sincerely without Bhagwan's Bhakti is Sati Lok while observing same Dharma with Bhagwan's devotion is His supreme abode. She enjoys the same pleasures of Golok that Laxmiji enjoys and her husband too becomes His Parshad."

Shree Hari continued, "O pious Brahmin! The wives of Acharya must observe these Dharmas of Pativrata in common with all My female disciples. However, they need to observe extra and specific Dharma as the gurus of all female devotees. They must never eat anything before offering it to Bhagwan first, except during her menses or in childbed. They must not speak, touch, look at or show their faces to any man other than their close relatives. After narrating Dharma of Sadhava women, let Me narrate Dharma of Vidhava next."

Thus ends the 33rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 34

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A Vidhava's braided hair is the cause of her husband being entangled in the cycle of death and rebirth. If she wishes to keep her hair, she must leave them untied and flowing. She should shear her hair at a shrine or on an auspicious day. She should not eat a second meal or sleep on a bed except in ill health; associate with irreligious women; bath naked; use perfumes or massage her body with oil; be gluttonous; ride a bullock even as a last resort and she should overcome her anger. She should not consume meat, alcohol, tobacco and stimulating spices such as cloves. She should not consume milk and milk products except during the period of ill health. She should not wear clothes that are very fine or Shree Hari continued, "O pious Brahmin! A Vidhava needs not spend money even for religious charity if she has just about enough money to last her lifetime. She may face deprivation or have to seek someone's assistance for survival if her life saving is used up. This may lead her to compromise with her Dharma. She should not go to see dancing troupes, social festivals, men playing games, group of visiting pilgrims and foreign armies and princes. drawback if she touches a very young boy or needs to speak to a man to save her life from the danger of fire, water or wild animals. She should not wear or touch men's clothes except those washed, put on line to dry or that are new. She should not think amorously about men, look at the images depicting couples making love, touch the statues of men and look at birds or animals having sex. She should never befriend a man even to accomplish her objectives. A Vidhava should not go to answer the call of nature at the places frequented by men for the same purpose nor ever look at their genitals. She should not look men in the eyes nor try to communicate with them by the sign language. She should walk at least a metre away from men. She should avoid touching men in crowded places such as a temple or whilst attending religious festivals. She must never stay in a house occupied by a lone male. She should not sit in an assembly of men, nor allow her breasts, navel or thighs to be exposed to others. She should avoid frequent fleeting movements of her limbs in the presence of men. She should not use a woman to relay secret messages to or exchange any items with a man. Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O Vipra! The decrees that a Vidhava must not speak, talk or look at the men pertain to the men who are not her close relatives. Her father, uncle, paternal aunt's husband, maternal grandfather, maternal uncle, maternal aunt's husband, sister's husband, father-in-law, uncle-in-law, husband's elder and younger brothers, son-in-law, guru, sons and their sons and grandsons are deemed her close relatives. She can speak, touch or look at her close male relatives provided they are religious and pious and not otherwise. She should keep no relation with wicked or immoral male relatives and stay with a close male relative who can protect her chastity. A true father is the one who protects a widow from glaring eyes of society, even if he is not her real father a true brother or son is one who helps her defend her Dharma and not the one who fails to offer her such protection. to a Vidhava is her true father, brother or son even if they are not her real relatives. A pious widow should always live with her father, brother or son and under their guidance. She must never live independently if she wishes to defend her Dharma. There is no drawback if a Vidhva looks at, speaks with or touches her guardians directly or indirectly, i.e. touching their clothes, etc. In absence of suitable male relatives, a widow should seek the king's refuge. A Vidhava must never commit any acts that bring shame on her and her family."

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram! Now I shall tell you about how a widow should manage her means of livelihood. She may speak to or touch her male customers in line of her duty as a farmer or trader to sustain herself. However, this must be restricted for limited time and circumstances that demand such actions. There is a danger that she may be coaxed or enticed to deviate from her Dharma if she is not able to earn her living. A Vidhava should worship Bhagwan Vishnu with whatever artefacts are at her disposal or perform Manasi Puja. In absence of her husband, she should consider Bhagwan as her husband. She should continue to perform Japa, meditation and Manasi Puja regularly during the period of her menses, Sutak or illness herself; and ask another woman to worship Bhagwan with actual artefacts during such periods. She should spend all her free time in Bhagwan's Bhakti. A Vidhava must never accept food from the Sanyasins, Brahamcharis and Anashramis as their food diminishes her intellect."

Thus ends the 34th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 35

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Brahmin! The Vidhavas must observe all Vrats such as Ekadashi and Janmashtami in common with all Satsangis. However, a pious Vidhava must observe additional Vrats as per her abilities on a regular basis. She could undertake Triratra (fasting for three consecutive days), Panchratra (for five days), Pakshvrat (fasting for a bright or dark fortnight) or Masvrat (for a month). She could observe Chandrayan, Kruchch, Parak or Truptkruchch Vrats or she could try to survive on milk, vegetables, fruits or light grains like Samo or Nimar. She should be undergoing one or other Vrat for her whole life. Additionally, a Vidhva should give Brahmins the water pitchers in Vaishakh, Ghee in Kartik and grain in Magh . She could construct water sanctuaries or gardens and donate fans, umbrellas, clothes, etc. to the needy and gift Brahmins with a variety of fruits. She should give all or some of these with the sole purpose of pleasing her husband (now Bhagwan). She may keep a Vrat of eating only barley or a single kind of grain during the month of Kartik. She should give up aubergines, pulses, oil, honey, salt in vegetables or eating in a bell-metal plate. She should gift Brahmins with small bells if she keeps a Vrat of silence and pitchers of Ghee if she had decided to eat in leaf plates. She should give various fruits, rice or other grain, Ghee or oil and beddings if she had given up fruits, cereal, oil or Ghee or sleeping on a mattress during the month of Kartik. Additionally, she should gift Brahmins with cows and gold if her wealth permits. Gifting of lamps filled with Ghee in Kartik is more rewarding than all the other charities mentioned above, therefore, a Vidhava should endeavour to gift them to Brahmins as per her ability."

Shree Hari continued, "O sinless Vipra! A Vidhva should undertake Magh Snaan (a bath in open lake before dawn) like all devotees. She should also observe Niyams of Kartik month as per her abilities. She should provide sumptuous sweets such as Penda and Jalebi to Brahmins, Brahamcharis and saints. She should also give firewood, quilts, blankets and other warm clothes; spices such as cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg and scented oils for massage to Brahmins. Whatever she gives, she should give just to please Bhagwan. A Vidhava should regularly undertake such Niyams during the months of Vaishakh, Kartik and Magh for the rest of her life. A Vidhava without any Niyams or austerities is overwhelmed by lust, just as bitches and monkeys become lascivious in the month of Kartik. To strengthen her resolve to undertake Niyams and observe her Dharma, she should regularly listen to Katha of the scriptures from a pious narrator. She should always behave (with mind, speech and action) which conforms to her Dharma. She should not behave in anyway which might bring her disrepute. A Vidhava, along with her dead husband, attains Sati Lok by observing her Dharma sincerely. O Vipra! The same Niyams and Dharma, if observed to please Bhagwan with His constant reminiscence leads a Vidhava to Bhagwan's supreme Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! I shall now narrate atonement for any inadvertent lapse from her Dharma, undertaking which, she becomes sin free again. She should undertake a fast for a day for braiding her hair. For eating a second meal, sleeping on a bed, associating with an irreligious woman; bathing naked; eating too much, massaging her body with oil, splashing perfumes, riding a bullock, consuming milk or milk products or eating stimulating spices such as cloves. For wearing clothes that are very fine or embroidered with gold threads or against the norms of society; moving about only in a bodice; applying nail varnish, Kohl or lipstick; applying Sindoor in her parting of hair or a Kumkum Chandlo on her forehead; wearing flower garlands around her neck, bangles or other gold ornaments and massaging her body with oils, a Vidhava should undertake a fast for a day as repentance. The fast for a day is meant to be undertaken for each and every lapse. She should undertake a fast for a day for any of these lapses; for wearing dresses similar to a Sadhava, Sanyasin, street dancer or male; for wearing ornaments suitable only to a Sadhava such as nose ring and Mangalsutra; for plucking her eyebrows; for frolicking around aimlessly; for visiting the neighbours on her own and for sitting in her father's or other old relative's lap. A fast for a day must be undertaken as a token of repentance for speaking aloud, in jest or brazenly in the presence of her parents and in-laws, for disputing or arguing with her in-laws; for swearing at anybody; for indulging in amorous tales of men with her mother or listening to them; for levelling false allegations against or gossiping about anybody and for splashing colours during the festival of Holi. A Vidhava should fast for a day as repentance for befriending the sinners, Sanyasis, licentious, atheist, brazen, charlatan, hypocrites and women who know how to abort a foetus or medicines to induce an abortion and people who are born in a family lower than even the Shudras, know black magic, convey the messages between men and women and are amorous."

Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! A pious Vidhava should undertake a fast for a day for visiting a pious Pativrata woman whose husband is notorious for his nefarious activities or a pious woman born in a very low clan; going to see dancing shows or social festivals; for going alone to see men playing games; looking at or thinking about men amorously and speaking or touching them with intent; listening to the tales describing the valour and beauty of men; wearing or touching men's clothes; looking at the images depicting couples making love or at birds or animals having sex; touching the statues of men lasciviously or befriending a man even to accomplish her objectives. She should fast for a day if she goes to answer the call of nature at the places frequented by men for the same purpose or looks at their genitals; looks at men in the eyes or tries to communicate with them by the gestures of hand or eyes; walks within a metre of men in an open space; stays in a house occupied by a lone male; she allows her breasts, navel or thighs to be exposed to others, especially men; sits in an assembly of men, even a religious one; she conducts any clandestine business with any man without the knowledge of her in-laws; admires herself vainly in a mirror; walks on a deserted road or stays in secluded places with any man including a close relative such as a brother; fails to show decorum such as frequent fleeting movements of her limbs in the presence of men; she wastes any of her free time without reminiscing of Bhagwan or fails to perform her regular Puja or Japa. O Vipra! If she is living alone, a Vidhava must never allow any male to enter her home. She should fast for a day if any man enters her home even if he leaves the very moment after entering or she drives him out by shouting at him. She should fast for four days if she does not drive him out immediately or she does not run outside the home herself. She should fast for a day for cavorting with a strange man in her dreams and undertake PadKrutchch Vrat if that man happens to be her close relative."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O pious Brahmin! A Vidhava should undertake Chaandrayan Vrat for spending her wealth which necessitates her to serve others or beg for her survival. She needs only to take a bath to redeem herself from the touch of a man and chant Bhagwan's name five hundred times for speaking to a man for buying or selling something such as hay, firewood or grain. She should undergo double the atonement (fast for two consecutive days) for looking, speaking or touching lasciviously at her close male relatives. For having actual sexual contact with six - a Tyagi, widower, faithful husband, dependant, trusted associate and an unwilling; A Vidhva must atone by undertaking a Vrat for year which entails eating Sathvo and fasting on alternate days. A feeble Vidhava unable to stand the rigours of such a Vrat may eat bread/Roti made of a single cereal on alternate days. A widow even feebler to withstand the second option may eat twice on her days of eating and drink water or buttermilk on the alternate days of fast. O Vipra! She may abandon this Vrat temporarily for a period of ill health, which should be concluded once she recovers from her illness. A widow unable to undertake this rigorous Vrat for a year should nonetheless perform this Vrat for nine, six or three months. This repentance applies for the sin that has become public knowledge. Let Me tell you what a Vidhava should do if the sin has not become public. She should sit in front of Bhagwan's Murti and chant His name 'Narayan' five hundred times. She should continue this process for six months and eat only one meal a day and that too, after completing her Japa. She should atone for half the aforementioned repentance for having sex with any other male except the six mentioned above. A Vidhava should undertake Chaandrayan Vrat for stealing gold or inadvertent consumption of meat or alcohol. It is nigh impossible to undertake the severe atonement for having sex, stealing gold and consuming meat or alcohol prescribed in the Dharmashastras in the present Kali Yug. Therefore, I have mentioned the lighter atonement for such sins."

Shree Hari said, "O Brahmin! For stealing food such as vegetables, milk or yoghurt or utensils, a Vidhava should fast for a day. For stealing more expensive things such as sweets or Ghee, she should fast for two days. Atonement should be increased progressively with the value of the stolen items. For inadvertent killing of small insects such as lice, mosquitoes or flies, a Vidhava should fast for a day which should be doubled for larger animals such as a mouse or snake. Depending on the value of life of the animals killed, the numbers of days of fast should be increased or decreased. Any Vidhava committing suicide becomes a ghost or is reborn as a low life such as a snake after enduring the punishments of hell. She should undertake a Chaandrayan Vrat for not fasting on days of Vrats such as Ekadashis, accepting food from a Sanyasi, Brahamchari or an Anashrami or committing any acts that bring shame on her or her family. Atonements mentioned above are for an inadvertent single lapse and not for the repeated or deliberate lapses."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram! Atonement is deemed successful only when the whole day is spent in reminiscence of Bhagwan by listening to or singing Kirtans. A fast of Ekadashi or other Vrats should not be counted as a fast of repentance. A fast for repentance should be undertaken on Teras or two days after other Vrats. Similarly, if a fast of Ekadashi or Vrats comes during the fast of atonement, the entire fast should be done consequently. Only water or buttermilk and not fruits and nuts can be taken on a day of fast. A Vidhava becomes free from her sin and attains bliss after undergoing proper repentance. Contrary, she surely has to endure the punishments of hell for failing to undergo proper repentance. The Vidhavas redeemed from their sin, either after undergoing atonement or end of punishments of hell is transported to Golok accompanied by Bhagwan's Parshads. They get an opportunity to serve Laxmiji due to their diligence in observing their Dharma. A Vidhva observing her Dharma sincerely but without Bhagwan's Bhakti is rewarded with residence in Sati Lok immediately upon her death provided she had atoned for her sins. Otherwise, she goes to ati Lok only after enduring the punishments of hell. After narrating to you the Dharmas of Vidhva and atonement for the lapses, I shall now narrate to you how Sadhava and Vidhava should perform Bhagwan's Puja."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Dwij! All devout women, Sadhava and Vidhava alike, should worship Bhagwan Vaasudev daily without fail. I shall describe the Vidhi of Puja in short. They should wake up early, bath with clean water, wear white clothes and get ready for Puja by performing Achman. A woman devotee should gather sieved water in a clean bowl, sandalwood paste, rice, flowers, lamp, incense, Naivedhya, Aarti wicks, etc. artefacts of Puja within her reach. Women must never worship Bhagwan in Shaligram form. They should use another form of Murti such as pictorial or metallic. They must not use water that has been left over after Achman or someone has stepped above it. A woman should light a lamp of Ghee or sesame oil in front of Bhagwan's Murti. In absence of any artefacts, she should just imagine them when performing Puja. One must not talk with anybody, look around or be angry while doing Puja. She should wake up Bhagwan either by clapping gently or tinkling the bell while chanting this hymn: 'O Govind! Please wake up! O husband of Laxmiji! O Krishna! Please wake up and bless all three Loks (hell, earth and heaven). She should place a Murti of Bhagwan on a Sinhasan or a suitable pedestal after wiping the Murti with a piece of soft cloth. According to the ancient sages, any of the eight types of Murti: carved out of stone (or marble), wood, gold (or any metal), sandalwood, sand or gems; a pictorial image or an imagined Murti are suitable to be worshipped."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Sitting with legs crossed and facing the East or North; or in front of a radiant Sinhasan that has Bhagwan placed in it, a worshipper now should meditate upon Him. She should visualise Bhagwan two armed, as radiant as hundreds of suns shining together, wearing yellow robes and numerous golden ornaments, playing a divine flute, served and accompanying by Radha and Rama, flanked by Dharmadev on the right and Bhaktimata on the left, venerated by Indra and other Devtas and Parshads holding a regal umbrella, hand held fan and gently waving fly drivers. She should now invoke Bhagwan in her heart and ask Him to enter His Murti in front of her. She should worship Bhagwan with whatever artefacts at her disposal whilst chanting the hymn 'Shree Krishnay Namah' with following sixteen elements in sequence : Aavhan, Aasan, Paadhya, Arghya, Aachman, Snan, Vastra, Sandalwood paste, Pushpa, Dhoop, Deep, Naivedhya, Mukhvaas, Dakshina, Aarti and Namaskar. She should now pray to Bhagwan at the conclusion of her Puja, 'O Shree Krishna! O Narayan! Be pleased with me. O husband of Radhikaji! You are the only one Who can protect me from the vagaries of this world and pains of hell. Therefore, You are known as Pati (master or husband) in this world. O remover of sorrows! I consider You as my Pati. O Lord of all Devs! A woman who considers someone other than You as her Pati is indeed overwhelmed by Your Maya and as a result, O Venerable! She remains entangled in Maya forever. O Prabhu! I observe my Dharma and undertake various Vrat, Japa, and austerity just to please You. O master of my soul! Be pleased with me and fulfil my desires.' O Brahmin! A woman should bow down to Bhagwan and ask Bhagwan to return to the crevice of her heart and place the Murti in a bag at the end of her Puja. I have just narrated the Vidhi of Puja very shortly. Her love for Bhagwan increases by performing the daily Puja. She should chant five hundred times the hymn of Bhagwan Shree Krishna given to her by her guru with a serene mind before dispersion of Bhagwan's Murti."

Thus ends the 37th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 38

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! Women must not touch anybody for three days at the onset of her menstrual cycle. In the bygone era, Indra, the king of Devtas had committed the sin of killing a Brahmin called Vratasur. Women accepted the quarter share of that sin and the menses are the result of that. She is considered despicable the first day, a killer of a Brahmin the second day, washerwoman the third day and a Shudra the fourth day of her menses. She can perform religious rites only on the fifth day, but she may be able to participate in social rituals as marriage on the third day after fasting for a day. She must never conceal her menses; otherwise she is never redeemed from the sin of killing a Brahmin. It is a sin to touch any other women during her period of menses. The Dharmashastras prescribe Krutchh Vrat to repent for this sin. As not all women are able to undertake this Vrat in Kali Yug, I prescribe the following repentance, which applies to both categories of woman. Both of them (a woman in her menses and the one who touches her) should fast for a day for a deliberate touch and bath with worn clothes for an inadvertent touch. A deliberate touch in an emergency should be considered as an inadvertent touch. The same applies to physical contact between a man and a woman in her menses. The great ancient sages have opined that pious and Pativrata women must never conceal their menses. By revealing her menses publicly, she is redeemed from the sin of killing a Brahmin and clears the doubt of her being made pregnant by other man. Therefore, all My female disciples must conform to this ancient tradition."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A woman, who entices or encourages a man or woman to digress from his or her Brahamcharya Vrat is consigned to hell called Kumbhipak. She is repeatedly poked by red hot irons bars, fries her in oil and dumped in the pool of blood, faeces and phlegm. After enduring such severe punishment for three and half million years, she becomes a witch in a dense forest. The same punishment is meted out to a man who entices another man or a woman to deviate from their Brahamcharya Vrat. He is repeatedly bitten by venomous snakes. A man who protects Brahamcharya of another man or a woman is rewarded the same Punya as observing Brahamcharya Vrat faithfully. O Vipra! Dharmas of female devotees that I narrated to you are collectively called 'Sati Gita', which are very benevolent to them. Whoever listens to them or narrates them will surely have all their desires fulfilled. A woman who observes them faithfully will earn great fame in the world and will attain My supreme abode upon her death. I just concluded narrating Dharmas of male and female Grahastha devotees, which they should regularly read or listen to and always behave accordingly."

Thus ends the 38th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Brahmin! Though Vanprastha Ashram is proscribed in Kali Yug, I, nonetheless, narrate their (Vanprasthis) Dharma just for your knowledge. At the onset of the third segment of a life (at the age of fifty one years) a Dwij should prepare to enter the third Ashram - Vanprastha after becoming a grandfather. He may take his wife along with him if she is able to withstand the rigours of life as Vanprasthi, otherwise, he should leave her behind and ask his son to look after her. Even a Brahamchari may enter Vanprastha Ashram. A Dwij should have overcome desires to indulge in mundane worldly pleasure and seek permission from his guru, king, parents and siblings prior to entering Vanprastha Ashram. He should leave for the forest on a morning of any day of Sud fortnight after the Sun has started its northward journey after Makar Sankranti. He should undertake religious austerity with patience and pleasure as such austerities are the mainstay of Vanprastha Ashram. He should build a hut just to keep fire safe from the vagaries of nature and he must live outside in open. He should continue to observe his Smart Karma (Snaan, Sandhya, Homa, etc.) just as he did previously. He should sleep on a rough ground, overcome desires and anger and eat only one meal a day. He should observe strict Brahamcharya, not torment any living beings and not consume alcohol or meat. He should still perform five Yagnas (of a Grahastha) and greet guests and alms seekers with reverence and food such as roots, fruits and vegetables."

Shree Hari said, "O Brahmin! A Vanprasthi should wear clothes made from grass, leaves or tree bark or a deerskin and keep Kamandalu and a wooden staff. He should not shave or cut his hair and nails; brush his teeth vigorously; bath thrice a day without massaging or exfoliating his body and not move or roam around unnecessarily. He must observe Brahamcharya by forsaking women in thought and speech and speak with his wife only what is necessary for him to perform his religious routines. A calm and controlled Vanprasthi should survive on Namar (a kind of paddy growing in wild without sowing) and other light grain, fruits and that too eating only once. He should not eat butter and Ghee at all. He should procure the grain himself and eat them raw as long as his teeth are intact. He must never use the grain that is farmed nor should he pick Namar before ripening. He may cook the grain in absence of strong teeth. He should not keep cooked food for his next meal i.e. he should cook enough for only a single meal. He must stockpile grain to last for a few days to a year, but the stored grain must be discarded when fresh grain becomes available in the month of Aso. O Vipra! A Vanprasthi should increase the level, intensity and quantity of his religious austerities regularly over a period of time without inviting death, as a human body is very valuable (to attain Moksha). He should start eating daily and then progressively eat only on alternate days or eat every fourth or fifth day. He should start with Namar and other grain and progress to survive on fruits and roots only over a period of time. He should try to live by undertaking Chaandrayan Vrat continuously or eat once in a fortnight or month. He should be able to survive only on milk, water or air over a long period of time. He should always remain aware of the fact as to why he had entered Vanprastha Ashram and develop empathy towards religious austerity. He should never trust his senses or mind, lest they lead him astray from his austerity."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Vipra! A Vanprasthi should fast for a day if he speaks to or thinks about a woman. He should fast until death for having sexual contact with his wife. His son remains outcast all his life and is not allowed to read or learn the Vedas. Therefore, it is most vital that a Vanprasthi overcomes his sexual desires. He should endure Panchagni - five fires (four on the sides and the sun overhead) in the summer, pouring rain in monsoon and sit immersed in cold water in the winter. He should undergo such a severe austerity with patience and sincerity for as long as he lives. A Vanprasthi should endure such a life in the forest for one to twelve years without fear of consequences. He should treat two persons; one pricking him with thorns and the other massaging his body with sandalwood paste, equally without getting angry or delighted. O Brahmin! A Vanprasthi unable to endure such severe austerities should wonder around and subside by seeking alms from other pious Vanprasthis orTyagis. He may seek eight or sixteen morsels of cooked food from a pious Brahmin. He should overcome lethargy and sleep and continue the study of the scriptures and chant Gayatri hymn. He should regularly meditate in the early part of the night. A Vanprasthi following this way of life favoured by ancient great sages such as Vasishtha becomes free from his sins and attains the Loks upper than heaven. He may give up severe austerities and spend time meditating upon Bhagwan in his old age or infirmity. By controlling his mind and undergoing austerities sincerely, a Vanprasthi attains Mahar Lok after his death. A Vanprasthi attains Bhagwan's abode if he follows the same regimen with devotion towards Him. O Brahmin! The Vanprasthis are categorised in four types; Vaikhanas, Valkhilya, Audambar and Fenap depending how they decide to sustain themselves. The Vaikhanas Vanprasth survives by Namar and other grains procured without sowing; Valkhilya Vanprasthis discard the stored grain upon getting a new supply of grain; the Audambrs travel towards the side they face waking up and survive by roots and fruits picked from that side only while the Fenap Vanprasthis survive only by the fallen (and not picked from the trees) fruits and leaves. If a Vanprasthi develops even stronger Vairagya, he should take Sanyas, the fourth Ashram. I shall narrate to you the Dharma of Sanyasi narrating the Dharmas of Vanprasthis in short."

Thus ends the 39th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 40

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O pious Shivram Vipra! Just as the fourth object of life - Moksha is better than other objects, the fourth Ashram - Sanyas is the best Ashram. Whoever - Brahamchari, Grahastha or Vanprasthi, whether Agnihotri or not, may become Sanyasi upon the ascent of Vairagya. The ancient sages have described the four categories of Sanyasis: Kutichak, Bahudak, Hans and Paramhans. A Sanyasi who stays in a separate hut built by his sons due to his infirmity, keeping Shikha and three wooden staffs, wearing Janoi and ochre robes and subsiding on food provided by his family is called Kutichak. A Sanyasi wearing ochre robes and subsiding by seeking alms from others' home is called Bahudak. A Sanyasi wearing similar ochre robes depending on alms from others' homes but keeping only one wooden staff is called Hans. The fourth, Paramhans is well versed and detached, may or may not keep a wooden staff and may or may not wear ochre robes. O Brahmin! According to the Vedas, Vairagya is the sole cause for one to become a Sanyasi and one should become Sanyasi as soon as he becomes averse to the worldly pleasures. Vairagya is of three types, mild, strong and intense. One with the mild Vairagya should not become a Sanyasi. Long lasting and scholarly Sanyas are the results of the strong and intense Vairagya. The sudden ascent of Vairagya due to the death of wife or children or loss of wealth is mild Vairagya. The ascent of Vairagya after understanding and resolve that I do not wish to get entangled in wife, children and wealth is strong Vairagya; while a strong desire to become free from the cycle of death and rebirth once and for all gives rise to intense Vairagya. Sanyas of a Sanyasi whose knowledge is not very profound is called 'Vividisha' and that of a Sanyasi whose knowledge is profound is called erudite. A Dwij should become Sanyasi only if his Vairagya is strong, otherwise, his Sanyas will not last long. The senses cannot be controlled without Vairagya and renunciation cannot come without Vairagya and Sanyas does not last without renunciation. All the scriptures prohibit one to take up Sanyas without profound Vairagya, therefore, one must not take up Sanyas hastily or without proper deliberation. A man, who takes up Sanyas impulsively and then gives in to the worldly desires, falls from grace. A man who indulges in sexual pleasures or is overwhelmed by his palate after becoming a Sanyasi is consigned to hell called Raurav. Many men have digressed from their Sanyas Ashram due to their floundering Vairagya or their strong cravings. Therefore, one must ponder and see how strong his Vairagya is before contemplating to take up Sanyas."

Shree Hari said, "O Vipra! A man should seek permission from his guru, king and family members and accept Sanyas on any auspicious day of Sud fortnight. He should perform eight Shraadhdhs; Daiva, Arsha, Divya, Pitru (father), Matru (mother), Manush (man), Bhautik and Atmak, Prajapatya Yagna, establish live fire in his heart (he is no longer an Agnohotra), concentrate his mind in Bhagwan and chant 'Praishya Mantra' (Sanyastoham). No one should accept Sanyas without chanting Praishya hymns to denote his renunciation. A man afflicted by a serious disease is not allowed to become a Sanyasi. After taking Sanyas, he should adhere to his Dharma faithfully and stay with a guru to augment his knowledge. A scholar and devout Sanyasi should meander from shrine to shrine. He should develop equanimity towards all, whether venerating or insulting him. He should always be content in pain and pleasure. A Sanyasi should keep no more than two Kaupins, an upper garment, a wooden staff, Kamandalu, a pair of sandals, little soil, and quilt to keep warm. He should colour his cloths and quilt ochre. He should never utter lies, harsh words or back bite. A Sanyasi may or may not wear clothes. He should give priority to his knowledge over his speech. As mentioned earlier, physically keeping three wooden staffs is symbolic gesture of keeping mind, speech and deeds under control. He should maintain silence or speak only that is absolutely necessary, perform Pranayam regularly to keep the mind serene and forsake lethargy and undertake austerity to keep his body under control. A single wooden staff of a Hans or Paramhans symbolises his august knowledge. A Sanyasi may accept the manuscripts of the scriptures from the Brahmins but never take money from anybody to buy them, as keeping money (for whatever purpose) is a grave drawback for a Sanyasi. Whatever he accepts in alms (food, fruits, flowers, water, etc.), he should do so overtly. He should sleep on the ground, bear insults, overcome anger and should never retaliate against anybody, even by speech. Keeping his mind, senses and deeds well under his control, A Sanyasi must perform Snaan, Dhyan, Tapa, Daan and Yoga regularly with full faith. Renunciation of desires from mind is Snaan, altruism is Dhyan, concentration of mind and senses (in Bhagwan) is Tapa, trying to redeem people from the clutches of Maya is Daan and help to realise Bhagwan is Yoga for the Sanyasis. A Yati having these five virtues is liberated from this world."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Shivram! A Sanyasi must always speak truth, except when speaking truth may lead to a killing of a Brahmin or cow. He must never kill or torment any living being. A Sanyasi must abandon vices such as enmity, revenge, theft, ego, greed, envy, fear, conceit, affection, attachment and talk about women. He should overcome anger, which destroys his knowledge, austerity, charity and Punyas. Sleeping on a bed, wearing white cloths, drinking alcohol, sleeping during the day and company of wife, children or friend that were renounced previously are causes of Sanyasi's degradation. A Yati should not run without looking and look down whilst walking so as not to step on small insects. He must always sieve water before drinking it. A Sanyasi should be calm with his mind and senses under his control, forbearing, faithful, compassionate, aloof from the worldly affairs and not covet any rewards for his pious actions. He must never abandon Vrats, Niyams or worship of Bhagwan. He must always chant Pranav (Aum) and ponder its meaning. He should read, listen to, reminiscence and evoke the exalted scriptures such as Upanishads to enhance his understanding of them. A Muni should understand the true traits of his soul with the knowledge of Sankhya philosophy and realise the reasons for entanglement of his soul and how to excrete it from that bondage. He must realise that to give in to the whims of his senses is the cause of entanglement and to control the senses is the cause of liberation - Moksha. A Sanyasi must control his palate and sexual urges; and observe strict Brahamcharya. He should continue meandering around with his guru's blessings and acquire knowledge by associating with pious saints along the way. However, he should visit towns or villages only for a short while or to seek alms. He should reside mainly at holy shrines, on riverbanks, in caves or forests. A Yati should not stay at one place for a long time. He should not stay more than five days in one town and a day in one village, as a longer contact or association may influence and corrupt him. He should not speak unless spoken to and must not retaliate against someone hurling insults at him. An association with the pious saints enhances his knowledge, therefore, he should treat elders - in age, knowledge or austerity with due respect."

Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O pious Brahmin! A wise Sanyasi should control nine holes (eyes, ears, nostrils, mouth, anus and genitals), that is, not to allow them uncontrolled pleasures and spend most of his time in meditation. By avoiding association, overcoming his anger and eating less, he should reside in the caves, riverbanks, forests or other such isolated places. Instead of sleeping at dawn, dusk, early part of night or BraahmMuhurt, a Yati should meditate upon Bhagwan at these times. He must not speak to any women nor should he yearn for any women he knew previously. He should not read or learn any scriptures that do not conform to the Vedas and Upanishads. He should not tend animals or plants; keep seeds, gold, poison or any intoxicants. He must not stay in a town or village that his relatives dwell in nor should he inquire on their well-being. He should move far away as repentance if he cries over a death of his relatives. Even in an old age, a Sanyasi should not trust his mind and befriend an old woman. He should maintain inner and external chastity at all time. External cleanliness is achieved by mud and water while inner cleanliness is attained by keeping the mind clean. An astute Sanyasi should never indulge in worldly affairs, argue with others, keep money nor ask someone to keep money on his behalf. To attain Moksha, a Yati must become mute, eunuch, lame, deaf, blind or ignorant. A

An astute Sanyasi should not reveal his name, clan, place of birth, knowledge, age, power and disposition to others. He should not touch or look at statues or pictures of women. Indeed, women, wealth and palate are three that lead even the best Sanyasi astray. His renunciation must be total; therefore, he must not stay at the same place for long. He should rather stay under the trees or temples away from urban areas. He must not go anywhere at night, midday, dusk and dawn, except to answer the call of nature or to save his life. He should continue observing his Dharma and religious austerities without torturing his body or inviting untimely death for the rest of his life."

Thus ends the 40th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 41

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O sinless Brahmin! A Sanyasi should seek alms from the Vanprasthis as their food is said to clear the intellect and enhance one's knowledge. In an absence of Vanprasthis in a village, a Sanyasi may seek alms from learned Brahmins and in the absence of learned Brahmins; he may seek alms from any Brahmin. He should go into a village on his own just to seek alms but not to look around to see opulence of the houses, nor listen to any gossip and nor look at women. He should treat women as sisters and mothers. He should carry a bowl made from wood, clay, pumpkin, stone, leaves or grass which should be cleaned with water or brushing with a cow's tail. He must never carry or use a bowl made from metals. In absence of Brahmins, he may seek alms from pious Kshatriyas or Vaishyas. He must never seek alms from people who indulge in nefarious activities, even from a Brahmin who has studied the Vedas as their food is deemed foul. The pious mind and behaviour indeed depends on pious food. According to Sage Medhatithi, a Sanyasi may seek alms from a Shudra household in absence of suitable households of the other three Varnas, after going without food for two consecutive days. Due to their means of livelihood and piety, the Brahmins are classified into eight categories. A wise Sanyasi should seek alms from the first four types of Brahmins in hierarchical order but never from the later four types of Brahmins. A Brahmin who is born in a pious clan, has undergone Jatkarma, Upavit and other Sanskars, studied the Vedas, is keen to perform his six daily rituals and has virtues such as compassion, control of senses and mind, austerity and devotion is a true Brahmin. A scholar of the Vedas but interested in polity and warfare, brave, patience and bearing arms is called a Kshatriya Brahmin. A Brahmin who has taken farming or trading as his means of living, is generous and scholar of the Vedas is said to be a Vaishya Brahmin; while a Brahmin who does not discriminate from whom he eats, has not learned the Vedas, does not follow his Dharma sincerely or who has taken up trading in inferior commodities such as salt and lac is called a Shudra Brahmin. A greedy and hypocrite Brahmin indulgent in violence, stealing and cheating is called Bidal; a Brahmin who destroys well, lakes, farms, gardens and not performing even basic daily routine as bath is called Malechh; an ignorant, lascivious, adulterous, eating inedible foods such as onions and garlic and an unhygienic Brahmin is called a Pashu (animal) Brahmin; while a Brahmin drinking alcohol and eating meat, lethargic and not believing and acting contrary to the edicts of the scriptures is called Chandal (the lowest of the low). Besides not seeking or accepting alms from the last four types of Brahmin, a sagacious Sanyasi should not seek alms from sinners and fallen households including that of the Brahmins. He should endeavour to accept alms only from pious Brahmins. A Yati must never seek alms from a doctor, hunter, eunuch, archer, one under the control of a woman and unfaithful women."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Seeking alms from different houses and that too just enough for a day is considered the best option for the Sanyasis. A Sanyasi should never return to the same household from where he has returned empty handed five to seven times. On the other hand, he should not revisit the same household for ease of getting Bhiksha (alms). Even in absence of other houses, such generous householders should not be approached more frequently than on alternate days. A Sanyasi should go to the households where the sound of grinding grain has ceased, the smoke has stopped arising from hearth, the embers have stopped glowing and the members of the household are preparing to dine. As this decree is very difficult to follow in Kali Yug, A Sanyasi should knock on doors of up to seven households in random order to seek his daily Bhiksha. He should meander in places which are fertile and where generous householders give alms willingly. He should not seek Bhiksha from the householders who are observing Sutak or performing Shradhdh. Whilst seeking alms, a Sanyasi should not knock on doors with his wooden staff, look through the hole or gapes of the doors and shout aloud. He should place his staff under his right arm, hold the bowl in his left hand and cover it with his right hand. He should bath and perform Pranayam six times if he touches any unclean things such as faeces on his way back after receiving Bhiksha. He should discard his Bhiksha and bath with the worn clothes if he touches a woman in menses, corpse, thief, indolent or unholy ascetic or Chandal. However, bathing with them in a river or lake, travelling on a same boat or bus, sharing a dais or shade of a large tree or indirect contact such as leaning on a same wall are not considered direct physical contact and Bhiksha need not be discarded."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! He should eat his food silently in a clean place after having a bath and washing his bowl; and offering food first to Bhagwan Vishnu. He should not eat food that stimulates the senses. He should mix a variety of food items and sprinkle little water over them to eliminate the taste and eat it lovingly as if is he is eating nectar. A Yati should hold his plate or bowl in his left hand and eat with his right hand. He should swallow the first morsel of food which is an offering to his soul (or life force), without letting it come in to contact with his teeth and lips. He should eat the rest of the food without pondering over its taste. He should eat half of what is necessary to survive as eating little helps him control his lust and ego. He should spend most of his time in learning the scriptures as augmentation of his knowledge is the prime reason behind him being a Sanyasi. Except in an emergency, such as illness, a Yati should not stock up any food for the next day and should seek and accept alms that is enough for a single meal. O Brahmin! A Sanyasi should perform one hundred Pranayam for eating food from the same household for three consecutive days and undertake Truptkruchh Vrat for having a second meal in a day. A frail or sick Sanyasi may eat fruits or medicine after his main meal. A Sanyasi may speak with a woman to seek clay, water, Bhiksha or other vital items provided that the conversation does not take place in secret or in absence of a man around. Any conversation with a woman in seclusion or privacy is prohibited by the scriptures."

Thus ends the 41st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! A Yati should remain at one place for the duration of Chaturmaas. Even in detrimental times, he should remain at the same place for at least two months. He should undertake as many Kruchh Vrats as he visits the numbers of villages during Chaturmaas. However, he should not stay in a village where people do not observe their Dharma or which houses his relatives. He should leave a village immediately, even during Chaturmaas, if the village is ravaged by war, conflict or drought, is being plundered by the thieves or if a Brahmin is murdered in the village. A Yati should shave his head every two months on the day of Purnima, except during the period of Chaturmaas. He should not swim across the rivers during Chaturmaas. The six; Asan, Patralop, Sanchay, Shishya Sangraha, Divaswap and Vruthalap are the causes of entanglement for a Sanyasi. To remain more than a day in a village or five days in a town except during Chaturmaas is called Asan. Utensils such as bowls and plates are called 'Patra'. Forsaking all Patras is called Patralop. A Sanyasi must keep at least one Patra with him at all times. Amassing more than the required items such as a wooden staff, utensils and clothes is called Sanchay. To gather disciples around for personal gratification, veneration, selfish reasons or to satisfy ego is called Sishya Sangraha, which is wrong. However it is acceptable to have disciple due to compassion towards them. Knowledge is said to be day as it illuminates the heart by removing ignorance and ignorance is night. To show lethargy in acquiring knowledge is called Divaswap. Leaving aside listening to the scriptures or Katha and listening to the praise heaped by one's disciples or indulging in gossip is called Vrutalap."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! According to the ancient scriptures, A Yati is committing a sin equivalent to killing a thousand cows if he accumulates anything more than the bare minimum. He is consigned to hell for two Kalp (8,640,000,000 years) for looking lasciviously at a woman. He is not subject to any Sutak; and he needs only to bath upon receiving news of the demise of his mother and father only. As a punishment to a Sanyasi not observing his Dharma, a king should imprint him (his forehead) with a foot of a dog using a hot template and exile him. A wise Sanyasi should have a bath with worn clothes upon seeing another Yati cutting a tree, plucking grass or cooking food. The devout Sanyasis should drive out a Sanyasi from their group who amasses grain, gold, servants or cows. Any Sanyasi who reverts back to become a Grahastha should be exiled from a community. He should be treated, along with his children, as an outcast by other Sanyasis and Vanprasthis. If ever such a Grahastha gives grain in alms to anybody; not only he and his grain, but a person who gave him grain and a person who accepts it are destroyed. A Sanyasi, along with his clan, is consigned to Raurav hell for eating a second meal, consuming alcohol and meat, using a vehicle, blanket or bed, cavorting with a woman, accumulating any wealth or indulging his palate. He should undertake a Chaandrayan Vrat for seeking alms from two different villages or wearing a tunic. For uprooting plants or trees, a Yati is consigned to hell called Avichi. He should perform ten Pranayams for killing any small insects."

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "O pious Brahmin! A Sanyasi should bath and chant 'Aum Namo Narayanay' three thousand times for cavorting with a woman in his dream. He should perform a hundred Pranayam and fast for three consecutive days if he ejaculates by looking at a woman. If the same thing happens in his dream, a Sanyasi should perform ten Pranayam after a bath and observe fast for a day. He should have a bath whilst chanting Bhagwan's name if he inadvertently speaks to a woman, except for seeking alms. He should perform Pranayam and fast for a day for listening to Katha by a woman or her tales and undertake a Truptkruchh Vrat if he talks about women or narrates Katha to women. For a transgression of the eighth and the final transgression of his Brahamcharya (direct sexual contact with a woman), a Sanyasi should cut off his genitals and wonder from place to place revealing his sin publicly as his atonement. A Yati transgressing from his Brahamcharya by having a sexual relationship with a woman is forced to be reborn as a maggot for the next sixty thousand years. A Sanyasi should undertake Santprat Vrat and chant 'Aum' three hundred times as atonement for masturbating. He should fast for a day and perform a hundred Paranayams for lying. He must not eat food from the same household regularly, meat, alcohol, food served at Shradhdh and not sprinkle salt directly on a ready food. He should perform a Prajapatya Kruchh Vrat for any transgression from the above. A wise Sanyasi should reveal other sins of mind, speech and body to the eminent and pious persons and accept whatever atonement is prescribed by them. A Sanyasi following these Dharmas faithfully attains desired Brahm Lok and for following the same Dharmas with devotion towards Bhagwan attains His Akshardham."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram! Many sages have categorised Sanyas in three types; Gnaan Sanyas, Veda Sanyas and Karma Sanyas. A Sanyasi who has broken off all contact with his wife and children, become free from sorrow and delight and always reminiscences his true form as a soul and not his mortal body is called Gnaan Sanyasi. A Veda Sanyasi is one who, controlling his mind and senses, continues the study of the Vedas; is devout and has forsaken everything. A Sanyasi, after giving up keeping fire with him and vigilantly performs all rituals as prescribed in the scriptures is called Karma Sanyasi. Of these three, a Gnaan Sanyasi is considered the best and he does not perform any rituals nor does he need keep a wooden staff and an alms bowl. At the pinnacle of his devotion and knowledge, a Gnaan Sanyasi, besides not keeping external tokens of his Ashram such as a wooden staff and an alms bowl, he may forsake all the rituals, knowing that sorrows and happiness are predestined. He should wonder in the world like a dumb, fool or impudent forsaking all external insignias. Just as the rivers come to the ocean, all happiness comes to a Sanyasi who has forsaken every worldly pleasures and possessions. O Vipra! Such a Sanyasi never has to be reborn. They are blessed with many divine powers, but devout Vaishnav Sanyasis do not hanker for such powers. They should worship Bhagwan Shree Hari after forsaking taste, infatuation, ego, desires and greed. I just concluded narrating the common Dharma of people belonging to all four Varnas and four Ashrams who have taken Samanya or Maha Diksha. Their specific Dharmas were mentioned earlier when narrating the Diksha Vidhi (in the fourth Prakaran). O Vipra! Whoever reads and listens

Thus ends the 42nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shivram Vipra asked Shree Hari, "O guru of the world! O Shree Hari! Please tell me Dharmas of people outside the Varna system, tribes such as Bhil and Kirat and others engaged in stealing and robbing."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! The people born from mixed Varna marriages such as Sut - a son of a Kshatriya father and a Brahmin mother; born outside wedlock; disgraced from their Varna such as Kank - a sinful Brahmin or tribes who earn their livelihood from hunting animals such as Bhil, should serve their parents, guru, king and people of the other Varna and Ashram. Though they may have inherit their way of life from their ancestors, they should nonetheless give up stealing and killing altogether. They should adhere to non-violence, truthfulness, inner and external purity and devoid of anger and malice, which are the primary and common Dharmas of mankind. They should perform Shradhdh of their Pitris, build wells and water sanctuaries, give Dakshina to Brahmins, provide adequately to their wives and children as per their financial abilities. They should never kill a female of any species. They may kill someone in a battle, however, a child, a Sanyasi or someone fleeing the battle must never be killed in any circumstances. They should defend the Brahmins, cows and saints, even by bearing weapons against marauders. They must never abduct a woman by force. They should not hesitate to spend their entire wealth in service of Sanyasis and saints. The guests should be greeted with fruits, food and water. They should venerate the Devtas, Brahmins and Pitris and punish anyone tormenting or insulting Brahmins and Devtas. They must not steal grain from farmers as robbing someone's means of livelihood is a grave sin. They must always obey the saints as a sin of insulting or disregarding saints destroys their accumulated Punyas. O Brahmin! These are the main Dharmas of such people."

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! Shivram Vipra asked Shree Hari again. ‘O Bhagwan! I am very grateful to hear Dharmas of different categories of people. Now I wish to hear about atonement one needs to undergo for transgression of his Dharma. People commit major or minor sins all the time. Please enlighten me as to what atonement they need to undertake to absolve them from their sins. O Vibhu! You did mention Kruchh and other Vrats in Your narration. Please tell me how these Vrats should be undertaken.’ O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari prepared to answer Shivram Vipra’s question in full detail.”

Thus ends the 43rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 44

Shree Narayanmuni said, “O Shivram Vipra! I shall narrate to you the summary of various Vrats as a part of repentance in short here. More detail of the same is given in many other scriptures. Atonement is what removes the drawbacks of a sin committed. The ancient sages have classified the sins in six categories; Patak, MahaPaap, UpaPaap, PrakirnaPaap, AtiPaap and AtyadhikPaap. The five: killing a Brahmin, drinking alcohol, theft of gold, adultery with guru’s wife and an association with a sinner any of these sins, are five MahaPaaps (great sins). Others sin of similar gravity are called Patak, slightly lesser gravity are called UpaPaap and the sins graver than MahaPaap are called AtiPaap. The sins less serious than UpaPaap are called PrakirnaPaap and the sins graver than AtiPaap are called AtyadhikPaap. Atonement prescribed for the sins is for an inadvertent lapse; for an intentional Paap, one should undertake double the atonement prescribed. There is no atonement for sins committed intentionally and repeatedly. Such a sinner is never redeemed from the punishments of hell and repeated births in the species of dogs and pigs. Besides sinner himself, anyone that condones, entices, assists and blesses the sinner is equally guilty of the sin committed.”

Shree Hari continued, “O Brahmin! A child under the age of six is not subject to any punishment; either in form of atonement or punishment from a king for any act of commission or omission. He is considered innocent in all circumstances. A child aged eleven to sixteen, the very old, ill and a woman should undergo half the normal atonement prescribed. Nobody should commit sins intentionally and one must always undergo atonement for a sin committed inadvertently. A sinner should take a bath and approach an assembly of learned Brahmins to confess his sin. An assembly is made up of no less than ten Brahmins who are scholars of the Vedas, religious, devout and pious. Atonement given by a group of seven, five or three scholar Brahmins should be treated on par. Even a single Brahmin, provided he knows the meanings of Dharmashastras and is knowledgeable to discriminate soul from body, may proclaim atonement. An assembly of the Kashtriyas and Vaishyas should be twice and thrice the size of an assembly of Brahmins. Atonement prescribed by such an assembly must be acceptable to all. The meeting of a hundred or thousand fools, avaricious or prejudiced is not an assembly fit to pronounce atonement. The members of an assembly need not be old, young, handsome or rich. Rather they need to be judicious and learned. One who is truthful, scholar of scriptures, pious, cultured and free from bias, envy and greed is suitable to sit in an assembly to pronounce atonement. A young but pious are preferable to an old fool. Dharma is where truth is and Adharma is where untruth is. Dharma and truth always prevails over Adharma and untruth. Whatever an assembly of the pious Brahmins proclaims is Dharma (or justice) and Adharma (injustice). It is the final arbitrator in the matter of what Vrats to be performed as atonement."

Shree Hari continued, "O pious Brahmin! A member of an assembly prescribing atonement without the knowledge of astronomy, the local customs and medical condition of the sinner becomes a sinner himself. The original sinner will be redeemed from his sin, but the assembly that proclaimed unbalanced atonement becomes the sinful. Therefore, the members of an assembly must always lean on the truth before pronouncing their verdict. They should show compassion towards women, children, old, sick and infirm; and take place, time, age and ability into consideration. They must not show leniency due to greed, enmity, friendship and affection. Otherwise they are consigned to hell. The ancient sages knew religious ethics properly and whatever they have prescribed should be considered Dharma. Before coming to any conclusion, the assembly should take local customs and traditions of a clan into consideration. A sinner is redeemed from his sin if he undertakes atonement prescribed by an assembly; otherwise, he is consigned to hell. A sinner may decide upon atonement himself if he is a scholar and pious. All other sinners should approach a scholar Brahmin for atonement for his sin. O Vipra! I am about to narrate to you atonement for various sins starting with MahaPaaps that are attested by the scriptures. The wise persons should undertake a suitable atonement for their benevolence."

Thus ends the 44th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Vipra! A Brahmin should atone for twelve years for inadvertently killing a Brahmin. He should tie the skull or cranium of the slain Brahmin - or skull of any other Brahmin in its absence - on top of his wooden staff and hold another skull in his hand to denote his status as a murderer of a Brahmin. He should live at the outskirts of a village wearing only a blanket and seek alms from the households of the village holding a broken begging bowl made of red clay. He may build a hut or live in open under a tree. He may survive on the fruits and roots from the wild or seek alms from the homes of villagers. He must reveal his sin to the householders whilst seeking alms and he must not visit more than seven homes a day. He must eat only once a day, control his mind and senses, observe his normal Dharma besides a strict Brahamcharya and must not cut his hair or shave. He should bath with cold water. He should visit as many shrines as possible whilst openly declaring his sin. He becomes free from the sin of Brahmhatya after the passage of twelve years. He is immediately redeemed from his sin if he is killed by robbers, wild animals or in a course of protecting the Brahmins or cows. O Vipra! He is redeemed from his sin if he joins a king and Brahmins on a ritual bath at the conclusion of an Ashvamedh Yagna after owning up his sin publicly in their presence. If he diligently serves a cow or a Brahmin suffering from an acute disease and manages to cure them, he is redeemed from the sin immediately; he need not carry out the rest of the atonement. He becomes free from his sin forever if he dies after starting the atonement. The one who shows mercy or compassion towards a killer of a Brahmin must undertake similar atonement for nine years. Similarly an assistant in his crime and approver of his crime should atone for six and four and half years respectively. A person, who encourages, provides a weapon, guides and shelters him should undertake similar atonement for three years each. Any Brahmin who even commits such a heinous crime even by speech - vows to kill or declare his intention to kill - must undertake the same atonement for a year and a half. A Brahmin thinking of killing another Brahmin must fast for twelve consecutive days and eat Panchgavya following the fast. A Brahmin must undertake Kruchh Vrat for three years or walk from the ocean to the source of River Saraswati if any Brahmin, even an uneducated, commits suicide following his insults or taunts. O Vipra! Atonement prescribed for twelve years is for killing an ordinary uneducated Brahmin. One must perform double the atonement prescribed for killing a scholar and virtuous Brahmin. Anybody unable to undertake twenty four years' atonement should nonetheless perform the prescribed atonement for twelve years and then donate a thousand cows to the virtuous Brahmins. For the same sin of killing a Brahmin, a Kshatriya and Vaishya should undertake double and triple the atonement prescribed for a Brahmin. Similarly, a Brahamchari, Vanprasthi and Sanyasi should undergo double, triple and quadruple atonement that is prescribed for a Grahastha. O Vipra! Insulting guru, Acharya or parents, criticising the Vedas, forgetting the message of the Vedas due to lethargy, learning non Vedic scriptures, killing an enthroned or coroneted king, killing someone who has commenced a Yagna, a pregnant or menstruating woman, foetus, wife of an Agnihotri and someone who has taken refuge are Patak sins, slightly lesser grave sins than killing a Brahmin. Half of atonement prescribed for a killing of a Brahmin should be undertaken for these sins"

Swami Shree Sahajanandji Maharaj continued, "O pious Brahmin! I shall now tell you atonement for drinking alcohol. A Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya should drink boiling alcohol as atonement for consuming alcohol inadvertently. He is redeemed from the sin if he dies as a result. He may undertake a similar atonement of twelve years, like a killer of a Brahmin, albeit with holding a banner with a glass of alcohol and holding a pitcher in his hand. He must travel from shrine to shrine revealing his sin of consuming alcohol. He must undergo Upanayan and other Sanskars at the end of twelve years of atonement. He should induce vomit to throw up any alcohol he may have consumed mistaking it for water. He should undertake the same atonement for three years, while an infirm man should atone for one year. According to Sage Parashar, a Dwij must undergo Upanayan and other Sankars again for inadvertent consumption of alcohol. He should eat a single meal of cooked broken rice and Panchgavya. A Dwij must undertake Chaandrayan Vrat and generous charity for inadvertently taking a medicine laced with alcohol. For drinking water from a goblet used for alcohol, a Dwij should drink powdered Brahmi (pennywort) in milk for twelve days. One should undertake a Santpan Kruchh Vrat or Prajapatya Vrat respectively for smelling alcohol deliberately or inadvertently. O Vipra! Eating inedible foods such as onions and garlic, conceit in front of guru and elders, telling lies to enhance his standing in society, giving false testimony and kissing a woman in her menses are Patak sins comparable to drinking alcohol and half of the prescribed atonement should be carried to be absolved from them."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Now I shall describe atonement for stealing gold from a Brahmin. Any Dwij stealing more than five 'Mas' (1 Mas = 0.972 gram) of gold from a Brahmin should approach an assembly of eminent persons with a wooden pestle and ask the king to hit him with it. After being hit by the pestle by the king, he is redeemed from his sin. He may undertake the atonement of twelve years as prescribed earlier if he so desires. For robbing gold directly from a Brahmin, he should hold a wooden sword in his hand and for stealing gold, he should hold a banner with a sketch of an iron crowbar in his hand and wonder in the world for twelve years revealing his sin to all and sundry. The length of atonement should vary with the quantity of gold stolen with minimum of twelve years and maximum of life. If someone commits the theft due to his poverty, atonement should be shortened to six years. A Dwij needs to fast for twelve continuous days whilst observing Brahamcharya for thinking of stealing gold from a Brahmin. Stealing servants, maids, cows, horses, land, jewellery of a Brahmin or stealing or selling someone's security or deposit are sins of slightly less gravity than stealing gold. A sinner needs to undertake half the atonement prescribed for MahaPaap of stealing gold."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shivram Vipra! The fourth MahaPaap is to have a sexual relation with guru's wife. One's father is the first guru and his stepmother is considered a wife of guru. Any person of four Varnas committing such a heinous sin must shave all his hair (including body hair) and smear Ghee all over the body. He should then embrace a red hot statuette of a woman and sleep on a heated bed until he dies. This is an appropriate atonement. Alternatively, he should cut off his genitals with testicles and walk towards southwest holding them in his hand until he comes across an obstacle such as a wall or ravine. He should remain there until his death. A person with a strong desire to remain alive may undertake atonement similar to killing a Brahmin with a banner displaying genitals for twelve years. Sage Parashar has prescribed lesser atonement for someone unable to undertake the previous three. He should undertake Kruchh Vrat or Prajapatya Vrat for one year or Chaandrayan Vrat for three months. Sexual relation with mother's or father's sister, maternal or paternal aunt, friend's wife, sister's friend, menstruating woman, a woman undergoing a Vrat, Acharya's or disciple's wife, a maiden, a woman who has taken shelter, wet nurse and guardian are called Patak Paaps and are only slightly less grave than MahaPaap of adultery with a guru's wife. A sinner should cut off his genitals or undertake atonement for nine years for committing such a sin deliberately. For committing such a sin inadvertently or under force, a sinner should atone for six years. O Brahmin! Sleeping with mother, sister, daughter or daughter-in-law is considered an AtiPaap. Only atonement for such a grave sin is to enter a pyre and immolate himself."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A person who associates (for a year) with a sinner of any of the four MahaPaap by sharing food, shelter and bed is deemed sinner of the similar MahaPaap and he should undertake the same atonement as the sinner himself. Association with sinners is always deemed a sin. The friends of an associate also need to atone for their sin of association. Atonement for such a sin should be reduced progressively depending on the second or third degree of association. The prescribed atonements of twelve years are possible to undertake and must be accompanied by the Vedic Japa. Unlearned men and women should chant 'Shree Krishnay Namah', 'Shree Narayanay Namah' or 'Shree Vaishnave Namah. Even the Shudras are redeemed from such grave sins if they undertake appropriate atonement while chanting Bhagwan's name. One should offer money to Brahmins or serve Brahmins and cows at the end of twelve years. I have described atonements for five MahaPaaps in short here. More details can be learned from the other scriptures."

Thus ends the 45th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! Undertaking a Chaandrayan Vrat or surviving only on milk for one month is generally accepted as an appropriate atonement for UpaPaaps. Killing a cow, not undergoing Upanayan Sanskar in time, stealing, trading in fruits and flowers, a younger brother marrying before his elder brother, employing a teacher to learn, adultery, killing a woman, atheism, a Brahamchari having sexual relationship with a woman, selling lakes or wells, having sex with a woman of a lower Varna, not repaying debts are some of the UpaPaaps. I shall now reveal their atonements. A Brahmin should eat Panchgavya only for a month whilst observing his Dharmas, such as non-violence and Brahamcharya, if a cow dies after hitting her. He should walk barefoot behind a wondering cow; stop where the cow stops, sits when the cow sits without hindering her progress or trying to divert her home. He should sleep on the floor in a cowshed near the cow. He should continue this for one month. He should defend the cow from wild animals, lead her out of quagmire and serve her during her illness. He should not inform anybody if the cow is grazing in someone's field or if her calf is sucking her milk. After the end of one month, he should donate a cow whose hooves are covered in silver and horns are encased in gold along with her young calf to a deserving Brahmin. Besides, he should satisfy the Brahmins with generous Dakshinas. However, if the cow is killed by a weapon or she belonged to a scholar Brahmin, the same atonement must be carried out for three years. Additionally, he should wear the hide of the dead cow and spend three years seeking alms before he is redeemed from his sin. For cutting of her tail, breaking her horns, teeth or bones, a Brahmin should repent for fifteen days as prescribed earlier. One is not guilty of killing a cow if she dies by lightning, fire or due to a collapsing wall. The above mentioned atonement is for a Brahmin; a Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra should undergo atonement for nine, six and three months respectively."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! A Brahmin who does not undergo Upanayan Sanskar in time is called 'Vratya'. If he fails to undergo Upanayan Sanskar by the age of sixteen, he should eat Sathvo for two months, followed by taking only milk for the next month, followed by eating yoghurt mixed in hot milk for fifteen days, followed by taking only Ghee for the next eight days, followed by eating whatever he gets without asking for it, followed by drinking water only for the next three days after which he should fast for a day. He must still undergo Upanayan Sanskar before he is redeemed from his sin. I shall now prescribe atonement for the next UpaPaap - stealing. A Brahmin should undertake Kruchh Vrat for a year whilst observing an appropriate Brahamcharya if he steals money, grains or other valuables except gold from a Brahmin. Atonement should last for six, three or one and a half months respectively if he steals from a Kshatriya, Vaishya or Shudra. The severity and length of repentance undertaken should be in proportion of the value of the stolen goods, be that grain, ornaments, cattle or anything else. For stealing food just enough for a single meal, he should consume Panchgavya for one day and night. For stealing double that amount, he should observe fast (consuming Panchgavya only) for two days. The repentance should be increased in proportion to the value of the stolen goods. O Vipra! It is very important that the stolen goods must be returned to its rightful owner and a clemency sought from the owner prior to undertaking atonement. A sinner is redeemed from the sin of stealing only when the goods are returned to the owner and he has pardoned the thief. Alternatively, a thief is redeemed from his sin if the king metes out punishment or pardon or by undergoing appropriate religious austerity. For selling cooked food, jaggery, sesame seeds, fruits or flowers, a Brahmin should undertake a Saumya Kruchh Vrat, while for selling salt, oil, milk, yoghurt, Ghee, lac or leather goods, he should undertake a Chaandrayan Vrat as a repentance. He should undertake a Trupt Kruchh Vrat for trading in sea shells, tree resins such as asafoetida and Google, bones, horns, tusks, bamboo and items made from bamboo, clay or items made of clay such as pots and lamps, etc. In case a younger brother marries before his elder brother, a younger one is called 'Parivetta' and the older one is called 'Parivedan'. An elder brother is called 'Parivitt' if he marries after his younger brother. Both, a Parivitt (elder) and Parivetta (younger) brothers should undertake Prajapatya Kruchh Vrat for a year whilst seeking alms from other households. If a Brahmin employs a teacher to learn from him, he should atone by drinking hot milk laced with Brahmi (Indian pennywort) for one and a half month."

Bhagwan Shree Sahajanand Swami continued, "O Shivram! Atonement for the sin of adultery committed by a Kshatriya with a Brahmin is same as committing adultery with a wife of a guru. A Brahmin man should beg for alms for three years for committing adultery with a Brahmin woman. For committing adultery with a Kshatriya and Vaishya woman, he should atone similarly for two and one year respectively. For the duration of the period of repentance, he should observe strict Brahamcharya and perform Japa of Bhagwan's name. Undergoing religious austerity is the prime requirement of any repentance. All sinners of adultery should undertake double the repentance if the sexual contact results in a pregnancy. As explained earlier, a sin of committing adultery with a close relative is akin to adultery committed with a guru's wife. A Brahmin should atone for six months for committing adultery with a Shudra woman; however, if it results in a pregnancy, atonement should last for three years. A Kshatriya should repent for two years, one year and six months respectively for committing adultery with a Kshatriya, Vaishya or Shudra woman. A Vaishya male should atone for twelve and six months for committing adultery with a Vaishya and a Shudra woman whilst a Shudra should atone for six months for committing adultery with a woman of his own Varna. A Vaishya committing adultery with a Kshatriya or a Shudra committing adultery with a Vaishya or a Kshatriya should undertake the similar atonement for the rest of their lives. Only repentance available to any Shudra, Vaishya or Kshatriya male committing adultery with a Brahmin woman is to enter the pyre and immolate himself. A Brahmin committing adultery with a woman lower than a Shudra should undertake two Chaandrayan Vrats as atonement. O Vipra! A woman committing adultery has to undertake the same atonement prescribed for a male in all circumstances. According to Sage Parashar, men and women unable to undertake such a severe atonement should undertake Chaandrayan or Prajapaty Kruchh Vrats for redemption from their sins of adultery. A woman committing adultery with a Chandal or a Muslim or eating their food should immolate herself. A Brahmin killing an adulterous Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya or Shudra woman must undertake Kruchh Vrat for twelve, six, three and one and half months respectively. However, he should undertake the same atonement for twelve, six, three and one and a half years for killing a virtuous and faithful woman. A Brahmin should undertake similar atonement to killing an ordinary Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra male for three years, one year and six months for killing. This atonement should be extended to eight, six and three years for killing a virtuous man of the three lower Varnas."

Shree Hari continued, "O virtuous Brahmin! A Brahmin should donate five bullocks to a deserving Brahmin for inadvertent killing of an elephant; a two years old male calf in lieu of killing a parrot; one bullock for killing a donkey, goat or sheep; a three year old bullock for killing a heron and a cow for killing a swan, kite, monkey, tiger, peacock, deer or similar animals. For killing a serpent with a stick, a Brahmin should be beaten up with an iron rod. He should donate a pitcher full of Ghee for killing a boar or a pig; gold equivalent to the weight of a small berry for killing a camel; clothes for killing a horse; a generous amount of sesame seeds for killing birds such as partridges. A person unable to donate the aforementioned things as atonement for killing birds and animals should undertake a Kruchh Vrat for five days. He should eat Panchgavya the first, third and fifth days and fast on the second and fourth days. For killing animals such as cats, frogs, iguana and mongoose or birds such as an owl or a crow, he should take only milk for the next five days or undertake Paad Kruchh Vrat for the repentance. For killing minute insects, one should perform Pranayams and eat Ghee instead of the next meal. One must chant Bhagwan's name for ten thousand times for cutting fruiting trees such as mango, flowering shrubs or climbing ivies. For cutting trees in crematoriums, places of pilgrimage, temples or naturally holy trees such as Peepal, one needs to double the earlier atonement. One should chant the Gayatri hymn for one thousand times after accidental ejaculation and losing control of his tongue (cussing or swearing) or limbs (hitting or beating). A sinner who criticises the Vedas should atone by undertaking a Prajapatya Vrat."

Bhagwan Narayanmuni continued, "O Vipra! A Brahamchari is called 'Avikirni' after having a sex with a woman. Such a Brahamchari should go in a jungle in the middle of night and perform a Nairuti Yagna at a crossroad. He should dwell in a forest wearing a hide of a donkey. He should come into the village only to seek alms. He should seek alms in a metal bowl from seven random households. He should observe Brahamcharya strictly (as not to deviate again) whilst performing his daily routines such as Sandhya thrice a day. He should continue such a Vrat for three, two or one year for his sin of having sex with a Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya female. Self-immolation is the only repentance open to a Brahamchari having sex with a Shudra woman. He should perform Nairuti Yagna without the rest of the Vrat for masturbating. A Brahamchari should have a bath, chant the Gayatri hymn for eight hundred times and fast for a day for ejaculating semen during a dream. O Vipra! A Grahastha should undertake Chaandrayan or Prajapatya Vrats if he has sex with his wife on the days when it is proscribed to have sex such as on the days of Vrats. If Vanprasthi or Sanyasi transgress from their Brahamcharya Vrat, they should atone by undertaking three Parak Vrats. A Brahamchari should constantly reminiscence Bhagwan in his heart for the rest of his life if he is unable to undertake proper repentance for lapse of his Brahamcharya."

Shree Hari continued, "O Vipra! Anyone selling wells, lakes, gardens, his Punyas, wife, children of his own body should travel from shrine to shrine seeking alms for a period of one year. He should undertake a Prajapatya Kruchh Vrat as atonement for the sin of visiting a prostitute. Not returning a debt despite being able to, not to keep marriage fire alive due to lethargy, to earn a livelihood by means proscribed in the scriptures, performing Yagna on behalf of Shudras or others prohibited people, to abandon parents or children, abandoning the study of scriptures, cooking for self without offering it to Bhagwan, hypocrisy, missing or not observing Vrats, earning a livelihood from an immoral trade, keeping a wife despite she being a drunkard, trading in intoxicating medicines, making or selling weapons, serving a Shudra in return of remuneration, eighteen vices such as gambling and deer hunting, befriending sinners, to study unethical scriptures, abandoning one's daily rituals such as Snaan and Sandhya, owning a gold mine, not belonging to any of the four Ashrams, homosexuality and receiving gifts from sinners are deemed UpaPaaps. For committing any of these sins, a Dwij should atone by observing ten Yamas and ten Niyams for three months. Brahamcharya, pity, forgiveness, charity, truthfulness, sincerity, non-violence, not coveting other's wealth, good natured and control of the senses are ten Yamas. Snaan, Maun (not speaking unnecessarily), Fasting (not eating inedible), Yag (offering sacrifice in a sacred fire), Swadhyay, abstinence, serving one's guru, cleanliness (inner and external), liveliness and patience (lack of anger) are ten Niyams. A Sanyasi, with his senses under control, should eat Sathvo only for the first month followed by two months eating only vegetables or rice and that too in a small amount and only whatever is obtained in Bhiksha. Infirm man should undertake Chaandrayan Vrat whilst chanting Bhagwan Shree Krishna's name for one month, which absolves him from all categories of UpaPaaps. O Vipra! A man is never redeemed from his sins unless he undertakes an appropriate repentance. He will indeed have to bear the consequences of his sins in the next life if he does not atone for his sins in this life."

Thus ends the 46th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 47

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! The sins that are less grave than MahaPaaps and UpaPaaps are called PrakirnaPaaps. One must atone for even such sins; otherwise, he has to endure the punishments of hell. For the sins of eating meat that is left over after a Yagna, eating someone's leavings or drinking water defiled by the others and a menstruating Dwij woman touching a Chandal or a grave sinner, should undertake a Chaandrayan Vrat for atonement.

One should undertake a Chaandrayan Vrat if one drinks water from the tanks used for washing clothes by the washermen or the droplets of water from clothes they are washing which fall on one's body. A man should undertake a Chaandrayan Vrat for eating food of a prostitute, grave sinners of Maha or Upa Paaps, a Dwij who does not perform five Yagnas, Sathvo with yoghurt at night or for drinking milk laced with salt. A Dwij should undertake a Truptkruchh Vrat as atonement of eating food of a washerman, cobbler or Sutaki or eating food served on occasions of Garbhadan Sanskar or Pret Shradhdh. For eating food of an adulterous woman or eating on a bed, a Dwij should undertake Prajapatya Vrat. He should atone by eating Sathvo and drinking cow's urine for three days to redeem himself from a sin of drinking water from a Shudra's vessel. He should undertake a Truptkruchh Vrat as repentance for eating inedible foods such as onions and garlic. A Dwij, if he insults his parents, guru or elders, should fast for a day and seek their clemency for his misdeeds. He is redeemed for a sin of beating someone with even a twig or defeating someone in a debate only if the person forgives him. For eating without a Janoi, a Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya should fast for three, two and one day respectively. He should undertake a Pad Kruchh Vrat for brushing his teeth with a small finger and eating salt (directly) or clay. O Brahmin! There are many other types of Prakirna Paaps and depending on their gravity, appropriate atonements for them should be sought from the scholars or eminent persons. A Kshatriya should undertake three quarters and Vaishya should undertake half of atonement prescribed to a Brahmin. Similarly, the Brahamcharis and Tyagi saints should undertake double the atonement prescribed to a Grahastha. A fast for a day and chanting Bhagwan's names such as Narayan, Hare, Krishna, Ram, Govind, Madhav, etc. is the standard atonement for all minor or less grave sins."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O pious Brahmin! I shall now prescribe atonements for the major sins, AtyadhikPaaps. Insulting the devotees of Bhagwan, contempt of Hari and Har (Mahadev) or disparaging their idols, slandering the Vedas, Brahmins, shrines, cows, pious women, innocent people and abusing Shaligram or Shivling are Atydhik Paaps. No scriptures or sages prescribe atonement for these sins. One needs to undertake Paad Kruchh Vrat for even touching or looking at them. The only way to be absolved from such grave sins is the pleasure of the insulted or abused, be they devotees or Brahmins. O Vipra! All atonements prescribed herein are for the sin that has become a public knowledge. A sinner should donate generously and perform Japa to the best of his ability for the sins that only he is privy to. A sinner of MahaPaaps should chant the Purush Sukta hymns from morning until noon for the period of one year and to be absolved of UpaPaaps, this should be done for six months. Alternatively, he should chant 'Maha Purush Vidhya' hymn (Jeet Te Pundarikaksha) or the Gayatri hymns whilst observing Yamas and Niyams. The other alternative prescribed is to sit in front of the Murti of Bhagwan and chant 'Shree Krishnay Namah' five thousand times. A sinner should ponder on the gravity of the sin committed whilst deciding upon the length and severity of atonement. I have narrated atonement of different types of sins in short, the detail of which is available in other Smrutis. Whoever repents for their sins in this life does not have to endure the punishments of hell. A king must force the sinners to undertake suitable atonements as he is the ruler of their lives. A king's decree does not extend on the fates of Brahamcharis, Vanprasthis, Sanyasis and devotees; therefore, they must decide upon and undertake suitable atonement. O Shivram! The ancient sages have prescribed self-immolation or death as atonement at many places. However, as suicide is considered a sin in Kali Yug, a lifelong Vrat or atonement must be undertaken instead. One may leave their normal place of residence due to ashamedness of their sin, but must never kill himself. Wherever a sinner lives, he must give up all comforts of life and sustain himself by seeking alms. He should constantly keep his mind in reminiscence of Bhagwan and worship Him to absolve from the sins commited."

Thus ends the 47th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 48

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shivram Vipra! I shall now describe the Chaandrayan and other Vrats, by undertaking which, a sinner is absolved ofthe negative impact of his sins. To eat one morsel of food on Sud Padvo and to keep increasing one morsel of food each day until Purnima; and to start decreasing one morsel of food each day of Vad fortnight and fast on Amavasya. A morsel of food mentioned here is meant to be a size of an Amblu (no more than an inch in diameter). One may eat any of these; cooked rice, food obtained in alms, flour of baked wheat or barley, Sathvo, any vegetable, milk, yoghurt, Ghee, roots or bulbs, fruits and water. Each of them is better than its precedent. Depending upon the length of the fortnight, the maximum numbers of morsels would vary between sixteen and fourteen. This Vrat is called Java (barley) Chaandrayan. Just as a grain of barley is fattest in the middle, one eats the maximum numbers of morsels of food at the middle of the Vrat. Another type of Chaandrayan Vrat is called 'Pipilika' (an ant). In this type of Chaandrayan Vrat, one starts off with fourteen morsels of food on Vad Padvo and decreases one morsel on each passing day, observe a fast on Amavasya and restart with a single morsel of food on Sud Padvo and increase the intake with each day. A person may undertake any one of these Chaandrayan Vrats. Many ancient sages opine that one may eat a total of two hundred and forty morsels of food in a month to complete a Chaandrayan Vrat. A person undergoing Vrat should keep his mind under his control. To eat eight morsels of food after noon each day for a month is called 'Yati' Chaandrayan Vrat. Eating four morsels of food in the morning and four morsels after dusk each day for a month is called 'Shishu' (child) Chaandrayan Vrat. A 'Rishi' Chaandrayan Vrat is in which one eats three morsels of food each day for a month. (The three later Chaandrayan Vrats may be started on any day of the month and fasts need not be observed on two intermediate Ekadashis). A Vrat in which one drinks milk that is obtained from all the four teats of a cow's udders for the first seven days, then drinks milk from three teats for the next seven days, then drinks milk from two teats for the next seven days, then drinks milk from a single teat for the next six days and then fasts for the next three days is called Somayan Vrat which absolves one from all sorts of sins. A Kruchh Vrat is sixteen days long in which a man eats at noon for the first four days, followed by eating at nightfall for the next four days, followed by eating whatever is obtained as alms for the next four days followed by fasting for the last four days. In a Trupt Kruchh Vrat of two days, one is required to eat a mixture of heated milk, water and Ghee on the first day and fast the next day. MahaTrupt Kruchh Vrat of four days entails drinking hot milk, Ghee, water on the first three days and fasting on the fourth day. A Brahmin may undertake a Trupt Kruchh Vrat of twelve days by drinking water for the first three days followed by drinking milk and Ghee for three days each and fasting for the last three days. O Vipra! Let me quantify the amount of water, milk or Ghee that should be consumed for this Vrat. He should drink water for three Pal (a measure of time, Pal = 24 seconds), milk for two Pal and Ghee for one Pal. He should take in the steam of hot water on the last three days of fast. Instead of drinking hot water, milk and Ghee, one takes them in the same order and fasts for the last three days in a Sheet (cold) Kruchh Vrat."

Shree Hari continued, "O Brahmin! One is required to drink Panchgavya mixed in a water that had Darbha dipped in it the first day and fast the next day whilst undertaking a Santpan Vrat. In a Maha Santpan Vrat, a man drinks Panchgavya and water for six days and fasts the next day. Some sages define Maha Santpan Vrat where one repeats the same process thrice, over a period of twenty one days. A Yati Santpan Vrat requires on to consume each element of Panchgavya, i.e. urine, dung, yoghurt, milk and Ghee for three days followed by drinking the mixture of Panchgavya for the last three days. A Parna Kruchh Vrat of five days requires one to drink water boiled with five different leaves each day; Khakhro, Umbardo, lotus, Bili and Kush (a type of grass). Fasting for three days and drinking the water boiled with all the five varieties of leaves on the next day is called a Parna Kruchh Vrat of four days. The Vrats in which one survives only on fruits, coconut, seeds of lotus, leaves and flowers for one month are called Fal Kruchh, Shree Kruchh, Padma Kruchh, Patra Kruchh and Pushpa Kruchh Vrats respectively. Similarly, in the Mul Kruchh, Jal Kruchh, Kshir Kruchh and Dadhi Kruchh Vrats one survives of roots, water, milk and yoghurt respectively for a month. A Vrat in which one eats a single meal in the afternoon on the first day, in the evening on the second day, whatever obtained in alms on the third day and fast on the fourth day is called a Paad Kruchh Vrat. A Prajaptya Vrat of twelve days requires one to eat a single meal in the morning on the first three days, in the evening on the next three, unsolicited food on the next three and fast for the next three days. O Vipra! Just as in a Prajaptya Vrat, but eating only as much as food that can be accommodated in the palms of two hands and then fast for the remaining three days is called Ati Kruchh Vrat. Sage Apastambh has divided Paad Kruchh Vrat in four categories for four Varnas. Four Paads (legs) of the Vrat are; a fast for three days, eating unsolicited food for three days, eating in evenings for three days and eating in mornings for three days. The Brahmins, Kshatriyas, Vaishyas and Shudras should undertake each leg of the Vrat respectively, i.e. Brahmins should fast for three days and so on. One should eat only twelve and fifteen morsels of food while eating at evening and morning and twenty four morsels of unsolicited food. A Vrat in which one eats at evening the first day, morning the second day, unsolicited food for the next two days and fast for the last two days is called Ardha (half) Kruchh Vrat. There are two types of Kruchhati Kruchh Vrat; surviving on milk only for twenty one days or on water only for twelve days."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O pious Brahmin! Fasting continuously for twelve days is called a Parak Vrat, which absolves one from all sins. Different sages prescribe a Saumya Kruchh Vrat differently (in their Smrutis). One version (of sage Jabal) entails eating oil cakes of sesame, Sathvo and buttermilk for three days and undertaking a fast on the fourth day. Second version (of Sage Parashar) requires one to eat oil cakes, buttermilk, water and water which had Kush dipped in overnight for four days and observe a fast on the fifth day. A third version (of Sage Yagnavalkya) entails eating oil cakes, drinking starch of rice, buttermilk, water and eating Sathvo the fifth day before concluding the Vrat with a fast on the last day. Sage Yagnavalkya calls a Vrat of fifteen days; eating oil cakes, rice starch, buttermilk, water and Sathvo for three days a Tulapurush Kruchh Vrat. Another sage defines a Tulapurush Kruchh Vrat as of twenty one days, which should be concluded with a fast for six days after eating oil cakes, rice starch, buttermilk, water and Sathvo for fifteen days. O Vipra! I shall now describe one of the best Vrats, BrahmKurch, undertaking which a man is redeemed from all his sins. A person should fast at the beginning of the Vrat to calm his mind and consume Panchgavya mixed with water containing Kush. The five; urine, dung, milk, yoghurt and Ghee derived from a cow is called Panchgavya. Water in which Kush had been dipped for some time is called Kushodak. Panchgavya and Kushodak are the best cleaning agents. Among Panchgavya, urine should be taken from a red cow, dung from a white cow, milk from a golden cow, yoghurt from a copper coloured cow and Ghee from a black cow. All substances may be taken from a tawny or black cow in the absence of other cows. Eight Masa (plural of Mas, 0.972 gram) urine, sixteen Masa dung, twelve Masa milk, ten Masa yoghurt and eight Masa Ghee should be mixed to make Panchgavya. It should be mixed with four Masa Kushodak. One should chant the following hymns while gathering the six items; the Gayatri hymn, 'Gandhdwara', 'Aapyayasva', 'Dadhikanva Iti', 'Tejosi Shukram' and 'Devsyatva' while gathering urine, dung, milk, yoghurt, Ghee and Kushodak. One should take the six, now chastised with the appropriate hymns next to the sacred fire. He should offer Panchgavya in sacred fire with the help of the tips of Darbha whilst chanting 'Iravati Idam Vishnuscha Manastoka cha Shamvati'. He should drink the remainder of Panchgavya whilst chanting 'Aum'. He may use the leaves of Palash or lotus, gold or silver bowl or Brahmtirth of his right hand to drink Panchgavya. This Vrat, Brahmkurch, destroys negative influences of all sins."

Shreeji Maharaj continued, "O sinless Brahmin! There are many other Kruchh Vrats besides those described earlier. To drink the mixture of Panchgavya and Kushodak for three days is called Yati Santpan Vrat. Surviving only on sesame seeds for twelve days is called Agneya Kruchh Vrat. To survive only on Sathvo made from the grains of barley collected from the cows' dung for one month is called Yamya Kruchh Vrat. On the other hand, to sustain by eating the grains of barley gathered from dung for one month is called Yavak Kruchh Vrat. To live by eating sesame seeds just enough to be accommodated in his open palms is called Kauber Kruchh Vrat. Another Vrat called Govrat Kruchh lasts for a month in which one should bath with cow's urine, eat cow's dung, live in a cowshed, not to eat or drink before the cows eat or drink, stand while the cows stand and sit only when all cows have sat down. A Vrat of eighty nine days in which one lives on split milk (a little yoghurt added to the hot milk) for two months, followed by sustaining on milk for fifteen days, followed by eight days on yoghurt, followed by three days on Ghee and fasting for three days is called Uddalak Vrat. This Vrat is better undertaken in a stance called Virasan -standing during the day and sitting throughout the night. (Indeed, all Vrats should be done in this way.) O Vipra! I described all types of Vrats which absolves one of his sins. Even a pious Dwij should undertake one of these Kruchh Vrats to atone for eating inedible foods unknowingly. These Vrat are vital to remove the drawbacks of eating something inedible knowingly. The Kruchh Vrats destroy the negative influences of any sins committed, knowingly or otherwise, and one does not have to endure the punishments of hell for the sins committed. One desirous of wealth, health and indeed heaven should undertake Kruchh Vrat regularly. I just narrated Dharmas of all people of four Varnas and four Ashrams and also for people born outside the Varna system due to mixed marriages and those who do not belong to any Ashrams as well as appropriate atonement for their lapses and sins. Whoever narrates or listens devoutly to these will be redeemed from their sins. The essence of these Dharmas, which are attested by ancient sages and conform to the scriptures, are benevolent to mankind."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Pious Shivram Brahmin was very pleased at listening to the sermon from Bhagwan Shree Hari. Overcome with joy, he started praying to Him."

Shivram Vipra prayed, "O Prabhu! You not only espouse Dharma, all Your actions conform to Dharma as well. You have taken Avatar just to re-establish Dharma. You visit various regions to propagate true Dharma! O son of Dharmadev! Be pleased with me. You have delighted Dharma and Bhakti, You espouse Bhakti with Dharma, You are Dharmik (religious) and Dharmik devotees are very dear to You. You promulgate the Dharma Shastras, You always endeavour to establish Dharmik activities and You promote knowledge that conforms to Dharma. O son of Dharmadev! Be pleased with Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shivram Vipra bowed down to Shree Hari before leaving. Not only did he behave as directed by Shree Hari for the rest of his life, but he spread the same message widely. People become aware of their Dharma by reading or listening to this Katha and as result, they earn great fame and happiness in this world. They do not deviate from their Dharma due to profound faith and devotion and Bhagwan Shree Hari becomes very pleased with such devotees. People become free from the clutches of the cycle of death and rebirth due to His pleasure and blessings. Therefore, all devotees and anyone who wishes to know his Dharma should read or listen devoutly to these chapters outlining Dharma. O king! I bow down to Bhagwan Narayanmuni, Who narrated Samanya and Vishesh (common and specific) Dharma of all people for the benevolence of mankind."

Thus ends the 48th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 49

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! A year and a half passed by. Shree Hari held daily assemblies and delivered sermons on different topics to eliminate doubts from His devotees' mind. After celebrating Vasantotsav at Gadhpur, Shree Hari, along with a large number of His saints and devotees, arrived at Amdavad. Bhagwan Shree Hari celebrated the festival of Fuldolotsav - birth anniversary of Lord NarNarayan on Falgun

Vad Padvo (Samvat 1884) very grandly before travelling to Vadtaal. Swaminarayan Bhagwan organised a grand festival to celebrate Ram Navami at Vadtaal before returning back to Gadhpur on Purnima. King Uttam Khachar approached Shree Hari on Chaitra Vad Beej and pleaded with Him, 'O Swami! O benevolent of mighty and poor devotees alike! You have fulfilled many of my desires. However, one desire remains unfulfilled. The residents of Gadhpur, my sisters, and I collectively desire that You establish a temple here. Please fulfil our desire." O Pratapsinh! Shree Hari promised King Uttam Khachar to fulfil his desire and summoned Viraktanand swami and said, 'O Muni! Arrange for the construction of a temple at Gadhpur. King Uttam will provide all materials and any assistance you may need. As I spend most of My time in Gadhpur, you may seek My guidance whenever you wish.' O Pratapsinh! Viraktanand swami took upon himself the task that was assigned to him. Uttam Khachar, his sisters and residents of Gadhpur were delighted at the news of construction of the temple. Viraktanand swami summoned expert sculptors from distant places and started construction work of the temple under his watchful eyes. Uttam Khachar provided all assistance promptly. Shree Hari would come and inspect the progressing work daily while He remained at Gadhpur. He would praise the sculptors and other workers to encourage and delight them. Just as the work was progressing briskly, Anupsinh, Hemantsinh's younger brother came to invite Shree Hari to Junagadh."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Anupsinh, with head bowed and hands folded, informed Shree Hari that the temple was ready and requested Him to come to Junagadh to establish Murtis in its Sinhasan. Shree Hari summoned Brahmins expert in astrology and asked for an auspicious time for consecration of the temple. The Brahmins, after consulting their almanacs, opined that Vaishakh Vad Beej is a very auspicious day. Shree Narayanmuni rewarded the Brahmins generously before sending them away. He called His sons (Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji), His brothers, saints and Parshads and left Gadhpur for Junagadh on Vaishakh Sud Dasam. Upon hearing of the imminent arrival of Shree Hari, King Hemantsinh and devotees of Junagadh rushed to welcome Him. They prostrated at His feet on seeing Him and accompanied Him to Junagadh and arranged for suitable accommodation for Him and the accompanying saints, Parshads and devotees. They enthusiastically served Shree Hari and others to the best of their abilities. Bhagwan Shree Hari was very pleased when He inspected the completed temple and praised all sculptors, carvers, builders, Hemantsinh, Brahmanand swami and residents profusely. Shree Hari returned to Hemantsinh's house and organised the gathering of various artefacts required in the consecration ceremony. O king! The Yagna, under the guidance of expert and pious Brahmins, as a part of establishment and invocation of the Murtis, lasted two days. In the morning of Vaishakh Vad Beej, Shree Hari established the Murtis of RadhaRaman Dev in the central Sinhasan. A grand celebration took place at Junagadh, just as grandly as it happened at Vadtaal. Shree Hari fed sumptuous meals to thousands of visitors and gave generous Dakshina to Brahmins."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! Upon hearing Shree Hari's fame, Bahadurkhan, the ruler of Junagadh region came for His Darshan. Shree Hari greeted him with the respect due to a great king. He bowed down humbly to Shree Hari and gave Him a document setting out the ownership of the land on which the temple stood before returning to his palace. The document also exempted the temple from paying the import duty on oil, Ghee, jaggery and grain that may be needed for the temple. O king! Bhagwan Shree Hari established the Murtis of Siddheshwar Mahadev, Parvati and Ganapati in the left Sinhasan and the Murti of Dwarkadhish Ranchhodji in the right Sinhasan. The reward of having the Darshan of Ranchhodji at Junagadh is the same as visiting Dwarka. After establishing the Murtis in all three Sinhasans, Shree Hari donated much wealth, cows, gold, new clothes and land to thousands of Brahmins. The devotees of Junagadh worshipped Shree Hari with scented artefacts such as incense and flowers and offered Him gold and silver coins and ornaments besides new robes. He made suitable arrangements for the continued worship of the Murtis and the future festivals on the night of Dasami. He celebrated Ekadashi the next day before leaving for Gadhpur on Baras, after concluding the fast of Ekadashi. O king! Thousands of resident devotees walked a long distance with Shree Hari to bid Him farewell. After sending crying devotees back to Junagadh and delighting the devotees of the villages en route, Shree Hari reached Gadhpur on Amavasya. "

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari stayed at Gadhpur, overseeing the construction of the temple and granting Darshan to thousands of devotees who thronged Gadhpur for His divine Darshan and blessing. Once Mukundanand Varni approached Bhagwan Shree Hari and asked Him, 'O Bhagwan! I wish to hear Dharma of Naisthik Brahamcharis that have come under Your tutelage. O king! Shree Hari, always more than eager to espouse true Dharma, willingly elaborated."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Varni! You have asked a very profound question. I shall answer it as described in the scriptures. A Dwij of the first three Varnas; Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya is eligible to accept Brahamcharya provided he has undergone Garbhadan, Upanayan and other Sanskars. A Dwij with miniscule intelligence or wisdom should undertake 'Savitra' Brahamcharya of three days while a slightly more intelligent Dwij should accept 'Prajapatya' Brahamcharya of one year. A very intelligent Dwij who is enamoured with Grahastha Ashram should accept 'Brahm' Brahamcharya of twelve years and only a very intelligent, patient and strongly detached Dwij should accept 'Naisthik', the lifelong Brahamcharya. A Dwij wishing to undertake Naisthik Brahamcharya should approach a good guru to acquire the knowledge of the Vedas and understand the greatness of Bhagwan. He should patiently learn whatever his guru teaches him and reward his guru generously at the completion of his education. I shall now reiterate Dharmas of a Naisthik Brahamchari who has taken Maha Diksha of Uddhav Sampraday from his Acharya."

Shree Hari continued, "O Varni! A Brahamchari who has decided to observe Brahamcharya for the rest of his life should endeavour to serve his guru for the rest of his life and augment Bhakti in Bhagwan. He should always sport Shikha on his head and wear a Yagnopavit and a double stringed Tulsi Kanthi around his neck. He should always keep a grass waistband, wooden staff of Palash or Bili, deerskin, brass or copper tumbler and pitcher and small piece of cotton to sieve water. He should not cut or remove hair from his body. He should smear ash from a sacred fire, and not oil, to stop his hair becoming infected with lice. He should shave hair from his head (except his Shikha), beard, armpits and genitals on hearing the news of his parents' death, visiting a shrine or struck with major illness or infected with lice. A Varni should keep two white Kaupins, two Dhotis and a long piece of cloth to cover his torso. He should colour his quilt, bedspread, pillow and a square piece of cotton to cover his head ochre. He should keep a pitcher, spoon, bowl (for Abhishek), a small dish (for Naivedhya) and some utensils such as pans (to cook) to help him worship Bhagwan in either Shaligram form or pictorial image. He may keep the copies of scriptures for his Swadhyay. Besides these, he should keep only a mat, Gaumukhi, Gopichandan, Kumkum and slippers with him. He should undertake fasts for a number of days that he keeps things which are more than listed above."

Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan continued, "O Brahamchari! A Varni must not look lasciviously at women and not hear nor read stories about them. He should not talk or play with women and relay any secret messages to them through a man. He should neither touch women directly nor touch feminine apparels unless new, freshly washed or put out to dry. He should not look at, touch or make any statuette or picture of a woman except that of a goddess. Leave aside looking at a nude woman from a distance; he should not even look at a naked young female child. He should not look at images depicting a couple having sex nor live in a house adorned with such images. He must never sit facing a woman. A Varni must neither send anything secretly to a woman nor accept anything sent secretly by a woman. He should not recite a Katha addressing women even in an assembly of men nor listen to a Katha from them. He should never stay overnight in a house occupied by a couple, even in the presence of other Grahastha males. He may stay at such homes during the day. He should not go to answer the call of nature or Snaan at such places that are frequented by women for the same purposes. Unless in an emergency, he must not walk within two yards of a woman. O Varni! However, this need not be observed if the path is narrow or when a large number of people have gathered for major festivals. A Naisthik Brahamchari must never remain with a woman in a secluded place. He must not walk with a woman, even if either of them are very old. A Varni should never travel by a horse or a chariot. Even if needed to travel by a cart or chariot in an emergency, he must not share them with a woman. He should treat a cross dresser man as a woman and avoid him just as he would avoid a woman. He should never go to a householder's home for lunch where a woman serves food. He should never narrate vices or virtues of women and never allow a woman to enter his residence, even to clean the room or bring water. A Brahamchari must observe a fast for a day for deviating from each and every decree. The avoidance of women described above, except direct physical contact and staying in a secluded place, is meant for women not closely related to him. He must not directly touch or stay in a secluded place even with his mother."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Mukund Muni! A Varni may speak with a woman closely related to him, albeit without touching her, when absolutely necessary. I shall now mention some of the exceptional circumstances when a Varni may speak with a woman who is not closely related to him. He may speak with a woman to make inquiries regarding food, water, utensils, firewood or accommodation. He may speak with a woman (to prohibit her) entering his exclusive residence or if she deliberately tries to touch him. He may speak with or touch a woman if there is a danger to his or her life from a wild animal, snake, water, fire, poison, falling tree or wall and seeking emergency medical treatment. However, this exception is for the duration of an emergency only, and not otherwise. Just as an association with a woman is totally proscribed for a Varni, an association with lascivious men is forbidden. A Varni must never allow discharge of his semen, whether inadvertently in dreams or deliberately by masturbation. He should fast for a day for accidental discharge or undertake a Chaandrayan Vrat for deliberate discharge. A Varni falls from a status of Naisthik Brahamchari forever for having physical sex with a woman. No amount of repentance can wipe away the stigma or negativity of this sin. He must be exiled from the group of Varnis of Uddhav Sampraday. Such a fallen Varni should atone for his sin and become Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Mukundanand Varni! A Naisthik Brahamchari must not get angry at anybody, and if he does, he should immediately plead with his victim and seek his forgiveness. Greed is the fountainhead of all sins; therefore, a Varni must forsake greed. He should not gather more things than prescribed for him. He should not keep money except to go on a pilgrimage. He should not ask anyone to keep money for him and must forsake all worldly pleasures and vices such as gambling. He should not amass money even to help his poor relatives. He should give up infatuation, ego, envy, conceit, lethargy, hypocrisy, pride, meanness, quarrel and criticism of others. A Varni should not speak harshly with anyone, eat inedible foods, drink the undrinkable or touch the untouchables. He should not taunt, cuss or malign anyone and not even speak truth that is capable of harming someone. He should always speak truth at all other times and in a pleasing manner. He should not indulge his palate, eat food that augments his virility and not seek alms from the same household daily. He should never drink milk of a donkey, mare, camel or elephant, even as medicine. A Brahamchari must never eat Prasad of a deity in front whom meat is offered as Naivedhya. He should never consume, smell or even touch intoxicating drugs, tobacco, onions or garlic. He should not take any medicine laced with alcohol or meat or medicine prescribed by an unknown physician. He should neither eat any food, even fruits, that is not offered to Bhagwan as Naivedhya nor any food given to him without reverence. He should not eat before concluding his daily routine such as Snaan and Sandhya and not eat a second time except in detrimental times such as illness. He should not lean on anybody to give him Bhiksha nor shout nor knock heavily on doors whilst seeking alms. A pious Varni must not accept alms from someone who has committed grave sins or who is observing a Sutak. He should not touch wine goblets, animals such as dogs and donkeys and not wash face and hands with unfiltered water. He must not ride on a donkey, bullock, camel, goat or buffalo even in an emergency. He should not sleep during day, at dusk or dawn and the first and last Prahar of the night, except during ill health. He should not smear his body with sandalwood paste nor massage with scented oils nor sport musk, Kumkum or perfumes. He should not polish his nails or brush his teeth vigorously. He should not exfoliate body or feet whilst bathing, wash his clothes vigorously, look in a mirror for vanity and should not apply kohl in his eyes. He should not go to see street plays or musical shows nor walk under a regal or decorated umbrella. He should not indulge in gossip, relay messages on behalf of someone, spread rumours or spy on someone."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! A Naisthik Varni must not criticise or slander deities, shrines, devotees, cows, the Vedas, guru, the pious and faithful women. He should not kill or torment any living being with his thought, speech or actions; nor cut any shoots of a tree. However, he may pluck Tulsi leaves, pick flowers or cut Darbha to use in worship or religious rituals. Except in an emergency, he should not venture out after dark and even while walking during the day, he should endeavour not to crush small insects under his feet. He should not bath in water that has many small insects in it. He should sieve water in a pot before bathing with it. He should undo his Kaupin before and use water after urinating or defecating. He must not act in anyway which tarnishes his Varna or Ashram and always keep his limbs and eyes under control. A wise Varni should never try to win an argument with a king, his courtiers, women and his guru or elders. He should be patient in the face of provocation by evil or the ignorant and never utter words that pain or provoke others. He must never commit suicide. He should never enter the homes of householders through a secret or very narrow passage nor should he tend or babysit their children. He should not sleep in a bed except in illness nor sleep naked. He should not pluck his hair nor should he keep any valuable gems on him. He should not take grass, wood or clay without the owner's prior permission. of Bhagwan, guru's and the sun's veneration except in an emergency. He should not own farms or tress for his upkeep and not stock up grains, milk, Ghee, etc. for future use. He should never malign his guru or pious saints, even if they are at fault. He should not wear shoes nor wear clothes that are different from other Brahamcharis. He should not use quilts or blankets previously used by women even in an emergency. A Varni must not oil his hair. He should never beat anybody, even with a blade of grass. He should make sure that his sermon does not lead to a loss of earnings of a Brahmin, alms seeker, ballad, singer, dancer, etc. He must not carry out funeral rites of anybody except his parents, teacher, co-students, guru and disciples of his guru. O Muni! A Varni must undertake a fast for a day for deviating from each and every decree mentioned above. A Varni not undertaking appropriate repentances for his lapses is wicked and must be driven out of Uddhav Sampraday.

Thus ends the 51st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 52

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Mukund Brahamchari! A Varni should undertake his religious duties towards the Devtas (veneration) and Pitris (oblation) seriously as prescribed by the scriptures. The spiritual guru of all Brahamcharis, Shree NarNarayan Dev, though being Bhagwan Himself, undertakes severe religious austerity and appropriate religious rites. How can a modern Varni think of abandoning his religious duties when Bhagwan Himself vouches for them? A Varni should perform Sandhya three times, venerate SuryaNarayan and chant the Gayatri hymn daily. He should perform Homa every morning and evening or stand in water and offer water (as a token of offering) to the deities if unable to perform Homa. Except during ill health, he should seek grains, vegetables, etc. in alms and cook himself. He should not eat without offering food first to Bhagwan Vishnu. He should bath three times daily, worship Bhagwan and undertake five Yagnas (Dev, Bhut, Brahm, Pitri and Manushya) as per his abilities. He should always wear Janoi and have his Shikha tied in a knot. He should perform his parents' Shradhdh at an appropriate time. He should bear new

He must have a bath immediately upon touching a killer, sinner, Sutaki, Muslim, untouchable (Chandal) and heretic or passing through a crematorium. He should also have a bath upon touching defiled animals such as donkeys, dogs, etc. and meat or alcohol; eating inedible foods such as onions or garlic; getting Bhiksha from an evil person or speaking to him; following a bad dream and after defecating. He should undertake a fast for a day upon touching a woman or her clothes inadvertently. O Muni! A pious Varni must observe all the fasts as per the decorum of the Sampraday. He should eat food that is offered to Bhagwan in Naivedhya and left over after offering it to the Devtas."

Shree Hari continued, "O Mukundanand Brahamchari! An astute Varni should try to remove as much fat and muscles from his body by undertaking severe Vrats such as Chaandrayan and Kruchh Vrats. He should devote his whole life in acquiring the theoretical and experimental knowledge about Aatma and Parmatma in Bhagwan's Bhakti. He should regularly meditate upon Bhagwan and develop deep Vairagya towards worldly matters. He should serve his guru humbly, be near him all times and obey all his edicts faithfully. A best Varni keeps his mind and senses under his control and he should be serene and patient. He should develop equanimity towards gold and stone, friend and foe and the indifferent. He should fear his siblings and relatives as he fears a snake; he should avoid a woman as he avoids a corpse and fear tasty foods as he fears hell. A Varni should always respect, praise and wish well of Brahmins and respect the devotees without envy. He should understand that the whole purpose of his life is to conform to his Dharma and to attain Bhagwan's pleasure. Therefore, he should abandon the worldly pleasures. He can make people fearless of death by making them realise Bhagwan. This gift is more valuable than the gift of thousands of cows. A Varni should maintain silence while having a bath, eating lunch, while performing Homa, Japa and Sandhya and while answering the call of nature. He should undertake a fast for a day for each and every lapse from these edicts. There are twelve virtues: knowledge, truthfulness, forbearance, modesty, lack of envy, patience, austerity, equanimity, self-restrain, freedom from spite, charity and performing Yagnas; and twelve vices: lust, anger, grief, infatuation, desires, envy, disservice, covetousness, greed, malice, hatred and conceit. A wise Varni should embrace twelve virtues and abandon twelve vices. Being engaged in continuous devotion towards Bhagwan and serving

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Mukund Varni! The Naisthik Brahamcharis must study the Vedas regularly and daily, as they are a verbal form of Bhagwan Narayan. As the Vedas were originally revealed by Bhagwan Himself, one cannot understand Him fully without understanding the Vedas. The Vedas are the highest authority and testimony. Let me narrate how the first sound, Pranav - 'Aum' emerged from Bhagwan's breathe. Before the initial creation, Bhagwan Narayan, Who is beyond Prakruti and Purush, was alone in His Akshardham. He looked at Prakruti and Purush, who were submerged in Akshardham when He wished to create the cosmos. Bhagwan as Mahapurush impregnated Mahamaya and numerous Purush and Pradhan emerged from Mahamaya, just as a foetus emerges from a woman's womb. At the behest of Bhagwan, Purush impregnated Pradhan and as a result, the three properties of Maya; Satva, Raj and Tama (which were originally inert) became agitated and Mahatatva emerged from the union of Purush and Pradhan. A golden and circular universe, enveloped with six layers; Ahankar, Akash, Vayu, Tej, Jal and Pruthvi was created from the three traits of Maya. This circular entity became known as Virat and floated on water (sweat of Mahapurush) for a long time. With a passage of time, Vairaj emerged from the egg shaped cosmos. His sensual and functional organs were not developed fully and as result, he was unable to move about or carry on the process of creation further. After a long time and with Bhagwan's express desire, his limbs and other organs became well defined and Varun, the moon and other Devtas took their positions in these organs. Just as a ripened coconut manifests itself in three distinct contours - fibre, shell and kernel; and just as the human body manifests as Sthool, Sukshma and Karan bodies; Vairaj's body has three manifestations - Virat, Sutratma and Avyakrut. Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva are ruling deities of the three bodies of Virat. Despite the presence of all organs, senses and their ruling deities within Vairaj, he was unable to undertake any activity."

Shree Hari continued, "O Varni! Bhagwan Vaasudev Narayan, as Mahapurush, entered Vairaj and through His sublime powers became his master and controller. As Bhagwan Narayan entered Vairaj through his temple, the home of a lotus of a thousand petals, a divine sound emanated. As the sound travelled to Vairj's navel through the Shushumna nerve, it grew and deepened. The navel, which was looking downwards like a cluster of bananas turned upward like a cob of corn. The sound of Pranav travelled to Vairaj's throat via his heart. The sound that echoed in his navel became known as 'Para' speech and as it travelled through his heart, throat and mouth it progressively became known as 'Pashyanti', 'Madhyama' and 'Vaikhari'. Just as a watermill travels from top to bottom and returns back to top, the divine sound travelled around from Vairaj's head to his navel and back to his mouth. The letters 'A', 'U' and 'M' emerged respectively from Vaikhari (mouth), Madhyama (throat) and Pashyanti (heart) speeches. The three letters; A, U and M representing the three properties of Maya, namely Satva, Raj and Tama and three ruling deities of Vairaj; Brahma, Vishnu, and Mahesh (Shiva) primarily reside in his mouth, throat and heart respectively. At the behest of Bhagwan Narayan, the three sounds conjoined in Vairaj's heart and manifested themselves as a single sound of Pranav - 'Aum'. The whole alphabet including consonants and vowels emerged from Pranav. The Vedas were woven with this alphabet at the beginning of the creation of the cosmos."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Muni! Just as one single divine sound manifested itself in four distinct forms, Bhagwan Narayan took four forms as the ruling deities of four types of speeches. Vaasudev in navel, Sankarshan in heart, Pradhyumna in throat and Anirudhdha in mouth became ruling deities of Para, Pashyanti, Madhyama and Vaikhari speeches. Brahma, Vishnu, and Mahesh, residing in their respective organs venerate Anirudhdha, Pradhyumna, and Sankarshan. Of the four Swarups of Bhagwan Purushottam Narayan, Anirudhdha, Pradhyumna, and Sankarshan are His Sagun Swarups while Vaasudev is His Nirgun Swarup. O Muni! The Vedas, the all-encompassing and ocean of knowledge, flowed directly from Bhagwan Narayan's mouth and therefore, are His verbal Swarup. All Varnis must learn the Vedas. A Naisthik Varni should consider his eternal and immortal soul as a distinct entity from his mortal body. He should endeavour to bring his soul in unison with Akshar (Brahm) and worship Bhagwan Narayan who is beyond and distinct from Akshar. The desires to indulge in worldly pleasures never recede, indeed, the desires become stronger upon indulging in pleasures. Just as the flames of fire become fiercer with addition of Ghee, the desires become stronger and remain unquenched with each indulgence. One's desire will remain unquenched even if all the possessions, wealth and women are made available exclusively to him. A Brahamchari does not get infatuated with anything if he understands this clearly. With the passage of time, a person's body, hair and teeth become old, but his desires remain young forever. A Varni should become devoid of attachment with body, its pleasures and relatives by realising the temporary nature of his body and worship Bhagwan. He should never associate with evil people, place, time, deeds, deity, scriptures and hymns. Any association with evil place, time, etc. however miniscule, deviates a Brahamchari from his ethical life, therefore, a Varni must forsake all association with them and associate with pious places, times, etc."

CHAPTER 54

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Mukundanand Varni! I shall now narrate the daily routine of Naisthik Brahamcharis, which they should follow sincerely. He should wake up in Braham Muhurt, meditate on Bhagwan NarNarayan in his heart and reminiscence the names of His leading devotees. He should then proceed to the southern outskirts of the village to answer the call of nature. A Varni should place his Janoi on his ear, cover the ground with grass and sit facing the North or South at night while defecating. However, it is not important which way a Varni is facing at night or in the face of danger and he need not venture too far away at night. A Varni must not urinate or defecate standing up; in the middle of a road, ploughed field, village, river or a disused and abandoned temple and facing the sun, moon, Brahmin, fire, cow or a woman. He should not throw phlegm or blow his nose at these places either. He should urinate and defecate at least a hundred, two hundred feet away from a lake or river and double the distances from the shrines. He should clean his anus with clay and water and proceed to a lake or river and wash his hands and feet. The clay left over from cleaning his anus, from the anthill or infected with insects must not be used to wash his hands and feet. He should wash his penis once, anus thrice, left hand ten times, both hands together seven times, his feet thrice and gargle twelve times after defecating; and wash his penis once, left hand thrice, both hands together twice and gargle four times following urination to maintain the proper cleanliness. The water left over after cleaning his private parts, gargles or drinking must not be used for Achman, except in emergency when some water from the pot should be discarded before utilising for Achman. O Varni! Please bear in mind that this requirement for proper cleanliness is prescribed for a Grahastha. A Brahamchari should do double in normal times and half at night or whilst travelling. A fit man should endeavour to undertake proper steps for cleanliness but an infirm man can take liberties and undertake whatever is possible for him considering the time and place. In case water is not available to undertake proper cleanliness, a Varni should bath with worn clothes when water becomes available. Some sages opine that by keeping a coin in his hand, a Varni can avoid the drawback of not maintaining proper cleanliness in the middle of a forest, night or in any emergency. However, he must still take a bath when water becomes available. The pail used for such instances must be cleaned properly before the next use. A wooden container should be cleaned thrice and a metal one once with clay and water."

Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Mukundanand swami! A Brahamchari now should clean his teeth without brushing them vigorously. As it is forbidden for him to cut the green twigs or shoots, he should use any available twig to brush his teeth. He must not brush his teeth standing up, walking, talking or facing the West. Instead of brushing his teeth on the days of a fast, Shradhdh, Sankranti and Purnima; a Varni should just gargle his mouth twelve times. He should bath on the banks of a river, lake or well. During the period of ill health, he may use hot water for bath and even undertake a Manas Snaan in extreme conditions. Meditating upon Bhagwan Shree Hari and bathing with imagined water is called a Manas Snaan. While bathing, he should face the North or East and reminiscence about Bhagirathi Ganga, which flows from the feet of Lord Vishnu. At the end of bathing, a Varni must offer water to the sun as a part of Tarpan and come to his residence with a pitcher of water. He may perform his morning Sandhya and Tarpan in water of a lake or river and chant the Gayatri hymns outside on the bank. He must not dry himself or wring the worn wet clothes. It is said that as many shrines as he has hair on his body come within his body whilst bathing. The Devtas drink water (of the shines) on his head, the Pitris drink from his mouth, Gandharvas from his chest and insects from his lower body. Therefore, he must not dry himself. After coming to his Ashram, he should wash his feet and wear washed fresh set of clothes. The clothes that are washed only once before, washed by a woman or washed vigorously are considered unwashed. However, clothes made of grass, leaves, bark, jute, wool or silk are not defiled by a woman's touch. He must never perform Snaan, Sandhya, Homa, Japa, worship or Shradhdh without his upper body covered with a separate cloth. In the absence of such clothes a Varni should use the part of his Dhoti or another small piece of cloth or Janoi to cover his torso. A Varni is considered naked if he is wearing a dirty cloth, wearing only a Kopin, without waistband or waistband tied loose and torso not covered with an upper garment. Similarly, he is considered naked indoors in wet clothes, without a waistband or with two waistbands. He must not wear Kopin over his Dhoti."

Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "O Mukund Varni! A Brahmchari must not use water, flowers, etc. brought by a Shudra or bought. He should gather them himself before sitting on a mat for Puja. He should sit cross legged facing the North or East; perform Achman and Pranayam before adorning his forehead and arms with Urdhvapundra Tilaks. An Urdhvapundra Tilak should be done with clay after Snaan, with ash after Homa, with sandalwood paste after veneration and with water while bathing in a river or lake. A Varni should do Urdhvapundra Tilaks at five places; forehead, throat, heart and two arms. In the absence of sandalwood paste, a Varni may use ash from a sacred fire. He should chant the Gayatri hymns for one thousand or one hundred and eight times as per his ability. He must chant the Gayatri hymn at least ten times even in an emergency. He should then perform Homa which grants him piety. He is deemed unsuitable to undertake worship of Bhagwan without piety. A Varni should imagine his soul as Brahm and in unison with AksharBrahm. He should meditate upon Bhagwan Purushottam Who is ParaBrahm, the One beyond AksharBrahm. He should conduct Manasi Puja before physical Puja. Bhagwan should be invoked in and dispersed from the mobile Murti of Bhagwan except Shaligram form of Bhagwan. He should chant appropriate hymns while worshipping Bhagwan with sixteen elements as explained elsewhere earlier. He should learn the manner of worship including Abhishek and Stuti from his guru. He should then follow it up by offering flowers, incense, lamp, etc. to Bhagwan with mind focussed in Him. He should venerate bell, conch, pitcher and other artefacts of Puja by mentioning the present time and place of worship. He should meditate upon Bhagwan and invoke Him to be present in the Murti and offer Asana, Padhya, Arghya, Achman, etc. and bath Him with Panchamrut. A Varni should offer new clothes, Upavit, flowers, Tulsi leaves, Gulal, incense, lamp and Naivedhya progressively. He should offer Him water to wash His hands and mouth, after-dinner mints and Dakshina. After performing His Aarti, Pradikshina, Namaskar and Stuti, he should chant the Gayatri hymn and Bhagwan's name."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Varni! Japa should be done whilst turning Mala made of Tulsi or lotus seeds. He should sit cross legged, cover the Mala by a cloth, concentrate his mind in Bhagwan and chant His name silently. He should bow down to Bhagwan and read a little portion of the scriptures such as the Puranas or Mahabharat as per his ability and conclude his Puja. He should greet and bow down to his guru and elders. A Naisthik Brahamchari should seek raw cereal and vegetables from pious Dwij householders and prepare food before noon at his Ashram. He should perform the noon Sandhya and Tarpan. He should invoke Bhagwan and reverently offer food to Him. He must never offer water, Ghee, oil or milk without sieving it first or offer stale, burnt or smelling food to Bhagwan. He should willingly share his food with another Bhikshuk and offer food to the Devtas before sitting facing the East to eat. He should sprinkle some water over food before eating. He should not speak to anybody while eating. O Muni! Varni should not go to seek alms on the days he has been invited to dine at pious Brahmins' homes. However, he still must offer Naivedhya to Bhagwan before eating there. Food on the occasions of Shradhdh should be accepted only if it does not lead him to deviate from any of his Vrats. After washing hands and plate, the Varni should spend the rest of the day by reading or learning the scriptures. He should perform Snaan, Sandhya, Puja, Homa and Japa in the evening and narrate Katha to any avid listeners. He should sleep on the floor with other Varnis after the lapse of the first Prahar (after 9 PM) whilst reminiscing on Bhagwan in his heart. O swami! I just narrated the daily routine of a Naisthik Varni in short, the details of which are available in other Dharmashastras. The manner of Sandhya, Puja, Homa and other religious activities should be learned from appropriate scriptures. A Varni who abides by these instructions will surely attain his goal, Moksha. A person reading or narrating the same will be redeemed from his sins and attain Heaven. O Varni! Any Brahamchari, who has forsaken his home and family due to great detachment should abide by these edicts willingly and faithfully to please Bhagwan Narayan. Delighted by such a pious living, He grants whatever a Varni desires."

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! Mukundanand Varni was totally satisfied by hearing Dharmas of Varnis from his Ishtadev, Bhagwan Shree Hari. Delighted, he sang the following Stuti of Bhagwan."

Mukundanand Varni said, "O guru of gurus! Your mercy is a primary cause of Atyantik Moksha of Your devotees. Your eyes are full of compassion. Your name is enough to redeem one from his sins. Your lotus feet offer shelter to devotees tired after taking numerous births. O king among gurus! I repeatedly bow down to You. You are the beacon which removes the souls' ignorance; Your feet are like a Kalpavruksha, which grants one whatever he desires. You have only one aim - to sustain Bhagwat Dharma. O king among gurus! I repeatedly bow down to You. You dwell on a lotus of a thousand petals. You are the only One whom one should meditate upon. mankind. O king among gurus! I repeatedly bow down to You. O Lord! You punish people indulging in meat, alcohol and women for their benefit. You protect and defend Sanatan Dharma and non-sacrificial Yagnas. O Bhagwan! Greed, lust, ego and other such vices have overwhelmed the men, demons and Devtas. You are the only One who can conquer them. O king among gurus! I repeatedly bow down to You. O Shree Hari! You are the only One who always follows Dharma and guides Your devotees to follow the same. The fake gurus abound in this world, who cheat and mislead the gullible, whilst themselves indulging in wine, women and wealth. Your fame as a true guru tarnishes their reputation. O king among gurus! I repeatedly bow down to You. O Bhagwan! You are the only One who can grant Moksha. Therefore, You are the only One whose shelter the wise sages seek. Bless me that my devotion in You remains unfaltering and undefeated from all hindrances. O king among gurus! I repeatedly bow down to You."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Mukundanand Varni prostrated at Bhagwan Narayanmuni after concluding his Stuti. His devotion in Shree Hari became more profound and his faith in his Dharma more resolute. Mukund Varni served Bhagwan with renewed vigour whilst observing his Dharmas as explained by Shree Hari."

Thus ends the 54th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 55

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! The construction work of the temple at Gadhpur progressed unimpeded. King Uttam Khachar approached Shree Hari when the work was complete and requested Him with folded hands, 'O Bhagwan! The temple is ready and we are waiting for You to establish the Murtis.' O king! Shree Hari summoned an expert astrologer named Ramchandra and asked him to look for an auspicious Muhurt for establishing the Murtis. Ramchandra suggested Aso Sud Baras as an auspicious Muhurt. Shree Hari turned to Uttam Khachar and told him, 'The astrologer has given the date which is only five days from today. Gather all the things necessary in consecration of the temple and feeding thousands of visiting saints and devotees.' O Pratapsinh! King Uttam consulted expert Brahmins and leading citizens of Gadhpur and organised the gathering of all necessary items. Bhagwan Shree Hari organised the erection of a large Mandap near the temple. He asked the devotees who had come for His Darshan on the occasion of Dussera to stay back for the forthcoming event. Bhagwan Shree Hari summoned Brahmins expert in the consecration ceremony and other religious rituals from far afield. The ceremony started on Ekadashi with Puja of the Murtis to be installed in the temple. Bhagwan Shree Hari, attired in new red robes, conducted Puja Vidhi of the Murtis under the guidance of experienced Brahmins. O king! On the morning of Aso Sud Baras (of Samvat 1885), Bhagwan Shree Hari established the Murtis of Gopinathji Maharaj and Radhikaji in the central sanctum sanctorum with the full Vedic rites. The environs of Gadhpur reverberated with the Brahmins' chants of the Vedic hymns and various musical instruments. After conducting the Puja of Gopinathji Maharaj, Shree Hari stood in front of the Murti for a while. He looked at Gopinathji Maharaj in the eyes without blinking for some time. The beauty of the Murti of Gopinathji Maharaj seemed to augment and all people present were awed with such a luminous and divine beauty."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari concluded the Puja Vidhi with dispersal of the Devtas invoked and invited to be present at the Yagna. He satisfied the Brahmins guiding and conducting Yagna by rewarding them handsomely. He gave gold and silver coins and new clothes to thousands of other Brahmins present at the festival and fed them generously. At the behest of Bhagwan Swaminarayan and organised by Uttam Khachar, thousands of visiting devotees and non devotees alike were fed sumptuous meal. Shree Hari advised the visiting devotees to return to their respective villages after the conclusion of the festival. Uttam Khachar, his family, including his sisters and people of Gadhpur, were very delighted as their long standing desire to have a temple in their royal courtyard was fulfilled. Uttam Khachar continued serving Shree Hari with the utmost reverence as he had always done previously. O king! Shree Hari became very detached from His surroundings since then and acted just like jadBharat. He would sometimes eat only fruits instead of His regular meal and other times skip His meals altogether and observed a day of fast. To ensure that all saints, Varnis and Parshads follow the path shown by Him, Shree Hari summoned all saints and addressed Gopalanand swami, 'O Gopal swami! You should ensure that all the saints follow their Dharma under the aegis of their Acharya.' Shree Hari then turned to other saints and said, 'Listen you all saints and Varnis! You should follow the command of Gopalalnand swami.' O king! All saints replied in assent and pledged to follow Gopalanand swami's orders. Shree Hari was delighted at the response of saints, Varnis and Parshads and blessed them and assured them of His pleasure if they followed His edict and proffered this advice, 'None of My devotees should ever forsake Dharma pertaining to their Varna and Ashram. You should endeavour to forge unison between your souls and AksharBrahm and abandon all desires in worldly pleasures and possessions. You should devote the rest of your life in the pursuit of pleasure of Bhagwan Vaasudev Narayan, Who dwells in His Akshardham. You should associate with pious saints to understand His glory fully." O king! After proffering this advice, Shree Hari withdrew Himself in a shell without taking care of His food and body. He seemed to have lost all interest in His surroundings."

Thus ends the 55th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 56

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Though Shree Hari's interest in other affairs waned, his empathy towards the inquisitive devotees remained the same. Shatanand swami was once massaging Shree Hari' feet when Shree Hari prompted him to ask Him anything he had in his mind. Shatanand swami asked Bhagwan with folded hands, 'O Lord! I would like to know the intricacies of Yoga with all its eight elements. By Your mercy, I can attain Samadhi which is very difficult even for a person who has mastered the Yoga. However, I still wish to hear about Yoga, including its elements such as Yamas and Niyams, as described in YogShastra. O king! Shree Hari replied."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! You have asked a wise question. There is nothing better than Yoga to fulfil one's desires. The mind cannot be brought under one's control without the help of Yoga. Even knowledge and devotion find their final destination with the help of Yoga. Sage Hiranyagarbh wrote the initial YogaShastra, which was expanded and compiled for easy understanding. I shall reiterate the essence of Yoga in short. Samadhi, the single minded concentration in Bhagwan, is the ultimate goal of Yoga. Just as fire removes impurities of gold, Samadhi removes all impurities or faults from one's mind. Therefore, an energetic devotee should learn and practice Yoga to purify his mind. A devotee must find an expert teacher, serve him reverently and learn Yoga under his expert guidance. One should learn Yoga in a pious and flat place which is free from mosquitoes and flies; a place which has food, water and clothes in abundance; a place which has a river or a lake nearby and a place which is free from all turbulences. He should not stay on the banks of deep rivers or wells; in a crematorium; at crossroads or courtyards; in densely populated areas; disused cow sheds and places which are noisy, stinking or prone to fights. A Varni wishing to learn Yoga must not eat, speak or strain too much; must overcome his anger and indulgence in palate and must not associate with many people. He should fill half of his stomach with food, one quarter with water and the last quarter should be left empty. He should eat barley, rice, wheat, milk, Ghee and dry ginger while avoiding meat, alcohol and other intoxicating substances. He should also avoid eating yoghurt, buttermilk, tamarind, salt, chillies, asafoetida, very hot or cold and hot and spicy food. A Varni should remain alert at all times and abandon lethargy. The company of women and lascivious men leads even an accomplished Yogi astray from his path. Therefore, a learner Yogi must avoid all types of contact with women, evil people, sinners and lascivious men."

CHAPTER 57

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! As the name 'Ashtang' suggests, Yoga has eight elements; Yama, Niyam, Aasan, Pranayam, Pratyahar, Dharna, Dhyan and Samadhi. Samadhi is the ultimate goal and destination of Yoga. The first five elements are external and the last three are internal elements of Yoga. I shall now describe all the eight elements separately."

Shree Narayanmuni continued, "O Shatanand swami! Non violence and other pious deeds, which stop a man committing sins and help him incline towards Yoga, are called Yamas. The scholars count non violence, truthfulness, no stealing, Brahamcharya and Aparigraha (non possession) as five Yamas. Not harming or tormenting any living being with mind, speech and deeds is called non violence. Speaking that is benevolent to all living beings after evaluating what is Dharma and Adharma is called truth. To take anything belonging to others without their express permission is called stealing. After realising the futility of the female body and forsaking direct and indirect contact with women in all forms is called Brahamcharya, which helps one attain BrahmDhaam. Not amassing the possessions which have been forsaken after thinking about their uselessness is called Aparigraha. Non enmity and compassion towards all are the rewards of non violence; not losing any accumulated Punyas is the reward of truthfulness, acquisition of valuable gems is the reward of not stealing; mastering the intricacies of Yoga in a very short time is the reward of Brahamcharya and resolve and serenity of the mind are the rewards of non possession."

Shree Hari continued, "O swami! The regular religious activities (which many undertake to attain heaven), which wane one's desire for heaven and help him attain Moksha are called Niyams. Cleanliness, austerity, contentment, Svadhyay and Archan (worship) of Bhagwan are five Niyams. Cleanliness is of two kinds; external and internal. Water and clay (or soap) helps one achieve external cleanliness and pious thoughts helps one attain inner cleanliness. To weaken a body and concentrate senses with the help of Chaandrayan and Kruchh Vrats is called austerity. To be satisfied with whatever one gets with Bhagwan's wish and not desiring anything more is called contentment.

To study the Vedas, Upanishads and other holy scriptures devoutly is called Svadhyay (self learning). To think constantly of Bhagwan, sing His praise and massage Him with sandalwood paste, etc. and offering Him flowers, fruits, etc. for his pleasure is called His Pranidhan - worship. The chastity of mind, pious thoughts, control of senses and ability to realise one's soul are the rewards of cleanliness. Piety of senses and wisdom and obliteration of the drawbacks of sins are the rewards of austerity. The highest state of happiness is the reward of contentment; pleasure of one's Ishtadev is the reward of Svadhyay and immediate attainment of Samadhi is the prime reward of His worship."

Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan continued, "A physical stance or a sitting position in which Yoga can easily be practised is called Aasan. There are so many Aasans, but the Yogis consider eighty four main amongst them. Even amongst the eighty four, thirty are more important. I shall narrate to you the fourteen Aasans amongst them; Swastik, Gomukh, Veer, Yoga, Padma, Kukkut, Kurma, Dhanush, Mayur, Paschimtanak, Shab, Siddha, Sinh and Bhadra. O Muni! I shall now explain these fourteen Aasans in detail. An easy sitting posture in which one bends each leg at knees and places them under the cavity formed by the bent knees is called Swastik Aasan. Sitting on both bent knees with legs crossed with each heel pressing on the opposite buttocks with toes facing down is called Gomukh Aasan. Sitting with one knee bent under the opposite buttock and the other leg placed over that thigh is called Veer Aasan. Similar posture to Gomukh Aasan, but this time the heels pressing on anus in turn, is called Yoga Aasan. An Aasan very similar to Swastik Aasan but this time both feet placed over the opposite thighs with a Yogi holding the big toes with his hands from behind is called Padma Aasan. In Kukkut Aasan, a Yogi sits in Padma Aasan but instead of holding big toes, he passes his hands through the gaps of his thighs and lifts his body on his palms and balances it on them. Just as in Kukkut Aasan, a Yogi, instead of lifting his body, holds his bent neck with his hands is called Kurma Aasan; and rolling on the floor (lying on his back with knees facing upwards) in the same stance is called Uttan (overturned) Kurma Aasan. A stance in which the left leg is spread straight, the right foot placed on the left thigh and holding the left foot with the right hand encircling the right knee is called Dhanush Aasan. It alleviates indigestion and strengthens abdominal muscles. Mayur Aasan is in which a Yogi balances his straightened body on his elbows (under abdomen) while his palms are placed on the floor. This Aasan aids indigestion, speeds up metabolism and even helps digest toxic substances consumed inadvertently. An Aasan, in which one spreads both his legs outward, touches toes with his hands and in the process lets his head rest on his knees is called Paschimtanak Aasan. It aids metabolism and reduces the fat from the waist. Lying on the floor on one's back like a corpse is called Shab Aasan which removes fatigue caused by doing the other Aasans and calms the mind. Placing the left foot under the body with left heel pressing hard on the nerve just below the testicles whilst placing the right knee over the left knee is called Siddha Aasan, which some call Mukta Aasan, Vajra Aasan or Gupta Aasan. A Sinh Aasan is the one in which one sits on bent knees with two heels pressing hard on the nerve on opposite sides (left heel on the right side and vice versa) of testicles, hands pressing hard on the thighs while torso held upright and staring at the tip of the nose with a gaping mouth. Sitting posture like Sinh Aasan with hands holding two rear facing feet instead of hands placed on the thighs is called Bhadra Aasan. A Yogi should learn and practice these and other Aasans regularly. He should not dry the perspiration but should rather massage on his body to tone the muscles and moisturise the skin. An ability to endure heat and cold, disease resistant health and competence to undertake Pranayam (breathing exercises) are the rewards of learning Aasans." Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O swami! A Yogi should approach and request his guru to learn the methods of detoxification. One cannot master Pranayam without detoxification as wind cannot move freely if the inner channels (such as nostrils, rectum, oesophagus, etc.) are full of toxins. Dhoti, Basti, Neti, Tratak, Naulika and Kamabhati are some of the important methods to detoxify the body. A process of swallowing a fine and soft piece of cotton cloth about four inches wide and fifteen feet long through mouth and pull it back again is called Dhoti which alleviates the problems associated with breathing, cough and swallowing. In Basti process a Yogi stands waist deep in water and sucks water in and expels through his anus. This detoxification process has the ability to defeat all diseases. When a Yogi sucks water through his penis and expels through it or through his anus is another type of Basti process. Drinking water and expelling it straightaway through anus is called Shankh Praxalan Basti process. Drinking water and vomiting the same quantity of water immediately afterwards is called Gajakarni Basti process. All types of Basti process clean internal organs thoroughly of all accumulated toxins. A process in which a Yogi swallows a thin and fine thread about nine inches long through one of the nostrils and pulls it out through the mouth is called Neti process, which improves the eyesight and protects one from migraines and other cerebral agonies. Focussing eyes on a very miniscule object and keep staring at it until tears well up in the eyes is called Traatak process which improves the eyesight and removes lethargy and fatigue. To move the abdomen muscles sideways vigorously while bending forward is called Nauli process. This alleviates all problems arising from imbalance in wind, bile and cough matters in the body. To inhale and exhale in quick succession like the bellows is called Kapalbhati process which alleviates cough and other respiratory problems. All the above mentioned detoxifying processes clean internal channels. They remove excess fat from body, give radiance to the skin, improves metabolism, increases the flow of air in the body and grants the ability to hear the sound of Aum from within."

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! After cleaning his internal channels, a Yogi should now try to learn Pranayam which controls the flow and movement of air in the body. As long as the flow of air through the body is not regulated, the mind remains uncontrolled and keeps wandering. Seating in one of the Aasans, he should learn Pranayam under guidance of his guru. The word Pranayam is made of two syllables; 'Pran' means the intake of air (often referred as the life force) and 'Ayam' means to regulate. The breathing exercise which regulates the flow of air in the body is called Pranayam. It is categorised into two types; Garbha, which is done without Japa and Dhyan and Sagarbha Pranayam is done with chanting and meditation. Amongst these two, the sages consider Sagarbha Pranayam the better as it speeds up the end results of Yoga. Both types of Pranayam process is sub divided into four elements; Purak, Rechak, Kumbhak and Shunyak. The process of drawing air in through the nostrils is called Purak, to hold air that has entered the lungs without inhaling or exhaling is called Kumbhak while to expel all air from within the lungs is called Rechak. Kumbhak Pranayam is further classified in two types; inner and outer. O Muni! To concentrate intake of air in Muladhar Chakra, situated near the anus, is called inner Kumbhak and to hold Apan in Anahat Chakra, situated at the navel, is called outer Kumbhak Pranayam. A Yogi should inhale for as long as it takes him to chant Pranav - Aum sixteen times, hold his breath till it takes to chant Pranav sixty four times and exhale as slowly as it takes to chant Pranav thirty two times. The Sun and Moon are reigning deities of Pingla and Ida Nadis situated in the right and left nostrils respectively, while Agni (fire) is the reigning deity of Shushumna Nadi. A Yogi should perform Purak Pranayam through the left nostril, then hold his breath to perform Kumbhak Pranayam and Rechak Pranayam - exhale through the right nostril. He should reverse the order of inhalation and exhalation the next time. Pranayam must be done slowly and as directed, which protects him from a myriad of illnesses, otherwise, it invites trouble. A Yogi should undertake Pranayam at morning, midday, evening and at midnight. He should increase the total number of Kumbhak Pranayam gradually to eighty. A Yogi perspires at the lowest successful achievement, quivers at the median achievement and rises from his position at the highest achievement of Pranayam. A state where a Yogi is neither inhaling, holding nor exhaling is called Sunyak Pranayam, which is the first state of Samadhi. His lungs have no air and he is not breathing either. The reward of excelling in Pranayam is an ability to control his mind and senses and undergo the next stage of Yoga, Dharna (conjecture). O swami! Shunyak is the best of all types of Pranayam and is the most vital element of Yoga. When a patient Yogi masters Shunyak Pranayam and excels in it, he can hear the sound of Pranav, realises his soul and experiences the bliss of ParaBrahm. I shall now narrate to you the state of a Yogi who has excelled in Shunyak Pranayam."

Thus ends the 57th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 58

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! Sunyak Pranayam can be attained only when a Yogi's mind is serene and free from all thoughts and desires. Ten winds of his body (Udan, Apan, etc.) calm down in their respective places. A Yogi, though fully awake, migrates into a unique trance like state when his mind and body become tranquil and he hears various sounds from within. He hears the sounds of Veena, Mrudang (two sided percussion instrument), conch, Dudumbhi and Bheri (types of percussion instruments) progressively. With the sounds of thunder, he sees bright radiance in his heart. He sees his and Vairaj's three types of bodies (Sthool, Sukshma and Karan; and Avyakrut, Sutratma and Virat) and Pranav in person in his heart. To realise Pranav in their heart, the Yogis chant 'Aum Namo Narayanay' at every single breath. A Yogi sees an all-encompassing brilliant halo in his heart. Just as many flares emanate from the Sun, many glowing ripples emerge from this brilliant radiance called NadBrahm. Just as numerous waves arise and subside in an ocean, a Yogi can literally see the bright waves of Pranav arising from and merging back into the radiance of NadBrahm. All the sounds he had heard so far pales into insignificance at the sound of Pranav."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! The greatness and glory of Pranav is described in all four Vedas. I shall mention the same in short here. Pranav is the origin of all sounds, vowels and consonants alike. The sound of Pranav is made of sounds A, U, M and a half metre. 'A' sustains Virat body of Vairaj, Vishnu and existence state of the universe; 'U' sustains Sutratma body, Brahma and creation state of the universe, 'M' sustains Avyakrut body, Shiva and annihilation state of the universe while half metre sustains Chidakash (eternal space surrounding Akshardham), AksharBrahm and Bhagwan Vaasudev. Fifty two letters of the alphabet, the Vedas, their six branches and indeed anything that is spoken or heard, originate from Pranav. A Yogi can attain the fountainhead of Pranav, Bhagwan Narayan, only through and after realising Pranav. Bhagwan is the reason and result of action of Bhagwan. He can visualise Bhagwan Narayan, from whom Pranav has originated, in his heart. As a result, he feels his whole life fulfilled and attains Bhagwan's supreme abode due to His mercy.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shatanand swami! This all can only be attained through Shunyak Pranayam. The great sages call this state a natural Samadhi. A Yogi in this state, though living with Sthool body, loses all attachment with it. When in Shushupti state, such a Yogi has full control of his senses. It is not possible for everyone to excel in Shunyak Pranayam; indeed, it cannot be attained just by Punyas of a single life. Such a serenity of the mind is attained only as a result of the Punyas accumulated over the numerous lives by observing Dharma, acquiring knowledge, developing Vairagya and a profound devotion towards Bhagwan. However, sometimes it becomes possible to attain this state without learning scriptures or Satsang if Bhagwan Vaasudev so wishes. With His blessings, a Yogi can attain his soul's unison with AksharBrahm without much effort just as the nine great Yogis had managed to do in the bygone era. These nine great Yogis; Kavi, Hari, Antariksha, Prabuddh, Piplayan, Aavirhotra, Drumil, Amas and Karbhajan were sons of Bhagwan Rhishabhdev who realised Brahm in their tender age due to the great mercy of Bhagwan and their devotion towards Him. O Muni! The same is possible even today if someone has such a profound devotion towards Bhagwan. Other than this, the only option to excel in Shunyak Pranayam is to abandon all desires. Once a man becomes totally void of all desires, Purak, Kumbhak, Rechak and Shunyak Pranayam crop up without much effort. I explained to you the traits of Pranayam, which the eminent Yogis classify as two; common (Purak, Kumbhak and Rechak) and special (Shunyak). Though a man's mind is very fickle and difficult to mould on the path of salvation, he can control and manoeuvre it successfully with the help of Pranayam. Therefore, one must continue practicing Pranayam patiently and master its processes."

Thus ends the 58th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 59

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! A Yogi who wishes to excel in Pranayam must recognise the five base elements in his exhalation. He should also recognise from which Nadis (Ida, Pingla and Shushumna) his breathing is taking place and which days and Tithis are influenced by the Sun and Moon to determine which activities should be taken at the most suitable time. I shall explain all these in short here, the details of which should be learnt from the Swarshastra. The base element earth is square and yellow and exhalation is at the normal median rate and travels up to six inches from the nose before dispersing. When earth is ruling exhalation, a mind thinks of scented yellow objects and is enamoured by scented objects. A Yogi should undertake predetermined activities which are in tune with his inherent nature. When water, white and crescent in shape reigns the exhalation; the mind become agitated, wishes for tasty foods and thinks of white objects. The exhalation travels downwards for sixteen inches before dispersion. A man should undertake the activities which calms his mind. Tej, which appears red and triangle entices mind in beauty and red objects. Under the influence of Tej, exhalation travels upwards to the distance of four inches before dispersion. A Yogi should undertake acute or sensitive activities during this time. Wind appears round and green when ruling the exhalation process. The exhaled wind travels for eight inches from the nose in a random direction. The mind becomes impatient, desires green objects and yearns to touch them. A Yogi should undertake all tasks very quickly during this period. When Akash rules exhalation, the exhaled air travels only an inch from the nose before dispersion so that it appears travelling in all directions. It appears like a black dot and mind becomes serene and free from all turbulences. A Yogi should introspect or meditate at this time. O Muni! Pranayam is best done when exhalation is under the influence of earth and Akash and should be avoided under the influence of wind. Pranayam may be done when exhalation is under the influences of water and Tej, but may yield mixed results. A Yogi should drink when water is traversing through Ida Nadi; eat and defecate when Tej is traversing through Pingla Nadi and meditate upon Bhagwan and do Pranayam when wind is moving through Shushumna Nadi."

Shree Hari continued, "O swami! A Yogi should stimulate Ida Nadi, whose ruling deity is the Moon, during the day and Pingla Nadi during the night. He should stimulate the opposite Nadi during drinking and eating. He should consider a bright fortnight to be under the influence of the Moon and dark fortnight under the influence of the Sun generally. Similarly Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays to be under the influence of the Sun while Tuesdays, Saturdays and Sundays to be under the influence of the Moon. The batches of three days starting from Padvo of the bright fortnight (Padvo, Beej and Treej, et al) are deemed to be under the influence of the Moon and Sun alternatively. Any task undertaken when the combination of Nadi, fortnight, days and Tithi are under the influence of the same ruling deity (the Sun or Moon) gets completed successfully while the task undertaken in the period of mixed influences do not yield desired results immediately. Anyone wishing to excel in Yoga and master its intricacies must understand traits of base elements and periods under various influences to speed up the process of learning. However, O Muni! Bear in mind that this science can be understood only by a person who observes all the requirements mentioned above such as Yamas, Niyams and Pranayam and not by others. A person, who speaks too much, eats too much, sleeps during the day or is lethargic, gluttonous, angry or lascivious will never understand this. A person knowing this science can have his tasks completed successfully with minimal effort. I explained this in the course of explaining Pranayam. After narrating to you Yamas, Niyams, Aasans and Pranayam, I shall narrate to you the remaining elements of Ashtang Yoga next.

Thus ends the 59th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 60

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shatanand Muni! To withdraw the sensual organs from their objects and focus them within the souls is called Pratyahar. A man is liberated from the cycle of death and rebirth by having the organs under his control and Moksha is the reward of Pratyahar. To visualise Bhagwan's Murti in one's heart or in one of the six Chakras with single-mindedness is called Dharna. Muladhar, Svadhisthan, Manipuram, Anahat, Vishuddhi and Aagna are six Chakras. Ability to meditate is the reward of Dharna. After the successful practice of the first six elements of Yoga such as Yamas and Niyams, the mind becomes free of desires and the drawbacks of the sins are removed, a Yogi should concentrate his efforts at Meditation, which enhances his love for Bhagwan. A lotus bud of twelve petals facing downwards like a hanging cluster (or bunch) of bananas is situated in the navel, which blooms and faces upward when the sound of Pranav passes through it. To concentrate the mind on and meditate upon Bhagwan Vaasudev sitting on this bloomed lotus is called Dhyan. His face is as radiant as thousands of suns shining at the same time, His eyes like the petals of a newly bloomed lotus, wearing golden robes and many golden ornaments including a necklace with Kaustubhmani (a large solitaire), numerous flower and pearl garlands offered to Him by His devotees, fish shaped earrings, bejewelled coronet, a golden Yagnopavit and He is playing a divine flute. A Yogi should meditate upon each part of His body such as the face and limbs. He may meditate upon any of His Avatars such as Lord Ram or Krishna. He may meditate upon the image of Bhagwan given to him by his Acharya or indeed any other image by which he knows Bhagwan. He may meditate upon any item which has had a direct contact or association with Bhagwan, such as an item of clothing, if he so desires. A Yogi's love for Bhagwan grows immensely with regular meditation. There are many other places in the body in which a Yogi may meditate upon Bhagwan, but meditation of His Murti in the navel is more rewarding. When a Yogi meditates upon Bhagwan in his navel, the Nadis emanating from it are recharged and his mind becomes concentrated in Bhagwan very quickly. Therefore, a Yogi desiring quick results should meditate upon Bhagwan sitting on a lotus of his navel."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! A Yogi should know the four types of hindrances and try to overcome them with verve. The four types of obstacles are; Laya (giving in to laziness or sleep), Vikshep (giving in to sexual desires), Kashay (giving in to infatuation or malice) and Rasasvad (desire for heavenly pleasures). These obstacles are all drawbacks arising from the weakness of the mind, which a wise Yogi should endeavour to overcome. Otherwise, he becomes unsuccessful on his path of salvation and becomes entangled in the cycle of birth and death. A Yogi should enlighten his mind by overcoming Laya (lethargy); gratify his mind by overcoming Vikshep (interruption); destroy his Kashaya (anger, ego, illusion and greed) with knowledge and develop Vairagya by overcoming Rasasvad (pleasures). O Muni! One cannot focus his mind properly in meditation without overcoming these four and one cannot even imagine salvation without meditation. Therefore, a Yogi must endeavour to overcome Laya, Vikshep, Kashay and Rasasvad as described. One's love towards Bhagwan grows with the regular practice of meditation and to concentrate one's mind exclusively on Bhagwan is called Samadhi, the eighth and the final step of Ashtang Yog. A Yogi must meditate upon Bhagwan's body singularly rather than upon any single part of His body. Indeed, the wise sages define Samadhi as meditating exclusively upon the whole Murti of Bhagwan. An ability to meditate upon the whole Murti of Bhagwan for a considerable time with the total concentration of mind (when mind is not thinking about anything except Bhagwan) is called Sampragnat (the perfect) Samadhi, in which a Yogi loses his identity and becomes one with Bhagwan. The difference between a simple meditation (thinking of Bhagwan), meditation upon the face or limbs of Bhagwan and deep meditation on the whole body (Sampragnat Samadhi) may be small but still a remarkable one. Just as a student of the Vedas, a scholar of the Vedas and a teacher of the Vedas are all respectable but markedly different with the later better than the previous. A Yogi who has mastered the first six elements of Yoga is better than the others; a Yogi able to meditate upon the face or feet of Bhagwan Narayan is better than the previous and a Yogi able to attain Samadhi and meditate upon the whole body is better than the first two."

Bhagwan Shree Narayanmuni said, "O swami! The first five elements of Yoga - Yamas, Niyam, Aasans, Pranayam and Pratyahar are exterior (bodily) elements; while the three; Dharana, Dhyan and Samadhi are internal (mental) elements. To excel in the inner elements is better than excelling in the external elements. A Yogi who has mastered three inner elements of Ashtang Yoga, either due to the ascent of Punyas of many past lives or due to Bhagwan's mercy, does not need to bother about the five external elements. O Muni! A Yogi should realise that the eight great divine magical powers; Anima, Mahima, Prapti, Prakamya, Vashita, Ishita, Laghima and Kaampurti are obstacles on his pursuit of the perfect Samadhi. There are many other smaller obstacles on a path of Samadhi. A Yogi should not be taken in by any of the powers. Just as a hunter shoots down an unsuspecting or careless bird flying in the sky, Maya obliterates a Yogi engrossed in magical powers. Therefore, Yogi should overcome the greed of magical powers and pursue his final goal - to attain Bhagwan. Attachment of infatuation in anything, except Bhagwan, is a real obstacle on the path of mastering the Yoga. How does one expect a Yogi not to be taken in by the pleasures of heaven and other higher abodes if he cannot save himself from minor worldly pleasures? Profound Vairagya and right knowledge are the only tools at one's disposal to save himself from the deviation from his goal of salvation. A Yogi must not be taken in by any magical powers or pleasures dangled in front of him by the Devtas, just as a Yogi called Uddalak of the bygone era overcame all obstacles put in his path."

Shree Hari continued, "O Shatanand Muni! Even such a deep Samadhi can further be categorise into two; Sampragnat (with perfect knowledge or Nirvikalp - free from thought and reasoning) and Asampragnat (without knowledge or Savikalp - where reasoning has not abated completely). I just described Sampragnat Samadhi. Now hear about Asampragnat Samadhi. The mind has five states; Kshipt (languid), Moodh (infatuated), Vikshipt (distracted or bewildered), Ekagra (concentrated) and Ruddha (when the thoughts have subsided). Samadhi is just not possible in the first two states.

In a Vikshipt state, there is a possibility of Samadhi when the mind momentarily becomes serene. Sampragnat Samadhi becomes attainable when a mind becomes concentrated (Ekagra) on to a single entity - Bhagwan's Murti, while Asampragnat Samadhi is attainable when all thoughts in mind have subsided. The mind of a Yogi in Samadhi attains unison in Bhagwan Narayan and he becomes immune to inner and external forces. His mind just ceases thinking. The separation of the mind of a Yogi and Bhagwan is possible, but it is a slow process. However, the great bliss he enjoyed in Samadhi stays with him forever. Such an accomplished Yogi sees all internal arrangements of his physical body such as bones and veins. Not only that, but such a Yogi can also see the composition of the universe in his heart and mind. I shall now describe what such a Yogi sees within his body under the spell of Samadhi.

Thus ends the 60th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 61

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! There are six types of cells (blood, flesh, fat, bone, marrow and semen) in a human body which are formed with the help of Agni (fire or heat). The digested food turns into blood. The blood turns into flesh. An abundance of flesh turns into fat which turns into the bones. The bones contain marrow within them which turns into semen. Semen is the final product, which does not transform any further. These six types of cells are wrapped by a skin, just as a banana trunk is enveloped by its layers of fibres. A human body has three hundred and sixty bones. Thirty two teeth are held by thirty two roots. There are one hundred bones in hands and feet; twenty nails, five each in wrists, palms, ankles and soles and three in each fingers and toes. There are four bones in each knees and elbows. There are two long bones in each hands and legs. Both thighs and arms have two bones each. There are two shoulder blades, two hips, two pelvic bones, two inner ears, two middle ears and two bones connect shoulders and front cage of bones. There is one bone each in penis and nose and upper and lower jaws are a bone each. The brain is enclosed in eight bones. There are fifteen small bones in the neck and forty five bones in the back including the spine. There are seventeen ribs, which are held together in the torso with a total of seventy two large and small bones, some of them already mentioned earlier. Navel, heart, anus, semen, blood, head, throat and finger tips are the main points of vitality in a human body. Tied centrally to the navel and traversing the entire body, forty arteries (or veins) carry Vat (wind), Pitt (bile) and cough (phlegmatic matter) throughout the body. They have seven hundred main smaller arteries. Amongst them, twenty four main arteries along with two hundred smaller arteries supply wind (air) to the body. O Varni! There are two million, nine hundred thousand, nine hundred and fifty six arteries and capillaries in a human body. Nine hundred muscles and five hundred tissues tie six major (hands, feet, torso and head) and six minor (stomach, navel, forehead, nose, chin and eyes) organs together. The total number of hair on head, beard and moustache are three hundred thousand. There are one hundred and seven main vital parts and two hundred points of juncture in a human body. The numbers of body hair, sweat glands and other follicles are impossible to count, but some sages have put forth a figure for them, which is five hundred forty six million and seven hundred fifty thousand. All this cannot be seen or comprehended by naked eyes, but a person under the spell of Samadhi can see all this clearly. Now let Me tell you the quantity of food and cells in a human body. A healthy body has nine Anjali food (in process of digestion), ten Anjali water, seven Anjali faeces, eight Anjali blood, four Anjali urine, five Anjali bile, six Anjali phlegm, one Anjali marrow, two Anjali fat, three Anjali flesh and half an Anjali each of semen, nasal phlegm and fatty substance in brain. (An 'Anjali' is about 120 grams.) The right quantity of these elements keep the body healthy."

Bhagwan Shree Hari said, "O Varni! A heart situated in the middle of the body is considered to house the mind and cough matter while bile matter dwells in a man's navel. Intestine is situated below the navel, stomach (a receptacle for undigested food) is situated above the navel while the stomach where the food is digested is situated in the middle and behind the navel. The navel, a circular organ about two inches in diameter, houses Nabhichandra. Just as a spider moves about independently in its web, a soul, influenced by its Paaps and Punyas and enveloped with its life force, roams around in Nabhichandra. A long serpentine energetic potency called Kundalini surrounds the navel with eight loops and obstructs the path leading to Brahmrandhra (a potent chakra in the head). Seventy two thousand Nadis (Nadis are not nerves but channels for the flow of consciousness or life force) emanate from the navel and traverse the entire body. The fourteen amongst them; Sushumna, Pingala, Ida, Vaaruna, Saraswati, Yashasvini, Hastijivha, Pusha, Vishvodara, Kuhu, Alambusha, Gandhari, Shankhini and Payasvini are major Nadis. The three amongst them; Sushumna, Pingala and Ida are the most important. Shushumna connects the navel to Brahmrandhra while Ida and Pingala, lying on either sides of Shushumna, connect the navel to the left and right nostrils respectively. Varuni Nadi travels up and down connecting upper and lower regions of the body; Saraswati connects the navel and tongue; Yashasvini and Hastijivha connect the navel with right and left big toes; Pusha and Gandhari - lying behind Ida connects the navel with right and left eyes; Vishvodara Nadi connects the navel with the mouth; Kuhu connects the navel with the genitals; Alanbusha Nadi traverse the lower abdomen while Shankhini and Payasvini connect the navel with left and right ears. O Varni! Hundreds and thousands small Nadis emanate from these main Nadis to reach every part of the body. All this can be seen only by a person in Samadhi. Nothing indeed is impossible in this or the other world for a Yogi, who has pleased Bhagwan Vaasudev with his steadfast devotion."

Thus ends the 61st Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 62

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Varni! I shall now describe the formation of the cosmos, which only an accomplished Yogi is able to see under the spell of Samadhi. There is a vast pool of water at the bottom. A humongous turtle with an asp called Shesh with its thousand hoods on its back sits on water. The circular universe with fourteen abodes populated with various creatures is balanced on the central hood of Shesh. The bottommost is called Patal populated by the snakes with radiant hoods led by their king, Vasuki. The next abode higher than Patal is called Rasatal which is populated by the demons. Mahatal, the next abode up is populated by the snakes such as Takshak. Maya Danav (a demon) along with his army lives in Talatal and demon king Bali along with Bhagwan Vishnu live in Sutal, the next abode higher.

Hatkeshvar Shiva lives in Vital and a demon called Bal Danav lives in Atal along with his massive army of other demons. The eighth abode from the bottom is our world, Bhurlok, with Mountain Meru at the centre of it. I shall describe the composition of Bhurlok in more detail. The abodes of Brahma, Shiva and Vishnu are above the earth. Eight abodes belonging to the eight deities protecting the eight sides, including Amaravati of Indra, are situated on the eight sides of Mountain Meru. Meru is encircled by an ocean of saline water. The earth, also called Jambu Dwip, is made up of nine continents each with a separate ruling deity. Sankarshan is the ruling deity of Ilavrat continent. Similarly, Hayagreev, Nrusinh, Kaamdev, Matsya Bhagwan, Kurma Bhagwan, Varah Bhagwan and Bhagwan Ram are ruling deities of Bhadrashva, Harivarsha, Ketumal, Ramyak, Hiranyamaya, Kuru and Kimpurush continents respectively, while Bhagwan NarNarayan Rishi is the ruling deity of our Bharat continent. There are other islands similar to and higher than Jambu Dwip. Each island and its surrounding ocean is twice the size of the previous island. An island called Plaksha is next to Jambu Dwip, which is surrounded by an ocean of sugarcane juice, and people of the island worship Shree Hari in the form of the Sun. Shalmalli Island, double the size of Plaksha Dwip, is surrounded by an ocean of wine whose residents worship Bhagwan in the form of the Moon. People of Kush Dwip, which is encircled by an ocean of Ghee, worship Bhagwan Shree Hari in the form of fire. Beyond that is an island called Krauch, which is surrounded by an ocean of milk, and residents of this island worship Bhagwan Vaasudev in the form of water. The next island is called Shaak Dwip, which is surrounded by an ocean of yoghurt, and its residents worship Bhagwan in the form of wind. The residents of Pushkar Dwip, surrounded by sweet potable water, worship Brahma sitting on a lotus. The golden Prithvi and Mountain Lokalok lies beyond these islands. Four guardian elephants and Bhagwan in the form of Mahapurush along with His Parshads led by Vishvaksen guard this vast Bhurlok from atop Mount Lokalok." Bhagwan Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! Above our Bhurlok is Bhuvarlok, populated by ghost and spirits. The Sun is at the heart of the universe and circumambulates Bhurlok astride his golden chariot. (The scriptures invariably described the Sun circumambulating the planets. This is not due to the lack of understanding, but rather due to the appearance of the Sun moving from the surface of the planets.) The Moon, the Nakshatras (twenty seven asterisms), the planets Venus, Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn lay beyond the Sun. The constellation called Saptarshi (the great bear or big dipper) and a celestial body called DhruvPad (the Polaris) lay beyond Saturn. Very close to the Polaris lay a magnificent and opulent heaven, ruled by Indra, the king of Devtas. The whole solar system, from the Sun to the heaven is held together by Shishumar Chakra at its fulcrum. MaharLok, JanLok and TapaLok, populated by the sages and Rishis lay beyond Shishumar Chakra. On top of the cosmos lays BrahmLok, the abode of Brahma, the creator. O Shatanand Muni! The cosmos consisting of these fourteen separate abodes is enveloped in total darkness (of Maya) and eight covers or obstacles (Pruthvi, Jal, Tej, Vayu, Akash, ego, Mahatatva and Prakruti). The brilliantly radiant supreme abode of Bhagwan called Akshar and Brahm lies beyond the darkness of Maya and the eight layers. Only an accomplished Yogi under the spell of Samadhi can see this composition of the cosmos. A Yogi, travelling by the way of Shushumna Nadi can visualise all these abodes whilst in Samadhi. An accomplished Yogi can return to his body (and senses) at his own will. This independence to enter Samadhi and come out of Samadhi can only be accomplished by his immense love for Bhagwan. Therefore, a wise man should learn the intricacies of Yoga to enhance and augment his love for Bhagwan. O Muni! The profound devotion in Bhagwan makes the accomplishment of Yoga easier and such an accomplishment is possible only through a devout guru."

Thus ends the 62nd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 63

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Muni! An accomplished Yogi becomes free from the fears of Kaal (death) and can leave his body at his own will. (He, as a soul, can discard his mortal body at free will.) Even such a Yogi must understand the traits of five Maha Bhoot (base elements). He cannot gain the knowledge of leaving and entering his mortal body without the proper understanding of Maha Bhoot that make up the cosmos and his mortal body. He must understand the relation between Maha Bhoot that are the cause of the creation of the cosmos and their resultant object, his mortal body."

Shatanand swami said, "O Maharaj! I would like to know more about five Maha Bhoot that are instrumental in the creation of the cosmos. The cause and object of the five base elements seem similar. How can I understand the difference between their reason and result?"

Shree Narayanmuni replied, "O Muni! The distinction between reason and result (or cause and effect) can be understood by realising the dissimilarity between support and the supported and magnitude and insignificance. Just as the earth and other elements are sublimely present in the mortal body as its muscles, tissues and blood, they are present in the universe that is created from them. Just as an ocean is the reason and source of the waves, the five base elements are the cause and basis of the universe. Pruthvi and other elements are dependent on Purush and Prakruti, as the universe can only be created with the help of Purush and Prakruti. Just as eggs result from the union of male and female birds, the universe is created by the union of Purush and Prakruti and not otherwise. However, all this happens only with the express wish of Bhagwan. The five base elements that are visible in the universe were created from the portion of five Maha Bhoot. Just as a chick emerges from an egg, the visible five base elements emerge from five Maha Bhoot over a period of time. Therefore, the wise see the five Maha Bhoot as the cause of the universe and five visible base elements as their result. Sthool (gross or mortal) body, a result of a union of man and woman, is made up of five base elements such as Pruthvi, Jal, Tej, Vayu and Akash. The hard and solid things in the body are Pruthvi, blood and fat are Jal, the warmth is Tej, the motions are the Vayu and the cavity is Akash. Each human body is made up of these five base elements. However, the three amongst them; Vayu, Jal and Tej are predominant. They are interdependent on each other. Tej as the process of metabolism digests the food and transforms it into blood, flesh, bones, etc. The blood in turn supplies nourishment to each and every muscle and organs to provide vitality to the body.

Water as semen sustains the body. The body without the presence of semen wilts and dies. The five types (Pran, Apan, Saman, Vyan and Udan) of Vayu (wind) helps the body to function by energising its movements. Vayu dwells in the navel of all men and traverses the whole body from it. Shushumna Nadi is the main thoroughfare of wind and spreads in other Nadis from it."

Shree Hari continued, "O Muni! Let Me elaborate the various functions of the different types of Vayu. Pran provides vitality to the head and brain by moving upwards and mixing with Tej. Apan augments the metabolism; Vyan helps the movement of the body by dwelling in all joints; Udan provides strength and ability to bear weight and walking by dwelling in the throat while Saman Vayu helps the movement of food and water to the stomach and spreads warmth to the blood and muscles. A Yogi should understand the importance of Jal, Tej and Vayu, especially that of Vayu. He should endeavour to balance Vayu within the body and outside in the atmosphere and try to link the similar types of Vayu together to master the technique of leaving his mortal body independently. The process of metabolism is subsided by subsiding Pran. Thus a Yogi can attain longevity by controlling his Pran Vayu. A Yogi (his soul) may leave his body independently by focussing and unifying Vayu within and without. He should sit at one place and concentrate his mind on Vayu and unify the two similar types of Vayu depending upon which abode he wishes to transmigrate his soul. By unifying Vayu of his body with Vayu of universe, he overcomes Kaal (death) and chooses the time of his death and goes to any of the Loks (abodes) of his choice. Bhagwan Vaasudev grants such a Yogi a divine body when he arrives in His supreme abode. A Yogi enjoys supreme bliss and serves Bhagwan as lovingly as Laxmiji serves Him. He remains in His supreme abode forever to enjoy all the pleasure of Brahmpur."

Thus ends the 63rd Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 64

Shatanand swami asked, "O Bhagwan! I would like to know the characteristics of Vayu within a human body and Vayu prevailing in the universe. Only You can explain the matters as they are."

Shree Narayanmuni replied, "O Muni! Wind pervades everything, a human body, the universe and space beyond the universe. It sustains and supports everything. Vayu within a body and universe can be categorised into seven. I mentioned the five types of Vayu in the body; Pran, Apan, Vyan, Udan and Saman earlier. Utkraman and Aadhar are other two types of Vayu within the body. Vayu prevalent in the universe is of seven types; Aavah, Pravah, Udvah, Samvah, Vivah, Parivah and Paravah. I have already explained the characteristics of the first five types of wind within a human body. The sixth, Utkraman Vayu dwells in Muladhar Chakra of a man's body and transports a soul after the death of the body. The seventh, Aadhar dwells within and without the body and is the fulcrum of everything that exists. Aavah Vayu moves the clouds in the sky. The same Vayu transforms into lightening within the clouds that are formed as a result of combination of heat (of the Sun) and surface water. Pravah Vayu is responsible for the movements of the stars, Moon, Sun and planetary bodies. Udvah Vayu transports the moisture from seawater to the sky to help the formation of clouds. Samvah Vayu gathers small clouds to make them bigger and water bearing and in doing so creates thunder. The same wind gives speed to the aircrafts flying in the sky. O Muni! This wind is so forceful that it can break up mighty mountains. Vivah Wind causes earthquakes, tornados and other calamities. It helps keep the milky way and other galaxies in their place. Vivah Vayu repels the ferocious and harmful rays of the Sun by which we become able to bear its rays. Parivah Vayu is responsible for waxing and waning of the Moon. Death and its ruling deity Yama take refuge under it and it helps annihilation of the universe. O Muni! People entangled in the pleasures of this world fear Parivah Vayu as death, while Yogis in pursuit of Dhyan and Samadhi consider it as liberating. The seventh, Paravah, is the serene and pleasant wind blowing through the universe which is very dear to Yogis as it is the same wind which transports them to the supreme abode of Bhagwan from which they never have to return to this world."

Shree Hari continued, "O swami! Let Me tell you the normal position of these various types of wind. Avah Vayu prevails from earth to the clouds; Pravah prevails from the clouds to the Sun; Udvah around the Moon; Samvah around asterisms and constellations; Vivah around other planets, Parivah around Saptarshi and the final Paravah prevails around the Polaris. These seven external Vayu should be linked with the seven Vayu within the body for the purpose of unification during Dhyan. A Yogi should focus on his navel, tip of his nose, heart or big toe of his right foot while meditating upon Pran Vayu. Its body should be visualised as blue complexioned and shaped like a Sanskrit letter 'Ma'. A Yogi should endeavour to bring Pran and Avah vayu in unison. He should focus on his heel, lower or upper neck, back and anus while meditating upon Apan Vayu which should be unified with Pravah Vayu. The body of Apan should be visualised shaped like a letter 'Ya' and dark complexioned. O Muni! Vyan Vayu, shaped like a letter 'La' should be connected with Udvah with reference to the skin and tips of the fingers. Focussing the mind on his head, heart, roof of mouth, throat or soles of feet, a Yogi should endeavour to connect Udan Vayu with Samvah Vayu. Udan Vayu should be imagined as 'Ra' shaped and red complexioned while meditating. A Yogi should endeavour to connect Saman Vayu with Vivah Vayu while focussing his mind on his large joints, navel or heart. Saman Vayu should be imagined as fair complexioned and shaped like the letter 'Va'. When meditating upon Utkraman Vayu, a Yogi should concentrate his mind on Ida Nadi and try to connect it with Parivah Vayu. The body of Utkraman Vayu should be visualised as very fair complexioned and shaped like the letter 'Ha'. A Yogi should try to link Aadhar Vayu with Paravah Vayu. A Yogi should focus his mind on Pingla Nadi while meditating upon Aadhar Vayu, which should be visualised as white complexioned and shaped like the letter 'A'. O swami! A Yogi remains subject to repeated births even after gaining independence to leave his body after succeeding in the Dhyan of the first six types. The Dhyan of the seventh type, where Adhar Vayu is unified with Paravah Vayu liberates one from the cycle of death and rebirth. The first six types of Vayu lead one to various abodes linked with respective Vayus while the seventh one leads one to Bhagwan's supreme abode. A Yogi desiring to attain any abode should meditate upon the respective Vayu linked to that abode. By controlling his mind and profound devotion in Bhagwan, a Yogi (indeed his soul) gains independence in leaving his mortal body. He may visit any of the higher abodes and visualise the composition of his body and universe whilst in meditation. I have just narrated the characteristics of the Yogis who have attained the independence to separate their souls from their mortal bodies and choose the time of their deaths and the tasks that they should carry out. I shall now explain the traits of those Yogis who have not gained such an independence."

Thus ends the 64th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

Shree Narayanmuni said, "O Shatanand Muni! Such Yogis should recognise the omens of death, either in dream or awaken state, to realise that their death is imminent. A person whose death is near cannot see Arundhati (a dim star circled by Ursa Major) and Polaris, planet Venus and his own shadow. He sees the Sun, Moon and fire lustreless or sees the heavenly bodies such as the Moon as two. Such a person sees vomit and faeces as a heap of gold or often sees the trees golden. He sees his footprints imprinted only half when walking on mud, sees his reflection headless or his shadow full of holes. A healthy man becoming frail suddenly or a frail man recovering fully suddenly without an apparent reason is another sign of an imminent death. When a body starts reeking like a corpse or a dead sheep or when feet and chest dries immediately after bath are also omens of an imminent death. When the food does not get digested even with the help of medicines, a man should realise that his death is near. When the roof of his mouth, stomach or heart ache severely, nose and ears deform for no reason or when shooting pain afflicts his joints, a Yogi should realise that his death is approaching him. Hunger not abetting even after eating and inability to smell the whiff of an extinguished oil lamp are other signs of nearing death. When death nears one cannot see his reflection in the eyes of the others, cannot hear the whining sound when ears are plugged by his fingers or cannot decipher between good and bad smell, taste, touch, etc."

Shree Hari continued, “O Muni! There are many signs of an imminent death. His eyes become glazed, navel and teeth turn black and nature or moods change suddenly. He becomes immune to insulting the elders or taking money from the donation boxes. He dreams him travelling South on a cart pulled by a donkey, monkey, camel or bear; fallen in a deep cavern or somebody pulling him in a deep cavern; embracing a corpse; drowning in water; entering the inferno; consuming poison or travelling naked wearing flower garland towards South. O wise Muni! A Yogi should recognise these omens in his dreams and realise that his death is imminent. He should become alert of approaching death. Realising the transitory nature of his mortal body and futility of the world, he should become detached from the worldly affairs and engross himself in Bhagwan’s Bhakti. A devout Yogi may attain Bhagwan’s supreme abode just like an accomplished Yogi if he overcomes his fear of death. This is the beauty and greatness of Yoga! Hundreds of kings and Rishis have attained desired results with the help of Yoga in the bygone era. Therefore, one should endeavour to learn Yoga with due reverence.”

Thus ends the 65th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 66

Narayanmuni said, “O Muni! The outcome of Yoga depends upon eight things; Yoga with these pious eights yields desired results while one cannot hope to succeed with the bad or evil eights. Therefore, My wise devotees should abandon bad place, company, etc. and associate with the good eight for their good. I have narrated the entire place, time, deeds, meditation, scripture, Diksha, hymn and association and imparted a gamut of knowledge on Yoga to you to quench your curiosity. You are intelligent enough to digest this profound knowledge, which is the essence of innumerable scriptures. Whoever narrates or listens to this narration will indeed have all his sins washed away.”

Suvrat Muni said, “O King Pratapsinh! Shatanand swami and all the others saints present in the assembly were very delighted to hear the total knowledge of Yoga from guru of all gurus, Bhagwan Shree Hari Himself. Shatanand swami bowed down to Shree Hari and sang the following Stuti."

Shatanand swami prayed, "O Bhagwan Vaasudev! Though You always dwell in Your Akshardham, You take a human form and take on names such as Narayanmuni. O dark complexioned yet brilliantly radiant Lord Swaminarayan. Chanting Your name saves one from hell. You are two armed yet take forms with four arms. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. You do not need to follow any rituals and Vrats, yet You observe them faithfully and reverently just to set an example to Your devotees. You practice Ashtang Yoga for the same reason. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. The Yogi sees Your Murti within their hearts when they inhale and hold their breath; and they see You in front of their eyes when they exhale. They meditate upon You at all times. Just as water of the ocean, affected by the waxing and waning phases of the Moon, returns back to the ocean after waves have pushed it outwards, the senses of Your devotees return back to You (after conducting their worldly affairs). O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. Only You are able to see the creation, existence and annihilation and natural traits ten organs, their ruling deities, four Antahkaran (mind, intellect, memory and ego) and five Prans (Pran, Apan, Udan, Vyan and Saman). Others can decipher their existence only. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. O Bhagwan! You espouse and propound the theory of Nirbeej Sankhya (everything that is visible is illusionary and transitional) to help them develop profound detachment from mundane worldly desires and the activities carried out to satisfy them. You attract Your devotees senses and mind in You and send them in spontaneous Samadhi (without mastering Yoga) to augment their faith in You and remove their ignorance. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. O Bhagwan Vaasudev! You take many divine human forms for the benevolence of Your devotees and to please them. You liberate Your devotees from Maya by revealing Your supreme potency. You teach Your devotees how to master the intricacies of Ashtang Yoga (Sabeej Yoga) so that they can meditate upon Your divine form and unshackle themselves from the bondage of Maya. You espouse Salamb (or Sabeej) Sankhya philosophy to propound the eternally separate existence of the souls and Bhagwan. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. Just as a thief's, lascivious man's, addict's and jealous person's mind is preoccupied in singular objectives (thief's in other's money, lascivious man's in a woman, addict's in his addiction and the jealous's in harming others), Your (as a human manifestation) mind is always engrossed in Bhagwan Narayan. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. Just as the minds of a faithful wife, Chakor (a small partridge like bird), moth, fish, peacock and Chakravak (male Sheldrake) are engrossed in their most enchanting objects (husband, the Moon, flame, water, rain and female duck respectively), Your (as a human manifestation) mind is engrossed in Bhagwan Vaasudev as there is nothing more covetous to You. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. Just as an infatuated person in front of his paramour, a petrified man in front of his protector, sick in front of a doctor and hungry in front of his benefactor acts submissively; You stand meekly in front of Your Ekantik saints and devotees to set an example of righteousness. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. Though You are the supreme Bhagwan in person, You undertake routine religious activities such as meditating upon the Murti of Bhagwan, developing profound Vairagya towards worldly objects and forever worshipping Bhagwan in perfect human form seated on a radiant and divine Sinhasan just to set an example to Your devotees. You propound such esteemed principles by acting upon them. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge. O Prabhu! You are the only refuge of all souls entangled in the web of Maya. You always pursue reading, studying and listening to the pious scriptures and deliver sermons on them to the thousands of Your saints and devotees congregated in the assemblies. O son of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata! I have come under Your refuge."

swami replied, 'O Bhagwan Shree Hari! I have one unfulfilled desire for a long time. I wish to compile a book outlining Your life. Please grant me the permission to proceed. My efforts of education will be rewarded. You always fulfil Your devotees desires."

Shree Hari said pleasantly. "O Muni! You may start your composition. Write whatever you have seen and heard. You have the knowledge of past, present and future. Nothing is unknown to you including my mind and views. This scripture will provide sustenance to My devotees after I leave this world and return to Akshardham. However, I want you to write a detailed treatise on the Shikshaptri before compiling the larger scripture outlining My Leelas. There is one isolated room in the temple complex where you can stay undisturbed while you write the scriptures."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shatanand swami, after bowing down to Shree Hari once again, returned to his quarters very pleased. Considering the time when he received Shree Hari's command as the most auspicious, he started composing the treatise on the Shikshapatri immediately."

Thus ends the 66th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 67

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! My guru Shatanand swami started writing the Shikshapatri of two hundred and twelve verses on Aso Vad Teras (Samvat 1885), the day he received instructions from Shree Hari and completed it on Kartik Sud Beej. He started composing the treatise on the Shikshaptri (called Arth Deepika) immediately afterwards and completed it on Magsar Sud Panchmi. He presented the copy of Arth Deepika to Shree Hari the same day in the evening assembly. O king! Shree Hari was greatly pleased after looking at the scripture and praised Shatanand swami in the presence of the gathered saints including Muktanand swami and devotees saying that he has managed to convey His exact heartfelt views while composing Arth Deepika. Shree Hari removed a rose garland from his neck and placed around Shatanand swami's neck and blessed him by placing His hands on swami's head. He asked Nityanand swami to recite Arth Deepika aloud for all present in the assembly to hear. Everybody was very delighted after hearing the recital. O king! Shree Hari addressed the assembly, 'O devotees! All of you must sit in a Swastik Aasan and read or listen to Delighted at Shree Hari's blessings, Shatanand swami returned to his room."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! After gaining the knowledge of past, present and future with Shree Hari's blessings, Shatanand swami started composing the Satsangi Jeevan on Magsar Sud Chhatth. He recited to Shree Hari each Prakaran as he finished them. Shree Hari listened to the scripture and was pleased with its progress. Bhagwan Shree Hari repeatedly listened to the fifth and tenth cantos of the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran after withdrawing from all other affairs. He would regularly grant His divine Darshan to the visiting devotees each afternoon."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Every few days the visiting devotees from various regions would bring the news of one or the other miraculous events taking place in their respective regions. I will relate some of those tales to you. These events were related to the Murtis of LaxmiNarayan Dev, NarNarayan Dev, Gopinathji Maharaj and other Murtis that Shree Hari established in various temples. These Murtis of Shree Hari's different manifestations revealed miraculous powers to the surprise and delight of His devotees. The devotees saw His Murtis at some of the temples moving their hands, smiling at them, accepting flower garlands and other artefacts with their hands and eating and drinking food and milk offered to them in Naivedhya. Many devotees had their desire for offspring fulfilled after they undertook special Vrats or many devotees were saved from problems and troubles due to their mercy and blessings. Some of the wealthy devotees gave some of their money to alleviate the poverty of other fellow poor devotees when urged to do so by the Murtis. Many devotees slipped into spontaneous Samadhi upon Darshan of Bhagwan NarNarayan Dev and LaxmiNarayan Dev. O king! Devotees, though delighted, were not very surprised as they were aware of the great divine power of their Ishtadev Shree Swaminarayan Bhagwan, but non devotees were astound at such miraculous powers of the Murtis of the temples. Many of them became His disciples after witnessing such miracles. O king! The visiting devotees of one region revealed their respective experiences to the devotees of the other regions in the presence of Shree Hari. All of them understood that the miraculous powers revealed by the various Murtis was indeed Shree Hari's. Upon hearing the miraculous events, Shree Hari said to the devotees, 'O devotees! Never see the difference between the Murtis installed in the temples and Myself in person sitting here in this assembly. They are nothing but My different forms.' O king! This only made devotees more resolute in their understanding the true identity of Bhagwan Narayanmuni. Thus Shree Hari spread His glory and divinity widely. One and a half year passed by while Shree Hari, Whose human form is benevolent to His disciples and non disciples alike, stayed in Gadhpur. O king! Shree Hari's great fame reached in every nook and corner of the country and He and His divine powers were reverently talked upon in every household of the land."

Thus ends the 67th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 68

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! On Jeth Sud Navami, Shree Hari thought Himself, 'I have accomplished all the tasks I wanted to achieve in this Avatar. Nothing is left to be accomplished. I have vanquished evil kings and gurus who were misleading the devout. I have firmly established the virtues such as piety, truth, Brahamcharya and compassion in the hearts of the religious people by driving out vices such as greed, lust and anger from their hearts. People at large have become ethical due to the help of guidance from the pious scriptures. Their knowledge about Me has enhanced, their observance of Dharma has firmed up, they have become detached from mundane worldly desires and they spend their time in pursuant of My Bhakti with nine main elements. I have freed Dharmadev, Murtidevi and numerous sages from the curse of Sage Durvasha. I have successfully established the practice of Satvik non sacrificial Yagnas and people are pursuing the practice of Yoga. The Vedas, Brahmins, deities, shrines, scriptures and saints have gained enormous respect in society. I have exposed the fallacious and anti Vedic Sampradays such as Kaulavarna and their scriptures such as Kaulagam and have re-established the supremacy of Sanatan Dharma. I have established My Murtis in many grand temples for the benevolence of people of this and the future generations. I have established two Acharyaship in My own clan and have prevailed Diksha Vidhi for all adherers of the Sampraday. For the benevolence of all people, I have written the Shikshaptri and have narrated ethical Dharmas of Brahamcharis, Grahastha and women. I have shown the manner in which important festivals should be celebrated and how to master the intricacies of Ashtang Yoga. For the guidance and benefit of the future generations of My disciples, I have asked Shatanand swami to compile the Satsangi Jeevan, which is nearing completion. I should now return to My Akshardham as all the tasks I had contemplated have been accomplished. However, many of My disciples will not be able to bear My sudden separation and may follow Me to Akshardham. I should prepare them for My physical absence by revealing My plan gently."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! Shree Hari asked Mukundanand Varni to summon all the saints and devotees present in Gadhpur for an assembly. His brothers Rampratapbhai and Ichharambhai; sons Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji along with their mothers; Muktanand swami, Gopalanand swami, Nityanand swami, Shukanand swami, Brahmanand swami, Anandanand swami, Bhajananand swami, Nirgunanand swami and other saints; Dinanath Bhatt and other Brahmin devotees; Soma Khachar, Sura Khachar, Uttam Khachar and other Kshatriya devotees; Ratanji, Bhaguji, Miyanji and other Parshads and Jaya, Lalita, Rama and other female devotees came immediately and took their appropriate seats in the assembly according to the decorum of the Sampraday after greeting Shree Hari with folded hands and bowed heads. Shree Hari addressed them, 'Listen to Me O devotees! Know Me as the supreme Bhagwan in human form. I have accomplished everything I set out to in this Avatar. The purpose of My Avatar has been fulfilled in totality. I shall now return to Akshardham. You must not lament like other ordinary people.' O king! The congregation was aghast on hearing such shocking words from Shree Hari. Most of them started wailing, some even fainted while others had blood oozing out of their eyes. Many of them pleaded with Shree Hari to take them with Him. Nonetheless, all of them became inconsolable at the prospect of separation from Bhagwan in person."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O King Pratapsinh! Shree Hari understood their predicament and realised that many will not be able to endure My separation and in such a state many of them will terminate their lives. However, Shree Hari wanted them, especially saints to remain in the world for some time for the good of the Sampraday. Shree Hari urged them to maintain patience and manoeuvred their hearts and mind to that effect by shaping their thoughts. O king! He addressed the assembly once again, "O devotees! Do not despair! May be you cannot see Me in My physical form, but I shall remain present in this Satsang forever. I shall be present as the Murtis of LaxmiNarayan Dev and HariKrishna at Vadtaal, NarNarayan Dev at Amdavad, Gopinathji Maharaj here at Gadhpur and other Murtis I have established in various temples. Do not see any difference between these Murtis and Myself. I reside in this world in the form of Murtis. Anyone worshipping these Murtis as an extension of My form will have My divine Darshan in person. Worshipping the Murtis is exactly the same as worshipping Me, therefore, you must worship my Murti form with the utmost reverence. You must treat Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji Maharaj with the same reverence that you treat Me with. I have narrated your Dharmas in the Shikshapatri, which you must follow faithfully with due reverence. You must not grieve for Me and none must terminate their live after My departure. Anyone not following these edicts will have nothing to do with Me in this or the next life."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Though very distraught, the devotees took solace that departing this world is indeed Shree Hari's wish. They humbly said to Shree Hari collectively, 'O Bhagwan! Bless us that our mind remains forever engrossed in You. Please pardon us for inadvertently disobeying any of Your edicts. be able to deviate us from Your Bhakti. O Bhagwan! We plead with You to call us to Your Akshardham at the earliest opportunity as we have no other refuge except You." O king! Shree Hari assured all devotees that their wishes will be fulfilled and asked them to return to their homes and quarters before He returned to attend to His daily evening routine. Devotees, still sobbing and many of them unable to walk properly returned to their homes. Many ghastly events started taking place. Numerous trees were felled by the sudden gush of strong wind; infernos erupted spontaneously, the sound of deafening thunder arose from the clouds and fierce lightning repeatedly struck. At some places stones and blood rained from the sky. The hot sun of the summer appeared pale. People were petrified by sudden untoward events. The left side of men and the right side of women throbbed as bad omens. People who could decipher the omens realised that the departure of Bhagwan Shree Hari is imminent."

Suvrat Muni said, "O king! Shree Hari woke up as usual on Ganga Dasahara, Jeth Sud Dasami, and concluded His daily morning routine as usual. He gifted many cows, much wealth and many other expensive items to the Brahmins. He adorned His forehead with an Urdhvapundra Tilak and Kumkum Chandlo and wore new robes. He smeared a small area of ground with cow dung and sprinkled sesame seed over it. He sat in meditation in Siddhasan posture over the prepared ground with His eyes focussing on tip of His nose. A brilliant radiance emanated from His body which blinded many people surrounding Him. O king! Nityanand swami, Gopalanand swami, Bhajanand swami and Shukanand swami stood in front and around Him. Thousands of Devtas and His Parshads descended in their airplanes from heaven and Akshardham. The Parshads venerated Bhagwan Shree Hari with sandalwood paste, flowers and incense. Shree Hari went to Akshardham with His Parshads (at midday on Jeth Sud Dasam, Samvat 1886). The Devtas and Brahma enthusiastically venerated Shree Hari as He passed through their abodes on His way to Akshardham. A few drops of sandalwood paste and flowers fell on earth as the Devtas worshipped Bhagwan. Nityanand swami and other three saints gathered courage and started chanting Bhagwan's name when they realised that Shree Hari is no more. Other people standing slightly away first started crying on realising the departure of Shree Hari and then composing themselves, joined the four saints in chanting His holy name. Ayodhyaprasadji and Raghuvirji performed Bhagwan's funeral rites as prescribed in the scriptures."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! The arrival (birth) and departure (death) of Bhagwan Shree Hari is just notional. It is His Leela! Only ignorant get taken in by this. The true devotees do not get confused by His birth or death. Just as people who understand the magical tricks of an artiste do not get taken in by such tricks, true devotees are not perplexed by any number of His Leelas. Whoever recites or listens to this Leela of Shree Hari's departure reverently, does not ever have to go to hell. O king! Shree Hari, Who vanquished evil and re-established the supremacy of piety, prevailed Sanatan Dharma in this world and fulfilled all desires of His devotees is present in person even today at Vadtaal and other places."

Thus ends the 68th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

CHAPTER 69

Suvrat Muni said, "O King Pratapsinh! I narrated numerous Leelas of Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan and answered all of your questions. I started with the arrival of Rishis to Badrikaashram after visiting Bharat where they informed Shree NarNarayan Bhagwan of the anti religious practices prevalent there. Dharmadev and MurtiDevi arrived in the assembly graced by Shree NarNarayan Dev. Sage Durvasha arrived in the assembly and cursed all present to take birth and endure hardship. I have narrated the birth of Udhhavji, Dharmadev, MurtiDevi and sages and the marriage of Dharmadev and Bhaktimata. Harassed by the demons, Dharmadev and Bhaktimata first approached Ramanand swami and then went to Vrindavan on Hanumanji's advice. They were blessed with Bhagwan Shree Krishna's Darshan and promise to take birth as their son. While returning from Vrindavan, the couple were cursed by Ashvatthama. I then told you how Vindhyavasini Devi cursed the demons and the birth of Shree Hari. I narrated His naming, Chaul and Upanayan Sanskars and how Kalidutt met his death. Bhagwan narrated the Hari Gita to Bhaktimata and freed his parents from the curse of Sage Durvasha. During his seven years of journey through the forests, I narrated the defeat of Kal Bhairav, His severe austerity at Pulhashram and learning Yoga from Gopal Yogi, defeat of Pibaik, killing of thousands of evil gurus and fake saints at Jagannath Puri, Shankar and Parvati coming to feed Him and concluding his pilgrimage at Loj upon meeting Sukhanand swami and Muktanand swami. Shree Hari had the privilege of Darshan of Ramanand swami and getting Diksha from him. He accepted the headship of the Sampraday before Ramanand swami returned to Badrikaashram. He revealed His divinity by granting Darshan of His many manifestations to people in Samadhi and defeated the ego of Meghji. O king! Shree Hari narrated the Narayan Gita and cites examples of how many were overwhelmed by the vices such as greed, ego and lust. He reestablished the practice of non sacrificial Yagnas. I narrated to you the dialogue between Khatvang Khachar and Abhay Khachar at Gadhpur and Shree Hari's arrival at Gadhpur at Abhay Khachar's request. I also mentioned the meeting between the Governor and Shree Hari at Rajkot. Shree Hari visited numerous villages to grant His divine Darshan to the devotees of the respective villages and to establish the religious practices such as non sacrificial Yagna and living within the boundaries of Dharma and proscribing Kaulavarna and other non Vedic Sampradays. Muktanand swami helped establish Shree Hari as a supreme manifestation of Bhagwan. While staying at Gadhpur, Shree Hari celebrated the festival of Annkoot and Prabodhani Ekadashi and gave several sermons in the assemblies covering topics such as Dharmas of saints, Vidhi of performing Japa and observing Ekadashis."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! I also narrated in great detail how Shree Hari celebrated the festival of Fuldolotsav at Vadtaal. Shree Hari explained the Vidhi of listening and importance of Puranas especially the Shreemad Bhagwat Puran. I narrated the festival of Janmashtami that He celebrated at Sarangpur before visiting Nagadka and Panchala. Shree Hari established the Murtis of NarNarayaan Dev at Amdavad and narrated the greatness of the city and manifestations of NarNarayan Dev over the period of time. He then established the Murtis of Shree NarNarayan Dev at Bhuj, Shree RadhaKrishna Dev at Muli, Shree LaxmiNarayan dev at Vadtaal and Shree MurliManohar Dev at Dholka. Shree Hari adopted two of His nephews and anointed them as Acharyas of the two dioceses of the Sampraday. I also narrated how Shree Hari was accorded the royal welcome when He visited Vadodara at the invitation of King Sayajirao Gaekwad. He wrote the Shikshapatri at Vadtaal for the benevolence of devotees. After celebrating Fuldolotsav grandly at Amdavad, Shree Hari inaugurated the temples at Jetalpur and Dholera and established the Murtis of Shree Revati- Baldev-HariKrishna Maharaj and Shree RadhaKrishna Dev respectively. O king! I narrated how Shree Hari explained Diksha Vidhi of different classes of devotees, how to celebrate all the religious festivals, Dharmas of Sadhus once again and the profound knowledge of Sankhya. Shree Hari once again narrated the Dharmas of devotees of all Varnas and Ashrams and also of the female devotees. He also narrated atonement for various sins and how to undertake different Vrats. He then established Shree RadhaKrishna Dev at Junagadh and Shree Gopinathji Maharaj at Gadhpur. He narrated the Dharmas of Naisthik Brahamcharis and gave detailed narrations on the intricacies of Ashtang Yoga. He asked Shatanand swami to write a treatise on the Shikshapatri and to compose this Satsangi Jeevan. At the conclusion, I narrated to you Bhagwan Shree Hari's decision to leave this world and return to Akshardham. O king! I have narrated the divine life of Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan to quench your curiosity."

Suvrat Muni continued, "O king! My guru Shatanand swami taught me the Satsangi Jeevan as it is, which I reiterated to you. This scripture is an essence of the Vedas, all the Puranas and other scriptures. People who have taken refuge under Bhagwan Narayanmuni, the son of Dharmadev are called Satsangis and this scripture shows how to lead their lives ethically. Therefore, all Satsangis must read, learn or listen to this scripture. The Punya earned by reading this scripture is equivalent to reading the Vedas and performing all types of Yagnas. Any Dwij man or woman reading the Satsangi Jeevan will attain desired bliss in this and the next world. A Brahmin will have his intellect enhanced, a Kshatriya will attain a kingdom, a Vaishya will earn a large fortune and a Shudra will attain great happiness by listening to this scripture. Indeed, a reader or listener of this scripture will have whatever goal he sets out to achieve; and anybody does the same without any expectation will have his Bhakti augmented. A Dwij will have all his desires fulfilled by reading or listening to the Satsangi Jeevan one hundred and eight times. A person seeking to enhance his knowledge on Dharma, Gnaan, Vairagya and Bhakti must read this scripture reverently. Whoever desires to be liberated from the cycle of death and rebirth must specially learn this scripture to achieve it. Indeed, a scholar of the Satsangi Jeevan does not need to know any other scriptures. O king! At the end of this mammoth narration, I bow down to the lotus feet of Bhagwan Shree Krishna Whose other names are Shree Narayanmuni and Shree Swaminarayan. I also bow down repeatedly to His Ekantik devotee and my guru, Shatanand swami."

King Pratapsinh said, "O Muni! My human life seems totally fulfilled due to my association with such a holy saint as you. I am indeed very fortunate that I got the chance to hear divine Leelas of Bhagwan Shree Swaminarayan. O Muni! I am unable to describe the bliss I am feeling at the moment. You are very fortunate that you have had a direct contact with Bhagwan and had an opportunity to serve Him. The saints like you are benevolent and amble in the world to enlighten the devotees like me. Please take me under your tutelage and have mercy on me. You have seen Bhagwan in person and please do me a favour so that I can have His divine Darshan in person."

Suvrat Muni replied, "O king! Meditate upon Bhagwan Shree Hari. I am sure He will grant His Darshan. My guru Shatanand swami had indicated to me that Bhagwan Shree Hari indeed grants His Darshan to whoever listens to the Satsangi Jeevan reverently."

King Pratapsinh bowed his head to Suvrat Muni and sat in meditation of Bhagwan with a calm mind. As the king's intellect had become lucid after listening to the Satsangi Jeevan and with the benevolence of Suvrat Muni, he had Bhagwan's Darshan in his heart after a very short time. The king was elated at the Darshan of Bhagwan, surrounded by the luminous radiance and accompanied by many of His Parshads. He got up and prostrated at Suvrat Muni's feet.

King Pratapsinh said, "O Muni! You have indeed shown great mercy on me."

Suvrat Muni replied, "O king! Continue meditating upon Bhagwan Shree Hari. You will indeed attain His supreme abode. Remain here at Jagannath Puri for the rest of your life and continue His Bhakti."

Suvrat Muni bid adieu to King Pratapsinh and left to continue his journey. King attained salvation and went to Akshardham after some time. Listening to Shree Hari's Katha is benevolent, singing His glory is benevolent and remembering Him is benevolent. I bow down to Bhagwan Shree Hari, Who removed Adharma along with its roots such as greed, anger and lust and augmented Sanatan Dharma; and washed away sins and removed sorrows of His devotees. I plead with all the devotees of Bhagwan to shower their blessing on me.

Thus ends the 69th Chapter of the Satsangi Jeevan.

THUS ENDS THE FIFTH AND THE FINAL PRAKARAN OF THE SATSANGI JEEVAN.
